INAUGURATION OF NEW CITY GOVERNMENT

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

Policy of the Administration Outlined In His Inaugural Address

Financial Statement And Recommendations. Address In Full

Gentlemen of the City Council:—

The people of Quincy have elected us to transact the business affairs of the City for the ensuing year.

Gratefully appreciating the honor conferred upon us; willingly assuming the grave responsibility; pledging ourselves faithfully, honestly and conscientiously to perform our duties, we today enter upon a service which entails much self-sacrifice in its proper execution,—a service which demands of us the best there is in us.

Let us, then, work together, eliminating sectional preferences and prejudices, and, with the limited means at our disposal, do our best this coming year to give the City of Quincy one of the best administrations it has ever had.

It cannot be denied that Quincy, with her large area, comparatively small valuation, and debt of $2,072,633, must weigh, with great care, the question of expenditures, so that the City will receive from them full value for money expended, and, at the same time, not retard our inspiring growth.

In order that you may understand the City's resources, I submit the following statement of its financial condition.:

PRESENTED WITH LOVING CUP

Department Officials Banquet Mayor Shea

AT BOSTON CITY CLUB

Mayor Shea, who retired from office this noon, after a service extending over four years was the principal guest Saturday evening at a banquet tendered him by the department officials at the Boston City club. The gathering was in the nature of a love feast and proved to be a most enjoyable occasion. There were one or two guests in addition to Mayor Shea. These included President Bryant, of the City Council of 1911, City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell and City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks.

HON. WILLIAM T. SHEA.

The affair was in a way an informal one. City Solicitor John W. McAnarney was the toast master at the after dinner exercises and practically everybody present was called upon for a few remarks or a song. Everybody had their hammer with them and the knocks were numerous, but all taken in the spirit of fun in which they were given.

During the singing City Clerk McGilvray and Assessor Duggan did the honors at the piano and it was a surprise to many at the manner in which they tickled the ivories. No one for a minute thought that it was in them. Some of the speeches were master pieces in their way and it is only to be regretted that they can not be published, but this was one of the occasions at which the scribe was noticeable by his absence.

Cornelius M. Duggan of the Board of Health of course carried off the sponge cake for singing. His selection was original and was sung by him in his inimitable manner. It went this way, the title being

"GOODBYE MAYOR SHEA"

We gather in the "Hub" at the famous City Club
All "burghers" of the good old granite town
To do honor to our Mayor, now retiring from the chair,
To add another laurel to his crown.

CITY COUNCIL OF 1912 ORGANIZED THIS NOON

Ralph W. Hobbs Elected President Other Council Officers

Orders Offered and Other Business At the First Meeting

The inauguration of the twenty-fourth year of the City Government of the city took place this noon, promptly at 12 o'clock . The attendance at the exercises was unusually large. Several things contributed to the large attendance. First because after four years of a Democratic administration the Republican party again came into power and second because of the rumor, that had become widely circulated, that Mayor Stone would on inauguration day announce the names of the gentlemen whom he had selected for his official family. Those who had been led to believe that the appointments would be made were disappointed for His Honor was evidently not ready to satisfy the curiosity of the citizens in this respect.

PRESIDENT R. W. HOBBS.

The balcony as usual was reserved for ladies and there was a large attendance of the fair sex, prominent among which was Mrs. Stone with a party of friends who occupied the front row of seats, the wives and sweethearts of the new councilmen and most of the lady clerks employed in the various departments at City Hall.

In addition to the seats in the balcony reserved for the Mayor's party a section of seats was also reserved inside the enclosue at the right of the President's desk for some of Mayor Stone's personal friends. These included his father, Judge Albert E. Avery, the ex-Mayor and others.

Every seat on the main floor was occupied and in addition to this many stood in the rear of the chamber, unable to obtain seats. The president's desk resembled a floral bower, with its handsome bouquets of roses and other flowers whose fragrance penetrated the hall.

The members of the new council were in their seats a few minutes before the hour for the ceremonies to commence while in the seats alloted for them inside the rail were practically all of the department officials, as well as several members of the council of 1911 and other years.

It lacked but a minute of the hour of twelve when the inaugural party entered the hall from the rear stairway, escorted by City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell. First came Mayor Shea and Mayor-elect Stone then City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray and Rev. C. P. Marshall, the chaplain.

The exercises opened with a short prayer, after which the oath of office was administered to Mayor Stone by the City Clerk. Then it was that the first burst of applause broke forth.

The City Clerk then called the roll of the City Council and requested them to rise while the oath was administered. Councilmen Craig ond Studley were absent.

At this point the order was varied somewhat and a President of the Council elected. Ralph W. Hobbs was elected being the unanimous choice although he personally voted for Councilman Abele.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

The City Clerk then turned and introduced Mayor Stone. Again there was lound applause as the new Mayor stepped forward to deliver his inaugural address. This was followed very closely and as he concluded he was for the third time vigorously applaud-

ORGANIZATION.

The City Council then proceeded to organize, the City Clerk presiding. There was no contest for either of

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Today the Quincy Daily Ledger enters upon another volume of its successful career. A look backward shows steady growth with many changes for the better. From a 4-page paper it has become six pages and the management is looking forward to an 8-page paper as a regular thing with an occasional big edition of twelve or sixteen pages. Quincy is a growing city and the Ledger is prepared to grow with it, having an up-to-date plant with modern equipment. Looking back over the files the paper shows progress and looking ahead the prospect is bright for the coming year. It will be marked by many improvements in make-up and reading matter so that the little "Home Daily" will continue to be a welcome visitor in the homes of its readers. increase in subscribers, sales by the news boys and newsdealers all indicate a growing appreciation year by year of the Ledger, and as the past year has been the most prosperous in all the years of its existence the editors enter upon the new year with hopes of even great success in the future.

To its readers advertisers and patrons the Ledger extends most cordial New Year's greetings. May the city and its people prosper in the future as in the past and both in unity become great.

THE INAUGURAL.

The reins of the city government passed into new hands at noon today, when the Hon. Eugene R. Stone took the oath of office. Never before has a man been elected as chief executive of the city, with such an endorsement as shown Mr. Stone by the magnificent vote given him at the last election. With the honor, however, comes a tremendous responsibility.

Seldom, if ever, a man enters office with a greater opportunity to make good in the adjustment of the finances incident to the developlent of a city of large area.

The Ledger is and has always been a stanch supporter of Mayor Stone. We have always believed him a man with a level head, combined with integrity and a high order of business training. The inaugural address, published in full today, endorses the confidence which we have placed in him and bespeaks an administration of progress, economy along the right lines and a performance of duty that will be satisfactory to the voters who have placed him in office.

The Mayor strikes a keynote in his handling of the sidewalks and streets question when he says that Quincy should not abandon the policy of building in a permanent manner miles of streets and sidewalks, but after built they should receive attention in order to prevent deterioration.

As much paving is needed, however, great care must be exercised in the expenditure of money, for with the comparatively small valuation and large debt, too rapid development could only lead to an unfortunate embarrassment which would tend to retard an inspiring growth.

The "city beautiful" receives attention and among suggestions are the widening of Washington and School streets and the rebuilding of City Square. Both are important and desirable.

This city has reached the beginning of an era of unprecedented prosperity. Within the confines of a Metropolitan district of great influence and much beauty, it at once becomes desirable for the overflow of the population of the great city on its borders. His Honor is cognizant of the fact and makes suggestions regarding the water question, sewers, public parks and playgrounds that will prove a substantial foundation and pave the way for a city with a large population, properly housed.

His honor is also aware of the greatness of the Water Front and what it means in the development of the city. He says: "I regard this matter of such great importance that I believe the different business organizations should be invited not only to give us the benefit of their judgment concerning the same, but also the assistance of their co-operation.

Quincy's advantages as a manufacturing center, taxes, separation of Houghs Neck, No-License, also receive attention in the ably written document. Co-operation on the part of the gentlemen of the Council must be given the Executive in order that expectations may be realized.

This great old city is one of the oldest in the United States, her fame is world wide. Says the Mayor:—"We, this day, assume a sacred trust. To us the grandest of all cities in the Commonwealth, Quincy, confides her destiny for the coming year. Let us impartially perform for Quincy her service and our duty."

THE OLD MINISTER.

The Northern Baptist convention has taken up the question of making a better provision for old ministers. They have raised $250,000, and as announced this past week expect to get a $1,000,000 endowment.

Considering the rather frivolous choice by so many churches of very young clergymen, it seems only square to do something for the elderly men who are set aside by this preference for youth. It has been said that a clergyman crosses the dead line at forty, that subsequently he must expect lower salary and less commanding position. And yet in every other profession a man has hardly more than acquired a foothold at forty.

The plight of many elderly ministers at fifty to sixty is pathetic. Their utterance has acquired ripeness, their counsel worldly wisdom, and their heart has learned sympathy with all kinds of people. But because they feel a little awkward while playing tiddle-de-winks at the Christian Endeavor social, they are condemned as lacking magnetism. Of course, on the other hand, the more closely a minister keeps to his young people, the more he will look at things from their point of view, and the more he can interest them.

ATTENTION! THERE!
Listen to this Tale

I chanced to be in the Assessors' office last week and overheard an old gentleman grumbling because the valuation had been raised on his lot of land at Elm Ave., Wollaston. He didn't want to pay the extra tax. One of the Assessors asked him if he would sell it at the assessed valuation, said he could sell it for him and started to take his name. Embarrassed? Don't say a word. Honest, he actually sneaked out of City Hall. Mumbled something about the lot being his wife's etc. He never came back. He was wise and the Assessor called his bluff.

Well the point I'm coming to is this. I have just got hold of one of these lots on East Elm Ave., which I can sell for a trifle over the Assessed valuation. Talk about your snaps. This section is building up fast and this lot will double in value in 5 years. Buy it now while the price is low. Build in the spring or hold for an investment. Don't sleep while an opportunity like this is in sight. 5000 feet on one of the best streets.

ASSESSORS' ORDERS SIGNED

Mayor Affixes Name at 10.10 This Morning

LAST OFFICIAL ACT

The last official act of Mayor Shea took place at 10.10 this morning when he affixed his name in approval of the two orders passed at the last meeting of the City Council of 1911 relative to the Assessors. One of these orders provides that the chairman of the board shall be in the office during the business hours of every business day, or in his absence one of the assistant assessors. The second amendment fixes the salary of the chairman of board at $1,500 a year and that of the assistant assessors at $700 a year.

It has been a question from the first if his Honor would sign these orders or allow them to become dead issues when he went out of office. The questions involved were important ones and it was not until this morning that he made up his mind to sign them.

TONIGHT'S BANQUET.

Arrangements for the banquet to ex-Mayor Shea by the Copeland Club, in St. Mary's Hall, tonight will be a fitting close for the inauguration exercises. The arrangements have been completed and an enjoyable affair is anticipated. The speakers will include, Rev. Mr. Mardin of the Hall Place M. E. Church, Rev. Fr. Grady of St. Mary's Church, Mayor-Stone, and ex-Mayors Bryant and Shea.

An attractive menu has been prepared by Burleugh & Martin and the music will be furnished by Morrissett's Orchestra.

In response to the many demands for tickets, a few extra places have been provided, and these tickets will be held at the door for the first comers. The dinner will be served at 8 o'clock sharp.

Net valuation of the city in 1911,	$34,425,911.00
$12 on $1,000 (amount available for current expenses)	413,110.93

The total city Municipal debt outside of the debts authorized by special Acts amounts to $696,433.00, and of that amount $159,643.00 falls due this year.

HIGHWAYS AND SIDEWALKS.

Quincy has 81 9-10 miles of accepted public streets, and 14 3-10 miles of permanent sidewalks.

How to keep our streets and sidewalks in proper condition, with the amount of money available for such purposes, is each year becoming a most serious problem. Yet like all municipal problems, it must be met.

Good streets and sidewalks are indispensable factors in the growth of every progressive community. They materially contribute to its development. They are active agencies in inducing desirable residents to locate within its limits.

Quincy should not abandon the policy which, in recent years, wisely has been established of, each year, building in a permanent manner a number of miles of streets and sidewalks. But, I do not believe it profitable to build such streets and then pay no further attention to them until they need rebuilding.

Recognition must be given to the enormous increase in the travel on streets of today.

In former years, the difficulty in maintaining our streets in good condition was one arising from the heavy teaming incident to our stone industry. To that is now added the wear resulting from automobile travel. Quincy lying between Boston, with its great Metropolitan District on the north, and the South Shore and the Cape on the south, receives nearly all the automobile travel between these points. As a result we find streets on which the City has spent several thousands of dollars in rebuilding, at the end of a couple of seasons, showing marked signs of wear, and not infrequently, with large holes eaten into their surface. This deterioration, unless arrested, soon leads to the total breaking down of the streets.

I believe it would be money well expended, as soon as one or more streets have been thoroughly repaired, or permanently constructed, to assign an inspector to these streets, whose duty it should be to watch for the first signs of breaking up of the street's surface, and immediately to repair the same. This, at least, should be done on all the main thoroughfares of the city. The inspector's wages would in a short time be more than saved. This method has been tried with success in foreign countries, and I see no reason why it cannot be successfully adopted in Quincy.

There are two main streets which should receive immediate attention; Washington street should be widened and straightened, and School street, between Hancock and Franklin streets, should be widened. Work on these streets should not be delayed, not only for the reason that it can be done at less cost now before the streets are further built upon, but for the important reason that because of the large volume of electric car, automobile and other travel over them, public necessity and convenience require it should be done.

In addition to these streets, I believe City Square should be entirely rebuilt. I shall, at a later time, submit for your consideration, my views as to the best method to be adopted in rebuilding this Square. When this work has been done, and Hancock street widened and straightened, in accordance with the order of last year's Council, we will then have our City Square, together with the three main arteries of travel lead-

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Safford Surprised By Their Friends

GIFTS OF SILVER

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Safford were pleasantly surprised at their home on Clive street Saturday evening by a number of their friends from Quincy and elsewhere, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Safford had gone to a neighbor's for the evening and had just about laid aside their outer wraps when they were summoned home by telephone call. Entering their home they were more than surprised to see gathered about the rooms scores of their many friends, who included among others a delegation from the Boston Custom House where Mr. Safford is employed.

Rev. T. W. Davison, pastor of the Atlantic Memorial church was the spokesman of the party and after extending his own personal congratulations also extended that of the other guests. An informal reception then followed during which each guest greeted the hosts and extended congratulations, Mr. and Mrs. Safford being assisted in receiving by Mrs. Herbert F. Barker and Mrs. H. J. Cunningham, who were largely instrumental for the gathering.

Following the reception Rev. Mr. Davison read a letter from the employees of the Boston Custom house and presented the hosts with a purse of silver from their friends. He was followed by Jeffrey Lehy, an employee of the Custom house as well as ex-president of the Boston City Club and a member of the Boston Finance Commission who in behalf of employees of the Custom house also presented them with a purse of silver. The letter read as follows:

To Mrs. C. A. Safford:

On this, the twenty-fifth anniversary of your marriage with your husband, Charles R. Safford, we, his Custom House friends and associates of twenty-five years' standing, more or less, send you our greetings, wishing it were ten fold greater.

Some of us remember well the time of your marriage, which seems but a short while ago, when a notice appeared in the newspaper of those days, stating that a marriage had been performed in Boston between Drusilla Robinson and Charles R. Safford.

Everything was done quietly, so typical of your husband, and scarcely any one of us was acquainted with the preliminaries.

Quiet in his manner, yet sound of judgment, he is a model to us of uprightness, fair dealing and honesty.

He is not the man to go home to his wife and, should she speak of the need of some money, to make reply by asking "Where is the five dollars I gave you three weeks ago?"

He is not the man to stagger home from the club at three o'clock in the morning, spending some time finding the key-hole of the front door while you have been anxiously awaiting his coming.

You have never found him harsh rock the cradle with one hand, whilst in the other you held a base ball bat ready to meet him.

You hae never found him harsh and cruel to the children, but on the contrary, using his power of persuasion to gain his point with them.

With us he has always been the first aid to those sufferers by misfortune while he has been a quiet and patient sufferer when he himself has met with adversity.

Among men he can be rightfully stamped a good friend, and in family a model husband and father.

In conclusion, we beg leave to ask of you now to hope for us that when your fiftieth anniversary sweeps around, we will be found with plenty of gold to share most generously with you on that most auspicious occasion.

In addition to the letter there was an original poem by Mrs. Dana M. Dunstan which read as offlows:

Twenty-five years ago today,
A lass of twenty, in white array,
You to the altar led.

There surrounded by a few,
To each other to be true,
You did promise.

A prettier maid—she's hard to find,
Graceful, comely, sweet and kind,
With raven locks and lustrous eyes,
That won a heart, and gave a prize.

Maiden true, your choice was wise,
For o'er the world search far and late
You'll never find a better mate:

Honest, earnest, truthful, good,
Been what every husband should,
A faithful man.
The parson's words, so old yet new,
Made "Drue" your bride—
Made one of two.

He said to you—"You're man and wife,"
And added words of good advice,
Which you thus far have heeded.

On that first day so long ago,
'Mid winter's sleet, and ice and snow,
Your hearts were young.

You sallied forth a home to make,
With roses there to decorate
And other flowering shrubs.

Your help in town and church and state,
Always betterment to make
Has been your aim.

The Lord has blessed your labor here
Three sturdy sons for onward cheer
Are yours.
The Angel Health from year to year
Has scared disease if it came near
And so your lives have prospered.

Thus may His blessings ever fall
With richest grace upon you all
Your journey through.

For lack of coin I send to thee
This filthy lucre, marked a V,
Please accept with pounds of love,
From her who writes the lines above.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Safford were visibly affected by these marks of lovingness and it was with difficulty that Mr. Safford could find words to reply and express the great pleasure at having so many of his friends present and for their gifts.

In addition to these the happy couple also received numerous gifts of silver and many letters and cards of congratulation from those unable to be present.

During the evening there was vocal and instrumental music, vocal numbers being contributed by Mrs. Lela O. Peirce and Mr. Herbert S. Barker.

Light refreshments were served during the evening by Miss Florence Barker, Miss Lois Kendall, Miss Vesta Newcomb, Herbert Barker and Winthrop Safford.

Mr. and Mrs. Safford, the latter being Miss Drue R. Robinson, were married in Boston, Jan. 1, 1887. The first two years of their married life was passed in Boston. They then came to Atlantic where they have since resided. Both are extremely popular and have many friends. Mr. Safford has been employed at the Boston Custom house for 35 years. He has also been one of the trustees the Thomas Crane public library for fourteen years and for a number of years has been one of the trustees of the Atlantic Memorial church.

Mrs. Safford is well known in Women's club world and in church work. She was for three years chairman of the educational committee of the Quincy Women's club and is deeply interested in philanthropic work. They have three sons and as Mr. Safford expressed it Saturday evening he wished he had three daughters to go with them.

DEATH OF A VETERAN SUPT.

Had Been Supt. of Poor Farms In Several Places

OTHER DEATHS

JOHN N. FOX.

John N. Fox a veteran of the Civil war and a former superintendent at the Quincy Home, passed away Sunday morning at his home 126 Franklin street, aged 74 years.

Mr. Fox was born in Tunbridge, Vt., April 14, 1837, and passed his early life on a farm in his native town. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted in Troop D. 1st Vermont cavalry and served until the close of the war.

After the war he abandoned farm life and was appointed superintendent of the Poor Farm at Templeton, Mass., and afterward went to Chicopee in a similar capacity. Three years later he accepted a city position in Springfield.

About twenty-five years ago he was appointed superintendent of the Poor Farm at Braintree. Shortly afterward he came to Quincy to accept a similar position here. From Quincy he went to Weymouth and was superintendent of the Poor Farm in that town. Later he came back to Quincy and was a foreman in the Street Department. About eight years ago he became inspector in the Charlestown Navy Yard and worked there up till 18 months ago when he was stricken with apoplexy.

Mr. Fox was married Nov. 28, 1869, to Mary A. Foss of Chelsea, Vt., who survives him.

He was a member of George Washington Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Chelsea, Vt., St. Stephen's Chapter, R. A. M., of this city; Hodenosaunee Tribe, I. O. R. M., of this city and Paul Revere Post, G. A. R. For many years he was a prominent member of Maple Lodge, K. and L. of H. The funeral will take place Tuesday.

GEORGE CRAIG.

George Craig, a well-known and popular South Quincy young man, brother of Councilman Robert B. Craig, passed away Saturday evening at his home on Independence avenue, after an illness of some duration. He was a son of Forbes Craig the well known granite manufacturer and for a time was employed by his father. Failing health however caused him to give up active business occupation.

He was a young man of exceptional qualities and a great worker in the Christian Endeavor society of the Water Street Presbyterian church, serving as one of its social committee as well as being connected with the trustees and other organizations of church. He was an ever ready and faithful worker and his untimely death has left a void in the church circles, where his counsel and presence will be greatly missed.

Funeral services will be held from his late home Tuesday afternoon, and will be attended by societies of the church with which he was connected.

RELIGIOUS FORWARD MOVEMENT

An evangelistic campaign extending throughout Greater Boston in conection with the Men and Religion Forward Movement was announced Wednesday evening after a meeting of the Community Extension committee and Y. M. C. A. secretaries held in Ford hall, Boston. The secretary of the committee, Lawrence Greenwood of Somerville, outlined the work which the committee will undertake at noonday meetings in some of Greater Boston's big industrial plants. Already arrangements have been made for meetings in Revere, East Cambridge, East Somerville, Everett, Malden, Hyde Park, Cambridge and Chelsea. In Chelsea alone over 2,000 men will be reached through noon meetings which will probably begin next week. In the Charlestown Navy yard permission has been secured to hold meetings on the Nebraska, New Jersey, Salem and Chester. It is also expected that special meetings will be held in the harbor forts and in the State Prison where about 1,000 men can be reached.

The special work planned by the Community Extension committee will not be confined to the "Eight-day" campaign which will occupy the attention of the churches of Greater Boston, Jan. 13-22, but, it is expected will be continued for several months.

CHORUS

Goodbye Billy, farewell Billy,
Our hearts are sad today
We may never find a mayor to excel you in the chair,
Goodbye, Mayor Shea.

Elected by your peers, during four successive years
To guide our municipal ship of state,
Over reefs, and bars, and shoals, we, deep within our souls
Your honesty and worth appreciate.

Tales of criticism and complaint,
They were never turned away from your sanctum, night or day,
You listened with the patience of a saint.

Were the callers rich or poor, it was all the same I'm sure
You treated them most courteous, one and all,
Your smile dispelled their wrath, you cast roses in their path,
As you bowed them out, and thanked them for the call.

Retiring from the strife, and the cares of public life
May your future be a happy one, we pray,
You have never found a friend, who is not with you to the end,

Henry W. French of the Registrar's department also sang a solo which had for its title "When Houghs Neck by the sea becomes a town by itself." It was a corker and may be reproduced some day on the vaudeville stage.

All the speakers were cheered to the echo, Harry Tirrell being the leader of the cheering party. The speech of the evening is credited to President and ex-Mayor Bryant. He said among other things that he had watched Mayor Shea's administration closely and that while he personally did his best while in office, he had no hesitancy in saying that the four years' administration were by far the best ever given the city.

The last speaker of the evening was the guest of honor. In presenting him City Solicitor McAnarney took occasion to extol the high manner in which he was held by his department officials, who desired to show their appreciation in a more substantial way. He then presented Mayor Shea with a handsome loving cup in behalf of his officials. With the cup went the best wishes for a happy new year and continued health and happiness.

Mayor Shea was visibly affected by the gift and spoke briefly. He referred to the pleasant relations that had always existed between him and his officials and he also wished them many good things for the new year and future.

The evening closed with all rising and singing Duggan's version of the air entitled "Over on the Quincy side."

NO REASON FOR IT

You are Shown the Way Out.

There can be no just reason why any reader of this will continue to suffer the tortures of an aching back, the annoyance of urinary disorders, the dangers of serious kidney ills when relief is so near at hand and the most positive proof given that these ills can be cured. The following is convincing proof.

Calvin Porter, 150 Beaulah street, Whitman, Mass., says: "I am sorry that Doan's Kidney Pills did not come to my attention sooner for if they had, I would have been spared a great deal of suffering and expense. I suffered from a weak back for years and there was a constant, dull pain in my loins. I had to pass the kidney secretions too frequently, especially at night. As soon as I began to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt better and by the time I finished the contents of four boxes, I was entirely free from my troubles." (Statement given Oct. 6, 1908.)

A CONFIRMED ENDORSEMENT

Mr. Porter was interviewed by our representative on June 27, 1911 and he said: "I am always pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and you are welcome to continue the use of my former statement. I know that this remedy can be relied upon."

MAYOR'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

ing from the same, all in good and inviting condition for travel.

A striking feature of Quincy's growth may be found in the number of tracts of land which each year are cut up into house lots, private ways laid out in them, and the land rapidly built upon. The houses are in nearly every instance attractive and of a desirable kind. Development of this character shauld be encouraged. It adds materially to the permanent taxable assets of the City. When such private streets are laid out in accordance with the City Ordinance, and built upon to a reasonable extent, I believe they should be accepted as fast as the City's financial condition will warrant.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

Total number of service connections,	7707
Total number of meters,	4702
Total number of Fire Hydrants,	873
Total number of Water Gates,	1551

For some time, in light of the number of gallons of metropolitan water annually charged to it, there has been a growing conviction that the City has not been receiving the proper return from this department. I believe there is occasion for such a feeling, and in part at least it may be attributed to two causes, waste in the use of water by water takers whose services are not metered, and loss of water through faulty mains. So far as possible all water services should be metered. The water tax should then be equitably and justly distributed, and the rates probably readjusted. In this connection, all public buildings should be metered, not for the purpose of charging the department to which they belong with the cost of water used, but for comparison and investigation to see if water is being watsed at either of them, and if so, to have the waste stopped.

The Commissioner of Public Works in a recent report to the City Council stated there was a steady loss of water on account of leaky mains. This waste should be stopped without delay. It is not a difficult matter to learn by proper investigation where the waste is taking place, and when defective mains are found, they should be removed at once, and replaced by new ones.

I believ this department in particular needs careful study and consideration, and I shall give it the same without unnecessary delay.

The legislature of 1911 authorized the City to borrow $200,000, outside the debt limit for the purpose of extending its water service and installing meters, of this sum $30,000 has already been appropriated and therefore there is now $170,000 available under said act for such purposes.

SEWERS.

The public sewer mains should as rapidly as possible be extended to all sections of the City, so that all houses may be connected therewith.

The demands for such extension of the mains is constantly increasing. Many applications are now on file in the sewer office. The department should as soon as possible be put in a position to meet these demands.

Of the $200,000 authorized to be borrowed outside the debt limit by Chapter 57 of 1911, for the purpose of extending our system of sewerage, $30,000 has already been expended, leaving a balance of $170,000 to be used as the Council may authorize.

To date, the work of the departemnt may be summarized as follows:

Lateral sewers laid	49.7 miles.
Intercepting and main sewers laid	13.7 miles.
Total number of miles	63.4

PUBLIC PARKS, PLAYGROUNDS AND SHADE TREES.

Today thinking people are beginning to realize the economic value to the State of physically well developed men and women.

In furtherance of that idea, associations are springing up throughout the country for the express purpose of educating the people to the necessity of acquiring and equipping public play grounds for the youth of the community.

Laws to aid and assist the movement have been adopted by this Commonwealth.

Quincy has already done much in this direction, but the work is by no means finished. There remains more to be done. Additional play grounds and places of recreation should be established throughout the City. In locating them, too much regard should not be had for mere ward lines. Wherever there is now, or in the future likely to be, a thickly settled residential district, land should be purchased and dedicated to the use of the children of that neighborhood.

Viewed from the mere physical standpoint, there is danger today in compelling the children to seek the public highways as a place in which to play. The modern methods of rapid travel makes it at times a positive menace to the life of the child, but from another and higher standpoint, there is danger and menace to the young of our City in so doing.

The children of every section of the City should have near their homes some public field as a place for recreation where, under the immediate care of their elders, or when the City can afford, the instruction of some trained supervisor, love for healthy out-door pastime and athletic exercise may early be inculcated in their minds.

The economic value to the community of the training the children would receive under such circumstances can be readily appreciated. In our homes, churches and schools, our children are receiving moral and intellectual training to equip them for the battle of life. Let us, as a City, do our part to make of them physically, healthy and well developed members of society for that issue.

It seems to me that now is the time to purchase such recreation places before all vacant lands in or near the residential section of the City are built upon. I recommend that study be given to this subject, and as far as the financial condition of the City will permit, land for that purpose be bought or taken by right of eminent domain.

For many years through the courtesy of the owners, the children of the City have enjoyed the privilege of skating on Butler's pond. This body of water is situated in quite a thickly settled portion of Ward 1, and if owned by the City could by the expenditure of a small sum of money, be made into a beauty spot in summer, and in winter it would be an excellent municipal skating pond. I recommend, if this property can be purchased for a reasonable price, that it be acquired by the City.

The City should annually take measures to encourage the planting of shade trees along our public highways, and this matter should receive proper attention when new streets are being built or laid out.

In the different sections of the City, local improvement associations should be encouraged, not only to plant shade trees along our streets and in public places, but to care for them during their early years. Such associations may by co-operation with the City authorities, do much not only along the lines suggested, but by installing a spirit of local civic pride, would do much to help beautify our City, and remove many not only unsightly and disfiguring local conditions, but some which are positively unsanitary and unhygienic.

The City Council may, if it gives proper attention to this matter, either by having some one of its committees hold public meetings in the different wards, or otherwise arouse public interest in these subjects, and foster the growth and developments of some such movement.

I recommend these matters to your careful consideration.

SCHOOLS.

Living in a country peopled by representatives of all races and under a form of government one of whose basic principles is popular and almost unlimited suffrage, our hope for the stability and perpetuity of our institutions must be found in the moral enlightenment and education of the people.

In the spread of popular education, Quincy in the future as in the past, must do its share. The public schools of Quincy for years have enjoyed an enviable reputation for excellence, and we are justly proud of their high standard.

The amount of money annually appropriated in support of our schools, when compared with the other items of the budget, to some may seem disproportionately large, but judged by the results obtained, there is no expenditure of the tax payers' money which brings a greater return or confers a more lasting benefit.

Let us this year provide a proper appropriation for the schools, and so do our part towards maintaining their standard that they may, if possible, rank second to none in the Commonwealth.

I recommend that the Council make provisions for a new schoolhouse for the westerly section of Ward 2, and also a new one for the Adams School District of Ward 3.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

In a City of the importance of Quincy, with its large cosmopolitan population, covering an area of 16 7-10 miles, and having diversified industries, the work of the Board of Health is intimately associated with the comfort and health of the people.

The policy of the Commonwealth in recent years has been to enlarge the powers and correspondingly increase the responsibility of this Board. The City recognizing this fact, has recently increased the salary of the Chairman of the Board. In the future, he will be required to devote more time to the affairs of his office.

With much of the work of this department, it being local in its character, although not so in its effect, the public does not actively interest itself, but with the discharge of certain of its functions, such as the care of cesspools, and the charge therefor, the collection of garbage and ashes, the people of all sections of the City are vitally concerned, and properly so.

There does not seem to me to be any valid reason why this work cannot be done in a manner which will meet with the approbation of the public.

I believe that the operative force should be reorganized and an experienced and competent foreman appointed, who, under the direction of the Board, should have general charge of the cleaning out of cesspools and the collection of garbage and ashes. If this policy is adopted, I believe the work can be done efficiently and economically, and without any friction between the department and the public, and in such a manner as to give general satisfaction.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The recent action of the City in extending the provision of the civil service law to the office of Chief of Police, should, in my opinion, materially improve the discipline of the force, and thereby increase its effectiveness.

The police force should be maintained at such numerical strength as to afford full and complete police protection both day and night to all sections of the City.

There are but few expenditures of public money which means more to the citizens than that expended in maintaining an active, well disciplined and intelligent police force.

Efficiency in this department should receive the same recognition as in the other branches of the public service, and on the other hand, any negligence in the discharge of his duty by a member of the force should be dealt with summarily.

I shall give the rules and regulations governing this department, as well as the manner in which it discharges the public duties devolving on it, my earnest and careful consideration.

There is no reason why we should not have in Quincy as efficient and competent a police force as any city in the Commonwealth.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The effective suppression of fires requires not only that the apparatus should arrive at the scene of the conflagration as soon as possible after the alarm is given, but when it gets there, a sufficient number of trained and experienced men should be available to at once deal intelligently with the fire. To that end I believe there should be assigned to each fire station a number of permanent men so that when the apparatus leaves the station it may be accompaneid by a proper number of permanent men belonging to the force. I therefore, notwithstanding the recent increase authorized by the Council of 1911, recommend and urge that at least six permanent men be added to the force.

If the Council adopts this recommendation, it may properly think it unnecessary to maintain the present number of call men.

I believe it will materially assist the work of this department if all the wires of the public service corporations are placed underground, and I suggest that legislation to that end be adopted.

I believe that the Chief of the Fire Department should have an office at the Central Fire Station, and unless elsewhere in the performance of the duties of his office, should be there during each day.

POOR DEPARTMENT.

As the City increases in population, so inevitably will the demands on this department annually increase.

The worthy unfortunates who in their struggle against adversity, are compelled to seek aid from the City, should receive our assistance promptly.

Quincy is fortunate in having several well-organized charitable associations. These organizations are doing a great amount of good work along their chosen lines.

The charitable, self-sacrificing spirit, which prompts the ladies and gentlemen connected with these organizations to devote so much of their time and money to the great cause of charity, merits and should receive our public commendation. Mutual co-operation between these organizations and the Poor Department in relieving the poor should be fostered and encouraged.

The Council should make such an appropriation for this Department as will enable it to meet the demands which may be made upon it during the coming year.

NO LICENSE.

Quincy is distinctively a no-license city, and such, I trust, it will always remain.

As a means to that end, all the laws against the illegal sale and transportation of intoxicating liquor should be strictly and impartially enforced. So long as I am Mayor, no individual or association shall be above the law.

Our police force should be able to cope with and promptly suppress any violation of the liquor laws, and I shall hold them to the full performance of their duty in that respect. Any citizen having knowledge of any violation of these laws will be doing a public duty in making the same known to the Mayor, or Chief of Police, and will thereby be co-operating in upholding the law and enforcing the will of the people.

WATER FRONT.

Quincy's water front with its great commercial advantages should be developed as soon as practicable.

Public landings and a public wharf or dock large enough to accommodate the needs of our growing industries should be built at an early date.

In locating this work, regard should be had to the feasibility of making proper railroad connections with it.

I regard this matter of such great importance that I believe the different business organizations should be invited not only to give us the benefit of their judgment concerning the same, but also the assistance of their co-operation.

NEW INDUSTRIES.

Quincy's advantages as a manufacturing center should be properly advertised, and if this is done, I believe many new industries may be induced to locate here. I suggest that a committee of the Council be appointed to co-operate with the Board of Trade in this mater.

TAXES.

I am strongly impressed with the view that a more thorough method may be adopted for determining the amount of taxes each taxable person of the City should pay. The small property owner, with his home and little lot of land, in plain view of the assessors, pays to its full value on all his taxable property, but can that be said with equal truth of the man, who owns little or no real estate, but is enjoying a good income and some times is conducting a successful and very often a large business in Quincy, Boston or elsewhere.

Simple justice demands that each should pay his just share of taxes according to the amount of taxable property he may own.

I shall take this matter up with the Board of Assessors, and give to it the best thought and study of which I am capable.

HOUGHS NECK.

Certain residents of Houghs Neck have petitioned the Legislature of 1912 to separate Houghs Neck, Germantown, Post Island and a portion of the Adams Shore District from the City of Quincy, and to create a new town in that territory.

While I do not recognize that there is any merit in the petition, or any probability of the Legislature granting it, nevertheless, it should be opposed. I recommend that the Council appoint a committee to act with the Executive in protecting the City's interest in this matter.

Gentlemen of the City Council:

I wish, at this time, to express to the citizens of Quincy my sincere thanks for the honor they have conferred upon me, by electing me Mayor of the City, and to pledge myself to carry out to the best of my ability the duties incumbent upon that office.

Quincy is one of the oldest communities in the United States; her fame is world wide. To her great granite industry has been added one of the largest ship building plants in the world; besides many other manufacturing plants.

We should foster desirable industries of all kinds, and do all in our power to induce such industries to locate within our borders.

In conclusion, Gentlemen, the labors which devolve on us jointly can with concerted effort, as far as our finances will permit, be solved. We, this day, asume a sacred trust. To us the grandest of all cities in the Commonwealth, Quincy, confides her destiny for the coming year. Let us impartially perform for Quincy her service, and our duty.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Regular services were held Sunday at the First Presbyterian church. At the morning service Rev. Mr. Matheson preached a New Year sermon, taking his text from Philippines 3-16. "Nevertheless, we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing."

The Bible school met at 12 o'clock and as it was the last Sabbath of the year, Mr. Clark superintendent of the school united the Men's Bible class and the Ladies' class to meet with the Bible school for a social hour.

Rev. Mr. Matheson, Mr. Clark, Mr. Alfred Bishop, George Wilson, Mr. McLeod and Mrs. Matheson were called on for a few remarks concerning the year's work and plans for 1912. Then "Blest be the tie that binds," was sung and Mr. Matheson dismissed the school with the benediction.

The C. E. service at six o'clock was led by William Michael, assisted by Laurence Butler.

The evening service at 7 o'clock was opened with singing by the choir, "The New-Born King." Rev. Mr. Matheson then preached a very interesting sermon on the "Old and New Year." The choir sang the anthems, "The Lord Jehovah Reigns," and "While the Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," assisted by William Warmington of the Granite City Quartet.

The C. E. business meeting will be held Tuesday evening and the prayer meeting Thursday at 7 P. M. for young people and at 7.30 a preparatory service for members.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The service of worship yesterday morning was an unusually impressive one. Rev. Carl G. Horst spoke upon "The Lord's Supper and its True Significance." To the Christians of the first century the Lord's supper was a memorial service commemorative of Jesus, says Justin Martyr. Then it became corrupted from its simplicity, overlaid with ceremonials and invested with sacerdotal mystery. It is, however, by no magic or material contact with the bread and wine, that the supper works its quickening effect, but by bringing Christ to our mind. It is the memorial of a friend. What the ring worn on the finger of a departed mother is to a child in recalling the beloved one to thought, that in kind is the Lord's supper to the disciple. To all who believe in Pure Christianity and accept the teachings of Jesus and not the doctrines of men, the communion service is a service (1) in Commemoration of the Prince of Life and (2) of Fellowship with each other and all the faithful souls who have tried to follow in the Master's footsteps. It comes to us straight down through all the centuries from Jesus himself and has gathered to itself the sanctity of the ages and the reverence of humanity.

Immediately after the sermon the pastor stepped down from the pulpit to the communion table, where the Lord's supper was observed, with this innovation however, that the bread and wine were not passed, thus making the whole service symbloic. This new feature appeals strongly to not a few of our members who find no spiritual help in the physical act of eating and drinking in the midst of a devotional service and feel that the actual eating and drinking detract from rather than add to the significance of the rite.

All members of the Women's Alliance are invited to 25 Beacon street, Boston, Tuesday, at 10.30 A. M. This meeting is called for the purpose of organizing a society for social service among Christian women.

The Earnest Workers Lend-a-Hand club will meet with Miss Anna Weston, Tuesday, at 3 P. M.

All the women's societies of our Wollaston churches are invited to meet with the Women's Alliance, Wednesday, at 2.30. Mrs. Anna Sturgis Duryea will speak upon "International Peace."

Many of the Women's Alliance are planning to attend a neighborhood meeting in Unity church, Brockton, Tuesday, Jan. 9. The Rev. Benjamin R. Bulkeley of Beverly will give an address on "Concord."

Thursday at 6.30 in the vestry the ladies of the church will serve one of their delicious suppers to be followed by an entertainment.

The Y. P. R. U. meeting next Sunday in charge of Mrs. Frank A. Page's Sunday school class of young ladies. Subject: "The Psalms." A chorus of sixteen voices accompanied by a large orchestra will render Ballard's Ninety-first psalm.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, being the longest settled minister in Wollaston, is now the dean of the Wollaston clergy.

At the Lord's supper yesterday the ancient communion set was used and added much to the impressiveness of the service.

The annual business meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian society will be held Monday evening, Jan. 22, in the vestry. All the allied societies will make their reports in writing.

Rev. Carl G. Horst will address the Women's Alliance of Sharon, Thursday.

"Sex Education" is topic of an address by Dr. W. D. Parkinson at the Wollaston Parents-Teachers' Association, Monday, Jan. 8.

Editor Bible Box Questions:

Will you please explain the meaning of the text "Thou shall not suffer a witch to live." The word "witch" is obviously not used in any allegorical sense, hence did not the writers of the Scriptures evidently believe that such things as witches existed.

FRANCIS A. SPEAR OUT OF OFFICE

Given Alternative of Resigning or Being Removed

OVER 20 YEARS IN OFFICE

This New Year's day is anything but a happy one for Probation Officer Francis A. Spear, first because on Saturday he was given the alternative of handing in his resignation this morning as Probation Officer or being removed, and second because as he was about to leave his home to come to court he slipped on the icy walk, and fell. While not seriously injured the fall prevented his going to court.

Up to noon it was not known which of the alternatives he would accept. Should he hand in his resignation he will be retired on a pension but should he be removed from office he will lose the pension. It is understood the county probation, or retirement act accepted at the recent state election, goes into effect Jan. 6, and should he resign his resignation will not take effect until after that date so that he would be entitled to $200 a year for life. The only other way he could receive a pension is when he reached a certain age. This however would seem to be impossible as it has been officially stated that he must resign or be removed.

Saturday Judge Avery appointed Arthur B. Hultman as temporary Probation Officer and he reported for duty this morning. Owing to Mr. Spear's fall he did not come to court and at a late hour no official word had been received from him.

LATER:—Shortly after court adjourned Judge Avery received a letter from Mr. Spear tendering his resignation.

The original probation act went into effect in 1891 and on July 1 that year Mr. Spear received his appointment from the late Judge James H. Humphrey. Had he continued in office until next July he would have been in service for 21 years. At the end of his twentieth there were rumors that Mr. Spear would resign and it was understood at that time his resignation would be accepted, but he has held the office to date. It has been rumored that he would be allowed to remain until July 1, but the action on the part of Judge Avery Saturday makes it certain that the change must take place today.

Mr. Spear is well known to the residents of Quincy where he has lived all his life. In his younger days he was engaged in the merchant tailor business and later served as one of the town constables. He also served as a constable during the early city government and did duty as a night officer before the regular police department was established. It was while serving as such that he had a tiff with ex-Mayor Fairbanks, during which he ordered the Mayor to move on as he was blocking up the sidewalk.

FOOT BALL.

A two column report of the Fore River and Howard & Bullough soccer game, crowded out by the Mayor's Inaugural will appear in Tuesday's Ledger.

Adjourned at 12.58.

SANG CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

Taking the place of the usual Sunday service at Sailor's Snug Harbor was one of the most delightful services we ever listened to. A company of twenty men from Cornwall, England, sang Christmas carols. The sailors at the Harbor and all who had the privilege of listening were delighted with the service. Mr. John Goodfellow, who is one of a faithful few who Sunday by Sunday give their time to help out the usual services secured these men. We understand that these men keep up here every Christmas season the custom of the home land. It is well worth doing. The old men at the Harbor expressed themselves enthusiastically about the singing. Eight or nine carols, two solos and an instrumental selection was the program. We hope the custom of Christmas singing will grow in our country.

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

The fourth in the series of whist tournaments between members of Quincy and Ave Maria council Knights of Columbus was held in the rooms of Quincy council Saturday night. The tournament was won by Quincy Council which scored 203 points to 161 for Ave Maria. The standing to date is Quincy leads by 127 points.

BASKET BALL DATES.

The games that were scheduled for Jan. 6, have been moved forward to Jan. 30 and the Dual meet with the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. will be held on Jan. 6. This change was made necessary on account of the swimming campaign now being conducted at the Cambridge Y. M. C. A.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

In spite of the storm a good number were present Sunday evening at the Baptist church. The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached on the subject: "The Old and the New Year," taking as his text the words of Jesus, "It is finished." The sermon was very practical and helpful.

The men's department of the Sunday school had a good showing.

The Juniors met in the chapel at 3.30 Miss Ethel Campbell in charge.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was led by Miss Grace Schermerhorn, subject, "Things I want to do better next year."

At the evening service the pastor preached the eleventh in a series of sermons on "Men Who Did Things," his subject being "The Man Who Determined." The chorus choir sang two selections. A good number was present.

Tuesday morning at 10.00 the ladies will meet in the chapel to sew for an orphanage in Atlanta, Ga. Clothing for all under 18 years of age solicited. Women invited. At 3 the monthly business meeting of the Social and Benevolent society will be held in the chapel. This will be followed by the annual free will offering. Tea will be served. All the women of the church and congregation invited. At 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Porter, 109 Taylor street. John H. Hill will lead.

Friday evening at 7.45 the monthly covenant meeting of the church will be held in the chapel. Subject: "His Faithfulness." This subject will continue our meditations on the "Life and Character of Jesus."

January 7-13 will be observed as Week of Prayer by churches of all denominations throughout the world. This church is planning for several extra meetings.

WEST QUINCY M. E.

"Watch Night" was observed at the Hall Place M. E. church Sunday evening with interesting services. The Epworth League held their regular Sunday evening devotional service from seven to eight, topic, "Reasoning from a blessed present to a glorious future." The leader was Miss Hilda Francis first vice president of the League. It was a very helpful and interesting service, appropriate to the last night of the old year.

Rev. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston M. E. church conducted the service from eight to nine. He took for the text of his sermon Eph. 6-10. "Finally my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." From nine to ten, Rev. Mr. Gregg of the East Milton Congregational church occupied the pulpit.

At ten o'clock the Ladies' Aid served coffee and cake and a short social time was enjoyed after which Rev. Mr. Matheson of the First Presbyterian church and Rev. Mr. Thompson of the United Presbyterian preached. The last hour was called the "Aspiration Hour." The service closed with silent prayer and consecration.

Tuesday evening, J. A. Sedgwick of Wollaston will conduct a meeting in the interests of the Sunday school; Wednesday evening Robert E. Childs of Dorchester a meeting for young people; Thursday evening will be "Woman's work" and Mrs. L. W. Staples of Cambridge will be the visitor. Francis A. Luce of Boston will meet the men and boys Friday evening.

HOLY DAY IN CHURCHES.

Special services in observance of New Year's day, a holy day of obligation on the ecclesiastical calendar, were held in all the Catholic churches of the city this morning. The first masses were celebrated at an early hour in order to accommodate the working people.

In the Church of St. John the Baptist, masses were celebrated at 5, 7 and 9 o'clock. The first two were said by Rev. John J. Casey and Rev. John J. Coan, the pastors respectively. The last mass was a solemn high mass and the officiating clergyman was Rev. Patrick J. Scannell.

The regular choir, under the direction of John Mahon, furnished the Gregorian music. Fr. Scannell delivered a masterly discourse on "The Magi." Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament terminated the services.

In St. Mary's church, West Quincy, Rev. Henry T. Grady the pastor, was the celebrant of the 5 o'clock mass, while Rev. William J. Duffy officiated at the last two masses, celebrated at 6.45 and 8 o'clock.

In the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, masses were celebrated at 5 and 8 o'clock, the former by the pastor Rev. John J. Cuffe and the latter by Rev. James F. McNiff. The mass in St. Francis' church, Houghs Neck was said at 8 o'clock.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

LAMB AND BEEF KIDNEYS.

KIDNEYS, if properly prepared, make a very appetizing dish, although they should only be served now and then. Some authorities taboo this meat, while others are just as positive in recommending it as an occasional diet.

Beef and sheep's kidneys are the ones most generally selected, and they should, of course, be most thoroughly cleansed before they are cooked.

There is no doubt that kidneys are quite as wholesome and digestible as liver, tripe or sweetbreads. Kidneys are inexpensive, which is an advantage in these days of high priced meats. The French make many delicious dishes with them.

Some Ways of Using Kidneys.

Kidney Saute With Sauce.—Take six lamb kidneys, clean and split, put into a frying pan with three tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a little onion juice, salt and a dash of cayenne. Drop the kidneys into the pan, thicken the gravy with browned flour, wet with a little cold water and serve.

Baked Kidney.—Take half a pound of beef kidney and cut into pieces. Place in a pan with a little gravy and stew for an hour. When cold stir half a dessertspoonful of dry mustard into a spoonful of flour. Add cayenne pepper and salt. Place the kidney in an oven. Add a piece of butter and cook until the meat is well done. The kidney should be tender, with a little thick gravy sticking to it.

Stewed Kidney.

Kidney Ragout.—Prepared as a stew kidney is most easily digested. Take a good beef kidney and cut up about half a pound into small pieces and dip in flour. Season with pepper, salt and a little nutmeg. Put this into a paper cooking bag with a finely minced onion and a teacupful of brown stock thickened with flour. Cook for forty minutes. Serve on a hot dish with squares of toast round and a little chopped parsley over.

Savory Kidney.—Take a kidney and cut it in half. Remove the fat and all stringy parts. Then cut into dice. Place a frying pan on the stove and when it is heated drop into it three tablespoonfuls of butter. Add to the butter a chopped onion and the kidney. Let it cook, stirring all the time, over a good fire for about three minutes. Season with salt and pepper, a couple of tablespoonfuls of stock and enough flour to thicken. In about a minute it is ready to serve.

Mayor Stone And Others Pay Tribute to His Great Service

HON. WILLIAM T. SHEA

No returning wanderer ever received a warmer welcome home than did ex-Mayor Shea Monday evening at the complimentary banquet tendered him upon his retirement from office by the Copeland club. The occasion was one that will long be remembered by His Honor and it must have been particularly gratifying to him to hear the many words of praise that were bestowed by all of the speakers.

The banquet was not only attended by many from West Quincy but from other wards as well, for in the party that gathered about the banquet table were many of the present city officials as well as some of the ex-officials and friends in general of "Bill."

The banquet was served at St. Mary's hall by Burleigh & Martin and during the banquet inspiring music was rendered by Morrisette's orchestra. Prayer was offered by Rev. Henry T. Grady.

The dinner was a good one the menu being as follows:

Escalloped Oysters
Roast Stuffed Turkey
Cranberry Sauce
Delmonico Potatoes
Chicken Salad Lobster Salad
Rolls
Assorted Light and Fancy Cakes
Ice Creams
Frozen Pudding Sultana Roll
Claret Sauce
Orange and Raspberry Sherbet
Coffee

Seated at the head table besides the guest of the evening were Miss Kate Shea, Mayor Stone and Mrs. Stone, Rev. Henry T. Grady, Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Martin of the Hall Place church, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Burke, James F. Edwards, William Martell, president of the Copeland club, Miss B. Flaherty, ex-Councilman John D. Smith, the toast master, Miss Alicia Elcock and Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock.

Dinner over, President Martell rapped for order and briefly extended the welcome of the Copeland club to those present. He wished to extend to their honored guest the high regard in which he was held. He has not only reflected great credit upon himself but on West Quincy his home ward as well and we all heartily welcome him home. He then introduced ex-Councilman John D. Smith as the toast master.

John was at his best on this occasion and made an ideal toast master. He said that it was a great pleasure to those of us who live in West Quincy to welcome home our Mayor. Now that the smoke of the recent battle was over he wanted to say that there

It was an extreme pleasure for him to congratulate the retiring chief executive. We are very gratified at the manner in which he has accredited himself. That he had many Republican friends and that he was a Mayor of the people. That he had tried to deal fairly by all the people. That he was the people's Mayor.

He could not see that the Mayor had shown any particular favoritism but that he had been the Mayor of the whole city. What a fine feeling a pub-

SPEAKER WALKER AT WOLLASTON

Present Movement Toward More Popular Government

NOTABLE ADDRESS

At the meeting of the St. Chrysostom's parish Monday evening Hon. Joseph Walker of Brookline, speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, delivered an address upon the "Present movement toward more popular government."

SPEAKER JOSEPH WALKER.

The speaker prefaced his address by remarking that one of the most pleasant things about the Legislature is the number of friendships you form there. He mentioned the number of good friends he had made around and in Quincy and Wollaston.

"There is a great movement," said Speaker Walker, "that we feel and see spreading over the land toward a more popular form of government—a progressive movement if you please. I shall discuss some of the features and some of the problems connected with it.

"It is indeed a time of great political and social unrest. There seems to be a feeling that something is wrong; that laws are too often of advantage to special interests or classes rather than the general public.

"The growth of corporations in size, power and influence is noticed and it is felt that arbitrary and unjust methods are employed in substituting monopoly for competition.

"The people are suspicious that the tariff rates are unjust and finally comes the question of the high cost of living. All this tends to stimulate a feeling of unrest and business and politics seem to be in a transitory stage.

Perhaps the most serious incident is the loss of confidence in political institutions. It is felt that both parties are dominated by those who have the interests of others than the public at heart. This leads to a loss of

EASTERN STAR INSTALLATION

Handsome Jewels Presented Retiring Officers

THE NEW OFFICERS

There was an unusually large attendance of members and visitors at Masonic apartments Monday evening, at the public installation of the officers of Quincy Chapter No. 88, Order of the Eastern Star. The officers were installed by Mrs. Lucy G. B. Colby, Past Grand Patron, who was assisted by George F. Bradstreet, Grand Patron, Margaret B. Knights, Past Grand Matron and Katherin A. Hall, Past Grand Marshal. Music during the beautiful installation ceremony was furnished by the Temple quartet.

After the installation there were brief addresses by the Grand officers and others present. Bouquets of flowers were presented to the Grand officers and a past matron's jewel to Myra E. Lester and a past Patron's jewel to William Patterson. Refreshments were served at the close of the exercises.

The officers installed were as follows:—

Worthy Matron—Edith R. Higgins.
Worthy Patron—William Patterson.
Assistant Matron—Henrietta S. Files
Secretary—Clara R. Catarius.
Treasurer—Laura E. Holt.
Conductress—Margaret E. Gannon.
Assistant Conductress—Annie E. Rose.
Marshal—Adalaide F. McGrath.
Adah—Mildred Crowley.
Pianist—Clara E. Call.
Ruth—Josephine Schools.
Esther—Edith Crocker.
Martha—Catherine MacDonald.
Electa—Charlotte Barnicoat.
Warder—Mary Webb.
Sentinel—Dexter Remick, P. P.

Mrs. Cora Remick, the newly elected chaplain, was not present, inasmuch as she is at present sojourning at Orange, Florida.

LEAP YEAR PARTY

The first leap year party of 1912 was ushered in Monday evening in Colonial hall by members of the Murray club and the affair proved to be a most enjoyable one. Dancing started at eight o'clock and concluded at eleven.

All the honors were done by the ladies and it was they who asked the gentlemen for the dances. Hayden's orchestra furnished music for the occasion. Punch was served during the evening.

The patrons were R. G. Reed and John Hyland.

The committee in charge included Misses Edith Hyland, Bessie Grant, Mildred Smith, Marion Wright and Katherine and Elizabeth Reed.

BRIEFS

Did you use the new theatre train at 7.03 last night? If you are going to the theatre don't forget the new train for it's at a most convenient hour to reach the theatre without hurrying.

By special request Mrs. Frank J. Moore will sing Gounod's "Repentent" at the Bethany Concert tomorrow evening, with organ, violin and piano accompaniment. A rare opportunity to hear this beautiful song given in a manner worthy of one of the grandest sacred solos ever written.

Although J. Barraja-Frauenfelder has given up his residence on Whitney road and with his brother contemplates in the near future opening a studio in Boston it is his intention to make Quincy his permanent home. ITALIAN AMERICAN A. C. ANNUAL INDOOR MEET

Hackett Wins Five Mile-Race Against Sullivan and Davis

Halfenstein Establishes A New Record For Mile Run

Hundreds of athletic admirers taxed the Coliseum last evening on the occasion of the second annual indoor meet of the Italian American A. C. All the events were watched with enthusiasm and the meet as a whole was most successful.

The contests at times proved exciting and there were many outbursts when "Billy" Hackett, twice winner of the Brockton Marathon came to the front in his race against two runners of note, and won by half a lap. The Weymouth boy, who has not competed in any running events for a long time, owing to illness, was pitted against John Davis of the Pastime A. C. of Brockton and C. H. Sullivan of the Brookline Gym association.

Davis gave Hackett a hard battle and in 2 1-2 miles succeeded in gaining a lap on the Weymouth star. Sullivan increased the lead another half lap, when he relieved Davis. Both runners kept closely together until the last half mile, when Hackett, amid great shouts of enthusiasm, gained the lap he had lost and won the race.

The thirty-yard dash was hotly contested and the Cathedral Y. M. C. A., the organization which seemed to loom forth in a conspcuous light, coveted two places in this event. C. J. O'Brien, member of the above mentioned, and T. Chell of Quincy Y. M. C. A. were tied for third place. They agreed to toss for the position, with the result that the place went to the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. runner.

The Quincy competitors all showed up to advantage, and Phelan, a well-known local boy, who is now wearing the colors of the Cathedral Y .M. C. A. has surely proven himself to be a valuable acquisition to that organization.

The great surprise of the evening occurred when John Halfenstein of the Brookline Gym defeated James Hennigan, the schoolboy 3-mile champion and the New England Amateur 10-mile champion, in a one mile race, in the fast time of 4 minutes, and 29 seconds, thereby establishing a record on the local track.

A special feature of the events was an exhibition relay against time, furnished by four well-known local runners, each man running two laps.

The relay race was most interesting and the all-round ability of the Cathedral organization was shown to advantage over the Quincy Y. M. C. A. team. Baker of Weymouth High school won in a two-mile special from Kingsbury of the local High school, but only after a most gruelling contest.

The main event of the evening showed Frank Bruce of the Italian American A. C. and John J. Cook of the Brookline Gym. in action in a five-mile run. The pace was interchanged several times, until Cook, the New England 10-mile champion took the lead and won by fully ten yards. It was a close race throughout and proved a great attraction to the many present. The meet was pronounced a large success and gave an auspicious start to the athletic outook in local circles for the remainder of the year.

The officials included, Referee, T. J. Conrick of Cambridge; clerk of course, James E. Neary. Fore River Apprentices, starter, Louis F. LaRose, Quincy, Y. M. C. A., timer, James A. King, Quincy Y. M. C. A., inspectors, William Bramble, North Dorchester A. A., Franz Marceau, Dartmouth A. A., A. E. Garber, North Dorchester A. A., Frank Halfenstein, Brookline Gym., assistant clerk of course, John Kehler, Cathedral Y. M. C. A. and custodian of prizes, James Duggan, Atlantic A. C.

The summary:

Thirty-yard Dash—First heat won by W. Meanix, Brookline Gym. A. A.; second, C. J. O'Brien, Cathedral Y. M. C. A. Time 3 3-5 second.

Second Heat—Won by H. Coles, North Dorchester A. C.; second, J. McCauley, Cathedral Y. M. C. A. Time 3 3-5 seconds.

Third Heat—Won by J. F. Phelan, Cathedral Y. M. C. A.; second, T. Chell, Quincy Y. M. C. A. Time 3 2-5 seconds.

Final Heat—Won by W. Meanix, Brookline Gym.; second, J. F. Phelan, Cathedral Y. M. C. A.; third, C. J. O'Brien, Cathedral Y. M. C. A. Time 3 3-5 seconds.

Special Two Mile Run—Between A. F. Baker, Weymouth H. S. and F. M. Kingsbury, Quincy H. S. Won by Baker. Time 12 minutes, 37 2-5 seconds.

ATTENTION! THERE!

Listen to this Tale

I chanced to be in the Assessors' office last week and overheard an old gentleman grumbling because the valuation had been raised on his lot of land at Elm Ave., Wollaston. He didn't want to pay the extra tax. One of the Assessors asked him if he would sell it at the assessed valuation, said he could sell it for him and started to take his name. Embarrassed? Don't say a word. Honest, he actually sneaked out of City Hall. Mumbled something about the lot being his wife's etc. He never came back. He was wise and the Assessor called his bluff.

Well the point I'm coming to is this. I have just got hold of one of these lots on East Elm Ave., which I can sell for a trifle over the Assessed valuation. Talk about your snaps. This section is building up fast and this lot will double in value in 5 years. Buy it now while the price is low. Build in the spring or hold for an investment. Don't sleep while an opportunity like this is in sight. 5000 feet on one of the best streets.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The high cost of wood and coal now-a-days is a burning shame.

The strangest thing about a campaign publicity bureau is the number of secrets it has.

The Sherman law is not anticipating a pleasant time in Washington this winter.

Mr. Pinchot fears that he will have to organize a party of his own in order to get one to suit him.

Dr. Anna Shaw says Eve was one of the world's greatest women. Well, she had much less competition than Dr. Shaw,

The way women who have killed their husbands are being acquitted may well make the lawyers fear a falling off in divorce business.

Mr. Edison's concrete furniture will never satisfy the Small Boy. What will be have then to try his new Christmas jack-knife on?

Ohio for at least a year will maintain her ancient reputation of having more politics to the square inch than any other state.

It takes a bride with a vivid imagination to keep on believing it is still the honeymoon when she is busy at the washtub.

By getting a big fee for forming combinations in restraint of trade and another for unscrambling them, the corporation lawyer is catching 'em coming and going.

Patrons of the trolley express in Quincy are pleased that the Massachusetts Railroad commission on Monday granted the Boston Elevated Railway Company authority to do a trolley freight and express business in Boston. This is a connecting link much needed and means better and quicker express service for Quincy as the shipments will be direct, doing away with trucking goods to Neponset.

This act of the Railroad commission overrules previous action on the part of Boston and is granted because the commission thinks that public convenience and necessity require it.

THE MODERN NEW YEAR.

Some of our prophets of decadence think they find proof of national degeneracy in the modern methods of celebrating New Year's day in New York and other society centers.

Many middle aged New Yorkers look back with pleasure on the decorous and punctilious custom of New Year's calls. With the bounteously spread table, the battalions of pretty girl attendants, the coach loads of visiting young men in high hats, tail coats, white gloves and ties and boutonnieres,—the function had the elegant elaboration of a highly refined civilization.

Today New York and many other cities witness only scenes of rowdyism, as women blow horns, and men put confetti down the neck of any pretty girl they meet in the street.

It would be interesting to speculate why the pretty custom of New Year's receptions, once more or less general, has largely died out.

An explanation frequently given, with much truth, is that people became shocked by its excesses. After you made 100 calls, in which each of which your compliments to the hostess were done in 60 seconds, but out of which several minutes were spent at a punch-laden table, final exercises of the day often consisted of making courtesies to telegraph poles and embracing lamp posts. The office and the factory will not now tolerate a custom that thus reduces efficiency for work.

Perhaps an even more compelling reason is the dislike felt by the American man for functions that are purely formal. Never before was it so difficult to drag out the head of the house for an evening of calls. The wife may say that social position depends upon an accurate fulfillment of the obligations of the etiquette books. The man feels that he is on very good terms with his fellows through his relations on the street or at the ball grounds or the Country Club. A black coat and fifteen minute duty calls seem to him a most funereal occasion.

The future American will be even less likely on New Year's day to seek out his comrades amid the clatter of tea-tables. Enjoying snow and ice sports, on the golf links or motoring down the flowing road, the crisp air of January will suit him better than the orchid perfumed air of the former reception room.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

President Taft urges the attention of Congress to the matter of workmen's compensation, and without much doubt the general sentiment of Congress will agree with him. The present condition of the employers' liability laws in the country at large is a clover field for the liability insurance companies and for the lawyers.

New York statistics for three years, for instance, showed that manufacturers paid them premiums for protection during three years, amounting to $23,523,585. During the same period they paid to employees as compensation for injuries, only $8,559,795. That is to say, the insurance companies, their employees, and the lawyers, got nearly two-thirds of the money that the manufacturers were forced to give up, all of which would have gone to the injured men under the laws existing in all progressive European states.

A corporation lawyer told in 1909, in an article in the American magazine, of the way it worked in a typical case. A laborer working on a hide stripping machine, as the result of care taken to prevent a hide from doubling up and spoiling, lost his arm, through failure of the machine to work properly. Feeling the hopelessness of a law suit, he settled for a figure, which after paying doctors' bills, left him $127 as the price of his arm.

The other extreme appears in the not infrequent cases where $2 a day laborers will get $10,000 to $15,000 for similar injuries. Juries feel the wrongs of the present system so keenly that occasionally they will soak the corporations on general principles.

The present system tends to make the employer careless about his machinery, and it diverts the compensation away from the purpose for which it is intended.

It should be possible to frame a system that would take the money from the insurance companies and lawyers, and give it to the injured men. One great obstacle appears in the adverse decision rendered by the New York Court of Appeals last April, against the new New York law. A constitutional amendment, if this is a good law, would seem needful.

Night and the healing balm of sleep!
Each morn is New Year's morn come true,
Morn of a festival to keep.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES AND JOTTINGS

A Regular Weekly Feature of the Quincy Daily Ledger

Never was there a time when so much thought, and so much study was given to health and the care of the body as today. Probably there is no one factor more responsible for this result than the Young Men's Christian Association. Early in the work of the Association, the leaders realized the fact that a person to live a Christian life, will have better chances for success if he is strong and healthy. With this in view they began to study how young men could be taught to care for their bodies. This early discovered the need of trained men to lead in this work. It also discovered the need of a special place and equipment for the carrying on of this work. Many who have in anyway studied into the needs of children in the way of play, have found that the Greeks were early in finding out the value of caring for the body by means of the gymnasium. They were believed to be as important as was the school itself. Thus the children were given so much time in the school room and nearly an equal time in the gymnasium.

We, who are living today, feel that we have greatly advanced in our amount of learning and insight into matters. We have no doubt in some ways. But, let many of you readers endeavor to run two blocks in attempting to catch a street car or a train and see in what condition you are in when the operation is over. And yet our brothers, who lived in Quincy previous to 1620, would think nothing of running from here to Boston just for a little pastime.

Many of the most successful business men of today are, in the summer months at least, spending some of their valuable time, on the golf links. And much to their own benefit. This is especially valuable because it takes them into the open air and they are forced to fill their lungs with good air. What happens when they can golf no longer? They simply stay the longer in their offices with what result? They simply lose much of the benefit they have gained from their exercise. Just try to get such a man to spend an hour in a gymnasium and see what the result will be. If he would do so, he would continue to increase the benefit he derived during the summer and it is easily demonstrated that he would do his work easier and more efficiently. Doubtless there are not many who ever dreamed that our Ambassador to Russia, ex-Governor Guild, was ever sickly, yet such is the case. He was put onto his feet as far as health is concerned, by taking regular exercise.

There are a great many people in the city who have never seen the physical department of the Association. They have never seen the fine gymnasium, which is well equipped; nor the baths, nor the fine swimming pool. In this pool more than one boy and young man has learned to swim.

It is surely as good a piece of work to perform, to prevent a person from being sick as it is to provide a good doctor after he is sick. This is one of the great fields of the Association. This is especially true of the work for boys. More than one boy has grown up into a strong man because of the training he received in the gymnasium.

COMMUNITY HELP.

The Physical Director of many an Association is the leader in many lines of work. In these past years, with the rapid growth of the playground movement, this official has become an important factor in the development of this great work. This was illustrated in Quincy last summer, when Mr. LaRose took charge of the playground of the Committee of One Hundred on Coddington street. The training of the Physical Director easily fits him to lead in this work.

Another way in which the Association often becomes a great help in a community, is by the promotion of base ball teams in the manufacturing plants in the city. Through the instrumentality of the Association in Ansonia, Connecticut, an Industrial Base Ball League was formed. The League went through one successful season and started upon its second when difficulties arose. These were met and overcome and the second year was even more successful than the first and as a result an industrial Basket Ball League has been formed. Both of these leagues have been helpful in many ways. They have given players a chance to get into the game and it has kept the sport clean as it could be controlled. The same will be true of Basket Ball.

CAMPS.

One of the later features of the physical work has been the annual camp conducted each summer. In this way, thousands of boys each year have a chance to get an outing under efficient leadership; get good food and have a great time in a helpful and wholesome way. The Committee of Massachusetts and Rhode Island conducts two camps each year, that tax their capacity. One is located way up among the Berkshire hills in the town of Becket, where the State Association owns a farm containing a number of hundred acres. The second is located off the coast of Maine and from the start has been a popular resort for the boys of the two states. In addition to these a number of the local Associations have their own camps. Many a boy has learned to swim at one of these camps that in some cases has stood in good stead in the time of need. Senator Crane was instrumental in securing the farm upon which Camp Becket is located.

ATHLETIC FIELDS.

The securing of an athletic field has proven a great help to many Associations. The new building at Newton has one of the best plants in this regard of any in this vicinity. They have ample grounds surrounding their building. Here they have a track, base ball diamond and tennis courts. The fellows can use the field they desire and go right into the building for a bath and a swim. This gives them a very complete outfit and they are making good use of it already. They can play basket ball, a game which is always popular in the winter season.

In cities where there are no physical directors connected with the school, the Association has sometimes been of assistance by conducting physical training in the various buildings. This of course is not a satisfactory way to conduct the work, but is better than nothing and sometimes leads to the engaging of someone to carry on the work all the time. There is one great disadvantage in this method and is only a makeshift at the best. Physical work should always be carried on in a gymnasium and those taking exercise should have proper clothing and have the opportunity for a bath afterwards. This is one of the essential features of exercise.

One more important work is taken up in the physical department. This is first aid to the injured. Doubtless many lives have been saved by the prompt work, and the "know how" of some member of a class of this kind conducted in the gymnasium. All these only show in a small way how the Association is endeavoring to meet the needs of a community as they arise. The local organization simply endeavors to adapt itself to the need as it arises. The wise Physical Director tries first to find out what his field needs and then endeavors to apply that need. There are few people who today probably realize what a force the Association has been in redeeming bowling and pool from its bad company. Today it is not considered a disgrace to bowl. Not so very many years ago, however, a person was taking a risk in playing the game. The same was true of the game of pool. It really requires a great deal of skill to play the game well.

This week the classes in the gymnasium will be resumed upon their regular schedule. It is a good time for any man or boy to join and get into one of them.

In some parts of the West, no time is lost in the process of "giving in marriage." A couple once came before the Justice of the Peace.

"Link," he said. They joined hands.

"Have him?"

"Yep!"

"Have her?"

"Yes."

"Married! Two dollars."—Lippincott's.

SPEAKER WALKER

confidence in their representatives and in representative government.

"The progressives of both parties as they call themselves claim that the fundamental difficulty lies in the fact that the control is too far removed from the people.

"They claim that wrong political methods should be modified and that the people should be given a direct voice, not only in the nomination of their representatives but in making laws for themselves. They state as LaFollette says that 'For the cure of democracy more democracy is needed.'

"There is a great movement toward a more popular form of government and this movement finds expression in direct nominations, the direct election of United States Senators and in the initiative and referendum.

"These questions are burning issues even here in Massachusetts and demand our serious attention. They are questions that will be discussed on Beacon Hill this coming session.

"I recognize the evils that have given impetus to this movement but I refuse to be carried off my feet by it. We should examine the remedies one at a time—adopt those that are safe and good and reject those that are unsafe and bad.

"All of the measures are very different questions. We may well accept some while not others. I will discuss each separately, first dealing with direct nominations.

"This relates simply to the choosing of party candidates and does not involve any fundamental question of government.

"It is an important and practical question that should be determined by experience. Its adoption would not involve any constitutional change and should be distinguished from direct legislation.

"If we are to have a system of representative government each voter should have the freest possible hand in its selection. This proposition is axiomatic.

"The direct responsibility of the representative to the people is absolutely essential. Previously the convention stood between voter and his party candidate.

"This was an unnecessary bit of political machinery that was often misused. It was the place for trades, agreements and political bosses.

"It was the place where those with some interests to serve got in their effective work. It is gone in Massachusetts I believe for all time.

"The direct election of United States senators is a provision of the constitution dealing with the election of officers.

"For the same reason that the convention system should not stand between the people and the representatives the legislature should not stand between the senators and the people.

"The electoral college became obsolete and rightly so. If every other office is elected directly by the people it seems absurd that the United States senators should not be."

Speaker Walker touched but briefly on the matter of the recall inasmuch as our annual elections make it no vital importance here in Massachusetts.

On the questions of the initiative and referendum the speaker was strongly opposed inasmuch as it would lead to snap judgments and unwise laws.

Direct legislation would weaken the safeguards set up by the constitution to protect the rights of the individual citizen against the temporary will of the majority.

In closing the speaker in a ringing appeal to place the right kind of men in office, not to neglect the sacred duty of voting and above all help form a public opinion that would lead to a high form of government.

Refreshments followed during which questions were informally put. The speaker was given a rising vote of thanks at the conclusion of his remarks.

CHANGE IS WELCOMED

British Telephone System Transferred to Public Ownership

London, Jan. 2.—The British government has taken possession of the 660,000 telephones owned by the National Telephone company, and thereby assumed actual operation of all the public telephones in the United Kingdom.

The government henceforth has an absolute monopoy of all public means of communication by mail, telephone and telegraph. This revolutionary change is welcomed on all sides, owing to the recognized inefficiency of the service under its former private management.

The government promises to introduce many new improvements and give better service at a lower cost.

The price which the government is to pay for the old company's property is not yet determined. It is being fixed by a commission, which is taking an inventory, and will base its decision on the actual value of the property.

Q.—If Adam and Eve were the only ones created by the Lord of all the human race; where did their sons and daughters find wives and husbands? (Inquirer.)

Answer.—The matrimonial question has always been a more or less interesting one since the first wedding down to the latest society event. The above question has long perplexed the minds of philosophers who reason along the line of the evolution doctrine that the race has gradually evolved from lower to higher forms and conditions, reaching a more perfect state as the countless ages roll on to the utmost bounds of eternity. The answering of this question will so thoroughly repudiate the evolution theory that there will be no further room to doubt the Bible narrative concerning the creation of the first man. All scientists, all philosophers, and all intelligent minds have arrived at the one conclusion as regards the origin of the race of mankind; and that is that it descended from one pair and not from several beings coming into existence at the same time. The only rational answer to the question, therefore, is that the children of Adam and Eve must have intermarried. Cain's wife was his own sister. Many centuries later we read of Abraham marrying his half sister. The race, starting out in an almost perfect condition, would not suffer from the results of intermarriage as at the present time when it has so degenerated that even unions between first cousins are prohibited by law, as the results of such unions are manifested in a deteriorated and idiotic offspring. The more one reflects over the matter the more convinced will he become as to the truth of the teachings of the Scriptures. that man was created; and that he did not evolve from lower forms or conditions.

Q.—In Genesis xiii, 17, we read "Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." This was the Lord's promise to Abraham. And then in Acts vi, 5, we read "And He (God) gave him (Abraham) NONE INHERITANCE in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on; yet He promised that he would give it to him for a possession." When will the Lord's promise to Abraham be fulfilled? And if Abraham was God's "friends," how is it that He did not promise him an heavenly inheritance? (F. E. P.)

Answer.—All of the promises which the Lord made prior to the time of the advent of the Lord Jesus, were of an earthly nature. Not one related to a spiritual or heavenly condition. The spiritual promises contained in the New Testament were all given to the Church class, beginning with Christ, who is the Head of the Church. Therefore, all of the Prophets and the Jews were expecting earthly rewards and blessings. Those promises made in olden times to the faithful friends and servants of the Lord are all to be fulfilled through the Church class, those who are the Sons of God, when the Church is completed and glorified at the second coming of Christ; for thus says the Apostle—"And these all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they (those mentioned in the preceding verses, Abraham, Moses, etc.,) without us should not be made perfect." Hebrews xi, 39. 40. There is a clear distinction between friendship and sonship. It is appropriate that God should bestow greater honors and blessings upon His "Sons" than those that He has promised to His "friends" and "servants." See Hebrews iii, 5, 6. x

NO STAMPEDE TO LA FOLLETTE

Is Indorsed, However, by Ohio Progressive Republicans

RESOLUTION AGAINST TAFT

Declares Purpose to Work In Harmony and Unison For Any Republican Who Holds Progressive Principles—Brandeis Says La Follette Will Bring Humanity Into the Industrial World

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—The progressive Republicans of Ohio met here, formed a permanent organization and adopted a declaration of progressive principes, but voted by 52 to 32 not to indorse Senator La Follette as a candidate for the presidential nomination.

The delegates voted by 81 to 11, however, for a resolution expressing their personal view that La Follette is "the living embodiment of the principles of the progressive movement and the logical candidate to carry them to a successful fruition."

The vote followed a three-hour debate on the floor of the convention and was on the adoption of an amendment to the report by the resolutions committee, which had been unanimously in favor of not naming a candidate.

Gifford Pinchot, who said that he spoke only for himself and in no way for Mr. Roosevelt, and former Secretary of the Interior Garfield, were the leaders in the debate against indorsing any candidate.

Senator Works of California and Senator Clapp of Minnesota were equally vigorous in urging that the Ohio progressives concentrate their efforts on the election of La Follette. Nearly every delegate expressed himself repeatedly during the debate.

The resolution which finally was adopted read:

"We are opposed to the renomination of President Taft. We hereby declare it to be the determined purpose of the Ohio Progressive Republican league to work in harmony and unison to nominate a progressive Republican for president, recognizing as fellow progressives all who hold the principles for which we stand, whether they be for the presidential nomination of Robert M. La Follette or Theodore Roosevelt or any other progressive Republican.

"We assert the essential unity of the progressive movement throughout the entire state and nation.

"We favor the election of delegates who will favor the nomination of a candidate who will fully represent the progressive principles."

L. D. Brandeis of Boston declared the present progressive fight is a battle for business freedom. He described the conditions in the steel industry revealed by recent industrial census, showing, he said, that a considerable percentage of the 90,000 employes of one concern worked habitually twelve hours a day.

"Aside from the question of humanity," asked Brandeis, "how can these men form a proper conception of American citizenship; how can they live up to the high ideals set as a standard of citizenship?

"The effort of progressive congressmen to lessen the power and wealth of the concerns responsible for these labor conditions was defeated last year by the veto of the bill reducing the tariff on wool and steel.

"From my study of Robert M. La Follette I believe that no man in public ife stands more for what is needed to bring humanity into our industrial world more than he."

Mr. Fackler, who presided at the conference as temporary chairman, was elected president of the permanent organization. C. E. Brotherton of Ashtabula was elected vice president and T. H. Brown of Columbia, secretary.

A declaration of principles unanimously adopted was substantially the one prepared by a committee appointed at a meeting of progressives in the western reserve. On the question of national policies, it follows the lines of the platform adopted by the progressive conference in Chicago.

TO SAVE RICHESON'S LIFE

Plan of Defense Being Laid Out by Clergyman's Attorneys

Boston, Jan. 2.—Two prominent attorneys, one a Bostonian, the other a Virginian, held a conference which lasted from 2:30 yesterday afternoon until midnight and laid the foundation for the defensive structure which has for its object the saving of Clarence V. T. Richeson from the electric chair.

They were W. A. Morse and John L. Lee. Whether that fight for life shall be a plea of insanity, an alibi which will show that he had not the opportunity to give to Avis Linnell, the New England Conservatory singer, the cyanide of potassium which caused her death at the Y. W. C. A. on Oct. 14, or an endeavor to prove that the young woman purchased and took the poison with suicidal intent, the attorneys decline to divulge.

SEVENTY-FIVE NOW DEAD

Wood Alcohol Whiskey May Have Caused Berlin Fatalities

Berlin, Jan. 2.—There are several new cases of poisoning among the homeless men who nightly seek the shelter of the municipal lodging house and the deaths have reached a total of seventy-five.

A wholesale liquor dealer, who disposes of his wares to saloons in the vicinity of the lodging house, was arrested, charged with selling whiskey containing two-thirds wood alcohol, of which the victims are believed to have partaken. Several carboys of wood alcohol, it is alleged, have been found in his cellar.

The actual cause of the deaths, however, has not yet been announced by the bacteriologists and chemists who have been engaged in the investigation.

ATWOOD'S AIRSHIP SINKS IN LYNN BAY

Aviator Had Just Started on a Trip to Maine City

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 2.—Just after he started from the Point of Pines on his journey by hydro-aeroplane to Portland, Me., Harry N. Atwood met with an accident. He was rescued from his aircraft by men who put off from shore in a boat.

Atwood started from the beach in a northeasterly direction, skimming over the surface of the water of Lynn bay. When he was about 300 yards from shore the machine appeared to collapse and settle down upon the water.

The explanation of the accident was that when Atwood attempted to bring the machine into the wind, some water struck the magneto and stopped the engine. The aviator then tried to turn his machine in another direction, to maintain equilibrium, but the rudder dipped into the water and the machine began to sink. Atwood climbed up on the planes and waved his cap as a signal for assistance, whereupon two boats were sent out to get him.

BETTER OFF IN PRISON

Robber Cannot Keep Out of Trouble When He Is Free

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 2.—In a statement made to the White Plains police, George Welcome, 22 years old, a burglar, made a rather startlining confession of his career of crime, saying that when he was in prison he was all right, but when he was once given his liberty he was all wrong.

Welcome was arrested with Clarence Lloyd, 17 years old, after they broke into Samuel Ellis' clothing store with the purpose of robbery. They were taken before they had an opportunity to steal anything.

CANNOT SAVE THISTLEROY

Captain and Crew of British Freighter Forced to Abandon Her

Beaufort, N. C., Jan. 2.—Efforts to save the British steamer Thistleroy, aground on Lookout shoals, have been unsuccessful, and the vessel will be a total loss.

After a hard battle with a heavy sea, twelve members of the crew were picked up from a disabled motor life-saving boat.

When it became apparent the ship would have to be abandoned the master's wife and the remainder of the crew were taken off.

Won't Accept Favor From Railroad

Providence, Jan. 2.—James P. Reed, the first Socialist ever elected to the Rhode Island legislaure, who was sworn in as a member of the house today, declined to accept a pass sent him by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. Declaring that if it was intended to influence him to favor the corporation he "resented the imputation."

Lives Lost In New York Fire

New York, Jan. 2.—Two lives were lost and $100,000 damage was done in a fire which destroyed a big milk depot on East Twenty-Second street, The two victims were Italians.

HIS FIRST DAY IN OFFICE

Mayor Stone Plans Publicity Bureau for Reporters

GETS DOWN TO WORK

Mayor Stone was in his office at City Hall this morning bright and early and immediately got down to business. One of his first acts was to write a letter to the heads of all the departments asking them to forward their annual reports as soon as possible.

During the morning he received the newspaper men who cover City Hall and to them he imparted the information that he wanted them to understand that they were at liberty to ask any questions of the departments they desired. That his office would always be open to them and that he would do all in his power to see that they got all the news there was.

He also informed them that he intended each afternoon to have his clerk make out a manifold sheet giving the business of public interest transacted through the Mayor's office luring that day and that this manifold sheet would be at the disposal of the reporters to take from it what they desired.

This is something that will be appreciated by the reporters as it frequently happens that at the time they call the Mayor is closeted with some party on business, and would not be able to see them at that time. The manifold book however will be in the possession of his clerk Miss Lyons who is always accessable.

Mayor Stone said that for the present he would be in his office every morning until 10 o'clock, and again in the office in the afternoon, and that he was ready for consultation by the citizens at all times.

FAREWELL RECEPTION.

Over 400 parishioners honored Rev. Morris H. Turk, D. D., and wife Saturday evening at a farewell reception tendered by members of the First Congregational Society, of Natick, of which he has been pastor for the past six years.

Following a reception in which Dr. Turk and Mrs. Turk, assisted by Mrs. Henry C. Mulligan, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's clubs, and Dea. William R. Bigelow, received, the departing pastor was was presented a purse of $1000 in gold by Dea. Bigelow in behalf of the First Congregational parish, and Mrs. Turk was presented with a large bouquet of American Beauty roses tied with a red silk ribbon into which were sewed numerous gold pieces, gifts of the Women's Union.

Dr. and Mrs. Turk will leave for Turkey about the middle of January. They have many friends in Quincy, who unite with the Natick people in wishing them a safe and pleasant journey.

—Thirteen public school buildings are soon to be opened in Chicago as evening social centers for adults and children. In the last year eight to ten such centers have been in existence and they have proved popular. The plan now is to broaden the work, so as to make the school buildings more attractive to the adult element of the city's population and to meet the demand of the growing sentiment in favor of the use of these buildings outside the few hours in which they are needed for purely educational purposes.— "Chicago Record-Herald."

GRAND BANQUET

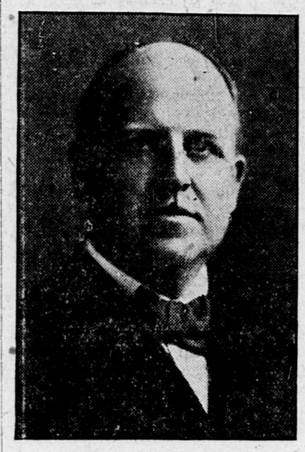
lic man must have to have that sense of having done the best that he could while in office. There is a solid satisfaction as he lays his head down on the pillow to say I have done the best I could.

We in West Quincy have got to do something to keep up our end of the city. West Quincy must have something going on. We must have a vision to look ahead to or we will get left The only thing is to get that pull-together spirit and help one another. Life is too short to stand for petty differences. We should do those things for the common good. He was glad to add his work of appreciation for what the Mayor had done.



JOSEPH L. WHITON.

MAYOR STONE.

In introducing the next speaker the toast master said he wished to extend to him the congratulations of the people of West Quincy. He felt that Quincy was in good hands and that we can expect good results. It gave him great pleasure to introduce Mayor Stone.

As the Mayor arose to speak the banqueters stood up and cheered him to the echo. Someone said three cheers and they were given with a will which spoke volumes for the kindly feeling there is for the new executive in this ward.

Mayor Stone said that it was always a pleasure for him to come to St. Mary's hall and to meet the people of West Quincy. It was also a very great pleasure for him to come here and say a few words for ex-Mayor Shea. The speaker said that he realized that if Mayor Shea had decided to run again this year he would not now be speaking as Mayor. In all the years that your honored guest had been Mayor he could not see anything he had done that was not all right. He recalled three years ago when he had met defeat at his hands that they would, after a night of campaigning meet at the Granite City club and talk about the campaign over a cup of coffee. It was his pleasure on that occasion when he had met defeat to be the first to enter City Hall and extend his hand in congratulation and tell him as long as he was Mayor he would do all he could to help him. He has always been conscientious and if he has made mistakes, they have not been mistakes of the heart. He felt that Mayor Shea had been one of the best Mayors the city had ever had. He only hoped that when he retired from office the people of West Quincy and all sections would have as good an opinion of him as they now did of ex-Mayor Shea. Republicans as well as Democrats are satisfied that his administration has been a successful one.

REV. HENRY T. GRADY

Pastor of St. Mary's church said that this was an occasion that happens to but few after a span of years in public service, in a position where light falls so strongly. He was happy to add his quota of what has been bestowed upon him. He looked upon Mayor Shea as a real type of what a Catholic layman should be. Always active, never obtrusive. These qualities had always impressed him and written his name indelibly on his mind.

The speaker than told of the interest that he had taken in the affairs of the church and how he was never too busy to give of his valuable time to help along. Continuing he said now that his public work is done for the time being I say of him he is worthy of all that can be said and I extend to him my well wishes for a well earned reward. He hoped that many happy years will be his portion and that each year will bring renewed confidence for those for whom he has labored.

stated it had been said that it was a great pleasure to welcome home our old friend, not as Mayor but as plain Bill Shea. Four years ago he had promised to give the best that was in him. That he hoped he would never do anything that would reflect upon him. He has lived up to that. It has been said by those politically opposed to him, that he has made the best Mayor Quincy ever had. Now he has come home with credit to Ward Four and to himself and he deserves the highest honors that can be bestowed upon him.

JOSEPH L. WHITON.

Ex-Councilman Whiton was introduced to say a word. He said that it would be hard work to find words for him to express the feeling he had for the retiring Mayor. To him he would always be Mayor Shea.

The speaker then spoke of the campaigns when he was running for councilman as a Republican and was on the stump urging the election of a Democratic Mayor. Continuing he said there are some people you can not please, and some who will always find fault. He had not always agreed with the mayor but he had usually beat him out.

He would not be surprised if in a few years the people would want him back in City Hall. He is entitled to all the honor you can give him.

JAMES F. BURKE

Said it was a grand thing for the Copeland club, a club of young men, to do honor to our citizen and welcome him home. The speaker said that he was a very proud boy when the Mayor was first elected. He had much to do with the citizens of Quincy but the words he heard of him were words of praise. It was therefore fitting that the Copeland club, should honor him for who knows but what timber for future Mayors is here. To be the Mayor of a city like Quincy is a great honor. A public office is a public trust. From the time when Quincy became a city 24 years ago he is the only Mayor who when he has laid down his office has been popular with every class and creed. He has covered himself with an honor no one can take away from him. He must not stop here, he must go on and when he is called he will be equal to the occasion.

EX-MAYOR SHEA.

In introducing the guest of the evening as the last speaker the toast master out-did himself and as His Honor arose to respond the banqueters again stood and cheered him to the echo. As the cheers died down the orchestra began to play "Home, Home, Sweet, Sweet Home." And while the orchestra played and the party sang those familiar words the guest stood with a quiet winning smile upon his face.

When the applause and music had at last stopped he said:

"I say to you that I have been on a long trip and am mighty glad to get home. Glad to be here and glad to have the newspaper men present know that they do not think me as bad at home as they sometimes try to make me ot.

Four years ago I stated to the Temperance society that I was about to go to City hall, I told them I was going to give the best that was in me. That I would give them an honest administration and that they would have no cause to blush from any act of mine. Whatever success I may have had has been due to the exceptional heads of the departments. They have been faithful workers. I want to publicly thank the City Auditor and President of the Council. All of these things go to make a successful administration. The lot of Mayor is far from being an easy one. Everyone feels that he has a right to go to the Mayor with all his troubles and the Mayor has got to listen to them. Sometimes they are a little unreasonable. I gave freely of my time and such ability as was in me. The citizens of Quincy have been very kind and I feel very grateful for it I am fully satisfied and I have come back to West Quincy to be with you again and to work. I appreciate the kindly sentiment that has been exercised here tonight."

HIS HOBBY.

The Mayor said that he was a firm believer in non partisan in municipal affairs and he knew that the citizens of Quincy also felt so and he hoped to see the time come when it would be adopted in municipal affairs.

We have got some good mayoralty timber left in West Quincy and the time is coming, and very soon when James F. Burke is going to be your Mayor.

We are all proud of West Quincy but we are not going as fast as we should. We want to get together and get something started. Quincy is in a prosperous condition and we in West Quincy want to share it. In closing he said that he was grateful for the support of his friends and neighbors. He was coming back to West Quincy to renew acquaintances. He thanked all heartily.

AN INDICTMENT FOR PERJURY

Reported by Grand Jury Against Le Blanc Detective

TWO COUNTS AGAINST SMITH

Gives Himself Up, Is Arraigned and Held in $1500 Bail—Count Which Is Made Public Charges Him With Attempting to Get Witnesses to Falsely Testify Against Widow of Murdered Laundryman

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 2.—Lawrence F. Smith, otherwise known as "Larry" Smith, the detective who figured so prominently in the case of Hattie Le Blanc, in the interest of the defense in the Glover murder case, and who also figured in the Glover will case, gave himself up at the courthouse here on a secret indictment charging him on two counts with subordination of perjury and perjury and in connection with the case. The indictment was reported by the Middlesex grand jury last Friday, but not made public.

Smith was accompanied by M. M. Johnson and A. F. Brewer, who were counsel for Hattie Le Blanc at her trial. He was arraigned before Judge McLaughlin in the superior criminal court and held in $1000 in one count and $500 on the other. He furnished bail, Martin Lomasney and William F. Lowt giving surety for him.

It is charged in one of the two counts of the indictment, the other not yet having been made public, that Smith "did wilfully and corruptly attempt to incite and procure" certain persons to commit perjury. The persons mentioned are J. H. Gardner, Mary E. Saxon, E. L. Von Rahr and N. H. Strome.

It is charged that Smith requested Gardner to testify that Mrs. Glover, the widow of the murdered laundryman, had stated to him (Gardner) that she would kill Glover to get the laundry and the money away from him; that he told Gardner that it did not matter whether or not it was so, as long as it helped them (the defense) out of their difficulty.

It is charged that he told Mrs. Saxon to tell anything regarding the past life of Mrs. Glover, and that if she did she would not lose anything by it, saying, the indictment charges, "We will make it right."

Regarding Von Hahr, the indictment says Smith told him that if he could place any one anywhere near the laundry on the Saturday night of the murder, "He would see that he was well paid."

To Strome, it is alleged, Smith stated that if Strome could bring him any witnesses who would swear they saw Mrs. Glover near the laundry on that night, "I will guarantee you the best fee you ever got and I will pay it. I will give you $3000 if you can find two witnesses."

Further arrests in connection with the case are expected.

UNIFORMED COPS TO GO

Twenty-Two In White House Are to Resume Street Duty

Washington, Jan. 2.—All of the uniformed policemen on duty in the White House and the executive offices are to be removed tomorrow. The orders affect twenty-two policemen.

The change is said to be due to a protest by Representative Burleson of Texas, a member of the house committee on appropriations, who thought the policemen were needed on street duty.

President Taft at once called the matter to the attention of the district commissioners with the statement that so far as he was concerned the policemen could be removed from the White House at any time the local authorities saw fit.

MODERN FREE ANIMAL HOSPITAL AND OFFICE BUILDING

Memorial to Be Erected in Boston by Mass. S. P. C. A., to George Thorndike Angell---Pioneer Protector of Animals---85,000 Bands of Mercy Interested.

MEMORIAL BUILDING TO GEORGE T. ANGELL.
FOUNDER AND PRESIDENT FOR FORTY YEARS OF THE MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. FOUNDER OF THE AMERICAN HUMANE EDUCATION SOCIETY, AND THE BAND OF MERCY MOVEMENT IN AMERICA, NOW EMBRACING OVER 3,000 000 MEMBERS, ALSO FOUNDER OF "OUR DUMB ANIMALS," THE FIRST PAPER OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD AND JOINT-FOUNDER OF THE ILLINOIS, WISCONSIN, LOUISIANA, FLORIDA, MINNEAPOLIS, SARATOGA, BALTIMORE, HARTFORD, DETROIT, WASHINGTON. D. C., AND MANY OTHER HUMANE SOCIETIES.

A hospital for animals is soon to be erected in Boston by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals as a fitting memorial to the late George T. Angell, founder and for nearly half a century president of the Society. Already interest in the great humanitarain project is actively manifest not only throughout the state of Massachusetts, where Mr. Angell built up and directed one of the most efficient and energetic anti-cruelty organizations in the world, but wherever human hearts beat in sympathy with those principles which he so widely promulgated namely, "kindness, justice and mercy to every living creature."

DR. FRANCIS H. ROWLEY,
PRESIDENT MASS. S. P. C. A., PRESIDENT PARENT BAND OF MERCY, PRESIDENT AMERICAN HUMANE EDUCATION SOCIETY, WHO IS GIVING DIRECTION TO THESE GREAT ENTERPRISES AS MR. ANGELL'S SUCCESSOR.

Under the direction of President Francis H. Rowley of the Society a site has been purchased and plans for the building rapidly developed by Messrs. Putnam and Cox, architects, Boston.

The hospital is to be located near the intersection of Huntington and Longwood avenues upon a lot containing 24,000 square feet of land with a frontage of 160 and a depth of 150 feet. It is believed that this location will afford every advantage to the Society to carry on its multifarious interests all combined under one roof. The site chosen seems in many respects ideal. The Hospital will stand in the same beautiful section of the city with the Art Museum, the Grand Opera House, the splendid group of Harvard Medical School buildings, the new million dollar home of the Y. M. C. A., and the large number of noble hospitals either already finished or in the course of construction. In five years this will be the greatest hospital center on the face of the globe.

The plans as submitted by the architects are for a structure of brown standstone and brick to be serviceable as well as ornamental and in harmony with the architecture of the other splendid edifices in that neighborhood.

The ground floor will be entered by a broad driveway leading under a spacious Roman arch at the front of the building to an interior paved court 50 by 80 feet, with a large fountain in the centre. Around this enclosure there will be offices for the Society's large force of agents, medical and surgical wards, a contagious department, operating and clinical rooms tanbark space and ambulance garage.

Upon the second floor will be the general headquarters of both the Massachusetts S. P. C. A. and the American Humane Education Society with offices of the president, secretary and treasurer, and editorial rooms of Our Dumb Animals, the Societies' widely known monthly publication; also superintendent's apartments, library and consulting room storeroom for feed, laboratory and private wards for small animals.

The third or upper floor will contain directors' room, publishing and mailing departments, ample space for displaying, storing and shipping the humane books and other literature which the American Humane Education Society sends out to the four corners of the world. The larger portion of the flat roof adjoining this floor will be used as exercise yards for animal patients.

The best methods of sanitation and ventilation will be installed and when the structure shall have been completed no appliance, equipment o facility will be lacking to make it the foremost animal hospital in the world and a worthy memorial to the life and work of George T. Angell.

While the influence of the Society in the prevention of cruelty is felt throughout the length and breadth of Massachusetts by the presence in nearly every city and town of one or more representatives, the Society believes that the time is at hand when it must enter a larger field and there relieve the sufferings of animals that are caused so often by cruelty and misuse as well as by accident. With this purpose in view the Memorial Hospital will strive not to save old worn-out and worthless animals, for it believes that unless these deserving servants of man are provided for in their old age or decrepitude by their owners, it were better that they be humanely put to death. The aim rather of the institution will be to restore to normal health and usefulness those animals, whether owned by rich or poor, which sickness, accident or disease may temporarily disable. Hence the same care and treatment that are provided in hospitals for human beings will here be extended to those animals that possess a real value, either because of the money they represent, or the affection of their owners.

As yet the Society is not in possession of sufficient means to start actual building operations. It has however entered upon a campaign for raising the necessary funds and among its multitude of members, friends and the animal-loving public of Massachusetts and the nation it has every confidence that the required capital will be quickly forthcoming.

GEORGE THORNDIKE ANGELL,
WHOSE UNTIRING WORK FOR FIFTY YEARS SO GREATLY ADVANCED THE HUMANE MOVEMENT IN AMERICA.

President Rowley says in the December issue of Our Dumb Animals, "The hospital will not be built until we have raised the necessary funds to pay for it, or have them in prospect. We do not purpose to cripple our present work. We want to see it paid for and in part at least endowed. This will mean many large gifts and many small ones. Who will give us the first notable contribution to start our building fund? We have already toward the project a trifle over $40,000. We want $250,000 more. The name of every contributor, no matter what his gift, is to be perpetuated in some tangible form in the building. We expect many wards and stalls will be endowed in memory of animals that are affectionately remembered by their owners."

The life of George T. Angell was not limited in its influence to the city of Boston nor even to the state of Massachusetts. The scope of his activity was nation-wide. Humanity at large as well as all animal kind benefited by his far-reaching efforts. As the father of the Band of Mercy movement in America his influence will be felt more and more in the humane education of coming generations. Every state in the union should help build his memorial and it is a significant fact that in the $40,000 already contributed, twenty-nine states and ten different countries are represented.

Filibustering Steamer Hornet Brings $3300 at Auction Sale

New Orleans, Jan. 2.—The steamer Hornet of filibustering fame, formerly the palatial yacht Alicia and later an American gunboat, was sold at public auction by order of the United States circuit court, which adjudged the Hornet guilty of violating the neutrality laws during the Honduran revolution. The vessel was sold for $3300 to C. A. Barber of Franklin, La.

The Hornet was seized at Truxvillo, Honduras, by the American cruiser Tacoma, and when her owners failed to answer the complaint charging violation of the neutrality laws, in that the Hornet was used as a gunboat by the Honduran revolutionists under General Bonila, the court ordered the vessel confiscated and sold.

LARGEST ORGANIZED FAMILY IN COUNTRY

Tons Can Boast of a Membership Numbering 610

Chicago, Jan. 2.—The Ton family, with a membership of 610, the largest organized family in the United States, celebrated the New Year at Pythian temple in this city.

Cornelius Ton, family historian, read a letter from Theodore Roosevelt. It said: "I like to read of an American family with 610 living members which have been accumulated in little over half century. Good luck to you."

PERMISSION IS GRANTED

Freight Will Be Carried by Boston Elevated Railway Company

Boston, Jan. 2.—The board of railroad commissioners announce the granting of permission to the Boston Elevated Railway company to carry freight over its lines by means of electric cars, notwithstanding the refusal of the Boston city council to act favorably upon the petition at a hearing held recently.

It is the privilege of the commission to grant such requests from a public railroad, or railway, corporation, regardless of the contrary action of city or town governments.

The board finds public necessity and convenience require the granting of the petition.

UNCLE SAM IN PHILIPPINES

Must Watch Over Eastern Ward For Many Generations Yet

Washington, Jan. 2.—In a speech at the smoker of the Philippines club here, Brigadier General Edwards, chief of the bureau of insular affairs of the war department, predicted that the United States would not get out of the Philippine Islands "until our grandchildren are dead," and added that not until that time will the people of those islands be in a condition to take care of their own affairs.

He said that the United States should not desert "our ward in the east before it is out of swaddling clothes."

"THE MAN IN IRON"

Sandford Extends Compliments of Season to Press Representatives

Portland, Me., Jan. 2.—Subscribing himself as "the man in iron" and sending a line about his feelings after serving ten days of his ten years' sentence in the federal prison at Atlanta, Rev. Frank W. Sandford has written a local newspaper man, extending the compliments of the season to representatives of the press. The letter was as follows:

"Just a line to wish you the compliments of the season—righteousness, usefulness and prosperity to the representatives of the press in my native state through Him that loved us and give Himself for us.

"P. S.—It may interest you to know that I am full of faith and hope and courage and good cheer. The death of Christ was not in vain, I assure you."

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande puntatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selea calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

Sheldon clapped his hands, and the running house boy hurried away to bring back Adamu Adam and Noa Noah.

"Listen," Sheldon said to them, "this man and me we have one big fight today. Maybe he die. Maybe I die. If he die, all right. If I die you two look after Missie Lackalanna. You take rifles and you look after her day time and night time. If she want to talk with Mr. Tudor, all right. If she not want to talk, you make him keep away. Savvee?"

They grunted and nodded, and each picked a rifle. Tudor, cartridge belts for rifle and pistol strapped around him, rifle in hand, stood impatiently waiting.

"Come on, hurry up, we're burning daylight," he urged, as Sheldon searched after extra clips for his automatic pistol.

Together they passed down the steps and out of the compound to the beach, where they turned their backs to each other, and each proceeded toward his destination, their rifles in the hollows of their arms, Tudor walking toward the Berande and Sheldon toward the Balesuna.

CHAPTER XXII.

MODERN DUELING.

BARELY had Sheldon reached the Balesuna, when he heard the faint report of a distant rifle and knew it was the signal of Tudor, giving notice that he had reached the Berande, turned about, and was coming back. Sheldon fired his rifle into the air in answer, and in turn proceeded to advance. He moved as in a dream, absent mindedly keeping to the open beach. The thing was so preposterous that he had to struggle to realize it, and he reviewed in his mind the conversation with Tudor, trying to find some clew to the common sense of what he was dong. He did not want to kill Tudor. Because that man had blundered in his love making was no reason that he, Sheldon, should take his life. Then what was it all about? True, the fellow had insulted Joan by his subsequent remarks and been knocked down for it, but because he had knocked him down was no reason that he should now try to kill him.

In this fashion he covered a quarter of the distance between the two rivers, when it dawned upon him that Tudor was not on the beach at all. Of course not. He was advancing, according to the terms of the agreement, in the shelter of the cocoanut trees Sheldon promptly swerved to the left to seek similar shelter, when the faint crack of a rifle came to his ears, and almost immediately the bullet, striking the hard sand a hundred feet beyond him, ricochetted and whined onward in a second flight, convincing him that preposterous and unreal as it was, it was, nevertheless, a sober fact. It had been intended for him. Yet even then it was hard to believe.

Keeping now to the shelter of the trees, he went forward another quarter of a mile. If Tudor had advanced with equal speed they should have come together at that point, and Sheldon concluded that the other was circling. The difficulty was to locate him. The rows of trees, running at right angles, enabled him to see along only one narrow avenue at a time. His enemy might be coming along the next avenue or the next to right or left. He might be a hundred feet away or half a mile. Sheldon plodded on and decided that the old stereotyped duel was far simpler and easier than this protracted ride and seek affair. He, too, tried circling, in the hope of cutting the other's circle; but, without catching a glimpse of him, he finally emerged upon a fresh clearing where the young trees, waist high, afforded little shelter and less hiding. Just as he emerged, stepping out a pace, a rifle cracked to his right, and, though he did not hear the bullet in passing, the thud of it came to his ears when it struck a palm trunk farther on.

He sprang back into the protection of the larger trees. Twice he had exposed himself and been fired at, while he had failed to catch a single glimpse of his antagonist. A slow anger began to burn in him. It was decedly unpleasant, he decided, this being peppered at, and, nonsensical as it really was, it was none the less deadly serious. There was no avoiding the issue, no firing in the air and getting over with it, as in the old fashioned duel. This mutual man hunt must keep up until one got the other. And if one neglected a chance to get the other that increased the other's chance to get him. There could be no false sentiment about it. Tudor had been a cunning devil when he proposed this sort of duel, Sheldon concluded, as he began to work along cautiously in the direction of the last shot.

When he arrived at the spot Tudor was gone, and only his footprints remained, pointing out the course he had taken into the depths of the plantation. Once, ten minutes later, he caught a glimpse of Tudor, a hundred yards away, crossing the same avenue as himself, but going in the opposite direction. His rifle half leaped to his shoulder, but the other was gone. More in whim than in hope of result, grinning to himself as he did so, Sheldon raised his automatic pistol and in two seconds sent eight shots scattering through the trees in the direction in which Tudor had disappeared. Wishing he had a shotgun, Sheldon dropped to the ground behind a tree, slipped a fresh clip up the hollow butt of the pistol, threw a cartridge into the chamber, shoved the safety catch into place and reloaded the empty clip.

It was but a short time after that that Tudor tried the same trick on him, the bullets pattering about him like spiteful rain, thudding into the palm trunks or glancing off in whining ricochets. The last bullet of all, making a double ricochet from two different trees and losing most of its momentum, struck Sheldon a sharp blow on the forehead and dropped at his feet. He was partly stunned for the moment, but on investigation found no greater harm than a nasty lump that soon rose to the size of a pigeon's egg.

Tiring of the endless circling, Sheldon tried once more to advance directly on his foe, but the latter was too crafty, taking advantage of his boldness to fire a couple of shots at him and slipping away on some changed and continually changing course. For an hour they dodged and turned and twisted back and forth and around and hunted each other among the orderly palms. They caught fleeting glimpses of each other and chanced flying shots which were without result. On a grassy shelter behind a tree Sheldon came upon where Tudor had rested and smoked a cigarette. The pressed grass showed where he had sat. At one side lay the cigarette stump and the charred match which had lighted it. In front lay a scattering of bright metallic fragments. Sheldon recognized their significance. Tudor was notching his steel jacketed bullets or cutting them blunt, so that they would spread on striking—in short, he was making them into the vicious dumdum prohibited in modern warfare. Sheldon knew now what would happen to him if a bullet struck his body. It would leave a tiny hole where it entered, but the hole where it emerged would be the size of a saucer.

MUST UNSEAL M'NAMARA'S LIPS

Fredericks Calls Upon Gompers to Purge Labor

IN SYMPATHY WITH UNIONS

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 2.—District Attorney Fredericks, who, in marshalling the evidence in the McNamara case, acquired probably a more intimate knowledge of the operations of the dynamiters than is possessed by any other man in the United States, has issued a direct challenge to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to unseal the lips of J. J. McNamara.

"If Gompers does not know of the existence of this cancer in labor unionism," says Fredericks, "let him appeal to J. J. McNamara, in the way he best knows how, to unseal his lips and disclose the disease, in order that it may be rooted out for all time.

"A mere superficial public request from Gompers to McNamara in San Quentin prison means nothing. Gompers can open this man's lips. The result will determine whether the attempt was made in good faith."

Mr. Fredericks declares the seal of the dynamiters is hanging suspended over union labor, and the movement will be indelibly stamped with it unless union men seize the opportunity now presented to them to repudiate the dynamiters and their crimes in such a manner that the world will be convinced of their good faith.

He asserts with absolute conviction that a considerable additional number of leaders of organized labor are certain to be indicted, with irrefutable evidence, as the result of the inquiry now being conducted by the federal government. He appeals to organized labor, as a man who believes in such organization, that no attempt at concealment be made, and that the leaders who have put this stigma on labor unionism be repudiated in a manner that will restore public confidence.

"A question uppermost in the minds of thinking men," said Fredericks, "is 'What is union labor going to do about it?'

"The big world that is going to judge you men of the labor unions in the future is a human institution; do not be afraid to drag out the wrongs that have existed and to show the world you have banished them. That great world is going to applaud that courage if you have sufficient of it to clean your own house. But it is a wise old world; it can't be fooled very long."

The cases of the union labor leaders indicted Saturday on charges of having conspired to violate federal laws by the interstate transportation of explosives will probably extend over a considerable period.

"This will be a fight to a finish. I want all workingmen to know that," declared Attorney Harriman, counsel for Tveitmoe, Johannsen and Munsey, the indicted labor leaders. The statement was made when Harriman's attention was called to a declaration by federal officials that they expected the dynamite conspiracy case to end as did the trial of James B. McNamara. "There are no confessions to be made this time," said Harriman.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN BANANAS ARE SERVED.

SOME persons maintain that they cannot eat bananas because they find them hard to digest. If, after peeling, the outside of the banana is scraped with a sharp knife so that the stringy substance that sometimes remains is completely removed there is no reason why bananas need not be as easy to digest as any fruit.

Bananas are most often served sliced with sugar and cream. Some people eat them with salt.

Dessert Dainties.

Bananas In Gelatin.—Take the skin from six bananas, let them simmer with the grated rind of half a lemon for ten minutes, then pass through a sieve. Add half an ounce of gelatin which has been dissolved in a gill of milk with sufficient sugar to sweeten. When cold stir in gradually two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice and half a pint of cream that has been sweetened and flavored and whipped until fairly stiff. Whisk the mixture until it shows signs of setting, then pour into a mold which has been rinsed out in cold water. Decorate with glazed cherries.

Golden Pudding.—Slice four or five bananas and use to line a dish, alternating with split lady fingers. Make a custard of one pint of milk, yolks of three eggs and a tablespoonful of sifted flour. Flavor with vanilla. Pour the custard over the bananas in the dish. Make a meringue of the white of the egg. Place in cool oven to brown. Stand in a cold place for several hours.

A Good Cake.

Banana Lunch Cake.—Take one cupful each of sugar and flour, one-half cupful of sweet milk, three eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in two or three layers. Take this dressing: One pint of milk, one egg, one tablespoonful of cornstarch and flavor with vanilla. When cold spread on the sliced bananas which have been laid on the layers of cake.

Bananas and Rice.—Take three bananas, one cupful of rice, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and butter and three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a dash of nutmeg. After the rice has been washed put it on and boil for twenty minutes. Drain and sprinkle with salt. Butter a shallow baking dish and cover the bottom with the rice. Skin and scrape the bananas and divide them lengthwise. Lay on the rice. Sprinkle with sugar and serve with cream and sugar.

INAUGURATION DAY NOTES.

Among the many personal friends of Mayor Stone present at the inauguration ceremonies Monday, who occupied seats in the inclosure were Senator Barnes, Judge Avery, ex-Mayor John O. Hall, and Mayor Stone's partner and the office force of his Boston office, his venerable father, his son and several members of the School Committee. In the balcony Mrs. Stone was with a party of lady friends and occupied the front row of the balcony.

Quite a laugh was raised during the delivery of the inaugural address when the Mayor said "Houghs Neck" as the laugh grew louder His Honor said "I do not wonder that you laugh." It was the hit of the day.

Among the many beautiful flowers that adorned the president's desk at the inauguration was a large bouquet of roses tied with a bow of wide red ribbon upon which in gilt letters was the words "Quincy Board of Trade."

Mayor Shea left the hall immediately after the address and as he passed the reporters' table he said in a low voice "Good-bye Boys." The ex-Mayor was certainly a good man for the reporters. He showed no partiality, all being used alike. With them he was plain "Bill."

Mayor Stone held an impromptu reception after the adjournment of the City Council when many of those present at the ceremonies stepped forward to shake him by the hand, wish him a happy new year and a successful administration. Returning to his office on the first floor he found a number of ladies gathered there who also extended their best wishes for a successful year.

Practically all of the department officials were present and occupied the seats inside the rail alloted to city officials.

In the audience were many who doubtless hope that the mantle of some office will fall upon their shoulders by the first of February.

The first name on the Council roll call is that of George W. Abele and to him fell the duty at the roll call for the several Council officers of setting the ball rolling in the right direction. When it came to the City Messenger he was at loss for a minute, for the name of the veteran City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell had slipped from his memory. He quickly recovered himself however and saved the day.

BRIEFS

The warm sun today has melted the ice so that walking is getting bad.

James P. Dillon was appointed as chauffeur of the fire department Monday by Chief Williams. The appointment was made under the civil service rules.

The Jolly Eight club held a New Year's party at the home of Miss Bertha Wallace on Centre street Monday evening. A very pleasant evening was spent by all.

A solemn Requiem High Month's Mind Mass for Mrs. Hannah, mother of Rev. Patrick J. Scannell of St. John's church will be sung at St. John's church Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock.

The Pythian Whist club of Norfolk Downs, met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Hanscom 28 Freeman street, last week Friday evening. It was largely attended, and a very enjoyable evening. The honors were awarded to Mrs. Abbie E. Stockford, Mrs. Dora Hill and Harry H. Hill.

Rev. James Todd, D. D., of South Boston, formerly of Quincy, has announced the engagement of his daughter, Miss Margaret E. Todd, to Alexander McIntosh, of Chicago, Ill. The announcement was made at a small reception given by Mr. McIntosh's sister, Mrs. Charles W. Tolman, at her home in Cambridge, at which there were guests from Boston and surrounding cities, Chicago, Denver and elsewhere. The wedding is to take place in June, after which Mr. McIntosh and bride will reside in Chicago.

LEAGUE FACES DISRUPTION

As a Result of a Disagreement Over the Presidency

QUINCY CANDIDATE

In an effort to quell the disrupting controversy which threatened the meeting of the officials of the Greater Boston basket ball league, held last evening in the club rooms of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A., ex-Councilman William H. Flynn, manager of the Quincy A. A. quintet was offered as a compromise candidate for the presidency of the league in company with Dr. Burnett of the Cunningham gymnasium team. It is a question whether the league will continue to exist under the present conditions.

It seems that when the league was formed, Thomas J. Murphy, chairman of the N. E. A. A. U. basket ball committee, was chosen chairman of the league, with John J. Magee of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. secretary, on the stipulation that the management of the league would later be turned over to the officials selected by the managers of the various teams.

Nominations were placed in order last evening and Murphy was the winner. Secretary Magee, who was acting chairman, declared the election illegal, on the grounds that Murphy was not a manager. The same charge was preferred against Magee, and for a time it looked as if the league was to disband.

Manager Magee of the Cathedral team says he is through with the league, although he will play his team against Quincy A. A. in St. Marf's Hall net Thursday evening. It is generally thought that Dr. Burnett of the Cunningham Gymnasium will use his efforts to pacify matters and thus enable the league to complete the schedule.

LOOM FIXERS WANT INCREASE IN WAGES

May Affect Nineteen Thousand Operatives In Lowell

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 2.—All the loom fixers in the city, numbering 300, made an unexpected demand for a 10 percent increase in wages. The request was made first to the overseers, who referred it to the agents of the six cotton corporations here.

While the demand is made only by the loom fixers, it is equivalent to asking for an increase for 19,000 operatives, since it is understood that an increase cannot be given to them without applying it to all the help.

Absolutely no intimation had been given that the increase was to be asked for, but during the past two months labor leaders from Fall River have been frequently in the city and in the past two weeks the membership of the loom fixers' union is said to have been increased to about 80 percent of the number employed.

The agents of the mills have expressed a willingness to discuss the matter with a committee from the union, but it is learned from a credible source that the present condition of the cotton industry would positively not warrant the increase.

SCORNS ANESTHETIC

Woman Never Quivers as Twenty Stitches Are Taken In Her Scalp

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 2.—What was one of the greatest displays of courage ever witnessed by local surgeons was displayed when Mrs. William Bradley permitted Dr. Crittenden to take twenty stitches in her scalp without the aid of an anaesthetic and never once quivered when the sharp, long needle was drawn again and again through the skin.

Mrs. Bradley fell from the icy steps at her home. The wound was a long and ugly one, extending from ear to ear, but it was almost smilingly that Mrs. Bradley coolly sat and felt the surgeon sew up the gash.

STRIKE IN COTTON MILLS

Law Reducing Hours of Labor Caused Cut In Wages

Atlanta, Jan. 2.—As a result of the establishment yesterday of the sixty-hour per week law recently enacted by the legislature, about 150 weavers, loom fixers and other employes went on strike at the Exposition cotton mills here.

The men had previously been working sixty-six hours per week and objected to a cut in wages corresponding to the cut in hours.

It is said the mills will not be forced to close down by the strike.

Stubs Toe and Breaks Neck

Manchester, N. H., Jan. 2.—Jean B. Dugas, rising from the table after eating a hearty dinner, started to leave for his work in the Amoskeag mills. He stubbed his toe and fell headlong down the front stairs. His neck was broken and he died in a short time. Dugas was a widower. He leaves eight children.

TUFTS STUDENT A SUICIDE

Gas Kills Young Man Who Appeared to Be In Good Spirits

Medford, Mass., Jan. 2.—Albert D. Pecker, a Tufts college student from Marblehead, and a member of the junior class, was found dead in bed in 16 West Hall. The body was fully dressed, and the gas jet was fully turned on. Medical Examiner Durrell pronounced the case one of suicide.

No cause is known for Pecker's action. He lost his father just before the beginning of the college year, but had seemed in good spirits to students who worked with him during the past week in the chemistry laboratories. His mother and a grandfather are living.

Cent an Hour Raise

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—With the opening of the New Year the wages of the motormen and conductors of Philadelphia's street railway system were increased a cent an hour.

A Sixtus V. Salad.

When Pope Sixtus V. was an obscure monk he had a great friend in a certain lawyer who sank steadily into poverty while the monk rose to the papacy. The poor lawyer journeyed to Rome to seek aid from his old friend, the pope, but he fell sick and told his doctor to let the pope know of his sad state. "I will send him a salad," said Sixtus and duly dispatched a basket of lettuce to the invalid. When the lettuce was examined money was found in the hearts; hence the Italian proverb of a man in need of money, "He wants one of Sixtus V.'s salads."

The Cautious Tailor.

"Now, look here, Snipperton," pleaded Hackley, "why can't you be patient with his old bill of yours? I'm going to be married shortly to a girl who's worth her weight in gold."

"That's all right, Mr. Hackley," returned Snipperton, "but is she going to be worth my wait in gold? How much does she weigh?"—Judge.

ANOTHER GAME NECESSARY

Fore River Again Ties Howard and Bullough At Soccer

THREE MEN INJURED

(By Teri-Bus.)

The above teams met on the Eagles' ground on Saturday in the re-play of the third round of the American cup. Both clubs put forward the same teams that did battle for them last week at Pawtucket when a tie was played, the score being one goal each; but the tie was tied up tighter than ever and will have to be played off on neutral grounds. The ground was a little hard owing to recent frost, but not so hard as to interfere with good football, considering the great amount of enthusiasm in connection with this fixture the attendance was poor, but many ladies braved the cold, biting wind that blew across the field to cheer their favorites on to victory. History invariably records that those two strong rivals play a hard and close game against each other, but Saturday's game did not come into that category for during the first twenty-five minutes the Eagles played all round the visitors, and only the pure goal keeping of Healy saved the visitors from being scored against close on advertised time. Mr. Gregson of Worcester, who officiated as referee blew the whistle for the teams to line up. It was a splendid sight to witness the players standing ready for the sign to begin play, and a hurried glance over the men showed distinctly that the visitors were the heavier lot. The whistle blew, the Eagles kicked off with a strong sun beating down in their eyes. The forwards took the ball to the Healy goal, but Harrison ran too strong, and the ball went over the line. Smith tried to relieve, but Moran got the leather and sent on to Harrison who tried to head the ball through, but Healy was on his job and sent his hand to meet the ball sending it well, for the time being, out of danger zone Rennie sent in a low shot and being returned Harrison sent in a swift one, going over the ball by less than an inch. The kick out from goal found touch and McKay was promptly stopped by Campbell, who passed to McDonald to send the ball out of play. McKay had a fine run but with the ball at his toe Melville out-ran him and he sent it back again to Healy's goal. Donnelly did some fine work, and again the visitors' goal was clear. McDonald had a spirited run, passed across to centre, Harrison missed, and Smith of the visitors getting the ball took play close off mid-field. The first foul of the game happened twenty minutes from the start and was against the Eagles. This kick enabled the visitors to cross over the half-field line for the first time during the game. Rennie by clever work beat several of the visitors and in trying to get the ball away safe Brennan sent the ball over for a corner kick. The kick from the corner was a good one, the ball landing in front of the uprights, and the home forward tried again and again to net the ball, but Healy was not to be caught napping.

The shouts from spectators was great, the word "Goal" could be heard all over the field, they expected any minute to find some one lucky enough to beat the clever Healy. It was here that Donnelly and Healy did the smart thing in getting the ball away, and many spectators really thought a goal was scored, but the referee did not notice their play. The visitors came away in fine combination and play was transferred to the Eagles' goal chiefly through the efforts of Bennett and when they were really dangerous Waitte was given off side. The ball was cleverly sent down the field by Melville and Harrison beat Brennan and sent the ball across to Campbell. His effort was a mighty good one but the ball grazed the upright and went out. The game was stopped for a few minutes owing to a slight injury to one of the visiting forward, and after play resumed Moran missed a fine chance, but shortly after. Harrison sent a brilliant shot which beat the clever Healy and scored for the Eagles. The kick off was followed well up by the visitors, and Daly passed back to Brennan, but Sharples saved a good shot by Daly. Mr. Gregson again called Handling aside, and by the gesture of his hands he certainly gave the centre forward a severe lecture. A fine run by the visitors was only stopped by Boyd close to the line. Hendry sent the ball down the field, and Blackley sent it over. The corner kick was well taken but McDonald sent the ball out. Half-time—Fore River leading by 1 goal to nothing. The restart found the visitors at the Eagles' goal, but Boyd's long kick took play to the other end, and Campbell by a great piece of play had the ball in front of the visitors' goal, but Harrison was given off side. The play was going from goal to goal and Daly had a fine chance to score but the ball hit the post and went out. Boyd of the Eagles at this time got his knee badly wrenched but was able to stick until the finish of the game, although he suffered much pain and had to be carried to the physician's quarters at the close of the game. The visitors threw football to the wind, and started in to rough it, this comparatively upset the fine combination of the Eagles. The second period was only half gone when Rennie came into head-on collision with Bennett of the visitors. Rennie fell to the ground and was unable to rise. He was carried from the field with a bad gash in his forehead and Dr. Middleton was obliged to take three stitches to close the wound. Smith of the visitors was playing a dashing and a splendid game, and again and again he tried to break up the game of taking the man instead of the ball, but he was not supported in his efforts. In the last five minutes of play Carruthers, one of the best forwards, sprained his ankle and had to be carried off the field. Up to the time of these accidents the score stood one to nothing in favor of Fore River, and the visitors were quick to get busy when they saw a chance to score. It was only after supreme efforts of Smith, that McKay of the visitors got the ball, with five minutes of play to go, and at a time when the Eagles were playing eight men, and sent the leather into the net. It was a good, clean piece of play, and although the result was disappointing to the supporters of the home team they were unsparing in their applause for McKay's fine work. Even with three minutes to go the Eagles seemed determined to get another goal, but only the splendid saving ability of Healy saved the Howard and Bullough great combination from defeat.

It is said the next game between those teams, in an effort to settle this tie contest will be played at Fall River. The teams were as follows:

Fore River	Howard & Bullough
Sharples g	g Healy
Henry rb	lb Donnelly
Melville lb	rb Smith
Boyd rh	lh McDevitt
Campbell ch	ch Grennan
Elliott lh	rh Blakley
Carruthers rof	lof Daly
Rennie rif	lif McKay
Harrison cf	cf Handling
McDonald lif	rif Bennett
Moran lof	rof Waite

Score, Fore River 1, Howard & Bullough 1. Goals, Harrison, McKay. Referee, Gregson of Worcester. Linesmen, Lyons for Fore River. Love for Howard & Bullough. Time 45m halves.

"Charles M. Bryant, former mayor of Quincy and president of the Quincy City Council, has announced that he will retire from politics at the close of his present term of office in the council. I noticed, however, that at the banquet to Mayor Shea and the new and old members of the Quincy government, at the City Club Saturday night, Mr. Bryant, referring to Mayor-elect Stone,, said: "We will see if Gene makes good this term; and if he does not we will know what to do with him next year." — Insider, Boston Journal.

If the British Government should happen to ask you for a loan of that $150,000,000 she contemplates borrowing for her navy, don't hesitate to let her have it. It will be all right.

Annual Banquet of City Councils of '11 and '12

SOLONS ABOUT FESTIVE BOARD
CRYSTAL ROOM, PARKER HOUSE

"Get Together" and "Stay Together" Was the Slogan Of All the After-Dinner Speakers

Excellent Menu, Charming Music, Eloquent Addresses Comprised the Program for the Evening

"Get Together." That was the slogan of all the after-dinner speakers Tuesday evening at the annual banquet of the Solons of 1911 and 1912 The scene of the gathering was in the Crystal room at the Parker house Boston. All were imbued with a congenial spirit and the affair will go down in history as one of the best and most successful of its kind in which the officials of the City of Quincy has ever participated.

There were but two guests of the evening. Mayor Eugene R. Stone and ex-Mayor William T. Shea and the party fully lived up to the "get together" theme of the evening.

From 6 to 7 o'clock there was an informal reception in an adjoining room and promptly at the hour of 7 the party marched into the Crystal room for dinner. The dining table looked particularly attractive. Instead of a series of long narrow tables usual in most hotels there was one long wide table around which the party sat as one large family.

The march into the dining room was led by ex-Councilman Edward P. Histen the chairman of the committee of arrangements. Then came City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, Representative and ex-Councilman William J. Leslie, President Hobbs of the City Council of 1912, Mayor Eugene R. Stone, ex-Councilman John D. Smith, the toast-master, ex-Mayor William T. Shea, ex-Mayor and ex-Councilman Charles M. Bryant, president of the City Council of 1911, ex-Councilman James F. Burke of the School Committee and the balance of the party.

Others in the party included City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, City Auditor Henry O. Fairbanks, Clerk of Council George T Magee, Overseer of the Poor James H. Elcock, Dock and Water Front Commissioner Frank Fessenden Crane, City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray, Commissioner of Public Works, Randolph Bainbridge, Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams, Supt. Whitman of the Water bureau, Assessors Warren W. Adams and Wellington W. Mitchell, Sealer of Weights and Measures James M. Cantfill, Councilmen Abele, Bailey, Barker, Beeman, Carruthers, Devaney, Ericson, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Mahoney, Murray, Richards, C. A. Ross, J. R. S. Ross, Sandberg, Sodergren and Thompson of the Council or 1912, ex-Councilmen, Moir, Parlee, Bolster, Loud.

Then there were several citizens among whom were Frank Shay, Dennis Crowley, Charles H. Penniman, C. P. Gould, Mike Shea, D. J. S. McCurdy, Adolph Sandberg, Albert Ericson, Daniel Driscoll, Louis K. Badger, T. J. Collins, Walter H. Cobb and Alfred N. LaBrecque.

No banquet would be complete without music and for this occasion there was music of excellent quality which was furnished by George Monk, which is a sufficient guarantee of its quality.

The menu was an excellent one and the service, which adds so much to a good dinner, admirable.

The dinner over and cigars lighted the party settled back in their chairs to enjoy the speaking. Ex-Councilman John D. Smith was the toast master and as at the gathering in the fourth ward the night previous, he proved to be the right man in the right place. In opening he stated that he had some scores to wipe out and the first was directed at our genial City Solicitor. This was in the shape of some alleged correspondence with the legal department of the city, wherein the toastmaster asked that the duties of toastmaster be defined

Had he followed out the opinion as given there would have been a general mixup. However after this little pleasantry he introduced as the first speaker Representative and ex-Councilman William J. Leslie.

REPRESENTATIVE LESLIE

Said that it was pleasant to be present among a gathering of gentlemen who have made Quincy what she is today. During his service in the City Council he had his little troubles but he was now going to the hill and he intended to do what he could for the interest of the City of Quincy. It was pleasing to know that the toastmaster and others would be there to watch him but he did not intend to allow that to phase him.

CITY SOLICITOR McANARNEY

"What is the use of being City Solicitor, if you can not lay down the law." He said he desired to thank the council of 1911 for the courtesy shown him. To the council of 1912 he wanted to say that whoever the City Solicitor might be his duty is as sacred as yours. At times he will be called to rule upon matters where the dictates of his own mind would wish him to rule one way but the law compelled him to rule the opposite. As an instance he cited a ruling he was obliged to give the last meeting of the council of 1911. The ordinance on which he ruled was one which he doubted as constitutional yet he had to rule in such a way that the ordinance was passed. To the Council of 1911 he desired to say in closing that it was the first Council in his seven years as City Solicitor in which he had not felt that there was a desire on the part of some to dodge his ruling.

JAMES F. BURKE

Was introduced as a representative of the School Committee. Mr. Burke said that he was very pleased to be present. As he looked about the board he saw two others besides himself who had served in the first City Council, ex-Mayor Shea and City Auditor Fairbanks. The relations of the school committee with the council, have been very pleasant, for the past four years, and the committee has got every dollar it asked for in the budget. In making up the budget me have to show the council where we need the money. This year we are turning back into the treasury a little money, $50., so that you see the committee keeps within its confines.

We as citizens of Quincy take a just pride in our schools. The education of his children is something that the taxpayers will not grumble about. The per capita cost in Quincy is lower than and other Metropolitan city. Quincy is a growing city. It is a natural growth and it is a healthy sign when you see school houses going up. One thing that the School Committee will thank the City Solicitor for is the preparation of plans for school buildings. For years there was constant friction between the council and committee over the preparation of plans. Then the City Solicitor ruled that it was the privilege of the Committee to prepare them. This has saved a lot of time of the council.

In closing he said he wanted to say success to Mayor Stone. We are citizens and should see to it that his administration is a success. As he has stated in his inaugural "Get Together" and stay together and we will accomplish much for the City of Quincy.

JOHN R. RICHARDS

Was introduced as one of those that the toastmaster wanted to get back at and he did it by calling upon him unawares. Councilman Richards was "Johnny on the spot" however and replying said that it was true, he had been taken unawares. He enjoyed coming and taking part in these affairs. He had tried to do what he thought right in the counril. He was going back against some little opposition but it would have not bothered him much if he had not been successful. He intended to work along the same lines as before, taking things on their merit, weighing them out carefully. That is the way every man should do for the City of Quincy. Quincy today is about at the parting of the ways. He believed the next five years would see more progress than has taken place for 25 years, along certain lines. It remains to be seen if we will see to it that Quincy is placed where she belongs. He believed that the council of 1912 stood ready to do what it could for the city.

MAYOR STONE.

As the Mayor had another engagement he was introduced at this point. As he arose to speak the orchestra played "See the Conquering Hero Come" and the party arose and gave him three cheers loud and long.

The Mayor said that he had not asked the City Solicitor what his duties were for tonight, so that he would have to use his own judgment. His thoughts went back to the time when he was a member of the council under Mayor Bryant. He remembered the gathering at the Essex house at that time. There we gathered about the table and talked things over and we were all benefited by it. There were many things that he could talk about but the Fire Department and Police Departments had given him considerable trouble. There were many at the inauguration that looked for the appointments but he believed that they should go to the council first and he should send them in next Monday.

There were some subjects in his inaugural on which he wished to lay great stress. One was on water front. As president of the Board of Trade he had made a study of this subject and he believed that the future of the city depended largely upon its development.

Today we are a residential city but in a few years we will be a business city. With the development of our water front and proper railroad connections Quincy will be the largest and wealthiest city in this commonwealth. Those that are familiar with our water front will believe this with me. I believe the City Council and business associations should get together on this matter.

Another thing was our parks and playgrounds. The same is true with these as with the water front. We hould educate to develop ourselves just as much as to send our children to school.

Today with little expenditure of money it will be possible to have playgrounds in every section of the city.

SECOND ANNUAL MEN'S BANQUET

Galahad Brotherhood Listen To Scholarly Address

THE PROGRAM

The parish house of Christ church was the scene of a most enjoyable function Tuesday evening, when the members of the Galahad Brotherhood of the church held forth in the second annual laymen's supper. Over one hundred men gathered round the festive board to partake of an appetizing feast, and incidentally to be treated to addresses of a most interesting and instructive sort.

The rendezvous for the observance had been very prettily decorated for the occasion, streamers of a varied nature, entwined with variegated colors, showing forth conspicuously overhead the tables. The affair started at seven and concluded shortly before ten o'clock. Henry P. Furnald was the caterer for the event, and furnished those present with the following menu:

Escalloped Oysters
Cold Ham
Potato Salad Chicken Salad
Assorted Cake
Rolls Coffee
Ice Cream Cigars

At the conclusion of the repast William Walker, the president of the Brotherhood arose and in a few well chosen words opened the speaking portion of the program. Mr. Walker outlined the work that had been accomplished during the past year and told of the benefits that had accrued to those who had attended the meetings from time to time. He said that the Brotherhood had been a fine asset in rounding out good speakers and had proved to be a sort of educational institution to all members. He told of the different subjects that had been discussed and of the knowledge that the members had derived from the same, at the same time laying special stress on the necessity of being able to cope with the leading subjects of the day. He praised those present for turning out in such large numbers and said that he felt sorry that the piano player who was scheduled to add a charm of lustre to the affair had been prevented from attending on account of illness. He went on to pay a high tribute to the man whom he was about to introduce and spoke in high terms of his poetic ability. Bringing his introductory remarks to a close he introduced the toastmaster of the evening, Merton A. Turner, as the "flower of the Brotherhood."

Mr. Turner easily proved himself

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

25,000 Cleveland people are boycotting eggs for three weeks.

As the political spell binders will soon be around, it seems very desirable to conserve the supply.

W. E. D. Stokes can now reflect that if he had gone to prayer meeting that night, he never would have got into that mess with the shooting show girls.

It is now intimated that Roosevelt may receive the support of Wall street for president. Next we shall learn that Anthony Comstock has carried Hell.

A congressman will walk up to the capitol and vote away $60,000,000 of other people's money in five minutes, but when his wife calls on him for sixty cents for a Christmas present, he will think it over for a week.

Mrs. Wiley argued for the parcels post on the ground that she has to drive three miles now to get a loaf of bread. Most of our women friends would rather walk three miles than put their hands into the bread-pan.

A Chicago woman has a scheme for having divorced women wear a ring on the little finger. It would be a shame if they failed to get into Smart Society merely because their qualifications were not generally known.

Gov. Carey of Wyoming says not two per cent of the male voters of his state would be willing to repeal the woman suffrage act. It is very evident who is head of the house in Wyoming, and also clear that discipline is well maintained.

MAYOR MILLER'S BILL.

Mayor Miller of Pittsfield, Mass., has proposed a legislative act to prohibit the transportation of voters to or from the polls and the hiring of watchers and agents at elections. It is his contention that about one half, and perhaps more than half, of the expenses of a political committee consists in sending for voters and the hiring of workers on election day, and as everybody concurs in the claim that the less money it costs to run an election the better, the reasonableness of this bill ought to appeal to the Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and all the rest.

It is a strictly non-partisan bill because it lessens the cost of elections for all parties with equal fairness, but the best part of it is, it stops a sheer waste of money. This bill will probably be classed as a political measure, but in reality it is an economic proposition as well. It should appeal to the pocket book as well as the civic integrity of the public.

MARRIAGE LICENSE LAW.

Some embarrassing situations are likely to arise on account of the new law regarding marriage licenses. It has been the custom of bashful bridegrooms to wait until the day of the wedding before securing the license which makes the ceremony legal. Beginning with the new year five days' notice of intention of marriage must be given to the city clerk before he can issue the license. The law says: "Persons who intend to be joined in marriage in this commonwealth shall, not less than five days before their marriage, cause notice of their intention to be entered in the office of the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which they respectively dwell."

In another section the law says: "If the clerk or registrar shall issue a marriage license before the expiration of five days he shall forfeit not more than $100."

There is one way out in case a situation arises which demands real relief. The judge of probate, or of a police district or municipal court, may, after hearing evidence, grant a certificate stating that in his opinion it is expedient that the intended marriage be solemnized without delay. On presentation of such a certificate the city clerk may issue a license immediately.

GOOD WORK BY POLICE AUTO

Rushes To Braintree on Humanitarian Ambulance Call

A QUICK RUN

The efficiency of the Quincy police department auto was demonstrated Tuesday evening shortly after six o'clock when through the courtesy of Chief Burrell it was rushed to the scene of a serious accident at South Braintree.

The auto is not supposed to respond to calls outside the city but the serious condition of Charles E. St. Lawrence, 15 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George St. Lawrence of 156 Pearl street, seemed urgent. His right arm was severed at the elbow by a swiftly moving belt at the Rice & Hutchins' shoe factory.

Young St. Lawrence, who is employed as a heel cutter, was placing a belt on a wheel in the sole leather room, when his right arm got caught in the swiftly moving belt, and almost instantly he was drawn to the top of the shafting, which was making 200 revolutions per minute. The space between the top of the ceiling and the shafting was only about 2 1-2 feet, and the young lad was whirled about in this narrow space about 12 times, his feet in the interim breaking several panes of glass, before he finally fell to the floor in an unconscious condition.

Dr. Henry L. Dearing was summoned and amputated the arm about two inches from the shoulder and on the arrival of the auto, the boy was removed to the Quincy Hospital, where it is thought he will recover. This morning he was reported as being comfortable.

LIVING HERE AND ABROAD.

The above-named subject has been discussed by the American Economic Association, at its meeting at Washington the past few days. The creation of an international commission was urged to study the increase of living costs as seen on both sides of the water.

The rising cost of living is no merely American subject. The Germans are worried about it. Their government recently studied the accounts books of 960 of their families. They found that the average family is spending $9.99 more than it earned in a year.

At the same time the increased cost of living seems to pinch much more sharply here than abroad. One can see that by looking at a magazine index. Our magazines are full of articles on the subject, but the European periodicals have treated the question but little, so that it must be less pressing.

One reason is no doubt that the English and other foreign peoples are getting many things very cheap through municipal ownership of a wide range of public services, and through co-operative stores and buying associations.

Of course, municipal ownership might or might not work well here. The fact that it has made comparatively little progress this side of the water is because the majority of our people have believed that it would not lower the cost of public services to the consumer.

Over in England, for instance, the average price for gas is 48 to 60 cents per 1,000 foot. In this country the average price of gas must be considerably over $1 a thousand feet. The average street car fare in England is 1.82 cents per ride, compared with our five cents, often six.

Thus we begin to see what our consumer has to pay for our graft and political corruption. Often the man who has kicked at graft has been denounced as a high-brow, a pharisee, a muck-raker. People have looked on complacently at stealing, if it only apparently came out of some one elese.

Had it not been for this widespread graft, we too might have made a success of municipal ownership like the English and the Germans. As things are, the voter has nothing to gain by taking the graft away from the business man, and giving it to the politician.

The police department will be great benefitted by the chief being under civil service and he wished that the fire department was the same.

He had certain positions to fill. With so many personal friends each having their preference of certain men it was hard to turn them down. The only thing to do is to select the men whom I think best fitted for the office and whom I believe best capable of filling the offices.

He believed that the question of taxes should be gone into. Today a man with a small home is taxed to the full value while he believed that there were others not taxed as much as they should be.

To the City Cohncil of 1912 he wanted to say that he wanted every member to feel at liberty to go into any office in City Hall and seek information and if it was refused, if they would come to him he would see that they got what was desired. I want you to have all the information you desire. We want to work together as a unit and if we do, a great deal of good can be done for Quincy.

CHARLES W. BAILEY.

Councilman Bailey said that he was glad to be present. He had heard a man say that in the council most anything would get by if said through the president. He had learned many things in his first year in the council and he had been a good loser. He was glad of the experience he had received. He had been advised it was a good thing in the council to keep your mouth open and eyes shut. But he now intended to keep one eye open all the time and his mouth open part of the time.

JOHN J. MAHONEY

Was introduced as one of the minority of the new council. He said that he stood alone. The only Democratic member present. He was about to take the place of the toastmaster. "My wish is that I can fill the part half as well as he has done. I have a strong sense of right and wrong. I want to assure the Republican members that if any order has merit I will support it. On the other hand if I bring in an order I hope for your support to help me. I assure the Mayor I shall call on the heads of departments for I believe in looking into things."

FRANK SHAY

Considered it a pleasure to be present among such a fine body of citizens. Men capable of filling the highest office in the estate with their training in the City Council. He had only been a resident of Quincy a short time but he had made strong friends. He was not after any office. He had seen many political battles in Boston but never saw a campaign so absolutely free from mud slinging, against the retiring administration as the recent campaign had been. He never expected to be a member of the City Council as long as his ward had such good material as it had now. You have got a good honest Mayor who means from the bottom of his heart to do right. "Get Together" should be a motto given every member of the council. Put yourself in his place and do unto others as you would others should do unto you.

CHARLES M. BRYANT

Was introduced as a man of sixteen years' experience in the City of Quincy. Mr. Bryant said that he was deeply grieved to hear it said there was a Democratic party in Quincy. Our ex-Mayor whom I have called "It" and who is now "Was it" calls it non-partisan.

When the Mayor says 'Get Together' you are doing just what I believed in doing. Getting the old and new members together like this gathering, is a good thing. We must realize that Quincy needs many things and that we have little money to carry them out with. It is you who will appropriate the money and the executive will spend it.

He had heard it said, in Wollaston, that as long as he was not coming back others would. He wondered why. This is the closing of a long service on my part and I appreciate the support that has been given me and I have done all that I could to benefit the city. The Mayor has made a frank statement to you and if you do not find out what you want it is your own fault. He was glad that he had had a hand for the past four years. He regretted for his part that ex-Mayor Shea would not serve another term. He is a man that has given freely of his time and I want to say the City of Quincy owes a great deal of gratitude to the honest service he has given the city.

RALPH W. HOBBS.

Was introduced with the admonition of the toastmaster to the new councilmen "to get on the right side of the president." It is about as much use to try to buck the presirent as to stem the tide.

President Hobbs said there were no friendships to make which he valued so highly as those made with the toast master. We did not always agree but after it was all over we still are good friends. He should try and treat all as fairly as he knew how. He wanted to thank the Council of 1912 for the honor they ha' given him in his election as president. As for advice to the incoming council he did not have any except to look into each matter and not care of the others agree with you or not, and you will feel better than if someone had told you how to vote. He wanted to assure the Councilman from Ward Four that if he did his duty as faithfully as City Clerk McGilvray did when he was in the council he would get the same treatment he will tell you he got from the Republicans. "I never took into consideration if a member was a Democrat or Republican, the only question was, did the order have merit. I propose to do my duty as I see it. He believed that we will work together with the administration and when the year is closed we will find some progress for the betterment of the city has been made. We have a great duty to perform. We have not much money to expend. He had always voted for every order that would benefit the city, but he wanted it understood that he would not vote for an order to borrow money for current expenses.

The last speaker of the evening was

who was introduced as another product of West Quincy. As the ex-Mayor arose to speak the orchestra played "For he's a jolly good fellow" and the party stood up and gave him three rousing cheers.

He said that when he woke up that morning and realized that he was free it was a great relief and he thought to himself of poor Stone down in City Hall, as he lighted his after-breakfast cigar. He had given four years to the office and he was well satisfied with the work of those years and he believed that the citizens were also. During this time over 20 miles of water mains had been laid, and 16 miles of sewer. Many miles of permanent sidewalks. Over 1000 tons of broken stone had been put on the streets the last year. The taking care of the streets was one of the hardest problems. It was difficult to carry out the necessary work with the small amount available. We have put out eight or nine thousand tons of stone through that little portable stone crusher, we have heard so much about. It is impossible to keep the streets in condition with the money available. There is no street that will last over three years. To the old City Council he could say that they had something to look back on with credit. The widening of Hancock street between Saville and Dimmock streets and the taking of land for the widening of Hancock street between Granite and School streets. This latter was taken from the money available under a special act of the legislature and did not come out of the debt limit. He said that he claimed a good deal of credit for bringing the water front question to the front and much of it was due to the man with a long name and the longest titled office in the city. He is a man known all over the country and had a great fund of information on water front matters and while he did not intend to make any request of the Mayor he hoped this man would be retained.

Another thing he wanted to mention was the fact that in the four years he had been in office re had planted over one thousand trees, and all without any special apropriation. He hoped the City Council would make an appropriation to carry on this work.

To the council he would say, you have elected Mayor Stone and it is the duty of every citizen to support him and he trusted that every citizen would give him their support for he needs it. The man who comes into the Mayor's office with a word of kindness is apreciated. There have been many kind things said about me, but whatever success I have had has been due to the heads of departments for their loyalty and conscientious work. To the City Council for its courteous treatment he extended, thanks to the City Auditor and the press for their many courtsies and "I also thank the citizens of Quincy."

As he concluded his remarks the orchestra played "Auld Lang Syne" in which all joined in singing. The toast master wished all a happy New Year and the banquet of 1912 was over.

FINE EDITION.

The New Year's edition of the Boston Herald was a fine example of good journalism. Special features appropriate to the New Year; a looking forward and backward; fine illustrations and much readable matter and news made the paper of special interest. The Herald, which a few years back somewhat lost its hold has regained its former prestige and more. It is booming ahead and is not only a credit to its editors and management but also the city which it represents.

Q.—Why is it that the Churches of the day are losing in membership in nearly all of the various denominations? Not one is increasing in membership in proportion to the natural increase of the race, and the decline in spiritual interest is alarming. It was stated in the public press recently that in the city of Boston alone there were forty-two church buildings that had been deserted by their congregations; and in a certain western conference fifty-five ministers had resigned their pastorates because they were without support from their congregatons. Is there an explanation for this sad condition of affairs? (R. B. M.)

Answer.—A well known clergyman of New York City declared in public utterance not long ago that "The spirit of the Lord was no longer in the Churches of the day; but instead thereof we find the spirit of the world—a worldly spirit." Perhaps this is the real reason for the decline in spiritual interest on the part of the people, and consequently, the decrease in church membership, and loss of influence. All must admit that there are many of our modern churches that have developed into what some one has been pleased to term "social clubs" where elaborate musical programs are rendered and popular lectures given on worldly themes. The people can find better entertainment at the real clubs, and at the theatres, music halls, etc., and therefore do not care to attend "church services" where there is no spiritual uplift from true Gospel sermons. See II Timothy iv, 2-4.

Q.—II Thessalonians ii, 11, 12, reads "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should beiieve a lie: that they all might be damned (condemned) who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness." Are we to understand that God is the author of the "strong delusions?" How does the Lord "send" these delusions? (Del.)

Answer.—The whole religious world is in a turmoil of confusion. The thousand and one different "isms," creeds, and theories; many of which are "the doctrines of demons" (I Timothy iv, 1) have produced the very conditions suggested in the text and as expressed in the Greek—"a frenzy of delusion." So powerfully deceptive are some of these errors and systems of error that, as the Lord declared, "if it were possible, the very elect would be deceived." (Matthew xxiv, 24.) God is not the Author of these delusions; but Satan and his emissaries, the demons, are the ones responsible for their formulation. However, the Lord, in His overruling providence, arranges that those who have not the love of the truth in their hearts to believe and appreciate the truth, shall come in contact with the errors. In this manner, the Lord "sends" the delusions to those who love the darkness rather than the light.

How You May Add More Room to Your Home

Is your house a little bit cramped—do you want extra room without additional rent?

With a Davenport Combination Sofa and Bed you can turn your sunniest sitting room at night into a cosy bed chamber. In this way you can save the cost of the furnishings of one room, and have more space without increasing your rent.

Our model "A" Davenport is of a simple mechanical construction. Unlike other folding beds you do not sleep on the upholstering but on a mattress resting on regular bed springs.

The seat and back is upholstered in a dark rich green silk-velvet. It has a stylish oval front that adds so much more distinctiveness to the surroundings. It cannot be detected from a real sofa.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

It was the Mothers' Congress;
The chair was at her best—
She'd told the rude reporters
The style in which she dressed;
The delegates were chatting
Of fancy goods and books,
Of powders and cosmetics,
Of chambermaids and cooks.

A speaker rose to tell them
"The Way to Raise a Child."
Her dress was a confection,
And with delight they smiled.
But suddenly an outcry
Made all of them turn pale—
From some secluded corner
There came a rasping wail.

The wail increased in volume
Until the hall was filled;
Despite some great endeavors
The cry would not be stilled.
Up rose the chair, all stately,
HER voice was firm and clear:
"Whoever owns that baby,
Please take it out of here!"

Mrs. William Ward Whitcher, chairman of the Legislative department of the Quincy Women's club and a large committee of assistants have planned an ideal evening for "Gentlemen's Night" at the clubhouse on January eighth. They have taken the old proverb:

"A welcoming word of cheer,
Something worth while to hear,
A bite and sup of the best,
Leave the rest to your guest,"

for their foundation scheme, and have worked it out with right good will. Although the Legislative Committee stands in the club calendar as responsible for this guest night, it is really intended to be a club affair this year and a number of departments are assisting. Under this ruling, cooperation promises to make "Gentlemen's Night" of 1912 a splendid success.

QUINCY YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

Members of the Young Women's club were very pleasantly entertained Saturday evening at the club house, the occasion being a Baby party. The girls in their childhood costumes, representing both boys and girls, produced a very unique picture.

A short programme was prepared by the committee, consisting of songs by a chorus; solo, "My Dolly" by Miss Edith M. Lovejoy and readings by Miss Mary L. Brown and Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy.

A grand march followed during which each one received a small gift. These caused great merriment. As a souvenir to carry home, each child was given a candy cane.

Dancing was enjoyed until ten o'clock. The committee in charge were: Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy, chairman; Miss Marjorie and Gretchen Young, Miss Mary Coyle, Miss Grace Lamb, Miss Anna Granahan, Miss Hazel Dewhurst, Miss Nellie Buckley, Miss Margaret Lennon, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Edith Lovejoy and Miss Dorothy Bean.

At the next meeting Mrs. A. J. George will speak on, "Why I am an Anti-Suffragist." All members are urged to be present.

QUINCY DAY NURSERY ASSO.

A committee of ladies furnished cake for the Christmas festivities at the Nursery on Saturday, Dec. 30.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

Trying to Raise $100,000.

The board of directors of the General Federation of Women's clubs will meet in St. Louis the second week in January. At this time the details of the programme for the biennial session to be held in San Francisco, California, June 25-July 5, 1912, will be given special attention. Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, of Austin, Tex., chairman of the endowment fund of the General Federation of Women's clubs, reports that at the board meeting in Memphis, Tenn., it was decided to designate a certain week as "Endowment Week," during which time special efforts will be made all over the United States to raise the $100,000 which the general federation must have if it is to hold its place as a national power. November was first suggested, but it now seems best to postpone the date until the third week in February. This change will give state presidents and state members of the field committee more opportunity to organize the work. Mrs. Elizabeth Denison, of South Framingham, General Federation secretary, states that Massachusetts is the second largest federation in the country, and an effort is being made to secure here a large amount for the endowment fund, an equivalent of fifty cents for each member being suggested.

The Quincy club is interested but the amount collected to date does not come anywhere near the $175 hoped for.

"When I leave you tonight," said Mr. Staylate, "I hope you—"

"Gracious! are you coming again tonight?" exclaimed Miss Patience Gonne. Then for the first time the proximity of the dawn dawned on him and he lit out.—Philadelphia Press.

GALAHAD BROTHERHOOD

equal to the occasion and launched forth with subtlety into a few remarks of a most interesting nature, intermingled with just enough jocosity to bring his arguments forcibly to bear. He too, dwelt on the opportunities afforded by the Brotherhood and expressed the hope that as many as possible would avail themselves of its membership. He predicted great things for the organization this coming year and adduced several instances where the results to date showed the Brotherhood to be in a fine condition. He then began to confine his remarks to the principal speaker of the evening and added that no further argument could attest to the ability of the man whom he was about to introduce. Other than that he was the preacher of the gospel in a church including over 1800 parishioners. He then took up the form adopted by a number of toastmasters and introduced amid ringing applause Rev. Wiliam Harmon Van Allen, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Advent, Boston, who delivered a very scholarly address on "International Peace and Arbitration."

Dr. Van Allen added to the merriment of the affair, in starting to speak by asserting that while his congregation did number 1800, there were that many, at least, if not more, who would be pleased to see him hanged for talking on the subject mentioned above. The speaker consumed over a half hour talking, but his entire speech was marked with advice of a forceful nature and logic of the most convincing order.

In starting out, Dr. Van Allen took his auditors back to the time of the Spanish American war. He told of the rapture and enthusiasm that coursed through his veins as he beheld scores of soldiers enrolled in the cause of Uncle Sam, marching to camp in preparation of battle, amid all the pomp and splendor that military manoevres could bestow. He pictured in glowing terms the pageantry of the occasion and added that any onlooker would have been deeply touched by the entrancing scene. The second side of the case was then considered.

He told of the home coming of those same men whom he had seen going to camp. He said that they had never engaged in conflict but were returning in a most deplorable physical condition. "They had not been called to battle, continued Dr. Van Allen, "only to camp. Yet in returning they appeared ghastly, yellow and fever smitten, entirely wrecked in body." Then it was that the speaker realized the situation most forcibly.

Dr. Van Allen then went on to explain the purpose of war, which, he asserted, was nothing more than, "the killing of men on another scale." "It has been decreed that all men are brothers and this mandate of the Almighty makes war of itself anti-christian." A resume of the direful effects of the Spanish American war was given and no pathetic terms were spared in bringing home the point.

"Military splendor has hypnotized the world," declared the speaker "and when this fact is realized thinking people will then begin to admit that nothing is gained by war and that all difficulties and controversies between nations can readily be settled by having recourse to a board of arbitration, comprised of the world's greatest men." Dr. Van Allen went into history at length and laid special attention on the trials of Napoleon Bonaparte. He outlined the many tactics that the great French general had adopted in an effort to satisfy his ambitions. He then told of the pleadings, the railiery and the adverse criticism cast upon the leader on return from France on one occasion, all of which had promoted the courageous Frenchman to say that "War was Hell."

His survey of the conditions among the different nations had convinced him of the folly of war and Dr. Van Allen added that it was then, above all times, that he longed to return to America, where the peace movement was rapidly progressing. Dr. Van Allen said that he himself was not prejudiced against war, because he could claim ancestry from a line of soldiers. He claimed that it was seldom necessary to fight and do so was inexpedient. He said that if a man went around the streets armed "to the teeth," in an effort to preserve quiet, that he would be termed crazy. Yet asserted the speaker, a nation is nothing more than a collection of individuals and therefore the same rules that govern the individual could be applied to the nation.

MONTH MIND MASS

A solemn high mass of requiem, in memory of the late Mrs. Hannah Scannell, mother of Rev. Fr. Patrick J. Scannell, curate at the Church of St. John the Baptist, was celebrated at 7 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Scannell died just a month ago. A number of relatives and friends of Fr. Scannell were present at the mass to pay tribute to her memory.

The pastor, Rev. John J. Coan, was the celebrant, assisted by Rev. John J. Casey as deacon, and Rev. Fr. Scannell as sub-deacon. Fr. Scannell was deeply appreciative of the respect paid to his mother and desired to record his abiding gratitude to all those who attended. Nothing could be more sad than the loss of a mother and he appreciated deeply the sympathy of those who mourned with him in his recent bereavement.

LIGHT ON DYNAMITE PLANS

Said to Have Been Shed by Confession of Labor Leader

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 3.—Five additional indictments against prominent western labor leaders are expected as a result of a sensational confession alleged to have been made to Burns detectives by Eugene A. Clancy, the San Francisco labor leader now under indictment.

The detectives say Clancy admitted that he had met J. B. McNamara by appointment in Seattle in August, 1910; that J. B. McNamara informed him that he would use the name of J. B. Bryce in the California jobs, and the J. M. McNamara had told him he had been sent to California to blow up "scab jobs."

Clancy's most sensational admission, the detectives assert, was that he discussed the dynamite plans with J. J. McNamara prior to the dynamiting of the Los Angeles newspaper plant.

CONTROL OF TRUSTS

Nagel Would Place It In the Hands of Federal Agency

Washington, Jan. 3.—"The mere breaking up of large combinations into a number of separate parts by no means meets the whole trust question," says Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor in his annual report transmitted to President Taft.

Secretary Nagel declares that the Sherman law has been proved to be an effective statute beyond all doubt, and that a degree of combination of capital is quite necessary, but he adds that the supreme court decisions in the Standard Oil and tobacco cases have demonstrated that the next step in the control of great industrial corporations will be the creation of a permanent federal agency.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE CRAIG

Many Friends Attend Funeral of Popular Young Man

OTHER FUNERALS

The funeral of George T. Craig, was held Tuesday afternoon from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Craig, and attended by a large gathering of friends. The Rev. James Matheson delivered a very affecting eulogy and a quartet from the Christian Endeavor society, consisting of Misses Minnie Miller, Helen Cumming, Messrs. Wendell Clark and William Heggie rendered several of the deceased's favorite hymns. The pallbearers were Messrs. Alexander Clark, Alfred Bishop, John Rashleigh, Chas. Ross, George Shirley and Wendell Clark.

Interment was at Mount Wollaston cemetery. The flowers were numerous and beautiful ,including: Pillow, "Our Son," Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Craig; standing wreath, "Our Brother," brothers and sisters; wreath roses, Mr. and Mrs. George Craig; spray carnations, Miss Grace Wilson; spray of narcissus, Mr. and Mrs. John H. WHIST PARTY.

Mrs. W. F. Harden entertained at whist Tuesday afternoon at her home on Hunt street. The afternoon was very enjoyably spent and if it is a sample of what the other meetings of the year will be the ladies have much to look forward to.

Mrs. Gardner of Dorchester won the first souvenir, Mrs. Paul Butler the second, and the consolation was awarded Mrs. Cecil Marble of East Squantum street.

Refreshments were very daintily served by Mrs. Harden, and they were of a very appetizing nature.

Up to this time the meeting had been one of joy and mirth, but sorrow was occasioned by the fact that one of the members, Mrs. Julia D. Rogers, was to leave Wednesday for Detroit, Michigan, where she will spend the winter. Accordingly, at the close of the party the hostess called Mrs. Rogers to the floor, and each member presented her with a daybreak carnation. On the stem of each flower was tied a card on which was written sentiments of love and wishes for every good fortune on her journey, and a pleasant visit. Each member read aloud the card upon presentation of her pink.

Mrs. Roger's cheerful countenance will be greatly missed at the remainder of the season's meetings.

ENJOY COASTING.

The snow came just in time for the children to get one day's enjoyment of sliding during their school vacation. Monday sleds were going in all directions, and not much time was lost. Tuesday, after school was over, the sliding was still good and in the evening several grown-ups were seen indulging in the pastime of their youth. They acknowledge that it affects their muscles somewhat differently from the way it did when they were boys and girls, but that doesn't count.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Quincy Choral society resumed regular rehearsals Tuesday evening after a holiday vacation. The singers came to their study with renewed interest and did fine work. Conductor McConathy is bringing out very effective shading in the choruses and predicts an artistic rendering of this popular composition.

The Golden Legend prologue is one of the most brilliant of compositions for chorus and solo. The dramatic call of Lucifer to the demons of the air to destroy the spirit of Christianity, represented by the bells in the tower, and the final triumph of the bells heard in a majestic chorus for men's voices, offer splendid opportunities for effective work. The chorus is singing with spirit and understanding and the soloists announced in the circular issued this week, Miss Bertha Kinzel, soprano; Miss Marguerite Harding, contralto; Arthur Hackett, tenor and Willard Flint, bass; makes it certain that all solo parts will be splendidly rendered. The orchestra will be somewhat larger than in other years, including the bells that help to make the prologue orchestration so wonderfully effective.

In spite of the fact that many music lovers prefer the older forms of composition, the Golden Legend is one of the few modern works that is sure to please the great majority.

RESIGNS BY REQUEST

Alaskan Land Office Official Was Not on the Job

Seattle, Jan. 3.—C. P. Mullen has resigned as receiver of the United States land office at Juneau, Alaska, as the result, it is said, of friction growing out of the Alaskan coal land cases.

Some time ago Mullen received a letter from the interior department intimating that his resignation would be acceptable. He asked for an explanation and was informed that the department was convinced that he had shown too little interest in the coal land cases.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

A leading dressmaker wondered why it was that women refused the blouse with the V-shaped line in front and the long, small sleeve that covered the wrist, and insisted upon the kimono blouse with the round neck and the short sleeve.

While this fact is discouraging to the buyers who brought from Paris the new thing in blouses, it is not amazing that women do not purchase them. Very few French fashions are accepted here at their installation in Paris. The Americans are apt to say that they are six months behind Europe, but the real truth is that they need not be behind at all if they would only take the word of the buyers when they return from Europe.

They are slow to make changes, and for this they are to be commended, but they should not put the blame of their backwardness on the dressmakers and the buyers. This case of the V-shaped, long-sleeved blouse is a good one as an example.

The first thing I noticed in Paris during dressmakers' week was that the separate waist had undergone a revolution. The comfortable kimono blouse, with its transparent shoulders and sleeves and its round neck, had given way to a blouse of satin or lace or chiffon that had sleeves, a high collar, a V-shaped opening from neck to waist, which was outlined with revers and filled in with transparent net or thin batiste and ornamented with a fine frill.

Not only did Paquin, Drecoll, Worth, and Beer show these blouses, but one found them at the shops, especially at the Bon Marche and the Galerie Lafayette, where the Americans go en masse to purchase waists. Along the Rue St. Honore, in the small shops that make a specialty in blouses, even the lingerie ones had straight lines from neck to wrist, long, small sleeves, and frills at the wrist.

True, handsome kimono blouses were seen, and many one-piece frocks and the kimono top, but the new note insistently struck was this blouse described above. This dressmaker told me that she brought back from Paris several of these innovations in waists, only to find them a dead loss. She has not been able to sell them to even her fashionable clientele.

One blouse for which she paid $45. made of taffeta done in eyelet and finished with a vest of tucked batiste and a frill of the same, she had to sell at less than half price to a woman who, even when she was buying it, jeered at it.

The shops told the same story. While they can still maintain a high price for kimono blouses, they can get almost nothing for the new ones. Whether women disregard it because they are incredulous of its being in style or whether they are so attached to the kimono that they do not intend to give it up is a problem that cannot be solved.

The fact is that we will wait until January or February before wearing them, and will scold buyers for not having brought back these waists in September. The buyers can only exonerate themselves by referring to the past, and even then the public will tell them that they did not emphasize the new blouse enough to gain approval for it.

Unless a woman is so attached to the kimono blouse that she does not intend to give it up, she should take up the new idea at once, and have the pleasure of saying that she knew what was what in the beginning. It is not necessary that she should discard chiffon cloth, although the French dressmakers are becoming tired of it. It is a lovely material and wears better than most people know.

If she prefers marquisette or satin they are easy to get in any color. Whenever she uses a transparent fabric she should use thin lace with a bold design underneath it. There is no objection to her using a pretty dash of color in the revers and at the edge of the wrists.

For instance, a smart elephant gray blouse is of chiffon cloth over Lieere lace, which in turn is laid over a thin canary colored silk. The revers are of canary colored taffeta, and there is a narrow piping of this at the wrist The chemisette is of ecru batiste, with three topaz buttons holding in place a three-inch frill of the fabric, edged with a band of yellow taffeta.

The sleeves in this blouse are gathered on three cords down the back from shoulder to wrist. They fasten tightly above the hand, then flare a little, and are finished with a plaited frill of the batiste.

Among the other new fashions that were introduced in Paris in August that did not take at all in America and only now begins to lift its head above the horizon is the skirt with the apron tunic. This was brought out by several of the great tailors abroad, but the American women would not have it in September.

They preferred the plain skirt with one or two panels down the back and a fold below the knees; but suddenly the skirt with the long tunic at the back, brought across the figure on the bias to the front and lapped over to the left side, has started on a popular career.

It is not becoming to ever one, and for the tenth season the slim woman again has her innings. It needs flat hips to wear such a drapery more than it needs height, but the modern corset has so reduced the curve to a straight line that the majority of women are able to take up this skirt.

The tunic has no trimming at its edge unless the materials is of taffeta or satin, in which case it is finished off with fur or velvet. The former is exceptionally good looking on a thin velvet gown with a bodice also outlined with fur down its front and its long sleeves and held in at the wrist with fur.

A bronze chiffon gown over bronze satin has this over skirt gathered at the waist line and edged with smoked fox, above which is a narrow band of bronze galloon. Both the gold and the fox is repeated on a blouse which has a square, short tablier, back and front, of heavy gold lace. These hang below the waist for six inches and are headed by a Russian girdle of yellow crystals and bronze medallions.

On walking suits made of ratine, velour de laine, corduroy and zibeline this apron tunic has no trimming whatever. On a blue serge skirt made in this way there is a three-inch band of black silk braid, but the heavy materials that suggest the coldest Winter we have ever had would not be able to carry the weight of any trimming. The new touch on the velour de laine skirts is to overcast the raw edges with a buttonhole stitch, but this demands too much energy on the part of the average dressmaker and depletes the purse of the average buyer. It is a finish that is not worth the time and money it demands.

Despite the advent of the V-shaped blouse, with its long sleeves and the shortening at the waist line of the extension skirt, the new corsets are more Empire than ever. They have not relaxed their slim lines or their rigid straightness over the hips and abdomen, but they are amazingly large at the waist and quite low in the bust.

The woman of today who wears a fashionable corset must add brassieres if she is given to flesh, but the slim woman and the moderately rounded woman is delighted over the prospect of being able to wear the comfortable suit that puts no pressure upon the sensitive part of the body.

There is no stricture over the stomach, no prodding into the flesh under the arms, and no binding across the back and consequent lifting of the flesh to form a ridge across the shoulder blades. One can now be healthy, comfortable, and fashionable at the same time. The corsets are the best that have been invented. They give freedom of movement, and their disadvantage is that the dressmakers themselves will put them out of being before the Winter is over; for if the prophets speak truly we are coming back to a small waist, which means tight lacing and indigestion, to a restricted bust, to a tight armhole, and to an ugly and unhealthy silhouette.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

Never Risk Health and Clothes.

Mrs. Nextdornabor—"Good morning, Anty Drudge! Can you lend me a cake of Fels-Naptha soap? When I came to do the wash this morning, I found that I did not have any in the house. The grocer told me he was sold out. He offered to send me over some other kind, but I think too much of my clothes and of my health and hands to accept any substitute for Fels-Naptha."

Anty Drudge—"You are perfectly right, my dear. Never risk those 'just as good' soaps. Wait here a minute, and I will get you a cake of Fels-Naptha."

That was the hard way. Mother, herself, doesn't wash that way any more. She has found a better way, the Fels-Naptha way.

Instead of boiling the clothes and wearily rubbing them on the board, you place them in cool or lukewarm water, soap with Fels-Naptha, roll tightly and allow them to soak about half an hour; rub lightly, blue and then rinse.

Your hands don't crack and get red; your clothes are saved from the wear of boiling and hard rubbing; your family is not driven frantic with steaming, wash day smell and you save about half your time.

Not only this; but Fels-Naptha does the work better than it can be done by the old, boiling, hot water method.

Use any time of the year.

HOT WATER WHEN WANTED

In the middle of the night, if one of your dear family should be taken suddenly ill and hot water becomes necessary, what would you do? You couldn't make it on the stove in sufficient quantity. Why, get a Simplex Hot Water Heater. Instantly, at any hour, day or night, you secure an unlimited supply of steaming hot water. Gas does it. Turn on the cock, apply a match and there you are. Ask us about it.

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 250 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

He resigned to give up the pursuit and lay down in the grass, protected right and left by the row of palms, while, on either hand, the long avenue extending. This he could watch. Tudor would have to come to him or else there would be no termination of the affair. He wiped the sweat from his face and tied the handkerchief around his neck to keep off the stinging gnats that lurked in the grass. Never had he felt so great a disgust for the thing called "adventure." Joan had been bad enough with her Baden-Powell and long barreled Colt's, but here was this newcomer, also looking for adventure and finding it in no other way than by lugging a peace loving planter into an absurd and preposterous bushwhacking duel. If ever adventure was well damned it was by Sheldon, sweating in the windless grass and fighting gnats, the while he kept close watch up and down the avenue.

Then Tudor came. Sheldon happened to be looking in his direction at the moment he came into view, peering quickly up and down the avenue before he stepped into the open. Midway he stopped, as if debating what course to pursue. He made a splendid mark, facing his concealed enemy at 200 yards distance. Sheldon aimed at the center of his chest, then deliberately shifted the aim to his right shoulder, and, with the thought, "That will put him out of business," pulled the trigger. The bullet, driving with momentum sufficient to perforate a man's body a mile distant, struck Tudor with such force as to pivot him, whirling him half around by the shock of its impact and knocking him down.

"Hope I haven't killed the beggar," Sheldon muttered aloud, springing to his feet and running forward.

A hundred feet away all anxiety on that score was relieved by Tudor, who made shift with his left hand and from his automatic pistol buried a rain of bullets all around Sheldon. The latter dodged behind a palm trunk, counting the shots, and when the eighth had been fired he rushed in on the wounded man. He kicked the pistol out of the other's hand and then sat down on him in order to keep him down.

"Be quiet," he said. "I've got you, so there's no use struggling."

Tudor still attempted to struggle and to throw him off.

"Keep quiet, I tell you," Sheldon commanded. "I'm satisfied with the outcome, and you've got to be. So you might as well give in and call this affair closed."

Tudor reluctantly relaxed.

"Rather funny, isn't it, these modern duels?" Sheldon grinned down at him as he removed his weight. "Not a bit dignified. If you'd struggled a moment longer I'd have rubbed your face in the earth. I've a good mind to do it anyway, just to teach you that dueling has gone out of fashion. Now, let us see to your injuries."

"You only got me that last," Tudor grunted sullenly, "lying in ambush like"—

"Like a wild Indian. Precisely. You've caught the idea, old man," Sheldon ceased his mocking and stood up. "You lie there quietly until I send back some of the boys to carry you in. You're not seriously hurt, and it's lucky for you I didn't follow your example. If you had been struck with one of your own bullets a carriage and pair would have been none too large to drive through the hole it would have made. As it is you're drilled clean—a nice little perforation. All you need is antiseptic washing and dressing and you'll be around in a month. Now, take it easy, and I'll send a stretcher for you."

CHAPTER XXIII.

CAPITULATION.

WHEN Sheldon emerged from among the trees he found Joan waiting at the compound gate, and he could not fail to see that she was visibly gladdened at the sight of him.

"I can't tell you how glad I am to see you," was her greeting. "What's become of Tudor? That last flutter of the automatic wasn't nice to listen to. Was it you or Tudor?"

"So you know all about it," he answered coolly. "Well, it was Tudor, but he was doing it left handed. He's down with a hole in his shoulder." He looked at her keenly. "Disappointing, isn't it?" he drawled.

"How do you mean?"

"Why, that I didn't kill him."

"But I didn't want him killed just because he kissed me," she cried.

"Oh, he did kiss you," Sheldon retorted in evident surprise. "I thought you said he hurt your arm."

"One could call it a kiss, though it was only on the end of the nose." She laughed at the recollection. "But I paid him back for that myself. I boxed his face for him. And he did hurt my arm. It's black and blue. Look at it."

She pulled up the loose sleeve of her blouse, and he saw the bruised imprints of two fingers.

Just then a gang of blacks came out from among the trees, carrying the wounded man on a rough stretcher.

"Romantic, isn't it?" Sheldon sneered, following Joan's startled gaze. "And now I'll have to play surgeon and doctor him up. Funny, this twentieth century dueling. First you drill a hole in a man, and next you set about plugging the hole up."

They had stepped aside to let the stretcher pass, and Tudor, who had heard the remark, lifted himself up on the elbow of his sound arm and said with a defiant grin:

"It was according to agreement," Tudor answered. "Everything went. We could have used dynamite if we wanted to."

SENATOR TAYLOR

Statesman Has Sworn Off Playing the Fiddle

ABANDONS HIS FIDDLE

Taylor Will No Longer Charm His Friends With Sweet Strains

Washington, Jan. 3.—Senator Robert L. Taylor of Tennessee, known as "Fiddling Bob," has abandoned his fiddle. This disappointing news was given circulation by Senator Bradley of Kentucky, who is himself a performer on the guitar.

Senator Bradley had a talk with Taylor about music. Each senator agreed that next to the instrument he played the one upon with the other performed was the finest in the world for sweet sounds, but then it was learned that "Bob" had sworn off.

SHERIFF SEAVEY DIES IN BOSTON PRISON

End Perhaps Hastened by Worry Over Richeson

Boston, Jan. 3.—Sheriff Fred H. Seavey died at the Charles street jail yesterday afternoon. He had been suffering for several weeks with three carbuncles on his neck.

About ten days before Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson committed his act of self-mutilation Seavey's troubles became more acute, and the worry over Richeson's deed aggravated it still more. It is thought that blood poisoning was the immediate cause of his death.

Fred H. Seavey was born in Boston in 1854. In 1874 he entered the sheriff's office as a clerk and ten years later he was made a deputy sheriff.

In 1893, when the new office of special sheriff was created by law, he was appointed to that office.

PORTUS HANCOCK DEAD

Wish to Be a Legislator Until He Died Is Gratified

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 3.—Representative Portus B. Hancock, who was the oldest man in point of years in the house of representatives, died at his home here at the age of 77 years.

Hancock was one of the most familiar figures in local politics and was for twelve years elected representative from the Tenth double district. He often stated that he wanted to go to the legislature until he died, and his wish was gratified.

Mr. Hancock, although a Democrat, was elected in a strong Republican district. He was to have taken the oath of office today.

POTHIER INAUGURATED

Becomes Governor of Rhode Island For the Fourth Time

Providence, Jan. 3.—Aram J. Pothier took the oath of office in the house chamber at the state capitol for the fourth consecutive time. Other state officials that took the oaths of office were Lieutenant Governor Bliss, Secretary of State Parker, General Treasurer Reed and Attorney General Rice.

Governor Pothier in his message dealt chiefly with two questions, one about decreased revenue for the state and the other concerning the abolishment of the property qualification for voters.

Quits Stage For Domestic Life

New York, Jan. 3.—Miss Dorothy Marlowe, an actress, has given up the stage to darn socks. Miss Marlowe was married to W. H. Bixter at the "Little Church Around the Corner." "I wanted to start the New Year right," she said.

Underwood Returns to Work

Washington, Jan. 3.—Representative Underwood, chairman of the ways and means committee, who has been ill for several days, has returned to his office, fully recovered from his attack of acute indigestion.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SERVING RAW CABBAGE.

WE are told cabbage served raw aids digestion. There has been an impression that the savory cabbage because it consists of 77 per cent water had no use in the digestive scheme. Cabbage, besides this tonic effect, also supplies a certain amount of heat to the system.

Cabbage Salads.

Recipes for salads are many. These few are submitted as being most practical:

Salad Crisp.—Cut a fresh young cabbage fine on a cutter or with a sharp knife. Season it well with vinegar, salt, black pepper and a bit of sugar. When moistened with the vinegar toss lightly with cream which has been whipped to a froth. Garnish with dice of pickled beets and serve on a lettuce leaf.

Mixed Salad.—Take chopped cabbage, celery and firm boiled potatoes and combine. The dressing is made thus: To half a teacupful of vinegar add a quarter of a teaspoonful each of salt and pepper and a small piece of butter. Beat one egg with two tablespoonfuls of sour cream or milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a saltspoonful of mustard. Heat the vinegar, add the other ingredients and stir constantly as it thickens. Place the vegetables on a salad dish on leaves of fresh tender cabbage and pour the dressing over it.

Cabbage and Egg Salad.—Cut fine half a medium sized head of cabbage that has been left in water until it is crisp and drain. Salt and pepper. Add a dressing of the beaten yolks of two eggs whipped with two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two tablespoonfuls of thick sour cream, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a sprinkle of mustard and half a cupful of vinegar. Garnish with slices of hard boiled eggs.

How to Make Slaw.

Coldslaw.—This dish is so universally popular that the following well recommended recipe is given: Take a small crisp head of cabbage, cut it fine and let it lay in cold water for about an hour; then drain in a collander and add the dressing. For the latter combine one egg, a cupful of sweet milk, a teaspoonful of melted butter, half a teaspoonful each of dry mustard and salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a dash of pepper.

Zoroid Kryptoks--

ZOROID LENSES FOUNDED 1883

Zoroid Kryptoks, fashioned from a single crystal, embrace every advantage but eliminate the disadvantages of the old-style pasted bifocals. No line of jointure obscures clear vision—no unsightly seam disfigures your appearance. If you need bifocals you are obliged to wear glasses at all times. Why should you not (by the use of Zoroid Kryptoks) at once, improve your vision and your appearance.

RECEPTION TO NEW SECRETARY

Sec. and Mrs. A. F. Bromley Given Reception at Y. M. C. A.

THE COMMITTEES

The assembly hall of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. building was taxed by a large number last evening on the occasion of a welcoming reception tendered to Mr. and Mrs. A. Fitch Bromley, the former being secretary of the association. The affair was arranged under the direction of the Ladies' Auxiliary and the Board of Directors of the Association and a most enjoyable function was in order from eight until ten o'clock.

The guests of the evening were assisted in receiving by Richard D. Chase, president of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cummings, the former being treasurer of the Association and Mrs. E. I. Beal, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary. The music for the occasion was furnished by an orchestra of five pieces of the Wollaston Military band and a charming repertoire added great lustre to the enjoyment of the evening.

The committee in charge included Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, Mrs. W. G. Shaw, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. John D. Buckingham, Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Mrs. Joseph Sedgwick, Mrs. E. R. Johnson, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Mrs. A. M. Thompson and Mrs. James E. Matheson. Mrs. Bromley carried a handsome bouquet of pinks in receiving, the gift of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The following young men were the ushers—G. H. Campbell, J. H. Brown, W. Elder R. E. Armstrong, J. E. Fitzjerald, L. L. Littlefield. Refreshments were served during the evening by the following young ladies—Edith Stone, Lucile Smalley, Grace Blake, Helen Myer, Edith Elrick and Lillian McIntosh. The hall had been very prettily decorated for the event and adornments of artistic nature were highly noticeable.

Mayor Eugene R. Stone managed to grace the occasion with his presence, after having fulfilled a number of engagements, and participated in the enjoyment of the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Bromley were kept busy the entire evening receiving the hearty congratulations and well wishes of the many who were in attendance.

Mr. Bromley entered upon the duties of secretary of the local Association last September and has greatly endeared himself to all members and friends because of his affability and pleasing personality. Previous to his advent to Quincy, he was affiliated with Y. M. C. A. work in Ansonia, Connecticut, for a period of over five years.

WHIST PARTY.

Under the auspices of John Adams Commandery, Knights of Malta, a most successful whist party was held Tuesday night in Greenleaf hall. The entertainment committee spare no pains in making those parties most interesting for those who attend, and this the second of the series was a great financial success, even although the attendance could have been greater.

The souvenirs awarded are valuable and this is the principal means of drawing the best whist players in the city and making these parties the success they are. The scoring was high, and after an hour's play Hugh Keating was leading. The souvenirs awarded at the close were first for men, shaving set; second, water set. The highest score for ladies was a fine toilet set and second a wine set. The booby was a crystal tea set.

Among those present were: Messrs. John Moriarty, James Edwards, John W. Buzzie, Hugh Keating, R. May, John McCullock,, William Sherriff, John McCauley, Ralph Elcock, J. Harrold, A. Ericson, William Rosselly, William Moore, A. Petrie, J. McCauley, Peter Hynes, T. Wester, W. A. Ceten, Alfred Nill, D. McAlpine, James Lyons, M. E. Marten, Robert Sinclair, James Murray, R. E. Barry, William Dowell, P. Smith, Frank Sweeney, Edward Desmond, Mrs. G. H. Jacques, Mrs. Robert Sinclair, Mrs. Newson, Mrs. M. Winship.

At ten o'clock the following were announced as winners: J. Moriarty and F. J. Sullivan; ladies', Mrs. Petrie and Mrs. Winship; booby R. Elcock.

WOULD ACCEPT RENOMINATION

Opinion of Progressives In Regard to Roosevelt

TAFT EXPECTING A CONTEST

Reports From Oyster Bay Are "Unsatisfactory" to President—Roosevelt Campaign at Stage of "Trying It on the Dog"—Washington Picks Harmon as "Logical" Candidate of Democrats Should Former President Be Nominated

Washington, Jan. 3.—That Theodore Roosevelt is aiming to be the Republican candidate for the presidency of the United States is the practically unanimous opinion of political Washington today.

While the strenuous efforts of Gifford Pinchot and James R. Garfield to prevent the indorsement of any candidate in the Ohio progressive convention have exhibited the latest symptom indicating ambition in Oyster Bay, these have been preceded by other occurrences which politicians here regard as forming a chain of evidence that Roosevelt is willing to go before the Chicago convention. His friends have been saying for some time that he would make no statement taking himself out of the field so completely that he could not get back.

Progressive Republicans here have even gone further and used the word "know" in connection with the surmise concerning Roosevelt's attitude. They have expected him to be a candidate and were not surprised that Pinchot and Garfield should have fought hard to prevent an indorsement for Senator La Follette.

It is believed here that President Taft is fairly well convinced that he must contest with Roosevelt before the campaign is over. Reports from Oyster Bay have been "unsatisfactory," thus compelling the inference that Roosevelt would step into the field if the signs were right.

As the political experts here frame it up, the Roosevelt campaign is at the stage of "trying it on the dog." No one alleges that the colonel, even in his own mind, is actually a candidate to succeed Taft or surely intends to be, but it is firmly believed by his enemies, and is not denied by his friends, that Roosevelt is willing to test the sentiments of the country as to his candidacy.

Should he conclude that the anti-third term idea, the resentment of the Taft men and secret knifing by disappointed disciples of La Follette would tip the scales the wrong way, he would announce that he was not a candidate and would not be. On the other hand, should the stories affirming his candidacy which are now being sent out from Washington and elsewhere provoke an apparently spontaneous demand for his services, he would consent to listen to the "call of the people."

The effect upon the Republicans of the south of even a half belief that Roosevelt might be voted for in the convention doubtless would be, to cause the southern states to send unpledged delegates to Chicago. Roosevelt probably is as strong in the south as Taft, for he has played politics there like a master, while Taft has not played it at all, except through Postmaster General Hitchcock.

With the Taft strength in the south broken and the eager support of his thousands of admirers in every northern state, Roosevelt could probably come near stampeding the Chicago convention. In any event the possibility of his candidacy would swell the list of unpledged delegates from all over the country and make the renomination of President Taft difficult.

With its fine political imagination now actively at work, Washington already has selected Judson Harmon as the "logical" candidate of the Democrats if Roosevelt is nominated by the Republicans. It is calculated that the progressive Democrats would then have no object in bidding for progressive Republican votes and would seek a middle-of-the-road man as their most promising candidate.

Harmon, it is figured, could carry the solid south, would be almost sure of New York. would stand a chance in Massachusetts, New Jersey and Connecticut, and certainly could carry Ohio and perhaps Indiana.

LAWRENCE IS DEAD

Third Lorimer Legislator Who Has Recently Passed Away

Sterling, Ills., Jan. 3.—Johnson Lawrence, member of the Forty-sixth general assembly of Illinois and one of those whose votes elected William Lorimer to a seat in the United States senate, died suddenly at his home at Polo, Ills., of heart disease.

His death added a third to the list of legislators whose names received attention in the bribery investigation into the Lorimer election and he, like Joseph Clark of Vandalia and Michael Link of Morris, both of whom are dead, was a witness before the senatorial investigating committee.

QUINCY HIGH 48 ROCKLAND 11

Home Team Opens Basket Ball Season With Decisive Victory

THE FEATURES

The basket ball season for members of the Quincy High team was ushered in under most favorable auspices Tuesday when the local combination secured a 48 to 11 victory over the Rockland High quintet. The practise work of the local boys during the past few weeks was evidently productive of much good, for they easily proved their superiority over their opponents.

At the first five minutes of play, it looked as if the game would be hotly contested, but the team work of the local boys was so good a large score was attained. The visiting team was not organized, and its management was about to cancel the game at the eleventh hour, because his combination only started practising last Monday.

In the first half the visitors were mostly on the defensive rarely being afforded an opportunity to try for baskets. Hackett, the centre, although he played against fate during the entire game, proved himself a basket ball player of note. His passing enabled the visitors to score the majority of their points, and he threw to the basket a number of times, only to have the ball roll out, as it were, onto the court.

Foley and Poole, displayed great form in the second half, the latter securing the only goal from foul made in the game. In this connection it might be pertinent to state that the game was void of any of the so-called "rough-house" tactics the contest being played on sportsmanlike principles.

As for the local team, little need be said, except that it gives every promise of rounding out into a formidable aggregation under the direction of Coach Arthur Staff. The team work was highly commendable, even the substitutes showed up to great advantage, McDonald especially proving himself worthy of careful consideration for a permanent berth. Finley and Trask displayed great agility throughout and seemed able to locate the baskets from diverse angles.

The summary:

QUINCY H. S.		ROCKLAND H. S.
Finley rf		lb Poole
Chapman lf		rb McCarthy
McDonald lf
Trask c		c Hackett
Holmes rb		lf Mansfield
Crane rb
Johnson lb		rf Foley

Score, Quincy H. S. 48, Rockland H. S., 11. Goals from floor, Finley, 8, Trask 6, Chapman 4, McDonald 4, Holmes, Hall, Foley 3, Poole 2. Goal from foul, Foley. Referee, La Rose. Scorer, Estey. Timer, Pickett. Time, 20m halves. Attendance 300.

DINNER FOR EMPLOYEES.

Through the courtesy oftheir employer Mr. Robert T. Johnson, the clerks at Johnson Bros.' market enjoyed their annual supper and attended the theatre Tuesday evening. The party left Quincy on the 6.12 train for Boston and on arrival wended their way to one of the best hotels in the city.

After enjoying a bountiful repast the next number in order was the theatre. The show at the Park "looked good" to the boys and "Get Rich Quick" was pronounced excellent by all.

Of course "light refreshments" were served after the show and with three cheers for R. T. all went happily home.

LARGE RECEIPTS.

The efficiency of the Tax Collector's office is shown by the report of Collector O'Hara for the year 1911. He reports that the total collections of his office for the year to have been, $769,208.69. The increase for the year is more readily seen when the figures are compared with the amounts collected in 1910 and 1909. The collections in 1910 were $739,907.40 and 1909, $644,907.02.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening and the board organized with John L. Miller as chairman, Albert L. Barbour as superintendent and secretary, Charles H. Johnson as census taker.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY AND EVERYONE IN QUINCY.

BRIEFS

The annual meeting of eMmorial Sunday school will be held in the vestry this evening. Rev. T. W. Davison, Mrs. Lyndon T. Gurney and Edwin French are acting asthe nominating committee.

Mrs. Swan of Flint street entertained a party of friends at whist New Year's evening. Mr. A. H. Hall and Mrs. Alva Beede won the souvenirs, and Mrs. John Burke was given the consolation.

A. Litchfield of New York spent the week end with Mrs. E. E. Willey of Walker street, with his two children, Aleyn of Cambridge High school and Miss Catherine of the Quincy Mansion school.

CATHERINE CAVANAGH.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Cavanagh was held this morning from the church of the Sacred Heart at Atlantic. Mass was celebrated by Rev. John P. Cuffe. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

Quite a stir was caused because a well-known captain of industry paid $500,000 for a pearl necklace. Now it appears that it did not cost over $17,000. Fortunately this latter fact did not come out before the newspapers got off their editorials.

TO MAKE QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE "BIGGER, BUSIER AND BETTER"

City Square Business Man Elected President At Largely Attended Annual Meeting

Proposition To Raise Dues and Put Board On a Solid Business Basis. Plan Discussed

The Quincy Board of Trade, with a new president and other officers, starting in the new year with a determination to make the organization, a power for good and to do bigger and better things for Quincy, would make it seem that this organization will soon take its place among the ranks of the organizations of this kind throughout the state that are recognized as a power.

If the ideas advanced at the annual meeting of the Board of Trade Wednesday night, by its new president, are to be taken as an indication of what it is proposed to do, then this idea will be carried out.

The new president is Charles C. Hearn, the well-known City Square druggist, a successful business man, who takes office with this end in view. Backing him up in his efforts in this new direction are the business men of the city.

This meeting was one of the largest attended that the Board has held for a long time and the room in the Adams building, where the meeting was held was hardly large enough. Mayor Stone who has been the president of the association for several years was in the chair and a roll call of officers showed all present.

Three business men were elected to membership, Joseph Walker, George S. Morse and Edward Wight. Several communications were read by the secretary, but as they called for no immediate action they were either place on the table or on file.

John R. Richards for the committee on street railway, to confer with the Ward Four association, relative to the so-called missing link, reported that the committee had interviewed the railway officials at their Boston office and the proposition was now receiving consideration.

W. H. Teasdale for the committee on train service reported that a new train for Boston had been secured, leaving Quincy at 7.03 and that other trains between certain hours were being considered. He advised that as a new time-table was now being considered by the officials, that the committee should get at work soon, so as to get their wants before the railroad, before it was too late.

Charles H. Johnson the treasurer, reported for the auditing committee, that the receipts of the year had been $515.50 and the expenditures $511.99. Since the first of the year enough collections had been made to meet all bills. It was the first time in seven years that the committee were able to make such a report.

There was now due the Board for dues for the new year $745. and back dues amounting to $180 making a total of $925. If this could be had the Board would be on a good financial footing.

Arthur W. Stetson the secretary reported that there had been twelve regular and three special meetings during the past year, and that the membership Jan. 1 was 127.

NEW OFFICERS.

The next business was the election of officers and after some minor details a list of officers was nominated and placed on the blackboard. Arthur W. Stetson who has been the secretary of the association for over ten and one half years declined to again be a candidate for election. His declination caused some surprise but he said privately that he had his reasons.

A. W. STETSON.

Several others who were nominated for directors and other officers also declined to be candidates. A committee consisting of John D. McKay, William P. Thompson and A. L. Whitman were appointed a committee to receive and count ballots.

Considerable time was taken up and while waiting for the committee to report, a recess was taken. The committee reported that as a result of the balloting the following officers had been elected:

President—Charles C. Hearn.
Vice President—William G. Shaw.
Secretary—John O. Hall.
Treasurer—Charles H. Johnson.
Directors—Edward J. Sandberg, Robert E. Foy, Thomas L. Williams.

President Stone, in surrendering the gavel to the new president thanked the members of the Board for their loyal support and urged them to stand by their new officers. He then wished all a happy new year. Mayor Stone then left for Houghs Neck to attend the meeting of the association of that place. Before he left however a vote of thanks was extended to the retiring officers.

WHO HE IS.

Charles C. Hearn the new president, as stated above, is a well-known City Square business man. He was born in Boston in 1862 and received his early education in the public schools of his native city. Graduating he entered his father's drug store where he was employed until 1889 when he came to Quincy and opened a drug store at West Quincy. After firmly establishing himself in business he took unto himself a life partner, a well-known South Boston young lady and brought her to Quincy.

After four years in business he determined to branch out. At that time the late Henry H. Faxon had under construction the block of stores, that now surround the old Hancock House and the corner store was secured by Mr. Hearn which he occupied in 1893. Here he has since been located.

He was at one time a candidate for Councilman at Large but when the votes were counted he did not have sufficient to elect him, and with this his first effort, he retired from the army of office seekers. He has however served at different times as a delegate to some of the political conventions. The only public office he has held is that of being a member of the Managers of Public Burial Places, to which he was appointed in 1911 to fill a vacancy.

He is a member of a number of organizations including besides the Board of Trade and Merchants' Association, the Granite City club, Quincy lodge of Elks and Quincy council Knights of Columbus. He is also a member of the state druggists' association.

On taking the chair and thanking the members for having elected him to office, he said that he had been looking over the finances of the Board and it was a puzzle to him how the Quincy Board of Trade had managed to live. It was wonderful that the Board had done as much as it had. He was taking office to try and improve the personel of the Board and he wanted the support of every member. During the past few days he had approached business men in regard to the Board and they said "What has the Board done?" He had thought the same thing himself. This Board should have at least 400 members and to his mind it would with work by the members. He did not believe that public service corporations should be members, but he did believe that representatives of those corporations could be. He did not think when the Board wanted anything from these corporations that it should get after the representative, but go direct to headquarters. That was the stand he should take, as far as possible.

Here we have spent an hour in electing officers that should have been done in a few minutes. The system seems to be all wrong. If so, the by-laws should be changed. Another thing was, that under the by-laws no business of any kind could be transacted at the annual meeting but the election of officers, yet we have done other business tonight. The time is ripe, and the opportunity here, to speak of these things. To his mind in the next two or three years Quincy would occupy a prominent place on the map, with the public dock movement now being boomed. The Board of Trade, with a good membership could command the attention of the Dock board and get something.

As to the matter of dues. They are too small, $10 a year is little enough. That would secure us an income with a membership of 200 that would make us capable of taking our place among the Boards of Trade. He then introduced D. King for a few remarks.

A NEW ERA.

Mr. King came prepared to enthuse new life into the board. He said if the Board was larger it would be of more value to the community. Here in Quincy there were sixty men who

FINE CONCERT BETHANY CHURCH

Brilliant Musical Success and Enthusiastic Audience

THE PROGRAM

The concert given at Bethany church Wednesday evening under the auspices of the music committee was a musical treat and a large audience showed its appreciation with hearty and long continued applause. The artists were:

Marion C. Whiton, organist.
Emma Schufeldt Moore, soprano.
Albert L. Hayden, baritone.
Roscoe R. Ricker, violinist.
Grace M. Farrington, pianist.

Miss Marion Chadwick Whiton at the organ, opened the program with a double number, contrasting the tone of the brilliant Mendelssohn march and the Communion in G by Baptiste, which made a delightful and interesting beginning. Excepting a few of the older classics, without which all miscellaneous programs seem incomplete, the music of the more modern composers predominated. Miss Whiton played her numbers with a fine conception of values in tone and harmonies that brought out the meaning of her selections in a masterly manner. She plays with understanding and has the gift of presenting to her listeners the true inwardness of musical thought. Her numbers were all thoroughly enjoyed.

Mr. Hayden and Mrs. Moore were in splendid voice and were never heard to better advantage in solo or duet. Mr. Hayden was especially effective in the Song of Thanksgiving by Allitseu, responding to enthusiastic applause with A Red Red Rose, by Arthur Foote.

Mrs. Moore, in Gounod's "Repentance" sang with great dramatic power and expression, the audience demanding a repetition which was graciously accorded. The accompaniment of organ, violin and piano made a rich setting for this beautiful song Both singers were presented with flowers.

Mr. Ricker's playing of DeBeriot's Concerto in A minor was in every way worthy of a true musician. He plays with the warmth and depth of expression that appeals to every music lover, showing a maturity of taste surprising in so young a student of the violin. In response to persistent applause he played an Aria, also by DeBeriot. Miss Farrington accompanied his numbers at the piano with exquisite taste and skill.

The complete program was as follows:

Mendelssohn,	March from "Athalia"
Baptiste,	Communion in G
Allitseu,	A Song of Thanksgiving
	Mr. Hayden
a Bach	Pastorale in F
b Calkin	Hommage a Mendelssohn
Dubois	Toccato
Hoffman	Floating Onward
	Mrs. Moore and Mr. Hayden
a Guilmant	Melody
b Dubois	Grand Chorus
DeBeriot	Concerto—A minor
	Mr. Ricker
Foote	Nocturne
Gounod	Repentance
Mrs. Moore and	violin, piano and organ
Costa	March from "Naaman"

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

The following officers of Quincy Court M. C. O. F. were installed Wednesday evening at G. A. R. hall by Deputy J. Frank D. Golden and degree staff from Chelsea:

LATEST

CONTRACT FOR FORE RIVER CO.

One of Two Lowest Bidders for 27,000 Ton Battleship

CONTRACT EXPECTED

Bids were opened by the navy department at Washington this morning for the building of the two 27,000 ton battleships Nevada and Oklahama.

The lowest bidders were the New York Shipbuilding Co. of Camden, N. J. and the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. of Quincy. The bid of the New York Shipbuilding Co. was $5,926,000 for one ship. The bid of the Fore River Co. was $5,935,000 for one ship.

Reports from Washington say that the probabilities are that each company will get one of the vessels to build.

If the Fore River should get the contract it means much for Quincy for it will furnish employment to thousands of workmen for several years. In fact the boom will equal that received when the Fore River Co. received the contract for the Argentine battleship Rivadavia.

The only other bidder was the Newport News Co., whose bid was $6,350,000.

BRIEFS

Ex-Mayor Shea made a short call at City Hall this morning and paid his resepcts to Mayor Stone.

The prizes at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday evening were awarded to F. E. Wharton and George F. Spooner.

Mrs. Gilbert H. Rhodes of Old Colony avenue, who has been ill with acute rheumatism for the past month is now convalescing and was able this week to come down stairs.

Miss Rose Nason and Master George Sheppard of Fitchburg returned home this week after spending the holiday season with the John H. Whiteheads of Kemper street.

The new business man in City square, Elmer F. Ricker, real estate, insurance, etc., is certainly a hustler. He has ads in the Ledger that catch the eye at a glance and that large sign on his office is a beauty in design and utility.

The second term of Miss Corlew's dancing school at Wollaston opens Saturday; the intermediate class at 2.15 P. M., and the advanced class at 4.15. Pupils may also enter the second half of the evening class beginning Friday evening at 7.30 in Brasee hall.

INSTALLATION BANQUET HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES

Mayor Stone, Ex-Mayor Shea and Other City Officials In Attendance

Separation Plan Gets Black Eye. Arguments In Favor

That Hon. William T. Shea is still in the limelight, even though he has joined the list of ex-Mayors, was evidenced at the annual installation banquet of the Houghs Neck Improvement Association, Wednesday evening in Associates hall, where he threw a ray of light on the so-called separation question, that had a tendency to dampen the ardor of those who thought the divorce proposition an easy matter.

In previous years, the banquets have been held on the last day of the year, and the incoming officers installed at the beginning of the new year, but the numerous banquets of late, caused the postponement of the Associates' fifth annual in order that as many city officials as possible might be in attendance.

Supper consisting of soup, escalloped oysters, ham, turkey, mashed potato, squash, ice cream, coffee, cake, fruit and tonics was served by members of the Association of 8.30 after which cigars were distributed and amid a great cloud of smoke James E. Wall, the retiring president arose to open the speaking of the evening. Mr. Wall extended a hearty greeting to those present. He felt elated over the fact that about one hundred men had turned out for the occasion.

He took the opportunity to extend his good wishes to all and to thank the various committees for the cooperation given him and for the assiduous work they had done. He reviewed the work undertaken and accomplished by the Association the past year and said that he hoped the incoming officers would receive the cordial support accorded him and that they would enjoy a happy and prosperous term of office. He then asked the newly elected officers to come forward in order that he might administer to them the oath of office.

After the officers had been sworn in, Mr. Wall handed over the gavel to the incoming president Henry W. French who took possession of the meeting. Mr. French easily proved himself equal to the occasion and started to give out the various toasts in a manner greatly appreciated by those present, for his remarks were intermingled with anecdotes and expressions of a varied nature.

Mr. French thanked the members for the confidence they had placed in him and promised that he would live up to the oath of office which he had just taken. He said that efforts would be made to get every voter and property owner to join the associates and extended an invitation to all to be present at the next meeting. He said that heretofore the Associates had been branded as fellows who talk much but accomplish little. He added that this year he desired less talk and more work. He then insisted that no speaker would be allowed more than five minutes in which to talk, adding "unless a speaker finishes within five minutes, we will see his finish." But this assertion was not adhered to as Thomas F. Phillips was allowed to talk fully twenty minutes against Houghs Neck separation.

The first speaker of the evening was Captain Oliver G. Fosdick, who told of his coming to Houghs Neck, and concluded by commending ex-mayor Shea for the activity and interest he had displayed in the welfare of Houghs Neck. The Captain was about to draw his remarks to a close, when Mayor Eugene R. Stone graced the occasion with his presence in company with a number of social secretaries, and was given three rousing cheers. Mr. Fosdick took the house by storm when he said in closing, "Hon. William T. Shea is the father of the Houghs Neck Improvement Association, but I believe that, that is the only thing of which he can be termed a father."

Franklin G. Saylor was next called upon and read an original poem on the "Industries of Houghs Neck," in which he gave many "knocks" and "boosts."

Curtis Southwick, in answer to his toast, attempted to descry the conditions of the streets in that section, by comparing them to streets in Cambridge and South Boston. He dwelt at length on the condition of Centre road, which he said should be attended to inasmuch as it was "the feeder for the most populous section of Houghs Neck."

Harry E. Pennington told of the conditions of streets and other things at Rock Island and added that if a fire occurred in some sections of Houghs Neck, it would take 17 hours for the apparatus to respond and not 17 minutes as the schedule time would now have it.

John P. Moses, one of the prime movers in the separation question was next introduced and the meeting took a lively turn when he proceeded to talk on divorcing Houghs Neck from Quincy. He gave an account of all the taxes received from Houghs Neck

WHY PEOPLE READ ADVERTISING.

One great reason for the tremendous modern vogue ofadvertising, is the amount of time it saves the public in these days of hustle.

When a person starts out to find a certain article without any previous notion of where it can be bought to best advantage, a wearisome round of shopping usually becomes necessary. With all the calls upon one's time, people are little inclined to start out in this aimless way.

The merchant that gives the public a good idea of his stock through the newspaper catches a crowd of people who dislike to waste their time on in definite shopping expeditions.

Furthermore, many people dislike to go into a store and take the time of clerks or the proprietor to look over a stock unless they are fairly sure of buying. If they can satisfy themselves in advance that they can probably get what they want at a certain place, they feel that by going there they have saved their own time and energy, and have escaped the embarrassment of looking over a stock without buying anything.

THE BEEF TRUST TRIAL.

The trial of the meat packers, at last fairly under way at Chicago, is even more vital than the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases. The former showed that a great combine can be split up into constituents parts. The beef trust trial is to show whether individual companies can be made to compete if they don't want to.

It is not probable that the government can produce documents tending to prove agreements or collusion. But the surprising uniformity of the packing companies, in prices paid for stock and secured for meat, have convinced the country that definite price agreements nevertheless exist.

There seems to be but little hope, however, whatever the results of this trial, that meat will be much cheaper at the provision store.

The Review of Reviews investigated meat costs last year. It placed the selling price of a steer at $90.40, and the packers' profit at $3.40. That is something more than the government estimate of 2 1-2 per cent on sales.

While few people will doubt that the beef packers could well afford to cut this profit of $3.40 in two, and sell the steer for $1.70 less, it will be seen that this would reduce the price less than 2 per cent, which would not figure out half a cent a pound to the consumer.

The expense of distribution seems the worst along the whole line. On a $90.40 steer, it is calculated that the butcher has to add $32.29. And yet few butchers are plutocrats. Not many of them even have second hand motor-cars. After they have paid their help, fed their delivery horses, pocketed their losses on spoiled meat, they do not seem to have much left.

It costs two to five cents apiece to deliver a chunk of meat at your back door. We warmly commend the effort of the government to enforce the law. But our hopes of lower prices for meat depend much more on the possibility of persuading the housewife to study the cook book more carefully, and on inducing the lord of the home to carry brown paper bundles through the street, than on the results to be obtained by jailing the packers.

BOARD OF TRADE

were members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. There was no reason why in Quincy we can not have a Board of Trade that will, in proportion to its size, be as much of a power for good as the Chamber of Commerce.

He then outlined his proposition which was as set forth in the following head to a paper that had been circulated among some of the business men of the city.

Believing that on a more adequate basis, the Quincy Board of Trade could be of much larger value to the community, we, the undersigned, hereby signify our willingness to become guarantors of the Quincy Board of Trade on the following conditions:—

1st, That each guarantor agrees to pay in as called for up to $25., this including, however, his membership fee.

2nd, That these pledges are not binding until at least thirty have been obtained.

3rd, That the membership fee of the Board of Trade be raised to at least $10 a year.

4th, That the Board of Trade engages a permanent secretary at a salary of not less than $1,000 a year.

Mr. King said that a number of names were already attached to the paper among whom were the following.

T. King	G. A. Sidelinger
H. L. Kincaide	J. A. Barbour
D. King	J. L. Miller
H. T. Whitman	G. H. Brown
W. G. Shaw	T. L. Williams
P. R. Blackmur	H. L. Rice
F. B. Rice	J. A. Dasha
R. A. Sears	H. G. Smith
R. E. Foy	J. W. McAnarney
C. A. Campbell	G. W. Holden
C. I. Campbell	A. N. Murray
E. W. Sheppard	F. Burgess
H. F. McIntire	A. H. Remick
R. R. Freeman	A. Falconer
A. T. Leavitt	B. H. Bain
G. W. Stone	C. T. Baker
A. W. Stetson	C. Burgin
F. F. Crane	P. H. Sullivan
C. C. Hearn	E. R. Stone

Several of those who had signed the paper spoke briefly in endorsement of the plan.

T. L. Williams favored. It had been hard sledding at times in the Board and members had to go into their pockets to make both ends meet. Others to favor were A. N. Murray, John L. Miller, F. F. Crane P. T. Fallon, H. L. Kincaide and R. E. Foy. The sentiment as expressed by these gentlemen was that with a financial standing, a paid secretary, and dues of $10 that the Board would be in position to attract members and be able to do big things for Quincy. The mere matter that dues were $10 would give the Board a standing that it could not get with a $5 dues. John L. Miller also said that the Board of Trade seemed to be a charity organization.

W. H. Teasdale believed that it would be a good thing but we ought to go slow, and that when done it should be done right.

Charles H. Johnson wondered how it would be. If members would not pay the $5 dues how it could be expected they would pay $10. He resented the idea that the Board was run by charity. This question of raising dues should be carefully considered. He believed that with the joining of the Merchants' association with the Board of Trade, the organization would be stronger and better than before.

Secretary Stetson said that it was hard work now to collect the dues of $2.50 semi-annually, and he wondered what it would be if the dues were $10.

Charles C. Foster queried as to the legality of the raising of dues as bills for the coming year had been sent out and several had already paid the year in advance.

It was the general impression that this matter could be properly adjusted.

John L. Miller replying to Mr. Johnson's statement as to the Board being a charity organization said that he did not intend to take any back water. Any organization that expected its secretary to work for nothing was a charity organization.

After some other discussion along the same line it was voted that the sense of the meeting be, that a committee of seven be appointed to consider the proposition to advance the dues to $10 and other amendments to the by-laws and to report at a meeting to be called by the president.

The meeting then adjourned after which ice cream and cake and cigars were passed.

DIVISION 22 INSTALLS.

Officers of Division 22, A. O. H., were installed Wednesday evening at their hall on Copeland street, West Quincy. The installation which was very largely attended by the members of Division 22, and other local divisions, was performed by Past President Creeden of Division 4 assisted by Recording Secretary Daniel Scully of Division 4 and President Thomas J. Walsh of Division 5, of Quincy. The officers installed were as follows:

President—James O. Dowd.
Vice President—Thomas Rogan.
Recording Secretary—Henry Hughes
Financial Secretary—John Reinhalter.
Treasurer—John Dolan.
Chairman of Standing Committee—Joseph McNaeley.
Sentinel—John Murphy.
Sergeant at Arms—John Collins.

After the installation addresses were made by County President Dennis J. Slattery, President James O. Dowd, of Division 22, President James F. Burke of Division 4, and President Thomas J. Welsh of Division 5. Refreshments were served after the meeting.

SHOULD BE THRASHED.

Some action should be taken to check the unmanliness of some of the youths of the city, to teach them to show a little respect to women, especially to those who have reached long years. An incident took place Wednesday afternoon that should not be allowed to exist. A woman, Miss Ann Logan, who has reached a ripe old age was passing along Washington street when a gang of these young hoodlums began to snow ball her. One of the balls struck her in the face and she was hit in other parts of the body. When she remonstrated with them the only reply was to be called several uncomplimentary names. These boys should have been soundly thrashed fortheir action.

JOHN S. FOX.

The funeral of John S. Fox was held Tuesday afternoon from his late residence and was very largely attended including a delegation from St. Stephen's chapter R. A. M. and the Red Men. Services were conducted by Rev. Carl G. Horst of Wollaston, after which the remains were escorted at Mt. Wollaston dedetery by the Chapter and Red Men and the burial service of the Masons was read at the grave.

SHOT FATHER TO DEATH

Boy Who Was Being Chastised Exonerated by Coroner's Jury

Sedalia, Mo., Jan. 4.—Boyd Wollett, 14, who shot his father to death, when the latter attempted to chastise him, was exonerated by a coroner's jury on the ground that he had acted in self-defense.

Evidence disclosed that D. N. Wollett, being out very late the night before, lay abed yesterday morning. The son, believing the parent asleep, remarked to his mother: "The old fool should be up and at work."

Springing from the bed the father attempted to use force, and the boy seized a shotgun and killed him. Testimony was given showing that the boy was studious and was educating himself to be a lawyer.

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR FOSS

Old and New Recommendations to the Legislature.

IS FOR DIRECT NOMINATIONS

Boston, Jan. 4.—Following is the address of Eugene N. Foss, the forty-seventh governor to have been at the head of the commonwealth of Massachusetts:

My first duty is to outline a program of legislation more responsive to the economic and social needs of the people and more efficient in their service,

To do so intelligently it must be recognized that the people are rapidly assuming the management of their own affairs, and as rapidly relegating the political machine to the rear.

This movement divides the world of American politics today in a deeper sense than the present party designations. The one side is reactionary and the other is progressive, dedicated to the progress of legislation, of commerce, industry and prosperity.

No public servant, whatever his party affiliation, can meet the obligations of his position fully today without frankly and unmistakably taking his stand on one side or the other of the fundamental principles of popular government.

Direct Nominations

As the direct primary system is the foundation on which the structure is built, we must first strengthen and perfect it.

The direct primary law enacted last year placed the control of political power in the hands of the people; and to strengthen it, I believe the fixed party enrolment should be done away with, as the voter is entitled to the same secrecy at the primaries which is now accorded him at the polls.

Initiative, Referendum and Recall

If the voter's judgment should determine the nomination of candidates, it should for the same reason continue as a guide and check upon the acts of public servants.

Therefore, I advocated the initiative and the referundum and the recall in my inaugural address last year, and reaffirmed these principles at the recent election. The popular verdict was an approval of this position, and I again urge these measures upon you.

Popular Election of United States Senators, and Expression of Popular Preference for President

I also advocate the direct election of United States senators, and a law enabling the voters to express their choice of candidates for nomination for president and vice president.

Corrupt Practices at Elections, and Payment of Workers at the Polls

Many of my recommendations for safeguarding elections have been enacted into law. Experience, however, has shown the necessity of strengthening all the statutes against practices which prevent a free and honest expression of the popular will.

The legislature should prohibit all campaign advertising, all participation by corporations in elections, all hiring or loaning of conveyances and all expenditures of money at the polls; and should make these statutes enforcible by heavy penalties.

The man who sells his vote must be punished as well as the man who buys it; all candidates and committees should be compelled to make sworn statements of expenses the day before election, and all payments subsequent to such statement should involve a heavy penalty.

The Election Pamphlet

I recommend that provision be made for distribution by the state, at the expense of the state, of an election phamplet in which each candidate shall be allowed space to state his claims, to the end that opportunity to attain public office may be equalized.

Equal Suffrage

The movement in favor of extending the franchise to women is seriously engaging public attention. The demand that the question be submitted to popular vote is a reasonable one, and I recommend that provision be made for such submission.

Home Rule for Cities

Frequent legislative interference in the internal affairs of our cities is an obstacle to responsible government. I recommend submitting to popular vote a provision to prohibit by constitutional amendment all special and logical legislation, in order that the principle of municipal self-government may be given full operation.

Popular Government and State Issues

The progressive elements in our great parties now advocate these measures of popular government. This is the first Massachusetts legislature elected without machine or caucus methods; and your action upon the following important state issues will determine your fidelity—not to

ELECTION LAW CHANGE.

Mayor Miller, of Pittsfield, Mass., following out his promise made before election, has transferred to Representative-elect Kittle a petition looking toward the abolition of the use of vehicles for transporting voters to the polling places. The petition which will be transmitted to the legislature is as follows:—

"Kelton B. Miller of Pittsfield in the county of Berkshire in said commonwealth, respectfully prays that legislation be enacted to prohibit the hiring of any vehicles for the transportation of voters to or from polling places and to prohibit the hiring of any watchers, agents or challengers for any work at primaries or on election day and for that purpose that the accompanying bill or some substitute therefore be enacted.

"An act to prohibit the transportation of voters to or from the polls and the hiring of watchers and agents at election.

"No money shall be spent and no expense authorized or incurred by or in behalf of any candidate for nomination to any office or by or on behalf of any candidate for any office or party position, or on behalf of any political party or organization for the following purposes:—

(a) The hiring of any vehicles for the transportation of voters to or from polling places.

(b) The hiring of any watchers, agents or challengers for any work at primaries or on election day.

"Provided that any political party or organization may employ not exceeding two persons on election day to act as challengers or agents at each polling place as provided by law; each such challenger and agent shall on said election day wear a badge which shall show to any other person the political party or candidate for whom such challenger or agent is acting; said badges shall be furnished by the city or town clerk within which said polling places are located, and paid for by the city or town as part of election expenses..

"And provided further that the chairman of any ward or town committee or other organization of any political party which has nominated candidates to be voted for at any general election may file a petition with the said city or town clerk at least seven (7) days prior to the day of the general election setting forth that certain voters described in said petition reside at a distance of at least two (2) miles from the polling place at which, under the law, they are entitled to vote on election day or are aged and infirm and that said voters do not nor does any of them possess any vehicle or other means of transportation from their place of residence to the said polling place and that no trolley line is within one quarter of a mile from their places of residence. And thereupon the voters so described in said petition may be transported on the day of said general election named in said petition to and from the respective polling places of said voters at the expense of the political party filing said petition.

"Section 2. Whoever violates any provision of this act shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, ($1,000.00).

"Section 4. This act shall be submitted to the voters of the commonwealth at the next annual state election and shall take effect upon its acceptance by the majority of the voters voting thereon."

There has been some suggestion that the last section might be changed to allow the adoption by cities or towns as they saw fit, or to permit the law to become effective without a referendum. However, the original petition makes it possible to effect such a change if it is so desired by the legislature.

Q.—What do we understand by the 144,000 mentioned in the seventh and fourteenth chapters of Revelation? (J. A. D.)

Answer.—For more than sixteen centuries the Lord dealt exclusively with the Jewish nation. They were His specially chosen people and favored above every other nation in the earth. The Lord told them on one occasion that He recognized them only of all the families of the earth (Amos iii, 2). The Israelites were informed that if faithful to the Lord, and obedient to His commands, they would be a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, and that His favor would never depart from them. But they became disobedient to the Lord's instructions and consequently, the time came when they were cast aside and no longer recognized as His people. The Divine favor was then turned to the Gentiles and these were granted the opportunity to become members of the Royal Priesthood. This Priesthood would have been completely made up from the twelve tribes of Israel—twelve thousand from each tribe—had there been a sufficient number of faithful obedient ones to make up the predestinated number of 144,000. As only a remnant of that nation of the Jews accepted Christ, as their Saviour when He presented Himself to them, the invitation went to the Gentiles, and all throughout this Gospel Age the selection has been going on amongst the nations of the earth aside from the Jews. When "the fulness (the full number) of the Gentiles be come in," then favor will once more return to the Jews and all Israel shall be saved (Romans xi, 25-27). The elect 144,000 will be kings and priests unto God and shall reign with Christ during the thousand years mentioned in Revelation xx, 1-6.

WELLESLEY IS NOT WANTED

Mayor Stone Opposes Town Entering Metropolitan Sewer

HIS REASONS

An instance of how quickly Mayor Stone is getting onto his job was shown this morning when the Mayor instructed the City Solicitor to notify counsel, that the City of Quincy would oppose the proposition to admit the town of Wellesley into the Metropolitan sewer. The Mayor bases his objection on the ground that if the town was permitted to enter the sewer, it would empty through the sewer that comes through Quincy and has an outlet at Nut Island, and that the emptying of the sewer here would have a tendency to injure the health of the city as well as to do great damage to Quincy's water front.

QUINCY HIGH.

Tuesday the basket ball team of Quincy High defeated the team from Rockland High on Quincy's floor. The Quincy High five proved too much for the visitors.

The first half was purely Quincy's. In the second, Rockland rallied a little and managed to score five baskets and a foul. Quincy piled up forty-eight points. Final score Quincy 48, Rockland 11.

This was Quincy's first game. Jan. 10, a game with the fast Milton High five is scheduled. Season tickets which entitle the holder to see all games at Quincy, can be obtained soon at the High school. Quincy has a good schedule and all games are likely to prove interesting.

INITIATE SEVENTY-FOUR.

Greenleaf hall was fully taxed Wednesday evening, the occasion being the regular meeting of members of Loyal Order of Moose. The initiation was worked on seventy-four candidates. The total number now enrolled in the membership of the lodge is 583, which is conceded to be the largest in the state..

The installation exercises will take place next Wednesday evening under the direction of Leon C. Claflin, deputy supreme dictator. The charter, which was scheduled to close at the meeting, was left open by unanimous consent of those present, for a month. It is expected that the 600 mark will soon be reached and that work on the new clubhouse will be started presently.

THE TEREDO.

Curious and Destructive Worm That Digs Tunnels In Wood.

It was in 1731 that Holland narrowly escaped inundation along its coast because the timbers of the sea dikes in many parts were discovered to be quite unsound. The timely discovery of the real condition of the dikes saved the country from an awful catastrophe, the full extent of which was comprehended by only a few Dutchmen.

The timbers had been honeycombed by the teredo, or shipworm. This creature burrows into any wood immersed in sea water. It makes an entrance when young and digs channels along the grain of the wood, living and often dying in the timber. The worm grows in some localities to a length of twelve inches, its girth being one and a half inches, and the curious thing about its whiplike body is its exceeding tenderness. It cannot bear its own weight. It will break if subjected to any strain.

It will burrow straight along the grain of the wood unless turned aside by a knot or nail, and, no matter how many of these worms may be burrowing in the same piece of wood, they never run their channels into one another. By some marvelous instinct they keep clear of each other's preserves. We have seen a cross section of a log eighteen inches in diameter, and we counted no fewer than 800 distinct burrows.—Exchange.

INSTALLATION BANQUET

and added that the residents of that section were not receiving their proportionate share. He talked of the condition of the streets and the scarcity of improvements that had been forthcoming, adding that it cost Houghs Neck $12,000 a year to stay annexed to Quincy, whereas, separation would only entail an expenditure of $1,000. He considered many phases of the proposition in the short time allotted him and was given great applause when he concluded.

Thomas F. Phillips was called upon and immediately launched forth into opposition against separation, placing before him a number of books and statistics, similiar to the five-foot library of Dr. Eliot. He told of the many petitions that had been presented to the legislature at different times by towns desiring separation and showed where such towns had been unsuccessful in their endeavors. He said that the town that compared most favorably with Houghs Neck was Westwood and then went on to show the conditions that now exist. He told of the conditions up to 1919 that would exist if Houghs Neck were divorced from Quincy and termed the project as "a most foolish one." After he had spoken for over fifteen minutes some one said "How about the five minutes?" The toastmaster then awakened to the situation and Phillips was granted two minutes in which to finish. This brought Moses to his feet and he in turn asked that he be given more time in rebuttal, which was granted.

EX-MAYOR SHEA.

"Ring out the old, ring in the new," was the invocation that greeted ex-mayor Shea as he arose to speak, and he certainly did "ring it out" in splendid style. The separation question had been the main topic of discussion and Hon. William proceeded at once to give hi views on the matter. The ex-Mayor was at his best and launched forth into a stirring discus ion on the matter, saying among other things:

"Evidently this question of separation is seriously commanding the attention of most of you, but before plunging headlong into the project, I would advise you to carefully weigh the proposition and consider the arguments of the opposite side. Whatever the consensus of opinion may dictate adhere to, be considerate in your action, and play fairly in this movement just as in any other proposition affecting the interests and welfare of your district.

During my administration of the past four years, $148,000 have been spent in the City of Quincy for water improvements, and of this amount $41,000 went to Houghs Neck. Five miles of water mains have been laid, in this section alone, as have also 50 hydrants and 35 gates. In addition one mile of temporary water pipe has been laid and $10,000 has been the share allotted to you for sewer construction. The work on the extermination of gypsy moths has cost $2,500 and the public landing has involved an expenditure of $2,000."

The ex-mayor then gave a number of figures bearing on the Metropolitan water rates and said that the lighting system at Houghs Neck cost the city $11,000 adding "And you must recognize the fact that this expense is continually growing, more so in fact than any other department."

A comparison of the conditions in West Quincy was then made with those of Houghs Neck, the ex-mayor saying, "It is almost amusing to listen to some of the arguments that men from this section of the city put forth relative to fire, police and other protection. In answer I refer you to my own ward, where the fire protection is almost identical with that given resident of Houghs Neck. There is only one fire house in the whole of ward four, a much larger section than Houghs Nerk, a place too, where numerous buildings are situated in sections disadvantageous to the firemen. Your police protection alone costs more than $2,000 per annum, while the amount expended in ward four does not total more than $1000 per year.

Then too, the maintenance of your school costs considerable, and such facts as these must be thoroughly considered if you are to deem the separation project a feasable and propitious one. In conclusion permit me to state that a survey of the books in City Hall, of all departments, which are open at all times to your inspection, will bear me out in the statements which I have made, and will allow you to become fully cognizant of the conditions as they really are."

In closing the ex-mayor thanked the voters of Houghs Neck for the support given him and said he hoped the Associates would have a prosperous year. He was thunderously applauded.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

Mayor Eugene R. Stone was the next speaker and was given a great ovation. Three cheers greeted him as he arose and the handclapping accorded him was almost deafening. The mayor said that he deemed it a privilege to be at Houghs Neck and added that so much had been said on the separation he believed those present were in a position to better understand the question. He praised the Improvement Association and said much good would be forthcoming where men were united on a proposition concerning the development of their immediate section. "There is no doubt, that conditions in this section of the city are sufficient to warrant further improvements, and I became aware of this fact in coming down recently in my automobile. While coming along Sea street, I noticed that the tide had advanced on the street, and great precautions were necessary through fear that the water might come into the automobile." He told those present to bear in mind the fact that other sections of the city should receive their proportionate shares of improvements, and urged the members present not to be too extravagant or exacting in their demands.

He refuted the argument to the effect that no more streets could be accepted in Houghs Neck. "It is true, added His Honor, that the City ordinance requires that no street be accepted that is not forty feet wide, but I see no reason, why the City could not buy the land on streets that are thirty feet or thereabouts in width and widen the streets so that they could be accepted in case occasion demand the same. Not only that, but frequently it has happened in various cities that property owners have donated enough land to make up the required width, and there is nothing to prevent such action being brought about in Houghs Neck."

Mayor then went into an encomium upon the location and ideal position of Houghs Neck, telling of a recent interview with railway officials, who stated that it would be possible for Houghs Neck to become a terminal of great importance. The dock question was dwelt upon at length and Mayor Stone added that Houghs Neck in the event of a proper dock system being established would become one of the most important ports in the world. He said that navigation in that vicinity was the best in Boston Harbor and predicted great things for Houghs Neck in the near future.

REP. WALTER E. PIPER.

Representative Walter E. Piper praised the work of the organization and advocated a great central organization where delegates from all improvement societies could meet and determine upon matters for the benefit of the entire city. He promised his support in the legislature to any matter he thought would be for the welfare of his constituents.

REP. WILLIAM J. LESLIE.

Representative Leslie spoke along the strain that the "wiser heads must rule," and imparted much advice, at the same time taking occasion to pay a tribute to Councilman Ross, who, he said, "kept his eyes open and his mouth shut," in the council. Representative Leslie, in a few well chosen remarks, which were sincerely re-echoed by all, said that Quincy has been awakened as never before. He then went on to tell of the many improvements that were in store and predicted great things for the city of Presidents in the near future. He was greatly applauded for his remarks.

John P. Moses was then given a chance to answer Mr. Phillips and did so by stating that the records the latter read were all wrong. This brought Phillips to his feet with a challenge to submit them to an auditor. Moses again sprang to his feet to continue the debate but the gavel was then used by president French and the fifth annual banquet of the Houghs Neck Associates had come to a close.

The officers installed were:—

President—Henry W. French.

First Vice-president—Michael G. Coughlan.

Second Vice-President—Patrick F. O'Brien.

DYNAMITING BY M'NAMARA

Bookwalter Says He Knew About It Two Years Ago

GETTING CLOSE TO GOMPERS

Ex-Mayor of Indianapolis Told Near Associates of Head of American Federation of Labor That Secretary-Treasurer of Iron Workers' Union Was Responsible For Series of Explosions—Burns Detectives at Work

Indianapolis, Jan. 4.—National labor officials affiliated with Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor were informed two years ago by Charles A. Bookwalter, who, as mayor at that time, conducted a secret investigation, that John J. McNamara had directed a series of dynamite explosions.

This was made known by Bookwalter when he was informed that the government's investigation here embraced an inquiry into the circumstances of the four explosions directed against Albert Von Spreckelsen, a general contractor, on account of labor troubles.

Bookwalter declared that he expected to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury, which resumed its session yesterday. He said he would bare all the details of the municipal investigation that satisfied him that John J. McNamara, as secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, was the conspiring executive who caused the explosions in this vicinity.

Bookwalter even said that he, himself, had told John J. McNamara of the strong suspicions against him and that in his conversations with a score of labor leaders he had placed the responsibility upon the iron workers' union.

"We were on a street car together one day shortly after the Von Spreckelsen explosion in October, 1909," said Bookwalter, "when John J., whom I knew well, asked me in a taunting way if I had learned who blew up the buildings. I was irritated those days because I myself had received threatening letters and had to have a guard at my house for sixty days, so I answered rather hotly: 'Yes, and I could put my hand on one of them without leaving this car.'"

Asked whether he told anyone else beside McNamara of what his investigation had disclosed, he said: "Yes, I told a score of labor leaders what I knew and that iron workers were to blame. You see, I knew all the labor union boys."

"What did they say when you blamed the iron workers?"

"There are lots of good men in union labor and they always have denounced acts of violence. I think some of them said it was a shame."

Did any of these men tell Mr. Gompers that suspicion pointed strongly to the guilt of the iron workers?"

"I don't know whether they told him or not, but Sam Gompers is one of the best informed men in this country."

Bookwalter said that Gompers visited Indianapolis several times subsequent to his own conversation with the labor leaders both before and after the McNamaras confessed and that he (Bookwalter) met Gompers himself twice while with labor union men, but that no reference was made in his presence to the explosions.

Bookwalter was then told that investigation was being made as to whether he had informed Gompers. He denied that he was intimate enough to have discussed the question because of an alleged business association.

William J. Burns, who is here in response to a subpoena to testify before the federal grand jury, admitted that his detectives were working on the details revealed in the investigation by Bookwalter, and the circumstances that attended the dropping of the inquiry by city authorities.

SMALL OUTPUT IN 1911

Great Decline Shown In Maine Shipbuilding Industry

Bangor, Me., Jan. 4.—Maine's shipbuilding record in 1911 emphasizes the decline of that once great industry, the entire output of the state, including all sorts of craft of all sizes, falling below 10,000 tons, whereas in times past the new tonnage ranged from 30,000 to 40,000, and occasionally as high as 60,000 or 70,000 tons.

Very few sailing vessels were built, and few of these registered over 100 tons. In only one district, Bath, did the industy have even a respectable showing last year. The operations at Bath aggregated 7428 gross tons.

The Call of the Heart

A New Year's Event

By CARLOTTA PERRY

It is not often that the prodigal returns on Thanksgiving day to sit at the table where a plate is always laid for him; that Christmas brings a restoration of peace and good or that Easter sees a resurrection of buried hopes. But here is a family episode at New Year's which is exceptional.

They were an old fashioned family, and they lived in an old fashioned country house.

They always watched the old year out and the new year in, and when from the near church tower the old bell lingered on the last stroke of 12 with much ceremony the outer door of the great hall was thrown open that the old year might depart and the new one enter. And according to a time honored custom each one made a wish for something that was most desired at the hands of the New Year. There was a tradition that strange and beautiful things had come to pass because of this wishing.

Mr. Walter Graham, the head of the family, was a man of warm heart, but with an intense pride and an imperious will.

Ten years before the time of which this story tells the eldest daughter of the house had clandestinely married a man to whose patient and faithful court paternal consent with unreasoning prejudice was refused. The father, in his wrath, forbade her ever to cross the home threshold again.

The girl's heart had not misled her. The man was in every way worthy. Happiness and prosperity had been their portion.

The holidays at Graham House, though still the occasion of hospitality and mirth, were days on which memory was sadly busy. The loving mother felt more keenly on these festal days the estrangement of which she might not even speak.

Always when New Year's eve came Mr. Graham would slip away from the family and guests and spend an hour alone in thought of the daughter who had disobeyed him. From these retrospections he had always come harder and more unrelenting than ever.

On the New Year's eve of which this story tells a merry company was gathered in Graham House.

As usual, a little before midnight Mr. Graham slipped away for his tryst with bitter memories, but when just a moment before the time for opening the door he came down the grand staircase there was a new look on his face. "Dear friends," he said gently, "will not all who love us wish with me that peace, love and charity may enter Graham House this blessed New Year's eve and abide forevermore?"

The dear mother, with a sob of joy in her voice, the brothers and sisters and all the guests said softly, "Peace, love and charity to Graham House forevermore." Then, as the midnight bell rang out, the door swung open to the starlit sky, the snow white world, and each one welcomed the New Year, making the wish dearest to his heart.

Now, this is what happened next. There on the porch they stood as if sure of a welcome, the daughter and the husband and two smiling fur clad little children. The youngest lifted up his voice gleefully, saying: "We've comed, grandfather. Muvver says she heard your voice. Did you call?"

The old man stooped and gathered the little ones in his arms. "Yes, I called you," he said. "She heard aright the call of my heart."

Shutting Him Off.

The Dad—My son, I want to tell you that the secret of my success, as it must be of any man's, is hard work. I— The Son—Sh, dad! I don't care to hear other people's secrets, and I am too much of a gentleman to take advantage of information gained in that way. Say no more.—Toledo Blade.

Plurals.

There is considerably less reason why the plural of mouse should be mice than why the plural of spouse should be spice. Any bigamist will admit as much.—Puck.

IT WILL REMIND YOU OF THE JAM MOTHER MADE

You remember when you were a little tot how you enjoyed the Jam mother made,—how like the real fruit it tasted—only better because it was sweetened with granulated sugar. That's just the kind we are selling now—only instead of being made by mother—it is made in a great sanitary kitchen from the finest ripe fruit that grows, and sweetened just right with pure granulated sugar.

With new bread or hot biscuit or as a filling for Washington pies, there's nothing that will equal it.

MISS ARNOLD SAID TO BE NEAR GOTHAM

Charge of Larceny Is Placed Against the Heiress

New York, Jan. 4.—Dorothy Arnold, the society girl, for whom search has been made in every corner of the globe at a cost of many thousands of dollars, is said to be alive and well and within a few score miles of New York city.

Although the Arnold family and their attorneys are mute, it is said that private detectives in the employ of the Arnolds have practically located the missing heiress. It is said Miss Arnold was in a Hudson river town, but fled at the approach of the emissaries of her family.

The fact that a charge of larceny has been placed against the girl on the blind blotter at police headquarters is also reported. As Miss Arnold is 25 years old, she is her own mistress, and could not be detained if the detectives should find her. The charge was made to enable them to effect an arrest.

Books of White Goods House Show Alleged Shortage of $150,000

New York, Jan. 4.—Alleging that Percy G. Vanderoef, treasurer of the Van Keuren & Thornton company, white goods, by systematically falsifying the books, has misappropriated $150,000, officers of the corporation called the matter to the attention of District Attorney Whitman.

Following that discovery and a hurried investigation to ascertain the total of the alleged misappropriation, a meeting of the creditors was called. John Tatum and Andrew G. Pierce, as a committee for creditors, were appointed to liquidate the company's indebtedness.

FLAT REFUSAL TO WITHDRAW

Taft Will Stay In Presidential Race to a Finish

NO OBJECTION TO PUBLICITY

Declares That Nothing but Death Can Keep Him Out of Fight Until Last Ballot Is Counted at Chicago—Believes That Country Will Endorse His Administration—Picks Up Challenge of His Opponents

Washington, Jan. 4.—President Taft is in the race to stay. No influence whatever can induce him to withdraw from the presidential fight, whether it be in favor of Roosevelt, La Follette or some unnamed possibility.

This much is positively asserted by the friends with whom the president talked. The president believes the country will indorse his administration, and further believes that the Republican party cannot repudiate him. This is the substance of the statement made by the president to his callers. To one of them he is reported to have said:

"I am in this fight and expect to stay in it to the finish, unless death should interfere." The president added that he had no objection to the statement being made public.

Mr. Taft has told his friends and party leaders from the first that if he should be called upon to stand for re-election he would be glad to do so; that he felt under obligations to the party for having made him president, and was willing to abide by its decision in the convention. He adheres to this position, according to announcements, and will not quit the race until the nominating ballots are cast at Chicago.

The president was urged by a number of his closest friends to make a definite statement as to his position and agreed to do so in the language quoted above. With this statement as their inspiration, it is said, the Taft supporters will begin an active campaign in his behalf at once.

It is stated that some of Mr. Taft's friends have gone so far lately as to advise him to openly break with Mr. Roosevelt, and to challenge the latter to make plain his intentions. The president has declined to do this. The White House has been fairly flooded with callers lately who have brought word to Taft that Roosevelt, so far, has declined to say that he would not accept the nomination if it were tendered to him.

It also has been reported at the White House that Roosevelt believes an organized effort is being made to "smoke him out," and that he declines to be "smoked" either by the Taft or La Follette forces. The president has listened to all these reports with an indulgent smile, but has refused to indicate whether or not he believed them.

The president has been urged for weeks to make a more progressive campaign in his own behalf. He has replied that he did not think political activity comported with presidential dignity. He now has consented that his friends carry forward the fight as vigorously as they desire and he will lend what assistance he properly can.

RYAN WITHOUT FRIENDS

Pleads Guilty When Arraigned on Charge of Murdering Wife

Somerville, Mass., Jan. 4.—Francis E. Ryan, 29 years old, who on Dec. 26 shot his 18-year-old wife five times with a revolver, inflicting wounds from which she died five days later, was arraigned in the police court here on the charge of murder. He pleaded guilty and was remanded without bail, pending action by the Middlesex grand jury.

No one was in court in Ryan's behalf, no counsel, no friends and no relatives. He stood motionless in the dock during the proceedings and apparently was the least interested of those in the room.

FORTY-SIXTH GOVERNOR

Foss Again Assumes Executive Chair In the Bay State

Boston, Jan. 4.—Governor Foss was inaugurated today. A feature of the ceremonies was the presence of the governor's entire family, including George E. Foss, Republican congressman from Illinois, a brother of Governor Foss, and his father, George E. Foss.

In addition to the members of the family, about forty women friends of Mrs. Foss occupied the speaker's gallery. Governor Foss is the forty-sixth governor to have been at the head of the commonwealth.

Bank Cashier Shoots Self

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 4.—Volney E. Armstrong, 35 years old, formerly cashier of the National Bank of Commerce here, shot himself at his home and cannot live. Armstrong, who is socially prominent and reputed to be wealthy, recently resigned as an officer of the bank.

ADDRESS OF GOV. FOSS

any party leader—but to the people of this commonwealth, by whose direct ballots you were nominatel and elected.

Conservation

The commonwealth is the people's property; its assets comprise its public institutions and buildings, the public lands, water-ways, harbors, its natural sources, and all the means of public service. This public property should be managed on modern lines to produce the greatest possible output of public welfare.

Particularly, we must forestall any attempt by private capital to monopolize the water powers of the state, and should make the waste lands a source of public revenue. The state forester states that twenty-five million dollars a year could be derived from our timber alone under a proper scheme of development; whereas at present our timber land is nonproductive because of the absurd system of repeated taxation on standing timber.

The chairman of our fish and game commission says that at a conservative estimate a revenue of five hundred thousand dollars a year could be secured to the state through the conservation and development of the flats owned by the commonwealth and the fostering of the shellfish industry. Legislation to conserve these interests is demanded

Public Business Must Be Standardized by State Finance Board

The state is spending nearly fifteen million dollars a year, under an unbusinesslike and wasteful plan, which does not provide for co-ordinating the various expenses in advance.

The investigation of last year disclosed the imperative need of applying modern business methods to these expenditures; and my own experience as a business man and manufacturer convinces me that such methods are indispensable. Hence, I advocate a state finance board to supervise state and county expenses, to pass upon estimates, to introduce uniformity and efficiency, and to outline for the legislature a fair distribution of annual expenses. We must not mistake complacency for efficiency.

I also recommend empowering the governor to veto specific items in appropriation bills. At present such bills must be approved or vetoed as a whole, even though in part unreasonable and in part justifiable.

A Public Utilities Board

Our present state comissions supervising the public-service corporations have inadequate power today; they were created years ago, with doubtful and divided authority.

A public utilities board, with centralized and increased power, is urgently needed, to take the place of the present railroad and gas and electric light commissions, and to supervise telephone and telegraph service also.

The two powerful commissions recommended above would each produce valuable results; and together they should apply vigorous measures to conserve the public wealth.

Labor

Not only the public and the quasi-public business but corporate business in general and in its relation to labor and the consuming public demand modern methods of supervision by the state.

Willing and well-paid workmen are as necessary to capital as capital is to labor, and the highest business intelligence now recognizes that the common interests of capital and labor far outweigh their differences.

The last legislature met some of the reasonable requirements of labor by giving a right of jury trial in cases of alleged contempt of court in violation of injunctions in labor troubles, and by enacting a workingmen's compensation act, a law limiting the period of work for women and children to fifty-four hours a week, a law for an eight-hour day for public employes, and laws providing pensions to state employes and to laborers employed by the city of Boston.

The last legislature also provided for investigating the matter of a minimum wage for women and children, and "part-time" schooling for working children. You will hear reports of the various commissions appointed last year, on vocational training for the young, a plan to improve prison industry and prevent the sale of prison-made goods in the open market, and a plan to assist workmen in securing suburban homesteads.

These laws and recommendations are an expression of the sound business sense of the community.

The enforcement of labor statutes should now be secured and the plans of legislation already formulated should be developed into law. I recommend the creation of a labor bureau to this end.

The Public Welfare

The interest and duty of the commonwealth do not cease, however, with the protection of labor. General progress depends upon recognizing the necessity of well-being for all.

The care of the unfortunate is the duty of the state. The movement inaugurated last year to bring about the adoption of higher standards of efficiency and the enforcement of more humane methods in our public institutions should be prosecuted vigorously.

All expenditures of public money and all subscriptions of private money for public and private charitable institutions ought to be closely supervised by state authority, as a guarantee that such moneys are expended in a manner best calculated to promote the public welfare. This could best be reached after reorganizing our present state board of charities and making it a supervisory body without administrative duties.

Government is under a moral obligation to extend every opportunity for reform to the inmates of prisons, and to make possible a fresh start in life for every prisoner upon his release. The state prison at Charlestown should be sold, and a new prison constructed with arrangements for the proper classification and separation of prisoners. First offenders should under no consideration be brought into contact with old and habitual criminals. Prisoners should be compensated for their labor at its full value, and their earnings should be paid over to those dependent upon them or retained to be paid to the prisoner himself at the expiration of his term. I recommend legislation to extend the application of the principle of the indeterminate sentence and to develop and put into operation our parole system.

More interest should be taken by the proper state officials, as well as those who are disposed to religious and charitable work, in the individual inmates of the prisons and in their educational training, both general and vocational. The warden of the state prison tells me, that in the nineteen years of his service, no inmate who had been through the prison schools has been recommitted to the prison.

State Aid to Higher Education

The commonwealth cannot ignore the claims of higher education; yet the policy of making grants to private institutions cannot be resumed. I therefore recommend the thoroughly democratic measure of free scholarships, awarded for superior merit and carrying free tuition in any colleges in the state, approved by the state board of education, which the applicants may desire to enter. An appropriation of fifty thousand dollars would provide four hundred scholarships of one hundred and twenty-five dollars each without unduly burdening the finances of the state. We would thus secure the practical results of a state university without needlessly duplicating the splendid educational facilites already at hand.

Also I call upon you to note that, while the state is spending large sums to train up teachers in our normal schools, it does not exercise the right to secure the most desirable graduates for service in the schools of Massachusetts. I believe that as long as the state pays for the training of teachers, its supervision should extend also to the service to be rendered in return to the commonwealth. For if our public schools are to meet adequately their duty of developing the future manhood and womanhood of the state, then the teachers should be held uniformly to the highest standards of ability and character.

A Federal Income Tax

The proposed amendment for a federal income tax has been ratified by almost the necessary three-fourths of the states. In the last legislative session in this state the amendment failed of approval, but I trust that the legislature will no longer withhold its consent.

Reform of the State Tax System

The tax laws of the commonwealth ought to be thoroughly revised. The tax commissioner says that our present system has broken down, and that "we are now imposing the heaviest burdens upon the poor, the helpless and the ignorant." The immediate reform of the tax system is, therefore, the most urgent need of the commonwealth. I shall later communicate to you a tentative plan to which I shall ask your consideration.

Uniform State Action

But our duties do not stop with state issues. The growth of direct representation and popular government opens the way to uniform state laws, and the needs of the people in all states are sufficiently parallel to make such uniform legislation of the utmost importance. In the past the political boss has constituted a barrier to such uniformity, and has caused legislation to be largely shaped up for selfish ends in many states. But today the legislators and the people are directly shoulder to shoulder for mutual good.

Massachusetts has already adopted a greater number of the proposed uniform statutes than any other state, having already ratified seven of such statutes, including a uniform negotiable instrument law, a uniform warehouse receipts act and a uniform sales act, with other important business laws. This principle of uniform action should be rapidly extended to a wide range of matters affecting the general welfare.

I urge you to co-operate with the other New England states for better and more uniform laws in regard to taxation, regulation of railroads and other corporations, and the conservation of our forests, fisheries, water powers and other natural resources.

The Greater Boston

The improvement of our splendid harbor and our transportation service is not only demanded on the general ground of public policy, but it leads immediately toward the realization of a Greater Boston.

The present prosperity of the country could never have been reached without the help of our great centres of industry, transportation and finance. It is our imperative duty to establish such a centre here in New England, for the interests of Massachusetts demand it, and the future of all New England hinges upon it.

In the present metropolitan area of Boston we have the elements of a great metropolis, but these elements are still uncombined and almost unrelated. For seventeen years the legislature has gone ahead with the planning and executing of great metropolitan improvements, but has lavished these upon a collection of disconnected towns and cities which now pay the cost without reaping the material benefit of actual consolidation. Many of these communities have made formal protests against the imposition of assessments for metropolitan improvements for the very reason that their real estate values do not now respond to such improvements. Under a plan of municipal consolidation, all local real estate values would inevitably rise at once and steadily.

To permit the present state of things to continue would be folly, for these local communities, once combined into a Greater Boston, would take rank among the ten greatest cities of the world.

Massachusetts has taken the lead in almost every modern provision for political, industrial and commercial progress; she must no longer ignore the necessity of such a metropolis.

I believe that the towns and cities of this district are now ready to combine their power and wealth to this end.

The last legislature authorized an initial expenditure of nine million dollars to develop a great seaport at Boston, but such a modern seaport, if left unsupported by a solidified metropolitan city and suitable transportation facilities, would mark us out to the world, not in our rightful character as a centre of progress, but as a short-sighted people unfitted by temperament to take our part in the progress of th eworld. It is our duty to enact legislation immediately which will make Greater Boston an actual fact, and give us at once the advantages of metropolitan growth. I call upon you for legislation creating the Greater Boston.

Public Ownership of Transportation Terminals

A greater metropolitan city would result in bringing to the port of Boston the great Canadian trunk lines. The Canadian northwest is fast becoming one of the principal granaries of the world. The commercial growth of our northern neighbor during the next fifty years will approximate our own development during the past half century.

We are entitled to a share in this great development, for the port of Boston is the natural port of Canada as much as it is of New England.

In this connection I advocate the public ownership of docks and water terminals. Furthermore, as a final guarantee for securing the entrance of the great trunk lines of Canada into Boston, I recommend the public ownership of railroad terminals if necessary for that result.

Greater New England and the Panama Canal

The opening of the Panama canal in 1913 will lead to important changes in the routes of the world's commerce; and our great industrial and commercial centres must become adjusted to these changes in advance, in order to profit by them. The effect of the canal upon New England will depend almost wholly upon local activity, energy and foresight.

New England as a unit possesses the capital and skilled labor sufficient for the growth of industry and commerce, and the increase of prosperity to a point as high as that of any people on earth. The development of the port of Boston will give New England the nearest ice-free port and one of the best American harbors for European trade; and the Panama canal will also place us nearer than Liverpool to Yokahama, and nearer for most purposes to the Pacific coast than many of the large inland cities.

Our imperative duty is to bring about this great maritime city and with it the development of all New England; to secure the best possible transportation service, and in every way to prepare for the Greater New England.

Ocean Freights and Money Power

American merchants now pay more than three hundred million dollars a year in freight money to foreign ship owners. This money should be kept in this country. With the opening of the Panama canal, and the increase of our commerce consequent upon an honest tariff and a broad policy of reciprocal trade treaties, the amount of freight money now paid by American merchants and manufacturers will increase. Under such a fiscal system we shall build up an American merchant marine, and thus acquire our share of the world's carrying trade.

The carrying trade is an integral part of a complete national system of industry, and its profits are a guarantee of financial independence and increasing prosperity. Merchant ships rather than warships are the best promoters of commerce and commercial relations of mutual benefit, and the best guarantors of international peace. It was a moderate tariff, the carrying trade and freight money that made New England a great financial and industrial centre, and they will do so again.

Tariff Handicaps Should Be Removed

The foregoing considerations lead us to the most imperative need of New England, and, in fact, the whole country; namely, the removal of the discriminating tariff provisions which impose unfair burdens upon industry and commerce. For example, one hundred years ago Boston was easily the leading port of the country and should be today. Yet in 1910 the imports at Boston were only $129,000,000 and the exports $71,000,000 as against $536,000,000 and $652,000,000 respectively, as New York, and $65,000,000 and $140,000,000, respectively, at New Orleans, the exports of New Orleans being twice as great as those of Boston.

The hope of New England is in increased industrial activity and the production of manufactures, and increased use as a terminal for the importation of the world's products, a centre for their distribution throughout the union, and an outlet for the products of this continent designed for foreign markets.

The barrier to American exports is the tariff on the raw materials of manufactures, the tariff on foodstuffs consumed by American workmen, and the superfluous rates on many articles used by all the people. These duties on imports work as a tax on exports, for they increase the cost of production in this country and make it difficult for American manufacturers to compete in foreign markets. Limited principally to the home market, our manufacturers can supply the demand by working their plants to only 80 percent of their capacity, and they are compelled to make their workmen and the American consumer bear the loss of the difference. The limitation of exports works again as a barrier to imports and as a general restraint of commerce.

The superfluous protection in tariff schedules has favored the formation of monopolies designed to secure the total margin of price between the low price-level, where domestic competition ceases, and the high level where foreign competition begins.

Reciprocity

We must have an absolute reduction in the present tariff rates, and a further special reduction through reciprocal trade agreements with other countries. I believe that this policy will inaugurate a new era of industrial and commercial prosperity for the whole nation. It will secure equitable conditions for the consuming public, and at the same time accord to all legitimate business adequate protection and the fullest measure of development. It will give us a new start for the next one hundred years. We need broader markets and more commerce; and the business experience of the country now points to the policy of a lower tariff and reciprocity as the agency most surely conducive to our national progress. Massachusetts by its verdict in the election has approved these methods, and should, through the legislature, memoralize congress to work for them.

We shall establish reciprocity with Canada as soon as this principle is approached in its proper relation to general tariff reduction, and in a manner which the common sense of both peoples shall approve. Reciprocal trade relations with other countries, not only on the North and South American continents, but also throughout the rest of the world, are equally necessary.

Our wisest statesmen of both parties, since the foundation of our government, have advocated this policy; and it never appealed more strongly at any time to the enlightened intelligence of the country than today.

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

They start from different points and shoot at each other on sight. Sheldon finally wounds and disables Tudor.

"He's right." Sheldon assured her as they swung in behind. "Any weapon was permissible. I lay in the grass where he couldn't see me and bushwhacked him in truly noble fashion. That's what comes of having women on the plantation. And now it's antiseptics and drainage tubes, I suppose. It's a nasty mess, and I'll have to read up on it before I tackle the job."

"I don't see that it's my fault," she began. "I couldn't help it because he kissed me. I never dreamed he would attempt it."

"We didn't fight for that reason. But there isn't time to explain. If you'll get dressings and bandages ready I'll look up gunshot wounds and see what's to be done."

"Is he bleeding seriously?" she asked.

"No; the bullet seems to have missed the important arteries. But that would have been a pickle."

"Then there's no need to bother about reading up," Joan said. "And I'm just dying to hear what it was all about. The Apostle is lying becalmed inside the point, and her boats are out towing. She'll be at anchor in five minutes, and Dr. Welshmere is sure to be on board. So all we've got to do is to make Tudor comfortable. We'd better put him in your room under the mosquito netting and send a boat off to tell Dr. Welshmere to bring his instruments."

An hour afterward Dr. Welshmere left the patient comfortable and attended to and went down to the beach to go on board, promising to come back to dinner. Joan and Sheldon, standing on the veranda, watched him depart.

"I'll never have it in for the missionaries again since seeing them here in the Solomons," she said, seating herself in a steamer chair.

She looked at Sheldon and began to laugh.

"That's right," he said. "It's the way I feel, playing the fool and trying to murder a guest."

"But you haven't told me what it was all about."

"You," he answered shortly.

"Me? But you just said it wasn't."

"Oh, it wasn't the kiss." He walked over to the railing and leaned against it, facing her. "But it was about you all the same, and I may as well tell you. You remember, I warned you long ago what would happen when you wanted to become a partner in Berande. Well, all the beach is gossiping about it, and Tudor persisted in repeating the gossip to me. So you see it won't do for you to stay on here under present conditions. It would be better if you went away."

"A chaperon then"—

"No, nor a chaperon."

"But you surely don't expect me to go around shooting every slanderer in the Solomons that opens his mouth?" he demanded gloomily.

"No, nor that either," she answered with quick impulsiveness. "I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll get married and put a stop to it all—there!"

He looked at her in amazement and would have believed that she was making fun of him had it not been for the warm blood that suddenly suffused her cheeks.

"Do you mean that?" he asked unsteadily. "Why?"

"To put a stop to all the nasty gossip of the beach. That's a pretty good reason, isn't it?"

"No; it is worse than no reason at all. I don't care to marry you as a matter of expediency"—

"You are the most ridiculous creature!" she broke in with a flash of her old time anger. "You talk love and marriage to me very much against my wish, and go mooning around over the plantation week after week because you can't have me, and look at me when you think I'm not noticing and when all the time I'm wondering when you had your last square meal because of the hungry look in your eyes, and make eyes at my revolver belt hanging on a nail, and fight duels about me, and all the rest—and—and now, when I say I'll marry you, you do yourself the honor of refusing me."

"You can't make me any more ridiculous than I feel," he answered, rubbing the lump on his forehead reflectively. "And if this is the accepted romantic program—a duel over a girl and the girl rushing into the arms of the winner—why, I shall not make a bigger ass of myself by going in for it."

"I thought you'd jump at it," she confessed, with a naïvete he could not but question, for he thought he saw a roguish gleam in her eyes.

"My conception of love must differ from yours, then," he said. "I should want a woman to marry me for love of me and not out of romantic admiration because I was lucky enough to drill a hole in a man's shoulder with smokeless powder. I tell you I am disgusted with this adventure tomfoolery and rot. I don't like it. Tudor is a sample of the adventure kind—picking a quarrel with me and behaving like a monkey, insisting on fighting with me—'to the death,' he said. It was like a penny dreadful."

POPULAR NAVAL HERO EXPIRES

Acute Indigestion Ends Career of Admiral Evans

KNOWN AS "FIGHTING BOB"

Sobriquet Bestowed Upon Him by Admiring Nation Was Not to His Liking—Left Naval Academy as a Boy to Go to War, and Achieved Brilliant Success In Whatever He Undertook For His Country

Washington, Jan. 4.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, "Fighting Bob" to an admiring nation, died suddenly late yesterday at his home in this city. Acute indigestion ended the career of one of the most popular officers in the navy.

While in his library at 2 o'clock the admiral was taken ill. Instantly his family sent for Dr. Adams, who found the patient in great pain. After treatment Evans fell into a restless sleep, and it was thought that the danger was passed. Shortly after 4 o'clock, however, he awoke and raising himself with difficulty, announced that he was choking.

"I cannot get my breath," he said, and sank back. At 4:45 o'clock he died, conscious to the end.

One of the iron links that bound the old navy to the new, a commanding figure in each, was Robley D. Evans, who was born in Floyd, county, Va., sixty-five years ago. He did not take kindly to the sobriquet of "Fighting Bob," for though outwardly gruff he was a man of the kindliest impulses. Thus it never was used in his presence by his friends.

But his dauntless courage in times of great emergency; the grim determination with which he faced overwhelming odds and the stoicism with which he bore his wounds and gazed unflinchingly in the face of death made the title so appropiate that as "Fighting Bob" he was known wherever the English language is spoken.

Evans was a mere boy when he was sent to the naval academy at Annapolis. Before he had got far with his studies the Civil war broke out, and throwing his books to the winds he went to sea and was assigned to blockade duty. It was in one of the two attacks made by union forces upon the powerful defences at Fort Fisher, N. C., that Evans received the wound in the thigh that made him a cripple for life. He suffered three other wounds, but as soon as he was discharged from the hospital he again plunged into the fighting and served with great credit.

With the ending of the war there came a period of stagnation, which marked the passing of the old wooden navy. Evans drifted for a time into civil pursuits, although he never relinquished his connection with the service.

A few busy years engaged in duty on the construction board which planned the modern battleships and cruisers, and in several long cruises to try out the result of his brain work on the high seas, brought Evans, then a commander, to the opening of the Spanish-American war. He wanted a battleship, and he got one, one of the best—the Iowa, which represented the latest product of the American shipyards.

When Cervera's fleet made its fatal dash through the blockading ships off Santiago on July 3, 1898, Evans' ship took a notable part in the fifty-mile running fight that followed. For his gallantry in this action he received the thanks of congress and was promoted.

After the war Evans flung his two-starred flag to the breeze on several ships, and was soon the ranking rear admiral of the navy, second in rank only to Admiral Dewey. For several years he was commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron, and it was in this position that he started on the historic cruise of the world.

That brilliant achievement, the first world cruise of an armored fleet of that size and power, fully tested Evans' ability as an organizer and a commander. All that the public knew was that sixteen battleships had made a 25,000 mile cruise; they could not imagine what that meant to the directing mind of the fleet, or the many hours of anxiety spent in poring over charts of harbos for reefs, or planning for supplies of fuel and food and keeping together in contented and happy mood the thousands of men who made up he crews of the warships.

By the time he reached San Francisco the strain had become so severe that he was unable to leave his bed and it was necessary to relieve him from the command at that place.

Active duty terminted for Admiral Evans at that point. It is true he did not go on the retired list until a few months afterward, but never again was he called upon to direct the movements of a ship or a fleet. He retired to his quaint, old-fashioned home in this city and, surrounded by his family, spent in happiness the few remaining years of his life.

NEW ENGLAND BANKS SHOW GREAT GAINS

Record Has No Parallel In Any Other Section of Country

Washington, Jan. 4.—New England's enviable business position, as reflected in the statements of her national banks, is exhibited in a statement of Comptroller of the Currency Murray, which shows that the actual gain of New England bank loans, cash and deposits for the three months ending Dec. 5, 1911, has no other parallel in any other section.

The reserve city of Boston shows gains in loans of $10,700,000, gains in cash of $2,700,000 and gains in deposits of $17,400,000.

The country banks of New England show gains in all these three items also, the total gains for all banks in New England being as follows: Loans, $16,800,000; deposits, $27,500,000.

New York city shows losses in loans of nearly $47,000,000, in cash of nearly $38,000,000 and in deposits of more than $79,000,000. All the other reserve cities of the eastern states report losses in loans, cash and deposits.

BANK CASHIER JAILED

His Son Also Arrested In Connection With Failure

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 4.—H. M. Dearing, cashier of the Albion National bank, which was closed Tuesday, and his son, Palmer A. Dearing, secretary and treasurer of the Cook Manufacturing company, were arrested and brought to this city last night for a hearing before Commissioner Clark.

Cashier Dearing is president of the Cook company, extensive loans to which are said to have precipitated the bank's difficulties.

It is expected that the Dearings will be later taken to Detroit. Although considerable feeling prevailed in Albion against them, there was no violence.

RESPITE IS GRANTED

Governor's Council Gives Phelps a New Lease of Life

Boston, Jan. 4.—Silas N. Phelps has been granted a respite from execution until Jan. 20. This action was taken by the governor's council and no objection was made.

Phelps, who is awaiting electrocution for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Haskins, has received a telegram from Justice Holmes of the United States supreme court, indicating that the writ of error by which it is hoped to secure a stay of sentence and possibly a retrial, has reached him. Holmes says that he has not received a record of the case or the opinion of the Massachusetts supreme court. Lawyer Davenport immediately forwarded the documents.

Letter Carrier Thomas F. Carey, was welcomed back this morning to his regular duties, having been confined at home by sickness since before Christmas.

District Deputy Charles J. Brady and state officers will install the officers of Quincy Council, K. of C., at the annual installation banquet which takes place this evening in Greenleaf Hall.

Mrs. J. J. Burke of Billings road entertained at whist Wednesday afternoon. Miss Maud Read, Mrs. A. H. Hall, Mrs. A. Turner and Mrs. J. J. Burke won the souvenirs, the consolation going to Mrs. E. Swan. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

In the donations to the Quincy Day Nursery as listed in Wednesday's Ledger the Christmas tree which gave the little ones so much pleasure at their festival was accidently omitted. It was sent by the Sunday school of the First Universalist church, through the courtesy of Mrs. T. A. Addison. Money donations of nearly $30 also added to the pleasures of the festival as it furnished gifts and ice cream for the children.

It is seriously announced that an Indian boy would like to be appointed as a page in the U. S. Senate. Some of the members insist that there are a good many young Indians among the pages now.

ONE-CENT 'POSTAGE.

One-cent letter postage is inevitable, according to officers of the United States Post-office Department.

James J. Britt, Third Assistant Postmaster-General, speaking at Cleveland on behalf of Postmaster-General Hitchcock and the department, declared definitely and emphatically that just as soon as a readjustment of postal rates can be brought about, one cent postage will be possible.

The government is making an average profit of sixty-five cents per year from every man, woman and child in the United States, according to General Britt's estimate, through the postal department on the carrying of letters. The department's actual profit is carefully estimated at $62,031,990.65. On the other hand, every man, woman and child, some 94,000,000 of them, is each paying the government a tax of sixty-eight cents per year for the loss occasioned by the distribution of other classes of mail under existing rates that was being estimated at $66,336,662.78.

"The United States post-office touches the door of every person in this country," declared General Britt, in his address. "The department not only carries the pathetic epistle of the wee child who writes appealingly to Santa Claus, but caters directly to every man and woman in every class up to the great business houses which send out millions of letters each year. No other trifling expenditure carries with it so much significance as the purchase and use of a postage stamp.

"There have been many difficult problems which we, as officials, have been brought face to face with, and which we have attempted to solve. Those responsible for the administration of the postal establishment feel that it should receive sufficient revenue to pay its own way. There is every reason why it should be managed so that it will be self-sustaining.

"There are a number of reasons why the government should conduct the post-office and mail-carrying system of this great country. It can carry and deliver mail cheaper than a private corporation. It can make delivery in a shorter length of time. It can safeguard and protect the mails. Since 1885, postal rates have been woefully out of joint. First-class mail, consisting chiefly of letters, has paid enormous profits to the government. On the other hand, other classes of mail have been handled at an equally enormous loss.

"In mailing a letter, all are required to pay two cents, despite the fact that the government can carry it for a little more than half that sum. Users of other classes of mail pay but a fraction of the cost of carrying their product. Why should one class of mail users be required to pay more than others? This has been the great problem the officers of the post-office department have been grappling with. The department has no animus toward any class of mail. It has no desire to antagonize any persons using the mails. It has been inspired by a single purpose—to do its duty towards citizens generally.

"You pay more than eighty cents per pound for carrying letters about the United States, although it costs about half that sum. To correct this manifest injustice, we intend to ask Congress to so adjust other rates as to put them on a cost-paying basis, and then letter postage may be reduced to one cent.

"I certainly believe that one cent letter postage will pay if other rates are adjusted. During the fiscal year 1911, it is estimated that the government made a profit of $62,031,990.65 on first-class mail, while it has a deficit or loss of $66,336,662.68 on second-class mail. On third-class mail it made an estimated profit of $182-184.29, while on fourth-class there was a surplus of $5,601,574.

"If congress will re-adjust rates on the various classes of mail, we will have solved the problem of one cent letter postage. It is an inequality which must be rectified and that speedily. I feel that first-class mail should receive consideration, because one cent is all it is worth to carry a one-ounce letter. Deprive persons of cheap facilities for conducting correspondence and you deprive them of one of the most valuable means for extending intellectual culture.

"The chief reason, however, why one-cent postage should come is a business reason, and that is that we should carry all classes of mail at cost. The officials of the department are seeking to conduct it on that basis, and on no other."

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney Lectures on George Gilbert Shaw

HIS ENVIRONMENT

At the home of Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Goffe street, club women met on Wednesday afternoon for the fifth lesson in modern literature given by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club.

At the last meeting Mrs. Gurney left it to the members to decide whether it should be George Bernard Shaw or Gilbert L. Chesterton. As one or two members preferred Shaw, and the remainder had no preference, Mrs. Gurney gave her talk on Shaw, although personally she preferred Chesterton, and she began by saying that most people say they agree with Shaw, or that they do not understand him, but that Chesterton said he did understand him, and did not agree with him, and that her lecture would be Shaw largely through Chesterton, Bernard Shaw was born in Dublin in 1856, and Mrs. Gurney briefly sketched the environment of his childhood days which could not have been worse for a child of his temperament, his parents always saw the unfortunate, ugly side of life which helped to develop the hard side of his nature, in his early life he had a deep love for music, which was not encouraged, he had a difficult task to make his way in the world. He began as an Insurance agent, later a critic of drama then music and finally a literary critic. He went around in very inconstional dress, gave talks on anarchy and socialism he had a beautifully solft melodious voice. Why! he was a vegetarian and his ideas of a church service were surely out of the usual. Mrs. Gurney said there was no person harder than Shaw to understand it was extremely difficult, beside leaving an uncomfortable feeling—she then gave a resume of Isben, Maeterlinck, the Irish writers and Wilde.

Mrs. Gurney sketched the play "Arms and the man," "The Chocolate Soldier," and read 3d act which although interestly effective, shows no appreciation of romance or love, she then gave Shaw's ideas of war, love, chivalry, etc., which seemed to silently ask the question, What would life contain for us if every one thought as he did?

Mrs. Gurney spoke of "Candida" which was considered by some so fine, and concluded by saying, "It is all right if you don't care for the moral underneath," and of "Mrs. Warren's Confession" which was not received here though it is just what is seen in light opera, and of "Man and superman" which was a bright thing, brilliant in its dialogues. Mrs. Gurney read "How she lied to her husband," most cleverly, in which there are many amusing situations.

There is no doubt concerning the educational value of these lectures—on being informed and up to date—but with that is also the delightful readings of Mrs. Gurney. The next lesson begins those devoted to the novelists. The first will be Arnold Bennett. Mrs. George H. Brown of 154 Elm street is to open her home for the next lesson January 17, at 3.30 o'clock.

Mrs. Egerton Blunt—"But why did you leave your last place?"

Applicant—"I couldn't stand the way the mistress and master used to quarrel, mum."

Mrs. E. B. (shocked)—"Dear me! Did they quarrel very much, then?"

Applicant—"Yes, mum; when it wasn't me and 'im, it was me an' 'er."—Boston Globe.

CONGRESS AT WORK AGAIN

Tariff and Big Appropriation Bills to Be Considered

Washington, Jan. 4.—With the legislative leaders agreed that the session will run far into the summer, the Sixty-second congress has resumed its labors, following the holiday recess. The reconvening of the house found the program in the lower body especially crowded.

Tariff revision will divide time with the big appropriation bills. While the house considers this legislation the senate will debate the Sherwood dollar-a-day pension bill and may reach the bill for the direct election of senators.

The iron and steel schedule will be ready for report by the ways and means committee to the house during the next week.

PLOT AGAINST MEXICO

Ammunition and Explosives Shipped From Our Northern States

New Orleans, Jan. 4.—Evidence of a more widespread revolutionary plot against Mexico than heretofore attributed to the opponents of the Madero administration has come to light in the discovery of the shipment of at least eight carloads of ammunition and explosives from points in Pennsylvania and New Jersey to New Orleans within the past few days.

Secret agents of the Mexican government are working with the agents of the United States, and for the past few days have been keeping four Mexicans and several steamers as well as the gulf ports under close surveillance.

RUSSIA WON'T HURRY IN TREATY MATTER

Inclined to Balk at Proposition of the United States

London, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states that the Russian government has declined to respond favorably to President Taft's intimation, conveyed through Ambassador Guild, that he is willing to enter at once into negotiations for a new treaty to take the place of the Russo-American treaty of 1832, which has been abrogated.

Russia contends that the present time is not suitable for favorable negotiations. This is taken to mean that Russia wants to wait until after the general election for the duma, in which the question of passports for Jews and tariff discrimination against the United States are live issues.

The semi-official newspaper Rossia serves notice on the United States that America, professing the principles of the Monroe doctrine, knows that no government will suffer interference of a foreign country in its domestic affairs.

AS HARLAN'S SUCCESSOR

Swayze of New Jersey Is Added to List of Possibilities

Washington, Jan. 4.—The field of candidates under consideration by President Taft for the vacancy in the supreme court is enlarged by the unofficial announcement that Supreme Court Justice Swayze of New Jersey is being urged for the appointment.

With the addition of Swayze it is admitted that there are three men, any one of whom may be appointed. These are Judge Hook of Kansas, Secretary Nagel and Judge Swayze. The president will not announce his selection until the return of Attorney General Wickersham from Panama next week.

MOTION IS OVERRULED

Superior Court Will Not Grant Retrial to Murderer Spencer

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 4.—Motion for a new trial for Bertram G. Spencer, convicted of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, was overruled by Judge Crosby in the superior court. Counsel for Spencer have until Jan. 20 to file with the supreme court exceptions taken after the jury convicted their client.

A new trial was asked on the ground that the jury failed to consider seriously the insanity plea and because the motions for a change of venue to Worcester and the barring of Springfield men as jurors were overruled.

HUSBAND ABUSED HER

Actress Lulu Glaser Gets Divorce Decree In Chicago Court

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Ralph C. Herz, known on the stage as Miss Lulu Glaser, testified in Judge McDonald's court, where she is suing for a divorce, that her husband not only called her a "barmaid" and a "Bowery" woman, but he choked her.

Herz did not contest the suit, and the court odered the attorneys to prepare the decree. The couple were married in New York city five years ago.

Twenty-Five Thousand Miners Out

Brussels, Jan. 4.—Twenty-five thousand miners have gone on strike in the Borinage district.

COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS

THEIR SEAT NUMBERS

Senator Barnes and Representatives Piper and Leslie were fortunate in being assigned to good committees in the legislature Wednesday. Senator Barnes was assigned as a member of the standing committee of the Senate on Ways and Means, which is one of the most important committees in the gift of the speaker.

For new men Representatives Piper and Leslie also got good committees. The former was assigned to the joint standing committee on Mercantile Affairs and Representative Leslie to the joint standing committees on Harbors and Public Lands and Military Affairs.

QUINCY GYM. GIRLS.

The members of the Quincy Gym. Girls' basket ball team encountered the Randolph High Girls' quintet in St. Mary's hall last evening and emerged from the contest with a 17 to 15 victory. The game was closely played from beginning to end and it was not until the last minute of play that the local girls could be pronounced the winners.

A large number turned out for the occasion and all were highly pleased at the efficiency displayed by the "fair" players. The star of the contest was Miss Frances Curtin, the former Woodward Institute athlete, who secured six baskets from the floor. She was closely pressed, however, by Miss O'Neil of the opposing aggregation, who caged four baskets from the floor and was successful in obtaining five goals from fouls.

Miss Clark and Miss Smith, also played well for the Quincy Girls, while Miss Harris performed creditably for the losers.

The summary:

RANDOLPH		QUINCY GYM.

HYDE PARK VS. QUINCY.

The Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. bowling team faced the five of the local asso- evening and triumphed after a contest evenisg and triumphed after a contest of a most gruelling nature had ensued. Bean, of the local team was the star of the game, securing a mark of 321 for a sum total, and having a pinfall of 129 for a single string. The slump of the local team on the second roll-off caused its defeat. The summary:

HIGH TIDES.

The separation question of the residents of Houghs Neck was brought to mind in no little degree yesterday and today as a result of the action of the tides, Sea street, in the vicinity of the causeway has become almost impassable owing to the high tides which have been prevailing of late. The water at times flows onto the car tracks and causes considerable inronvenienle to trolley users.

On one occasion yesterday it was impossible for the car to go through the water and the occupants were forced to have recourse to the sewer bank and walk to their places of destination. Today, two trips were delayed by the high tide and the people had to use the same method of travel. Considerable comment has been laused as a result and the separationist have rome in for their full share in a joking way.

GIVES TALK ON PLAYGROUNDS

Meeting of Mass. Fields Parents and Teachers Assoc.

NEW CONDITIONS

At the meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' association of the Massachusetts Fields school Thursday evening, Thomas Currier of Waltham, secretary of the State Playground commission delivered a lecture of great interest on the subject of "Playgrounds."

Quoting several authorities on children the speaker proceeded to analyze the composite boy and girl. "I think with Jacob Reis," he said, that "There are no bad boys but there are various degrees of good boys."

We parents are apt to forget that conditions today are wholly changed from those of 50 or 75 years ago when the community was one of open lots and there was the opportunity and necessity of work for the child.

We are apt to think of the child who gets through the high school as fitted for life. There are other ways of getting an education, supplementary perhaps, and one of these is the playground.

It is a place for making boys over into men and girls over into women. The playground is not a place to save a boy from jail but to make character which is one of the great things that count in a man's life.

There are at present three great machines for the development of the child; home, school and church. In view of new standards we need another—the playground.

Here he may learn the meaning of a square deal and a man of character. Here he may learn to measure values by his own experience and interests in a manner he could not from any adult lecture on morals.

The speaker mentioned the development of the gang as a social organism. There are some splendid ones, said the speaker, and the spirit of loyalty in them that demands "no snitching" is the same that makes the patriot die for his country. This should not be suppressed but should rather be trained in the right direction.

Mr. Currier related some amusing experiences in regard to the opening of playgrounds in Waltham some 12 years ago. At present there are 10 playgrounds supervised and supported by the city although it only has 27,000 inhabitants.

They have learned how to deal with the question by experience and

FRIENDS HOLD FORTH IN GALA TIME

A number of friends assembled at the home of Walter J. Ferguson, 33 Fairchild street Thursday evening and participated in an affair of a most enjoyable nature. Songs, jokes and speeches of various kinds held sway throughout the evening, and when the gathering adjourned about ten o'clock the occasion was said by all to have been about the best ever.

Misses Alice M. Igo and Mary Huston kept those present in an appreciative strain from time to time with their piano selections, while the recitations by David Curtin were received with great favor. Wm. Byron, in his usual witty way, caused those present to be in continual laughter as he related funny stories. Alexander McLaughlin sang a few songs in a manner that showed his musical ability.

NEW BILL FOR A GREATER BOSTON

Merges Cities and Towns Within 10 Miles of State House

QUINCY WILL OPPOSE

Quincy will probably strenuously oppose the passage, of what is known as the Greater Boston bill, which was introduced in the legislature Thursday, for it proposes to merge, outright, all the cities and towns, any part of which are within the ten-mile radius of the state house, into a new City of Boston, whether they are so inclined or not.

In the bill which was introduced by Daniel J. Kiley there is no metropolitan district or loose federation such as distinguished the efforts of last year. One big city is created by it, with a mayor at City Hall as its chief executive.

The bill provides that for the annexation of this territory a vote of the total district shall be considered as a unit, and if five-eighths vote in favor, the consolidation shall take place. Under the bill, Brookline, Weston and Winchester, which are among the towns included, could vote absolutely solid against annexation, and it would still go through each town being annexed, if the other communities furnished a five-eighths majority.

It is expected that from the cities of Cambridge, Everett and Chelsea, and the town of Revere, voluntary annexation petitions will be filed, which will mean a great accession of strength for the project.

The communities brought within the limits of the greater city by the bill are the cities of Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Lynn, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Newton, Quincy Somerville, Waltham and Woburn and the towns of Arlington, Belmont, Braintree, Brookline, Canton, Dedham, Hingham, Hull, Lexington, Milton, Nahant, Needham, Revere, Saugus, Stoneham, Wakefield, Wellesley, Weston, Weymouth, Winchester and Winthrop.

Under the plan the area of Boston would increase from 42 square miles to 881, and the population would jump from 670,585 to almost 1,500,000.

REPUBLICANS RE-ORGANIZE

At the meeting held Thursday evening in the rooms on Cottage avenue, the Republican City Committee reorganized with the following officers:

President— Ex-representative Louis F. R. Langelier.
Vice president—Councilman John R. Richards.
Secretary—Hon. John O. Hall.
Treasurer—Henry P. Kittridge.

MASQUE BALL OF THE FORESTERS

All the Well-Known Characters Impersonated at Music Hall

THE COMMITTEE

Music hall was the scène of one of the pleasantest events of the week Thursday evening, when the Foresters of America and Daughters of Viking gave a grand masquerade ball. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the many gay and brilliant costumes, some bewilderingly beautiful, others fantastic and comical lent an air of gaiety and festivity and all entered into the spirit of the occasion with hearty good will. There were lords and ladies, kings and queens, Columbia, Goddess of Liberty, butterfly girls, gypsy maids, demure maidens dressed as quakeresses, others in lace and chiffon covered with spangles, Red Riding Hood, Indian costumes and many others.

At 11 o'clock the unmasking march was formed and amidst many witty remarks and much laughter the merry party unmasked. Hilda Peterson won the ladies' first prize and Gustave Anderson the men's.

The prizes for the most comical costumes were awarded to Miss Emma Larson and M. Hanson.

Wilson's orchestra furnished music for the dancing in their usual admirable manner, winning unstinted applause. Some of the numbers were repeated three and four times. Much credit is due to the following committee.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENTERTAINED

Birthday Party at Universalist Church for Old and Young

GOOD SUM NETTED

The young people connected with the Universalist church entertained from four to six, Thursday afternoon in the vestry in the form of a birthday party. Little tots brought their pennies in small silk bags made expressly for the occasion, and their faces were radiant with smiles.

Mrs. Robert Reed and Mrs. Charles A. Hobart had the party in charge and Rev. Fannie Austin delightfully entertained the children with short stories and readings.

In the evening the older people gathered and a social time was enjoyed. Rev. Fannie Austin spoke informally. Games were played and the whole company united in singing. Refreshments were served the principal feature being a large birthday cake which adorned the centre of the table illuminated with candles. Over $16 were netted for the treasury.

MONTHLY SOCIAL

The monthly sociable of the Wollaston Unitarian church took place in the vestry Thursday evening a large number of the parish attending.

An appetizing supper was served at 6.30 by a committee consisting of Mrs. Frank A. Page, Mrs. F. S. Andrews, Mrs. G. Ernest Carr, Mrs. William Burrell, Mrs. George B. Damon, Mrs. E. G. Howe, Mrs. Henry A. Barnes, Mrs. J. N. Smith, Miss Gladys Howe, Mrs. Edward J. Cummings Mrs. Harrison Loud, Mrs. Alfred H. Richards, Mrs. James B. Geddes, Mrs. Arthur B. Hillman and Mrs. King.

The entertainment opened with the guessing of familiar advertisements, prizes being awarded the winners. A piano solo by Miss Gertrude Lacey was enjoyed and Miss Ernestine Litchfield gave a reading entitled "Colonel Crockett's co-operative Christmas." A duum and piano duet brought the evening to a close.

In charge of the entertainment were: Mrs. Winthrop Southworth, Mrs. Paul R. Brodbeck, Mrs. C. A. Jameson and Miss Mabel Simmons.

This morning was a strenuous one for Mayor Stone for he was besieged all the morning with people seeking appointment to office for themelves or for some friend. His Honor said that he would be glad when ti was all over and appointments made.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

When it comes to Christmas gifts, potatoes at $4 a sack are not to be sneezed at.

The tortoise used to be considered the synonym of slowness, but that was before they set out to jail the packers.

Dr. Wood's Hutchison says four hours' work a day is enough for any man. He must believe it proper to let the women do most of the work.

Detective Burns will have all the work he can attend to in his regular profession, with probably a few magazine contracts on the side.

The commercial travellers are to stop giving tips Jan. 1. We should advise any prudent drummer to put a number of ham sandwiches in his grip against some hungry days to come.

Philadelphia is going to have a business administration, with experts to fill the expert positions and not a single boss or ward politician conculted. That's the way to advertise!

That Georgia expressman who decamped with $10,000 not only got the Merry Christmas he was looking for, but he stands a good chance to get his board bills paid for several other Christmases.

Russia talks about our traditional friendship. Very good, but we dislike to be seen walking down Main street with a friend who occasionally stops to place his spiked brogans on the neck of someone he does not like.

Having exemplified throughout the Christmas season that glorious principle, "When you haven't got a cent spend it," we feel qualified to become chairman of the Congressional appropriations committee.

THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA.

When the normal humanity of American citizens' protests against the darker side of Russian terrorism, it is customary for Russian diplomats to tell us that we are under obligation to Russia for her "traditional friendship."

Meanwhile, Russia's 500 or more spies in this country seem to think we will bear watching. It is related that one night in 1907, Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott delivered an address in New York denouncing Russian tyranny. At 10 o'clock the same evening, persons who made a call at Washington on Baron Rosen, Russian ambassador, found that he already had a full report of the doings of that meeting.

The Slav, dogged and daring by nature, adds to these gifts a mastership at diplomacy. He uses the ceremonial language of courts with convincing finesse. But one should not lay too great stress on the slippery adjectives of the great international game.

The appeal has always been made to Northern statesmen that Russia befriended the federal government during the Civil War. The unanimous vote of the Northern Congressmen for abrogation of the violated treaty suggests that this is regarded as ancient history, also that the North has never regarded this alleged relation as based on sympathy with the Northern attitude toward slavery and the questions growing out of that institution. Russia at that time had a revolution in Poland, and she probably sympathized with any nation having family difficulties on hand, without much analysis of the nature of those difficulties.

Russia did try to bring about mediation in the war of 1812, which was to her credit, though perhaps a desire to get England clear for the fight against Napoleon was an influential motive there.

Russia's remoteness, and the fact that she never had colonies over this way to lead to irritations, has no doubt led to a certain negative friendship for us.

But real international friendship is based on likeness of ideals and temperament. The Russian may wear very correct clothes and show very good table manners when Uncle Sam invites him out to dinner. But to win our real love he must stop saying St' Boy to his Cossack soldiers when they are removing the legs and arms of Jewish women and children.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS

find that the city makes no investment that brings greater returns.

The object of the movement is not to make more star football and baseball players but to get after the retiring boys and girls and develop their physical and moral natures.

The speaker considered the game of baseball a mighty aid in the development of character and in finding the true values of life.

Here they learn to legislate and that in order to play the game they must obey laws or rules. The umpire is the judge. They learn that the fellow who plays clean plays the better game.

They learn the value of team work to quietly do their part and play fair.

They learn that if they lose it does not pay to scold, blame, and "chew the rag" as they call it. They find that you have got to fail once in a while if you would accomplish anything.

The playground develops certain qualities that the school cannot. Among these are leadership, courage and good judgment all of which can be formed to the best advantage through the sports and plays of childhood.

In conclusion Mr. Currier deplored the inconsistency of the parents who are so careful of their children to see that they go to school and Sunday school regularly and yet let them run wild in play and vacation time.

In so doing, said he, you are letting him run wild when his body, spirit and soul are most alive and receptive to either proper instruction or temptation and are careful of him when he's pretty safe. He offered the properly supervised playground as the solution.

During the social hour Alexander MacTear a local budding violinist rendered several solos, accompanied by Miss Gertrude Allen. He received hearty applause for his good work.

NORFOLK COURT BUSINESS.

Norfolk county officers have made their reports for 1911. Registry of deeds, John H. Burdakin, registrar, received 17,429 instruments. The largest number in any month was 1638 in June, and the smallest in February, 1046. The number in 1910 was 16,345; in 1900, 15,317; showing that this year was far in excess of other years.

The attachments were 560. In 1910 there were 473. The land court made 56 decrees; receipts were $1147.08.

In the registry of probate, John D. Cobb, register, there were 1111 new documents. Norfolk superior court Louis A. Cook, clerk, reported 511 civil suits, 212 criminal; 118 divorce 22 equity. Northern Norfolk court, C. D. Sanborn, clerk, reported 287 civil, 52 juvenile.

THE VOICES OF THE NIGHT.

S. E. Arnold.

The voices of the night, so strong and clear
In varied keys arouse the drowsy sense,
What tender memories of a by-gone year
Flood the awakened soul with joy intense.

Old bottles, boot-jacks and the witch's broom
Flying through space without the witch's aid
Threaten to seal the reckless felines doom
Which dared the sacred precincts to invade.

Silence ensues, and to the aching head
May slumber's holy balm its comfort bring,
Hark! from the shelter of a neighboring shed
The nine-lived cats in joy one chorus sing.

Greatly Changed.

"Have you seen Miss Beanpole since she inherited a fortune?"

"Yes. She is greatly changed."

"How?"

"Well, she used to be frightfully skinny."

WORKING OF NEW MARRIAGE LAW

Seattle Man Weds Quincy Girl by Permit of Judge Avery

WAS IN HURRY

The new marriage law which went into effect Jan. 1, whereby a five days' notice of intention of marriage must be given City Clerks is not relished by some, especially by the couples who desire to get married on short notice. Up to the present time City Clerk McGilvray has received several notices of intention to be married, from prospective groms and at the end of five days will issue the permit.

He ran up against one case however this week of a man from Seattle who grumbled considerably at the new law. This gentleman rushed into the City Clerk's office one day this week and asked for a marriage license.

When told that he must wait for five days he muttered something under his breath that would not have looked well in print. To explain he said that he lived in Seattle and that he desired to be married that day as he must leave for Seattle immediately

The new law was explained to him and he was told that if he applied to the Judge of Probate or the Judge of the district court he might get a special permit. He said that he would do this and left City Hall in a hurry. He was unable to connect with Judge Avery that day however but did so Thursday and after explaining the situation he prevailed upon His Honor to issue the necessary document. He then bolted for City Hall and after getting his license inquired the way to the nearest minister. He was told of the residence of those in the immediate vicinity and one of these he sought out.

The groom gave his name as Clement L. Pelley of Seattle, Wash., and the name of the bride as Miss Ada Mae Coffin of 155 Billings road, Norfolk Downs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Coffin.

It is presumed that the happy couple are now on their way to Seattle.

STATE IS SEARCHING FOR MISS EDMANDS

Fiancee of Richeson Must Give Her Testimony if Found

Boston, Jan. 5.—District Attorney Pelletier has issued an official statement in connection with the trial of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson that will set at rest many rumors that flew about the city in connection with this great murder trial. These are the chief points in the statement:

The state is searching for Miss Violet Edmands, the fiancee of Richeson. If found in another state, the district attorney will ask for her extradition as a witness. The district attorney has reason to believe that Miss Edmands is in or near New York.

The trial will proceed on Jan. 15. It will be held on the fourth floor of the Pemberton squae courthouse. The public will be barred, practically, for want of room.

Eight government witnesses have already been summoned.

MAY GO BEFORE CONGRESS

Proposition For World Probe on the High Cost of Living

Washington, Jan. 5.—President Taft may ask the assistance of congress in the effort to solve the problem of the high cost of living by legislative authorization of the United States participating in a world-wide conference on the subject.

Professor Fisher of Yale university, who was delegated to press the matter by the American Economic association, laid the plan before the president. It has been indorsed by many Republican senators and others prominent in official life. The president promised Fisher he would take up the question.

—High prices are not always an evil. You are all trying to get high prices, are you not? Well, you can't get high prices for what you sell, your labor or the products of your labor, unless the man you buy from gets high prices also. Put that in the crown of your hats and bear it in mind. A time of high prices is almost always a good time. It is the time of low prices that is to be feared. High prices are never an evil if they are normal. If no monopoly produces them, they are a good condition, not an evil condition.—Mayor Gaynor in Leslie's Weekly.

Q.—We read in Job ii, 1-7, that the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord and that Satan came with them. Who are these "sons of God?" Was Satan's statement about Job, in the fifth verse, fulfilled? (G. T.)

Answer.—The expression "sons of God" doubtless refers to some on the plane of spiritual existence and not to any on the earthly plane. In Genesis vi, 2, the sons of God there mentioned were of the angels that kept not heir first estate, but left their former habitation (the spiritual realm) and, materializing as human beings, took unto them wives of the daughters of men. (Jude 6; II Peter ii, 4.) During this Christian Era those who become the faithful followers of the Lord Jesus, are called the sons of God (I John iii, 1, 2) and these, having made "their calling and election sure," are to be made like their Lord and become partakers of the divine nature, the highest form of spiritual existence, in the resurrection Satan is a spirit being, and he is represented, allegorically, as appearing in the presence of the Lord with the angels who were obedient to the Most High God. This statement as given in the fifth verse was absolutely untrue, as Job remained loyal and faithful through all of the afflictions that he experienced at the hands of Satan.

Q.—Will you kindly explain the following verses—"Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave here thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift?"—Matthew v, 23, 24. (W. H. E.)

Answer.—These words of the Lord addressed mainly to His followers convey the lesson of strict justice, and of love, to be developed and maintained by those who would be in harmony with the Lord. If any are about to present an offering of service, or worship, or thanks unto the Lord and remember that some one has been wronged by them in word, or deed, or thought; let them leave their offering, and go and make amends for the wrong doing first; be reconciled to the other, and then let them come and offer their gift to the Lord. Coming before the Lord then, in this attitude of kindness and love for others, and a willingness to forgive all wrongs that may have been inflicted upon themselves, and having made amends as far as possible for the wrongs that may have been committed, they may have the assurance that their offerings and prayers will be acceptable.

LITTLE PROFIT IN MEAT

Ninety-Seven Percent of Packers' Profits In By-Products

Chicago, Jan. 5.—By-products yield 97 percent of the profits in the packing business, according to figures given by William D. Miles, formerly general manager of the Armour Packing company in Kansas City, who finished his testimony in the trial of the ten Chicago packers charged with criminal violation of the Sherman law. He gave the company's net profits for 1899 as $202,875 in the dressed beef department, based on the slaughter of 204,820 animals.

An analysis of these figures showed that the company made but 3 cents profit on the dressed meat of each steer killed, but the fat of each animal yielded a profit of 42 cents. The profit on hides was 37 cents a head and on the glue manufactured from hoofs it was 18 cents.

CONFEREES CANNOT AGREE

Election of Senators by Direct Vote Meets Stumbling Block

Washington, Jan. 5.—All hope of agreement between conferees representing the two houses of congress on the resolution providing for election of United States senators by direct vote of the people has vanished.

The conferees on the resolution providing for the constitutional amendment have reached the conclusion that an agreement would be impossible and a report to that effect is expected next week.

The difference between the house and senate conferees is based on a question of congressional supervision. As adopted by the house the resolution placed the control of senatorial elections in the hands of the state legislatures. The senate amended the resolution leaving the control with congress.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

If you are looking for a variety of high class attractions, the best offered in the theatrical field, you must seek the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. Since the opening of this new and beautiful playhouse, the most modern and home-like theatre in Boston, nothing but the highest class attractions have been staged there, consequently when the management announces that on next Monday night Miss May Irwin will open a limited engagement of two weeks only, the house is consistent to the excellent standards it has set itself for. Miss Irwin will appear in a new satircal farce entitled "She Knows Better Now." The play was originally written for "America's Queen of Comedy," and contains every element of that peculiarly adapted style that Miss Irwin possesses. Not only is Miss Irwin provided with an unusually funny vehicle, but her managers, Liebler and Company, have spared neither time nor expense in the careful supervision of her cast and production. It is almost a pity that the engagement cannot be extended longer than two weeks, especially for the reason that Miss Irwin is a prime favorite with the Theatrg-goers.

BOSTON THEATRE.

The instantaneous success of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" at the Boston Theatre was foreshadowed by the stirring reception Eugene Walter's play had met with in the other cities where it had appeared. It is a romantic play that appeals to everyone and this was found to be the case every night of the past two weeks in the packed houses that greeted Miss Charlotte Walker and her splendid company of players. Few plays, if any, have in the long career of the Boston Theatre attracted larger or more appreciative audiences and many that have attended in the past weeks were acquainted with all the characters which John Fox, Jr., has written so entertainingly around and which Charlotte Walker and her congeners have so aptly visualized. Everyone loves June; millions followed her in the pages of the book but the thousands who are now following her on the stage love her more. Miss Walker brings out all of the finer qualities of the primitive mountaineer's daughter while her love story is vitalized as the love story of few book heroines has been before. It is a story which appeals to young and old, to men as well as to women for it is a story of romantic love put on the stage in marvellously beautiful setting and it is by far the best offering of its kind this somewhat pitiable and week-kneed season has meted out to lovers of the drama. As June, the sunnily, sweet and fervid Miss Walker dominates the play. She is alternately shy, rebellious, subtle, simple, unassuming haughty with the mountaineer's pride but never with the slightest trace of crudity in her work. It is a stage picture in a hundred. And her company is superb.

B. F. KEITH'S.

For the second week of the New Year at B. F. Keith's, there is promised one of the strongest all-star vaudeville bills ever seen in Boston. One big novelty and three headliners of international reputation will appear, William Rock, Maude Fulton Clarice Vance, and the Harvard prize play. The last named is a one-act comedy written by Miss Florence J. Lewis of the famous school of dramatic art at Radcliffe, and is entitled "That Case of the Jones." It is of exceptional interest to Bostonians from the fact that Ann Crewe, last seen here in "Over Night," will have the leading role, and she will be supported by a splendid company. William Rock and Maude Fulton, unquestionably the greatest eccentric dancing team in the world, will present their big musical review, which has been creating a genuine furore in New York for the past month. This requires the services of a company of twenty, including a French orchestra of five pieces and a beautiful stage setting. Another world famous star to appear will be Clarice Vance, the "Southern Singer," who is beyond the question of a doubt the cleverest singer of plantation melodies on the American stage. She comes with a brand-new reportoire of songs, most of which were written especially for her by Mose Gumble. Other big features will be Frank Stafford & Co., in "A Hunter's Game," which introduces a handsome Irish setter; Arthur Dunn and Marian Murray, singers and dancers; Warren and Keefe, two original fun makers; Germinal the modern Hercules, and others yet to be announced.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Wizard of Oz" has started on a triumphant career at the Castle Square. Its third week begins Monday, and the demand for seats continues so great that everybody is urged to make immediate application at the box office, or at the branch ticket office at 15 Winter Street. Its run is limited, and there will be plenty of disappointed ones who desire to see it if they delay in the attempt to secure seats. Show, production, and players all come in for a liberal share of the praise bestowed upon "The Wizard of Oz." Mary Young heads them all with her Dorothy Gale, and with George Hassell as the Scarecrow, Donald Meek as the Tin Woodman and Morgan Wallace as King Pastoria, there is a trio of comedians hitherto unexcelled on the Castle Square Stage. And no better artist than Arthur Hill could have been chosen for the Cowardly Lion. He is a master of the art of animal acting, and in his representation of the characteristics of the King of Beasts he shows a skill that is little short of genius.

SUNDAY CONCERTS.

Another and even better Sunday Concert comes off at the Castle Square on Sunday evening. Commendation of each successive program is heard on all sides, and especially may the concerts be praised for their refinement and wholesomeness. They are the very best Sunday concerts that it is possible to offer. Next Sunday evening, there will be new motion pictures on the program, and a half dozen or more refined specialists, musicians and others who are artistic in their respective lines. The entire second balcony is reserved for ladies at 10 cents per seat.

MUST CARRY GOOD WATCHES

Railroad Men Are Compelled to Use Accurate Timepieces.

It may be news to many that the watch of the railroad man is as necessary in modern railroading as the air brake. Without accurate timekeeping there would probably be more accidents than if there were no air brakes. The train dispatcher starts a train at a certain time; he halts it at certain stations at certain times; he side tracks it for a period of varying length; the watch of the conductor on the side tracked train must agree with the watch of the conductor on the express to which he had to give way; each station master along the road checks the time of every train that stops or flies past.

In order that there may be agreement among all these railroad men there must obviously be not only timepieces, but accurate timepieces. There must also be some means of inspecting the timepieces to see if they are accurate and if they agree with some standard. The railroad man is therefore compelled to buy not simply an ordinary watch of reasonable value, but a particularly good watch, a timepiece which is adjusted to heat, cold and at least three positions. These three positions are pendant up, as carried in the pocket; dial up and dial down. Such an instrument will not vary more than thirty seconds a week, which is a good deal more accurate than many scientific instruments of precision used in laboratories. Even human proneness to error is considered in this matter of choosing a good railroad watch, for a lever set watch is preferred to the pendant set watch because there is just the chance that the stem of the pendant set may not be pushed back after setting through an oversight.

On one great line about 5,000 watches, worth on an average of $25 apiece (a low average), are used. If we take into consideration the number of watches that are used on other roads throughout the country it is evident that the value must run up into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In order that the watch may be kept up to a regular standard it must be inspected regularly. There is not only a general time inspector on most railroads, but a staff of local inspectors who are placed along the road at convenient points and to whom the men may resort when they wish to compare their time with the standard time at that place. Once every two weeks the railroad man submits his watch to such an inspector, usually a jeweler or watchmaker by profession.

The inspector gives his expert opinion on the condition of the timepiece. If it needs cleaning he says so and does it; if it is fast or slow he regulates it, and not until it is running with sufficient accuracy is it allowed to escape from his care. A watch's record is kept as if it were a thief. So far as repairing goes, the railroad man is under no compulsion. He need not hand over his watch to any particular watchmaker or inspector for repair, but he can give it to any watchmaker in whom he has confidence. It must, however, be submitted to the inspector before it can be used in actual service.

SERIOUS RELIGIOUS RIOT

Many Hurt as Republicans and Catholics Clash In Lisbon

Lisbon, Jan. 5.—Rioting broke out here when 4000 Republicans attacked 10,000 Catholics who had marched to the residence of the exiled patriarch of Lisbon, Mgr. Bello, to bid him good-bye before he leaves the country. Many were hurt and seventy-five arrests were made.

Later in the day the Portuguese Roman Catholic bishops proclaimed their independence from the government. They were threatened with expulsion on the ground of treason unless they withdrew their proclamation.

Work Resumed In Thread Mills

Pawtucket, R. I., Jan. 5.—The J. & P. Coats thread mills, which closed Dec. 29, have resumed operations on full time. The mills employ about 2000 operatives.

WHEEL PROBLEMS.

"The wheel that turns under the locomotive or the car has a long and queer history," says a writer in the Railroad Man's Magazine, "but the mystery is still with us and whirls its hundred question marks before our eyes every minute of the day.

"Of course every one believes that the edge of the wheel goes around the axle. But does it? Take the end of any spoke near the tire or any part of the tire and on a still, windless night fasten a candle to it; then back off till nothing can be seen but that candle flame.

"Let the wheel revolve slowly, free from the ground. The candle flame makes a circle of fire all right and goes around the axle. Now lower the wheel until it rests on the ground and start ahead. The flame suddenly stops going in a circle and begins to make a wavy line, first high and then low. It goes around nothing at all.

"Men with clear minds can perform the experiment satisfactorily by tying a handkerchief around the tire in daylight, but to do this takes a keen mathematical imagination, because the eye is confused by other moving objects and is not able to see the handkerchief free from these other influences.

"At night the candle flame alone can be seen, so that is perhaps the best time to try the matter out. Tie a torch to a locomotive driver and then send the engine slowly back and forth while the observer is off some hundred feet distant in the dark. The torch does not move in a circle. It simply goes ahead somewhat like a flying machine rising and falling in the wind, coming to a dead stop at its lowest point and going twice as fast as the engine when at its highest point.

"The fact that the bottom of an engine wheel always stands still is more easy to learn than the fact that the top of the wheel moves just twice as fast as the train, but this can be proved easily with a piece of board.

"Take a piece of board, say, ten feet long and lay one end on top of the wheel. Now move the engine forward two feet and you will find that the board has gone ahead four feet, just twice as far as the engine. Lay down the board and tie two pieces of string to the wheel, one at the top and the other at the bottom, where it rests on the ground. Now run your engine forward two feet and see what happens. The bottom string has moved forward, too, but not nearly so far as has the top piece of string, although the ends were even at the start."

Plants Breaking Up an Island.

The layman would scarcely associate great strength with so delicate and fragile a thing as maidenhair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms has been known to lift a large stone. Indeed, plants are on record as having broken the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra, to the northwest of Madagascar, is becoming smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.—Scientific American.

Bathrooms In Paris.

An observant English journalist in Paris has—as a hot weather amusement—made a private census of bathrooms. He calculates that in all the flats and private houses of Paris there are about 2,800 bathrooms. And this writer, lying in his own bath and making another calculation; will bet a bathful of water that he could get up and pitch a cricket ball from the garden about his modest flat this way and that over as many bathrooms. It is a curious little difference of national architecture. And the quaintness of the difference comes with the fact that you see more people in London who look—yes—dirty than in Paris. Even the beggar in Paris is clean in face, finger nails and clothes.—London Chronicle.

He Didn't Know.

"I didn't expect any better treatment than this," said the lady on the pier scanthingly to the inspector whom she suspected of rudeness. "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear!"

"As to that I don't know, madam," said the inspector placidly. "I do not recall any ruling of the treasury department on that point. If you are bringing in any of either you'd better declare them and leave the classification to us."—Harper's Weekly.

The Island of Hongkong.

Hongkong is an island about eleven miles long, with a width of from one to three miles, and consists almost entirely of a series of hills. There is a good road around a portion of the island on the sea front, but the grades up the mountains are too steep for practical automobiling, and the streets generally are not wide enough and not strongly enough constructed to permit the use of heavy cars upon them.

ADVANCED NEW YORK STYLES.

News of Coming Modes That Aids The Buyer—Terry Trimmings—Corduroy—Tailormades and Furs.

All the winter we are to have must come this month—and next. Perhaps to make up for our "Green Christmas" we'll have snow in March as has happened before. The shops pay small heed to the weather outdoors. Whether it snows or blows, or the sun shines bright, January sees the counters piled with a fascinating array of new cottons and dainty Spring dress goods and scarcely a woman lives who can get by without stopping to admire, and often to buy as the wiley shop-keeper knows right well.

EARLY BUYING.

Early buying is not always foolish if one has a definite idea how to use the material, and to make it up so that it will do not only for present wear but for Spring and Summer likewise. Soft clinging fabrics remain desirable. Taffetas have no rustle or stiffness and satins are supple as ever. Crepe-de-chines are fashionable both for dresses, waists and trimmings. One-sided effects are shown on the new models for Spring, as much or more, than at present writing. Sashes fall down the back at the left of the centre, revers and fichus appear over the left shoulder with the other side plain or, at any rate, different; coats have an opening or trimming at one side of the back, and many other plays are seen on this fad.

COATS AND SKIRTS.

Tailored coat suits will have the coat extended below the hips, sloping away from a double-breasted fastening at the front of the waist to a rounded tail at the back. A series of narrow revers replace the cape collar of the winter, and skirts though narrow and straight have more trimmings, and the waist line finishes not higher than the top of a belt on the natural waist and are ended here with stitching. As a rule no belt is worn unless it is a cord or ribbon girdle for only a very slender round figure can stand a belt without the old-fashioned dip in front.

WHITE SUITS.

White suits with a touch of black for contrast promise to remain modish so an investment in a street dress or suit of corduroy is not unwise for the woman who can wear it for all sorts of gay doings the next few weeks, and more generally when warm Spring days arrive. Suits of white serge, ratine and velour-delaine are all in the running, and with these one sees black fox furs, or ermine with the black tails and most frequently a black hat with a touch of white, or band of fur to go with the set worn.

THE CLEVER SHOPPER

The clever shopper can buy now a charming set of first quality for what a cheap set would have cost a few weeks ago, and not only have it for wear this season but for many to come if it is selected wisely. Mink is always staple yet for some reason is marked very low at C. C. Shaynes where I generally go for my fur information, and among the furs made up to stand the hard wear that is demanded for automobile use, reductions are nearly as great. Coats for general wear that completely cover the costume and make the thinnest possible. Leather covered buttons and belts, most of them only half length affairs, are shown in vivid green for trimming purposes. These are used by French makers on the Terry Cloth costumes. The buttons are huge, and sometimes have simulated buttonholes bound with matching leather.

SIGNATURES ON CHECKS.

The Plainer They Are the Less They Appeal to Forgers.

"You ought to sign your check differently, Mr. Blank," said a Chicago bank employee to a depositor whose account runs well up toward $100,000 a year.

"What's the matter with that check?" asked the customer, nettled that, as he thought, it should be intimated he didn't know how to draw a check.

"You misunderstand me," said the teller. "The check's all right. I was referring to your signature. It is just the kind that a forger takes delight in copying. If you will allow me the privilege of saying so, you're liable to meet with loss in that way at any time. Any good penman could imitate it so cleverly you'd hardly know the difference yourself.

"The plainer the signature the less likelihood there is of a crook trying to imitate it," he continued after the depositor had become interested. "In nearly every big forgery of which I ever heard, or in many of them at least, the signature imitated was that of a man who wrote with a flourish or who had some peculiar type of writing that ordinarily would appeal to the laity as hard to imitate. It is a fact that it is a rare occurrence for a big forger to attempt to imitate the signature of the man who writes a plain hand.

"Not long ago I had occasion to tell a friend of mine he stood a chance of having some forger get a good sized check in on him. My friend changed the style of his signature, and a few days later he was asked by a bank to inspect a check which had been presented for payment and to which his old style signature was attached. He had changed just in time. The forger had been practicing on the old signature, getting it down 'pat,' and had not ascertained that the new signature was being used."—Chicago News.

The Yellowstone Wonders.

Dr. Arnold Hague shows that there is a strong contrast between the geological conditions connected with the geysers of Iceland and those of the Yellowstone park. Volcanic eruptions may be said geologically to be still going on in Iceland, while in the Yellowstone such action ceased many thousands of years ago. The Yellowstone phenomena as seen today represent a phase in the evolution of thermal springs. The tendency of a geyser is to develop a hot surface pool, after which explosive action may cease and the geyser, as such, become extinct, but this is a very slow process. Dr. Hague rejects the idea that the cessation of activity in a geyser indicates the dissipation of the original source of heat and ascribes it simply to a shifting of the channel of the ascending waters.

BRIEFS

Mrs. J. Frank Faxon of Adams street is confined to her home by illness.

Mrs. Harry L. Rice of Adams street is among those suffering from a bad cold and is confined to her home.

"Christ's habits of Prayer" is the subject of Rev. Mr. Wiggin's talk tonight at the Wollaston Methodist church. All Welcome.

Mrs. Ivan Chisholm of Washington court is seriously ill and has been taken to the Massachusetts General hospital for treatment.

Mr. Henry O. Studley is receiving the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of his brother who died Wednesday at Lakeport, N. H.

It is rumored that what was known for years as the Horton place on Hancock street at the corner of Russell park has been sold to Henry M. Faxon. The estate is now occupied by Charles H. Johnson and Moreton S. Swallow.

CHRISTMAS AT POND HOME.

Mrs. C. W. Guy of Butler road who recently visited the Pond home which is conducted under the auspices of the King's Daughters of Norfolk county reports she found the inmates happy and comfortable. There are fifteen at the present time who enjoy good health and are able to perform some duty such as sewing and knitting and other little household affairs.

A bountiful dinner was served at noon and all gathered around the table with smiling faces. After dinner they were the recipients of generous gifts, and ladies and gentlemen from Franklin provided an entertainment, consisting of readings, recitations and music, vocal and instrumental, which gave much pleasure and elicited much applause. So it was a happy day for all; to those who gave, those who contributed to the entertainment and those who received. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto me."

Hotter Than He Thought.

The boy whose business it was to answer the telephone rushed into the room of the senior partner.

"Just got a message saying that your house was on fire," he said.

"Dear me!" returned the senior partner in a bewildered sort of way. "I knew my wife was pretty hot about something when I left home this morning, but I didn't think it was so bad as to set the house on fire!"

TAFT CLEARS POLITICAL AIR

Friends of President Are Now In Fighting Mood

HOT SCRIMMAGE IS PROMISED

Roosevelt Cannot Enter Contest Without Putting Up a Battle—Wide Range of Opinion In Regard to La Follette—Majority of His Followers Said to Be Roosevelt Men at Heart and Fooling the Senator

Washington, Jan. 5.—President Taft's laconic "Nothing but death can keep me out of the fight now," has done more to clarify the presidential situation than anything that has occurred lately. It has put his friends in a fighting mood and made it certain that if Theodore Roosevelt is to be an avowed candidate for the nomination, the Republican party will be treated to the greatest battle for preferment at the national convention since the days of James G. Blaine.

The White House has been thronged with men prominent in national politics, like Senator Crane, Chairman McKinley of the Republican congressional committee, Senator Nelson, Senator Brown and many others who are in the habit of learning for themselves at the earliest possible moment just what the facts in a given political situation are.

When the Roosevelt blast struck the White House a couple of days ago the politicians gasped and waited for a word from the president. It came in the pithy declaration that nothing but death could keep him out of the race. Since then the president has conferred with his friends singly and in groups and the attitude of the Taft men can be stated accurately.

They do not believe that Taft has given Roosevelt genuine cause to oppose him, that is is to say, cause of such a character as to afford the country reasonable ground upon which to select another Republican.

They attribute Roosevelt's antagonism more to offended personal pride than to anything else and say that in all its essential features Taft has carried out the Roosevelt program.

The pride of Taft no doubt has been keenly touched by the suggestions made in behalf of Roosevelt, although not by him, that Taft should withdraw in the interest of La Follette or Roosevelt, and now that the president has spoken, his friends have rallied to his support with the statement that if Roosevelt actually is to be a candidate, he will face a fight in his own party as he never has known before.

In fact the militant advisers of the president believe that before the scrimmage is over Roosevelt will see that the voice of the people is not unanimous and that the nomination could not go to him in the only way in which he could bring himself to accept it.

In other words, the Taft politicians believe that Roosevelt is as good as eliminated, if his real intention has been to accept the nomination only as the result of a general call to lead the party to success.

Opinions differ as to the real feeling of the La Follette followers over the Roosevelt agitation. It is flatly declared by some of the Roosevelt men that the La Follette boom has been encouraged for the express purpose of bringing Roosevelt into the field. Nine-tenths of the followers of La Follette are Roosevelt men at heart, and this list includes some of the men who are supposed to have put large sums of money into the La Follette campaign.

Whether La Follette himself or many of his sincere disciples are aware that the Wisconsin senator has thus been making a stalkinghorse of himself is probably the most interesting problem in national politics today. Should it turn out that La Follette really has been fooled or that any considerable number of the La Follette men believe their leader has been fooled, the result would be to make the Republican situation even more chaotic than it is.

The belief in Washington always has been that La Follette himself is not more than one-tenth as strong as the progressive movement, but this impression fails to take into account the immense constituency in the west which knows La Follette only at long range and admires him as one of the most courageous of constructive statesmen.

CONCESSIONS TO PUBLIC

Car Rides For Three Cents During Rush Hours In Toledo

Toledo, O., Jan. 5.—Toledo will have 3-cent fares for two hours in the morning and two in the afternoon, six tickets for a quarter and universal transfers the rest of the day as the result of a temporary agreement, pending franchise negotiations, reached between representatives of the company and city.

The new rate of fare, it is expected, will go into effect within a week.

WRIT OF ERROR DENIED

Steps Taken to Have Sentence of Murderer Phelps Commuted

Boston, Jan. 5.—Four petitions, signed in various parts of Franklin county, have been sent to Governor Foss, praying a commutation of the sentence of Silas N. Phelps, condemned to die in the electric chair.

These petitions will be used to show the expression of the citizens of that county regarding Phelps when the matter comes before the executive council for action.

Phelps was informed yesterday that his writ of error filed with the United States supreme court, as another means of saving his life, had been denied.

He was told that the executive council had granted a reprieve of twenty days and he sent word to Warden Bridges, asking if he could not be moved back into the main prison away from the death house. This the warden refused, on the ground that the respite was of short duration.

LIVES ARE IN JEOPARDY

Factory Inspector Says Rhode Island Shops Are Fire Traps

Providence, Jan. 5.—Charges that the manufacturers of this state are not taking proper precautions for the protection of their employes against fire are made by Chief Factory Inspector Hudson in his annual report submitted to the legislature.

"It is true that various factories and workshop buildings throughout the state have been generally equipped with outside fire escapes," says Hudson, "but this protection is far from being the best.

"I have seen during the winter months these fire escapes so loaded with ice as to render them absolutely impassable. If a fire should break out at such a time great loss of life might result."

ICE BREAKS UNDER A DOUBLE-RUNNER

Four Boys Meet Death In Waters of Contoocook River

East Jaffrey, N. H., Jan. 5.—Four boys were drowned and two others were rescued with difficulty when the ice on the Contoocook river gave way beneath the wkeight of a double-runner sled on which they were sliding. Those drowned were:

Alpha Paradise, aged 14 years; Emery Santese, aged 15; Alfred Robichaud, aged 10; Leon Choulmard, aged 7. The two rescued were Thomas LeFreniere and Raymond Bouvais.

There were five boys on the sled and one boy pushing when the ice gave away, and all were plunged into the waters of the river.

Their cries for help were heard, and while some rushed out on the ice others rang the fire bell. In a short time many persons had gathered along the river banks, but their efforts were only partly successful. At first, it was feared that the two rescued would die also, but after being worked over for a long time they recovered.

Woman Stole About Everything She Could Lay Hands On

Philadelphia, Jan. 5.—Two hundred prayer books, with the names of the owners scratched from the covers, 1000 strings of beads, many of them bearing gold crosses, and a small wagonload of articles of a religious nature were found by policemen in the three rooms occupied by 60-year-old Annie Cooper. All had been taken from the Catholic cathedral on Logan square, according to the police.

"I took off the names lest the hand of God should be against me," said the prisoner, admitting the thefts. She said that she visited the cathedral every day, always attending the 5 o'clock mass, and usually making two or three calls during the afternoon.

BUST OF SHERMAN

Will Be Placed In Niche In Senate Next to Roosevelt's

Washington, Jan. 5.—A white marble bust of Vice President James S. Sherman reached the Capitol yesterday afternoon and immediately will be put in place in a niche close to the main entrance of the senate. It will be located next to the bust of Theodore Roosevelt, who was vice president before he became president.

WHEREABOUTS KEPT SECRET

McManigal is Closely Guarded by Government Sleuths

IS ON WAY TO INDIANAPOLIS

Federal Authorities Fear Act of Vengeance Against Confessed Dynamiter Unless His Movements Are Carefully Hidden—Will Be Ready to Give Direct Testimony Before Federal Grand Jury Next Monday

Indianapolis, Jan. 5.—Ortie McManigal, confessedly a member of the dynamiting staff of John J. McNamara, was not brought into this city last night as was expected, but will reach here in time to testify before the federal grand jury on Monday.

Agents of the department of justice have guarded with great secrecy the whereabouts of McManigal and prepared to prevent the time of his arrival from becoming known.

McManigal, upon whom the government is relying for direct testimony as to the identity of the many men alleged to have been concerned in the dynamiting conspiracy which extended from coast to coast, is somewhere between California and this state. Federal authorities say they fear some act of vengeance against him unless his movements are carefully hidden.

Dispatches announced that McManigal left the county jail at Los Angeles on Monday, but it was learned last night that the detectives entrusted with his transfer to this city planned to bring him here by a circuitous route to ward off possible interference by his enemies.

Oscar Lawler, special government prosecutor, remarked in connection with the secrecy surrounding McManigal's journey: "All the sluggers are not yet dead or caught."

Before the grand jury yesterday appeared half a dozen witnesses. Most of these are said to know the details of the explosions at Peoria, Ills., in the fall of 1910.

HUB DOCK STRIKE IS ON

Committees Call Longshoremen From Work at Midnight

Boston, Jan. 5.—More than 3000 longshoremen of the port of Boston voted last night to strike at midnight on every transatlantic and deep water steamship in, or coming to this city. The men insist on a wage increase of 10 cents an hour, to make the wage 40 cents an hour for day work and 50 cents an hour for night work.

Five different committees went to the several wharves at which longshoremen were engaged loading and unloading vessels and called them from their work.

It is the first time in thirty years that the longshoremen en masse struck in the port of Boston. The last strike was in 1882, when the men went out for a higher wage and a betterment of the working conditions.

ADMIRAL EVANS' FUNERAL

Body of Naval Hero Is Buried In Arlington Cemetery

Washington, Jan. 5.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans was buried today with military honors in Arlington national cemetery, alongside of countless other heroes who have distinguished themselves on land and sea beneath the United States flag.

Escorted by a brigade of midshipmen from the naval academy at Annapolis, a battery of light artillery, four companies of United States marines and two companies of sailors, the body was borne to the cemetery.

The services were held in All Souls' Unitarian church. Nearly all the prominent men in the national capital attended.

NEW MEXICO COMES IN

President Signs Proclamation Admitting Her to Statehood

Washington, Jan. 5.—The formal certificate and returns of New Mexico's first election as a prospective state were placed in the hands of President Taft yesterday. President Taft was much interested, for it was the first time he has had a chance to add another star to the American flag.

President Taft later sent the papers to Secretary of State Knox, who drew the formal proclamation of admission. The president signed the proclamation today.

GOING BACK TO CHINA

Minister From That Country Resigns His Post at Washington

Washington, Jan. 5.—The Chinese minister at Washington, Chang Yin Tang, has decided to quit his post here after a stay of a year and a month. The reason for his decision is as yet unknown.

He will leave the capital next week for China, taking his family with him and leaving Yung Kwai, the first secretary, in charge of the legation.

LETTERS OF MRS. EDDY

Publication or Multiplication Is Illegal, Says Court

Boston, Jan. 5.—Letters which were written by Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy to her cousin in 1876, and which have been advertised for sale at auction by C. F. Libbie & Co., auctioneers, may not be sold. They treat of family and business matters, and the supreme judicial court has enjoined Libbie & Co. from publishing or multiplying or using them for advertising or other purposes.

While the court declares that such letters are under the control of the sender and does not order their return to Henry M. Baker, Mrs. Eddy's executor, it orders that he be allowed to copy them.

MRS. KEEFE IS GIVEN MAXIMUM SENTENCE

Twenty Years at Hard Labor For Killing Her Infant Son

Bath, Me., Jan. 5.—Imprisonment at hard labor for twenty years, the maximum term under the law, was the sentence imposed by Judge Spear in the supreme court upon Mrs. Mildred T. Keefe of this city, after a jury had returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against the woman for causing the death of her little son, 2½ years old. The jury spent four hours deliberating on the case. Mrs. Keefe is 22 years old.

The body of the child was found at the edge of a pond on the outskirts of the city, partly in the water. Mrs. Keefe herself reported the matter to the authorities, saying that while she was walking with the boy he fell off the bridge at the head of the pond and was drowned.

When she took the stand in her own defense yesterday she admitted that her first story of the affair was false and said that having left the child on the road for a few minutes, she returned to find him gone, and later discovered his body.

At her trial her husband, from whom she had been separated, testified that Mrs. Keefe had threatened to drown the child.

DEAD MAN'S DIVORCE CASE

Wife's Application to Have It Reopened Denied by Court

New York, Jan. 5.—Justice Stapleton of the supreme court in Brooklyn denied the application of Mrs. Bessie H. Hunt, the divorced wife of the wealthy turpentine manufacturer, John W. Hunt of Los Angeles, to reopen divorce proceedings. The husband died Dec. 15, 1910. Shortly before his death he secured a divorce on statutory grounds.

Mrs. Hunt sought to reopen the divorce proceedings in the hope the decree would be set aside and she could then claim a dower right in the estate.

"MAJOR" GOES TO JAIL

Arrested on Charge of Impersonating an Army Officer

Boston, Jan. 5.—Benjamin P. Dewitt, a tall, dignified looking man of military bearing, from Culpepper, Va., was placed under arrest here on complaint of the federal authorities in Washington, who charge him with impersonating an officer of the United States army and obtaining money as such.

When arraigned before Commissioner Hayes he pleaded not guilty and was held in $1000 for a hearing. He was removed to Cambridge jail in default of bail.

Stork Brings Four Babies

Hickman, Ky., Jan. 5.—Mrs. J. T. Bivens gave birth to four children, three girls and a boy. All are perfect.

For Winter Wear Call on JONES

The healthy boy—the boy with red blood in his veins—is the boy that will want one of our sweaters and a skating or hockey cap.

Made by the American Knitting Co., they will outwear most of the knit goods put out by some manufacturers. Warm, soft and comfortable, they're just what every boy should have—and the "governor" should have one, too.

The man with the Auto or the owner of a horse should have a pair of our gauntlet Auto gloves and one of those warm caps that can be made into three different styles—one style for blustering days,—one for cold still days—and a style for mild days.

MARK ANTONY'S TRICK.

According to Plutarch, Cleopatra was a votary of the piscatorial art, and so keen did the rivalry become between her and Antony that he resorted to the meanest artifices to insure victory. Mortified and irritated by the queen's superiority, he engaged divers to take live fish and place them on his hook. This was done so expertly that he pulled up fish after fish in rapid succession. Learning in some way the secret of his sudden success, Cleopatra pretended to congratulate him and to admire his dexterity, and at the same time she devised a cunning means of revenge.

Another match was arranged, and the fishing began in the presence of a large company of friends. Antony soon had a bite and pulled up a large salted fish to his great disgust and amid the loud laughter of all present. The secret was out; Antony's trick was exposed, and once more woman's wit had proved too much for man's ingenuity. A diver, specially instructed by the queen, had got the start of Antony's and attached the salt fish to his hook.—Mathews in "Angling."

Money In the Laundry.

"That is money that I have just found tied in the corners of customers' handkerchiefs," he said. "It is strange that with all the purses and hand bags manufactured for the accommodation of women so many of them will still tie their money up in a handkerchief. Sending it to the laundry is funnier still. Every day we dig out a little pile of unsuspected wealth, and many a careless customer gets her laundry back with nearly enough money in the package to pay the bill."—New York Sun.

ADVENTURE

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1910, by Street & Smith

SYNOPSIS

Sheldon, owner of Berande plantatio though desperately ill, overawes and controls 200 head hunting Solomon islanders by force of will and weapons. Chief Selee calls with forty men.

He returns Arunga, a runaway laborer. Sheldon has Arunga and Billy whipped to quell a mutiny. His sickness increases. His partner, Hughie, and many laborers die.

Joan Lackland, a pretty girl, arrives with her crew of Tahitians, Sheldon becomes unconscious, and she takes charge of things.

She is a self reliant American girl, a lover of adventure, a native of Hawaii and an orphan. Her ship has been wrecked. She proves to Sheldon that she can shoot.

She resents his friendly suggestions, and they quarrel. She makes it plain that she is not matrimonially inclined. She and Sheldon save two black women from death.

The savage laborers demand the women. Sheldon attempts to discipline them, and Joan shoots a native and saves his life. She scolds him for making her shoot.

Satan, a savage dog, arrives. Despite Sheldon's warnings Joan goes to explore an island she contemplates buying. Financial difficulties threaten Sheldon.

He falls in love with Joan. Left alone by Sheldon, Joan has trouble with Gogoomy and other natives. Armed savages arrive, and danger threatens Sheldon and Joan.

Joan offers to become his partner. His mention of conventionalities angers her. She needs no chaperon, she says. Sheldon finally accepts her as his partner.

Tudor and Von Blix, gold seekers, arrive on the Martha. Joan and Tudor seem to interest each other. Sheldon becomes jealous.

Joan starts for Australia with her crew to buy a schooner, but stops at Guvutu and buys the Martha, which has been wrecked, for a mere trifle.

Captain Auckland tells how she did it and applauds her cleverness. Captain Oleson tells how she took the Flibberty Gibbet away from him to save the Martha.

Sheldon proposes marriage, but Joan rebuffs him. They agree to continue as partners and friends. They discover a large number of hidden firearms.

Gogoomy attacks Joan, who escapes and warns Sheldon. Gogoomy flees with other savages, and Sheldon pursues. Bushmen murder all of Tudor's party except Tudor.

They start from different points and shoot at each other on sight. Sheldon finally wounds and disables Tudor.

She was biting her lip, and, though her eyes were cool and level looking

"I THINK I DO LOVE YOU, DAVE—OH, DAVE!"

as ever, the telltale angry red was in her cheeks.

"Of course if you don't want to marry me"—

"But I do," he hastily interposed.

"Oh, you do"—

'But don't you see, little girl, I want you to love me," he hurried on; "otherwise it would be only half a marriage. I don't want you to marry me simply because by so doing a stop is put to the beach gossip, nor do I want you to marry me out of some foolish romantic notion. I shouldn't want you—that way."

"Oh, in that case," she said, with assumed deliberateness, and he could have sworn to the roguish gleam—"in that case, since you are willing to consider my offer, let me make a few remarks. In the first place you need not sneer at adventure when you are living it yourself, and you were certainly living it when I found you first, down with fever on a lonely plantation with a couple of hundred wild cannibals thirsting for your life. Then I came along"—

"And what with your arriving in a gale," he broke in, "fresh from the wreck of your schooner, landing on the beach in a whaleboat full of picturesque Tahitian sailors and marching into the bungalow with a Baden-Powell on your head, sea boots on your feet and a whacking big Colt's dangling on your hip—why, I am only too ready to admit that you were the quintessence of adventure."

"Very good," she cried exultantly. "It's mere simple arithmetic—the adding of your adventure and my adventure together. So that's settled, and you needn't jeer at adventure any more. Next I don't think there was anything romantic in Tudor's attempting to kiss me nor anything like adventure in this absurd duel. But I do think now that it was romantic for you to fall in love with me. And finally, and it is adding romance to romance, I think—I think I do love you, Dave—oh, Dave!"

The last was a sighing dove cry as he caught her up in his arms and pressed her to him.

"But I don't love you because you played the fool today," she whispered on his shoulder. "White men shouldn't go around killing each other."

"Then why do you love me?" he questioned, enthralled after the manner of all lovers in the everlasting query that forever has remained unanswered.

"I don't know—just because I do, I guess. And that's all the satisfaction you gave me when we had that man talk. But I have been loving you for weeks—during all the time you have been so deliciously and unobtrusively jealous of Tudor."

"Yes, yes, go on," he urged breathlessly when she paused.

"I wondered when you'd break out, and because you didn't I loved you all the more. You were like dad and Von. You could hold yourself in check. You didn't make a fool of yourself."

"Not until today," he suggested.

"Yes, and I loved you for that too. It was about time. I began to think you were never going to bring up the subject again. And now that I have offered myself you haven't even accepted."

With both hands on her shoulders he held her at arm's length from him and looked long into her eyes, no longer cool, but seemingly pervaded with a golden flush. The lids drooped and yet bravely did not droop as she returned his gaze. Then he fondly and solemnly drew her to him.

"And how about that hearth and saddle of your own?" he asked a moment later.

"I well nigh won to them. The grass house is my hearth and the Martha my saddle, and—and look at all the trees I've planted, to say nothing of the sweet corn. And it's all your fault anyway. I might never have loved you if you hadn't put the idea into my head."

"There's the Nongasela coming in around the point with her boats out," Sheldon remarked irrelevantly. "And the commissioner is on board. He's going down to San Cristobal to investigate that missionary killing. We're in luck, I must say."

"I don't see where the luck comes in," she said dolefully. "We ought to have this evening all to ourselves just to talk things over. I've a thousand questions to ask you."

"And it wouldn't have been a man talk either," she added.

"But my plan is better than that." He debated with himself a moment. "You see, the commissioner is the one official in the islands who can give us a license. And—there's the luck of it—Dr. Welshmere is here to perform the ceremony. We'll get married this evening."

Joan recoiled from him in panic, tearing herself from his arms and going backward several steps. He could see that she was really frightened.

"I—I thought"— she stammered.

Then slowly the change came over her, and the blood flooded into her face in the same amazing blush he had seen once before that day. Her cool, level looking eyes were no longer level looking nor cool, but warmly drooping and just unable to meet his, as she came toward him and nestled in the circle of his arms, saying softly, almost in a whisper:

"I am ready, Dave."

WILD RIDE IN STOLEN ENGINE

Youth Is Held on Charge of Endangering Lives

STARTED FROM WORCESTER

Travels at Record Speed For Nearly Twenty Miles, Finally Crashing Into Boat Train—Passengers Scared and Shaken Up and Engines Damaged—Effort to Check Speed Has Astonishingly Effective Result

Webster, Mass., Jan. 5.—Ralph Jardine, the 18-year-old Worcester lad who took a New York, New Haven and Hartford locomotive from the yards at South Worcester and ended in a smashup at Webster, was arraigned in the Webster district court, charged with endangering the lives of passengers on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. He pleaded guilty before Judge Clark and in default of $2000 bonds was committed to the Worcester jail.

Jardine was wandering about South Worcester when he spotted an engine, with steam up, standing unguarded. A moment later the monster was backing out of the yard full speed, pushing two freight cars ahead. For nearly twenty miles the locomotive went along in this manner, often reaching, operators say, sixty to seventy miles an hour.

Suddenly, after rounding a long bend, the lights of the village of Webster loomed up bright, less than a mile away.

Inside the cab everything was confusion. The chill night air had brought the amateur engineer to some degree of calmness and in less time than it take to tell he had turned every lever in sight in the hope of bringing the engine to a stop.

He closed the throttle, tied down the whistle, clanged the bell, threw on the brakes, opened the sand valves, opened the water-pipes and pushed in the reverse lever. He would have done more if he could, but he saw no more valves or levers to work on.

The result was astonishingly effective. Grinding, shrieking, almost "buckling" under the terrific and sudden change from "full-speed-ahead" to "all-brakes-on," the locomotive lumbered into the village and came to a stop directly in front of the Webster station. The joy-riding engineer expressed his satisfaction in a prolonged whoop.

His glee was soon over, however. The reverse lever was still pushed in. With a jolt and a snort the engine went backward with a bound, took a switch that had been turned a little south of the station just after it had passed, and after running a few yards, plunged into the locomotive of a boat train to New London, which was standing on the other side of the station.

The collision drove the standing boat trainback fully four car lengths, while the wild engine crashed through the other nearly half its length. The flying coals set fire to the express car of the boat train and the local department was called out to put out the blaze.

The jar threw the rear coach of the train off its trucks and nearly a dozen persons were more or less injured. All, however, were able to continue when another train was made up to finish the journey to New London. Jardine was buried in coal to his waist and was the most seriously injured.

Jardine was employed several months in the freight yards in Worcester.

CRAZY OVER RICHESON

Former Pastor of Accused Minister's Parish Goes to Asylum

Boston, Jan. 5.—Information has been received in Boston to the effect that Rev. Archibald A. Mason of the Baptist church at Passumpic, Vt., has been committed to the state hospital for the insane at Waterbury, Vt., as a result of mental trouble produced by the case of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson.

Mason formerly was pastor of Immanuel Baptist church at Cambridge, of which Richeson was pastor at the time of his arrest, and it is supposed that worry over the effect of the case upon the fortunes of the church led to temporary mental derangement.

Gary Resigns Chairmanship

New York, Jan. 5.—Elbert H. Gary has resigned as chairman of the board of the American Steel Foundries owing to pressure of other business. The vacancy has not been filled.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

USING UP COLD BEEF.

MONDAY, blue Monday, the day when the remnants of Sunday's roast are served, would lose half its terrors if the family cook could be induced to try some of the many means of using up odds and ends of cold meat which are favored in French and other foreign households.

Some Savory Dishes.

Escaloped Beef.—Take the leftovers from roast beef and make escaloped beef. Cold boiled beef may be used instead of the roast if you find it more convenient. Run the bits of meat through a chopper, then lay on a baking dish first a layer of meat, then a layer of cracker crumbs and a layer of tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat until the dish is filled, making the last layer one of tomatoes over which bits of butter have been scattered. Bake in a hot oven about forty-five minutes.

Beef Balls.—Mince very fine some cold beef, fat and lean; mince an onion with some boiled parsley, add grated breadcrumbs and season with pepper, salt, grated nutmeg and lemon peel. Mix all together and moisten with an egg beaten; roll into balls, flour and fry in boiling fresh dripping. Serve with fried breadcrumbs.

A Nutritious Stew.

Monday's Stew.—A stew may be made with cold boiled meat. Melt about three ounces of butter over a slow fire into a tablespoonful of flour. Simmer and add some chopped onion and a dessertspoonful of shredded parsley. When this is browned season with pepper. Add half or three-fourths of a pint of good stock or gravy. Let this heat gradually and when it is near boiling add the cold meat which has been cut up into pieces, and before serving add a tablespoonful of catsup.

Using Up Cold Roast.

Roast Beef Pie.—Excellent pie can be made with the remnants of Sunday's roast. Have ready a quart of thin slices of beef and season the meat with salt and pepper. Put it into a deep dish and pour over it a dressing prepared by browning two tablespoonfuls of flour in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add a pint of water and season with salt and pepper. Mash eight hot boiled potatoes. Add to them a cupful of boiling milk, a tablespoonful of butter and salt and pepper to suit the taste. Spread the potato paste over the meat and its sauce, beginning at the sides of the dish and working toward the center. Let the pie bake about half an hour. It is a good plan to spread a little melted butter over the top.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

To the disappointment of a large number who had anticipated an exhibition of basket ball of the first class order, the members of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. teams failed to put in an appearance last evening in St. Mary's hall, with the result that the first and selond teams of the Quincy A. A. opposed each other. As it was, the game provided was a most interesting one and a most gruelling contest ensued before the first team was finally pronounced the winner to the tune of 29 to 22.

The game between the senior team of the local organization and the South End combination had been eagerly awaited and gave every evidence of resolving into a warm struggle, should the two team come togetrer and try conclusions. The Cathedral Y. M. C. A. quintet had recently taken the measure of the local players and for that reason Captain Duggan and his allies were especially desirous of reverting the outcome of the game schedule for last evening.

The recent meeting of the officials of the Greater Boston Basket unfolds the reason why such a state of affairs as is noticeable at the present time exists among the various managements of tre teams now comprising the league. Dissatisfaction is still rampant in the league and unless some favorable action is undertaken at an early date, the inevitable result seems to incline towards disruption. The trouble all took place over the question of allowing the managers of the different teams to select the officials of the league and the failure to reach a satisfactory agreeuent caused Manager Magee of the Cathedral aggregation to withdraw his quintet from the league.

However, it was at first thought that the game carded for last evening in St. Mary's Hall would be played, but the announcement was made yesterday morning to the effect that the Cathedral team was not to play as a member of the Greater Boston Basket ball league. This action may have a tendency to cause others to cease affiliations with the above mentioned league, and if such should be the case, it will prove a serious drawback to the welfare of the local arganization which has already accomplished much in the line of advancing the athletic outlook for this year, in this city especially.

We hope that all petty differences will be determined upon and settled in an amicable way, in order that the fans of the City may be afforded the opportunity to witness the sort of basket ball playing that has already proven a great drawing card. With "Billy" Flynn at the helm, we can feel confidently sure that a good schedule of games will be in order and that the same calibre of playing will be displayed in the future in St. Mary's hall, irrespective of the continuance or the discontinuance of the Greater Boston Basket Ball league.

The basket ball team of the local High school gives every promise of rounding into a formidable contingency. Although none of the star players of last year is in the lineup, the team as a whole can compare creditably with the members who wore the colors of Quincy High on the basket ball court last season.

The work of the forwards was especially commendable in the opening game, and even among the substitutes there aresome valuable players who can becalled into action at any moment and who are able to accredit themselves in a splendid manner. The schedule of games is a good one and the team bids fair to create an enviable reputation before the season is drawn to a close. Of course the elimination of basket ball from the Boston schools has deprived us of viewing many an intereting game at the gymnasium of the local High school, yet there are a number of teams representing school s in the surrounding towns who can offer fine attractions. Coach Arthur Staff has the boys in charge and he expects that a most creditable showing will be made.

And speaking on basket ball, it might be pertinent to call attention to the courtesy and cordial treatment requited all visiting teams. The unsportsmanlike tactics resorted to last evening at Hyde Park inthe game between Hyde Park and East Boston, reflect discredit upon the game itself, not matter what reason, or rather excuse may be offered for having recourse to any methods unebcoming a gentleman. To the credit of all local teams, it must be added that they recognie the jurisdiction of the officials in charge and abide by their decisions at all times, whether they meet with their approval or not.

An athlete is no different from the ordinary person and no matter what pastime he indulges in he is governed by the same etiquette and code of morals which every other person is bound to adhere to in order to assure equanimity.

ANNUAL MEETING SQUANTUM Y. C.

Eleazer F. Drew Elected Commander. Other Officers

PRIZES AWARDED

As a result of the contest for Commodore Eleazer F. Drew defeated his opponent Alex. F. Tobin by a vote of 63 to 34 at the annual meeting of the Squantum Yacht club Thursday evening.

The meeting took place at the winter quarters of the club in the Wollaston Post Office building and on account of the contest on for commodore was probably the most largely attended annual meeting the club has known.

All of the other offices met with little or no competition the name of H. S. Epes being written in for secretary in place of Perley C. Rogers who withdrew.

The following were elected:

Commodore—Eleazer F. Drew.

Vice Commodore—George H. Bean.

Rear Commodore—Herbert D. Gearwar.

Treasurer—Arthur B. Hillman.

Secretary—H. S. Epes.

Measurer—Archie H. Briggs.

Trustee for three years—Frank E. Badger.

Regatta Committee—George H. Bean, James McCarthy, Perley C. Rogers, Harry Hinkley, Stanley W. Ferguson.

The tellers were George W. Glover, William Field and Charles J. Hendrie. Following the announcement of the vote Alex. F. Tobin the defeated candidate in a sportsmanlike speech congratulated Mr. Drew upon his election as commodore and thanked the members for their support.

In turning over the gavel to Commodore-elect Drew, Commodore Hinkley referred to the club as one of the cleanest along the coast, expressing his best wishes for its future prosperity and urging each member to put his shoulder to the wheel. Three cheers and a tiger were given with a will for the retiring commodore.

In a brief speech Commodore Drew thanked those present for his election expressing his intention to carry out to the best of his ability the duties of the office. Alex. F. Tobin was given three cheers for his past services.

A feature of the evening was the award of prizes for the two winning boats in class A the "Barracuta," George W. Glover coming first and the "Warweenock," Herbert D. Gearwar second.

As an innovation gratifying to all concerned was the presentation of watch fobs to the skipper and crews of the two boats instead of the regulation cup. The fobs included a medal of special design with the name of the boat engraved on the reverse side.

It was a source of congratulation that during the past season the club has lead in the races of the Inter-club Yacht Racing Association, annexing 14 first prizes, 10 seconds and 2 blue pennants out of the 4 sailing classes.

The club is planning at an early date to remodel its summer quarters to include a library and other conveniences. Among those present at the meeting was Frank E. Badger the only charter member now belonging to the club and who has held a great interest in the club ever since its organization in 1890.

Among the routine business transacted were the reports of the secretary and treasurer and of the house and regatta committees. Howard Gannett was elected a delegate to the Yacht Racing Association.

Commodore Drew has been identified with the club as a hard worker for a number of years and the past season held office of vice commodore. He is well known locally as an insurance man.

Long Arrow Flights.

There was a marvelous archery feat performed some years ago by Sir Ralph Payne Gallwey on the links at Le Touquet. Shooting with a Turkish bow, he covered a distance of 367 yards with his best arrow, thus breaking all records achieved in recent times. This performance, however, seems to have been exceeded with the old national weapon of yew. Neade, a famous archer under Charles I., states that the ordinary range of the bow was from 320 to 400 yards. The longest shot authentically recorded in England is that of a secretary of the Turkish embassy, who in 1794 shot an arrow 403 yards with the wind and 415 against it in the presence of several members of the Royal Toxophilite society, who measured the distance and preserved the arrow.—Pall Mall Gazette.

ZEBRAS IN AFRICA.

They Are a Fearful Pest and a Menace to Civilization.

Zebras in Africa are a nuisance and a menace to civilization, according to John T. McCutcheon in "Hunting Adventures In the Big Game Country." He says:

Then there's the ubiquitous zebra, almost as numerous as the kongoni. You see vast herds of zebras at many places along the railway, and thereafter, as you roam about the level spots of east Africa, you are always running into herds of them. At first the sight of a herd of zebras is a surprise, for you have been accustoned to seeing them in the small numbers found in captivity. It is a source of passing wonder that these rare animals should be roaming about the suburbs of towns in hundred lots. You decide that it would be a shame to shoot a zebra and determine not to join in this heartless slaughter.

Later on your sentiments will undergo a change. Everybody will tell you that the zebra is a fearful pest and must be exterminated if civilization and progress are to continue. The zebra is absolutely useless, and efforts to domesticate him have been without good results. He tramps over the plains, breaks down fences, tears up the cultivated fields and really fulfills no mission in life save that of supplying the lions with food. As long as the zebras stay the lions will be there, but the settlers says that the lions are even preferable to the zebras.

Under the old game ordinance expiring December 15, 1909, a sportsman was allowed two zebras under his license. Under the new one he is allowed twenty! That reveals the attitude of east Africa toward the jaunty little striped pony.

THE TONIC OF VICTORY.

Army Surgeons Say It Acts Almost as an Anaesthetic.

Bonnette, a French army surgeon, writes in the Presse Medicale of the extraordinary indifference to the pain of operation manifested by the soldiers of Napoleon while the great conqueror was sweeping victoriously over Europe. While the defeated soldier is full of imaginary terrors, subject to panic, madness and treason, the conqueror, on the other hand, is intoxicated with success, says the New York Medical Journal. Nothing, not even the morbific microbe, can resist troops who believe themselves to be invincible.

Victory is the most powerful of restoratives and deepest of anaesthetics. Legless members of the old guard crowded into an ambulance would at sight of the emperor rise on their stumps to salute him. After Eylau Larrey operated uninterruptedly for thirty-six hours, and he reports how the soldiers seemed unconscious of their own troubles, lost in thought of the glory of their leader, and, maimed as they were, lending their best aid to fellow patients.

At Borodino Larrey disarticulated the shoulder of a colonel, who immediately set out for France on foot, where he arrived after three months walking. After fording the Beresina, a river in Russia, General Zayonchek, seventy-five years old, had his kneecap shattered by a bullet. Amputation was performed in three minutes in a violent snowstorm and in bitterly cold weather, yet the white haired officer was placed in a sledge and taken to Vilna, where he died at the age of eighty-six years. Many similar anecdotes are told by our civil war veterans.

Stupid Fish.

Professor Harold Russell, the London zoologist, will have none of the popular yarns about the wonderful things fish will do when put to it. He says they are deaf, dumb and virtually color blind. When the calcareous stones are taken out of the ears of fish they lose all sense of equilibrium and roll about as if crazy. Most fish hunt their food by only defective sight, but the eels by even more defective smell. A conger eel with which Professor Russell experimented devoured with the same avidity fish dosed with cheese, anchovy, camphor spirits, turpentine and iodoform.

HER NARROW ESCAPE

By MOLLIE K. WETHERELL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Pepita was a Mexican girl living with an aunt in southern California. Pepita was an orphan and had inherited a patch of ground, on which the two lived. Near by was another Mexican family consisting of father, mother and one son, Enrique, just coming of age. Enrique and Pepita, being neighbors and there being no other young men and women near by to divert them from each other, naturally loved.

One day a man was seen digging in a patch of ground adjoining Pepita's property. He was an American and, though roughly dressed, gave evidence of being a gentleman. Seeing Pepita standing looking at him curiously, he went over to where she was and asked for a drink of water. Pepita got it for him from a spring back of the house, and the stranger chatted with her. She asked him what he was digging the hole for, and he said he was prospecting. There had been no hunting for the precious metals there before, and Pepita did not understand what he meant.

The stranger came over occasionally after that for a drink of water or to borrow something. He said his name was Thomas Burkhalter; that he was the son of a gentleman in the east. He hadn't got on well with his father and had come out west to shift for himself. Pepita thought him very fine. After looking at his white face Enrique's brown visage was not at all attractive. Enrique noticed a change in her, but was at a loss to account for it.

One day a man came to Burkhalter's hole. He was a well dressed man and wore a diamond stickpin in his neck wear. Pepita saw him and Burkhalter standing together talking and looking over at her house. The stranger went away, and that evening Burkhalter came over to see Pepita. She asked him about the man who had visited him, but Burkhalter was uncommunicative on the subject. One thing Pepita noticed—that he was very attentive and deferential to her.

Burkhalter during the next four or five days did as much courting as is usually done in months, sometimes in years. He quite carried Pepita off her feet. She discovered that Enrique knew nothing at all about making love.

Enrique was much distressed. What could he do? But Enrique had more sense than Pepita and knew a little more about the world, though not much more. At any rate, he had sense enough to suspect that Burkhalter had some motive in devoting himself to Pepita. He went to an old rancher who had always been kind to him and told him his trouble. One day Enrique went to Grigsby, the rancher, and told him that Burkhalter had asked Pepita to marry him.

"That's all talk," said Grigsby.

"No, no," cried Enrique; "they are to be married tomorrow. Pepita does not wish it so soon, but the man insists. She would like to raise a little money so that she may get some new clothes to make her appear worthy of so fine a husband."

Grigsby thought. He was turning something over in his mind. At last he said:

"If Pepita is going to be married she will not need her farm. What she needs is a little cash. I will buy her property. Go and ask her for what she will sell it. But say to her that I will not buy it unless she keeps my offer a secret. You may tell her I will give her $600."

Enrique sorrowfully bore the message and returned with Pepita, who was delighted to get so much money for what was really not supposed to be worth more than half the amount offered. Grigsby drew up the papers conveying the property to Enrique and placed a mortgage on it payable to himself.

"Now," he said to Pepita, "you may tell whom you like that you have sold your farm."

In the evening Burkhalter came to see his fiancee and asked her if she would be ready for the wedding the next day. Pepita said she would and gleefully told him she had sold her property for the enormous sum of $600. Then she showed him the money she had got for it.

He stood looking at her with a blank expression for some time, then told her to put her name on the back of the check and he would ride to a town ten miles distant and draw the money. She must be ready for the ceremony by the time of his return. She did as he bade her, and, leaving her, forgetting the kiss, he departed.

Pepita waited all that day and the next for her lover, but he came not. Nor has he come to this day. Pepita's aunt at last told her that he must have gone away with the money for the farm. What should they do? Their home was sold, and they had nowhere to lay their heads.

Meanwhile Grigsby had gone to the hole Burkhalter had left with experts and had found that Burkhalter had struck a vein of ore too narrow to pay, but beginning to open up in the farm Pepita had sold.

Then came Enrique and showed her his deed to her property and told her that it was likely worth a fortune. And so it was. Grigsby furnished the means to develop it, and it was sold for a large amount. Enrique forgave Pepita and they were married, but the wife never forgot her folly and her husband's common sense.

THE VOCATIONAL TRAINING PLAN

Committee Discusses Three Phases of the Boy Problem

TO PRINT REPORT

The sub-committee appointed to formulate a report on the problem of industrial training for boys, consisting of H. Gerrish Smith, Alexander Russell and Albert L. Barbour met Thursday evening in the school committee rooms. The evening was spent in discussing the problem and it seemed best to present a report covering three phases:—An adjustment of the course in the upper grammar grades to meet the needs of boys to whom academic work offers little appeal; an extension of the present excellent evening drawing school to meet the diverse problems of varying groups; the inauguration of a definitely organized half time industrial school for boys who are going into the industries. On the first phase of the question above named, the report will probably describe the method which is used in Newton, Mass., Cleveland, O. and a few other cities to select groups here and there through the school system as well as the New York state plan which differentiates the work of the public school systems after the sixth year into three separate and yet connected paths, the commercial the manual or industrial and the academic. The report on the evening phase of the work will probably suggest specific courses for groups from the four leading trades in Quincy, the granite, carpenters, machinists and the plumbing and ventilating. The report on the half time school will suggest courses of trades willing to co-operate and detailed ways in which the school may be organized. Each member of the sub-committee will prepare one of the three sections of the report, which will be acted upon later by the sub-committee as a whole and then referred to the main commitee. After final approval, the report will be made to the School Committee and go forward to the City Council. It is probable that the report will be printed in pamphlet form for general distribution as it will be a concrete treatment of local conditions and needs and one which will be of particular interest to individuals and organizations working for civic betterment.

Westerner (in Eastern city)—"Yes I'm getting sort o' tired o' Western life, an' as I'm purty well fixed I says to myself I guess I'll come East an' settle down. Who lives in all them fine houses?"

Resident—"Well, most of those handsome residences you refer to are occupied by eminent lawyers and judges."

"Lawyers? Does lawyers here get as rich as that? By gum! How many is there?"

"Lawyers? Oh, I presume there are about a thousand here."

"My gum! It's goin' ter cost too much to live peaceably here. I guess I'll go back to where folks carry guns."—New York Weekly.

DEATH OF GRAND ARMY VETERAN

HEART TROUBLE THE CAUSE

Henry Chubbuck, a long and well-known citizen of Quincy dropped dead this morning at his home on Chubbuck court. Mr. Chubbuck got up this morning apparently in his usual health. He went down stairs and had just commenced to build a fire when he fell over dead. Medical examiner Jones was notified and pronounced death due to heart trouble.

Mr. Chubbuck was a carpenter by trade but has not been actively engaged in that business for several years. He was one of the original members of the Quincy Reform club and at the time of his death had charge of Faxon hall which was controlled by the club. He was a veteran of the civil war having served in Co. B of the 16th regiment. He was affiliated with Paul Revere Post 88 G. A. R. and had been the chaplain of the post for many years and was again installed as such last Thursday evening. He was also a member of the order of the Golden Cross. He was 80 years of age and leaves a widow and one son, Frank Chubbuck who is connected with the Quincy post office department. His funeral will be held Monday from his late residence.

—Perhaps it is true, as some high school professor out West declares, that the Declaration of Independence has no literary style, but it was read with considerable interest on both sides of the Atlantic something more than a century ago.—Somerville Journal.

COMPLICATED CASE.

A case of unusual occurrence was noticeable in the Superior Court of Norfolk County, at Dedham, yesterday afternoon when the jury found for the defendant in the action of J. Alfred Anderson of Boston against James R. Qualey of this city, to recover damages for the death of Robert Eronen, who was killed while operating a derrick for the Quincy man in 1908.

It seems that Qualey had settled the case with the estate and procured a release in which the name used was Robert Eronen.

Thereupon J. Alfred Anderson brought suit for the death of Tykko Robert Ernonen, which appeared by baptismal certificate to be the full name of the dead man. The medical examiner, City Clerk and others were called to testify, but all asserted that the man was known as plain Robert Eronen.

Judge Stevens was the presiding magistrate, and brought two points before the jury, viz:—as to the identity of the man, and the name by which he was generally known.

The case had been continued since December and developed many interesting features. The judge ordered the jury to bring in a verdict in favor of the defendant.

LEAP YEAR PARTY.

Despite the frigid weather, St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, was largely taxed last evening, on the occasion of the first leap year party of 1912, held in that section of the city. The affair was ushered in under the most favorable auspices and was attended by fully one hundred and fifty couples, including many visitors from different parts of the city and surrounding towns.

Music was furnished by Morrissette's five piece orchestra, under whose direction the event took place. Dancing was in order from eight until eleven thirty o'clock. The committee in charge included Paul Morrissette, musical director, Joseph Morrissette, floor director and the following aids, Peter Morrissette, Andrew Dinegan, Edward Desmond, and Joseph Mullen.

There was a young man from Niantic
Who said the place made him romantic.
Came to Quincy by night
Saw my sign with delight
Then rushed into my office in panic.

He hung around talking all day
While the sun shone, he had to make hay,
Said the lots in Niantic
Did make him so frantic
He from Quincy should not go away.

Y. M. C. A. SPELLS OPPORTUNITY

What the Associations have Accomplished in America

SUNDAY'S MEETING

The past year spelled "Opportunity" with capital letters for the Young Men's Christian Associations of America. But a very small part of this accomplishment can be recorded in this article.

In relation to our coming Americans it has spelled opportunity to 130,000; 40,000 have been met at ports of embarkation and landing; 75,000 are touched by lectures; 15,000 are organized in classes to learn English and Citizenship; 400 Associations share in this work; Association men of two continents join hands and hearts in the service of the immigrant.

TYPICAL CASES.

The only son of a widowed mother comes to improve his chances his money is scarce and he lands with only $7. Deportation awaits him. The secretary comes, finds him work, the young man is landed, and he starts right.

A foreigner goes to Chicago, joins a class in English, secures employment and writes: "Was surprised to receive so much kindness."

In Cambridge, aliens are taught how to vote and this is the comment of one: "I found out I could vote as I want without asking questions from others."

LARGER OUTREACH.

Every port in Europe and America where immigrants are found should have an Association representative; this means twice the number of men. With such a force these new comers could be much more effectually helped than at the present time.

CONSTRUCTION CAMPS.

The construction camp is necessarily a rough place, but no where is the Association more welcome. Thirty miles west of Spokane in a camp of 420 men a secretary conducts an Association work in a temporary building which was furnished by the men at a cost of $600.

Provision is made for the gang of 350 men working at Arrow Rock Dam, twenty miles up a cannon from Boise, Idaho.

Individual employers have found it profitable to pay as much as $200 a month for Association work done by a secretary visiting a dozen camps along fifty miles of railroad construction in Canada.

Railroad companies have given official approval and contributed to the maintenance of Young Men's Christian Association work by a secretary using a passenger coach fitted up for the use of the men. It has made men happier and paid for itself in the increase of dirt moved and steel laid.

The City of Los Angeles contributed generously for the maintainance of Association tents and secretaries along the line of the Owen River Aqueduct. Men were reminded of better things than they usually find in such places.

The United States Government contributes to the maintenance of Associations in the Reclamation Camp service. Results are being obtained similar to those on the Panama Canal and the Army and Navy.

RAILROAD ASSOCIATIONS.

There are now 187 buildings either owned by or set aside for the exclusive use of the Railroad Associations of North America.

Buildings are an essential factor for the most effective working of the railroad work and their necessity has become recognized.

The Railroad Department is the best means that has yet been devised for efficiently and satisfactorily providing for the welfare of the railroad men when absent from home in connection with their business.

SOCIAL OPPORTUNITY.

The Railroad Association affords a great opportunity for social work among the men away from home. It gives the men an opportunity to play the games they enjoy under good influences. This side of the work is often a great preventative to the men.

OPPORTUNITY FOR SERVICE.

The Railroad Department not alone teaches the railroad man the vital lesson that the great thing in life is to really know Jesus Christ, but it teaches also that it is a great thing to help others, and that many men through helping others have come to know Him, whom to know aright is life eternal. The Department offers railroad men an opportunity to bring those of their associates who are fighting desperate battles and living empty lives in contact with the very heart of victory and purpose. It offers them the opportunity to spend leisure hours that would otherwise be wasted in helping their comrades into the Christian life and from the Christian life into Christian service.

What an opportunity the 240 Railroad Associations scattered over North America offer to railroad men. Make these building lighthouses to those in danger, and refuges for those in need.

MEN AND RELIGION.

On Sunday afternoon there will be held in the hall of the Association, a meeting in the interest of the Men and Religion Movement. This will really be the forerunner of the Eight Day Campaign which actually begins in the Boston District on the 13th.

The meeting Sunday will be addressed by Mr. W. M. Danner, secretary of the Mission to Lepers. Mr. Danner was for a number of years a General Secretary in the Young Men's Christian Association. He has served in Louisville and the Denver Associations and is a fine speaker. The meeting will be held at 3.30 o'clock and all the men in the city are not only invited but urged to attend this meeting. There will be good singing in addition to the speaker.

As the time draws near for the Campaign the interest in the Movement deepens. There will be five meetings held in Quincy. They will be held in the Bethany church. The list of speakers has not yet been arranged but at sometime there will be heard some one of the experts on the different lines of work. The name and their subject will be announced in a short time.

MISSING SINCE WEDNESDAY

Police Seeking Mrs. Ball who Disappeared from Norfolk Downs

NO TRACE FOUND

Much anxiety is felt on the part of the relatives and friends of Mrs. Margaret Ball of 437 Hancock street, Atlantic, who has been missing since Wednesday when she suddenly dropped out of sight, and although diligent search has been made no trace has been found.

Mrs. Ball came to America from England several weeks ago and has been making her home with her daughter Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks. Wednesday afternoon she left home to go to a drug store, a short distance away, to make a purchase. She knew the way to the drug store as she had been there at other times and there seems to be no reason who she should have become lost. Not returning after a considerable lapse of time her daughter became alarmed and a search was instituted. The vacant marshes near the Montclair golf links were thoroughly searched as well as the shore along Wollaston beach but without result.

The local police were notified and also the Boston police but thus far all efforts have been fruitless. The cold weather makes her relatives feel even more anxious for it is realized that if she is out in the woods her suffering would be great.

Friday night notice of the disappearance of the woman with her photograph and description were sent to the police of surrounding cities and towns in hopes some trace may be found.

Mrs. Ball is 66 years of age, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed about 114 pounds. She is of light complexion and when last seen wore a black bonnet, black cape and black skirt.

The family and police are utterly at loss to account for her sudden dropping out of sight. Her relations at the home of her daughter were of the pleasantest and when she left to go to the drug store was apparently in the best of health and happy.

ENTERTAINMENT BEING PLANNED

Unity Circle King's Daughter's Arrange for Annual Affair

READING AND MUSIC

Unity Circle of King's Daughters have announced an unusually fine program for their annual entertainment at Bethany chapel on Tuesday evening, Jan. 16th. Miss Irene Bewley, a most charming entertainer, and splendidly qualified for her work, will recite "Polly of the Circus," a delightful play in three acts. Miss Brewley has an enviable reputation all over New England as a successful and pleasing interpreter of scenes from novels and plays. Audiences which have heard her once always want to hear her again, and it is certain that Unity Circle has made no mistake in presenting this popular entertainer.

There will be singing between the acts by the Mendelssohn trio, Irene Chipman Tirrell, first soprano, Emma Schufeldt Moore, second soprano and Alice Gertrude Coe, contralto. These well-known singers have confined their trio work almost wholly to the Women's club meetings and it will please many to have this extra opportunity to hear them.

LETTER CARRIER INJURED.

In endeavoring to see that one of his horses was provided with enough blankets to enable it to withstand the coldness of the weather, Arthur Dunham, the popular Houghs Neck letter carrier sustained a dislocation of his right shoulder early this morning that necessitated the services of Dr. Frederick E. Jones. Mr. Dunham, it seems, was placing a blanket on the horse, when the animal began to display its spirited feeling. Mr. Dunham tried to save himself from any possible danger and in so doing was thrown against the stall.

In treating Mr. Dunham, Dr. Jones made an X ray examination of the shoulder. It is thought that the well known mail carrier will be able to resume work in the course of a few days.

THE CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Choral society's private sale of seats to guarantors ended Friday and the subscription exchange begins today at C. C. Hearn's. The business plans this year have offered excellent opportunities for the early buyer to secure choice seats and the subscription sale should be large.

WEATHER FOR 1912.

According to an old way of forecasting the year's weather it looks as though better weather was to be meted out to us the coming year than for several years past. Beginning with Christmas day the twelve days governing the twelve months have averaged well, the last two certainly being typical of November and December. This forecast is as follows:

January—Pleasant.
February—Pleasant.
March—Cloudy—Rainy.
April—Pleasant—Windy.
May—Pleasant—Windy.
June—Pleasant—Windy.
July—Stormy.
August—Pleasant.
September—Pleasant.
October—Pleasant.
November—Cloudy—Snowy.
December—Snowy.—Pleasant.

—At the beginning of December four-fifths of the excavation required for the Panama canal had been completed. Almost before we know it, vessels will be sailing through.—New Bedford Standard.

NOTICE

The annual meeting of the Corporators of the City Hospital of Quincy will be held at Colonial Hall, on Monday evening, January 15th 1912 at 8 o'clock, for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the transaction of any other business that may come before them.

RICHESON CONFESSES

Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson who was indicted for the murder of the Linnell girl made a confession through his attorneys this noon. He says that he is guilty of the crime charged in the indictment.

BRIEFS

Adjourned meeting of the City Council Monday evening.

The alarm from box 39 at 11.20 Friday night was a false alarm.

The annual reunion of the parish of the Sacred Heart church at Atlantic will be held at Alpha hall, Jan. 23.

A broad smile illuminates the faces of the coal and ice men today for this is the kind of weather they have been looking for.

There will be an address on "Capital Punishment" by the chief electrician at the state prison at Charlestown at the meeting Monday night of the Men's club of the Atlantic M. E. church.

Congressman Curley presented a petition to the Ways and Means committee Friday asking for a reduction of import duty on chilled iron and steel. The petition was presented in behalf of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' association.

The week of prayer is to be observed at the First Presbyterian church with services at half-past seven on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. Rev. W. W. Oliffe of Brookline and Rev. Malcolmn McPhail of Boston will be the speakers.

Mrs. Amanda Clapp, who died at Brockton on Thursday was a sister of Edmund R. Wade of Elm avenue, Wollaston Park. She was born at Fall River, going to Brockton about sixty years ago. She was 76 years old and is survived by four brothers, and two daughters.

The good-will of the weather man is all that is needed now to make gentlemen's night of the Quincy Women's club a splendid success. With this obtained, Monday evening will find one of the happiest gatherings ever held under the roof of the old Brackett mansion on Presidents hill.

Among the suits filed in the Norfolk Superior Court at Dedham is that of George Lee of Boston, who is suing William L. Cook of Quincy for $2,000. Lee alleges that he was riding a motor-cycle on Adams street, Quincy, on Sept. 8, 1910, when Cook's automobile ran into it injuring him.

MAYOR TAKES INITIATIVE

Instructs City Solicitor to Oppose Greater Boston Bill

AN INTERVIEW

Mayor Stone on learning of the proposed Greater Boston bill, which proposes to merge all cities and towns within a radius of ten miles of the state house, into the City of Boston, immediately took the initiative in a movement to oppose the passage of the bill. He instructed the City Solicitor to get into touch with the City Solicitors and town attorneys of the cities and towns, included in the plan, for a conference in relation to the matter, and to arrange to have the City Solicitors who are opposed to the passage of the bill, organize to make a determined fight against its passage.

City Solicitor McAnarney said this morning that acting upon the instructions of the Mayor he had called a meeting of the City Solicitors for this afternoon at which time the question will be considered and steps taken to form a strong opposition to the bill.

This is only another instance where Mayor Stone has been quick to take steps to oppose matters which he believes will work injury to the City of Quincy.

In an interview Mayor Stone said: "I am unalterably opposed to the bill providing for the annexation to Boston of all towns within a ten-mile radius. Annexation of Quincy to Boston would only be a detriment to the former, as Quincy has a future in its waterfront.

"Under the Port Commission this waterfront is to be developed, and this development will come quicker if Quincy remains a city than if she became a part of Boston. Quincy is destined to become a great traffic point and there is nothing to be gained by annexation. As mayor of Quincy I shall do my utmost to prevent the passage of that bill."

WHIST PARTY.

The first public whist party of the Town River Yacht club was held last evening at the clubhouse on Edison park. There were sixteen tables in play, the favors being awarded to Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Cashman, Mrs. Dorley and M. A. Flannagan. It is the intention of the club to hold these parties weekly and all are cordially invited to attend. The next one will be on Wednesday evening.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

In view of the growing independence of domestic servants, the time is not far away when every day'll be Thursday.

There is a general belief that Congress is going to do something but however that may be we feel confident that it will do somebody.

New Year's resolution for all who write for the newspapers: To use two words where formerly you used four, and yet express the idea perfectly.

Although President Taft shook hands with four or five thousand people New Year's day, some people had so little tact as to wish him a Happy New Year.

Considering the brevity of the clothes worn in the wrestling business, it is strange that this form of exhibition does not appeal more forcibly to our stage dancers.

The grizzly bear dance is generally condemned, but the young folks are impatient about holding each other off at arm's length when you can hire a horse and buggy for $2.00.

While the Monday Afternoon Browning club is listening to a scholarly lecture interpreting the meaning of the 734th line of Sordello, the members are anxiously worrying whether Sophy has put bluing enough on the clothes.

There is a general feeling that if the presidential candidates would discuss such subjects as the best way to plant the garden and the most approved method of cooking corned beef hash, they would stand a better chance.

It is pleasing to note with the advance of the new year that rejuvenated life seems to have been infused into the members who comprise the Quincy Board of Trade. While it is best to allow the activities exerted in the past and the results accomplished by those who had the interests of the organization at stake to remain in the balance untrammeled by any adverse criticism, it must be admitted that a lethargic spirit has been too long permeating the energies of the greater number enrolled in the membership of the local organization and the influence displayed has not been near so great as it should be in a city the size of Quincy.

The plan to puncture and dispel the inactivity noticeable in the past on the part of a number is a most feasible and commendable one and the ideas and plans advanced by Delcevare King in the matter are worthy of the utmost consideration and attention. There is no reason, as Mr. King rightly maintains, why the Quincy Board of Trade should not compare favorably, considering the relative sizes of the two cities, with the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

The proposition set forth in an endeavor to make the local organization of much larger value to the City of Quincy bids fair to be productive of most favorable results. In all large cities, the various Boards of Trade are looked up to as guiding influences, potent agents of advance and progress and stepping stones to civic betterment.

The slogan adopted is an ideal one and is greatly typical of the ambitious zeal exhibited by the members of the Worcester Board of Trade, who have just pushed through a plan for the building of a new million dollar hotel and brought about many other improvements of inestimable worth to the city.

We hope and trust that the local organization will increase its numbers and that every member will lend his earnest co-operation and put his shoulder to the wheel with ceaseless acitvity in an endeavor to bring about the many improvements that this "City of Presidents" can well afford to entertain. It will require consistent effort and work of a strenuous nature, if the high anticipations now under consideration were entered upon, and many added improvements will be forthcoming in the interest of business, transportation facilities, playground movements and all humanitarian projects that are of vital concern to the residents of the ctiy.

"LADIES' CHOICE."

The fateful year has now arrived when women may take the initiative in love, a privilege won for them according to tradition when St. Bridget pleaded with St. Patrick for a better chance for her girls. Patrick thought he could get off by giving one year in seven. But Bridget's embraces were too many for him.

"Biddy, acushla, squeeze me that way again, and I'll give you leap year, the longest of the 'lot," and even at that he had to give her a silk dress as consolation for his refusal of her proposal made on the spot.

Although women are said not to do the proposing, they are much like the spider who sits still while the fly enters the widespread web.

These be secrets of shadowy and cloistral parlors and park benches, concerning which we know not. But the festival at least has one notable modern celebration in the leap year dances. Considering the unmannerly selfishness so often seen on the dance floor, we are minded to say that women should make the very most of their privileges during the coming twelvemonth.

Fate distributes favors unjustly in the ball-room. The Scripture truth "To him that hath shall be given" there finds graphic illustration.

Frilly, fluffy, flower faced debutantes are surrounded with suitors knee deep. Meanwhile sager damsels guilty of a few more years and discretion, often very rhythmic and graceful dancers, remain mere wall flowers.

Although the ball-room is supposed to be the culmination of the finer graces of etiquette yet beneath the veneer of low bows and wide smirks mankind shows up as a selfish beast. He rarely looks about him to see which of his friends is begging for a few crumbs of notice from his table, but instead hies him to the favorites of fashion, who fare sumptuously on their superfluity of invitations.

It is often wondered that married people drop out so quickly from the dancing crowd. But it seems hardly worth while to the dignified girl to keep up a campaign of coquetteries, and abase herself to men with whom she has no interest in common.

Dancing is so charming an amusement, that people ought to keep it up until rheumatism retires them. But to make this possible, the privileges of "Ladies' choice" must be extended even beyond Leap year.

SOCCER FOOTBALL RECOGNIZED.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association at its meeting just held in New York formally recognized association or "soccer" football, and named a committee to promote and regulate it. There are many people who think that soccer will be as much of a factor in college athletics in a few years as the present game of college football.

One skeptic at this meeting, the question being asked as to injuries, remarked that the only man ever hurt in soccer was a spectator who laughed himself to death.

And yet this sport draws out a body of 600,000 players in England to take part in regular scheduled matches each week. Thus the game interests and promotes physical development among a far larger number of men and boys than play football with us, where a small body of 22 men with substitutes are the only ones who play in each game.

Soccer has been regarded here as a lady's game, perhaps because during 25 years' play in England there have not been much over half a dozen fatalities. And yet the thing must be interesting, as the final matches draw crowds sometimes exceeding 100,000.

Athletic sports serve their best purpose only as they promote physical development. The trouble with football as a college sport is that it helps the development of only eleven men with their substitutes out of an entire university.

Now there is every reason why men who weigh only 130 pounds need physical development just as much as beefy giants that run up to 200. The fact that a man weighs only 130 is not against him. It is the result of no crime. The faculty of the college and the undergraduates ought to see that he gets an even show. Soccer would give his thin long legs an equal chance with the thick flesh of the heavy weight. It gives brains, agility, dexterity, a value in sport equal to avoirdupois, which is quite desirable.

EDITORIAL POINTS.

That ex-Mayor Shea has taken to the "Stone" business was greatly demonstrated last Wednesday evening at the annual banquet of the Houghs Neck Associates, for when the Mayor himself arose to speak there was nothing left for him to say on the separation question because of the fact that his predecessor had covered it so completely.

Evidently the cost entailed in attending the numerous banquets during the past week will have a tendency to make our "City Fathers" feel favorably inclined toward certain provisions in the newly proposed charter.

Even if Representative Leslie is not successful in having a bridge built over the Neponset river, connecting Boston and Quincy, he will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that his efforts were abridged by the Beacon Hill politicians.

It certainly sounds unseasonable and unnatural from certain view points, but it is now a fact that the much coveted municipal "plums" will be awarded at the next meeting of the City Council. We wonder how long they have been plucked and if any of the old "plums" will be given with the new fruit? In this instance, at least, anticipation seems to be greater than realization.

QUINCY WOMEN ON BOARD.

The Board of Directors of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs have sent out invitations to the chairmen and members of the departments of work to attend a conference at Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Tuesday, Jan. 9, at 2 P. M. The chairmen of departments will speak briefly in regard to their work, and a general discussion will follow. Tea will be served. The Quincy Women's club has a number of representative in the Federation departments. Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney is clerk of the Federation and is also a member of the finance, meetings and literature committees; Mrs. Albert E. Avery is also a member of the literature and library extension committee; Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham is on the education committee; Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, on the public health; Mrs. William G. Shaw on civics and Mrs. Henry W. Tirrell a member of the music committee.

MUSICAL SERVICE.

The Young People's Religious Union meeting in the Wollaston Unitarian church auditorium tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock is of unusual interest. The service is in charge of Mrs. Frank A. Page's Sunday school class A large chorus under musical director E. F. DeNormandie will sing Ballard's 91st Psalm. The chorus will be accompanied by the organ and an orchestra of twelve pieces and the soloists can be counted upon to add much to the pleasure of all who attend. The public is cordially invited.

Government to Abandon Hunt For Fiancee of Richeson

Boston, Jan. 6.—Miss Violet Edmands, the fiancee of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, will not, according to advices from the Suffolk county courthouse, be called upon to appear as a witness at Richeson's trial.

If her testimony is introduced in the trial it is understood that it will be done by deposition rather than orally in the courtroom.

This was stated as being the result of a conference held yesterday afternoon in the office of District Attorney Pelletier, attended by Lawyers Morse and Lee, representing the defense, and the district attorney, representing the prosecution.

As a result of this it is believed that Pelletier will give up the quest for the woman, which has been prosecuted for several days in and around New York city.

Parties to Dock Strike In Boston Have Not Reached Agreement

Boston, Jan. 6.—Boston's longshoremen's strike is still on and practically 3000 men are idle. Mayor Fitzgerald and Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the port directors, tried for hours to effect a settlement, but they failed.

The first of the two conferences began about 11 a. m. and came to an end about 2 o'clock, when it failed, the steamship men's agents refusing to agree to arbitration methods proposed by the longshoremen, and the longshoremen refusing to have the differences settled by the state board of arbitration.

The second conference, at 5 o'clock, did not adjourn until about 7 o'clock. It was as futile as the first conference.

Q.—Inscribed on the old "Liberty Bell" at Philadelphia, are the following words from Leviticus xxv, 10, "PROCLAIM LIBERTY THROUGHOUT ALL THE LAND UNTO ALL THE INHABITANTS THEREOF." Kindly explain the meaning of this expression? (E. D. V.)

Answer.—Every fiftieth year was a Jubilee Year amongst the Jews, according to their law. It was a time of special joy and gladness, in which every man was to return to his original possessions, which may have passed from his hands during the interval from one Jubilee to the succeeding one. Those who had been sold into bondage, according to the customs of ancient times might regain their liberties in the Jubilee Year. The beginning of this year was on the tenth day of the seventh month—the Atonement Day—when the Jubilee trumpets were to sound and the proclamation was to go forth throughout the entire land announcing liberty unto all the inhabitants thereof. All through the year, the land was to rest. Nothing was to be cultivated and the people were to subsist on the crops that had been produced during the preceding year. The Jubilee was a time of restoration of all things, rights, liberties, and possessions that had been lost in times previous to its return. This arrangement was designed of the Lord to furnish a splendid type or picture of "The times of restoration of all things"—Earth's Great Jubilee—when all the rights, privileges and blessings that had been forfeited by father Adam's disobedience will be restored to the entire race. In the dawning of "The times of refreshing that shall come from the presence of the Lord," at the second advent of the Lord Jesus, the glad tidings shall go forth—"Proclaim liberty throughout all the earth unto all the inhabitants thereof."

TROLLEY EXPRESS A SUCCESS.

Looking back over the past year one of the most important events, in so far as it affects the present and the future importance of this section, was the establishment of the extension of the Electric Express service by the Bay State Street Railway Co. between Brockton and Boston, through Braintree, Holbrook, Avon, Randolph and Quincy.

This service, which connected Boston and the territory in between and the great section of southeastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island and eastern Connecticut, where the service has been operated for several years, was opened up in September. It did a very fairly good little business right on the first day. From that time on it has constantly increased, which shows more conclusively than anything else, that the new and additional shipping facilities offered by this service are of the very best character and wanted by the shippers of the district.

The speed of the service, with its frequency, safety and general reliability, has commended it to all shippers and it has proven to be well in advance of the old-time ideas of express and freight transportation. When, with the excellence of the service, the very low rates charged, are taken into consideration the real meaning of this innovation becomes more apparent. The Electric Express has been compared to other express methods as the present telephone and telegraph service is compared with the old mail stage. While it has long passed the stage of an experiment and taken front rank as a sure and permanent success, those who are wise in their forecasts of the future say that it is but in its infancy, that it is to be one of the greatest forces for commercial and industrial progress and development the country has ever known.

In Quincy, the service has been found of great value from the very first day it was operated, when it was to have been expected that a few uneven places might be found. What little troubles there were at first, and they were extremely few, have now all been smoothed out and a service of the very best quality is being given at the very lowest rates.

This city now has four complete services daily in and out of Boston. The cars leave the terminal on Washington street for Boston at 11.10 A. M., 2.15, 4.40 and 7.10 P. M. They leave India Wharf, Boston for Quincy at 8 and 11 A. M., 2 and 5 P. M. With each of these trips there are a pick-up and delivery service at each end.

Bread is the staff of life. PRATT'S BREAD nourishes body and brain.

What are you going to wear to the Twelfth Night Revels? This is the question which is interesting so many people at present. This affair is the jolliest of its kind. Last year everybody joined in making merry and mirth and good nature abounded. It is something out of the ordinary and the lack of formality makes it unique. Mrs. Kitson, does the setting of the throne room and the decoration of the banquet hall. The date is not the exact date for Twelfth Night Revels, but if the night is only fair the sixteenth of January will answer as well as the sixth. The Revels are to be underthe auspices of the Art committee of the Quincy Women's club, subscriptions being received as follows: Mrs. H. H. Kitson, chairman; Mrs. John D. Mackay, treasurer; Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. C. M. Bryant, Mrs. W. H. Doble, Mrs. H. M. Faxon, Mrs. Herbert Lawton, Mrs. S. PATRIOT'S 75TH ANNIVERSARY

ONE OF THE LETTERS

As the Patriot enters upon a new year, and its 76th volume, it wishes to extend its thanks and appreciation to all those who have by word and letter extended congratulations on this its "diamond anniversary." It is pleasant to receive kindly messages of encouragement and good will and to know that our efforts are appreciated by so many. Space will not permit of our publishing all the letters received but one appealed especially to the editors of the Patriot as it came from one long in the newspaper business and a man of fine ability and judgment. It reads as follows:

I have just read with much interest your editorial announcing the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Quincy Patriot, and I wish that I could put into adequate words the thoughts that have come to me—kindly, eulogistic and fraternal as I lay aside the paper and give myself up to the fond recollections that cluster around the past twelve years of my association with my dear friend George W. Prescott, his family and his newspaper. A halo, bright and beautiful rests upon our acquaintance, which began when first I fell in with him and his family upon the editorial trips across and all over our country when we attended the annual gatherings of the National Editorial Association, at the far West and the beautiful South; and when I think of them Mr. Prescott is always a prominent figure in the scenes and pleasures of those delightful days.

But I have not taken my pen to give myself to personal reflections and I will leave him in his quiet resting place and to his many loving friends, while I write about the newspaper which still bears upon its face the imprint of his sign manual in its happy methods of meeting the wants of its subscribers, its clean, clear-cut thoughts, its comprehensive scope, its admirable selections, and the general elegance of its appearance. It is a newspaper that invites perusal. When its weekly issue comes to us it is not thrown aside after I have read it (as I always do with great interest) but it has become a favorite newspaper in a family that knows little of Quincy and its surrounding towns, but who recognize in it, or in some of it features, a thing to be noticed and read. This is no small or unmeaning compliment to any newspaper, in this day when newspapers have become so very common and plentiful. It is with excellent taste that it preserves the good old four-page form and the careful painstaking proof reading and press work that used to preserve our newspapers from the many errors that creep into the hastily printed dailies of modern times. It seems to indicate that you must have a carefully prepared and most desirable daily from which to make up your weekly issue. I occasionally see the Ledger and think I have not misjudged it.

These commendable features of the Patriot are not hastily or casually made. They come from one who has had considerable experience in the publishing of a weekly paper. He began his newspaper career sixty-five years ago, when the weekly papers had the field, and dailies were almost nil, and continued in the same office from early apprenticeship up to the position of editor and publisher, until he gave up his newspaper after being connected with it fifty-seven years. This was the Portsmouth Journal, to which his father had been attached from boyhood to publisher some thirty years before the son entered the office. You can conceive of the pleasure that it gives me to take up such a carefully prepared sheet as the Quincy Patriot, every page of which has something to interest me.

I wish you a successful and happy New Year.

Yours fraternally,
Lewis W. Brewster.

HANDSOME CALENDAR.

Quincy merchants have put out some fine calendars this year but those distributed this week by Berry Bros. certainly lead. For coloring, good taste and utility it is in a class by itself. The subject of the picture above the calendar pad is from the original painting "In Old Pompeii" by Emilio Vasarri of Italy, winner of the first prize of the Florence academy and a yearly exhibitor in the Paris Salon.

You need the Ledger every day.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

FRAUD CHARGE IS PREFERRED

Josiah Quincy, Julian Hawthorne and Others Named

New York, Jan. 6.—Indictments charging conspiracy and use of the United States mails to defraud in connection with an alleged $5,000,000 swindle were returned by the federal grand jury against Julian Hawthorne, author, and son of Nathaniel Hawthorne, the noted writer; Josiah Quincy, former mayor of Boston, and assistant secretary of state under Cleveland; Dr. William J. Morton, a specialist; Albert Freeman, a promoter, and John McKinnon of Brooklyn. They pleaded not guilty and postponement was taken until Wednesday.

Bail was fixed at $10,000 for all except Freeman, whose bail was fixed at $25,000. Francis Wellman appeared for the men and, acting on his advice, they declined to discuss their case with reporters.

Elihu Root, Jr., appeared in court as counsel for some of the creditors of the various mining companies. It was reported that Joseph H. Choate was acting as advisory counsel for Hawthorne and his associates together with Wellman.

The accused men were indicted as the result of an investigation into the stock sales of several mining properties, which was brought about through complaints laid before the postmaster general by friends of Senator Root. The mining properties are:

Temagami-Cobalt Mines Ltd., capital $2,000,000; Elklake-Cobalt Mines Ltd., capital $1,000,000; Montreal-James Mines Ltd., capital $1,000,000; the Hawthorne Silver and Iron Mines Ltd., capital $15,000,000. All of these properties are located in Ontario, Can.

It is alleged in the indictments that not one of these mines ever sold a single ton of ore, but huge quantities of stock were unloaded on the public, mainly through the use of the name of Hawthorne.

Glowing literature, written and copyrighted by Hawthorne, it is alleged, was sent broadcast through the land, telling of the great prospects of the mines. In one instance, it is alleged, a mine was advertised as being in "the thick of the Cobalt district" when as a matter of fact it was twenty miles away.

A selling agency was organized to dispose of the stock, according to the federal authorities, known as the Julian Hawthorne company. Through this agency, the indictments assert, not more than 50 percent of the stock proceeds ever reached the treasuries of the various companies. From the selling agency, the government maintains, this 50 percent went into the pockets of the promoters.

Shares of stock sold at from 30 to 50 cents. Statements that none of the officers received compensation was dwelt upon heavily in the circulars, and it was said that they received no commissions.

Quincy was general counsel for the company. He is said to have been interested in many mining ventures. In 1907 he went into bankruptcy with liabilities of $262,000.

Morton is said to have posed as the discoverer of the mines, while Freeman acted as the promoter, and McKinnon was an officer of one of the companies.

The Hawthorne enterprises have been under scrutiny by the federal authorities for several months. One of them alone, the Hawthorne Silver and Iron Mines company, has obtained more than $15,000,000, it is alleged, from school teachers, ministers and widows in all parts of the country, but principally in New England, where the magic of the names of Hawthorne and Quincy is great.

LAND COURT.

To Frederick G. Hobbs, Edward O Woodward and John C. Bagloe of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Mary H. Murray of New Bedford, in the County of Bristol, and said Commonwealth; William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York; Frank P. Murray of Eddington, in the State of Pennsylvania; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Climena H Drake of North Hampton, in the State of New Hampshire, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Quincy, being lot numbered 259 on a plan of Charles S. Miller, dated April 10, 1890 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book of Plans 13, Plan 565 and bounded Northwesterly by Bass Street fifty feet; Northeasterly by lot 260 on said plan now owned by Frederick G. Hobbs, ninety-four feet; Southeasterly by lot 246 on said plan now owned by Edward O. Woodward fifty feet; and Southwesterly by lot 258 on said plan now owned by John C. Bagloe ninety-four feet. Containing according to said plan four thousand seven hundred square feet.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the fifth day of February A. D. 1912, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

FALSE MOLARS IN STOMACH

Patient Who Swallowed Them Thinks Doctors Are to Blame

Baltimore, Jan. 6.—Whether it is incumbent upon a physician to remove a patient's false teeth before he removes his appendix will be determined in the trial of a suit for $25,000 brought by Clarence R. Bethel against the Union Protestant infirmary and Dr. William A. Fisher, Jr. Jr.

During the operation Bethel swallowed his false teeth. He declares the doctors made no effort to learn whether he possessed false molars. He was unaccountable for his actions while under the anaesthetic, and if he gulped down the teeth while the operation was in progress he is not to be blamed, he declares.

BRIEFS

At the annual meeting of Memorial church Sunday school Wednesday evening the following officers were elected: Deacon W. F. Blake, superintendent; W. F. Cummings, assistant superintendent; Kenneth Blake, secretary; Gordon Sherwin, assistant secretary; W. N. Ware, treasurer; Fred M. Burdett, auditor; Leslie Arthur and Clifton Young, librarians. The Sunday school treasury was in excellent condition. One hundred dollars was voted to the organ fund and ten dollars to the Congregational Church Union of Boston. The school also plans a missionary lecture by the son of Rev. F. E. Emerich, D. D., of Boston who is home on a furlough from Turkey.

The Walther Men's class will meet Sunday at 12.15 in the Wollaston Baptist church. At this session, a series of discussion on the greatest life of all history will be begun. All men not in other similar classes invited.

The Hodges Drug Co., at East Milton has taken the agency for the Quincy Patriot and each Saturday morning patrons will find the Patriot on sale there.

A special parish meeting has been called by First church for Jan. 22. The annual meeting comes in March.

A moving picture entertainment of a fine order is to be given on Tuesday evening for the children of the Sunday school of the Park and Downs church. Adults may also attend for a small admission fee.

The annual meeting of Reaper's circle of Christ church is to be held Friday evening at the home of Miss Pollock, 32 Bigelow street.

The date of the January meeting of the Wollaston Parents-Teachers' association has been changed from Monday to Tuesday evening, Jan. 9th, when Dr. W. D. Parkinson, superintendent of schools of Waltham, will speak on "Sex Education."

New games have been added to the equipment of the Boys' club of Christ church. Mr. Halvosa is coaching the boys for their annual play.

The Milton Firemen's Relief Association is making arrangements for its annual ball to be held in the Town hall early in February. The plans are in charge of M. Joseph Manning, Percy E. Bates, Benjamin Murray and Frank Splaine.

Rev. F. B. Allen, superintendent of the Episcopal city mission in Boston is to preach Sunday morning at Christ church.

Special religious services will be held at the Wollaston M. E. church all next week, except Monday and Saturday, at 7.45. The pastor Rev. Wesley Wiggin is preparing a good program for each of the four evenings. There will be special music and good singing at each service. All welcome.

The annual meeting of the National Granite Bank will be held in the banking rooms Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock.

Rev. E. W. Whitney of Waltham, well known to many Quincy people, is to preach at First church Sunday morning and give a sermon appropriate to the New Year.

The Wollaston Unitarian club meets January 9, with dinner at 6.30 followed by an address on the "Ratification of the General Arbitration Treaties" by Rev. Edward Cummings of Cambridge.

Rev. Dudley H. Ferrell of Brockton is to address the meeting of the Y. P. R. U. of First church on Sunday evening. Mr. Ferrell is president of the National Union and one of the most earnest of the young Unitarian pastors.

BRIEFS

Rev. Asher Anderson, D. D., is to preach at Bethany church Sunday morning.

At the meeting of the Y. P. R. U. of the Wollaston Unitarian church Sunday evening at seven o'clock the ballads of the 91st Psalm will be sung by a chorus, assisted by organ and an orchestra of twelve pieces. The meeting will be in the church auditorium.

It has been a week of feasting with banquets, suppers and dinners of various clubs and organizaitons.

Rev. J. L. Crane of Wakefield to whom the Calvary Baptist church of this city has extended a call will preach at the church Sunday morning and evening.

The Royal Daughters wish all their members to start the new year right Sunday by attending their meeting at the Wollaston M. E. church at 12. All women invited. Mrs. Wiggin, teacher. The Murray class for young men and the Wiggin class for older men, meet at the same hour. All men not attending any other school invited. The Reds have conquered the Whites for the time being in the Epworth League. Let both sides be represented Sunday by a full house. There will be a praise service.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Boston Beats Rest of Country as Postal Savings Centre—High Winds Reveal Low Condition of Chivalry among Many Hubbite Men—Tale of a Swampscott Dory, now Dodging among Andes Glaciers—Cy Squashvine's Pumpkin Has Nothing on New England Promoters' Pineapples.

Sensations certainly sell papers, regret the fact as one may. An enterprising newsboy swung aboard a street car in a Boston suburban centre, excitedly announcing the escape of a suspected criminal who is at present much in the public eye and mind. The passengers with one accord demanded papers, and the boy's supply was quickly exhausted. While they eagerly scanned the headlines to learn about the escape the youngster made his, and by the time the chagrined crowd of citizens realized that they had been duped the car had carried them to a safe distance from the little business man.

Shades of Puritan ancestors must have turned in their graves at a spectacle of modern chivalry displayed on a recent extremely windy and blustering day in the Hub. Dozens of women, young, middle aged and elderly, were subjected to a situation the like of which is fortunately not often seen in our city streets. Tremont Street at the corners of Winter Street and Temple Place is notoriously gusty on such days as the wind sweeps across the Common and is sucked into the narrow thoroughfares in the heart of the shopping district. On the occasion referred to there were lined up along the sides of the buildings of these two streets approximately 150 young men who spent their lunch hours in the profitable occupation of jeering, shouting, laughing and passing objectionable comments at the expense of practically every girl or woman who was forced to run the gauntlet. The business of holding one's hat, bundles and footing on Tremont Street while trying to see through the dust filled air rendered it unlikely that one in ten of the shoppers discovered her predicament until she was in the midst of the crowd when there was nothing to do but make the best of it. Those who were blessed with long heavy coats impervious to gusts were able to pass through the grinning lines gracefully, albeit disgustedly, but there were many scores less fortunate. Women coming up the streets from the farther end were forewarned and made detours at considerable inconvenience. Notable it was that not a single police officer was in sight, though these crossings are usually well policed. Probably they had been chloroformed or subsidized by the courteous young gentlemen who were so hugely enjoying their nooning.

The fame of the Swampscott dory has travelled far and wide, and all over the world the stanch little craft is admitted to be about the best example of boat making in its class. An interesting evidence of this fact was brought out recently in a series of lectures on South American countries given by the traveler-explorer Charles W. Furlong. Mr. Furlong in the course of his travels in Argentina and the southern Andes came across the lonely ranch of a Scotch sheep breeder, where he was entertained for a few days. This rancher had lived on the vast plains for many years, with no sight of white man for months at a time, and in constant danger from the marauding bands of renegades who infest the mountains. Despite this fact, the visitor was entertained on his first evening with selections from Caruso, Mme. Eames and others rendered by an up to date phonograph, and treated to a lunch of Kennedy's crackers, imported cheese and Chianti wine—the best lunch, says Mr. Furlong, that he ever tasted. On leaving the ranch, the traveller asked if there was not something he could do for the rancher when he returned to the United States. The Scotchman replied that he would like better than anything in the world to have one of the dories of which Mr. Furlong had told him, so that he might explore the wonderful Lake Argentino stretching for nearly one hundred miles through the mountain valleys, and fed by a great glacier from whose gleaming edges the icebergs frequently drifted past his ranch. He also wanted a camera like the one operated by the explorer. These articles Mr. Furlong promised to get for him, whereupon the rancher made out a check for $225, requesting no security nor questioning for a moment the integrity of this stranger. A year later after a long journey by sea from the New England town along the South American coast to the Straits of Magellan, and a tedious haul by ox carts across 250 miles of plains, a fine New England dory, named the "Swampscott" and a camera with its accessories, was delivered to the isolated Rancher. Mr. Furlong now shows slides made from photographs taken by the rancher, showing the dory itself and views of the hitherto inaccessible ice banks and wonders, of the beautiful Lake Argentino at the southern point of South America.

One laughs at the rural editor who prints a notice in his weekly paper to the effect that Cy Squashvine raised an astonishingly large pumpkin on his farm, but what is to be said of the metropolitan journal, reputed to have the second largest morning circulation of any American newspaper, which daily reproduces examples of abnormally large squashes, apples, tomatoes, potatoes, and so on, raised in the vicinity of the Hub. One item, however, of more universal interest, dwells on the "Smooth Cayenne" pineapple, grown on the Isle of Pines off the coast of Cuba, on plantations run almost exclusively by American capital, two-thirds of which is New England's. These pineapples weigh about 15 pounds each, have a circumference of 22 1-4 inches and stand about 15 inches high. They bring $1.50 apiece hereabouts and are said to have the most delicious flavor in the world. The Florida raised pineapples average two or three pounds and bring 25 cents in the American market.

Those who claimed that New England was no place for postal savings on account of the multitude of savings banks are keeping notably quiet just now. The returns from the postal savings deposite since the system was established in Boston on August 1 are, in round figures, $262,000. The returns from the entire country are approximately $14,000,000. The New England Secretary of the Postal Savings League calls attention to the fact that figuring 700,000 as the population of Boston this averages about 37 cents a person, and that if each of the ninety million persons in the United States had contributed this amount the sum total would be $33,300,000 instead of $14,000,000. It looks as though the small boy who had five dollars given him Christmas and is endeavoring to decide whether to put it in a savings bank or to buy a government bond with it is typical of many New Englanders.

Patrons of the trolley express in Quincy are pleased that the Massachusetts Railroad commission on Monday granted the Boston Elevated Railway Company authority to do a trolley freight and express business in Boston. This is a connecting link much needed and means better and quicker express service for Quincy as the shipments will be direct, doing away with trucking goods to Neponset.

This act of the Railroad commission overrules previous action on the part of Boston and is granted because the commission thinks that public convenience and necessity require it.

Fels-Naptha to the Rescue.

Miss Dainty—"Oh, Anty, John and I were coming home in the automobile and something went wrong with the machinery. I got out to help. And—oh dear! the first thing I knew, I was grease and grit from head to foot. My suit is ruined; I know it is."

Anty Drudge—"Don't worry about that, my dear. It isn't so bad at all. A little Fels-Naptha soap and cool or lukewarm water, and that suit will look as good as new in a jiffy. Fels-Naptha has been washing things clean for many years. Now run along and get your beauty sleep, and tomorrow we'll get at that suit with Fels-Naptha."

There's no need of slaving over the wash-tub every Monday morning; and when night comes, so tired out you can't even get a decent meal for your husband.

Try the Fels-Naptha way of washing. It will save you many a Monday backache and headache.

Fels-Naptha has its own peculiarities. It's made with the elbow-grease in it. You don't have to supply it.

The Fels-Naptha way is easy. Easy on the clothes and easy on you.

Just rub the Fels-Naptha on the clothes, roll them up and leave them in cool or lukewarm water for half an hour or so.

That's all.

And you're done in half the time, too. Doesn't that mean a whole lot to you?

WIRES WORKING FOR ROOSEVELT

Concrete Plan of Campaign Is Already Laid Out

EFFORT TO AVOID PLEDGES

Only Chance Anti-Taft Men Have to Prevent President's Renomination—Uninstructed Delegates From Eastern and Southern States, Backed by West and Northwest, Would Result In Nomination of Roosevelt

Washington, Jan. 6.—The leaders in the scheme to throw the Republican nomination for president to Theodore Roosevelt have mapped out a definite plan of action. They know just what they want and are going after it with the skill which comes of long practice in politics.

The first move in the game to checkmate William H. Taft is to make certain that the delegations from New York and Pennsylvania shall go uninstructed, contrary to custom. In past campaigns, it always has been the habit of great states which also were controlled by political bosses to send instructed delegates, for the purpose either of exerting a preponderating influence in favor of the candidate to whom the state was committed or, if that candidate's cause was known to be hopeless, of being better able to hold the delegates in line and make a trade that would leave the leaders in good standing with the candidate finally nominated.

In this year of phenomenal politics conditions are exactly reversed and the men who hope to defeat Taft see their only chance in preventing instructions.

Pennsylvania, politically speaking, always has been more dependable than New York and in the present contest one of the reliances of the Taft men has been the vote of the Keystone State, which Senator Penrose has been confidently expected to give to Taft. It is said now, however, that powerful influences will be brought to bear on Penrose to induce him to lead an uninstructed delegation to Chicago.

Much of the loud-voiced support which the president is now being tendered by members of congress is of the kind that easily evaporates at the close of the session. So far Penrose is standing by the president and he cannot yet be said to be a party to any movement to undermine him in Pennsylvania.

The Roosevelt campaign plan includes also that New England delegates shall go to Chicago without instructions. The anti-Taft leaders know that New England would stand solidly for Taft if instructions were voted at all and so, not daring an open test on that issue in the state conventions, they will move heaven and earth to prevent any expression of preference.

It is hoped also to break into Taft's support in the solid south by taking away Texas, where Cecil Lyon and the administration are on the best of terms, North Carolina, which at heart has little desire for reductions in the cotton schedule, and Louisiana, which is a thorough-going protectionist state, owing to its sugar and cotton, and is held in line for the Democratic party only by the negro question. The Roosevelt forces hope to split Ohio and are counting also on Arizona and New Mexico.

The Roosevelt men believe that by preventing instructions in the eastern and southern states named they will accumulate enough voting strength, added to what may come to their candidate from the strong progressive states in the west and northwest, to swing the convention to Roosevelt when the final ballot is taken. They are counting heavily also on the farmer vote along the Canadian border which President Taft is alleged to have alienated by his reciprocity program.

This plan of campaign is admitted in Washington to be a concrete thing, in which the wires are already working. Aside from its political bearing, it is interesting as suggesting that the high protectionists have made up their minds that they will have nothing to fear from Roosevelt in the White House.

OUR NEXT PRESIDENT

He Will Be a Democrat If Mack's Prediction Is Fulfilled

Washington, Jan. 6.—The arrival in Washington of Chairman Mack and the advance guard members of the Democratic national committee, which meets here on Monday, started activities in the Democratic camp.

The primary object of the assembling of the committee is to fix a time and place for holding the Democratic national convention.

"I have not the slightest hesitancy," said Mack, "in making the prediction that President Taft at the end of his present term will be succeeded by a Democrat. We have plenty of excellent material. Democratic prospects are better than they have been for twenty years."

BATTLE NEAR HANKOW

Pekin, Jan. 6.—Seven hundred imperialist troops are reported to have been killed or wounded in a battle with the revolutionists near Hankow. The imperial forces were evacuating the city when two of their trains were destroyed.

From these trains 1000 troops, independent of their commanders, were making an effort to return to Hankow. The revolutionists attacked them vigorously, however, inflicting heavy losses.

This information reached Pekin in a consular report from Hankow. The report added that there was a conference in Hankow between the imperialists and revolutionists, but that no agreement was reached.

FAILS TO REMEMBER HIS BENEFACTRESS

Tug Master Who Saved Woman's Life Is Made an Heir

New York, Jan. 6.—John L. Wade, owner and master of the tugboat Wade, received a letter from Farmingdale, L. I., signed by Miss E. Ladmore, which informed him that ten acres in property at Farmingdale and a quantity of stock in a Texas oil company had been left to him by her mother, Mrs. T. Ladmore, who had died Christmas.

"Must be some mistake," said Wade. "Never heard of Mrs. T. Ladmore in my life," and he filed the letter away in his desk at his home.

Two lawyers called at Wade's home later and showed him the will, which explained Wade had been remembered in the disposition of Mrs. Ladmore's estate because he had saved her life during the Slocum disaster in the East river, June 15, 1904.

Wade saved more than 200 from the burning Slocum and the water that day. For his bravery a medal was awarded Wade by congress.

NEW RED CROSS ORDER

Nurses Allowed at Front Only In Cases of Great Emergency

Washington, Jan. 6.—Only in cases of great emergency are the Red Cross nurses and workmen to be allowed at the front in time of war under the terms of a proclamation issued by the president and published by the war department. The Red Cross people must be confined to hospitals at the base of operations or on board hospital ships and along lines of communication.

The same proclamation names the American Red Cross as the only volunteer society authorized to render aid in time of war to the army and navy, and other societies desiring to assist can do so only through the Red Cross.

MIXED UP IN SMUGGLING

San Francisco, Jan. 6.—One hundred employes of the Pacific Mail Steamship company found themselves out of employment after the disclosures of a smuggling plot in this city.

According to custom officials, stevedores and dock men have co-operated with Chinese in smuggling opium into this country. When the force of Pacific Mail stevedores and dock men reported for work they were locked out. An entire new force of men was employed.

Sugar Refinery Suspends Production

New York, Jan. 6.—Nearly 5000 men were laid off indefinitely at the plants of the American Sugar Refining company in Williamsburg, due, it is stated, to the over-production of sugar. Only enough men to keep the machinery and building in order are being kept at work.

Blue Appointed Surgeon General

Washington, Jan. 7.—President Taft has appointed Surgeon Rupert Blue to be surgeon general of the public health and marine hospital service to succeed the late Surgeon General Wyman.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HOW TO EAT HONEY.

ALTHOUGH the United States yields more honey than any other country in the world and some qualities that compare favorably with the famed product of Mount Hymettus, yet honey is not so generally used for food as it should be.

Honey is very nutritive. It supplies fuel for energy to the body owing to the carbohydrates which it contains. One then ought to eat honey in winter. The sweet element in honey consists of grape sugar largely.

Before sugar came into use honey was used for all household sweetening purposes.

Honey has excellent medicinal properties, and persons who have weak chests or throats would do well to add it to their diet.

Eating Bread and Honey.

Honey Sandwiches.—Cut bread in thin slices. Spread one slice with butter beaten to a cream and the other with honey. Press the slices together. Arrange on a plate and garnish with sprigs of mint.

Honey Cakes.—Cream half a cupful of butter. Add a cupful of honey, half a cupful of sour milk, two beaten eggs and a few drops of lemon juice. Sift two cupfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of baking soda and a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Mix and pour into buttered and floured cake tins. Bake in a moderate oven.

Wholesome Sweets.

Honey Caramels.—Pour half a pound of honey into a saucepan. Add half a pound of sugar, a tablespoonful of cream and a dessertspoonful of cold water. Mix and stir. After an hour put on a moderate fire and cook, stirring until it is stiff enough to pull. Pour on buttered pans. When cool pull and cut into small pieces.

Honey Puff.—For this pudding take three ounces of honey, four ounces of breadcrumbs, a small lemon, three eggs, half a teaspoonful of ginger, half a cupful of milk, one ounce of butter and one tablespoonful of cornstarch. Mix the honey and breadcrumbs in a basin. Cook the starch for ten minutes in the milk and add it to the above. When well mixed add the rind of half a grated lemon, the ginger and the yolks of two eggs. Beat up the mixture for some minutes, butter a pudding dish and add the remainder of butter to the mixture. Whisk the whites of eggs to a stiff froth and partly fill the mold and steam from one and a half to one and three-quarters of an hour. Serve hot with sauce or syrup.

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

The double victory of the Quincy A. A. basket ball teams over the strong St. Mary's combinations at the North End last evening, proves beyond a doubt that it makes a great difference in the team work of the players, whether or not two games are played on successive evenings. Last Thursday evening the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. fives failed to put in an appearance, with the result that the first and second teams of the local association played together in a practise game. The effects were patent last evening and if the schedule at present arranged by the Greater Boston Basket ball league officials is to be carried out, it would be well to have attention directed along these lines.

Basket ball is a strenuous game at all stages and it is too much to expect that a team will be in form to play Friday evening, if it has indulged in a gruelling contest on the previous evening. Consequently it is hoped that in all future games local association will be afforded greater intervals for playing. If the home games are to be played on Thursdays, then the games away from home should be played on Saturdays. If this arrangement cannot be aggreed upon, at least two days should be the duration between games.

The next meeting for the officials of the league and the managers of the various teams that comprise it, will be held next Monday evening, and it is sincerely hoped that all petty differences will be settled at this meeting and the league will be enabled to go through a season which gives every indication of being a prosperous one.

Manager Flynn will present the desires of the local association and his activity, together with the results he has been successful in bringing about from an athletic standpoint in the past is sufficient assurance that the cause of the Quincy A. A. basket ball players will be presented in a most able manner.

The recent attitude adopted among the various college athletic promoters has brought the attention of a great number of fans to the game of soccer football. Heretofore the game itself has not met with the approval of the greater number of sporting bloods of the country and it has not elicited the enthusiasm that it would seem to merit.

Right here in Quincy, in the Fore River team, we have an aggregation that can ably cope with the best soccer teams in the country and while the attendance at the games on certain occasions, when greater headliners are billed, has been large, the number that should be at the local grounds to witness each game has not been sufficient to attest adequately to the calibre of playing the Fore River boys exhibit. Injuries rarely occur in a game of soccer and the pastime itself is a great advancer of physical development and can be indulged in by men of practically any size or weight.

Of course it is to be regretted that it is played at the time of year when but few men are at leisure on Saturday afternons, yet any one who has ever attended a game on the local grounds, has admitted that he has been well paid for his efforts. The inauguration of the game among the grammar school boys by Dr. Smith, in this city, has been productive of great results and within due time the game of soccer gives evidence of looming forth conspicuously among the popular games.

It is a game in which the brain is worked to its utmost, dexerity is promoted and the all round value is invaluable. It is hoped that the game will progress rapidly in local circles and if there be any one who has never seen a game, let him make e special effort to be present at the next contest billed at the Fore River grounds. The price for adhission is nominal and any one who witnesses the Fore River boys in action will then be able to realize that they stand a fine show to bear away the American cup honors.

John Kling will again cling to the Boston Nationals.

It was not to be expected that Walter Lonergan, the player who captained the Quincy team that won the pennant of the Old Colony league in the last year of its existence, would be retained by the Boston Americans. Lonergan thinks more of his position in the Post office department than he does of being successful in the major leagues. The strain of holding down both jobs is too great for any base ball player, no matter how much ability he possesses as a tosser of the horsehide. If "Lony" as he is most familiarly known to local fans, should devote all his time to playing base ball, there is no doubt but what he could maintain a permanent berth with a major league team.

As it is, he will still continue in the limelight, should he retire to semi-professional rank and cannot but prove a valuable acquisition to any team that is fortunate in securing his services. His playing at Brockton last year was highly commendable and his work with the Red Sox team was also worthy of commendation. His many local admirers wish him luck in whatever field he may cast his lot.

—The disappearance of John D. Rockefeller's lake at Pocantico Hills, N. Y., appears to have been a sort of unintentional tit for tat. The lake, it seems was drawn off by the Croton aqueduct, which runs through Mr. Rockefeller's estate about 300 feet under ground. Leaks in Mr. Rockefeller's vicinity have usually worked the other way.—Springfield Republican.

SOME LARGE FIGURES AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The total circulation of the Thomas Crane Public Library for the year just closed is 107,882 volumes, the largest in the history of the Library. It is an increase of 12,651 volumes over the year 1910, and is made up as follows: Main desk, 65,264; children's room, 20,825; West Quincy reading room, 18,938; schools, 2,855.

The number of volumes delivered at the main desk of the Central library is an increase of 939 over the year before The children's room returns show 1,382 less, due to the transfereal of the Houghs Neck school children, who formerly spent their noon hour here. In spite of that fact the recorded use of the reading room books and periodicals is somewhat larger. The attendance at the West Quincy reading room for the 12 months was 31,500.

BRIEFS

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostom's church is to be held Monday night at 7.30 in the parish rooms.

Dr. Richard Burton, of the University of Minnesota, will give a lecture at Livermore hall, Quincy Mansion school Monday evening, at 7.45 on "Tennyson," and also on Tuesday morning, at 9.45, on "The Poetry of Patriotism"—(The Psalms and the Prophets).

Special services will be conducted for the men of St. John's parish in the basement of the church, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Fr. Patrick J. Scannell, spiritual director of the Holy Name Society. The services will be brought to a close with benediction.

Many ladies were disappointed yesterday afternoon at not hearing a discussion of current events in the series being given by Mrs. May Alden Ward, under the auspices of the Women's club. Mrs. Ward was ill and could not be present. Her husband, Professor Ward was also unable to take her place but a friend of his from the Institute of Technology responded to the call and gave a most entertaining lecture on "Kipling."

CARD OF THANKS.

LOCAL PLAYERS WIN TWO GAMES

Quincy A.A. Teams Defeat Strong St. Mary's Teams at North End

DUGGAN STARS

The members of the Quincy A. A. basket-ball team advance to second position in the Greater Boston Basket ball league by defeating the strong St. Mary's quintet in the hall of the North End association on Stillman street, the score being 28 to 16. The second team also emerged in triumph after a warm struggle and returned home with a 14 to 8 victory.

The local boys seemed to be masters of the situation at all times and caged the baskets as though they were accustomed to playing on the Boston basket ball court. As has been the case in previous games, the sensational work of "Dan" Duggan was a noticeable feature. On two occasions he secured goals from the floor of the hair raising variety.

Kelley also displayed great form in the second half.

Only one basket from the floor was scored by the home combination in the second team games, the work of Jenkins and "Brutus" Chapman being alone sufficient to enable the local boys to annex a victory. Harmon covered Slager, the star right forward of the St. Mary's second team, so well that the latter was unable to show up to advantage.

The team work of both Quincy teams was highly conspicuous, and every player accredited himself in fine style. Mead and Gibbons played well for St. Mary's senior team, while Slager was the star for the losers' second team. The summaries:—

QUINCY A. A.	ST. MARY'S
O'Rourke rf	lb Gibbons
Kelley lf	rb Doherty
P. Duggan c	c McDonald
Hebert rb	lf Cowan
Boyle lb	rf Mead

Score, Quincy A. A. 28. St. Mary's 16. Goals from floor, Kelley 3, O'Rourke 2, P. Duggan 4, Boyle 2, Mead 3, Gibbons 2, Doherty. Goals from fouls, O'Rourke 2, P. Duggan, Boyle, Hebert 2, Gibbons 4. Referee, Coady. Scorer, McLaughlin. Timer, Joyce. Time 20m halves. Attendance 200.

QUINCY A. A. 2D	ST. MARY'S 2D
H. Chapman rf	lb Tibbetts
L. Chapman lf	rb Beach
Jenkins c	c McLaughlin
N. Chapman rb	lf Keating
	lf Harkins
Harmon lb	rf Slager

Score, Quincy A. A. 2d 14; St. Mary's 2d 8. Goal from floor, Jenkins 3, H. Chapman, McLaughlin. Goals from fouls, H. Chapman 5, Jenkins, Slager 6. Referee, Coady. Scorer McLaughlin. Timers Joyce and McLeod. Time 20m halves.

BOWLING RESULTS.

That ill fate still continues to pursue the members of the Quincy Council K of C. bowling team was again demonstrated last evening at the alleys of the Columbus Club in Dorchester, where the local five were defeated by the Mt. Pleasant Council team in one of the closest and most exciting matches of the season. Had Magee, who rolled in splendid form on the last two strings been a little more successful in the initial roll off, the local team would have easily won, as great bowling was displayed at different intervals.

Katon bowled remarkably well securing a pinfall of over 100 on each string. He and Bliss were tied for the sum total honors, each having a pinfall of 310 to his credit. Bliss had the highest mark for a single string, such being 123.

Clark and Killian did fine work for the winners. Quincy Council lost by a score of 1427 to 1418.

McGREGORS WIN EASILY.

The members of the Clan McGregor bowling team experienced little difficulty in taking the measure of the players on the Clan McIntosh team at the Brunswick alleys last evening in the Scotish Clans' league series. The local players were victorious by the score of 1338 to 1179.

Marnock of the local five, was the star of the contest. He had a mark of 121 for a single string and 290 for the sum total. Drumwold and Smith also rolled well or the local players.

PATTERN MAKERS' LEAGUE.

The Quincy team of the Pattern Makers' league was defeated by the Everett representation at the Hub alleys last evening, the score being 1159 to 1129. The first string, proved the undoing of the local team.

SECOND ANNUAL ATHLETIC MEET

Quincy and Cambridge Y.M.C.A. Dual Meet Tonight

LIST OF EVENTS

Tonight at local Y. M. C. A. "gym" the second annual dual athletic meet with the Cambridge Y. M. C. A. will commence at 8 o'clock'.

Last year Quincy went to Cambridge with a badly crippled team but nearly got away with a victory, being defeated by the close score of 33 1-2 to 31 1-2. For this meet the boys have been training for the past 3 weeks and judging from the marks made in the different events, the trophy ought to remain here in Quincy.

The best of the Quincy High School athletes will compete for the local association and these men, with the assistance of the senior members ought to set up some new records.

The local entries are as follows:

Potato Race: Wilson, Trask, Kemp, Parker, Shirley.

Silver cups will be given for 1st place in each event and oxidzed silver medals for 2nd places.

A large silver cup is to be given to the Association scoring the greatest number of points.

The first event comemnces at 8 o'clock.

In addition to the athletic events a special wrestling match has been arranged between Gardner, the 145 lb. champion of Clapp memorial and Paul Skevakis,, the 150 lb. champion of Portland Y. M. C. A.

Charlie Parker will also wrestle John Burns for the local Association championship.

WHAT'S THIS? BROCKTON NEXT DOOR TO BOSTON! WHERE'S QUINCY?

Some of the citizens of Holbrook want to move to Boston without changing their residence says the Brockton Enterprise. The means, of course, is by annexation to greater Boston if the proposed annexation of Braintree and Weymouth becomes a reality. As yet the matter has reached only the talk stage, but the prominence of those who support the idea may result in some definite action.

BRAINTREE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The People's Forum, which opens in Assembly hall of All Souls' church tomorrow, will have for its first speaker Prof. A. A. Berle of Tufts college. His subject will be "The school in the home."

Professor Berle is well-known to the readers of Boston papers as the man who instituted this fall the series of Sunday evening meetings in the Tremont theatre. His discussions there of public questions are widely quoted. Dr. Berle has attained greater repute in the country at large, however, on account of his views upon education. For fifteen years he has studied this general subject in Europe and America. He has applied his distinctive principles in practical instruction and the results he has secured have caused national comment.

Many parents desire to forward the mental development of their boys and girls, but are at a loss to know how to do so. Dr. Berle is an expert in this realm, and his lecture will be of special interest to all those who have at heart the training of children.

THIS AFTERNOON'S FIRE.

The alarm from Box 64 at 2 o'clock this afternoon was for a fire in a house on Atlantic street, occupied by a family named Keeps. The fire was under control when the Ledger went to press. It started in the chimney and did considerable damage.

—It is estimated that every minute throughout the world 3,000,000 matches are lighted. The number of matches used in the entire year is 1,500,000,000,000, and of these it is said one half are used in the United States. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable for matches.—Boston Common.

NEW SPORTING ANNUAL.

The best little sporting reference book of the year is the "Police Gazette Sporting Annual" for 1912, published by Richard K. Fox. It is a compendium of best performances in all branches of sports; ably compiled and edited by Sam C. Austin, a well-known sporting writer and critic. The athletic records are the records of the Amateur Athletic Union, and officially accepted by that organization; the rowing, yachting, racing, trotting, pacing, automobile, bicycling, football, aeroplane and swimming records, made all over the world, are officially correct. The baseball statistics were furnished by the National Baseball commission, and include the details of the world's championship series. The main feature of the book, however, is the pugilistic records, and includes the history of every boxer of prominence in the world.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Aside from the regular attractions which have always made the Boston motor boat show of more than ordinary interest, Manager Chester I. Campbell this year promises to present a number of novelties.

The show, which will be held in Mechanics' building, Jan. 7, to Feb. 3 inclusive, will surpass in magnitude all its predecessors. Among the novel exhibits will be that of the famous 15-foot motor boat Niagara, which, on Oct. 29, in command of Capt. Klaus Larsen of Detroit, made the seven-mile trip through the whirlpool rapids at Niagar Falls.

AUTO CHEMICAL BREAKS RECORD

Has Chemical Stream on Fire at Atlantic in 8 Minutes

DRIVER PRAISED

An illustration of the efficiency of the auto chemical was had Saturday at the fire at Atlantic . The alarm came from Box 64 located on the corner of Atlantic street and Newbury avenue Atlantic. In just eight minutes from the time the alarm sounded driver Dillon of the auto chemical had his apparatus at the scene of the fire and was taking a chemical line into the building. The wind was sharp and cold from the northeast and in the fare of this driver Dillon sent his machine at a fifty mile gate to the scene. The Wollaston apparatus was passed at the corner of Squantum street and as stated above the chemical arrived at the scene in eight minutes.

The Atlantic combination was of course the first piece of apparatus to arrive and had played out its chemical tank, when the auto arrived, and before it could be recharged driver Dillon had stopped his engine and personally taken his chemical line into the building. It was this rapid work that probably saved a considerable loss to the building and contents. The residents at Atlantic feel that driver Dillon is entitled to great credit for his work Saturday.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY

A meeting for the members of St. John's Holy Name society has been called for tomorrow evening in the basement of the Parochial school, at 8 o'clock. All plans for the grand union service, to be held in St. Mary's church, West Quincy, next Sunday afternoon will be completed and it is also probable that the election of officers will take place.

Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, who is to preach the sermon at the Union Service, will address the gathering tomorrow evening and it is expected that other well-known speakers will also be in attendance. The meeting is open to all men of the parish and a large attendance is looked for at the meeting.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

Preparations are already under way for a joint banquet, to be held under the auspices of the Quincy and Ave Maria Councils of the Knights of Columbus The affair is scheduled to be held in Music hall, Jan. 30.

The committee in charge will use every effort to make the occasion a gala one and from present indications everything points to success. Hon. David I. Walsh, an orator of much note, who was the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor at the recent State election, has been secured as the principal speaker of the evening.

PEOPLE'S FORUM AT BRAINTREE

Professor Berle Speaks On the School and the Home

UNORGANIZED

The first meeting for 1912 of the series known as the People's Forum was held in All Soul's church, Braintree, Sunday afternoon at 3. 30 o'clock. These meetings were very popular and instructive last winter and they promise even better things this season. The speaker Professor A. A. Berle of Tufts college took for his subject, "The School and the Home." Mr. Berle chartacterized the ignorance of parents regarding their children's affairs, especially in school matters as colossal and stated that the American home is about the only thing in this country which is not organized. He said that ninety per cent of the poor showing by children in the schools was due to indifferent or incompetent teachers rather than to backward scholars. He believes much time is wasted on useless studies such as the advanced parts of arithmetic and thinks that by proper training at home a child may advance fast enough in scholarship so as to be able to save four or five very valuable years of life. He has four children, one a boy of ten in the high school, another boy of fourteen at Harvard university. He attributed this rather unusual state of things largely to home training rather than to any especial genius on the part of the children.

He described Americans as "linquisitically lazy" citing cases of European children who speak several languages fluently and spoke of the necessity for young commercial men for instance to know Spanish in order to advance our trade with the South American republics. Mr. Berle spoke truly when he said that people generally do what they want to whether it be training children or playing bridge whist. He thought people as a rule did not work hard and that the average business man was often a poor pretence and not the long-headed personage that he is popularly supposed to be. According to Professor Berle, the housewife who gets twenty-one meals a week and satisfies the various tastes and appetites of the family is a much superior person.

At the close of his remarks, the speaker answered many uestions propounde by intereste listeners and at such length as to make this part of helpful. Next Sunday afternoon, Mr. the program extremely inteesting and Henry Jewell will speak on "An actors ideal of a theatre." Mr. Jewett is the man who created the part of the Grand Duke in William Hodge's play "The Man from Home" which had such a long run at the Park theatre, Boston.

NEW TIMETABLE.

An important change in the street car lines between Quincy and Neponset went into effect Sunday. Hereafter cars for Neponset via Hancock street leave City Square at nine minutes of and twenty-one minutes past the hour, via Wollaston cars leave City Square at four and thirty-four minutes past the hour. Returning cars leave Neponset for Quincy via Hancock street on the hour and half hour and via Wollaston at fifteen minutes past and fifteen minutes of the hour. These cars run through to Dudley street and returning will leave Dudley street at hour and half hour for Quincy via Hancock street and at fifteen minutes past and fifteen minutes of the hour for Quincy via Wollaston.

—According to the report of the Massachusetts No-License League the State has four cities of over 50,000 population definitely no-license—Cambridge 104,000, Lynn 89,000, Somerville 77,000,Brockton 56.000—the only four instances in all the world of cities of this size where the voters of the cities themselves have voted out the saloon. There are cities as large under Prohibition, but that is by state and not by a local majority. In the recent city elections Lynn and Woburn voted "no" for the fifth successive time, and Newburyport for the sixth successive time—Jamaica Plain News.

SLIGHT CLEW TO MISSING WOMAN

Letter Carrier McGowan Thinks he saw her Thursday

INFORMS POLICE

The first clew to Mrs. Margaret Ball of 437 Hancock street, Norfolk Downs, who is missing, was brought to Police Headquarters Saturday by John A. McGowan, a letter carrier attached to the Wollaston postal station.

Mr. McGowan read an account of the woman's disappearance in that morning's Globe, which contained her picture, and he remembered seeing a woman which looked like her Thursday afternoon near the corner of Elm avenue and Hancock street. She was going toward Wollaston avenue and Mr. McGowan, noticing that she apparently did not know just where to turn, stopped her and asked her if she had lost her way.

Mr. McGowan said the woman had an English accent, of which he took particular notice. She said she wanted to go to Norfolk Downs. Mr. McGowan asked the woman if she lived anywhere near Billings road, and she said she did.

He then pointed down Hancock street and she started in that direction. The way is a straight one and Billings road is not a mile away.

Mr. McGowan did not think any more of the woman until he read the story of her disappearance Saturday. If Mr. McGowan saw Mrs. Ball on Thursday afternoon, he saw her 24 hours after she left home at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon to go to a drug store.

Sunday the police learned that the woman had been seen the day she disappeared near the East Milton depot by Officer Wigley and a man named Shields. The two men saw her about 3 o'clock sitting on the steps of the house near the Adams-street railroad crossing and both spoke to her. The woman told them she wanted to go to Norfolk Downs and further said she lived with her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks.

The policeman placed the woman on a Quincy-bound car at 3 o'clock and at Quincy Center the woman transferred to a Norfolk Downs car, getting off near Elm avenue. The police think that is the time that letter carrier J. A. McGowan saw her, although last night the police understood that Mr. McGowan said he saw her Thursday, the day after she disappeared.

The police are at a loss to know how Mrs. Ball was seen in East Milton at 3 o'clock Wednesday, if she did not leave home until 4 o'clock that afternoon as is declared by her daughter.

Conductor John Kelly told the police Sunday that the woman was a passenger on his car which left the center about 3.30 Wednesday afternoon. She got off in the vicinity of Elm avenue and it was there that letter carrier McGowan saw her. The police will see him again to make sure of the date.

Charles P. Nelson, a special officer, saw a woman Wednesday night about 8 o'clock near Wollaston avenue who answered the description of Mrs. Ball. There was nothing about her actions to cause him to give more than a passing glance.

It was near Wollaston avenue and Elm avenue that she was seen by the letter carrier and as Wollaston avenue runs down back of Merry Mount Park, a search of the park was made Sunday in the hopes that the woman might be found if she was in that vicinity. The search, however, brought no results.

—The business letters of a western railroad are not to begin with "dear sir" any more. The management thinks it sees great time saving in this. Any man named William who does business with this painfully economical road may expect any day to see his mail come to him from the road addressed to "Bill." Nothing like adding a few more breathless rushes to American haste, even if it does take away a little more of the courtesy which is altogether too scant now in business life.—Brocton Enterprise.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A number of friends took possession of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, on 48 Pleasant street last Saturday evening and tendered the couple a surprise party. The invaders assembled at the corner of School and Pleasant streets about 7.30 o'clock and took the Morrison house by storm just as the clock was striking eight. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison little expected a function of such a nature and it took several minutes before they could adapt themselves to the occasion.

The gathering was only assembled a few minutes when Miss Grace Jones stepped forth and in a few well chosen words presented the couple with a handsome dinner set which was received in a responsive manner. The remainder of the evening was then given over to merry making and games of all sorts were indulged in. Refreshments were served at the close of the party. The affair was largely attended and was in charge of a committee comprised of Miss Grace Jones, Miss Amanda Peterson, Griffith Johnson and William Thomas.

BRIEFS

The annual installation banquet of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Division 4, A. O. H., takes place this evening in Hibernian hall, West Quincy.

The first meeting of the year for the Houghs Neck Associates will be held Wednesday evening in Associates' hall.

The annual installation banquet of Division 5, A. O. H., will be in order Wednesday evening in Hibernian hall, Franklin street.

The second annual installation and banquet of Ave Maria Council, K. of C., will be held in St. Mary's hall on the evening of January 15th.

West Quincy now has a great white way running from the Willard school to the depot. Along this street the new cluster electric street lights have been installed and they are greatly appreciated.

Ex-Mayor William T. Shea leaves Tuesday for a southern trip. He goes first to New York where he will remain a few days before leaving for the south. He will be gone until the latter part of February.

Dr. Richard Burton a widely known and favorite lecturer is to lecture this evening at the Quincy Mansion school on "Alfred Tennyson," and tomorrow morning on "The Poetry of Patriotism."

A supper for the employed boys of the local Y. M. C. A. will be held tomorrow evening at 7.30 o'clock. Walter Desha, shortstop on the Harvard baseball team, will talk on "Sports at college and Athletics in Hawaii."

A most entertaining program has been arranged for gentlemen's night of the Quincy Women's club tonight at the clubhouse and a large attendance is anticipated. Following the entertainment there will be sociability and refreshments.

☞The official family at City Hall, headed by Mayor Stone will all appear in Tuesday's Ledger. Don't fail to read the Tuesday Ledger.

NEW OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

BANQUET, ENTERTAINMENT

The largest gathering in the history of the mother division of the Hibernian Order inthis city was noticeable at the annual installation exercises held last Saturday evening by division 4, A. O. H. in Hibernian hall, West Quincy. The installing officer for the occasion was Dennis J. Slattery of Weymouth, county president of the organization. Many officers from other divisions were present, including divisions 5, 22 and 18 of this city.

The following were installed for the year 1912:

President—James F. Burke.
Vice President—James Bennett.
Treasurer—Arthur Murphy.
Financial Sec.—Jeremiah Leary.
Recording Secretary—Daniel Scully.
Chairman of Standing Committees—John M. O'Brien.
Marshal—John Dinneen.
Inside Sentinel—John Duggan

At the conclusion of the installation program, a banquet and entertainment followed The toastmaster was the president, James F. Burke. Speeches were made by the newly elected officers and officers from other divisions. Matthew Fay entertained those present with a number of whistling solos, while Fred McDonald, in his usual inimitable way kept the many in attendance in a continual strain of laughter as he told jokes of a varied nature. Daniel Scully also added to the merriment of the evening and received great applause for his rendition of "Where the River Shannon Flows."

The reports of the various officers showed the division to be in a most flourishing condition. The West Quincy branch is one of the oldest divisions in the state and has a large number enrolled in its membership. The affair Saturday night was pronounced a success in every way and greatly eclipsed any of the annual events held in previous years.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

President Taft is to attend a Jewish ball in New York next month, but we hope he keeps away from the sign of the three balls.

Arizona gets into the Union at last, Now Ary, stop eating pie with your knife, and take your feet off the dinner table, like a good girl!

From the number of diaries being started now, future historians will find ample material regarding the first ten days in January.

The complaint is made that on account of all this muck-raking, you can't borrow any money. Nothing is left but the awful alternative of going to work.

Mr. Taft has been asked to intervene between Italy and Turkey, but probably he has had all he can do to maintain order at the New York peace meeting.

In view of the alarming tendency of the people to vote as they darn please, the nation looks forward to the presidential year of 1912 with feelings of apprehension.

On Christmas day your presents are just exactly what you were looking for, but it is sometimes difficult to persuade the store keeper of it when you try to exchange them.

Uncle Sam needs the money he could get by selling the Maine relics to the museums, and he may have to auction off George Washington's bones to provide the necessary public building pork.

There are many attractions tonight for the men and it is a tie whether they go to the clubhouse for the gentlemen's night of the Quincy Women's club and enjoy "Dramatic scenes from sessions of Congress at Washington" or go to City Hall and watch the proceedings of our new Councilmen and hear who are to be members of Mayor Stone's official family.

"A SAILOR'S LOG" CLOSED.

It was one of the charming features of the personality of Rear Admiral "Bob" Evans, that he could never understand why he was called "Fighting Bob." He felt himself that his temperament was a sweet and gentle one.

Endless anecdotes illustrated how Evans got his nickname, and some of them have been reprinted since his death. One from his "Sailor's Log" which has been overlooked, tells how a band of Chilian ruffians followed him and another officer about the streets of Valparaiso at the time of the Chilian imbroglio in 1891. Evans wrote: "We were on the Main street of the town, otherwise, they would no doubt have attacked us, and if they had, we would surely have pounded the life out of two of them at least."

There was a charming frank sincerity about Evans that endeared him to the American people. Ranks and distinctions never meant anything to him. He was as good as anyone, and everyone else was as good as he. His simplicity of heart is illustrated by the following incident told in the "Sailor's Log."

At the time of the Kiel naval review he was introduced to a young German captain, whose name he did not catch. The young man semed brilliant, and they engaged in a long talk on naval matters, in which each expressed sharp dissent from the other. Soon the captain introduced him to his wife. "She was an attractive and charming woman," Evans wrote.

After a long time it came over Evans, that a crowd of people seemed to be awaiting a chance to talk to the couple, so he hied himself to the smoking room. Afterward he learned that he had been talking so long to the German Prince and Princess.

He impressed these royal personages so delightfully, that when later Prince Henry toured America, Evans was made by Emperor William special aide-de-camp to the Prince, and he accompanied him on all his travels.

Evans paid a severe price of pain for the time he chased the doctors out of the room with a revolver, when they tried to amputate his leg after Fort Fisher. During recent summers he was a familiar figure at a Lake Mohonk hotel, where the children used to gather about to hear sea stories from the old fighter as he sat with his aching leg in a chair.

IMPATIENT AT SEEMING DELAY

Atlantic Wants Work on New Bridge Completed

MUCH INCONVENIENCE

Citizens of Atlantic are getting impatient at the unnecessary delay in putting the bridge over the N. Y., N. H. and H. railroad tracks on Atlantic street. It was understood that at least a temporary foot bridge would be put up when the old bridge was torn down, but absolutely no provision has been made for the many who take Atlantic street as a near cut to their work at Neponset and also for the Boston electrics. Not only this, but quiet a number of school children on Hancock and River streets who attend the Quincy school, climb the bankings and cross the tracks.

Atlantic people are not unreasonable. They do not expect the new Mayor and City Council to meet every need in one week or one month, but the granolithic work for the bridge has been done for sometime and the street closed. If it is the road commissioner's work or the work of the City Council to let the railroad company know it is expected not to inconvenience the community any longer than necessary, the people would like to know that somebody is looking out for their interests. They certainly feet at present that it is not for the interests of a large part of the community to have to walk around Sagamore street when taking an electric for Boston.

CHINA A REPUBLIC?

We Americans have been so disgusted with the paper republics of Central and South America, that few of our public men would advise the Celestials to uproot any existing institutions merely for the forms of democracy. But the levelling tide is making a clean sweep, and dynasties are not built ready made, but have to grow out of the traditions and affections of former generations. Nothing seems left but a republican form of government.

It has been an anomaly of the Chinese system, that though the Son of Heaven (Emperor) could cut off the head of any subject by the stroke of his pen, yet when it came to touching the money of his subjects, the country after all was run on a somewhat democratic basis.

If a tax looked unjust to the leading men of a village, there would be a general strike. The places of business would close and all activity would cease until the imperial government reached a settlement with the local authorities.

Thus the Chinese have had in a way some practice at self government. they would be much more likely to make a success of it than the hot headed Latin republics of South America, where revolution is a national diversion. The Chinese would much rather wash clothes than go into the revoluting business.

When the proclamation was made that a parliament would meet in the year 1917, the methodical Chinese began at once to take preliminary steps by way of preparation. A very skilful copy of American models was made in the form of a municipal government for the city of Tientsin. The strict provisions against bribery would look good to many of our reformers. They fixed it so that the briber not merely could be fined, but he could be excluded from office and from voting for ten years.

When the assembly met a few years ago to demand a parliament, many of the delegates showed the state of the national mind by cutting off their fingers and writing their petition in blood. If that is the spirit in which they look at political rights and privileges, we foresee that John Chinaman may not toast his shins before the fire on caucus night, after our fashion, but will perhaps get out and vote for his own pocket rather than for the grafters.

MAYOR'S BULLETIN.

Mayor Stone this morning directed the Commissioner of Public Works to flood the meadow at the corner of Hancock and Beale streets for a skating pond.

Mayor Stone and City Solicitor McAnarney have accepted invitations to the banquet to be given by the Boston City club Friday evening, to the officers of the cities and towns of the Metropolitan district to discuss the Metropolitan plan. John H. Fahey will preside.

Mayor Stone said this morning that he should send his list of appointments to the City Council tonight.

HUMANITARIAN IMPULSE.

The world is richer than it used to be in humanitarian impulse. For one sincere believer in the "brotherhood of man" a century ago there are now ten. Emphasis in religion has shifted from theology, ritual and polity to the point of view emphasized in the parable of the good Samaritan. Love of man, however, does not always imply love of individual men. The sentiment of the altruist may be fine but also abstract. To be made most serviceable and also most admirable it needs to become concrete. With the recent organization of what are known as the "Big Brother" and "Big Sister" movements for supplementing the work of juvenile courts and cooperating with probation officers and in a variety of ways proving to youth of both sexes that they can know what friendship really means amid the isolations of a great city, society has seen the rise of agencies that have the admirable quality of practical efficiency.

When a man assumes responsibility for a lad, or a woman for a girl, and gives a pledge that everything will be done for the necessitious kinless one that should be done for an own brother or sister, this often is the remaking of the man or woman as well as the salvation of the beneficiary. To many an adult it gives the unparalleled opportunity of putting at the service of another wisdom gained by years of striving.

From the social standpoint this plan is a manifestation of the abiding worth of individualism, after all has been said in its disparagement that must be said. "The human touch," after all, is the fundamental tie between men who stand facing problems of ethical rise or fall. The city whose juvenile courts and probation officers have leagued with them citizens of eminence and achievement who are willing to assume personal care for youths who have stumbled, is a community that will need a minimum policeing and preaching.—Christian Science Monitor.

TROOPS ALONG PEKIN RAILWAY

Powers Take Steps to Keep Road Open to Traffic

NO AMERICAN SOLDIERS YET

Pekin, Jan. 8.—The treaty powers have undertaken the protection of the railroad between Pekin and the sea.

Interruption of traffic along this line, which prevented the passage of the mails for four days, has resulted in this decision. Detachments of British, German, Japanese and French troops have been stationed at intervals between Pekin and Chinwangtao, according to the plan devised two months ago. A Japanese general is in command, as he is the ranking officer.

The different nations take charge of different sections of the road, Great Britain takes care of the section between Pekin and Yangtsun, France that between Yangtsun and Tangku, Germany that from Tangku to Tangshan, the United States that from Tangshan to Lanchow, and Japan that from Lanchow to Chinwangtao.

The United States, however, has no troops in north China except 300 legation guards, and has been unable to take responsibility for the section allotted to her, but British troops are protecting that district until the Americans arrive.

Just when additional American troops will reach China is not known, although Minister Calhoun cabled several days ago to the state department at Washington advising the dispatch of a regiment on a peace footing. So far he has received no reply from the department.

The foreign detachments number 150 to 300 men, according to the distance controlled. The British guard has sixty-six miles of territory to cover. This is the longest section. The American section is thirty-three miles. The troops have been ordered to avoid bloodshed if possible. It is believed that the rebels will not interfere within the foreign controlled sphere, although they may beyond Chinwangtao.

The legations regret that they cannot control the Chinese Imperial railroad up to the Japanese Junction in Manchuria, thereby insuring a continuation of the Trans-Siberian mails, but the protocol does not authorize anything further than maintaining communication to the sea, the nearest open port being Chinwangtao, as Tientsin is ice bound.

Premier Yuan Shi Kai is pleased at the action of the powers, because it relieves the imperial administration of responsibility, and insures the maintenance of communication, which the imperial troops might be unable to provide. The powers do not assume the administration of the district, and consequently the imperialists profit by the arrangement, the trains not being available to the rebels.

GOT LICENSE IN 1893

Man and Woman Are Just Wedded on Their Old Document

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Exercising the right granted them in a marriage license issued July 14, 1893, Richard Weber and Meta M. Kowig were made man and wife by Judge Caverly. The belated character of the wedding was discovered yesterday when the license of the world's fair year was returned to the marriage license office.

At the time the license was issued the ages were given as 25 and 25, but alterations made since show the groom's age to have been 36 and the bride 24. The affidavit made by Weber at the time he obtained the right to wed Miss Kowig gives his address at 2127 Archer street.

FORGERY IS CHARGED

Oklahoma Clergyman Is Arrested on Advices From Washington

Toledo, O., Jan. 8.—Rev. Henry B. Smith, 40 years old, of Ardmos, Okla., under arrest here on advices from Washington, charging forgery, will be taken east today.

Smith was arrested here after trying to gain entrance to the local Elks lodge under the name of Dr. Francis Fite, a resident of Muskogee, Okla. Smith was formerly in charge of an Episcopalian church in Ardmore, Okla.

Expense of "Axe Train"

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 8.—The Boston and Maine "axe train," which is carrying a group of officials over the road while they cut down expenses by laying off workmen on the different divisions, is costing about $500 a day. This includes hotel bills, running expenses and salaries for the conductor, engineers, two brakemen and a stenographer.

FOUR KILLED BY POISON

Philadelphia Police Have a Mysterious Case to Handle

Philadelphia, Jan. 8.—A mysterious poison, the nature of which remains unknown, killed four persons, sickened three others, of whom one may die, and nearly wiped out the family of William Flanagan. Every member of the Flanagan family with with the exception of Flanagan himself was killed, and the police are searching for him. He disappeared ten days ago after a quarrel with his wife.

Whether the slaughter was caused by poison in the food of the family or whether they were stricken by coal gas only the autopsy can determine.

The confusing features of the case have completely baffled the police, detectives and deputy coroners, and they will take no official action until post mortem examinations of the bodies are held.

The dead are Mrs. Bridget Flanagan, aged 38; Miss Annie Flanagan, aged 10; Joseph Gallagher, aged 15 months, nephew and adopted son of Flanagan, and Miss Catherine Murray, aged 18, a boarder.

PHELPS IN NEW QUARTERS

Condemned Murderer Is Removed From Prison's Death Cell

Boston, Jan. 8.—Silas N. Phelps, the condemned murderer, now awaiting execution at the state prison in Charlestown, was removed from the death cell adjoining the execution chamber to a cell in "Cherry Hill."

Phelps will be kept in Cherry Hill until some action is taken by the governor's new council. If they refuse commutation or a further reprieve, the condemned man will be taken back to the death cell on Jan. 20. That is the date set by the old council.

NEW INDICTMENTS IN DYNAMITE CASE

Federal Grand Jury Ends Work at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 8.—Two more blanket indictments have been returned by the federal grand jury in the nation-wide dynamite conspiracy case.

Three additional charges are enumerated in the new bills against Olaf Tveitmoe, Anton Johannsen, F. A. Clancy and J. E. Munsey, the labor leaders indicted last week together with the McNamara brothers and Ortie McManigal, but United States District Attorney McCormick intimates that the arrests of other men may occur at any time.

The close of the federal inquiry, for the time being at least, transferred interest in the dynamite cases to the county grand jury, which is now in quest of the men who are supposed to have furnished Bert Franklin with $20,000 with which to corrupt jurors in the trial of James B. McNamara.

BEST OF "WHITE HOPES"

Flynn Is Matched to Go Against Johnson In a Finish Fight

Chicago, Jan. 8.—After eighteen months of idleness, Jack Johnson, championship pugilist of the world, signed articles here to fight to a finish with Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, generally regarded as one of the best of the "white hopes."

The fight will take place in Nevada next July, either at Windward or Metropolis.

Johnson is to receive $31,100 and one-third of the receipts from the sale of the moving picture rights. Flynn's share of the purse was not announced. He will be paid by his manager, Jack Curley, who represented the promoters. Their identity is a secret.

POLITICIANS PONDERING

Gossip Started by Meeting Between Bryan and La Follette

Washington, Jan. 8.—William J. Bryan of Nebraska and Senator La Follette of Wisconsin conferred at Union station last night upon their joint arrival in the city, the former from the south and the latter from the west. The meeting was said to be accidental.

No sooner was it known, however, than tongues began to wag and third party talk flew thick and fast about the hotel corridors. It was not wholly confined to members of the Democratic national committee, who were gathering for the meeting today, but Republicans, too, showed a lively interest.

Q.—"Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in His Kingdom."—Matthew xvi, 28. Does this mean that some living at that time would continue to live on until the Lord's second advent? (C. W.)

Answer.—The word "Kingdom" properly rendered is royal majesty. Continuing the narrative on down into the next chapter, it is stated that six days afterwards, the Lord took Peter, James and John and went apart from the rest of the disciples, up into a high mountain, and was there transfigured before them. His face was gloriously illuminated and became as resplendent as the sun, while His raiment was white as the light. The royal majesty of the Lord's appearance, together with the "vision" of Moses and Elijah, and the bright cloud overshadowing all, formed an overwhelming arrangement of light and glory. The Apostle Peter afterwards, in writing of this glorious scene, declared that they were eyewitnesses of the majesty (royal majesty) of the Lord Jesus, and that they also heard the voice of the Heavenly Father coming from the excellent glory. (IIPeter i, 16-18.) In this way Matthew xvi, 28, was fulfilled. None were condemned to live until Christ's second advent.

Q.—Examining Luke xvii, 20, 21, we find that our Lord in addressing the Pharisees said—"The Kingdom of God is within you." Our Lord in another place addressing this same class said—"Ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outwardly, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so, ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." Are we to understand that the Kingdom of God was in the hearts of those hypocritical Pharisees: or what is the meaning of the expression "The Kingdom of God is within you?" (M. D. J.)

Answer.—Noting the preceding verses we see that the Lord had been telling the people about the Kingdom of God; and some permitted the thought to hold sway, that a literal kingdom was to be established in the earth such as the Jews had enjoyed during the days of King Solomon. With this thought in mind, the Pharisees, always seeking to entrap our Lord in His statements, asked when this Kingdom would come; saying, no doubt, "Where are your soldiers;" "What are the signs or indications of its approach;" "What will be its appearance?" And the Lord replied "The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation (with outward show and manifestation, it is an invisible kingdom): neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for behold, the Kingdom of God is among you (is present, invisible, unseen; it is a spiritual Kingdom and will come as "a thief in the night"). The words "within you" are a faulty translation from the original Greek.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

CHRIST CHURCH.

Rev. F. B. Allen, superintendent of the Episcopal City Mission, Boston, preached the sermon at Christ church Sunday morning. He told of the progress of this mission and its needs.

The Sunday school session and Galahad Brotherhood met at the usual hour and there was the usual evening meeting.

The last regular meeting of the Vestry of 1911 will be held in the rectory this evening at 8 o'clock. The budget for 1912 and other matters equally important will be considered. Every member should be present.

A special meeting of the Guild will be held Wednesday at 2.30. Business of importance, every member is urged to be present.

The regular meeting of the Boys' club will be held Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. A number of new games were recently added to the equipment. The boys have begun rehearsals for their annual play coached by Mr. Halvosa. Mr. Townsend, the director, needs an assistant. Will any young man who loves boys volunteer?

Reapers' Circle holds its annual meeting at the home of Miss Pollock, 32 Bigelow street, Friday evening, Jan. 12, at 7.45.

The date of the Annual Meeting of the parish is Jan. 24, at 8 o'clock. Please reserve this date. You will want to be present as a question of much interest to members and vital to the welfare of the parish will be brought up for discussion and decision.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

The pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached morning and evening. Morning topic: "God Servants." Isa. 65:14. In the evening at 7 continuing his series of sermons on "Men who did things," on "The man who dozed." Good congregations were present. Five persons received the Hand of Fellowship at the morning service, Mrs. Mary C. Pratt, Mrs. Hartwell J. Bartlett, Miss Ruth Bartlett, Wm. Bartlett, Miss Annie Bartlett. A large number remained for the Communion service which was very impressive.

Sunday school was held at 12.15. He began at this session a series of Studies on Jesus Christ" which will continue through the year. It is expected that a large number of those interested will be enrolled this year.

This is the Week of Prayer for all denominations throughout the world. In harmony with this fact special meetings will be held as follows for our people.

Tuesday at 7.45 P. M., cottage prayer meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Porter, 109 Taylor street, Selden H. Nickerson, leader.

Wednesday at 7.45 P. M. cottage prayer meeting at the house of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Dresser, 18 South Central avenue, Deacon George E. Thomas, leader.

Thursday at 7.45 P. M. cottage prayer meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Roberts, 202 Fayette street, James C. Porter, leader.

Friday at 7.45 P. M., regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony in the chapel. Subject: "His Prayerfulness." This subject will continue our meditations on the "Life and Character of Jesus."

Thursday at 7.45 P. M., the Nearer and Farther Lights society will meet at the parsonage. Subject: "Mexico." Leader, Miss Winnifred Church.

The annual business meeting of the Sunday school will be held in the chapel Tuesday evening, Jan. 16 at 7.45. It is hoped that a large number will be present.

Sunday morning, Jan. 21, the pastor expects to preach in South Boston in exchange with Pastor Blackburn and Monday, Jan. 22, the Walther Men's class will hold their monthly social.

BETHANY.

The services at Bethany church were well attended notwithstanding the cold. Rev. Asher Anderson, D. D., occupied the pulpit and took for his text, Romans 5th, Chapter 1st verse, "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Peace was the legacy of Jesus Christ to the world. By His teachings and example we can live more in harmony with our friends and neighbors, make better citizens and ultimately reach the highest attainment of peace through faith. This thought of peace pervaded the sermon which was very inspiring. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

At the close of the services Mr. Bromley, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. his wife and daughter, Miss Helen Bromley united with the church by letter from their home church in Ansonia, Conn. In behalf of the church, and also for the sake of the close friendship which exists between Dr. Anderson and the Bromley family, he welcomed them most cordially to the environments of Bethany church and all it holds most sacred.

After the closing hymn was sung the celebration of the Lord's Supper was observed reverently.

WASHINGTON STREET CONGREGATIONAL.

The usual morning services were held at 10.45 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. Charles P. Marshall preached from the text: "Lovest thou me?" Communion followed.

At 5 o'clock in afternoon the men's club held a social hour, and discussion of various topics.

At the evening service at 7.30 o'clock, the usual praise service was held, the pastor delivering a short address.

Wednesday, the Ladies' Aid society will hold a supper and entertainment. The supper will begin at 6.30 and the entertainment will take place at 8 o'clock.

The home missionary society will hold its regular monthly meeting in the vestry Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock and the usual midweek service will take place at 7.30 o'clock.

T. B. Pollard, who has so faithfully officiated as choir master, has resigned and his place has been taken by John Hendrey who assumed the duties yesterday.

UNIVERSALIST.

Despite the inclement weather, a good congregation assembled in the Universalist church Sunday to listen to the sermon prepared by the pastor, Rev. Fannie Austin, who took for her theme, "Opportunities." Miss Austin spoke in part of the grand opportunities in life, if people would only grasp them.

How many neglected the Divine right which was accorded to them in a thoughtless manner. The highest aim in life is to make the most of our opportunities in whatever station God has placed us. The sermon was very instructive and uplifting. The usual Sunday school session was held also the Young People's service in the evening.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

Rev. Chester A. Drummond of the First church, Somerville, preached in exchange with Rev. Carl G. Horst at the Wollaston Unitarian church Sunday morning. He read the narrative of the Prodigal Son as the scripture lesson, taking his text from the 17th verse, "And when he came to himself," portraying the evolution of the conscience from the primitive conception of atonement and sacrifice, to the higher state of understanding of man's relation to God which makes of conscience a purifying fire and verily the voice of God in one's own heart.

Yesterday was a red letter day in the history of the Young People's Religious Union. The service was held in the church auditorium and was in charge of Mrs. Frank A. Page's Sunday school class of young ladies. A large chorus, accompanied by the organ and an orchestra of twelve pieces, and under the efficient leadership of musical director E. F. DeNormandie, sang with splendid effect Ballard's great musical work, the ninety-first Psalm. The soloists, who added so much to the evening's program, were the Misses Penley and Litchfield, Mrs. Royal L. Turner, Mrs. F. A. Page, Mrs. W. J. King, Gorham Nickerson, H. J. Gurney, Waldo Bates and James Rogers. Walter E. Rogers of Quincy presided at the organ.

The net proceeds of the fair recently held at Hotel Vendome, Boston, were $1,684.00. Our own chapter had charge of the dolls' table, from which under the management of Miss Almira Simmons and her assistants a handsome sum was realized.

The great work of the church is to supply the world with good men and good women.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus W. Poole of our parish sail this week Wednesday for a sojourn abroad, taking in Italy, Switzerland, France, Belgium and England.

The Wollaston Unitarian club meets Tuesday, dinner at 6.30. Speaker: The Rev. Edward Cummings, subject: "Ratification of the General Arbitration treaties."

Quite a number of ladies from our parish are planning to attend the neighborhood meeting of Alliances in Unity church, Brockton, Tuesday.

The Wednesday noon King's Chapel service, will be conducted by the Rev. W. H. Lyons, D. D., of Brookline.

The Unitarian Church-Helpers will meet at the home of Mrs. C. E. Barker, 294 Fayette street, Thursday, at 2 o'clock.

Sunday afternoonfi Jan. 14, at 4.30 o'clock, the usual vesper service will be held. Please be in your seat five minutes before the hour of service. At the last vespers not a few of our friends had to be satisfied with seats in the vestibule.

The next meeting of the Unitarian Sunday School Union of Greater Boston will be held in the Church of the Disciples, Monday, Jan. 15.

The New England Associate Alliance will hold its midwinter session at West Newton, Jan. 18, at 10.30 A. M.

The next Y. P. R. U. stereopticon lecture comes Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, Jan. 21. Subject: "The old Americans." Speaker: William Ware Locke of Boston.

The Japanese Unitarian church of Oakland, Cal., was recently organized with a membership of about fifty. The Rev. H. Aoto has been called to the pastorate.

These intending to be married are reminded of the new law regarding marriage licenses. The law says: "Persons who intend to be joined in marriage shall, not less than five days before their marriage, cause notice of their intentions to be entered in the office of the clerk or registrar of the city or town in which they respectively dwell.

A beautiful tablet to the memory of the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., has been placed in the South Congregational church, Boston, of which he was minister from 1856 to 1909

The annual business meeting of our church takes place on the fourth Monday in January.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

The usual services were held Sunday at St. Chrysostom's church.

The annual parish meeting will be held in the parish rooms tonight at eight o'clock. After the business the Women's Guild will serve refreshments. A meeting of the building committee will precede the meeting at 7.30.

The annual meeting of the Guild for the election of officers will be held Wednesday afternoon at half past two in the parish rooms.

The regular monthly meeting of the Vestry will be held at the rectory Thursday evening, at eight o'clock.

The thirty-sixth meeting of the Archdeaconry of New Bedford, of which St. Chrysostom's parish is a member, will be held at Grace church, Norwood, Tuesday, Jan. 9, beginning at 11.00 A. M., and continuing into the afternoon. Delegates from this parish are to be elected at the annual meeting on Monday evening.

The annual missionary conference of the Union will take place in Jacob Sleeper hall, 688 Boylston street, Boston, Monday, Jan. 15. The afternoon session opens at 4.45 and the evening session at 7.30. All persons are welcome at this conference. The official delegates from the Parish school are Miss Leah Hennigar and Mrs. F. Waite.

The following notice has been received from the Commission on Social Service of the Dioceses of Massachusetts, consisting of The Rev. Messrs. van Allen, Kimball and Addison and Mr. P. S. Parker. "The Commission on Social Service of the Diocese of Massachusetts has arranged a special service, for the discussion of social questions, to be held in Trinity church, Boston, on Sunday evening, Jan. 7, 1912, at 8.00 P. M. Bishop Lawrence, Chairman of the Commission on Social Service appointed by the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, will deliver the address. It is increasingly evident that there is a growing sympathy and understanding between all citizens who believe in co-operation and justice. It will be beneficial to us all to hear the words of Bishop Lawrence, a man of wide experience in dealing with the affairs of our time."

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. E. W. Whitney of Waltham occupied the pulpit at the First church Sunday morning and preached an appropriate sermon to the New Year. It was a remarkably strong presentation of the hopeful outlook, his reference to history, including the traditions of the First church, being eloquent, and moved the entire congregation.

MEMORIAL CONGREGATIONAL.

At the morning service of Memorial church Sunday, five were received into membership. The pastor in his sermon made an appeal for "An Open Door in the Church" where boys could spend evenings with the best environments, intsead of around the places where most of them form the cigarette habit.

The evening service was mostly musical. Miss Emma Walker accompanied with the violin. It is intended to have a musical service, the first Sunday of each month hereafter.

The church is to observe this week as the week of prayer. Meetings will be held at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Polsom, 54 Marshall street and

A WOMAN'S REVENGE.

Sensational Incident of the Civil War In Mexico.

In the civil war in Mexico, which resulted in the downfall of Diaz, a sensational incident took place—the seizure of Colonel Chiapas by an avenger. At the beginning of the insurrection Chiapas had command for the government of the Sonora district, and he quickly became known for his severity. Among those who suffered was a rich resident named Talamantes, who, with his two sons, was arrested on the charge of sympathizing with the insurrectos.

After a brief hearing the three were condemned to death. Mme. Talamantes pleaded with Chiapas for the life of her husband and sons, offering everything they possessed, but the colonel replied to her entreaties only with sneers, refused her request, had the three men taken to the grounds of their own hacienda, forced Mme. Talamantes to remain within hearing of the shots and had them executed.

The widow changed from a retiring, undemonstrative woman to a vigorous avenger. Having ample financial resources, she first offered $20,000 to any one who would deliver Chiapas alive into her hands. Then she organized a troop of armed men, put herself at its head and joined the insurgents. Soon the Talamantes became one of the strongest and most effective forces among the rebels. Her avowed purpose was to capture Chiapas. When the federals evacuated Agua Prieta the widow ambushed a detachment led by Chiapas, who in the fight was wounded and delivered to her. Within two hours of his capture she compelled him to dig his own grave. He stood at its edge, and she personally gave the command to fire to her twelve troopers who faced him. — London Family Herald.

Churchill Advocates Extension of the Home Rule Principle

London, Jan. 8.—Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, in a public statement, advocates Irish home rule, saying it will do more than anything else to promote perpetual peace between England and the United States, and will lead to a general union of all English speaking people.

He cites forty-six state legislatures of the United States as examples of what home rule would do, and advocates extension for the home rule principle to all countries embraced in the British empire, so that the imperial parliament meeting in London could give full attention to large imperial measures, which is impossible in a parliament such as at present, with a calendar clogged by purely parochial questions.

COLORS AND NERVES.

Red and Yellow Are Said to Have a Stimulating Effect.

That colors have a profound psychological effect on human beings is a fact that should be emphasized. Used in small quantities, either in the clothing or in household decoration, the color red, for instance, is most stimulating, both in the way of helping to overcome depression and quickening the intellectual processes. But when used in any amount it tends to overstimulation, with resultant nerve strain. According to a leading English authority who has made a careful study of the psychology of colors, there are some people so constituted that they become violently excited, fall into convulsions or faint if obliged even for a short time to look at any thing vividly red.

The same effect has been noted from yellow. In one instance, the case of a man operated on at the age of thirty years for congenital cataract, it is recorded that "the first time he saw yellow he became so sick that he thought he would vomit." And that yellow has a nerve stimulating effect fully comparable with that of red is curiously evidenced by the statement of a friend of mine, a shrewd observer, who says:

"Whenever the day is overcast or I have to do a piece of work calling for unusual mental exertion I always wear a red or yellow necktie. I find that either color has a beneficial effect on my thinking apparatus."—H. Addington Bruce in Ainslee's.

The Usual Motion.

To a judge at St. Joseph, Mo., an old negro once applied for a marriage license. It was not the province of the judge to issue such a paper; but, knowing the applicant's history, he asked:

"Ephraim, were you ever married before?"

"Jes' once, jedge," was the reply.

"Wasn't that enough?"

"Mebbe, jedge, but I want a new trial."—St. Louis Republic.

A Gilded Fad.

"Yes, papa is going to buy me a battleship."

"Good gracious! I beg your pardon, what for?"

VICTIMS OF HUMOR.

Proctor Knott and "Sunset" Cox Bewailed Their Funny Tags.

The late Proctor Knott seems to be remembered chiefly as the author of the facetious Duluth speech, says the New York World. Yet he was a great lawyer, and as chairman of the house committee on the judiciary he had to do with serious and vastly important affairs. Mr. Knott's single appearance as a humorist fixed his reputation for all time, and no amount of profoundly serious work could change it.

Samuel S. Cox had a similar experience with greater reason for in early life he had cultivated the risibles quite devotedly. Mr. Knott lived long enough to perceive that he was to be identified not with learning or public service, but with an oratorical exaggeration, and Mr. Cox found in his maturity that the speakership, the goal of his career, was denied him because it was no place for a funny man.

Although never a humorist, Proctor Knott accomplished something with satire and irony in which most men fail. He made himself understood. Everbody knew that he was joking. Nobody ever demanded an explanation of his remarks on Duluth or a retraction or an apology. From that viewpoint, therefore, he was one of the successful men of his generation.

AFRICAN RHINOS.

They Are Nervous and Cowardly Rather Than Ferocious.

Instead of being a savagely ferocious animal, the African rhinoceros is a cowardly, shortsighted creature, according to John T. McCutcheon in "Hunting Adventures in the Big Game Country." He says:

"After the rhino has taken his dirt wallow and looks fine in his new red coat he then slowly and painstakingly proceeds to kill time during the rest of the day. If danger threatens he becomes exceedingly nervous and excited. His anxiety is quite acute. In vain he tries to locate the danger, rushing one way for a few yards, then the other way and finally all ways at once. His tail is up, and he is snorting like a steam engine.

When he rushes toward you in this attitude it looks very much as though he were charging you with the purpose of trampling you to flinders. As a matter or fact—or, rather, opinion—he is merely trying to locate where you are in order that he may run the other way. He looks terrifying, but in reality is probably badly terrified himself. He would give a good deal to know which way to run and finally becomes so excited and nervous that he starts frantically in some direction, hoping for the best. If the rush happens to be in your direction you call it a charge from an infuriated rhino; if not, you say that he looked nasty and was about to charge, but finally ran away in another direction.

In most rhino charges it is my opinion that the rhino is too rattled to know what he is doing, and instead of charging maliciously he is merely trying to get away as fast as possible. And in such cases the hunter blazes away at him, wounds him, and the rhino blindly charges the flash.

No Making Up Just Then.

The curtain lecture had finished and Mrs. Garrill, feeling that perhaps she had overdone the matter, began to read little items from the newspaper.

"Ha!" she said. "That's funny, isn't it, George? Here's a man advertises for a silent partner with a thousand dollars."

"Yes," said Garrill. "It's terribly funny. If he'd married you he'd have been darned glad to get a silent partner even if she hadn't a cent."

Whereupon the thermometer got such a sudden jar that it fell from the mantelpiece to the floor.—Harper's Weekly.

BRIEFS

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held this evening.

William B. Boyd a West Quincy boy now located in Washington, was in town over Sunday.

Hon. and Mrs. Russell A. Sears of Glendale road welcomed a little daughter to their home Saturday night.

Dr. W. D. Parkinson, superintendent of schools in Waltham is to speak on "Sex Education" tomorrow evening at the meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association.

The cold snap Saturday caused delay in the operation of trains at the South Terminal owing to the freezing of the pneumatic switches. All the afternoon trains were late, and kept getting later as the evening drew on, so that at midnight the trains were over an hour late, the train due at 11.55 not arriving until after midnight.

HODENOSAUNEE TRIBE.

Friday eveninf at 8 o'clock in Greenleaf hall the Chiefs of Hodenosaunee Tribe No. 62, Improved Order of Red Men will be raised to their stumps by Deputy Great Sachem Buker and staff of Campello. Believing that a closer relationship between the fraternal order of Quincy would be beneficial to all, the tribe has extended an invitation to the presiding officers of the various lodges to be present on the occasion and it is earnestly hoped that each lodge will be represented.

INTERESTING HISTORIC PAPER.

Susannah Tufts Chapter, D. A. R., of Weymouth, held the meeting of Dec. 27 with Mrs. A. G. Bowditch, Mrs. Frank O. Wellington, the regent, presided, and after a brief business session the speaker of the afternoon, Miss Susan B. Willard, regent of the Old Colony Chapter of Hingham, gave an instructive historical paper entitled "The Hazlitt Family in America." It was learned from her paper that Rev. John Hazlitt came to America from Ireland in 1783, accompanied by his wife and three children. They lived in the Abigail Smith house of Weymouth until 1787, when the family moved to Hingham. Rev. John Hazlitt delivered lectures in Boston, walking from Weymouth to that city. Members of the chapter were greatly surprised to learn there were monkeys and parrots in the forests of Weymouth at that time, as stated by Miss Willard. A son of Mr. Hazlitt was an artist, and some of his paintings may be seen in Hingham.

CLEMENCY PLEA BY RICHESON

Will Follow His Sentence to the Electric Chair

HIS CONFESSION OF MURDER

It Fails to Move District Attorney, Who Remains Deaf to Offer to Plead Guilty to Crime in Second Degree—Clergyman's Only Hope Is In Governor and Council—Slayer Who Took Avis Linnell's Life by Poison Says His Conscience and Manhood Will Not Permit Him to Still Further Wrong Her by Public Trial

Boston, Jan. 8.—Standing before the community a self confessed slayer of his former fiancee, Avis Linnell of Hyannis, Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson will plead guilty to murder in the first degree before Judge Sanderson in the superior criminal court, about 4 o'clock this afternoon, and will be sentenced to death in the electric chair, which is the only penalty prescribed by law.

District Attorney Pelletier refused to accept an offer of a plea to murder in the second degree, made by counsel for the prisoner at a conference in the district attorney's office Friday evening.

The defendant will rely entirely upon a commutation of the death sentence to imprisonment for life by Governor Foss and the executive council. After the case is disposed of by sentence the matter will be in the hands of the governor upon a petition for commutation.

District Attorney Pelletier will forward to the governor all the evidence he possesses, leaving the determination of the disposition to be made by the chief executive to the latter's discretion.

The prisoner admits that he gave the deadly poison to the girl in the afternoon of the day she died, Oct. 14, with a view that she take it under a mistaken notion that it would relieve the unfortunate physical condition for which he was held responsible.

He met her by appointment in front of the Hotel Touraine, corner of Tremont and Boylston streets, at 1:30 that afternoon and walked with her to a cafe, where they dined.

After luncheon they walked out Commonwealth avenue. It is understood that at the corner of Massachusetts avenue the defendant took a car for Brookline, where he went to the home of Miss Violent Edmands, whom he was to marry Oct. 31, if his plan to get rid of the music student, whom he wooed and won while a pastor at her native town of Hyannis, had not miscarried.

Pelletier Immovable

John L. Lee and William A. Morse, counsel for the defendant, had a conference with Pelletier in the latter's office Friday afternoon and evening. They tried to induce the prosecuting attorney to accept a plea to murder in the second degree, and for hours they discussed the case from every angle, but the district attorney was immovable.

From his point of view a killing by poison was a first degree murder, in that it had all the elements requisite for that degree, namely, that the killing was accomplished by a deliberately premediated act with malice aforethought.

There was no second degree to the case. The defendant was either guilty or innocent of first degree murder, and he plainly told the attorneys for the defense so. He steadfastly adhered to his determination not to enter into a compromise.

Hope Abandoned by Counsel

A week ago he had issued a statement in which he said no compromise was possible and he would accept only a plea to murder in the first degree. Finally counsel gave up all hope of influencing the prosecuting attorney to alter his determination to prosecute the case with a view to a conviction of murder in the first degree.

A plea to murder in the first degree or trial was the ultimatum of the district attorney to Lee and Morse, and the latter ultimately concluded that they would carry out the wishes of their client, who had already in a written statement which they possessed confessed to the offense under which he was indicted, namely, murder in the first degree. So they informed the attorney for the commonwealth that their client confessed and would accept the consequences.

Compromise Impossible

Pelletier, it is said, told counsel that he did not care whether their client pleaded or not, that he had a case of murder in the first degree beyond any reasonable doubt.

Perhaps no man connected with the case was more profoundly surprised than the district attorney when he learned that the defense would plead to first degree murder. He had regarded a compromise impossible because he would not compromise. He would accept only a plea to first degree and he never conceived it possible that such a plea would be offered.

District Attorney In the Richeson Murder Trial.

However, it is now understood by the district attorney and the counsel for the defense that the prisoner will take a chance of saving his life through executive clemency.

The Confession

Boston, Jan. 5, 1912.

John L. Lee, Esq., William A. Morse, Esq., Philip R. Dunbar, Esq.:

Gentlemen—Deeply penitent for my sin, and earnestly desiring, as far as in my power lies, to make atonement, I hereby confess that I am guilty of the offense of which I stand indicted.

I am moved to this course by no inducement of self-benefit or leniency. Heinous as is my crime, God has not wholly abandoned me, and my conscience and manhood, however depraved and blighted, will not admit of my still further wronging by a public trial her whose pure young life I have destroyed.

Under the lashings of remorse I have suffered, and am still suffering the tortures of the damned. In this I find a measure of comfort. In my mental anguish I recognize that there is still, by the mercy of the Master, some remnant of the divine spark of goodness still lingering with me.

I could wish to live only because within some prison's walls I might, in some small measure, redeem my sinful past, help some other despairing soul, and at last find favor with my God.

You are instructed to deliver this to the district attorney or to the judge of the court. Sincerely yours,

Clarence V. T. Richeson.

Chronology of the Case

Oct. 10—Tuesday afternoon pastor bought poison at Hahn's drug store, Newton, "to kill a dog."

HOW TO KEEP MEDICINES.

Suggestions For Avoiding Accidents In Handling Drugs.

Keep medicines in a wall closet so high as to be wholly out of reach of childish hands. Have double doors to it, each with a separate and secure lock, catching in a bar at the middle. All the inside ought to be cut up into pigeonholes. In one side keep every sort of stuff that is even remotely poisonous.

In the other store such standard things as calomel, borax, bicarbonate of soda, prepared chalk, Dover's powder, blue mass, quinine, castor oil, rhubarb, epsom, rochelle and Carlsbad salts, alum, dry copperas, spirits turpentine, spirits camphor, alcohol, whisky, brandy, all the family of herbs and barks, lint, bandages, finger stalls, adhesive plaster, burn salves, healing salves, dry mustard and healing lotions. Keep everything in bottles, wide mouthed bottles, with either screw tops or ground glass stoppers. Wrap the medicine bottles in blue paper to exclude light and label them outside in addition to labeling the bottles.

Never put a half used prescription or any medicine of unknown composition up in this closet. Throw away any compound left over. There is no telling what changes time may work in it. Upon the poison side keep opium, laudanum, morphine, cocaine, dry bluestone, white vitriol, flowers of sulphur, paris green, dry corrosive sublimate, dry chloride of lime, all the family of acids—oxalic, nitric, sulphuric, carbolic—ether, chloroform, tartar emetic or any other substance capable of harm.

Each substance should be in a tightly stoppered bottle or tin or wooden box, so well closed air cannot get in or out. This half of the closet must be kept always locked and should have a single key, always in possession of the house mistress and seldom trusted out of her sight.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Apple Cake. A pleasant variation on the jelly and cream filling used for layer cakes may be made of apples. Beat one egg light in a bowl and to it add a cup of sugar; add to this the strained juice and grated rind of one lemon. Peel and grate three ripe tart apples directly into this mixture, stirring each in well before adding another. When all are put in, put in a double boiler, and stir over the fire until the apple custard is boiling hot and quite thick. Cool and spread between cakes.

Cream of Carrot. Put on a quart of water. When boiling add a very small onion, cut fine, and two new carrots cut in quite small pieces. Cook until nearly tender, then see that there are two and a half cups of water, as it boils away at some times more than others. Mix two rounding tablespoons of flour with a half a cup of cold water, add to the soup. When the carrots are done add one cup of evaporated milk, salt, pepper and butter to taste. Let boil up and serve without straining. This is very delicate, and if more of the carrot flavor is desired, of course put in more carrot, which would make it more resemble creamed carrot.

Savory Rice Scallops. Rice can be the most tasteless dish in creation, I think; but it don't have to be. These scallops are fine: Use half a pound of rice, two ounces of cheese (grated) half a pint of milk, an ounce and a half of dripping, pepper and salt and breadcrumbs; wash the rice, put it in a saucepan with boiling water slightly salted, boil up and drain, put it back into the pan, add the milk (hot) and about half a pint of hot water and cook until tender; stir in half the cheese and enough pepper to taste, grease a pie dish or some little tin molds, sprinkle with breadcrumbs, put in the cooked rice, sprinkle the top with grated cheese and breadcrumbs and put a few tiny bits of butter here and there; bake in a hot oven for 20 minutes.

Fruit Fritters. Almost any kind of fruit, either fresh or canned, may be used in fritters. Cut up and sprinkle with sugar, add a little grated lemon rind, if liked, and let stand for two or three hours if possible. Then drain, and, if cut in slices, dip them in the batter before frying. If chopped fine, stir into the batter and fry in spoonfuls.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SAVORY SANDWICHES.

THE making of sandwiches is an art. So many persons are content to call two thick slices of buttered bread interlined with a slice of ham, tongue, chicken, etc., a sandwich that it seems some missionary work really ought to be done along this line.

For the making of sandwiches special bread should be used. A kind that is moist yet firm in grain is best. When cutting the slices first butter and then with a very sharp knife shave off as thinly as possible. Then the crusts should be chipped off. If you want your sandwiches in ornamental shapes use a cake cutter or shape them with a thin bladed knife.

For Afternoon Teas.

When served for afternoon tea the sandwiches should be prettily arranged on a dish with a doily beneath them.

Lamb Sandwiches.—Nice sandwiches are made thus: Mince cold lamb very fine, moisten with a little cream, add salt and some chopped watercress. Spread on thin buttered slices of bread, cut them into fancy shapes—hearts, squares, oblongs, ovals, diamonds and stars.

Afternoon Tea Sandwiches.—For afternoon tea sandwiches sprinkle a little minced fresh mint on the butter just before putting the sandwiches together. The mint is especially refreshing.

Substantial Ones.

Club Sandwiches.—Toast three half inch slices of bread. Heat four tablespoonfuls of milk, add one-fourth teaspoonful of butter, dash of red pepper and thicken with a little cornstarch dissolved in a tablespoonful of water. Into this put two level tablespoonfuls of chopped beef. Cut a tomato into half inch slices, season with one teaspoonful of olive oil mixed with one-half teaspoonful of vinegar and a pinch of salt. Put creamed chipped beef between two layers of toast, add the tomato and third slice of toast. Butter the top. Set in the oven several minutes before serving.

Emergency Sandwiches.—A crisp leaf of lettuce between thin slices of bread with a teaspoonful of mayonnaise is a dainty sandwich. Slices of cucumbers in place of lettuce are always favorites of the sandwich plate. Ground cold boiled ham or minced chicken with mayonnaise to complete its flavor is good. Cold boiled eggs chopped fine and made into a paste with dressing are palatable.

DESTROYER IN TROUBLE

Engines, Pumps and Wireless Disabled and Stores Ruined

New York, Jan. 8.—Wireless messages indistinctly received here report the torpedo boat destroyer Terry in trouble. The vessel's position is given as a little northeast of Cape Hatteras. The vessel is in communication with the steamer Tagus and the battleship South Carolina.

Advices by wireless from vessels in communication with the Terry were to the effect that the destroyer's turbine engines and pumps are out of commission, that all her stores are ruined and her wireless apparatus is not working.

The revenue cutter Onondaga is reported by the South Carolina as in the immediate vicinity of the Terry.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies to-day that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

Mrs. F. J. Reid, 81 West street, Whitman, Mass., says: "After suffering for many years with kidney complaint and spending a great amount of money for medicine without being helped, I was indeed gratified when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me so quickly. The pains in my back never ceased and I could not sleep well, getting up in the morning as tired as when I went to bed. I had begun to look bad and was growing despondent when I happened to read about Doan's Kidney Pills. Procuring a supply I began to use them and the contents of three boxes cured me.

The above statement was given on Oct. 6, 1908 and when Mrs. Reid was inteviewed on July 27, 1911, she said: "I have no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills and I willingly confirm my former statement. I use this remedy occasionally when in need of a kidney remedy and always find relief."

MYSTERY IN GIRL'S DEATH

Supposed Suicide Believed to Have Been Murder

KILLED BY POISON TABLETS

Suspicion That Strychnine Was Given Under Similar Circumstances to Those In Linnell Case—Doctor Who Arrives at Bedside Just Before Victim Passes Away Says She Had Become a Mother Just Previously

Westford, Mass., Jan. 8.—Facts brought to light in connection with the mysterious death of 20-year-old Lucy Lambert, who died in convulsions Saturday morning, have aroused the police of Westford to the belief that the girl died under circumstances not unlike those attending the death of Avis Linnell.

As a result of two autopsies which he performed upon the dead girl's body, Medical Examiner Buckley said last night that he will make a report to District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex county and that, while technically this report will ascribe the girl's death to suicide by strychnine poisoning, it will indicate that the death was under dubious circumstanes.

Dr. Buckley said he found evidence that the girl had become a mother before she died and that death was due to poisoning, probably by strychnine.

Dr. Buckley said that two Westford persons, unnamed, will in all probability be required to give careful explanations in connection with the girl's death. Further than this the medical examiner did not care to make statements.

District Attorney Higgins said last night that he will at once begin a rigid examination as to the girl's death.

The girl died at the home of her wealthy uncle, Henry O. Keyes, where she had lived in Westford for two years. It is understood her baby is living.

Dr. Sherman of Graniteville, who attended the girl while she was dying, said last night:

"I was called about 5 o'clock Saturday morning by a man who came to the door and told me a woman was dying and said she had taken strychnine. I had about two miles to drive to get to the house. I should say I got there about 5:40 and the girl died about ten minutes later. I did all I could for her, but saw she was dying, which she herself must have realized.

"When I got into the house the girl's uncle told me she said she had taken strychnine. I asked her if she had and she said yes, that she had taken pills.

"I picked up the box, which was close at hand and she pointed to it, indicating that that was the box, and said that the box had contained strychnine pills and she had taken all of them, although she said it was not labelled strychnine. She said it was what 'they' had given her to take.

"She could say little more, as she was in convulsions and dying. I was unable to get her to explain who 'they' were, how many pills were in the box, when she had taken them, or why she had taken them.

"I found the box was as she said. It was a box which was presumably intended to contain some sort of tablets. It bore no strychnine label, but had evidently been labelled with a prescription which read something about taking before and after meals.

"The convusions in which the girl died were symptoms of strychnine poisoning and that seemed the likely cause of death. I found she had become a mother some time previously during the night and I believe the baby is living.

"I was merely called to attend the girl when she was dying and had never attended her or known anything about her."

SETTLES DEBTS IN FULL

Money Sent by Fugitive, but His Whereabouts Kept Secret

Seymour, Ind., Jan. 8.—Arthur H. DeGoyler, formerly connected with a real estate and loan company, who disappeared in 1909, and whose assets paid his creditors about 6 cents on the dollar, has forwarded $20,000 to pay his debts in full.

The money was brought here by O. H. Montgomery, who refused to tell where DeGoyler is or what he is doing. As the money was paid the creditors signed a petition, and all the suits against DeGoyler were dismissed in the circuit court.

EDISON FORGETS TO PAY HIS CHAUFFEUR

Taxi Man Has Anxious Hours Until Bill Is Settled

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Geniuses are credited with being absent minded and oblivious to money matters, and Thomas A. Edison lived up to his reputation when he hired a taxi to take him from the Blackstone hotel to the Continental and Commercial National bank.

Upon reaching the bank the inventor disappeared within the president's office, and the driver of the taxicab never saw him more. After waiting for an hour the chauffeur went within and inquired as to the whereabouts of his fare. Unable to obtain any information, he waited four hours longer, varying the monotony by frequent telephone calls to the hotel and visits within the bank.

Finally, when 6 o'clock had arrived, he returned to the Blackstone and told the story of having lost his distinguished passenger. Edison could not remember whether he had told the man to wait or not, nor could he recall just how he had gone from the bank to his next appointment, but gave orders that the chauffeur's bill should be settled in full.

CURES ILLS OF SWINE

Nebraska Man Says He Is the Only Hog Dentist In the World

Washington, Jan. 8.—Dentistry for hogs is advocated by an Omaha correspondent of Postmaster General Hitchcock, who received a letter from a South Omaha citizen who proclaims that he can cure all hog diseases through fixing their teeth.

The department of agriculture and government officials have been wondering, he says, what has been killing the hogs, and he has the correct answer. Every disease known to swine is due to bad teeth, and his remedy is good for well hogs as well as sick hogs. "I am," the writer concludes, "the only hog dentist in the world."

CUMMINS' HEAVY DEBTS

Has Assets of $135,000 to Meet Obligations Reaching $4,680,020

New York, Jan. 8.—Schedules in bankruptcy of William J. Cummins, the former officer and director of the Carnegie Trust company, filed in the federal court, show total liabilities of $4,680,020 and assets of $125,600, consisting of real estate in Tennessee, mortgaged for $29,000.

Of the liabilities claims amounting to $3,702,102 are secured by stocks in the Carnegie Trust company and a number of corporations.

BRIEFS

A newsy Ledger tomorrow. Don't fail to secure a copy.

Mayor Stone is to announce his appointments of heads of departments tonight.

Arthur P. Homer motor boat builder has opened a branch office in Portland, Maine.

Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers is to be the speaker tomorrow afternoon at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club.

William W. Gallaway of Weymouth has a rifle and Mr. Tirrell of South Braintree a shotgun as souvenirs of the benefit to Mrs. Lyons.

A voluntary bankruptcy petition was filed in the United States district court, Boston, on Saturday, by Charles S. Pearson, salesman, Quincy; liabilities, $1970; no assets.

Letter carriers of the Boston postal district are arranging for their annual dance in aid of the relief fund. It will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 20, at Mechanics' building, Boston.

The Young Women's club is to form a sewing class tomorrow evening at half past seven at the clubhouse of the Quincy Women's club, Goffe street. All young women interested are invited to attend and join the class.

Mrs. Emma Blagden of Franklin street had the misfortune to fall Saturday evening at the corner of Kendrick avenue and Franklin street, receiving a painful shake up which has confined her to her bed.

The Thordis proved a stayer in Quincy bay, a rival to the Saltair in lapping winter into spring. Dr. F. E. Dawes had the Thordis out on Christmas day with several guests. She and the Saltair were not stored for the dinter till ice began to form in the bay. Chester Collins, owner ol the Saltair, usually holds the local record for late hauling out.

RAIDED COAL CARS.

Six Italians living near the South Braintree railroad station becoming short of coal Saturday and Sunday made an effort to replenish their supply by making a raid on the coal cars of the New Haven railroad at South Braintree. Railroad police officers were hot on their trail however with the result that the six were arraigned before Judge Avery in the district court this morning for larceny. After hearing the evidence in the cases the court ordered them to make restitution and to pay costs. They amounted to $2 each.

MAYONNAISE.

The Way the Genuine Dressing Is Prepared by French Cooks.

Housewives concoct all sorts of dressings—cooked and uncooked—which they call mayonnaise, but which are not properly entitled to that name. The genuine mayonnaise as prepared by French cooks is made by combining olive oil, egg yoke and vinegar without cooking in such a way that the mixture will not curdle. The proportions of these ingredients and the method of putting them together may be varied, and mustard and similar seasonings may be added, but fundamentally the real mayonnaise is always the same. The following rule will be found a good one:

Have ready one egg yolk, one scant cupful of olive oil, three teaspoonfuls of vinegar, a saltspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of sugar, a light dust of cayenne and a level half teaspoonful of powdered mustard. Break the yolk with a fork, beat the mustard, salt, pepper and sugar into it and when a smooth mixture has been formed begin adding the oil, drop by drop, until the whole begins to look like creamed butter. Then pour in the oil faster until all is used. While the oil is being added the dressing should be beaten constantly with a fork. Last of all, pour in the vinegar very slowly, beating the dressing rapidly while doing so. Set it on ice to stand until wanted and add it to the salad the last moment before serving.

It is well to have everything very cold when making this dressing, although excellent mayonnaise has been made without the use of ice, but the oil must not be so cold that it has begun to thicken. It is sometimes stated that the drop by drop method is unnecessary, but while success may be obtained by putting the ingredients together more quickly it is always risky to do so. The drop by drop method practically insures success. If desired lime juice may be substituted for the vinegar.—Exchange.

FRENCH POLICEMEN.

They Can't Be "Fixed," and They Are Always Polite.

The laws of France relative to the out of door life of the masses are made in the interest of the people. Furthermore, they are enforced. There is no fixing things with a French policeman. If your bicycle has suddenly been twisted into junk by a careless driver the belted and brass buttoned gentleman who arrives on the scene questions you with intelligence and jots down in his notebook the facts of the occurrence as near as he can ascertain them. Throughout the interview he is polite, alert and painstaking in getting at the exact truth, and, whether you or the offending driver or both accompany him to the police station, he conducts you with a quiet dignity and an air of fulfilling his duty. It does not make the slightest difference in France who you are or whether or not you have mutual friends or come from his "ward" or are a relative of Congressman So-and-so. If you are at fault you must pay the damages. If the other fellow is to blame you will be ushered from the presence of the commissaire de police with as much ceremonial politeness as would be shown at a diplomatic interview.

If it is boiling hot or freezing cold and you are in need of information, go to the nearest policeman, address him as "monsieur" and raise your hat. He will immediately return you a military salute, listen attentively and give you, as carefully as possible, the necessary information, saluting you again as you raise your hat to leave him.—F. Berkeley Smith, "Parisians Out of Doors."

QUINCY Y.M.C.A. AN EASY WINNER

Beats Cambridge Y. M. C. A. in Dual Meet Saturday

WRESTLING BOUTS

Members of the Quincy .Y M. C. A., track team turned the tables on their opponents from the University City Association in the local gymnasium Saturday and emerged from the second annual indoor dual meet of both associations with 39 1-2 points to their credit, while only 15 1-2 points were obtained by the Cambridge boys. Last year the meet was held at Cambridge and the local boys lost in a close and exciting series of games, 33 1-2 to 31 1-2.

While the local boys showed their superiority in every department Saturday, there were times when those present were treated to events of a most interesting nature. J. McArdle, one of the most valuable members of the local Y. M. C. A. track team established a new gym record for the running high jump, being successful in going over the pole placed at 5 feet, 6 inches. In the relay race the local team won by a narrow margin because of the fact that Wilson of the opposing team ran such a fast and sturdy race that he decreased the big lead of the Quincy boys to a considerable degree.

Two special features of the events were the wrestling bouts. Paul Skevakies of the local association defeated W. Gardner of the Clapp Memorial association, getting one fall in nine minutes. Both men wrestled at 150 pounds.

In the 145 pound class, Parker and Burns, both of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. wrestled for 15 minutes to a standstill.

The officials for the meet were:—Starter, C. Cox, Wollaston. Judges, S. Bates, T. Anderson. Quincy, E. Prout, Cathedral Y. M. C. A., H. Green, Cambridge Y. M. C. A. Timer, James King, Quincy.

15-yard dash—Won by T. Schell, Quincy; J. Still, Cambridge, second; W. Cranshaw, Quincy, third. Time 2 2-5s.

300-yard dash—Won by R. Estey, Quincy; T. Schell, Quincy, second; J. Still, Cambridge, third. Time 40 2-5s.

Running high jump—Won by J. McArdle, Quincy; W. Green, Cambridge, second; R. Estey, Quincy, third. Height 5ft. 6 in.

Three broad jumps—Won by J. McArdle, Quincy; G. Shirley, Quincy, second; Harry Trask, Quincy, third. Distance 30ft 1 1-2in.

Relay race, half mile—Won by Quincy (Schell, Wood, Trask and Cranshaw;) Cambridge (Ballard, Wilson, Still and Edwards,) second. Time 1m 48s.

Potato race—Won by T. Wilson, Cambridge; H. Trask, Quincy, second; C. Gustafson, Cambridge, third; G. Shirley, Quincy, fourth. Time 34 2-5s.

Couldn't Fool Him.

Serving in the capacity of collector for a local bank is a colored man who spends his evenings playing in an Oakland band.

One of the clerks in the bank, knowing of the clerk's musical attainments, said to him, "Joe, I went to a vaudeville show last night, and one of the fellows there played 'Traumerei' great!"

Joe looked at him suspiciously for a moment and then said: "You tell that stuff to Bonny. You don't get me to bite, 'cause Ah knows they ain't no such instrument."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Simple Antidote to Poison.

It is a valuable thing to understand thoroughly what simple antidote to take if one is so unlucky as to swallow poison of any kind. Sweet oil is to be found in nearly every house, however humble, and half a pint of it taken immediately is an effectual antidote to almost all poisons. Any one with a strong constitution should take a larger quantity of this simple remedy.—London Family Herald.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

"Jimmy" McDonald, a local youngster who has come to the fore with great rapidity of late, has been selected to represent the B. A. A. in the 125 pound class in the coming tournament between the New York and Boston amateur boxers. "Young" McDonald has already attained an enviable reputation as a fistic artist and up to the present time has a list of victories to his credit, of which he may feel justly proud.

He has been receiving instruction from "Eddie" Reagan, "Bob" Gerstel, and a few other well-known local boxers, all of whom predict great things for the Quincy A. A. lad in the near future. He has all the qualities of a good fighter, is fast and aggressive and possesses a blow that is very effective. His many friends are rooting hard for him and sincerely hope that he will succeed in taking the measure of his New York opponents.

Milton High will be the next opponent of the local High school basket ball team. The game takes place next Wednesday afternoon in the local gym and the fact that both teams are exceptionally fast should cause a large attendance to be in evidence at the game.

The victory of Napoleon Grignon, the well-known chess player of this city, at the Wells Memorial Institute last Saturday has placed him in a conspicuous position as regards his respective pastime. The local player has already encountered some of the greatest chess players in the country and is now open with a defy to meet all comers.

His claim as champion of Quincy seems to have been upheld in an able manner and we now look forward to see him add still greater laurels to his chess playing crown.

An unusual attraction is offered for tomorrow evening in St. Mary's hall to the members of the Quincy A. A. The occasion will be the third of a series of boxing bouts and the bouts carded include a list of the most prominent amateur boxers to be found. The open classes will consist of 115, 125 and 135 pounds, and a special bout at 145 pounds between "Medzo" Bennett, the West Quincy pride and "Patsy" Lavelle of the Riverside B. C. of Cambridge.

It is earnestly hoped that all differences between some of the teams will be settled at the meeting of the Greater Boston Basket ball league, to be held in Boston this evening.

CAMELS ARE VICIOUS.

They Have Numerous Dislikes, the Chief of Which Is Man.

A peculiarity of the camel is his dislikes. Likes he has none, save for the mimosa thorn and, perhaps, for dying. He hates red, and when, years ago, some genius of the British army equipped the squadrons of the camel corps with bright crimson saddles the animals so resented the outrage that numbers of them gave up the ghost in pure disgust.

The camel always, of course, hates man and sometimes displays his vindictiveness in no uncertain manner. A dignified and elderly British officer has been seen to foot it all round the camp in blue silk pajamas, with one slipper and a shaving brush, closely pursued by his own animal, with his long neck stretched to the utmost and his savage mouth much too near that sleeping suit to be pleasant. At length a fatigue party was summoned, who, with telegraph poles, young trees, railway ties and such cajoleries, prevailed upon the beast to desist.

As a mount the camel is said to possess distinct advantages. His gait is comfortable when one has learned to ride him, and for really long journeys, which must perforce be made at a slow pace, he is much less tiring than a horse. Besides, he carries with him all manner of things the rider is likely to need en route—canvas buckets of water, in which bottles stand to cool; a writing desk (not necessarily of the office type), but still an efficient substitute; a luncheon basket, rifles, telescopes, a mountain gun, if required, and other needful articles.

LESSON THE ANTS TAUGHT.

"Marjorie, Marjorie! Won't you come and help mother shell the peas, dear?"

It was a very weary voice that called, but it brought a frown to the face of the little girl swinging lazily in the hammock at the end of the garden. It was hot everywhere but under the the cherry trees. It was fun to lie there and eat cherries and throw the stones up at the robins and watch the great clouds drift across the sky.

The hammock tipped, and Marjorie's rubber ball fell to the ground with a bounce, upsetting two big ants that were carrying sand to their home at the edge of the tall grass. Marjorie watched them struggle. One seemed quite dead, and the other was crawling off very slowly.

She remembered the stories Uncle Ernest had told her the Sunday before about ants. How like human beings they were in their ways! He had told her that they live in colonies, building little hill houses, grain by grain, in sandy places or digging out cells in the trunks of trees to live in.

He told of ants called mason ants, that choose hard clay soil for homes and by digging and cutting passages make wonderful houses of tiny corridors, pillars and arches. Uncle Ernest said one colony would wage war on another. Sometimes a battle would last until dark, and the victorious army would even capture hostile ants and take them back to their colony as slaves.

Especially had he praised them for being so industrious, telling how they worked all day and all night, gathering and storing honey, planting grass seed, from which they gathered tiny harvests, and even paving roads for themselves. It had all seemed too wonderful to be true, and as Marjorie thought of these stories a small, shamed feeling passed over her.

The lame ant had hobbled off to the sand home among the grasses, and two big ants were following, carrying the first one, which was beginning to wiggle a little. Marjorie was glad he was not dead. She wondered if a mother ant should ask one of her children ants to help her on a hot day whether the child ant would run off and climb to the top of a long spear of grass and swing and swing and watch the clouds. She felt sure that the child ant would not, and the shamed feeling grew until Marjorie jumped from the hammock and started for the house as fast as her little feet could carry her.

She was really a very lovable little girl, but sometimes she forgot how tired mother must be, and baby brother was fussy because his pretty teeth were pushing through so fast. She almost stumbled in her hurry to reach the house.

Breathless and eager, Marjorie ran up the back steps and into the kitchen and stood there, stock still, looking at the big clock. It must be wrong. Mother was sitting by the open window feeding brother from his blue bowl, and dinner was ready, and there were no peas. Now that she was too late, after all, the shamed feeling grew so big that it hurt, and Marjorie longed to run to the corner of the big haymow and hide, but she knew that would not help any. She wanted to tell mother how sorry she was, but somehow the words got all choked up. If mother would only punish her, not look so sorry! But mother looked into her little girl's face and, seeing the lesson that in some way had been stamped there, said gently: "Mother is very tired, Marjorie. You can finish feeding brother and then clear away his playthings in the dining room before the others come in to dinner."

With a grateful bound, Marjorie took the baby and finished giving him his milk. Very quietly she cleared away the playthings, but it was not until the next morning, when, bright and early, she sat under the tree and shelled the peas so that she could be ready to take baby brother out after his nap, that mother knew how well she had learned the lesson that the ants taught.—Youth's Companion.

WARRANT OFFICERS.

Their Grade In the Naval Service and the Pay They Draw.

The grade of warrant officer in the navy forms one of those naval castes which are puzzling to the civilian, says Searchlight Philosophy.

The warrant rank is next below that of midshipman and consists of boatswains, gunners, carpenters, warrant machinists, sailmakers and pharmacists. The pay is graded according to the length of service and nature of the assignment.

During the first three years the pay on sea duty is $1,500, on shore duty $1,125 and on leave or waiting orders $875 a year. The pay rises with each three years of service until the time of service exceeds twelve years, after which period the pay reaches $2,250 while on sea duty, $2,000 on shore duty or detached assignments and $1,500 when on waiting orders or when on leave.

All gunners are not warrant officers, but when a gunner has attained a warrant officer's rank he has, under the commissioned ordnance officer, charge of the ordnance, magazines, etc. The warrant officer gunner is usually an apprentice with a good record, appointed after examination upon the recommendation of the commanding officers.

When the ship's carpenter is a warrant officer he is chief of all the artisans and mechanics. This force is called the carpenter's gang and consists of shipwrights, plumbers, pipefitters, blacksmiths, painters and carpenter's mates. After ten years' service the carpenter was formerly commissioned chief carpenter, with the rank of ensign.

The boatswain is one of the most important of the warrant officers. He has, under the executive officer, charge of the rigging, anchors, cable, cordage, etc. He summons the crew at all general evolutions and acts as assistant to the executive in carrying on the general business of the ship. The badge of office of the boatswain is his call or whistle.

Bursting Steel.

An experiment that demonstrated the capacity of steel to endure greater pressure than the hardest stone was made in Germany. Corundum was chosen for the stone, and small cubes of both substances were placed under pressure. A weight of six tons smashed the corundum, but forty-two tons were required to crush the steel. When the steel did give way the effects are described as remarkable. With a loud explosion the metal flew into powder, and its sparks are said to have bored minute holes in the crushing machine. --New York Tribune.

CITY SOLICITOR AND PRESIDENT HOBBS CLASH

Order is Increased to $500,000. Communications, Orders

The first regular meeting of the City Council was marked by a clash between President Hobbs and City Solicitor McAnarney. The clash came during the debate on the order authorizing the City Treasurer to borrow money in anticipation of taxes. Councilman Sandberg had asked the City Solicitor if the order for $450,000 passed and later more money was desired could any more be borrowed on that order. In replying the City Solicitor, said, should he answer the question directly he should say no. He then went on to explain at length why the new form of wording of the order had been used.

When he sat down President Hobbs who was on the floor arose and accused the City Solicitor with deliberately trying to befog the Councilman. The genial City Solicitor only smiled and later when the President sat near him he placed his arm tenderly about his shoulder to show that there was no hard feelings.

Aside from the debate over this order there was but little doing. President Hobbs did not announce his committees as expected. There was a large attendance of citizens however who were present largely in their interest to learn what the appointments were.

Councilman Craig was sworn in by the City Clerk and the only absent member was Councilman Studley.

APPOINTMENTS.

A communication was received from the Mayor announcing his appointments which was read and placed on file. The full list will be found in another column.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing H. Everett Crane, Frank W. Crane, John J. Joyce, Duncan J. McLennan, Frank S. Patch, W. W. Cushing, Philip L. Savard, Lewis Geiser and H. P. Readmon as public weighters. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Edward P. Powers and Charles C. Powers as constables at the Coliseum, and Peter Swanson and Newman H. Savage as constables. Confirmed.

WATER EXTENSIONS.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the Water Commissioenr of Public Works asking for an appropriation for water extensions. Referred to Committee on Water Supply when appointed.

PETITIONS.

A petition from the Electric Light company for a location for poles was referred to the Committee on Streets when appointed.

A petition for a granolithic sidewalk on Beale street was referred to the Committee on Streets when appointed.

A petition of Thomas F. Phillips for an auctioneer's license was laid on the table until later when Councilman Abele offered an order granting the license which was adopted.

Applications for minor licenses were referred to the License committee when appointed.

TEMPORARY LOAN.

The Special Committee reported an amended order for the order for $450,000 for a temporary loan. The only change was that the amended order was drawn in a form submitted by the Old Colony Trust Co.

Councilman Craig then started to offer an amendment to the order making the amount $500,000. He was called to order however on a point raised by Councilman Cunningham that the order was not then under discussion. The point was ruled as well taken.

On motion of Councilman Craig the order was then taken from the table.

Councilman Richards said that while the committee were unanimous he thought it would be wise for the Mayor to explain why it was necessary to have the larger amount. The amount in past years had been $500,000 but there was a desire to reduce the interest on temporary loans.

Mayor Stone said that last year when there was not as much to take care of, $500,000 had been passed. The amount of temporary loans coming due between now and April 1, was $500,053. He did not intend to use any more of the amount than was necessary. There was in the treasury about $31,000 cash and the 1910 taxes due amounted to $86,414. It did not seem possible to get along with a less amount than $500,000. By refusing to give him what he desired it looked as though the Council thought he was not capable of running the city.

Councilman Craig then offered his amendment.

Councilman Richards said that the Tax Collector should get after the taxes and get them collected. The question is simply if it is posisble to get along with a smaller amount. All would like to do so if possible.

FITNESS FOR THE OFFICE AND NOT FOR PARTY AFFILIATION

These Were the Elements Considered By Mayor Stone In His Appointments

Department Officials and Administrative Boards---Several Retain Former Positions---The List

The curiosity that has existed in the minds of the citizens in general, as well as in the minds of the politicians, as to whom Mayor Stone would select for his department officials and administrative boards, was set at rest Monday evening when, in a communication to the City Council he announced the names o those whom he had selected for the various offices.

Ever since the election there has been a peristent rumor that the Mayor would make a clean sweep of City Hall and put none but tried and true Republicans on guard. This was the course advised by many but the Mayor has wisely not heeded this advice.

The selection of department officials was by no means an easy one for ever since the result of the election of last December, the Mayor has been harassed by office seekers. Many sought appointment for themselves while many others advanced the claim of some friend. The result has been that the last few days have been strenuous ones for the Chief Executive. Not only has he been besieged at his office but his telephone wire has been kept humming when he was at home, some even calling as early as 6 A. M. so as to be sure and catch him before he got away. The City Messenger's office adjoining the Mayor's office was a particular popular spot for a camping ground.

To many of the aspirants, fitness for the position sought seemed a secondary consideration, to His Honor however it was different. To the reporters last Friday, when he informed them as to his official familiy, the Mayor said that in making his selection he had first of all considered fitness and qualifications for the office sought, and that what he most desired was to get the best men obtainable for the offices.

It was therefore not surprising to find that there were several hold overs in the list named. Among these hold overs might be mentioned the City Solicitor, City Engineer, Overseer of the Poor, Inspector of Buildings, Dock and Water Front Commissioner. Inspector of Milk, Managers of the Adams Academy, with one exception the trustees of the Thomas Crane Public library and but a slight change in the board of Managers of Public Burial Places. The general impression seems to be that His Honor has made some good appointments. The com-

THOSE WHO GOT MAYOR'S PLUMS

Brief Sketches of Some of the New Department Officials

WHO THEY ARE

While many are doubtless familiar with the men selected by Mayor Stone to fill the important positions, there are others who would be glad to learn more about them. The following sketches of some of the more important City Officials will be read with interest:

HENRY F. TILDEN

The new City Treasurer was born in Quincy, June 24, 1858, and has always made his home in this city. He received his education in the public schools and at the Quincy High school. As a boy he was for a time employed in a grocery store until 1882 when he entered the employ of Claflin, Larabee & Co. commission merchants of Boston with whom he remained four years. He then entered the employ of the Walker, Stetson Co., with whom he remained 28 years, voluntarily severing his connection with this firm Jan. 1, 1910. Since that time he has been interested in the insurance business.

He was for three years president of the Granite City club, during which time he brought the financial condition of the club up to a high standing. He has had considerable experience in financial matters and there is no question but what the treasurership of the city will be in good hands.

EMERY L. CRANE

Appointed as City Clerk is a Quincy boy, having been born in this city June 29, 1861. He received his education in the public schools and at Adams Academy. On leaving school he entered the leather business in Boston with Converse, Stanwood & Co. afterwards as Emery & Crane. For the past year he has been employed in the purchasing department at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

He was appointed by Mayor Porter as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library in 1889 and served for five years. He was elected a member of the School Committee in 1890 and was a member of that body for six years, four of which as chairman.

He is a past master of Rural lodge of Masons, and a member of St. Stephen's chapter and Quincy Commandery K. T. He is also a member of the Royal Arcanum and secretary of the Quincy Historical society.

HERBERT S. CHILD

Who is appointed Tax Collector an important position in the official family of Mayor Stone is a native of Brockton, where he was born April 27, 1883. He received his education in the public schools of his native city, being president of his class in the grammar school and also president all four years at the high school as well as president of the High school fraternity and manager of its foot-ball team. He graduated in 1892 and immediately entered the employ of the Old Colony street railway company as office boy. By strict attention to business he advanced step by step to superintendent's clerk, assistant cashier and cashier. In May 1904 he came to Quincy as cashier at the Quincy office of the company where he remained until May 1911 when he resigned. Since then he has been employed by the North End Savings bank of Boston and with the C. C. Brown company, as a public accountant.

WARREN S. PARKER.

He was married in 1904 coming to Quincy soon after and has an attractive home at Wollaston. He is a member of the Wollaston Tennis club and the Wollaston Social club. He has two children both of whom were born in Quincy.

FRANK FESSENDEN CRANE

Dock and Water Front Commissioner was born on Silver street, South Boston, in 1855; came to Quincy in 1863. His grandfather, Capt. Friend Crane, of Milton, was the first superintendent of the Sailors' Snug Harbor at Germantown and at his death was succeeded by his son, Capt.

"DRAMATIC SCENES FROM THE UNITED STATES SENATE"

Mrs. Emily Montague Bishop Entertains Delightfully at Women's Club

Gentlemen's Night a Great Social Success. Those Present

Gentlemen's night of the Quincy Women's club, which was held Monday evening at the clubhouse on Presidents hill, will go down in club history as one of the nicest affairs ever given by the club So large was the attendance that if the weather had been more propitous it is doubtful if the spacious clubhouse would have accommodated all.

Brilliantly lighted, many beautiful gowns, large attendance of men and a spirit of informal cordiality made the affair one of pleasure to all in attendance. Each gentleman was presented with a red carnation and music by Mrs. Merchant piano and Mrs. Thomas violinist of Weymouth contributed to the enjoyment.

In the receiving line were: the president and past presidents of the club, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, Mrs. Williams Ward Whitcher, chairman of the Legislative Committee and Mrs. Emily Montague Bishop, the entertainer of the evening.

The ushers, under the direction of Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, chairman of reception committee of the club, were Mrs. Herbert H. Albee, Mrs. Alfred P. Thompson, Mrs. William H. Whitney, Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Miss Margaret Thomas, Mrs. George H. Brown, Mrs. A. N. Murray, Mrs. Robert E. Park and Mrs. Henry Tirrell.

After the reception Mrs. Sheppard the club president very graciously welcomed the guests and introduced Mrs. Williams Ward Whitcher as the moving spirit of "gentlemen's night" as it was given under the auspices of the Legislative Committee of which she is chairman; the club cooperating in making it a pleasant occasion for the gentlemen.

After a few words of welcome Mrs. Whitcher announced that the program would open with songs by Mrs. Frank J. Moore, soprano, with Miss Marion Chadwick at the piano. Mrs. Moore sang very beautifully the favorite aria from Mignon, "Knowest Thou the Land," and Ronald's "'Rosy Morn," giving great pleasure.

Mrs. Emily Montague Bishop the special entertainer in her recital of "Dramatic scenes from the United States Senate" was capital. Her many hits and characterizations were appreciated and caused frequent laughter and applause. The advance notices of her capabilities as an entertainer hardly did justice to her versatility and pleasing personality.

Her "Scenes" are better than the senate itself; a living picture of the senate with all the non-essentials and distracting details left out. She is well equipped for masterful presentation of her subject, for she has studied her characters at first hand—from the gallery of the United States Senate; she has "intimate knowledge of things congressional" and large experience as a speaker and dramatic reader. Mrs. Bishop's scenes are an entertainment and a revelation. They make clear "how things come to pass" in Washington.

Loud, long and appreciative applause at the close of Mrs. Bishop's recital told of the thorough enjoyment of her listeners, the men seeming especially appreciative.

In the tea room Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann and Mrs. Clarence Burgin presided at the coffee urns, and the frappe table in the alcove was in charge of Mrs. George A. Sidelinger. They were assisted in serving by many members of the Young Women's club, including their officers, Miss Marie Bass, Miss Minnie Packard, Miss Mabel Pratt, Miss Maude Briggs, Miss Hannah Litchfield and Miss Margaret Lennon.

The committee on refreshments and decoration of the rooms, were Mrs. John W. Sanborn, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann, Mrs. William B. Nichols, and Mrs. Herbert Lawton, and very great credit is due these ladies, Mrs. Sanborn, in particular, sparing no pains to make every part as successful as possible.

Members of the Legislative committee assisting Mrs. Whitcher were: Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Herbert Lawton, Mrs. Albert N. Murray, Mrs. Robert E. Park, Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham, Mrs. H. Gerrish Smith, Mrs.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Now is the time to do your Easter shopping early.

Now that the Stokes case is out of the way, the Twentieth Century girl can allow her mother to see the newspapers.

Seats are all pretty well taken just now on the water wagon, but there will probably be vacant places in a week or so.

5,000 actors out of a job, but it is much healthier walking the railroad ties than receiving gifts of vegetables across the foot-lights.

Mongolia declares its independence, and we hope that no one suggests making it an American state and giving it two senators.

They keep enlarging the size of Congress, but as long as the Kansas prairies remain, there will be room for it to meet.

The figures of accidents in the past hunting season remind one of the remark of an Indian about the game laws: "Kill cow moose, pay $100; kill man, too bad."

It is a beneficent arrangement that gives the children a vacation Christmas week. Otherwise they would not be able to do a thorough job smashing their toys before New Year's.

The last time she went to Europe Mary Garden took 49 pairs of New York shoes with her. Anyone desiring to stand in her shoes must evidently be active with the button hook.

THE TAX LIMIT.

It has taken a long time for the fact to dawn upon the officials, not alone of Haverhill, but of all Massachusetts cities, that they cannot live on the same proportionate amount of money that they could years ago, and that their tax limit, $12.00 here, is one which the law of the state will soon be called upon to change.

There was no inaugural address in Haverhill this year, but in this perennial apology in other cities, the financial situation loomed large and many mayors called attention to the fact that the time had come "for true economy." While this cry had the old familiar ring, and while each city government will go on in about the same old way, spending as fast as it can, till it is suddenly checked up by an empty treasury, there is plenty of evidence at hand to show that no one city will be left alone in its appeal to the Legislature for a higher tax limit. There are several that must have more money.

Traced back to its source, the trouble arises in the Legislature. Paying no attention to the limit it has placed on the money raising and borrowing capacity of each city, it has enacted into law requirements for one new thing after another, till the first duty of most cities each year, is to put into effect some new department that the state has ordered. Where a city could get along with no municipal hospital ten years ago, it now has to have three, one for contagious diseases, one for the tubercular, and one for general illness. The state has increased the city's obligations to the poor, has caused stricter enforcement of the building and factory laws, and has insisted that there be a wider supervision over the weighing and measuring of all commodities. And the list grows larger each year.

All of these requirements are penalized and the city is thus forced to find the money for the things the state has ordered while the state has found no way for it to get that money except to take it from its current needs, to let other things rest and even rot.

Haverhill today cannot even consider all its needs, let alone any luxury. The $12 tax limit is exhausted the moment it is looked at and it is only because he has an iron determination to do so, that Mayor Moulton is living within it. The debt limit, that is the limit that can be reached when all possible bonds are sold this year, is but $105,000 off, and it will cost all of this and more for the hospitals that the state requires and which are under way.

Each year the schools are costing more and more and the total spent for their maintenance is growing in greater ratio than population, valuation or tax levy.

Other cities are going to the Legislature. They have found exactly what Haverhill has found. They have not been extravagant, but they are broke and they therefore ask to place the increased cost against the property of the city. And property should pay its share and the state should not hesitate to force it to do so. Haverhill has got to be more taxed if it would live!

EDITORIAL POINTS.

It took a hurdy gurdy to equalize the frigid feeling of a few in the vicinity of Quincy Square yesterday morning as it poured forth its resonant strain of "In the good old summer time."

This is one time of the year at least, when we in Quincy, who are accustomed to seeing numerous automobiles every day, do not begrudge the owner of them as they proceed to enjoy life in the manner characterized by many as "the real way."

"A big man in a big place" seems to be the aphorism brought forth in the temporary appointment of our probation officer.

With separation facing us on the one hand and annexation on the other, it does seem as if it were best to remain as we are.

Well, what do you think of our official family? Has your anxiety at last been appeased or would you feel satisfied if you were numbered among the 1163 who voted for James E. Wall?

Thus far, two leap year parties have been held in this city, one near the centre and the other in the west section. As yet we have failed to hear of any extraordinary results. Perhaps its all for the better, for the present year has many leaps to make before coming to a close and it still has a chance to end in a blaze of glory.

Our heartiest well wishes go to Ex-Mayor Shea as he makes his departure for a stay in the South. May his au retoir find him in the best of health and may his activity for party elimination in municipal elections be as ceaseless as ever before.

Do you feel any different now than you did ten days ago? You should if your resolutions had anything to say about it.

In petitioning the legislature for the extension of the Furnace Brook Parkway. Ex-Representative Langeller has proven that it is difficult to estrange oneself from Political enticement.

The fire of last Saturday afternoon, at which time the call was issued for a conflagration in the Atlantic section, again brought out the desirability of having the auto chemical equipped with a wind shield. As it was the response was made in record breaking time and the water was pouring on the blaze within eight minutes after the alarm had been sounded.

In the height of our exultation, and in the glory of the achievement, together with the words of commendation we should feel to requite the driver on such a performance, we must not overlook something which would be beneficial to him and which would at the same time enable him to protect himself from the jeopardy attendant on such a frigid day as last Saturday.

The health of the driver should be safeguarded at all times and the addition of a wind shield would entail but little cost, compared with the beneficial results that would ensue.

Then too, it would be well to consider that the auto, manned by a single individual, is not in a position to be of the assistance it otherwise would provided a crew of men were furnished for the auto chemical, who should be accessible in case of ugent necessity.

This is a matter which should receive the heartiest consideration and attention on the part of those who have it within their power to act in this direction, and there is no doubt but what its fulfilment will meet with the sincere approval of those who have the interests and welfare of their fellow brethren at heart.

PRESIDENTIAL YEAR.

The country has now entered upon that one year in four which the business man is supposed to view with dread as unfavorable to business. Nevertheless, we doubt if much well grounded and legitimate industry is checked for fear of what the American people may do next November.

Over-confidence has caused more industrial suffering than over-prudence. Over and over again it has happened that business men, at the top of some wave of prosperity, would extend their ventures to a point inviting disaster. Mills would enlarge and machinery would be bought to an extent beyond the capacity of the country to buy. Undoubtedly the capacity of our factories today is in the main sufficient to supply the needs of the country.

Any man who is worried about the economic policy of this country as it may be affected by legislative and electoral results, should rent or buy some land and set men at work producing things to eat. The market is world wide, and mouths are hungry, even in bad times.

FROST IN ORANGE GROVES.

The coldest weather for many years in Southern California has attacked the orange groves. All lovers of the golden fruit are sorry to hear that the damage done will reduce the crop below average. Persistent smudging saved the bulk of it. But as $100,000,000 is invested in Southern California oranges, a partial loss is a blow. Southern California trees, being used to a cooler climate than Florida's, are ordinarily supposed to stand temperatures that would take the leaves off the Florida groves.

The blow of 1894 to the Florida orange growers by frost, and the magnificent way the industry has since recovered in that state, illustrate how easily the farmer can adapt himself to the ways of nature, but how completely he is crushed if he fails to know his business before investing his money.

Florida had $100,000,000 in orange trees before the freeze, and was shipping 6,000,000 boxes. One December night it caught the tip of a blizzard, everything froze, and next year only 75,000 boxes were shipped.

A large part of the losers were "carpet-bag" growers who had no intention of building homes and did not know the trade, who had borrowed money at 12 to 20 per cent. They were completely wiped out. You can find rotting school houses in Central Florida today, with open doors, melodeon in the corner, but no teacher and pupils, where in the early orange carnival there were 40 to 50 children.

And yet how easily man adapts himself to nature. Now they heap up piles of rotting but resinous logs, costing the grower nothing but labor. When they get a frost a few times a winter, or a bad freeze once in ten years or so, they set going their bonfires, and the oranges are safe.

Middle aged people well remember when an orange was a luxury outside of the states where it was grown. We recall an old reading book with a story of a picnic. The children all had apples, while the one orange which the family could afford was fed out in thin golden strips to the grown-ups as a special luxury. And now the orange is often cheaper than the apple that is grown on every hillside in the North.

Where We Aim.

William Dean Howells in one of his talks about literature said: "Good literature is always condemned on its first appearance. That is because, being original, it is new and strange. Shelley's work was bitterly condemned at first. So was Coleridge's. So was Wordsworth's. So was Stephen Crane's." Mr. Howells paused, then added impressively, "Stones are only thrown at those trees which are heavy with fruit."

CITY COUNCIL

Councilman Cunningham said this discussion opens up the whole financial condition of the city. It was clear thatthe money raised last year had been used for other purposes. Many of the temporary loans had been renewed so that they were almost permanent loans. Quoting figures relative to amounts due for taxes, etc., he said the city was carrying about $75,000 in what might be called permanent temporary loans. There remains of the tax $86,982. That amount can be realized on as quick as the collector gets after them and he understood that the summons were already to go out.

It is fair to presume that the water receipts will amount to $50,000. Let us make a stand and make it now. The Mayor should not think this any reflection upon him. We have given him enough until such time as we can look into matters and see what is best to be done.

Councilman Ericson said that if the figures of the amount coming due are correct it was a good reason why the amount should be made $500,000. It would also cost something to run the city for three months .

Councilman Bailey said that a condition and not a theory confronted us. We have got to meet the amounts coming due. The question is how to meet them. He would like to see it cleared up, but the question is how are we going to do it? If we can put $50,000 in the tax rate this year it will be a beginning. He would like to see an attempt made. He was in favor of the $500,000.

At this point Councilman Bailey was called to the chair and President Hobbs taking the floor said: At the present time he desired to speak on the question. He had not changed his mind from two years ago and he felt that the proper time to tackle the question was now. There are not taxes enough to take care of the temporary loans outstanding at the present time. The previous Mayor had the city audited by an expert and he found that the city was capitalizing deficits of $15,000. The previous Mayor could not do as much with $500,000 as can be done this year with $450,000. The idea of the order as now drawn is that it allows the Treasurer to make a short note, if rates are high, and then when that note comes due renew it. No other Mayor ever had such an opportunity. He did not want to see the city in the same condition as Lawrence and some of the other cities.

If later in the year the Mayor found that the amount was not sufficient he would be one of the first to introduce an order for an additonal amount.

Councilman Craig said that if $500,000 is needed by April 1, the amendment should pass. It was up to the city to meet the bills.

Councilman Abele said at first he was in favor of the $500,000 but after seeing the new form of order, which allows renewal of notes he should favor the smaller amount. This order gives the City Treasurer an opportunity to take advantage of the money market. All of the committee had agreed to give the Mayor what was needed.

Councilman Cunningham said the juggling with temporary loans must be stopped. He did not think the Mayor would do so, but he should trust the City Council when it says that if more money is needed it will be given him.

Councilman Sandberg asked of the City Solicitor if the Mayor found that he did not have money enough had he a right to borrow more under this order?

City Solicitor McAnarney said should he answer direct he should say no. He then went on to explain why the new form of order was used. It was so that if the Treasurer found money high he could borrow a small amount on a short loan and when that came due could renew it but in no case could the amount be extended beyond one year from the date of the original note. If the amount $450,000 was not sufficient and an additonal loan passed he, thought the City Treasurer would have a hard time getting good rates when it became known that the city was on the rocks and needed more money.

President Hobbs: "The City Solicitor Solicitor if a new order for a loan could not be passed later in the season.

The City Solicitor replied that was an elementary question and did not require any City Solicitor to answer.

President Hobbs. The City Solicitor knows full well that he made that statement with a deliberate intent to becloud the issue. Again I repeat it He made that statement with a deliberate intent to becloud the issue He knows that the City Council may borrow on another order."

Councilman Richards asked, "if it is found later that it is necessary to have more money can a new order be legally passed?"

City Solicitor McAnarney said the gentleman is evidently sincere in his question. It would be perfectly legal for the City Council to pass an entire new order later if found necessary. But if you advertise that you are on the rocks you can't get as good rates.

The amendment of Councilman Craig was then adopted on a rising vote of 14 yes and 7 no.

The order was then read and ordered to a second reading.

Under motions and orders Councilman Sodergren offered order for street lights at Atlantic which were referred to the Committee on Streets when appointed.

CALENDAR.

The order authorizing the Mayor to have the annual reports of City Officials printed, took its second reading and was passed under suspension of the rules.

No Achievement
Without Personal Effort
To be successful you must have desires, ambitions and aspirations. It is this desire or ambition to succeed that makes men work harder, that prompts self-sacrifice until the goal is reached. One of the leading and most commendable desires of any man is to own a comfortable, well-furnished home. It's worth the effort and not half so hard to secure as it may seem until you try. We help—we encourage—we stand by you in sickness or distress. We furnish your home—we give you the credit that makes this desire possible. You pay us a little each week from your wages—"that's all." Q.—Has Noah's Ark ever been discovered? (SHEM.)

Answer.—In reply to this question we quote from an article published several years ago.—"The Rev. Dr. John Nouri, D. D. LL. D., Chaldean arch-deacon of Babylon and Jerusalem, pontifical delegate general of Malabar and ex-grand secretary of the Metropolitan archdiocese of India and Persia, has found Noah's ark! At least he says he has, tells a very straight though somewhat gorgeous story about it and has gained believers among men of piety and learning. He is of the Orthodox Greek church and his labors have been chiefly in Africa and Asia. After spending several years in African explorations, Dr. Nouri crossed the east mountains to the coast of Abyssinia, and was received with great honors. His expedition up the Euphrates and over the Ararat was an expensive affair, but he got there; camped on the plateau and climbed the two peaks. Between them is a valley, and from each side of it rise the two peaks—one 16,000 and the other nearly 18,000 feet high. Starting in March they found the snow-drifts impassable and waited another month. Then they climbed to within sight of a narrow plateau almost on the summit, and on that plateau they saw the ark. 'The bow and stern,' says the archdeacon, 'were clearly in view, but the center was buried in snow and one end of it had fallen off and decayed. It stood more than 100 feet high and was over 300 yards long. The wood was peculiar, dark reddish in color, almost iron colored in fact, and seemed very thick. I think the cold has preserved the wood. I am very positive that we saw the real ark, though it is over 4,000 years old.' Though within rifle shot they could not reach it, the slope from the 'bench' on which it rested being a glare of ice and snow, and they could not remain till the midsummer thaw."

CLAN McGREGOR INSTALLATION

Large Attendance of Members and Visitors of Other Clans

OTHER INSTALLATIONS

Fully 250 members were present at theannual installation of the Clan McGregor, O. S. C., held Monday evening in Clan McGregor hall. The installing officers were Royal Secretary Peter Kerr and Royal Deputy Thomas Johnston.

Delegations were present from other Clans and after the installation an entertainment took place, during which refreshments were served. The affair proved to be most enjoyable and many interesting musical numbers were rendered by local talent as well as by members of Clan MacKenzie of Boston.

The officers installed were:

Chief—Alfred O. Diack.
Tanist—George Murray.
Recording Secretary—Walter Mitchell.
Financial Secretary—John Russell.
Treasurer—Alexander W. Russell.
Senior Henchman—William Maver.
Seneschel—Charles Nicoll.
Warder—William Summers.
Sentinel—William McIntosh.

JOHN ADAMS AERIE.

Alpha hall was taxed to its utmost Monday evening for the annual installation of John Adams Aerie, No. 1180, Fraternal orders of Eagles. Many brothers from various other lodges were in attendance and the event was the best ever held by the local lodge.

The installing officer was Bernard J. Duffy, deputy state president of the order. The following were inducted into the various offices:—

Worthy President—James J. Mellen.
Worthy Vice President—William F. Russell.
Worthy Chaplain—Frank W. Lynch.
Worthy Secretary—John Bowdin.
Worthy Treasurer— Edward S. Welch.
Worthy Inside Guard—Peter W. Dackers.
Worthy Outside Guard—George Turner.
Trustees for one year—John T. Powers, John T. Larkin, Harry Powell.
Worthy Conductor—Hugh J. McLeod.
Worthy Physician—Dr. John T. Reynolds.

After the installation an exhibition drill was given by the Hyde Park degree team, the champion degree team of the state. The exhibition proved a source of especial pleasure and time and time again, the Hyde Park brothers were accorded rounds of applause, as they went through manoeuvres of a diverse nature under the direction of Captain John Vath. The different degrees were also worked by the Hyde Park members and the desire to see them in action was so great that the installation exercises did not begin until almost two hours later.

After the degree team had finished its work, those present repaired to Union hall where refreshments were partaken of. Alexander McDonald did the honor at the piano and within a very short time an entertainment was in order.

Duncan McKinnick made a decided hit as he sang "If I had a thousand lives to live," and was forced to respond to a number encores. James Gorman of Hyde Park was given a great ovation as he was called upon to sing a song and he certainly proved himself equal to the occasion.

James Murphy took his auditors back a number of years by rendering old time songs in a manner which was greatly appreciated. President John Moran of the Hyde Park Aerie was called upon for a few remarks and gave a most interesting talk.

John Massey also from Hyde Park made a decided hit with his whistling solos, while John Mulhern added greatly to the merriment of the evening by contributing a couple of selections.

Augustus Bogel and his dancing doll were about the best ever, and when the farmer rendered a number of songs in French dialect, it was some time before he was allowed to take his seat. A duet by McKinnick and Lynch and a song by Harry Marr brought a most successful affair to a close.

A convention, at which preparations for a monster field day will be made, will be held in Boston Wednesday and Henny Langelier, Edward Welch and Frank Lynch are the delegates from the local Aerie.

AUXILIARY 5.

Despite the inclemency of the weather there was a record breaking attendance at the annual installation of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Division 5, A. O. H., held Monday evening in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy. Miss Catherine McGormley of Hyde Park, vice president for the auxiliaries of Norfolk County was the installing officer. Many officers of other divisions were present including James F. Burke of Division 4, Thomas F. Welch of Division 5 and James O'Dowd of Division 22. Mrs. John H. H. McNamee of Cambridge and Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, state secretary and treasurer respectively of Ladies' Auxiliaries were also in attendance.

The officers installed were as follows:

President—Miss Catherine Barry.
Vice President—Mrs. William Byron.
Recording Secretary—Miss Helen King.
Financial Secretary—Miss Alice O'Brien.
Treasurer—Mrs. Hannah McGrath.
Mistress of Arms—Miss Catherine Scanlon.
Inside Sentinel—Miss Mary Sheehan.
Chairlady of Sick List—Miss Margaret Eagan.
Physician—Dr. George M. Sheahan.

After the installation there was a pleasing entertainment. This included brief addresses by the State Treasurer, Mrs. Murphy, Miss Catherine Barry, James F. Burke of Division 4, James O'Dowd of Division 22, Thomas Rogan, Division 22 and Thomas Walsh of Division 5. There were also songs by Fred McDonnell, Andrew J. Dinegan, Miss Alice O'Neil and Isabel Donahue, violin solo by Miss Alice Barry, and Miss McDermott, and piano solos by Miss Amy Fay and Miss Elizabeth Fay. Refreshments were served and the evening closed with dancing.

MEAT FOR SOLDIERS' HOME

Packers Kept Track of Each Other Regarding Togus Contract

Chicago, Jan. 9.—A letter showing alleged collusion between Swift & Co. and Armour & Co. in bidding for the annual meat contract for the Soldiers' Home at Togus, Me., Nov. 6, 1905, was introduced as evidence by the government in the trial of the ten Chicago packers charged with criminal violation of the Sherman law.

The letter was received by Jerome H. Pratt, former assistant manager of Armour & Co.'s dressed meat department, and was signed with the initials F. A. F., which Pratt said indicated it was written by Francis A. Fowler, one of the defendants in the case and head of the dressed meat department of Swift & Co.

The letter read: "J. H. P.: Please bid over beef 7¾, mutton 8½, Togus Home. You have had for a year. F. A. F."

M'MANIGAL IS KEPT UNDER CLOSE GUARD

Chief Witness In Federal Investigation of Dynamiting

Indianapolis, Jan. 9.—Ortie F. McManigal, who is to be the principal witness in the federal grand jury's investigation of the alleged dynamite plot, has ended his secret journey from Los Angeles. Under heavy guard he was brought into this city and placed in a cell room in the government building.

McManigal came by way of Kansas City and Chicago, in custody of authorities of Los Angeles county and deputy United States marshals. The seclusion surrounding the witness, whose confession is believed to have brought about the pleas of guilty of the McNamara brothers, was increased in Indianapolis, because it was here than McManigal, according to his confession, started on many of his dynamiting expeditions directed by John J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers.

McManigal's written confession, covering more than 200 typewritten pages, is to be supplemented in detail by his oral testimony, so his presence here will be required for several weeks.

OBJECT TO CUT IN PAY

Congressional Legislation Held Up by Strike of Stenographers

Washington, Jan. 9.—For the first time in the history of the government, a labor strike held up the machinery of congressional legislation. The house committee stenographers refused to work because the accounts committee reduced their compensation from 25 to 15 cents a folio. The sugar trust investigation committee had to adjourn.

The stenographers "out" are extras employed to help the regular salaried committee reporters. The reduction of pay would save about $5000. Chairman Lloyd of the accounts committee said that if the regular reporters interfered they would be dismissed.

WITH KNIFE AND REVOLVER

Epileptic Youth Murders His Mother and Commits Suicide

Milford, Mass., Jan. 9.—Clarence L. Racine, aged 16 years, an epileptic, grasped a huge butcher knife at his home here and with the long, keen blade attacked his mother as she was washing clothes in the kitchen.

The crazed boy, after overpowering Mrs. Racine, cut her throat, nearly severing her head from her body. After killing his mother the youth cut his own throat and, dropping the knife by the side of his dead parent, staggered to his own room, where he secured a revolver and sent a bullet into his brain after setting fire to the bedclothes.

Louis A. Racine, the father of the boy, was at work about 300 yards away at the time. When the double tragedy became known to him he nearly collapsed.

The youth, beyond question, was suffering from dementia when he did the killing. He had been an invalid for years and never went out of doors except with his mother.

INJUNCTION IS GRANTED

Court Grants Vermont Man Permission to Go on Own Farm

Rutland, Vt., Jan. 9.—Oscar N. Young of West Rutland was granted a temporary injunction by Judge Butler of this city restraining Levi and Myron Baker of West Rutland from preventing him from going onto his farm on which the Bakers are tenants and looking after the stock.

In the bill of complaint Young sets up that on March 1 last he leased his farm to the defendants for a period of one year on condition that they carry on the farm in a business-like manner.

Young avers that the Bakers have not lived up to their agreement and that they ordered him from the premises when he attempted to go to his own farm and give the cattle food which was necessary for their welfare.

COMPROMISE IN COTTON LOCKOUT

Means Victory For Open Shop Principle In England

Manchester, Eng., Jan. 9.—It is understood that a compromise will be arranged in a day or two between the cotton mill owners and the operatives who have been locked out. Sir George Askwith, who is acting as arbitrator in the controversy, has been in conference with the employers and the men for several days past.

The compromise provides that the unionists' refusal to work with non-union operatives be relinquished for the present, and a truce be agreed upon for six months, during which there shall be no strike on the non-union question.

The trouble started over the refusal of a man named Riley and his wife and another woman to join a local union at Accrington. The union ordered a strike unless they applied for membership and the masters countered by locking out all hands. A general lockout involving 160,000 persons followed and the mills have been shut down since Dec. 27. Between 600 and 700 firms are concerned.

BOSTON'S VALUATION

Average For Last Three Years Is Shown to Reach $1,403,848,440

Boston, Jan. 9.—Boston's average valuation for the last three years is $1,403,848,440.88. This figure has been submiitted to the mayor by the board of assessors for his use in the preparation of the annual budget. The tax rate for last year was $16.40, and out of every $16.40 that came into the city treasury the city was allowed to use $10.55 for municipal and county expenses.

It is figured that this year the mayor will find about $18,000,000 available fom the tax levy for the various city and county departments. The assessors have included in their compilations the valuations of Hyde Park for the last three years.

INQUIRY OF WIDE SCOPE

Grand Jury Takes Up Portland Charges of Election Law Violations

Portland, Me., Jan. 9.—All violations of the election laws that may have occurred in Portland within the past six years are to be inquired into by the grand jury, as well as the specific charges which are now pending, that the law was violated by Mayor Curtis and certain of the aldermen at the last municipal election.

Judge Connolly so instructed the jurors in a lengthy charge. He placed no limitations upon the scope of the inquiry, except the legal limitation of six years, and told them to free their minds of partisan prejudices and perform their duty without fear or favor.

WAFFLES FOR WINTER.

WAFFLES with maple syrup is a term to conjure with. Just why waffles are not seen more often on the breakfast table it is hard to tell unless it is because a special iron is needed for baking them.

Waffle irons are not expensive. They are not easy to keep clean, though, and unless thoroughly cleansed after each baking your waffles will suffer.

When ready to use have both sides of the waffle irons hot and well greased. For this purpose have a special brush. One of the small brushes sold for painting will do. Dip it in melted suet and brush over the iron.

Putting on to Bake.

The easiest way to handle the batter is to pour it from a pitcher. When the batter has been spread on to the iron close it quickly and turn over.

The cakes should be baked until a golden brown.

Sweet Milk Waffles.—Take two eggs and two ounces of melted butter. Beat the yolks of the eggs to a stiff froth, add melted butter, a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar and a large cupful of sweet milk. Add flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls baking powder. Lastly stir in the whites of the eggs beaten stiff.

Cheap Waffles.—Take one egg, one tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two cupfuls of milk, two cupfuls of flour. Part water and part milk may be used instead of all milk.

Highly Spiced.

Spiced Waffles.—Take one and a half pints of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, three tablespoonfuls of butter, one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, four eggs, one-half pint of thin cream, one teaspoonful each extract cinnamon and vanilla. Rub the butter and sugar to a white, light cream; add the eggs, one at a time, beating three or four minutes between each addition. Sift flour, salt and powder together, which add to the butter, etc., with the vanilla, cinnamon and thin cream. Mix into a smooth batter as for griddlecakes. Have the waffle iron hot and carefully greased. Pour enough batter in to fill the iron two-thirds full; shut it up and turn it over. When baked sift sugar over them and serve on a napkin.

HOW TO USE AMMONIA.

Many Ways In Which It Proves Helpful In the Household.

In housekeeping ammonia has many uses. It is an efficient help about the wardrobe. Black material sponged with a cupful of water in which a teaspoonful of ammonia has been mixed will renew its freshness, while black silk will lose its objectionable shininess by such a sponging. A little ammonia will remove grease from collars and when rubbed over corsets will cleanse them to a nicety.

When mixed with equal parts of turpentine ammonia will remove paint stains from cloth. If the paint be stubborn it may require several applications before the work is done. Persevere. Nothing is so good for boys' tweed suits as to sponge them with the ammonia mixture. For toilet use a small quantity will soften the water in which the hair is washed and aid in cleansing the scalp.

It renders the bath delightful, and carpets when thoroughly gone over with ammonia and water are surprisingly restored to something like their original freshness. When mixed with white wax and turpentine it makes the best of polishes for the floor. To relieve the pain and prevent inflammation resulting from the bites and stings of summer insects ammonia ranks first as a cure.

How to Use Cheese Scraps.

Do not throw away the scraps of cheese left in the pantry, even though dried and seemingly useless. Grate them and sprinkle over a dish of creamed potatoes, to be set into a hot oven till a delicate brown, or serve with the dish of macaroni and tomato sauce.

How to Wash Jerseys.

Do you know that a band of washing silk or soft linen the size of the waist sewed inside a knitted golf jersey before it is washed will prevent it from stretching and keep it in perfect shape?

—And now they come from the western coast and tell us to put a little salt on Gifford Pinchot's estimate of Alaska, and, too, just when we were beginning to think that Gifford knew the whole thing. Now we know not whither to turn, having become previously acquainted with Richard Achilles Ballinger. Guess we'll have to turn to someone who is not poised to stick a knife under somebody else's fifth political rib.—Barre (Vt.) Times.

Do You Believe in Signs?

Too many storekeepers depend upon signs. They are all right to mark your place of business, but you need something more forceful to bring customers right up to your counters. You need general, far-reaching publicity as a real trade-getter.

It matters not how elaborate or artistic your business sign may be. It will be read only by a very small percentage of those who pass your door, It is necessary in a way. And yet you know that its sphere of usefulness is very small. On the contrary a business announcement in the columns of THE DAILY LEDGER will be read each day by thousands and thousands of regular readers of this paper.

DON'T RELY ON SIGNS.

PIN YOUR FAITH IN THE DAILY LEDGER.

IT WILL PUT GINGER IN YOUR BUSINESS.

BRIEFS

Miss Edith Randall of Spear street returned Monday from a week's visit to friends in Abington.

Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop of Summit avenue is to exhibit her beautiful Persian cat at the Boston show.

Dr. W. G. Kendall has been laid up for several days with a pulled tendon, one more horrible example of the too strong tendency toward athletics of the present day young man.

At the weekly whist party of William C. Caldwell Monday night in Stone's hall after two hours' play souvenirs were given Fred Dorrell, H. Seldon, J. Murray, Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Saunders.

FUNERAL OF VETERAN.

Funeral services for Henry Chubbuck, a native and lifelong resident of this city were held at his late home on Chubbuck court, Monday afternoon. Mrs. M. A. Bonney of Boston, a well-known mediumistic speaker and an intimate friend of the family, conducted the services, in compliance with the request of the deceased. Andrew Turner of Boston, a nephew of Mrs. Chubbuck, sang two solos, "We cannot always understand," and "We shall meet beyond the river." Paul Revere post, G. A. R., of which the deceased was a member and had held the office of chaplain for many years attended in a body and the solemn and impressive burial ritual of the order was observed.

And so one more of our honored veterans has gone to join the vast Grand Army beyond. We shall miss his familiar figure on the street, his kindly smile, his cheery greeting. To his widow and son, Frank, the sympathy of friends is extended in this bereavement.

By the express wish of Mr. Chubbuck, his body was taken to Forest Hills cemetery for cremation; the ashes to be interred in the family lot in Mount Wollaston cemetery.

The floral tributes were many and very beautiful and testified to the esteem and respect in which the deceased was held. A good neighbor, a kind friend, an affectionate husband and loving father, his memory will long be revered.

The Fertile Rock.

Gibraltar is often called a barren rock, yet it has 456 species of indigenous flowering plants. Castor oil plants, daturas and daphnes attain the dignity of trees and geraniums and heliotropes the proportions of hedges. These floral delights often conceal cannon and other armaments. The few snakes that are found are small and harmless. Lizards several inches long are often seen.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

Guests at the Jackson Day Banquet at Washington

NO PARTIALITY IS DISPLAYED

"The Peerless One" Confers With Governor of New Jersey—Harmony at Social Gathering, but Not In National Committee Meeting, Where Bryan Is Overruled In His Effort to Unseat Guffey

Washington, Jan. 9.—No party dissension, no sectional prejudice as to where the coming convention shall be held, no partiality as to the nominee for president marked the Jackson day banquet at the Raleigh hotel last night, which was attended by nearly a thousand Democrats from all sections of the country.

Harmony brooded over the banquet board, around which were seated delegates to the national Democatic committee who only three hours before had been involved in bitter controversy.

Senator O'Gorman of New York, the toastmaster, had at his right Champ Clark, speaker of the house, one of Missouri's aspirants for the presidential nomination. Then to the right of Clark was Alton B. Parker of New York, defeated candidate for the presidency in 1904.

At Wilson's left was Joseph W. Folk of Missouri, who received the indorsement of his state committee for presidential honors. Next was Senator Pomerene of Ohio, who appeared as the representative of Governor Harmon.

First of the distinguished guests to enter the banquet hall was Clark, who was roundly cheered. Wilson appeared a little later and received a rousing welcome. Bryan's entrance was signalled by loud cheers.

Bryan and Clark exchanged cordial greetings, but it was noticeable throughout the room that the Nebraskan was anxious to confer with Wilson, whom he joined as soon as he had a short talk with the speaker. Wilson and Bryan talked several minutes.

Mr. Folk was the last of the presidential possibilities to enter the banquet hall. Though he passed Clark's chair there was no sign of recognition by either man. Folk, however, engaged Bryan in earnest conversation.

The dinner over, the toasts began with an address of welcome by Edwin A. Newman, chairman of the District of Columbia committee. He was followed by O'Gorman, the toastmaster.

"The country is looking hopefully to the Democratic party for relief from the manifold ills that afflict it," said O'Gorman, "and a great triumph awaits us. A great opportunity for patriotic service and public usefulness is before us if we but keep our ranks unbroken and adhere to the teachings of the man we honor here tonight."

Representative Lloyd, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee, glowingly described the prospects for the party's success in the coming campaign and Parker discussed briefly "Some Conditions of Success." Parker saw a bright future for the party, but sounded a note of warning.

William R. Hearst, another of the orators, was delayed by a storm and arrived late at the feast. Hearst reached the banquet just before the speaking began and was ushered to a seat at the speakers' table, beside Senator Johnson of Maine. He was greeted with the same enthusiasm which attended the entrance of the other honored guests of the evening.

William J. Bryan fought his fight in the Democratic national committee and lost. He made Colonel James M. Guffey, member of the committee from Pennsylvania, the issue, and the committee declined to unseat Guffey by a vote of 30 to 18. Bryan appealed from a decision by Chairman Mack and was defeated 33 to 13.

The committee's session was marked by extreme bitterness. Once the lie was passed and blows seemed imminent. Bryan was from first to last the central figure in the proceedings and the strife he precipitated the very moment the committee was called to order lasted throughout the day.

So much time was devoted to the matter of contested seats in the committee that the more important matters of choosing a convention city, fixing the time for the gathering, and adopting a form of call to include the "permissive primary" plan of selecting delegates, went over until today.

OFFICIALS APPOINTED BY MAYOR STONE LAST EVENING

FRANK FESSENDEN CRANE
Dock Commissioner

ALBERT W. FAY
Chairman Burial Places

IRA M. WHITTEMORE
Park Commissioner

THOSE WHO GOT MAYOR'S PLUMS

Samuel Crane, father of Frank Fessenden Crane.

Frank Fessenden Crane attended the Quincy High school when the late H. A .Keith was principal, leaving school to enter the employ of Abram French & Co., wholesale crockery and glass dealers, of Milk street, Boston; continuing with them as traveling salesman until 1878 when he bought a half interest in the furniture and hardware business of Samuel H. Spear and continued that business under the firm name of S. H. Spear & Co. until Mr. Spear was made Postmaster by Grover Cleveland, at which time Mr. Crane purchased his partner's share of the business, and continued it until his real estate business became so large that it was necessary to give up one or the other.

William A. Hodges, at that time Mayor, advised Mr. Crane to take out an auctioneer's license on the death of the old town auctioneer, Bryant N. Adams, who was also Town Treasurer and in the real estate business. Mr. Crane became an auctioneer and the larger part of Mr. Adams' real estate business came into his hands. This business steadily increased and in 1899 Mr. Crane made his notable deal on Quincy's waterfront; alone and unaided he obtained options on a large tract of land at Quincy Neck and induced Thomas A. Watson and Frank O. Wellington of Braintree to establish the Fore River Ship Building Co. in the City of Quincy. The first intimation that the City had of this important matter being a vote passed by the City Council one Monday night to aid such an industry in any way it legally could, if said industry would locate in our City. The resolution was offered by the late Elisha M. Packard and was unanimously carried. It was drafted by that astute statesman, Charles M. Bryant, then president of the Council and approved by John O. Hall, Mayor. The statement was made to the Quincy and Boston reporters immediately after the Council meeting that the passing of the above vote made it an assured fact that the industry would locate here. Twenty-seven carloads of freight arrived at different stations the next morning and the Boston newspapers were filled with accounts of the magnitude of the enterprise. The following year Mr. Crane bought the railroad route for the Fore River Ship Building Co. from their yard to Braintree. He had previously induced C. C. Hanley the boat builder to come up from Cape Cod and locate on Quincy's waterfront on Town river. The late Capt. L. D. Baker then president of the United Fruit Company became interested in the waterfront land adjoining Mr. Hanley's and Mr. Crane purchased a large tract for him at this point. Later Hanley and Baker consolidated and established the business now known as the Baker Yacht Basin. A large basin was dredged and about $180,000 invested in the industry.

Mr. Crane's next exploit was assembling of about 52 acres of land on the waterfront of Braintree, near Quincy Neck, for the American Tube Company of Somerville, and plans were made for large shops and offices; but the death of several of the owners has retarded this development.

Mr. Crane is an enthusiastic yachtsman and sailed his first race off the old Willow house at Houghs Neck in 1874; joined the Quincy Yacht club in 1880 and has been Commodore, Vice Commodore and is at present Rear Commodore of the famous old club. He organized the Cape Cat Boat Association of Massachusetts and is President of that Association. He has been mainsheet man for the three crack skippers of the club, C. F. Adams 2nd, William P. Barker and Henry M. Faxon, in the Quincy Challenge Cup Races and with his catboat "Iris" won the Captain Kidd plate, the Edgewood Cup, the Narragansett Bay Cup, the Fall River Cup, the Corinthian Championship Cup, and in 1909 all the Championship flags of the year, Interclub, Yacht Racing Association, and the Quincy Yacht club; has won many other trophies and expects to divide the honors of the coming season.

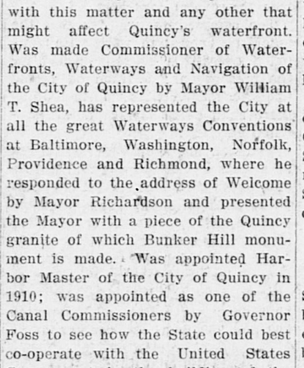
Mr. Crane appeared before the Massachusetts State Legislature and spoke in favor of the Brockton Canal having its outlet at Quincy Point, and told of the advantages of Quincy's waterfront and two great channels to the sea. Was sent to the National Rivers and Harbors Convention at Washington by Mayor William P. Thompson to keep in touch with this matter and any other that might affect Quincy's waterfront. Was made Commissioner of Waterfronts, Waterways and Navigation of the City of Quincy by Mayor William T. Shea, has represented the City at all the great Waterways Conventions at Baltimore, Washington, Norfolk, Providence and Richmond, where he responded to the address of Welcome by Mayor Richardson and presented the Mayor with a piece of the Quincy granite of which Bunker Hill monument is made. Was appointed Harbor Master of the City of Quincy in 1910; was appointed as one of the Canal Commissioners by Governor Foss to see how the State could best co-operate with the United States Government in the building of the Narragansett Bay to Boston Harbor Canal. Was appointed by the Governor to represent the State of Massachusetts at the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Convention in 1911.

Mr. Crane obtained from the United States Government $140,000 in 1911 for the City of Quincy for the purpose of removing channel rock and widening and straightening the main ship channel to Quincy Point. He also obtained from the Harbor and Land Commission of the State of Massachusetts in 1911 $5,000 for a yacht basin at Houghs Neck; advocated the buying of locations for public landings and by order of the Mayor purchased the one at the foot of Bayview avenue, Houghs Neck, in 1911; advocated the expending of $2,000 for retaining wall run from float at said landing, which money was appropriated.

Mr. Crane is Massachusetts' State director of the National Rivers and Harbors' Congress, the largest Waterways' Association in the United States, and Massachusetts State delegate of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways' Association which advocates an inland waterway from Beaufort to Boston.

WILLIAM H. TEASDALE

Who has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Health takes the office with an experience of three years, as he served in the same capacity during the administration of ex-Mayor Thompson. He was born in Quincy, March 25, 1858, and has always lived in Quincy. He received his education in the public schools and on leaving school learned the tool sharpeners' trade at which he was employed for twenty years. He is now engaged in the real estate and insurance business having an officer in the Adams building with a large patronage. For many years he has been a member of the Republican City Committee but the only public office he has held was that on the Board of Health as noted above. Mr. Teasdale is a member of the St. Mary's C. T. A. & M. R. society and is the only surviving member of the original charter members. He was also one of the charter members of the Board of Trade and has always been one of its members holding the office at one time of Vice President. He is a member of Ave Maria Council, K. of C., and here he is also a charter member.



JAMES H. ELCOCK
Overseer of the Poor

FREDERIC EATON TUPPER

The biggest plum in the gift of Mayor Stone has been awarded to Frederic Eaton Tupper, who will assume the office of Commissioner of Public Works. Like several of the other officials selected by the Mayor he is a Quincy boy. He was born in 1873 and comes from an old New England family. He was educated in the public schools of this city, at Adams Academy and Thayer Academy, Braintree. He entered the office of H. T. Whitman in 1891 and studied civil engineering and architecture. In 1905 he opened an office in the Adams building and has successfully practiced his profession in Quincy and towns along the South Shore. There have been few new projects started in this vicinity, in the last twenty years in the way of railroads, docks, wharves, channels, bridges, highways, water supply and drains in which he has not had some part, in the design, or supervision of the construction, as well as planning many buildings that have been erected the past few years.

He is a member of the Boston society of Civil Engineers, Norfolk club, Quincy Yacht club, Rural lodge, St. Stephen's chapter and Quincy Commandery and Aleppo Temple Mystic Shrine and the Merrymount Riding club.

JOHN W. McANARNEY

Who has filled the office of City Solicitor for the past four years has been named by Mayor Stone to succeed himself. Mr. McAnarney was born in Stoughton, June 22, 1867, and graduated from Adams Academy, afterward studying law in the office of James E. Cotter. He was admitted to the bar in 1888, at the age of 21 years, and immediately came to Quincy and opened a law office. He served as City Solicitor under Mayor Fairbanks in 1892 and 1893 and under Mayor Sears in 1898. He was the Solicitor at the time Quincy took possession of the water plant and took a prominent part at the hearings to determine what the city should pay for the plant.

He was again appointed by Mayor Shea when he came into office four years ago and has served since that time.

AMOS L. LITCHFIELD

Amos L. Litchfield who served the city as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department in 1906 and 1907 under Mayor Thompson has been selected to administer that department again during the coming year. He was born in Quincy, May 25, 1856, and has always made his home here. Receiving his education in the public schools and at the High school from which he was graduated in the class of 1872. He served an apprenticeship at the carpenters' trade with his father and has followed this occupation since. He served the city in 1886, 1887 and 1888 as a constable and was one of those to be presented with gold badges made from a $20 gold piece by the late Henry H. Faxon. Under the city form of government he took the civil service examination and served three years as a police officer and was Chief of Police under Mayor Sears in 1898.

He has an equally long service in the fire department, having joined the old Tiger company in 1875 serving six years, two of which were as clerk. When that piece of apparatus went out of commission he joined the John W. Hall Hook & Ladder company where he also served three years; two as foreman. He was a district engineer in 1886 and 1887 also two years as district engineer under Chief Ripley, and as noted above was chief two years under Mayor Thompson.

He is a member of the Red Men, and the Granite City club and was the first president of the Firemen's Relief Association.

JAMES H. ELCOCK

Who succeeds himself as Overseer of the Poor is almost too well-known to need any introduction at this time. He was born in Quincy Aug. 6, 1849, and has always made his home in this city. He received his education in the public schools and learned the granite cutters' trade at Concord, N. H. Returning to Quincy he followed his trade until 1882 when he entered the granite business with his father under the name of Elcock & Sons. During his early manhood he served as a fireman on the old Granite and was district chief at one time. He also served three years as one of the town constables. He was elected to the City Council in 1899 serving during the years 1900 and 1901.

When Mayor Shea assumed office in 1908 he was appointed Overseer of the Poor which position he still holds and in this office he has certainly made good. His efficiency was readily recognized by Mayor Stone who has named him to succeed himself.

EZEKIEL C. SARGENT

Who succeeds himself as City Engineer although born in Concord, N. H., August 7, 1874, has always considered himself a native of Quincy. He is a son of Walter C. Sargent, grandson of Ezekiel C. Sargent, both of whom were engaged for many years in the granite business in Quincy and Concord. He was educated in the public schools of Concord, N. H., Montpelier, Vt., and Monson, Mass. On the death of his father in 1890 his family returned to Quincy when he entered Adams Academy from which he was graduated in 1893. The same year he entered the Institute of Technology where he remained until 1896.

That year the city begun the construction of its sewerage system and he entered the employ of the city as a transitman and has been in the employ of the city continuously since. From 1896 to 1900 he was connected with the sewer department and from 1900 with the engineering department. He was appointed as City Engineer in 1909.

He is a member of Rural lodge A. F. & A. M. He married Elizabeth J. Shepherd of Quincy Point. They have a family of four children and reside on Revere road.

WATER FRONT MAY BE TIED UP

Boston Longshoremen's Strike Is to Be Extended

STRIKEBREAKERS AT WORK

Unions Affiliated With Men Who Are Out Will Strike In Sympathy—Railroad Handlers, Clerks and Teamsters Are Involved—Strikers Keep Away From Docks and Show No Disposition Toward Violence

Boston, Jan. 9.—The strike of longshoremen has developed the specific feature regarded as most dangerous in strikes of men connected with the transportation service. The employment of strike-breakers usually starts sympathetic action by other unions, and already has introduced an ominous sentiment into the discussion in labor councils.

The matter of a general strike along the waterfront was discussed in the meeting of the District Assembly 30, K. of L., yesterday. The assembly recommended that freight handlers, freight clerks and steamship carpenters directly concerned be called out tomorrow. About 6900 will be called out.

Such was the start of the great transportation strike in San Francisco some years ago, and it was the cause of the sympathetic strike in Boston a little later, involving team drivers, freight handlers, expressmen and clerks.

Strike-breakers have been imported into Boston in larger numbers than in previous strikes. They are quartered on boats and on docks, under police guard, as in previous contests, and they are performing today the work which the Boston longshoremen hoped to tie up as a means of forcing higher wages.

Through union affiliations there is close relation between the longshoremen and men who will handle the cargoes both before and after the longshoremen handle them. Freight handlers, for example, are members of the same district assembly as the longshoremen, and nearly all the union men handling the freight in the course of its transmission from point of shipment to its destinations are affiliated through the Knights of Labor.

The Longshoremen's Trade Council, which has the direct handling of the strike and which controls the situation to the extent that if it asks for assistance from the other unions it will receive it, went into executive session at headquarters in Charlestown with some assurance from the outside that the strike would receive indorsement. The council members were in favor of a general strike.

Railroad men have hinted at the possibility that they will refuse to handle the goods that are loaded or unloaded at the wharves by non-union men, and all strike-breakers are non-union.

Thus far the strikers have shown no disposition for violent interference with the new men. They are under instructions from strike headquarters to remain away from the docks, and maintain peace. If they are to stay away from the scenes of activity, knowing their work to be performed by others, they will look to their union affiliations to fight the battle for them in another way, and the only course open to those affiliations is to refuse to handle the freight which is loaded or unloaded by the strike-breakers.

This is expected to happen, unless the strikers withdraw their demands or receive what they ask of the steamship agents. The determination of both sides to be unyielding, however, is shown by their failure to arrive at any basis for a settlement at their conference in the presence of Mayor Fitzgerald, Chairman Bancroft of the dock board, and President Smith of the chamber of commerce.

CURRENCY REFORM

Commission Settles Problem by Adoption of New Paragraph

Washington, Jan. 9.—The point in controversy all last week over the currency bill of the national monetary commission has been settled by the unanimous adoption of a paragraph which provides that when 40 percent or more of the stock is owned by the same person or persons or by a holding company, however formed, such banks shall have only one vote in the local association to which they belong, either in voting as units or upon their stocks.

It provides also that when 40 percent or more of the capital stock of one or more banks is owned by another bank the combination shall have only one vote.

Fever Closes Schools

Medway, Mass., Jan. 9.—The public schools here are closed for a week, and perhaps longer, because of the prevalence of scarlet fever. By the closing of the schools about 150 boys and girls are given an extra mid-winter vacation.

CHARLES H. HYDE

Former City Chamberlain of New York, Under Indictment.

HYDE TRIAL IN NEW YORK

Court Denies Change of Venue on Ground of Community Prejudice

New York, Jan. 9.—Charles H. Hyde, erstwhile city chamberlain and custodian of city funds, must face trial on a charge of bribery in New York county. Justice Lehman in the superior court denied Hyde's motion for a change of venue, sought on the ground of community prejudice.

Hyde was indicted for bribery in connection with the depositing of city funds in the now defunct Northern bank and Carnegie Trust company.

ELECTROCUTED FOR KILLING DAUGHTER

Mangano Pays Extreme Penalty In Sing Sing Prison

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 9.—Philip Mangano, formerly interpreter in the marriage license bureau in New York, was put to death by electricity in Sing Sing prison here for the murder of his daughter.

Mangano shot his daughter Anna on the morning of March 24, 1909, while she was on her way to a school in New York city, where she was employed as a teacher. There had been frequent quarrels in the Mangano family, as a result of which Anna, who was 24 years of age, and her mother had left home a few months previous to the crime.

HELD AS BANK ROBBER

John McNamara Thought to Have Got Away With $375,000

New York, Jan. 9.—John McNamara of San Francisco, known to detectives in half a dozen cities as "Australian Mack," was arrested here last night on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $375,000 from the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster, B. C., which was dynamited Sept. 14.

Eleven hundred dollars was found in his wallet, and detectives are searching the city for $240,000 of the bank's funds which he is believed to have brought to New York with him.

For ten days McNamara had been "shadowed" by the police here. For more than two months he had traveled over the United States and Canada with his pursuers, apparently without suspicion that he was watched.

CATTLE MAD WITH HUNGER

Colorado Stockmen Face to Face With a Serious Problem

Pueblo, Col., Jan. 9.—Thousands of range cattle, driven from the range by the intense cold and by hunger, have besieged several towns in this section of Colorado. Ranchers and people living in the outskirts of different towns are afraid to leave their homes on account of the hunger maddened cattle.

Stockmen of southeastern Colorado are wondering whether they will take chances on making shipments of their herds to southern states in violation of the federal quarantine law. The intense cold and lack of food, causing the death of hundreds of cattle, have caused the stockmen to become almost desperate.

NEW MEXICO'S FIRST

Curry and Ferguson Are Full Fledged Members of Congress

Washington, Jan. 9.—New Mexico's first members of congress, George Curry, Republican, and H. P. Ferguson, Democrat, were sworn in as members of the house amid applause. They were presented by Mr. Sulzer of New York.

New Mexico's admission to statehood was ratified Saturday by President Taft.

No Peace Move, Says Turkey

Constantinople, Jan. 9.—The rumors that peace negotiations have been entered into by Turkey and Italy are without foundation, it is announced.

NEW SOCIAL CLUB FORMED

Will Be Known as the National Associates

LIST OF MEMBERS

In the National Associates, a newly organized body of young men, all of whom are popularly known in local circles, Quincy has another organization which bids fair to become a potent factor among the various social clubs of the city. The list of members now numbers twenty-five, but it is expected that a much larger number will be enrolled in the organization before long.

The officers for the year were elected at the meeting in the club rooms on Hancock street, Monday night. Edwin Sanborn was elected president, Walter Allicon was chosen treasurer and Henry Burke was selected to perform the duties of secretary. The duty of keeping the press in touch with all the movements of the organization will devolve upon Leo T. Moran.

Patrick Gilcoine, a prominent member of the club, will participate in the boxing bouts of the Quincy Athletic Association in St. Mary's hall this evening. Following is a list of the members of the National Associates:

P. Gilcoine, F. Allicon, C. Lect, L. T. Moran, T. Regan, R. Billings, N. Allen, P. Pigilio, W. Gomez, E. Ford, A. Holmes, J. McDonald, J. Silver, W. McDermott, E. Saunders, C. Starr, C. Knight, W. Farr, J. Byron, J. Currie, R. Smith, P. Allicon, E. Sanborn, W. Allicon, H. Burke.

MRS. BRIDGET BUTLER.

Thomas M. Butler of 57 Putnam street has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death Sunday evening of his wife Mrs. Bridget Butler. She ha dbeen sick for a long time but her death came as a severe blow to Mr. Butler as his daughter died a short while ago. The burial services will take place tomorrow morning from St. Mary's church, W. Quincy. The late Mrs. Butler was favorably known in Quincy and was a member of St. Francis Court, M. C. O. F.

GENTLEMEN S NIGHT

Henry W. Tirrell and Mrs. John W. Sanborn.

Mrs. Eugene R. Stone wife of Quincy's new Mayor was a guest being present all the evening and joined later by the Mayor who came after the meeting of the City Council accompanied by several of the Councilmen.

One of the pleasures of the evening was informal dancing. All in all it was quite the happiest affair ever given at the clubhouse, a brilliant success in every way reflecting great credit on the club as a whole and nore especially on its president, its officers and the committees who arranged it.

Among the especially invited guests were members of the Brackett Charitable Trust, Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, Dr. John A. Gordon, George D. Burrage, George B. Dewson, Delcevare King, Miss Elizabeth Johnson and Mrs. John W. Sanborn also ex-Mayor William T. Shea, Mayor Eugene R. Stone, City Solicitor John W. McAnarney, Principal Assessor Warren W. JOSEPH P. MYATT.

Joseph P. Myatt, for more than 28 years connected with the express business in Quincy pased away suddenly Monday night at his home on Beacon street. Mr. Myatt had apparently been enjoying his usual good health. He was about his home Monday evening when shortly after 9 o'rlolk he was suddenly taken ill and passed away in a few minutes.

He was 45 years of age and leaves a widow and five children. The death is a particularly sad one as his widow had the misfortune to fall a few days ago and fracture her arm. Mr. Myatt who had for some time past been connected with the Boston & Quincy express company had recently drawn out of the company and was about to start in the express business under his own name.

CONFLAGRATION NOW RAGING

Boston Business District Threatened with Destruction

MANY RESCUES

A great conflagration is raging in Boston and the fire fanned by the high wind is spreading rapidly. The fire started at 12.15 in the Globe-Wernincke Co. building on Federal street and spread rapidly through the building. Twelve or fifteen men and women were caught between the fifth and sixth floor and after considerable time they were successfully rescued by the firemen.

From the building where the fire started it spread toward Devonshire street and at thetime the Ledger went to press the Carter, Rice paper warehouse and a belting house were a mass of flames and the fire seemed to be beyond control. Four alarms had been sounded up tothis time and apparatus from all the optlying districts had been summoned.

MADE THE GUESTS PAY.

Demanded Tips For the Servants at the Court of Napoleon III.

"Before we left Compiegne at the conclusion of our visit at the court of Napoleon III.," writes Mme. de Hegermann-Lindencrone in Harper's, "when we were taking our morning tea we were interrupted by the coming in of the major domo, who handed us a paper. We were not unprepared for this visit, as we had been told by one of the guests who had been here before that every one was expected to remain in their rooms until this important personage had made his rounds in order to collect the pourboire. I say pourboire because what one generally gives separately is lumped into one sum This paper, which he handed to us almost at the point of his hallebarde, proved to be a gia scritto receipt for 600 francs—our pourboire!

"We were rather a subdued party in the train. The conversation mostly turned on the subject of pourboires. The hussier decided the exact amount that each ought to give. For instance, he knows an ambassador ought to give 2,000 francs. For a minister of state 1,000 francs suffice. Unofficial people like ourselves cannot be expected to be out of pocket more than 600 francs. As for the poor nobility of France, they escape with 500! Some were of opinion that it was pleasanter to give en masse in one big sum than to give in driblets, others thought it more satisfactory to hand one's offering personally to the different servants, but we all with one voice voted the officious beadle an imposition."

TEMPERATURE TUMBLES

Severe Cold and Snow Gives Way to Rain Along Atlantic Coast

Boston, Jan. 9.—A storm, accompanied by snow and rain, swept over New England and along the Atlantic coast last night, played havoc with shipping in the harbor and delayed surface cars on most of the lines in Boston.

It was the first real snowstorm of the season, although the snow part lasted but a few hours. By midnight the marked rise in temperature turned the snow to rain. At midnight the temperature had risen to 30, a change from 1 below at 7 a. m. Sunday.

'Frisco Chinese Have Big Parade In Honor of President Sun Yat Sen

San Francisco, Jan. 9.—China's rejuvenation was observed in San Francisco by a celebration participated in by nearly every person in Chinatown. The main purpose was to do honor to the election of Sun Yat Sen to the presidency of China.

No man of the more than 3000 persons in the parade wore a queue, and the gaily hued silk robes of other days were replaced by the garb of the Occident. American bands headed the procession.

SNAKES—THE SOLDIER.

Snakes had red hair and freckles the size of pennies, and a bath was an unknown luxury until he drifted into the Settlement House. Even poverty has its class grades, and Snakes had the reputation of being the tough boy of the city's tough quarter. His name was the consequences of the old law of sins of father and mother,—the mother who was addicted to ladylike spells of delirium tremens. Snakes' father was an unknown quantity. If he had one he had never established any acquaintance with the gentleman.

Perhaps it was just as well, for Snakes found his drunken mother a care that preyed upon his young soul.

He was brought before Judge Bronson of the Juvenile Court one day on a charge of stealing. An officer found him with fifty cents trying to buy papers.

"I didn't swipe it from nobody," he said sullenly, "I just took it off the old one. Her was loaded and we didn't have nothin' to eat, so 'twas up to me to earn some dough."

Judge Bronson looked at the little animal before him. He was a man just, wise, pitiful—kind. Behind the wolfish expression, the defiance of the creature whose daily life was on the defensive with the world against him, he saw the little white soul that would be white such a tiny bit of a while against the fearful odds.

The judge spoke kindly to the boy as he might have done to his own son.

The wolfish expression changed to one of distrust. Snakes was too wise a little bird to be caught with chaff. but he understood when the judge dismissed him, and shuffled away half expecting his blue-coated enemy Hennessy to nab him as he passed by.

"That bye 'ill wind up in the pen, yit," muttered the policeman. "It's only prolongatin' the time to keep lettin', him go free."

After the court adjourned Judge Bronson went over to the boy's home. Home was a misnomer. In the dirty, ill-ventilated room was a broken chair or two, and an excuse for a stove. On the cot in the corner lay something in the semblance of a woman that muttered and groaned the gibberish of the sodden. Snakes with a dilapidated pail and rag was trying to mop up the floor with some idea of taking up the duties of the wretched creature he called "the old one" and who was responsible for his being.

At the entrance of the judge the boy sprang toward the cot and stood glaring like a tiger.

The judge took a chair, sitting down slowly and cautiously because of its dilapidated condition.

"My boy, I haven't come here to arrest your mother. I came to see you. I'm interested in you. You are just a little chap and before you may lie a long life and I want to help you make something of it. The odds are against you, but if you are a brave little soldier you can win out, and nothing is worth while that is not battled for inch by inch. Come over to the Settlement House tonight. I have a daughter who is going to sing. She is interested in boys. Will you come?"

Snakes shuffled his feet.

"Oh, de lobsters dat goes in der is tryin' to be dudes. Besides dey says I'm too tough and dey guys me murder, dat is dey did, till I knocked de stuffin' out of two of 'em."

After some persuasion on the judge's part Snakes finally promised to spend the evening at the Settlement, and the great man who had time to temper the justice of the Juvenile Court with "the mercy that droppeth like the gentle rain from heaven" went away, leaving the boy with a new feeling in his soul, half of wonder, half of distrust, that the strong arm of the law could rest gently on the lawless.

At half after seven Snakes, timid, half afraid (for he was face to face with his old enemies of "de gang" who considered him in the light of a pariah) stood shuffling uneasily at the door of the audience room. He was ready to leave at the slightest excuse, but he had pr mised, and even Snakes had some idea of his "word."

The judge was there however, and took the boy's hand. And then Snakes saw her,the blue-eyed angel in white. The judge said it was his daughter, but no common human being ever looked like that.

There was a chromo in the window of Dutchy's salo n of an angel with white robes and big white wings (although the incongruity of an angel in Dutchy's saloon did not strike Snakes) that was a "dead ringer for dis goil."

And the way she sang—why you could hear every word. Things about spring and flowers and bro ks; why it just made a fellow want to go a fishin' and yet to cry, too.

Miss Annie, that was her name, paid lots of attention to Snakes, and she made him promise to come again.

He did come again and again. His freckled face was washed and his hair brushed after a fashion.

He acquired a paper route and had an occasional bit of silver in his pocket that did not have to go for immediate needs.

"Me an' Rockyfeller is gettin' to be de main pushes of dis here country," he said one day with a wink.

True she kept him drained, but no amount of persuasion would make him leave her.

"Her's allus down in the mouth after dem soaks and her ain't got nobody but me. I guess I'll stick all right, all right."

The boy fairly worshipped "Miss Annie." He endured even the lectures and various entertainments that were part of the civilizing influence of the Settlement, together with the clean face and hands process, in order to be near her.

Judge Bronson sat in his cosy library reading one night when the maid announced a caller. "Please, sir, it's a queer little chap; he says he isn't a beggar and he must see you."

"Excuse me, yer honor, but I was afeared you'd turn me down, not knowin' it was me, and I had to see you on business." Snakes looked important.

"Oh, how are you, Tim?"—"Snakes" was used now by only a few of the old gang—the judge said, rising and shaking the boy's hand. "Come in and sit down."

For the first time the boy seemed to notice the red-walled room with its warm rich draperies and ebony furniture.

Books—he had never seen so many in his life. Very gingerly he sat upon the edge of a great armchair, then gaining confidence he gradually worked himself into its luxurious depths, drawing a long breath of satisfaction as he did so.

"Gee, this fits a feller's spine all right, all right," he said presently.

The judge loked over the top of his glasses.

"Well, Tim, this is the first time I've been honored by a visit from you."

The boy sat up.

"Yes, yer honor, an' I must tell yer quick what I come for. You know de guy that's called two-fingered Bill what's done time in de Bridewell once or twict? An' de feller dey calls Sluggy? Well, I heard 'em plannin' to slub yer—to lay yer out cold tonight, because you sent up two-finger's brudder—him what said he was only fifteen because he was small and you found out he was twenty. They said Miss Annie was goin' to a party, and you was goin' after her, and they said you'd never get dere. You look like you didn't believe me, judge, but this is all straight goods I'm deliverin' to you."

"Tim, you're a brick, and I do believe you. I want to thank you for the warning and the good will. You're going to win out, my boy, in the struggle for good citizenship. Wait, don't leave just yet," as he touched a bell, "I'm going to have some hot coffee and some sandwiches and cake. I want you to lunch with me and we'll have a chat."

Snakes leaned back again in the great armchair and did not envy even "Rockefeller."

The cake was something to remember, a thing of joy forever, and the hot coffee warmed his very vitals.

But by and by, even Snakes had an idea of the fitness of things, and he made his adieu and trotted out into the night and shadows, where his little life belonged.

But Snakes had had a taste of luxury and he fingered the dime in his pocket with a longing for further indulgence. Could he afford to peep into the museum? It was heads or tails, and the spinning coin decided. Snakes went to the museum and made a night of it. It was late when he reached the foot of the rickety stairs and dark as pitch.

It was just as the boy started to climb the steps that some one grabbed him.

"You will peach, will yer, you red-topped sneak? We follered you and we know yer dirty ways." And before he had time to answer a blow on the head knocked him into unconsciousness.

When Snakes opened his eyes he was in a long white-cotted bed, and he lay, for the irst time in his life, between clean sheets. The sensation was so novel that he could only wonder if he had died and gone to heaven. Yes, it must be, for there were flowers—roses, and there was an angel's face and an angel's touch—Miss Annie was here in heaven with him.

"Is dis de pearly gate what you told me of?" he whispered.

"No, Tim, this is the hospital. You've been ill, and you must be very, very quiet," the soft voice answered.

"Sing," he whispered, and at the nodded permission of the nurse Miss Annie sang, and the boy lay with closed eyes.

The boy smiled.

"They—didn't-- slub —yer," he gasped out brokenly.

"No, Tim, my little soldier," the judge replied, but the boy had lapsed into unconsciousness.

There was a change when he again opened his eyes.

The ward doctor came and took hold of the boy's wrist and leaned down to listen to his heart beat.

He shook his head at the young girl's anxious look.

Snakes' blue eyes roamed from one to the other. He saw the gravity on the faces about him.

"Am I goin' to croak, yer honor?"

Judge Bronson sat on the edge of the cot and took the boy's hand.

"Tim, do you understand what I say?"

The boy's head nodded.

"There comes a time to each one when the call comes. To some early, to some late, then the fight is done. Are you brave? The call has come. You have fought a good fight and the Master needs you."

"Him—what—you said—was hung—on the cross?"

"Yes, my boy."

"Well, her ain't got nobody left."

"I'll look after your mother, Tim."

A peaceful look came into his pinched face.

"Sing," he whispered again.

And as Miss Annie sang the judge murmured brokenly, "Greater love no man hath than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

And ere the sun had set the little soldier had gone out by way of the Cross into the Great Beyond.—Mary Moncure Parker in The Advance.

RED TAPE IN GERMANY.

A Railway Ticket, a Controversy and a Delayed Train.

In an account of the duchy of Teck and its inhabitants by the Rev. S. Baring-Gould an amusing experience is thus described by the author:

"We are wont, we Englishmen, to grumble at red tapism, but with us it does not go beyond the government offices. In Germany it is everywhere. I had an instance of it between Ober Lenningen and Owen. I had asked at the former place for a third class ticket to Owen and had stepped into a third class carriage. On these branch lines nearly every one travels fourth I counted twelve compartments fourth nine third and three second. There was no first class compartment. Before reaching the next station—in fact, a mile from Ober Lenningen—the inspector came round.

"'Hah, you have a fourth class ticket and are in a third class compartment! The fine is 6 marks.'

"I explained and offered at once to pass into an inferior carriage or pay the difference.

"'That will not do. You have infringed the law and must pay 6 marks.'

"I get out at Owen and will explain matters to the station master.

"'I did so.

"'The fine is 6 marks,' said this latter peremptorily.

"'But,' said I, 'I demanded a third class ticket and was given one for which I had not asked. This was an oversight of the clerk.'

"'You should have examined your ticket.'

"The train was delayed five minutes while the matter was thrashed out on the platform, the travelers craning their necks out of the windows of their respective carriages, looking on and listening with lively interest. At last reluctantly the station master yielded. I must pay the difference.

"'What is it?'

"'One penny!'"

Above Water.

"The times are hard, my dear," said a man to his better half, "and I find it extremely difficult to keep my nose above water."

"You could easily keep your nose above water," returned the lady, "if you didn't keep it so often above brandy."—London Answers.

TWO HISTORIC BUILDINGS BURNED AT BRAINTREE

Lyceum Building and First Congregational Church

At 3.30 o'clock this morning the Lyceum building at Braintree was discovered in flames and an alarm from Box 34 failed to work. Messrs. James R. Qualey and Willis H. Martin forced an entrance into the First Congregational church close by and rung the church bell. A general alarm was given and a call was telephoned to Quincy. The auto chemical from Quincy made another record run closely followed by the steamer and were upon the scene as soon as the local department. Chief Williams of Quincy could have saved the building it is thought if the Braintree water supply, had not failed. Only two lines of hose were run from a hydrant and the pressure was too low. There was a high wind and before a stream could be put on from the steamer the fire was beyond control and soon the historic First Congregational church was in flames.

The Lyceem building was owned as follows: The first story by J. Marcus Arnold, second story or upper half by Mr. N. E. Hollis and heirs of the late Asa French. Mr. Arnold conducted a large grocery business, a general store, on the first floor and rented to Hartley L. White, civil engineer, an office. Pythian hall was on the second floor, the home of Monatiquot lodge No. 83, K. of P.

This building was insured by Braintree Fire Insurance Agency, C. H. Hobart & Son. Mr. Arnold's stock was insured but Mr. White's loss is a total one. The church was insured for $25,000 and the new organ, the richest in the county, for $2,500.

Many nearby buildings caught fire and were promptly cared for by the firemen. The big church steeple, which towered up about 150 feet fell into the burning building and a stray timber struck Chief Williams in the back and knocked him over. For a few minutes he was stunned but was soon directing the firemen as before.

The church was built in 1857, and the late Capt. Norton Pratt was chairman of the building committee. It was nearly one hundred years ago that the Lyceum building was built and in that hall debates were held at the Lyceum which schooled many young men in oratory.

The chapel which was built on the rear of the church was also totally destroyed. Previous to 1889, before the chapel was built, the Sunday school met in Lyceum hall and all meetings were held there except church services. Thursday evening, Dec. 5, 1889, the chapel was dedicated and the hall vacated. The chapel and furnishings cost $7500.

In May 1907, the First Congregational church observed its two hundredth anniversary. From the address of Dr. William Gallagher, head master of Thayer Academy we reprint the following:

"As early as 1695, the old meeting-house at the north end of the town had been found to be too small to accommodate all the worshippers and it was also in great need of repair. The north precinct contained 72 families, the south precinct now north Braintree, contained 71 families, scattered along the banks of the Monatiquot river. Attendance on divine service had become irksome on account of the distance and the poor condition of the roads, "whereby the Lord's Day, which is a day of rest, was to them a day of labor rather" as the quaint petition for the new church states with its mixture of practicality and piety.

"The movement was resisted at the north end of the town, because the burden of supporting the minister, Rev. Moses Fiske, would be increased by such a withdrawal of support. Although a distinct vote in favor of a new church was passed in 1695, no move was actually made. To quiet the

INVESTIGATE CITY FINANCES

Proposed Legislative Bills Give Boards That Power

OF LOCAL INTEREST

In view of some of the statements made by the Councilmen Monday evening during the debate on the temporary loan order, that the state was going to take a hand in city finances, it will be interesting to know that Speaker Cushing of the legislature, Tuesday introduced several bills bearing on this question.

The legislation asked for provides for state officers or boards having power to receive and examine estimates of the several departments of State Government; to report thereon to the General Court, and to furnish information concerning such expenditures and appropriations to the General Court and to the Governor and Council.

To investigate the financial condition of towns, cities and counties applying to the General Court for leave to borrow money.

To investigate the general subject of municipal indebtedness.

To consider the expediency of the loans which any town ,city or county proposes to issue.

From time to time to investigate the expenditures and administration of particular towns and cities and to report thereon to the authorities of such city or town, or to the General Court.

To supervise the estimates, appropriations and expenditures of the several counties.

Every now and then a contemporary asks, "Can this man or that man be nominated for President?" Certainly, this is a free country, and any one can nominate whomever he pleases.

SURPRISE AND PRESENTATION

Medical Examiner Surprised by Club Friends at New Home

HANDSOME GIFT

Dr. Frederick E. Jones, who recently moved to the Tisdale house on Hancock street, was pleasantly surprised Tuesday evening, by a number of his friends at the Granite City club, who called to give him a house warning and incidentally, congratulate him on having been one of those to have received an appointment Monday evening from Mayor Stone.

Considerable strategy had to be used by Mrs. Jones to keep the doctor in after office hours until the party arrived. She was successful however for just as he was about to leave there came a ring at the outer door and as the doctor opened it, in walked a party of thirty of his friends.

Some had an arm full of plates, while others carried saucers, forks and spoons while in the rear there brought up an automobile loaded with things in the eatable line for which the aforesaid plates, saucers, forks and spoons were to be used.

There was also a mysterious looking box which upon being opened was found to contain a handsome cut glass punch bowl and mugs. This was the gift of the surprisers to Dr. and Mrs. Jones and was placed on the dining table.

Wraps laid aside and a welcome extended the party were told the house was their's for the evening. A little later several whist tables were in play, which continued until Chef Johnson could get his lobster salad and other eatables ready when they were served, after which whist was again in order until a late hour when the guests departed after wishing the doctor success in his new position.

MEETINGS IN BETHANY CHURCH

Men and Religion Forward Movement of Greater Boston

QUINCY MEETINGS

The Quincy district platform meetings of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which opens a week's campaign in Greater Boston on Saturday, has just been announced by the central office 4 Ashburton place, Boston. This district includes Quincy, Atlantic, Wollaston, East Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset.

The meetings will be held in Bethany Congregational church, Quincy, and will extend from Tuesday, Jan. 16, to Sunday, Jan. 21. They will open Tuesday at 8.00 P. M. with a meeting devoted to Boys' Work, led by C. C. Robinson. Throughout the week, meetings are scheduled for 8 o'clock in the evening.

Wednesday, the meeting will be devoted to Missions under the direction of J. M. Moore.

Thursday, W. E. Biederwolf will be in charge of the session given over to Evangelism.

Bible Study will be the topic of Friday's meeting, presided over by M. A. Honline, and Saturday's session will be given over to Social Service in charge of T. N. Carver.

The final meeting on Sunday, Jan. 21st will be evangelistic in character and will be in charge of A. M. Bruner of Chicago.

BANQUETING COUNCIL.

If the present order of things keeps up, the City Council of 1912, will go down into history as the great dining Council. The members have been fortunate thus far in attending several banquets and up to the present time two others are in store. The first is Friday night at the Boston City club where they will hear the Metropolitan Boston proposition discussed by the Chief Executives of the cities and towns in the district and by others well qualified to speak on the subject.

The other banquet is that to be tendered to the Mayor and City Council by the Squantum Improvement association, which will be held at the Quincy house, Boston, Saturday evening, Jan. 27, at 6.30 o'clock.

RESULTS LOOKED FOR.

Mention is made in an article on another page of the good work that is being done by Senator Barnes and Representative Leslie in the matter of the bridge over the railroad tracks at Atlantic street. Today Senator Barnes and Representative Leslie appeared before the railroad Commissioners in relation to the bridge and immediate results are looked for.

RATIFICATION OF TREATIES

Question Discussed by Wollaston Unitarian Club

ADDRESS

"The most important question that the world is waiting to have answered today is the ratification of the proposed treaties between France and the United States and England and the United States" declared Rev. Edward Cummings of Cambridge before the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday veening.

The speaker addressed those present in a most able and scholarly manner upon the "Ratification of the general arbitration treaties."

By his contemplated action your president is making this country the centre of a new kind of world politics. It realizes the dreams ofages and the pretlictions of the prophets."

There probably was never a more important issue from the point of view of religion than the present issue at hand.

It is not simply a religious question but the most important economic question at the present time. Again, not only this bu the most vital political and moral issue as well.

It is the first step and a very long and importan one toward a new condition of human affairs. It means the possibility of using the unmeasured economic resources for constrcutive instead of destructive work.

It means the taking of almost unlimited treasure, now going in payment of debts from past wars and preparation forthose to come, for the purpose of constructive work.

It will mean that instead of our present enemies we may fight the white plague, cancer and other diseases which are our real enemies in life.

I recognize ignorance as the only devil in the world. Think of what it means when for every battleship we can endow a university, for every cruiser and destroyer a college, for each ship of war a technical school, when the sums expended for powder and shot shall go for the ammunition of intellectual, physical, moral and social progress.

There's a good squadron for you! Think of the unexplored realms which might be invaded in that vast field of unlimited knowledge.

Think of 70 per cent of the revenue of this peaceful nation of ours going to pay the cost of old wars and preparing for wars to come, leaving

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Many people feel that a good set of broken resolutions renders one exempt from making any more for another 50 weeks.

Thus far the list of the twenty greatest men and women comprise about 20,000 individuals. The human race must think it has a good deal to boast of.

The price of the Christmas junket nowappears in the crop of January bills, but that does not worry the many people who are provided with good wide waste baskets.

The New York 400 is doing the turkey trot. We feel more confident that the work of their heels will be well done than if they were trying to make some practical use of their heads.

The railroads have ordered 60,000 new freight cars. They may not be needed to transport merchandise, but anyway they will assist our leisure class in securing transportation about the country.

From the way the applications are beginning to come in, Uncle Sam might just as well withdraw his advertisement of the White House from the For Rent column, and save unnecessary charges.

It is inevitable that a change of administration means a change in the makeup of a business and so at City hall no matter how capable an official may be it is an unwritten law that he must give way. Among those to leave City Hall Feg. 1st are men who have given the city good service; capable men in every way and those who are to take their places will doubtless also be equally faithful in the discharge of the city's business.

A glance over Mayor Stone's official family shows careful thought for the city's welfare and favorable comment is hear. Of course there is some feeling over the retirement of veterans in the service and Mayor Stone's selection of officials has been no easy task. But on the whole it is satisfactory; the men selected by him are mostly well-known residents of long standing, with good clean records in business and social life. Such men should make good and we believe they will.

A BLACK HEART.

The life of men is seldom unmitigated black. The worst man has commonly some mitigating circumstances that tinge his deeds off into a shade of grey. And there are taints of selfishness in the best of us that make spotless white equally rare.

The case of Rev. C. V. T. Richeson of Boston, who has confessed the murder of Miss Avis Linnell, suggests nothing in the way of palliation or excuse. No convenient ancestor with a record for homicide appears upon whom some share of the deed can be placed.

The worst of this black-hearted act is the reproach it casts over the brotherhood who have sworn their lives to helping people out of the pit. The fact that one clergyman has gone wrong proves nothing about the character of his black-coated associates. As a whole, the clergy is made up of men who have turned their backs on dollars and on vices because it gives them satisfaction to set crooked things straight. But the Richeson case brings joy to every low dive and every gilded sinner, who in view of such a crime hasten to say that all men are alike in the great universal democracy of guilt.

There is a sharp lesson in this depressing affair. It will never be possible to prevent wolves from rigging up in sheep's clothing. Lamb flesh tastes too sweet and is too easily obtained. But at least the people who maintain a sheep-fold can exercise more care as to whom they select for a shepherd.

The average church takes too little pains to look up the moral character of candidates for the pastorate. The usual fulsome letters of praise from personal friends of the candidate are not enough. If every church about to call a pastor would send its best business man to the place where the candidate comes from, and let him see what his enemies can dig up, most of the scandals in clerical life could be avoided.

In the Richeson case, while no positive wickedness could have been unearthed in this way, a tendency toward feminine flirtation would have been discovered in the guilty man that would have made most people suspicious.

COLLEGE SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Interesting Talk at Employed Boys' Monthly Social

DUTCH SUPPER

The regular monthly social meeting for the employed boys of the local Y. M. C. A. took place Tuesday evening in the assembly hall of the association and was attended by a large number. The occasion resolved into a Dutch supper which was served at seven o'clock, under the direction of a committee consisting of Mrs. E. I. Beal, Mrs. A. H. Gilson and Mrs. John F. Roache.

After the repast, the boys' director of the association, Alden Blanchard, officiated in the capacity of toastmaster and introduced as the principal speaker of the evening John Desha, a senior at Harvard college and one of the foremost athletes of the Cambridge Institution. Mr. Desha is shortstop on the baseball team and his experience in the national pastime, together with the experience in other branches of athletics that he has acquired both in Hawaii, his native land and Cambridge made his talk on "Sports at college and athletics in Hawaii" prove most interesting and appreciative.

The speaker made a comparison of the various sports indulged in by the Hawaiians and Americans. He said that sports in his native land, that is the leading sports, were governed by the same rules as the sports in this country. He said that the Hawaiians were very careful in informing themselves with regard to all the fine points of the game and added that the greatest sports among them were surf riding and swimming. He said that no hockey or ice skating was known to them as the weather conditions which existed throughout the year would not permit the same.

The speaker then went on to give an account of the historical side of his home environment. He stated that his home was situated at a distance of thirty miles from one of the craters of the second largest volcano in the world and presented a picture which he himself had witnessed when voluminous streams of lava poured forth on one occasion into the sea. He then went into account of his experiences at Waho "Prep" school and added that the reason he came to Harvard was because there were no colleges in Hawaii. The colleges there, he asserted, rank no higher than the preparatory schools in this country.

The baseball and football outlook of Harvard was discussed at length and Mr. Desha stated that every season at the Cambridge institution was successful if Yale were defeated. He spoke of the various players on the different teams and was accorded great applause. When he concluded his remarks, he was given a vote of thanks for his interesting talk. The event proved a most enjoyable one and the members are planning to hold others of a similar nature every month.

CALVARY BAPTIST CHURCH CALLS REV. J. L. CRANE

Rev. John L. Crane of Wakefield has accepted a call from the Calvary Baptist church of Quincy and will take charge of the affairs of the church on Feb. 1. He was pastor of the Rumney, N. H., Baptist church for nine years, but was obliged to give up two years ago on account of ill health. He came to Wakefield, but has taken practically no active part in church work.

He was born in Braintree and was graduated from the public schools of that town. He was graduated from Brown University in 1880 and from the Newton Theological Seminary in 1883.

He held pastorates in Narragansett, R. I., for three years, Allenton, R. I., for two years, and Sheldonville, Mass., for eleven years.

METROPOLITAN CITY PLANNING

Dinner to be Given at Boston City Club Friday Evening

AFTER DINNER SPEAKERS

Mayor Eugene R. Stone, members of the Quincy City Council, City Engineer E. C. Sargent and City Solicitor John W. McAnarney have been invited by the Boston City club to attend a "metropolitan planning dinner" which will be given by the club on next Friday evening.

The subject for speeches and discussion will be the report of the Metropolitan Plan Commision, sent to the Legislature Jan. 1st, recommending the creation of a permanent Metropolitan Planning Board. Invitations to attend the dinner have been sent by the club to all of the Mayors, chairmen of selectmen and members of City Councils and town boards, as well as other public officials of the municipalities of the Metropolitan District, including Boston. It is expected that there will be over 300 in attendance.

John H. Fahey will preside and will be one of the speakers. John Nolen, the city planner, of Cambridge, who was one of the members of the Metropolitan Plan Commision, will give a half-hour talk on city planning illustrated with stereopticon views, contrasting effective opportunities for planning in the Metropolitan District with actual accomplishments abroad. Edward A. Filene, who was chairman of the Metropolitan Plan Commision, will speak briefly on the fundamental ideas that are the basis of the proposed legislation. One or two other speakers yet to be announced will be heard from, and the meeting will then be thrown open for general discussion.

The dinner will be served at six o'clock and will be held in the auditorium on the top floor of the club building. The speaking will begin immediately after the dinner.

BOSTON DEAF MUTE CHURCH TO CLOSE

Rev. E. C. Wyand, pastor of deaf-mute church in Boston, has announced that he will give up preaching March 1, since his congregation cannot raise funds enough to pay his living expenses. Mr. Wyand takes this step reluctantly. He had planned a system of services for the deaf and dumb, not only in Boston, but in other New England cities. He has now arranged a scheme of work by which he hopes to support himself and, to some extent, to help those who have been members of his church.

If this deaf-mute congregation shall be disbanded, it will mean a loss to Boston of a church society which is known far outside the State. Mr. Wyand, it is believed, is the only deaf-mute minister in this neighborhood available for this work.

A few months ago Mr. Wyand married Miss Kate Burnham Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Simmons of Wollaston, who has been a great help in his church work.

GIVEN BRACELET.

Assembling at the Quincy Adams depot at 7.45 o'clock Tuesday evening, a number of friends marched to the home of Miss Helen M. Donohue, on 30 Pearl street, and took the popular South Quincy young lady by complete surprise. After the party had assembled in the house, Miss Helen M. Hastings, in behalf of the many present, stepped forth, and in a few well chosen words, presented Miss Donohue with a handsome gold bracelet. The recipient was deeply touched by the courteous act, yet managed to respond most fittingly in accepting the gift.

Games of all sorts were indulged in and a most enjoyable time was in store throughout the remainder of the evening. Refreshments were served and the occasion proved to be a most gala one.

Among those present were: Mary McLeod, Nellie McDonald, Alice Gough, Gertrude Fraser, Grace Jones, Annie McLeod, Mollie Cavanagh, Gertrude Whalen, Jennie Malcolm, Manda Johnson, Kenneth Stinson, Charles Abbot, Frank Murphy, Walter Drohn, David Dackers, David Brownrigg, John Shay, Giblin McDonald, Frank Smith, Joseph Berlucci, Ernest Knight, Thomas O'Brien, Norman Suter, Matthew Hennesey.

The committee in charge included: Helen M. Hastings, Florence C. Gillis and Gertrude C. Fraser.

Anty Drudge Gives the Grocer Some Advice.

Anty Drudge—"Hello, is this Main 1211? Yes? That you Mr. Smith? You send your boy back to Mrs. Jones at once to take away the things he left this morning. Why? Because she ordered Fels-Naptha soap and you sent an imitation. You were out of Fels-Naptha soap, you say? What has that got to do with it? If you were out of good money, would you give Mrs. Jones counterfeit? Mr. Smith, if I was Mrs. Jones I would take my patronage to the grocer who saw to it that he was not out of Fels-Naptha."

A woman who washed the old-fashioned way in steaming suds and with much rubbing changed to Fels-Naptha soap.

Her clothes wore better than they had in the past.

She gave the credit to the quality of the fabrics.

But one day some one asked her to try something "just as good" as Fels-Naptha soap. She did.

And her clothes were in shreds in a few months.

Then the reason dawned on the woman. The secret of lasting wear was Fels-Naptha soap and the Fels-Naptha way of washing.

You can't boil and hard rub clothes and expect them to last; neither can you "eat" the dirt out of clothes without "eating" the life out too.

Fels-Naptha washes colored clothes without fading. Fels-Naptha won't shrink or roughen flannels. Fels-Naptha makes the wash white and pure and sweet.

The easiest and best way to use Fels-Naptha soap is the right way—in cool or lukewarm water. Use any time of the year.

Q.—If the dead are asleep in the graves awaiting the time of the resurrection at Christ's second coming when all who are in their graves shall be awakened and shall come forth, as the Scriptures affirm: how shall we understand the experiences of some who, at the time of their departure from this life, see heavenly visions of angels, and hear strains of celestial music? (W. E. D.)

Answer.—As it is emphatically set forth throughout the entire Scriptures that the dead are "asleep" in their graves," and that "the dead know not anything," "for there is neither wisdom, nor device, nor knowledge in the grave whither thou goest;" and that all will remain in this sleep of death until the awakening time, when "all who are in their graves shall come forth at the voice of the Son of Man;" we must conclude that the dying ones did not enter at once into Heaven; and that what they saw was not an actual glimpse of celestial glories, but merely a phantasmagoria induced by an excited condition of the imaginative powers of the mind, with a correspondingly dormant state of the reasoning faculties. The Lord Jesus declared at His first advent that no one had ascended into Heaven; and the apostle says that the sleeping ones will be awakened and changed at the second advent.—See John iii, 13; I Corinthians xv, 51, 52.

Q.—What becomes of the soul at death? Is it put into the grave with the body, or does it fly away in a disembodied state, and go soaring around through space, waiting and longing for the time to come when it can get back into its body (put on its clothes again, so to speak), at the resurrection? (J. A. G.)

Answer.—There is much confusion of thought regarding this matter. Many are disposed to express the matter wrongly by saying that they have a soul in place of saying that they are a soul. There is considerable difference in having a cow and being a cow! All living beings are souls from the Scriptural standpoint. (Genesis i, 20-30. Margin.) When father Adam disobeyed the Lord, it was not his body, the dust of the ground that sinned. Neither was it the energizing principle, the breath of life, that sinned. But it was Adam himself, the living intelligent being, the soul, that sinned. Therefore, it was the soul that died, as the Scriptures declare—"The soul that sinneth it shall die." (Ezekiel xviii, 4.) In the resurrection it is the soul that is to be resuscitated. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hades—the tomb"—was spoken of our Lord Jesus.

NATIONAL GRANITE BANK

Some Folks Frown At Credit

That's all right,—but over 90 per cent of the people in the world today, find it mighty convenient to feel that their name is good for the things they want---and it's vastly more convenient to pay a little later.

It's a curious thing, the more money some people have---the slower they grow about paying their bills. They build their credit and then use it,---in other words---they use other people's money to make more for themselves. Credit is necessary for the advancement of the world. The sooner you begin to use your credit the sooner you will find it out. No better way than to open a furniture account here. We sell everything from the cradle to the piano.

We use you square.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The January meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. will be held at Association building on Friday afternoon at three o'clock.

* * *

Mrs. William E. Alden and Mrs. Francis Abele, Jr., are the committee for the meeting this week of the Friday club at the home of Mrs. C. Theodore Hardwick, Chestnut street.

* * *

At the meeting Saturday night of the Quincy Young Women's club Mrs. A. J. George is to be the speaker, subject: "Why I am an Anti-Suffragist." Gentlemen's night will take place Jan. 27th.

* * *

Junior Friday club meets on Monday with Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield of 207 Arlington street, the committee on program being Miss Clara L. Baxter and the subject Benjamin Franklin.

* * *

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. John T. Conway, chairman of the home economics department of The Philergians of Braintree is to have charge of the meeting. Mrs. Mary J. Lincoln will lecture on "The simplicity of living." Seven new members have been admitted to the club completing the membership list of 300, the club limit.

* * *

"The Sunday School, its Purposes and its Needs" is the subject of the meeting of Wollaston Alliance on Jan. 17. The speakers will be Mrs. W. I. Lawrance and Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney.

* * *

The next meeting of the New England Wheaton Seminary club will be held Saturday, at the Vendome, Bostton, with an Irish program by Seumas MacManus, cello solo by Charlotte White and pianoforte solos by Mrs. Amy Blandy Wood. There will be a social hour and tea from 3.30 to 5.

* * *

Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman is to present her lecture recital, "Apotheosis of the Dance," at the gentlemen's night of the Old Colony Women's club at South Weymouth, on Friday, when she will be assisted by Miss Virginia Tanner. Mrs. Frederic Bauer, Radcliffe, '05, is the president of the club.

* * *

A sewing class of members of the Young Women's club was formed Tuesday evening at the clubhouse which promises to add one more pleasant and profitable evening meetings to the club calendar.

* * *

Unity Circle of King's Daughters, have announced a very pleasing program for their annual entertainment at Bethany chapel on January 16th. Miss Irene Bewley, who will recite the three act play "Polly of the Circus" is one of the most versatile and pleasing of entertainers. She grasps both word and spirit of the author and has unusual dramatic ability, making her characters stand out so clearly that one forgets the reader and is lost in the scenes portrayed. She is sure to please her Quincy audience, and the musical numbers by the Mendelssohn trio will round out a delightful evening's program. "Polly of the Circus" ran as a serial story in the Ledger a year or two ago and was enjoyed by many readers.

* * *

The Art Committee of the Quincy Women's club, Mrs. H. H. Kitson, chairman, have arrangements for the Twelfth Night Revels on Jan. 16th at Alpha hall well in hand and the affair promises even greater success than last year, in point of attendance, costumes and good time..

FEDERATION MEETINGS.

A conference of the committee on industrial and social conditions, Saturday, Jan. 20, at 2 o'clock, in the rooms of the New England Women's club, in the New Chauncey Hall building. Miss Georgie A. Bacon will preside.

The questionaire on child welfare will be discussed by those who have returned answers to the questions after investigation of local conditions. It is expected that social workers will be present of whom questions may be asked during the discussion.

C. C. Carstens, secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, will speak on "Public Responsibility for Child Welfare"; George C. Minard ,superintendent of the parental school of Boston, will tell of "The So-Called Bad Boy"; "The Next Step in Education" will be presented by Meyer Bloomfield of the Civic Service House.

This study of the conditions of child life is of such importance to the children of the state that the committee has decided to continue work on the questionaire for the present year. Officers, committees and club members, especially those who have been embarrassed in their efforts to secure answers to the questions, are urged to attend this meeting.

A conference on "Conservation," in Eliot Hall, Jamaica Plain, Monday afternoon, Jan. 22, at 2 o'clock, by invitation of the Jamaica Plain Tuesday club.

The mid-winter meeting on Feb. 8, will be in Park Street church, Boston, and the general subject, "Education," will be considered.

QUINCY ALLIANCE.

Despite the disagreeable weather Monday afternoon, a good-sized audience was present in the parlor of First church to attend the meeting of Quincy Alliance. Mrs. George G. Saville, the president, was in the chair and welcomed the guests in her accustomed cordial and hospitable manner. The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn "Love Divine, All Love Excelling," Miss Flora Underwood presiding at the piano.

Mrs. Isabelle A. Davis, secretary read the report of the last meeting which was a Christmas service. The report was approved and accepted. The Alliance has $38.21 in the treasury, which will be devoted to benevolent purposes. Mrs. Saville spoke briefly in regard to the work of the Alliance. Mrs. Charles H. Johnson urged members to accept the invitation of the Hingham Alliance for Jan. 14th, which will be an all day meeting. Lunch will be served at noon and at 2.15 an address will be given by Hon. John D. Long.

The N. E. Associate Alliance will hold its midwinter session at West Newton, the Quincy Branch is cordially invited. Mrs. Christopher Elliot will be one of the speakers, Rev. William I. Lawrance will give an address, subject: "Consecration." A tribute will be paid to the memory of Kate Gannett Wells, who was an earnest and faithful worker in the work of the Alliance.

Mrs. W. B. Nichols read a number of letters from persons who had been remembered with books, post cards, etc., at Christmas, which were very interesting. Mrs. Sanborn, Mrs. Christiansen, Mrs. Marsh and Mrs. Smith made a few remarks after which, Mrs. Saville introduced the speaker of the afternoon. Rev. William I. Lawrance, president of the Unitarian Sunday School Union.

Mr. Lawrance said in part that the religious training of the child should begin at the mother's knee. He said he was the youngest of twelve children and his parents lived in the far West, distant from day schools, and Sunday school. His mother was a very busy woman but she found time to instil into the hearts of her children religious principles. Mr. Lawrance spoke of the Sunday school and how absolutely necessary it was for the mother to work in co-operation with the Sunday school teacher. Many noble men and women devote their time to teaching in the Sunday school, they should be upheld and strengthened in the work by Sunday school literature, and a room devoted to the use of the teachers where they can meet and study the best methods of educating the child religiously. In closing Mr. Lawrance urged members of the Alliance to use their influence in support of Sunday school work.

Mr. Lawrance spoke forcibly and eloquently and one could not fail to be impressed with the significance and influence of religious training upon the mind of the child.

Charles H. Johnson, superintendent of First Church Sunday school, was present and made a few remarks saying he was much pleased with the address of Mr. Lawrance and hoped all connected with Sunday school work would give it more time and consideration and work with greater zeal.

Mrs. Saville then graciously thanked Mr. Lawrance in behalf of the Alliance after which refreshments were served consisting of cocoa, sandwiches and fancy crackers The hostesses were: Mrs. Isabelle A. Davis and Mrs. George G. Saville, and the pourers, Mrs. W. B. Nichols and Mrs. W. F. Hodgkinson.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

In opening the business session of the Quincy Women's club Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, president, wished the members a Happy New Year, saying that although a little late, this being the first meeting of the year, the wish was none the less cordial.

Reports were given by the recording secretary Mrs. Henry Tirrell and by the treasurer, Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham. Mrs. Sheppard extended an invitation from the Massachusetts Federation to meet in Eliot hall, Jamaica Plain, at 2 P. M., Jan. 22 and appointed Mrs. William F. Cummings and Miss Mary L. Hinkley a committee to attend. Mrs. Robert E. Park and Mrs. A. N. Murray were appointed to attend the meeting in the rooms of the New England Women's club, Boston. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Victor E. Miller were elected delegates to the midwinter meeting Feb. 8, at the Park Street church, Boston.

The Literature committee announced that the next meeting of Mrs. H. J. Gurney's class in Modern Literature would be held Jan. 17 with Mrs. George H. Brown of Elm street. Tickets for the rest of the series could be obtained for $1.00.

Mrs. W. B. Nichols announced a change in plans for the home talent Dickens afternoon and that a reader had been secured who would read some of Dickens works and there would be singing by the Mendelssohn trio, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Tirrell and Miss Coe. Mrs. Nichols also announced the loss of a rose colored velvet bag, also a pearl pin and the finding of a pin at the gentlemen's night of the club.

Mrs. Whitcher for the Legislative committee extended the thanks of the committee to all those who contributed to the success of gentlemen's night, especially to the special hospitality committee. The floral decorations were by Patterson, the Wollaston florist.

Mrs. Robert E. Park of the Legislative committee spoke of the Pension bill for Mothers and the meeting held New Year's night. She spoke of Juvenile court and the hope of forming a commission.

Mrs. Tirrell announced the entertainment to be given by the King's Daughters, Jan. 16, at Bethany church and of the Choral society concert, Jan. 23. Announcement was also made of a course of demonstration cooking lectures at Wollaston in aid of the Wollaston Kindergarten school. There would be five lectures on Monday afternoons beginning Jan. 29.

Mrs. John W. Sanborn was elected chairman of the Education committee in place of Mrs. Charles R. Safford, resigned.

A letter was read from the Massachusetts Forestry Association asking the co-operation of the club in its work and it was voted the club become a member of the Association.

This brought the business session to an end and the entertainment of the afternoon opened as usual with music. A group of duets was sung by Mrs. Edith Cary Page and Mrs. Ella Raymond Bates with Mrs. Charles Sampson at the piano. They sang most delightfully "Across the Still Lagoon" by Logi; "Absence" by Lassen and a Tuscan Folk Song by Caracciolo, giving much pleasure and receiving appreciative encores.

The afternoon's program was in charge of the Literature committee, Mrs. John O. Short, chairman and the speaker Rev. Samuel McChord Crothers of Cambridge. The subject "American Temperament" was handled broadly and interestingly by Mr. Crothers. What makes a nation? Is it temperament? What affects domestic relationship—temperament and we hear about incompatibility of temper, etc. Nations find enjoyment differently each has a temperament in common. In America no matter what descent, he is an American and recognized as such everywhere. We are all tagged Uncle Sam. We are optimistic in regard to our own country. We say of an American he's all right and the same of our country which is aggravating to other nations who do not look at it as we do.

We are on good terms with ourselves. Sure of the greatness of our country and ready to argue it out. We are complacent, perhaps not always logical, as we confuse geographic greatness with personal greatness. We admire bigness, quantity rather than quality, talk big, impatient of prolonged study and accept good luck rather than long studying out of problems.

We are enamoured with wireless telegraphy, fireless cookers, vacuum cleaners and think they are everything and can do lots for us. Are extremely tolerant of persons who show a disposition to do. Delighted because Dr. Cook said he discovered the pole and disappointed when Mr. Peary telegraphed his news to the contrary.

He spoke of the rude force and ability of early days and the opportunity to make history. We have a reputation of boasting. Even Capt. John Smith said Virginia was a greater country than all Europe and through all our growth that idea of bigness, greatness has prevailed. A great material growth was seen from the beginning. Yankees see further than most folks and they foresaw an absolutely inevitable future, with great people, great cities, great country. The future was so clear the early settlers forsaw it and boasting came naturally. We were captains of industry even in the early days.

The origin of the American temperament is found in the forward look, a belief in a finer development of religion, literature and art and appeal to us as great. It has taken us 300 years to do a big part in the world's work and be a big people. There is a note of optimism. That which is and that which is to be, a sense of space and breadth. A will to confront the problems of life, a destiny to be fulfilled. Look ahead, great things must be done and have been done that millions might live in the new America with the old work done and the new just beginning.

Loud, long and appreciative applause showed in a measure how thoroughly club members enjoyed Dr. Crothers' talk. An informal reception was given him during the social hour which closed the meeting.

Afternoon tea was served by the Hospitality committee the special hostesses being Mrs. Herbert S. Barker, Mrs. Charles R. Safford, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon and Mrs. John A. Barbour and the pourers Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. James H. Pentlman.

The Quincy Women's club is deeply indebted to William Patterson for the loan of the many beautiul palms which helped to make in the several rooms, a truly beautiful background for the goodly company assembled there for gentlemen's night. Mr. Patterson has assisted many times before in beautifying the club home for special meetings, and on this occasion he seemed to be imbued with the same spirit of enthusiasm that held dominion over the ladies who worked to make the affair a success; and his generosity kept pace with that enthusiasm. A hearty vote of thanks to this genial gentleman!

UNIVERSALIST MISSION.

The missionary society connected with the Universalist church held its regular meeting at the residence of Mrs. Emma C. Hyland, 45 Upland road, Monday afternoon. Owing to the inclement weather, there were many absent, but those present, seven in number, found the meeting very interesting. In the absence of the president, Mrs. T. A. Addison, Mrs. Robert Reed, presided and opened the session by extending a cordial welcome to all. Rev. Fannie Austin read a very interesting account of the advancement of the colored people in the South in religious instruction as well as secular. Rev. Mr. Jordan one of our missionaries writes very encouraging letters from the South in regard to the uplifting of the colored people.

Miss Austin also spoke of the heroic efforts of Rev. George L. Perin, and what wonderful results he accomplished while in Japan. Through Mr. Perin's instrumentality the home for working girls in Boston was established. God has blessed our efforts amazingly in our missionary work.

At the close of the address it was voted to send a letter of good cheer to Mr. Jordan and also ask his advice about sending a barrel of clothing and literature.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. Reed, Woodward avenue. All are cordially invited to attend.

CHRISTMAS PARTY.

A large audience enjoyed the postponed Christmas entertainment of the Park and Downs Sunday school held in the church auditorium Tuesday evening. The evening was taken up with a series of motion pictures operated by a Boston concern with remarkable clearness. The subjects were all highly interesting—the first depicting the scenes in the well known German legend of "Faust." Next came a film showing "Wild animals in captivity." This was instductive as well as interesting and showed the animals at so close a range that all details might be discerned.

The "Tale of two cities," was given, hardly any of the many scenes and incidents of Dickens' work being omitted. Concluding the pictures was a farce entitled "The Duke DeRibbon Counter" whish sent the audience into gales of laughter.

The pictcres were interspersed with solos by Miss Margaret Heasman and Artemus Dingwell. Miss Heasman's selections included a group of three German child songs by Rheinecke, the "Spinning Song," "Rain Song" and "Broom Song." "Gypsy trail" and "Loch Lomond" were sung by Artefus Dingwell. The soloists were accpanied by Miss Henrietta C. Gram.

The program concluded the white curtain was lowered disclosing a Christmas tree resplendent with colored lights. The distribution of candy to the children of the Sunday school brought the successfcl evening to a close.

The committee in charge consisted of Miss Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Boynton, Mrs. F. C. Knowlton, Miss Fannie Fraser, Mrs. George Stebbins, Mr. Colby, Artemus Dingwell and Willard Atkins.

☞The Wollaston Kindergarten Committee will hold a Food and Candy Sale Saturday afternoon, Jan. 13, from two until five o'clock in the Congregational vestry, Wollaston.

SMILE AND BE TACTFUL.

Miss Floretta Vining's New Year's editorial in the Hull Beacon of Jan. 5, has considerable meat in the nut and is given in full below as a Quincy woman and two others well known in our city help give point to the story.

"Smile and the world smiles with you; be cross or blue, or glum and all hate you. Take your choice and you will soon find out where you are. Be everybody's friend, rich, and poor. Everything is measured by your own character. Your truest friends are your own flesh and blood. Above all things stand by your own. The moment you retail gossip of your family, that instant you are a traitor, and if it is in your nature it will go through life.

It don't pay to make enemies, better to have the good will of a dog than to be at odds with anybody. Tactful ways avoid much trouble. Don't commence to frown on the new year's events, make yourself agreeable wherever you are or whoever you may be with. You will be invited to dinners and parties, if you smile, no matter what you troubles or sorrows are, no one has any interest in them, you better bear them alone. If you have not the price of your breakfast don't pour out your troubles to the first acquaintance you meet. Smile and be jolly, and ten to one they ask you to lunch with them. Do your part to make the world bright. Don't inflict your aches and pains upon everybody. No one cares a rap whether you are sick or well. Sorrow has no place only in the immediate family.

Make yourself just as agreeable as you can. You count for nothing any way. You are here today and gone tomorrow. Get what you can out of the world. Famous men and women of twenty-five years ago are unknown today and they have not a stone to tell you where their graves are. Such is fame. Don't hold your head so high in passing your neighbor, new clothes make you no better. I have seen fortunes go in a twinking and made in less time.

Don't let wealth run away with your heart. Be kind and generous—ask any one within your gates to eat. Don't be mean with food, you don't know when last they ate. A cup of tea or coffee helps along the social life and remember what you do and what you say returns to your children years after. Those that have children should be twenty times more humble than those that are without following.

There is a lady in Quincy, Mrs. James Stetson, and one in Rockland Mrs. Donovan, that have stood great prosperity and yet they are humble and generous. Kind to a fault always make any one welcome that is within their gates. I have known some of the grandest women in my life. The late Mrs. Caleb Chase, who lies in West Harwich church yard, had as noble a character as one could find. Once in a life time found always. Had a mind and live up to it. Smile, be cheerful and tactful. Don't make trouble for any one.

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

Under this heading will be published every Wednesday and Saturday dates of forthcoming entertainments in the city. A one-line announcement will be inserted free of charge, but if any committee desires more publicity as to place, hour, date, admission, etc., it will be inserted at 25 cents per line each insertion. Look the list over, and if your entertainment is not included, send it in.

Do You Believe in Signs?

Too many storekeepers depend upon signs. They are all right to mark your place of business, but you need something more forceful to bring customers right up to your counters. You need general, far-reaching publicity as a real trade-getter.

It matters not how elaborate or artistic your business sign may be. It will be read only by a very small percentage of those who pass your door. It is necessary in a way. And yet you know that its sphere of usefulness is very small. On the contrary a business announcement in the columns of THE DAILY LEDGER will be read each day by thousands and thousands of regular readers of this paper.

DON'T RELY ON SIGNS.

PIN YOUR FAITH IN THE DAILY LEDGER.

IT WILL PUT GINGER IN YOUR BUSINESS.

ATLANTIC BRIDGE.

The article in Monday's Ledger relative to the bridge over the tracks at Atlantic street has brought out some new facts. The people who have occasion to use this street can not be blamed for kicking at the seeming delay but Representative Leslie and Senator Barnes have not been idle in the matter and are both working to remedy conditions. They took up the matter with the railroad, who are responable for the delay, and it is claimed by the railroad that the delay is due to the non-arrival of the steel structure. The Metropolitan Park Commissioners have also taken up the matter with the railroad and are urging them to complete the bridge at once or put a foot bridge across.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Miss Julia E. Underwood, for nearly sixty years a teacher at the Coddington school is celebrating her 75th birthday anniversay today. While Miss Underwood is passing the day quietly at her home she is being remembered by her former pupils and teachers with whom she was for so many years associated in school work. Among these remembrances were cards expressing congratulations and wishes for a bright and happy new year. The Ledger joins her friends in wishing for many more years of happiness.

LOOKS MUCH LIKE WILSON

New Jersey Governor's Presidential Boom Is Growing

THE COMPLIMENTS OF BRYAN

They Attract Much Attention at Washington, Where Nebraskan Is Considered to Have Played Good Politics In Being Thrown Down by National Committee—Convention to Be Held June 25 at Baltimore

Washington, Jan. 10.—Woodrow Wilson's presidential boom is about four times the size it was when the New Jersey governor brought it into town on Monday. This is one of the important inferences from the meeting here of the Democratic national committee and the Jackson day banqueters.

All Washington is talking over the peculiar compliments lavished on Wilson by William J. Bryan at the Jackson day banquet, and the intimate friends of the Nebraskan who mingled in the crowd where the national committee was meeting plastered up the crevices of the Bryan position by declaring that Bryan knew what he was about in his treatment of Wilson.

Bryan's prestige was little if at all injured by his defeat in the committee, when the committee by an almost 2 to 1 vote seated James M. Guffey over Bryan's protest. The committee had law and technicality on its side and Bryan had good politics.

The incident was interesting, however, in illustrating again that Bryan is relying rather on the people than on the machine. This also is the basis of the Wilson candidacy, for while the members of the national committee have leaned backwards in their refusal to commit themselves as to the presidency, their testimony has been almost unanimous that Wilson is the favorite candidate of the people at home.

A canvass of the committee indicates strongly also that good politics will dictate the nomination of Wilson if Taft is the Republican candidate and of Judson Harmon if Roosevelt wins. As a prominent member of the committee put it: "There is not room in this country for two radical or two conservative parties."

The Democratic national committee completed its work here with the selection of Baltimore as the convention city and June 25 as the date for the selection of presidential and vice presidential candidates.

The Democrats adopted a "permissive" primary resolution in connection with the call for delegates, and such states as have laws on the subject, or desire to do so, can select their representatives in the national convention by direct vote. There are 1074 delegates to be chosen.

Harmony marked the final sitting of the committee, which was given over almost entirely to the arguments of the representatives of the various cities bidding for the convention. William J. Bryan did not attend the meeting.

STORAGE OF DYNAMITE

Federal Grand Jury Learns of the Secret Hiding Places

Indianapolis, Jan. 10.—Evidence concerning the secret stores of dynamite and nitroglycerine kept at Tiffin, O.; Rochester, Pa.; Muncie, Ind., and Indianapolis, from which it is said Ortie McManigal, John J. and James B. McNamara procured their supplies, occupied the attention of officials in the federal grand jury's investigation of the alleged dynamite conspiracy.

Another question to be inquired into is "Who, if any one besides John J. McNamara, knew the uses to which he put the $1000 a month allowed to him as secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and for which he was required to give no accounting?"

BANK MANAGER ON TRIAL

Charged With Misappropriating Funds Under His Charge

St. John, Jan. 10.—On a charge of misappropriating funds from the Bank of New Brunswick, Harry B. Clark, formerly manager of the Charlotte street branch of the institution, was indicted by the grand jury in the circuit court yesterday. The specific charge is the theft of $2477.

After the alleged misappropriation Clark fled to the United States and was arrested in New York city. His trial opened today.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 10.—On the balloting for a successor to United States Senator Thomas Paynter, whose term expires in March, 1913, Ollie M. James received 105 votes in the Kentucky legislature. His Republican opponent, Edward P. Morrow, received 28 votes.

Joint ballots in the house and senate confirming the election of James were taken yesterday afternoon.

AMERICAN TROOPS ORDERED TO CHINA

Infantry to Help Keep Open Railway Communication

Washington, Jan. 10.—A battalion of infantry consisting of 500 men will be sent by the United States to China to help to keep open railway communication between Pekin and the sea. This force is all that is required, in the opinion of Minister Calhoun.

The American troops will guard a section of the railway between Lanchow and Tsangshan. It has not been determined just what battalion will be sent, but it probably will be part of the Fifteenth infantry, now at Manila and recently recruited up to war strength for this purpose.

NEW MARSHAL GETS BUSY

Seizes More Than Three Hundred Gallons of Whiskey at Salem

Salem, Mass., Jan. 10.—Patrick J. Lehan, Salem's new city marshal, put a crimp in the illegal sale of liquor in this city by seizing thirty-two sugar barrels, containing bottled whiskey, amounting to 323 gallons, at the local freight yards.

One large case was also confiscated, the entire amount being taken to the police station and stored in the empty cells.

The liquor was taken from a freight car, which is said to be shipped from Boston each week, the barrels being consigned to T. H. Williams and marked "Storehouse, Salem," while the case bore the name "W. B. Crafts, 28½ Grove street, Salem."

Both names were found to be fictitious, and it is said that this custom, which has been in force for some time, was declared by former officials to be beyond their power to stop.

HICHBORN WANTS DIVORCE

Says His Wife, Prominent In Washington Society, Ran Away

Washington, Jan. 10.—An echo of an elopement which stirred Washington society to its centre a little more than a year ago was heard in the local courts when Philip S. Hichborn, a son of Admiral Hichborn of the navy, sued for absolute divorce, naming Horace Wylie.

Mrs. Hichborn is a daughter of the late Henry M. Hoyt, solicitor general. It is charged that the elopement occurred in December, 1910, and that Mrs. Hichborn and Wylie visited New York, Quebec, Liverpool, London, Paris and Monte Carlo, and took a trip together on the Nile.

Congress Strike Continues

Washington, Jan. 10.—The striking "extra" men who assist the regular salaried committee stenographers of the house announced that they would "stay struck" and their places have been filled by other outsiders. The trouble was over the reduction of their pay from 25 to 15 cents per folio.

THE JUICY SAUSAGE.

IN these days, when almost every family has one of the little meat or vegetable choppers, it is possible to turn out your own sausage meat and to enjoy at moderate price a quality such as can only be bought in the best shops at the highest price.

To make sausage meat some of the less expensive cuts of pork will do just as well as the higher priced ones. Fat and lean must be mixed in about the proportion of one part of fat to two or three of lean.

The seasoning of sausage is largely a matter of taste. Some persons like onion juice, others prefer sage, and some folks like it with no seasoning but salt and pepper.

An Old Fashioned Recipe.

Grandmother's Sausage Meat.—Use six pounds of lean fresh pork and three pounds of fat. Take twelve teaspoonfuls of powdered sage, six teaspoonfuls of black pepper, six teaspoonfuls of salt, two teaspoonfuls of powdered mace, two teaspoonfuls of powdered cloves, one grated nutmeg. Mix the spices together and then add to the pork. Run the meat and spices together through the chopper, mixing them so that the sausage will be well seasoned. For keeping pack the meat in a stone jar and run over it a crust of melted lard or wax. When ready to cook form the sausage meat into small cakes and fry in their own fat.

By halving or quartering the quantity of the ingredients you can make a smaller amount of sausage meat.

Some Sausage Dainties.

Baked Sausage.—Boil and mash a half dozen good sized potatoes. Season with salt and pepper. Spread in a baking dish and make up about a pound of sausage meat into cakes. Lay the cakes on top of the potatoes in the dish and place in a hot oven. Turn the sausages so that both sides may be well browned. Serve in the dish, garnishing the top with celery leaves or sprigs of parsley.

English Sausage.—The English use beef in their sausage meat. For those who find an all pork meat too rich the following may be tried. Use a pound each of lean pork and veal, one pound of beef suet, a half pound of breadcrumbs, four teaspoonfuls of powdered sage, a sprig of thyme, marjoram and summer savory and a grated nutmeg. Free the meat from skin or gristle. Chop as fine as you can and see that it is well mixed. Add the breadcrumbs and other ingredients all as fine as possible. Mold into little cakes. Powder with flower and fry in hot lard.

BOSTON'S CITY ELECTION

Good Government and Municipal League Candidates Win

Boston, Jan. 10.—The election in Boston yesterday was a clean sweep for the reform forces. It was a victory for the Good Government association and the Citizens' Municipal league.

The results are construed generally as a decisive political defeat for the Democratic machine in this city.

Councillors Walter Ballantyne and Thomas K. Kenny were re-elected. The other member of the Good Government association slate, John A. Couldthurst, ran second.

George E. Brock and Joseph Lee, candidates of the Public School association and the Citizens' Municipal league, were re-elected.

License was carried by a majority of 14,274 votes. The "yes" vote was 30,816. The "no" vote was 16,542.

LORIMER "NEVER DID"

Senator Goes on Stand and Denies Paying For His Election

Washington, Jan. 10.—Senator Lorimer has begun testifying in his own defense. It was his first appearance in the witness chair since the senate ordered an investigation of his election. A large audience waited expectantly for a sensation that failed to develop.

The first question that Judge Haney, Lorimer's counsel, put to Lorimer after the latter had taken the stand, was a blunt and leading one.

"Did you ever pay anything of value to anybody for your election?" he demanded.

"I never did," replied Lorimer.

Then Haney repeated the question in different form, evidently framed to cover the same inquiry from every angle or construction, and each time Lorimer turned his face to the committee and replied: "I never did."

WILL BE NO COMPROMISE

Boston Longshoremen's Strike Will Be Fought to a Finish

Boston, Jan. 10.—No sign of a compromise in settlement of the strike of longshoremen, which promises to tie up the international commerce of the port of Boston, is exhibited by either the striking longshoremen or the officials of the steamship companies.

The strikers held meetings in which votes were passed which probably will result in calling out every union man connected with the steamship and railroad companies and union teamsters who might be called upon to haul the commodities.

The steamship agents yesterday imported 200 more strike-breakers to take the places of the striking longshoremen. Representatives of each side say that compromise is out of the question.

ONCE GREAT ATHLETE HABITUAL DRUNKARD

Gets Four Months In Prison to "Straighten Out"

New York, Jan. 10.—Arthur A. Brownlee, famed as Princeton's greatest fullback and for his brilliant mentality during his student days, stood in the Jefferson Market court confused, vacillating and in tears as he pleaded guilty to a charge of having been an habitual drunkard for the last seven years.

When Brownlee graduated with the class of '89 he was big-chested, large-limbed, solidly built, with an electrical swiftness of thought and action. In court he appeared as one who has been "counted out."

Brownlee asked the magistrate the latter would send him to Blackwell's island for only four months he pleaded guilty. Magistrate Appleton agreed, and sentence was pronounced.

SOLD WOOD TO THE POOR

Hunt For Heirs of Miser Who Accumulated Small Fortune

Cincinnati, Jan. 10.—The Cincinnati police are searching for traces of relatives of Michael Logan, the kindling wood man, known all over Cincinnati, who was found dead in his bed with nearly $5000 in currency hidden in his mattress. Death resulted from starvation and cold.

Logan lived for years in the direst poverty apparently. None of his neighbors suspected he possessed a fortune and the finding of the money by the coroner created a sensation. It is said he had saved the money through the business of selling kindling wood to the poor.

PLEA OF GUILTY BY RICHESON

Slayer of Sweetheart at Once Sentenced to Death

MINISTER APPEARS UNMOVED

Tells Court That He Freely and Voluntarily Admits Murder In First Degree by Poisoning Avis Linnell—Execution Is Set For Week of May 16—Breathless Silence In Crowded Courtroom During Proceedings

Boston, Jan. 10.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, former pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge, and confessed poisoner of his former sweetheart, Avis Linnell, pleaded guilty of murder in the first degree before Judge Sanderson in the superior criminal court yesterday afternoon. He was immediately sentenced to die in the electric chair at some time during the week beginning May 19.

Amidst absolute silence the minister-murderer, pale, wan and haggard, walked slowly into the courtroom from the detention room and made his way toward a chair that was placed beside the prisoner's cage. Before he could seat himself Clerk Manning called his name.

It was less than a minute after Richeson entered the room when the clerk, facing him, said: "Clarence Richeson, you are charged with murder in the first degree. Do you wish to retract your plea of not guilty?"

In quiet, firm tones Richeson said: "Yes; I plead guilty to murder in the first degree."

His sentence followed without further formality.

Not a sound could be heard in the crowded courtroom when Judge Sanderson questioned the prisoner as to the circumstances surrounding his confession. Richeson stood steadily, without a tremor, looking straight in the eyes of the justice and replying in a quiet, steady, courteous voice.

"Have you pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree?" asked the judge.

"Yes," repeated the minister. "I plead guilty to murder in the first degree."

"Is this plea made freely and voluntarily?" asked Sanderson.

"Yes, sir," came the reply of the prisoner.

"Did you consult your attorneys before making this plea?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you care to consult counsel further?"

"No, sir."

Has Nothing to Say

Sentence was not pronounced until the judge explained to the defendant the elements constituting malice aforethought in cases of murder by poisoning. He informed the prisoner fully regarding the proof that would be required at the hands of the government. The defendant listened, but made no comment beyond refusing to add anything to what he had already said.

Judge Sanderson gazed thoughtfully for a moment at the tall, emaciated figure and almost ghastly face of the man whose words were sealing his doom, and then turned to District Attorney Pelletier.

"Have you moved for sentence, Mr. Pelletier?" he asked.

The district attorney said: "Before moving for sentence, it seems to me proper that I should read and have placed on the record the confession which the defendant gave to his counsel on Jan. 3."

He then read to the court the written confession of the prisoner.

"I may state," said Pelletier, after the reading, "that the commonwealth has been and is ready to go forward with the trial of this case and that it is my firm and honest opinion that any ordinary jury would find this defendant guilty of murder in the first degree on the evidence in the hands of the government. It now becomes my solemn duty to move for sentence."

Richeson, still standing and gazing intently at the court, then heard the words condemning him to a felon's death.

The Sentence

Judge Sanderson, standing, said: "Clarence V. T. Richeson, do you wish to make any further statement?"

"No, sir," came the quiet response. "Nothing further than I have already stated," added Richeson.

"You are charged here with the murder of Miss Avis Linnell and it becomes my painful duty to impose the sentence provided by statute for such a crime," said Sanderson.

"I sentence you to be committed to the Charles street jail, to remain there until ten days prior to Sunday, May 19 next, then to be removed to the Charlestown prison, and there, at some time during the week beginning May 19, to suffer death by means of electricity passing through your body.

"And may God in His infinite goodness have mercy on your soul."

A sound like a great sigh passed over the crowd in the death-like stillness of the courtroom. Richeson steadily gazed at the judge throughout the pronouncement of the fateful words, then dropped his head slightly and walked slowly from the room by the side of a court officer.

A moment later the courtroom was emptied. Richeson was taken by private passages from the courthouse to the Tombs, placed in a closed carriage and returned to the jail.

Richeson Appears Very Weak

When Richeson was brought to the courthouse he appeared to be extremely weak and it was feared by those who saw him that he would be unable to undergo the ordeal of sentence without collapse. He was attended by two court officers, who placed him in a chair and carried him up the stairway to the detention room in the rear of the superior criminal court, first session.

He appeared to have lost fully fifty pounds since his arrest and plainly showed the terrible effects of his illness. He was dressed in the blue suit which he donned after his arrest and wore over it a long, black overcoat of clerical cut. The proceedings in court lasted not more than eleven minutes.

The jail physician had given orders that Richeson was not to be permitted to walk up any stairs. He was, therefore, carried up and down stairs in a chair. When the officers placed him on his feet in the detention room, Richeson thanked them for their kindness.

Richeson's only sign of emotion in the subsequent proceedings were when Judge Sanderson prayed: "May God in His infinite goodness have mercy on your soul."

At the mention of the Deity, whom he had pledged himself to serve, the blood suffused the accused man's neck and face, but he held his head erect until the words were concluded. His head hung as he left the room.

PRICE OF FOOTWEAR NOT TO BE RAISED

Competition Too Fierce, Say National Association Officials

New York, Jan. 10.—Officials of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' association, meeting in their annual convention here, declared no discussion of proposals for raising the price of shoes would be entertained at the present sessions.

According to a statement by officials of the association, the idea of a shoe trust is "preposterous." The statement explains:

"Shoe manufacturers would not raise prices if they could, and they could not if they would. Competition is too fierce in the shoe business to attempt to control prices. Our organization never has raised the price of a shoe, and it never will.

"It is a fact that no matter how materials have risen in prices a corresponding increase has never been obtained in the selling price of shoes. The shoe manufacturers have always gotten relief by the exercise of various economies."

FOUND DEAD IN HALLWAY

Fate of Powerful Longshoreman Who Fled From Surgeons

New York, Jan. 10.—Patrick Sheehan, a powerful longshoreman, who escaped from the operating room of the Williamsburg hospital, to avoid an operation for appendicitis, was found in a hallway, dead from exposure.

Sheehan's courage fled as he lay on the stretcher and he fought his way to freedom past surgeons, nurses and other attendants. The operation was necessary, surgeons said, to save his life.

ATTEMPT TO FREE THAW

Present Indications Are That It Will Be Successful

New York, Jan. 10.—Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, may be free within two months. Clarence J. Shearn, counsel for Thaw, has been perfecting a plan to obtain his client's release, and it is learned that the plan is likely to succeed.

The district attorney of New York county cannot interpose an objection, unless especially instructed to act in the matter by the attorney general at Albany. There is no indication that such instructions will be given.

This leaves the attorney general himself the only official who can appear in behalf of the people. Under the laws of the state he is the legal adviser of the superintendent at Matteawan, but he has not the complete knowledge of the intricate Thaw case that the county officials have.

PETE BROWNING'S BATS.

They Still Served the Old Slugger After He Quit Baseball.

One of the oldest and most eccentric characters baseball has ever produced was old Pete Browning, the famous slugger, who played with Louisville around the eighties and later joined the Cleveland club in 1890 during the Brotherhood war.

Pete was a little off in his roof garden and had only one idea in his head day or night. Anything that concerned his precious batting average was meat and drink to him. It made no difference how many fly balls he dropped or let get by him as long as he landed two or three safe ones during a game.

Bats were a mania with Browning, and whenever he could pick up a club which suited him it was added to his enormous collection. So many were gathered at various points on some of his trips that he sometimes was forced to pay excess baggage on the prizes.

According to Van Haltren, it was Browning who introduced the habit of rubbing down a bat with tobacco juice, which custom is followed to this day by many of the players. The idea is to roughen the surface of the stick and prevent so many fouls slipping off one side or the other.

Browning, who was a great user of the weed, used to polish down his sticks in this way without any apparent reason until he commenced to believe that it made a difference with his hitting, and after that no wagon tongue of his ever escaped a coating of the obnoxious fluid.

Other players took it up in the hope of emulating Browning, and now it is a common custom throughout the country.

When Pete retired from the game all the bats, relics of former days, were still in his possession. In order to keep them always in his sight Pete had them turned down to a uniform size and used them as posts for the baluster in his house.

To the day of his death they remained the most valued of his possessions. —New York World.

A Frightful Thought.

NEW YORK HAS $6,000,000 FIRE

Great Equitable Life Assurance Building Is Destroyed

SIX LIVES ARE SACRIFICED

Battalion Chief Goes Down Amid Whirl of Smoke and Flame—Valuable Records and Law Libraries Which Cannot Be Replaced Are Destroyed—Question as to Fate of Millions' Worth of Securities

New York, Jan. 10.—The immense marble and granite home of the Equitable Life Assurance society, covering a whole block in lower Broadway, an historic landmark of New York's early period of skyscraper buildings, and one of the city's important financial centres, was destroyed by a fire with a loss of six lives and probably $6,000,000 in property. A dozen persons were injured.

Valuable records, including the biography of the late E. H. Harriman and two priceless law libraries which cannot be replaced, went up in flames, and the fate of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of securities, stored in safe deposit vaults, is in question, although it is believed that the fireproof construction of the vaults will save them from damage.

The great structure, which, besides containing the main offices of the Equitable Life Assurance society, was the home of the Mercantile Trust company, the Equitable Trust company, the banking house of Kountze Bros., August Belmont & Co., the Harriman railroad lines, the Mercantile Safe Deposit company, the Lawyers' club and many of the city's most prominent law firms, stands an ice-coated shell. Its once magnificent interior is completely ruined.

Besides involving heavy financial loss and serious disturbance to big business interests, the fire's progress was replete with harrowing incidents, narrow escapes and brave rescues; the men who fought it did so under conditions that taxed both skill and endurance. The intense cold almost instantaneously froze the huge volume of water poured upon the building and a thick ice coating speedily formed on the facades of towering skyscrapers adjacent and upon the surface of the street for blocks around.

Of those who lost their lives in the disaster, three men were killed by jumping from a coping of the roof, to which they had been driven by the flames. They were employes in the building.

Battalion Chief William J. Walsh disappeared in a whirl of smoke and flame when a cave-in occurred on the third floor, where he was fighting the flames.

The other men, William Campion, captain of the watchmen in the Mercantile Safe Deposit vaults in the basement of the burned structure, and Frank J. Neider, a special officer, complete the list of dead so far as known.

Three Dead In Tenement House Fire

Boston, Jan. 10.—Three people were burned to death, trapped in the two upper stories of the building, and six were rescued in a daring and sensational manner in a fire in the tenement house at 10 Willard street last night.

A human chain of three men, stretching from the window of the house adjoining the burning building to the window on the top floor of the latter, passed five people to safety in a most hazardous feat.

Mrs. Rosalie Mariano, with her husband, Azaro Mariano, and a second man whose identity could not be learned, rushed from the third floor of the tenement house to the top floor, where they were cut off from any escape and perished. The fire started in a small shed in the rear of the building.

Fire Loss of $85,000

Boston, Jan. 10.—Stanley O. Reynolds was killed and a score of men and women made sensational escapes when fire swept through the quarters of the Globe-Wernicke company on Federal street yesterday afternoon. Fire Chief Mullin estimates the total loss at about $85.000 a bare one-third for the business of life.

RATIFICATION OF TREATIES

This is the most important economic question in the world today and its solution will free not only us but the millions in the countries of the old world that are tottering to bankruptcy from this very cause.

Taken politically this move means simply the next logical and necessary step in the progress of political evolution.

"The whole process of human history is summed up in the gradual extension of the family circle," said the speaker as he reviewed the development of humanity.

Individuals were first formed into clans, clans into tribes, tribes into state families, the states into a United States, fatherland or mother country. The next great step will be the forming of a family of nations.

When clans were formed conflicts between individuals nearly ceased, when tribes developed wars between clans were done away and so on up the scale of human progress.

By the same process the arbitration of difficulties will stop wars between nations and our energies will be liberated for constructive work and cooperation. It is the next step in evolution.

We must prevent this civilization from going to the pot. Roman civilization died and it was as healthy as this.

War killed Rome, Greece and every other great civilization. Because this country sent to the Civil War, never to return, its highest type of idealists, patriots and enthusiasts we see the results in corruption, materialism, bossism and graft today.

That was the price. Arbitration is the proposition we must substitute for his sacrifice.

This nation has just a fighting chance to live and its hope lies in the discovery of the law o flife. This failing there will be a breakdown into a century of dark ages.

Some other nation, perhaps Japan or China will carry on the experiment of democracy. To do so successfully they will have to learn the lesson of lessons from past failures that certain things are fatal to civilization.

Rev. Edward Cumming discussed also the moral and religious phases of the question urging that all effort be brought to bear uponthe successful issue of the treaties.

His address was listened to with attention and at its close he was accorded a vote of thanks. Various questions were fully answered by the speaker.

BRIEFS

Announcement is made today of the Quincy Choral society concert.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. King of Walker street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son on January third.

Amos Woodhead of Highland avenue, Wollaston, formerly of Botolph street, Atlantic, sailed for London, England, Saturday, on a business trip.

The Wollaston Kindergarten committee is arranging for a series of five demonstration cooking lectures to be given Monday afternoons beginning Jan. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Lugene Hayford of East Squatnum street gave a twelfth night revel at their home Friday evening, Jan. 5. Although the weather outside was etxremenly winterish a very enjoyable evening was spent, souvenirs being awarded to W. F. Harden of Hunt street and George A. Deans of Appleton street. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

The fourth in the course of lectures at the Hall Place M. E. church will be given Thursday evening by Rev. Franklin Hamilton, D. D., chancellor of the American University at Washington, D. C., entitled "Through Ceylon, India, up to the Roof of the World." Rev. L. W. Adams of Lynn will operate the lantern which is a very superior one, having cost $300. This is a very brilliant lecture illustrated by 100 views.

DIRECTORS ELECTED.

The annual meeting of the National Granite bank was held Tuesday and these directors elected:

Theophilus King, Rupert F. Claflin, Joseph H. Vogel, Clarence Burgin, Russell A. Sears, Delcevare King, Henry L. Kincaide, Henry G. Smith, Herbert T. Whitman, William T. Shea.

Explained His Mistake.

"The more I think of it the more I am convinced that I made a mistake when I married you." he exclaimed. She drew herself up proudly.

"You can undo it." she replied.

"Alas, it is too late!" he said. "I suppose the organist has already spent the $10 I intended to give the minister and the minister has excommunicated me for the $2 he got."—Exchange.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It is pleasing to note that all difficulties were settled to satisfaction at the meeting of the officials of the Greater Boston Basket ball league, held Monday in the Revere House. It will be remembered that at the meeting previous to Monday, the league itself was threatened with disruption.

Besides numerous protests had been made and on that account it was expected that many a discussion would wax warm at the meeting. But peace and harmony prevailed and a complete schedule of games was drawn up for the season, which is billed to close late in March. All matters not of the utmost importance were placed on the table.

Ex-Councilman William H. Flynn, of the Quincy A. A. was chosen to act in conjunction with Dr. Burnett of the Cunningham Gym and Thomas J. McMakin of the St. Mary's Association of the North End, in aiding the president and secretary to carry out all the plans and details of the league.

The next home game for the local team will take place in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, Thursday evening, January 11th with the strong St. Joseph's A. A. as the attraction. The game will be a warm one and there is no doubt but that a large number will be on hand for the occasion.

The Quincy High five will play its second game o the season this afternoon. Milton High will be the opposing quintet and as the teams are evenly matched, a most exciting contest is bound to be in order.

With the prospects for good weather looking brighter, we may yet have some skating in local circles before the winter is over.

Plans are now well under way for the formation of a local baseball league and the coming season bids fair to be a most glorious one for the national pastime. The various developments will be carefully watched from time to time and all the news of the horsehide will be given in this column to the local fans.

BRAINTREE FIRE

clamors of petitioners certain members of the old church agreed to shingle it at their own expense, but it was discovered afterwards that "several pounds were gathered by a rate upon the whole town." We read in Marshall's diary under date of 1704-5:

" 'In this month past we had two church meetings in Braintree, which occasioned much debate, and some misapprehension about church discipline; by reason whereof we had much sinful discourse in this town; for, as the wise man saith, in the multitude of words there wants not sin, which words and debates caused such differences as that it was the beginning of the separation of the town and church, and the erecting of a meeting-house and forming a congregation at Monatiquot.

" 'Nine of the church withdrew from the Lord's table, and in many things acted so disorderly that it occasioned a council of the elders and messengers of nine churches, who met in the old meeting-house in Braintree, May 7, 1707. The disorders among us call for tears and lamentations rather than to be remembered.' The Mass. archives read. 'They did the winter past talk very hotly of building a meeting house by themselves, but were squib'd and floured by several of the other end of the town." '

" 'They hope that no judicious or unbyassed person will condemn them, yea, they think they may say, let their enemies themselves, guided by their own consciences, be judges, that the lower part of the town have been and are more to blame in the matter than the south end.' "

The petitioners agreed to get out timber for a new church, and leave the selection of some intermediate locality to a committee chosen from the two communities. Rejected. They agreed, if they were allowed to secede to pay ten pounds of Mr. Fiske's salary, if the north end paid eighty, or to pay twenty pounds if the north end paid ninety, besides supporting their own minister. Rejected.

Finally in 1706, they built their own church, and petitioned the authorities of the Province for permission to have their own church organization. It was decided, however, that they must continue to pay their due proportion of the salary of the original church as before, as long as Mr. Fiske should live. The death of Mr. Fiske soon after the separation early relieved them of this burden. Their petition was addressed:

"From Naphtali Genesis 30, 8." "With wrestlings have I wrestled with my sister, and have prevailed." A minister was called and settled Sept. 10, 1707, and the division was formally ratified in 1708. The line adopted began "at the head of the ship cove by John Newcomb's" forming the boundary between the two military companies of the town, and later in 1792 marked the boundary between Quincy and Braintree.

There was thus erected the North precinct and the South precinct of Braintree. Between 1707 and 1731 this church was known as the Second Church. When Randolph was set off in the latter year as the New South precinct, this became the Middle precinct, and since 1792 when Quincy became a separate town, the church has been known as the First Church of Braintree.

The bitter feelings, aroused by the long contention, were not allayed till 1710, when a reconciliation was effected and the two pastors exchanged pulpits March 19, of that year.

The first minister was Rev. Hugh Adams, ordained Sept. 10, 1707—dismissed Aug. 22, 1710, a graduate of Harvard in 1676.

His successor was Rev. Samuel Niles, who served the church 51 years, from 1711 to 1762, when he died at the age of 88. He was born on Block Island, R. I., in 1674, graduated at Harvard in 1699, and preached at South Kingston, R. I. His salary was fixed at 60 pounds lawful money per annum, with 8 pounds soon added for wood, and a settlement of 60 pounds to be paid within two years.

The next minister was Rev. Ezra Weld, who was in active service from 1762 to 1809, a period of 47 years. He was born in Pomfret, Conn., in 1736, graduated at Yale in 1759, was installed here Nov. 17, 1762, and died in 1816. He was voted an annual salary of 86 pounds, and a settlement of 200 pounds lawful money.

In 1811 the Union church of Weymouth and Braintree was formed, seven members taking their letters from the mother church.

In 1829 seventeen members were dismissed to unite with others in forming the South Braintree church.

New meeting houses were erected in 1830 and 1857.

The last pastor of the period under consideration was Richard Salter Storrs, who went in and out before his people 62 years—from 1811 to 1873. He was born at Longmeadow, Mass., in 1787, graduated at Williams in 1807, at Andover in 1810, and was installed here July 3, 1811. His father, of the same name, preached the sermon from the text "Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard from me."

Rev. Thomas A. Emerson was settled in 1874, dismissed in 1885.

The late Reverend A. A. Ellsworth followed in 1885 coming from Galesburg, Ill. After acting as supply for a year he was settled by council—the second so settled and the last since Dr. Storrs' departure. Laboring here fifteen years he resigned the office in 1900 and removed to Quincy.

Rev. Frederick W. Burroughs was engaged as stated supply June 16th 1901, and his resignation was read by Rev. Samuel Morrison a much loved brother, on Easter morning 1906. During his stay money was raised for repairs on the building—and a number of memorial windows were presented to the society.

Rev. Thomas Simms began to preach in September of the same year and on December 18th was formerly recognized as pastor. During the summer of 1911 Mr. Simms was called to Gorham, Maine, and since then the church has been without a pastor.

Wiley Says He Shows Results of Being Constantly Lambasted

Washington, Jan. 10.—Dr. H. W. Wiley, the government food expert, is getting thin-skinned, he admitted to the house committee, which is trying to fix responsibility for last summer's high prices of sugar.

Chairman Hardwick was trying to lead Wiley from the path of a protective tariff into the tariff for revenue only channel. "I have been lambasted so much for my opinions that I am getting thin-skinned," said Wiley.

Dr. Wiley showed the committee how sugar is tested by the polariscope. He urged people to eat more common yellow sugar and praised beet sugar.

MRS. J. P. HILL BADLY BURNED

Life Saved by Presence of Mind of Daughter Marjorie

NARROW ESCAPE

Mrs. James B. Hill of Winthrop park was seriously burned Wednesday evening and but for the prompt action of her 15 year old daughter, Marjorie, a student at the Woodward Institute, she would have probably been burned to death. Mrs. Hill had gone into the cellar with a lighted lamp to see about a water pipe that had become frozen. In some way, she does not know just how, she got too near the lamp and her dress took fire. In an instant she was all ablaze. She attempted to extinguish the flames but was making but little headway, when her cries brought her daughter running to the scene. With rare presence of mind the daughter began to beat out the flames with her hands and succeeded in doing so before the flames reached her mother's face. About all of her clothing was burned however. She was severely burned about the legs, arms, hips and hands. A hurry call was sent out for physicians and Dr. Hunting, the first to arrive treated the burns.

—As a result of the springlike December in many parts of Switzerland there is very little snow in the Alps, although in the Engadine the snow fell early this year. As a consequence of the mild weather the peasants are praying for snow, as they are unable to bring down the wood cut in October for the winter supply because there is not enough snow for the sleighs on which the wood is always fetched down. Only a very little while ago wild strawberry plants were in bloom and blackberries could be gathered in sheltered places along the edges of woods.—Bern correspondence Pall Mall Gazette.

MAYOR STONE AT STATE HOUSE

Bill of $25,000 for Dredging and Widening of Town River

HEARINGS

Mayor Eugene R. Stone, City Solicitor J. W. McAnarney and Dock and Water Front Commisioner F. F. Crane and Representative Piper were at the State House this morning attending important matters in the interest of the City of Quincy. One of these important matters was the introduction of a bill by Representative Piper, for the Mayor, appropriating $25,000 for dredging and widening of the Town river.

At the hearing in room 426 on House Bill 119, a bill to increase the amount to be expended for the construction of a new bridge across Weymouth Back river, between Weymouth and Hingham with a wider draw, as ordered by the United States war department, the hearing was conducted by City Solicitor McAnarney.

This is the bridge, which under old act, provided if the City of Quincy and town of Weymouth did not construct a draw with a fifty foot opening by a certain time, a penalty of $5,000 per month would be imposed by the government. The opening was made as ordered but traffic is stopped for the reason that the original appropriation is not sufficient to complete the bridge according to the engineer's plans adopted.

The bill on which the hearing was held this morning relieves the City of Quincy of all expense either for construction or maintenance of the Back river bridge, and if passed will be of great benefit to Quincy.

City Solicitor McAnarney, Mayor Stone, Representative Piper and Dock Commissioner Crane spoke in favor of the bill. There was but little opposition.

BANQUET OF THE DAVIS CLASS

Address by Rev. Herbert S. Johnson on "The Goal in Life."

AT UNION HALL

Rev. Herbert S. Johnson D. D., pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, Boston was the principal speaker at the second annual banquet of the Davis class of the Calvary Baptist church held Wednesday evening in Union hall, and the fact that the occasion was graced by the presence of this eloquent clergyman, who time and time again during his remarks touched the acute and sensitive feelings of the two hundred in attendance, caused the affair to be pronounced one of the best ever held in this city

The banquet was started at seven o'clock, when Rev. J. L. Crane, recently called as the pastor of the Calvary Baptist church opened with prayer. The menu, which proved attractive was furnished by C. C. Whittemore of Boston.

At the conclusion of the repast, the post prandial exercises were in order and the speechmaking was started by J. Edward Mundie, the president of the Davis Class, who, after a few remarks introduced as the toastmaster of the evening, John L. Miller, whom he designated as a man who was always willing to come to the rescue when the occasion demanded. The chairman had stated in his remarks that the man who was scheduled to act as the toastmaster was unavoidably prevented from attending and that the last resort to secure a man to fill the position was made to Mr. Miller. The latter took the advantage of the remarks in arising to take possession of the speaking exercises by adding that the reason he was toastmaster was because nobody else could be found to take the job.

Among other things the toastmaster said that he was pleased to see so many denominations of faith represented at the banquet. He injected, to the laughter of all, "Ten of fifteen

CAPTAIN JOHN HALL.

Captain John Hall, for many years a resident of Quincy, but whose birthplace was in Marshfield, died at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Geo. L. Phillips, Wednesday afternoon. The deceased was a brother of Walton Hall who resides in Marshfield on the Daniel Webster place. Captain Hall was a successful sea captain making many foreign voyages; but owing to ill health had retired from a seafaring life. He was well known to many of the older residents of this city, who will learn of his death with regret.

ASSOCIATES.

The first meeting of the year for the Houghs Neck Associates was held last evening in Associates hall, and was attended by the largest number that has been noticeable at a gathering of the improvement association for some time. Henry W. French presided and matters of a diverse nature were discussed for about an hour.

Discussion on separation question was then opened and harmony prevailed at all times on the question. The usual advocates and opponents of separation delivered speeches and the feeling both pro and con on the divorce question was about even. The meeting was a most enthusiastic one in every way.

WOMAN'S GUILD CHRIST CHURCH.

At the meeting of the Woman's Guild, of Christ church, held Wednesday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Charles Haskins.

First Vice President—Mrs. H. E. Ricker.

Second Vice President—Mrs. Frances Brewer.

Secretary—Mrs. George H. Brown.

Treasurer—Mrs. Charles Wilson.

It was announced that the sum of $630 had been realized from the fair held recently.

REPORTS

Ensconced in their new building, after many years of work the annual meeting of the Park and Downs Union Congregational church on Wednesday evening was full of inspiration.

An informal reception preceded the meeting and an excellent supper was served by a committee consisting of Mrs. Charles Richardson, Mrs. Frederick MacMulkin, Mrs. William Atkins, Mrs. Alonzo Bissett and Mrs. Frederick Bussler.

A musical program consisting of piano selections by Leslie Mehaffey and vocal solos by Miss Greeley of the First church, Chelsea, were enjoyed.

The meeting was called to order by the pastor, Rev. William B. Ayers and the following officers were elected:

Deacons—James D. Wilson (1 year), Charles Chase (2 years), William S. Kershaw (3 years), Frank W. Knowlton (4 years).

Trustees—Thomas H. Irving (3 years), chairman, William B. Holmes (2 years), Alonzo Bissett (1 year).

Standing Committee—Frank W. Blake, Horace Matchner, W. B. Holmes.

Sunday School Superintendent—William J. Colby.

Clerk—Charles Richardson.

Treasurer—Alton M. Barstow.

Assistant Treasurer—Chester A. Boynton.

Auditor—Arthur F. Capen.

Collector—George H. Stebbins.

Music Committee—Miss Ella R. Muzans, Charles Richardson.

Building Committee—Mrs. Emma Gram, Mrs. William Atkins, C. A. Boynton, financial secretary; T. H. Irving, treasurer; Rev. W. B. Ayers, chairman.

A new constitution was adopted by the meeting which it is thought will prove more efficient than the previous one.

The report of the clerk, James L. Barney was most favorable and showed an increase in church membership the past year from 148 to 196, a gain of 48.

Treasurer Barstow reported all bills paid and a balance of $247 on hand William J. Colby the Sunday school superintendent, said that a general increase was manifest in teachers, members and interest.

The report of Mrs. Thomas H. Irving for the Women's Missionary society showed that all bills were paid and that it had raised $649 during the year.

Since November when it was organized, the Women's Guild has raised by sales, etc., $600 and has at present $300 on hand. Miss Fannie Fraser read the report.

The D. O. club, an organization of 8 girls from the Sunday school class of Miss Muzans has raised over $500 for the new church, Miss Muzans reported.

Miss Henrietta C. Gram reported a vast improvement in the musical department of the church. A favorable and promising report of the Christian Endeavor Society was given by Artemus Dingwell.

HOSE BRIDGE.

The Bay State street railway has equipped each of its car barns with what is known as a hose bridge, which is a section of rails, so arranged that when fire hose is laid across the car tracks, the bridge is placed on the rail, so that cars may pass and at the same time not interfere with the lines of hose. Their first practical use on the Quincy division was made Wednesday at the fire in Braintree where there was a line of hose across the track all day and but for this bridge it would have been necessary to transfer passengers. The apparatus will often come in handy as there have been many cases where street car traffic has been delayed by lines of hose across the tracks.

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S GUILD

Encouraging Reports from Officers. New Officers Elected

FUTURE PLANS

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostoms church held its annual meeting Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance. The first vice president Mrs. Edward F. Parlee presided. The secretary and treasurer Miss Annie Clean read yearly reports giving a review of the year's work which included earning a dollar and at the meeting of March 10th, telling how it was earned. On Feburary 14 the Guild entertained the choir with a supper and entertainment under the leadership of Mrs. Charles J. Hennigar. Feb. 22 with Mrs. Alice J. Bainbridge in charge an excellent supper was served to members and their husbands and a good time followed. In October under the leadership of the president Mrs. David Fulton a fair which was a financial success was held.. During the year the Guild gave $200, towards the expense of repairs on the rectory. Dec. 14 a sale and supper in charge of Mrs. Bainbridge was held. Mrs. Fulton and Mrs. David L. Jewell represent the Guild on the building committee.

The Lenten sewing was for St. Mary's school at Rosebud Reserve South Dakota. April 14th, Miss Woods of Fort Yukon, Alaska gave a most interesting account of her work. The annual Christmas barrel for colored work, was sent to Kenbridge, Virginia. The Guild voted $100 to the parish house fund which was started by Rev. Mr. Clatenburg before he resigned. At a special meeting last week $100 was voted to the vestry towards making up the deficit of current expenses, caused by the extensive repairs in both church and rectory during the past year.

Mrs. David L. Jewell chairman of the Missionary committee gave an account of work for missions and read a list of the contents of the Lenten box and Christmas barrel which she packed and sent. These officers were elected: President—Mrs. George A. Vibert; first vice president—Mrs. Edward F. Parlee; second vice president—Mrs. Frederick H. Waite; secretary and treasurer—Miss Annie Clean.

Before the meeting adjourned it was voted to give a turkey supper, Wednesday Jan. 24 in the parish rooms.

MRS. BUTLER.

The funeral of Mrs. Bridget Butler, wife of Thomas M. Butler, took place from 57 Putnam street Wednesday morning. A requiem high mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock in St. John's church by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell. Interment was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy.

BRIEFS

Several of the new City Officials called at the City Clerk's office this morning and were sworn in.

The officers of St. Francis Court, M. C. O. F., were installed Tuesday evening by Thomas Murphy, D. H. C. R.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Smith of Washington street entertained the Jolly Sixteen whist club Tuesday evening.

Edward J. Fegan, a prominent local attorney, has been secured as counsel for Charles E. St. Lawrence, the 15-year-old Braintree youth who was seriously injured at the Rice & Hutchins' Shoe factory a short time ago and who is now in the City Hospital.

The legacies under the will of Francis Fahay of Quincy who died two years ago were paid Tuesday by his nephew Francis J. Fahay one of the executors of the will. Legacies included $15,724 to the Holy Ghost hospital for Incurables at Cambridge, $100, to the City Hospital, Quincy, The other executors of the will were Sergus O'Keefe of Cambridge and James Moyland of Dorchester.

ENTIRE BUDGET SOON RAISED

Annual Meeting Wollaston Congregational Church

RESOLUTIONS

Although at present without the helpful leadership of a pastor the annual meeting of the Wollaston Congregational church Wednesday evening was characterized with a progressiveness that has not been felt for a few years past.

In a short time for such an undertaking practically the entire budget was raised from floor making further contributions during the year as has been the practice in the past, unnecessary.

A feature of the meeting was the plea of Chester I. Campbell for more church advertising.

"Most churches fail in one respect," said Mr. Campbell, "in that they do not advertise sufficiently. There are various ways to do this in keeping with the kind of work the church is intended to do.

"I wish the churches would combine in this and jointly advertise the churches of Wollaston." Mr. Campbell thought special services and music excellent ways of attracting.

The following church officers were elected for the coming year:

Clerk—Charles F. West.

Treasurer—Louis S. Bugbee.

Superintendent of Sabbath School—Charles A. Randall.

Moderator—Charles P. Hutchins.

Collector of Weekly Offerings—Alfred W. Thompson.

Executive Committee—Charles A. Campbell, Leon F. Besse.

Prudential Committee—Charles P. Hutchins (3 years), Edward S. Tenney (2 years), Wendell H. Hull, (1 year) and the clerk and treasurer.

Music Committee—Chester J. Hogue, William A. Mann, Chester I. Campbell.

Owing to personal reasons both Charles A. Campbell and Rufus B. Tobey who were nominated as deacons of the church resigned and the matter was laid on the table.

The meeting opened with the reading of the warrant followed by the announcement of the budget by Geo. W. Stone for the prudential committee, urged by Mr. Stone and the

"OUR JIM" A COMEDY DRAMA

Given Under Auspices of Daughters of John Adams L. O. L.

DANCING

There was a large attendance at Colonial hall Wednesday evening at the entertainment and dance given under the auspices of the Daughters of John Adams L. L. O. L. The entertainment included the four act comedy drama "Our Jim" which presented by local talent in a manner that called for well-deserved applause. Considering the smallness of the stage the several scenes were well set. The time of the drama was in 1861 just preceding the civil war. Act. 1, showed the interior of a country barn where the beginning of the drama was acted. The scene of the remaining three acts was in the kitchen of the farm house.

The cast for an amateur one was very strong and the portrayal of the several characters was good.

The character of John Mathews, called by his friends "Uncle John" was impersonated by James Ross while those of his son and nephew Bob were taken by Wilbur Wynot and Charlie Ross. James Smith made a capital Major of the Mexican war and Allan Finlayson as Deacon Tidd and William Bond and Neil McDonald, were equally good, as his sons.

Beatrice Budd and Annie Bond impersonated the characters of the two old maids while Jennie Ellis was the Major's charming daughter Bessie and Elizabeth Budd was Grace Antwerp the pretty school ma'am.

Refreshments were served after the drama and the evening closed with dancing music being furnished by Wilson's orchestra.

The entertainment was in charge of Miss Beatrice Budd who was ably assisted by Mrs. Jessie McLeod, Mrs. Annie Lamont, Miss Jennie Ellis and Mrs. Catherine McPhee.

For the dancing Miss Beatrice Budd was the floor directress and was assisted by Allan Finlayson.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

New York speaks of the Democratic National Convention as if it were some kind of a hotel dish.

If we could only elect a president as expeditiously as they do over in China, business would not have to stop every once in four years.

A Kansas City man notifies the gas company that his meter was running slow. Should he not have a Carnegie hero medal for such honesty.

Wonder if any one doubts the oft repeated assertion that "When the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen."

If the women should outnumber the men in the suffrage states, how in thunder will the men get up any kind of a grandfather clause by which to keep control of things?

Prof. Parker has started his third try for the top of Mount McKinley. If he gets up there, for the sake of his fair fame he should carefully conceal the fact.

Who would have foreseen in March, 1909, that all this time would have passed without seeing Theodore go down to Washington to occupy Will's spare room for a week-end visit?

A New York paper remarks that sometime somebody may be convicted of something in that city. It might not be judicious to begin convicting unless they were willing to do a thorough job and convict everybody.

An Illinois man wants a divorce because his wife keeps thirty-seven dogs and cats about the house In such a home a husband would be quite superfluous. In fact he might be in the way.

Dr. Owen has been digging for months in the river Wye to prove that Bacon wrote Shakespeare, and meanwhile his wife has had to hire a man to spade up the garden and shovel snow off the sidewalk.

Russia is denounced for removing Shuster, but if the latter came home and began to put money in the treasury of our city governments, he would not be much more popular with the politicians.

That Quincy is a good city to be neighbor to has been demonstrated lately when Braintree has called for assistance. Last week Chief Burrill sent the police auto to the scene of an accident and rushed the victim to the Quincy Hospital and Tuesday night Chief Williams of our fire department was the right man in the right place.

ECONOMY AND EXTRAVAGANCE.

We greatly fear that when President Taft's message on economy and efficiency is read, that if our congressmen express their inmost feeling, they will turn to their neighbors and deliver themselves of a solemn and expressive wink.

Gen. Wood, chief of staff of the army, told the appropriations committee last spring that many needless army posts are maintained, that in case of war 20 per cent of the troops would have to stay at home to guard stations that are of no military service.

Why are these maintained? No doubt primarily because a profitable business is conducted by many people selling supplies for men and horses. The congressman feels this pressure, and must respond or retire.

A congressman, to use an expressive plains phrase, is not considered "thrown and branded" until he has shown himself willing to support the general pork barrel in return for his own personal favors.

One day a specially indefensible river appropriation was being sharply attacked. As it seemed about to go down to defeat, a breathless congressman rushed down the aisle.

"Hold on" he shouted, "that's my river."

A leading attorney wrote:—

"I understand you have turned down —'s request that you try to get him a pension. Now I know that he is a thoroughly worthless whelp, and that he deserted from the army during the war. That is not the point. He has worked on the sympathies of some influential people here, and it is good politics to get busy. Uncle Sam will never miss the money."

The pastor of a large church wrote:—"I received today a letter from —, and he says he received an unsatisfactory letter from you about his chances of getting a pension. I know that he deserted during the second year of the war, but there must be some way in which this can be covered up and given a pensionable status. He is at present a charge on my congregation. Every one seems to be able to get a pension. Why not he?"

The congressman referred to says he has hundreds of such letters on file. Evidently Congress is not wholly to blame for Uncle Sam's high cost of living.

FALLS THROUGH THE REGISTER

School Teacher has Narrow Escape from Bad Accident

SEVERELY BRUISED

Miss Annie Burns, a teacher at the Willard school, met with a peculiar accident Wednesday afternoon, but fortunately escaped with a few bruises Miss Burns stood on one of the registers in her room, when it suddenly collapsed letting her fall down the pipe. Fortunately for Miss Burns she is quite stout, otherwise she would have fallen down the pipe for at least eight feet, where the pipe turned. She was assisted from her uncomfortable position and sent home in a carriags where she was attended by a physician. Other than a few bruises she escaped injury, although she is confined to her home today.

THE RICHESON CASE.

Editor Ledger:

At this time when interest is so keen concerning the Richeson case, and there is such a variance of opinion about the desirability of commuting his sentence to life imprisonment, it seems to me a just opportunity to express my abhorrence of judicial murders, for it is nothing more nor less than a murder by the State as a means of punishment for the commission of a horrid crime, and the punishment itself is the commission of a crime of just the same magnitude.

The old doctrine of "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth" is fast passing into the oblivion that waits upon all forms of redress common among uncivilized peoples. In China and in Russia, life is cheaply held, and men and women are killed to gratify the lust for revenge. As the world improves in civilization a calmer and more judicial spirit prevails.

The supporters of capital punishment frequently make an argument of this kind—that if it were your immediate and most beloved of friends or relatives who had been the sufferers, would you be contented to have the murderers imprisoned where a certain amount of daily comfort might be enjoyed? But the answer to that is simply this—that we are not in a judicial or impartial spirit when our affections are so horribly outraged and not so well qualified to judge of the results of one course or the other that may be pursued in capital cases.

I think it well, at this time, to emphasize the fact that however horrible this immediate tragedy is, that horrible as it is, it reflects unpleasantly upon our broadmindedness if we fail in the support of the general principle. It is commonly held by penologists that is it the certainty of punishment, rather than its severity, that is the great deterrent.

DR. PARKINSON AT WOLLASTON

Addresses Parents Association on Sex and Education

AN ABSTRACT

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association Tuesday evening Dr. W. D. Parkinson, superintendent of the Waltham public schools delivered a lecture on "Sex and Education." Following a discourse upon Education and sex taken separately Dr. Parkinson said in part:

"From the educational point of view the physical function of any instinct, appetitie or desire is not its ultimate human significance. These all have a biological and a spiritual significance as well and the latter transcends.

"From the biological point of view hunger and thirst are to preserve life. From the same point of view the sex instinct is to perpetuate the race. Either, if perverted to sensual indulgence degrades the human being below the brute.

"From the evolutionary standpoint, or from the standpoint of the grand design, which is the same thing, hunger and thirst and the desire for shelter have been great dynamic forces in human progress, by which man has been lifted into civilized life, individual and social, by which have been generated in him, courage and energy, enterprise and intelligence.

"The sex passion has had a significance vastly higher than that of the mere perpetuation of physical life. Nature seems to have dignified it above all other passions.

The struggle for its mastery is deferred until the youth has had opportunity to win his spurs in subduing other passions. The rewards of victory in the struggle are the highest, the consequences of defeat most dire. Out of the sex instinct sprang the first altruistic impulse. Around it center the highest aspirations, the noblest sentiments, the loftiest ideals, the purest devotion of which humanity is capable.

"The sex relationship is not therefore to be presented as itself a menace nor to be regarded as a mere matter of personal or social hygiene.

"It is one of the fundamental, perhaps the most fundamental of all the factors of social and spiritual progress the mainspring of motives and incentives, the matrix of affections and ideals, extending its influence into every realm of art, leadership and service.

"Since, then, the sex relationship is so large a factor in the development of society, it must command a place in education, not merely as an object but as a factor.

"The problem is how to establish the child and the youth in the normal relationship and how to bring to bear all its refining, impelling, and uplifting influences, as well as how to guard against its perversion and degradation.

Mutual respect is one of the prime safeguards of a healthy relationship. Mutual admiration may lead to a false step but genuine respect is a restraining influence.

"Parents and the school are expected to inculcate respect for property and regard for the personal rights of others. Is it not equally a legitimate and necessary function of education to instill in each sex a genuine respect for the other, and a recognition of the obligations of one sex toward the other?

"The mingling of the sexes at school and in the various related activities affords peculiar and superior opportunity both for engaging body and mind, the will, the intellect, the emotions, in joint activity and for exercising those social and co-operative amenities which go far to influence, if not actually to determine the attitude of the individual toward the group and his participation in its life."

Dr. Parkinson spoke of the necessity of early establishing a confidence between parent and child the father for the boy and the mother for the girl, so that when things were brought home they might be corrected in the proper manner.

The speaker discouraged the exclusive pairing off of couples in their teens and for this reason favored the square dances at young people's gatherings.

The co-operation of school and home in the presentation of significant facts was advised and the necessity for plain speech on certain occasions.

Dr. Parkinson was most heartily appreciated and at the adjournment of the meeting nearly all present remained to greet the speaker.

The regular routine business was transacted including the reading of the secretary's and treasurer's report.

moderator, Charles P. Hutchins. Subscriptions were either doubled or substantially increased, making up the necessary amount.

Various amendments to the by-laws followed. The report of the clerk showed the church to be in a promising condition, a net gain of 15 being made for the year.

Deacon Thompson reported for the collections and the report of the Treasurer, Louis S. Bugbee showed this department to be in good standing. Charles E. Hathaway, for the auditors, reported all accounts correct.

Mrs. Herbert T. Whitman told of the good work of the Ladies' Auxiliary and Women's Board of Missions, reporting also for its branches, the Sunbeam club, the Little Lights Mission Band and the Cradle Roll.

Resolutions on the death of Deacon Charles G. Farwell were offered by Dr. E. R. Johnson and a committee consisting of E. R. Johnson, Alfred W. Thompson, and Charles A. Campbell were appointed for this.

Mrs. Horace Kingman reported for the Ladies' Benevolent society. Representing the music committee Chester J. Hogue spoke of the good work of the choir girls and suggested Mrs. Follett and Mrs. Healey as matrons for the Girls' Choir club. A hearty vote of appreciation was tendered the girls for their earnest work and fine music.

Miss Ducey gave an account of the Christian Endeavor, recently reorganized and William A. Mann gave the report of the Men's club.

On motion of Mr. Eastman a vote of sympathy was extended the First Congregational church at Braintree for the loss of their church building.

The prudential committee were extended a hearty vote of thanks for their energy and zeal. The meeting closed with swearing in of the clerk by Rev. Rufus B. Tobey.

An appetizing turkey supper preceded the meeting. At the head table were Deacon and Mrs. Harrington, Deacon and Mrs. Thompson, Moderator and Mrs. Hutchins, Mrs. A. A. Lincoln, Clerk and Mrs. West, Treasurer and Mrs. Bugbee and Mrs. Mary Taylor.

In charge of the supper were: Mrs. George H. Murray, Mrs. Rufus B. Tobey, Mrs. Walter C. Brady, Mrs. Charles P. Hutchins, Mrs. Amos T. Leavitt, Mrs. A. L. Baker, Mrs. R. M. Litch, Mrs. James H. Broughton, Miss A. F. Hinckley.

The supper was served by the following young ladies: Miss Helen Jones, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Flora Wight, Miss Helen Seavey, Miss Mary Murray, Miss Lucille Smalley, Miss Dorothy Taylor, Miss Dorothy Sayward and Miss Marion Farwell

Q.—Can you explain these two passages of Scripture: John i, 18, "No man hath seen God at any time;" and John xiv, 9, "Ye that have seen me, have seen by Father also?" (L. M.)

Answer.—The first expression should be understood in the concrete sense. No mortal being could see the Lord God and live—"Whom no man hath seen, nor can see." The last expression, to be understood in harmony with the first, should be considered in the abstarct. As it was impossible for the Lord's followers to actually see God, the Heavenly Father, the only way then in which they could see God was in the representative sense. Our Lord Jesus, fully and perfectly represented the Father. He was God manifested in the flesh. The Father's love, and mercy, justice, and wisdom, were all manifest in the Life and teachings of the Lord Jesus. those then, who became acquainted with the Lord Jesus, were made acquainted with the Father. The Lord Jesus never claimed to be the Heavenly Father personally; but always taught that He was the Son of God. The Scriptures declare that God sent His only begotten Son into the world. God was in Christ reconciling the world to Himself in the same sense in which He will be "all in all" when the Son shall have delivered up the Kingdom to the Father at the close of Christ's Millennial reign.—I Corinthians xv, 17, 28.

GENERAL SCHOOL NOTES.

The report of the school department which will be ready for the printer soon, will have many of its statistics arranged in the form of comparison this year and will also show costs in per capita form in order to make their meaning clearer and more interesting to study. Statistics compiled covering the coal consumption of different buildings are note-worthy both as showing the economy of various forms of heating apparatus and to a certain extent too the economical handling of the same by the janitor. In the past two years the high school with practically 40 rooms, halls, etc. has been supplied with 739 tons, the Adams school with 10 rooms has had 238 tons, the Coddington school with 12 rooms and hall has had 353 tons, the Cranch school 9 rooms, 200 tons, Gridley Bryant school, 8 rooms 189 tons, John Hancock school 10 rooms 143 tons, Lincoln school 12 rooms 197 tons, Mass. Fields school 9 rooms, 181 tons, Quincy school 12 rooms 247 tons, Washington school 10 rooms 192 tons, Willard school, 20 rooms 400 tons, Wollaston school 9 rooms 206 tons. It will be observed that the John Hancock school shows an unusual economy of operation while the Coddington costs are especially high. Aside from the Coddington school the coal consumption per year in most instances averages about 10 tons per room.

The Committee on Vocational Training for girls will hold its next meeting at the School Committee rooms next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The committee will soon be ready to prepare and issue its report.

The sub-committee which is preparing a report for the boys' side of this same question will probably be ready to make some report to the general committee next week. The cost of this educational work if adopted by the city will be relatively light as the state shares the expense equally with the city. As a few other cities are already carrying on this work it will be seen that Quincy through its state tax is helping to support the work in such places.

HIGH SCHOOL.

The Athletic Committee of the High School has voted to issue a season ticket for the home games in basketball. These tickets are one dollar each and admit the bearer to all the games on the home floor. Tickets are now on sale and it is hoped that many outside of school, as well as pupils in the school, will purchase them.

Mr. John A. Avery, headmaster of the Somerville High School, was a visitor at the Quincy High School last week. He spent almost a whole day looking over the plant.

It is expected that a short play will be given in the near future for the benefit of the Athletic Association. It will be necessary to do something of this sort to get money to run the baseball season.

ADAMS

There are many parents in Quincy who do not understand the purpose and method of our physical education and organized games. Accordingly, in response to many requests, Dr. J. Gardner Smith, Director of Physical Education, will speak tonight at the Parents' and Teachers' Association on "Physical Education in our Public Schools—What it is and Why."

WOLLASTON.

The Parents' and Teachers' Association held a very enthusiastic meeting Tuesday evening. Mr. Wm. D. Parkinson, Supt of Schools, in Waltham, Mass., gave a very instructive address on "Sex and Education."

Parents and teachers consider themselves very fortunate to have had the opportunity of hearing the speaker on such an important subject. Words of appreciation were heard from all present.

Work is going on rapidly on the new school building. Words of praise are heard from everybody. Wollaston people feel very proud of their new building.

MASSACHUSETTS FIELDS.

The regular meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association was held Tuesday evening in the school hall. Mr. Thomas Curley secretary of Mass. Play-ground Association, gave a very interesting address on "The value of a playground." A committee of five, consisting of Messrs Hingston, Dingwell, Desjardins, Forsyth and Vibert was appointed to confer with the Mayor and City Council relative to securing the land opposite the school for a permanent playground. Master Alexander McLear, class '10, rendered several violin solos.

The attendance has been very poor for the last two weeks owing to chicken-pox and mumps.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' ETHICS.

"It shall be beneath the dignity of any teacher and unprofessional for any teacher to underbid another, or attempt to secure a position which another holds or has a fairly good chance of securing or holding."

This is part of a code of ethics adopted for teachers by the Washington Educational association at its 21st annual convention, held at North Yakima, in December. The association agreed that too often the teachers gossip with intimate friends or boarding house lady, or with each other concerning transactions that should concern only the teacher herself, the child and the parents. Other parts of the code are:

"Teachers shall remain loyal to the profession.

"Teachers shall remain loyal to the school institution or system with which they may be connected as teachers.

"The recommendations of the merits of the work of any teacher shall be as honest as possible and teachers shall refrain from asking for testimonials, but rather ask for the permission to use the names of the parties knowing their work.

"The teacher, by conforming to the usual rules of right living, must be permitted to lead the natural life of any citizen free from dictation.

"The daily transaction of business in the school room shall be as free from discussion outside the schoolroom as the daily entries or balance sheet of the bank clerk is.

"It shall be the duty of any teacher coming into a community to be willing to surrender or forget such of her pleasures as may conflict with the best influence in the community, even though she may be strongly of the opinion that such pleasures are harmless."

SECURITIES ARE SAFE

But It May Be Weeks Before They Are Recovered From Vaults

New York, Jan. 11.—More than $50,000,000 in stocks and bonds was recovered from one of the smaller vaults in the burned Equitable Life Assurance society building late yesterday, but it will probably be a week—perhaps two weeks or longer—before the great valuts of the society and the Mercantile Safe Deposit company give up their half billion or more in securities.

Further examination of the ice-shrouded building, swept on Tuesday by fire, showed more conclusively that the vaults are still intact.

Special guards have been thrown about the building and day and night they will patrol the ice-covered streets and sidewalks to see that no unauthorized person enters the building.

RELIEF CORPS INSTALLATION

Gifts Presented to Retiring Officers and Dept. Pres.

THE OFFICERS

The officers of Paul Revere Women's Relief Corps were installed Tuesday by Mrs. Mary E. Holbrook, Senior Vice President of the Mass. Dept. After the installation Mrs. Holbrook gave the corps an interesting talk. Following this she was presented, by the new president, Mrs. Mary E. Powers, with a silver cream ladle while her conductress was presented with a hand painted dish. A Past President's gold badge was also presented to the retiring president Mrs. Emma Marnock.

The past year has been a very successful one under Mrs. Marnock and by her faithful attendance to the duties of the office she has won the love and best wishes of every member of the corps.

To the retiring secretary, Mrs. Souther, a purse of gold was given For over 23 years Mrs. Souther, a veteran's widow, has been an energetic worker for the corps and for 12 years its secretary. She is now obliged, by ill health, to give up for a time, the active duties. The presentation speech was made by the retiring President and was feelingly responded to by Mrs. Souther.

After the business session a supper was served to which the members of the post were the guests. This was followed by a social hour. The new officers are as follows:

President—Mrs. Mary E. Powers.
S. V. P.—Mrs. Cylinda Richardson.

Musician—Mrs. Bertha H. McCurdy.

DIVISION 5, A. O. H.

The annual installation banquet of Division 5, A. O. H. took place Wednesday evening in Hibernian hall Franklin street and was attended by a large number, including delegations from other divisions of the order. The installation itself took place in the upper hall, James F. Burke, president of Division 4, being the installing officer.

After the installation the party repaired to the basement, where the banquet was served under the direction of a committee of members of the Division. After the banquet, speeches and an entertainment of a high class of order were in evidence. Thomas F. Welch, president of the Division was toastmaster, and speeches were made by James F. Burke, James O'Dowd, president of Division 22, Dr. George M. Sheahan and James M. Cantfill. The entertainment was furnished by Miss Lizzie Fay, Miss Mary McDermott, Fred McDonald, George Mack and Henry Newmarket. The two latter, in company with two ladies, were secured though the courtesy of Manager Murray of the Orpheum theatre, where the aforementioned are performing this week

The affair proved to be a huge success and was due to the efforts of a committee composed of—David Warner, Charles Millard, James Doherty, John McMahon, John Gallagher, William Byron, Martin O'Shaughenessey, James Kelley, Joseph Kelley, Michael McCarthy, William Hogan and Michael Meagher.

The officers installed were:
President—Thomas F. Welch.

ADDRESS ON CO-OPERATION

Dr. Gallagher at Cranch School Parents and Teachers Asso.

MUSICAL PROGRAM

The regular meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Cranch school was held in the assembly hall Tuesday evening and attended by a large number, George E. Pfaffmann, president, in the chair. The reading of records of the previous meeting having been dispensed with, it was anounced that the musical program was in order, Mrs. Charles Sampson in charge.

The audience was delightfully entertained by Mrs. Frank J. Moore and Albert Hayden, who rendered a number of duet selections, assisted by Mrs. Charles Sampson. Their work was highly appreciated and elicited long continued applause.

The speaker, Dr. William Gallagher of Thayer Academy, talked very delightfully and informally on "Co-operation,"

Dr. Gallagher started out by saying that in dealing with his subject, he could talk not only as a teacher, but as a parent as well, and in this fact he seemed able to vaunt himself. In order that the situation might be more thoroughly realized, the speaker stated that last Thanksgiving day he sat down to dinner where no fewer than forty, including his children and grandchildren were congregated. Dr. Gallagher spoke in an informal manner throughout and brought forcibly to mind the duties of the parents in creating an atmosphere in the homes that would have a tendency to elicit hearty co-operation on the part of the teachers.

It was impressed upon all how painstaking and faithful parents must be in this regard, inasmuch as it will be a great asset in the end in moulding the characters of boys and girls. The parents, continued the speaker must be themselves honest, trustworthy and straightforward in order that the children may be enabled to emulate good qualities. The speaker also laid down the urgent necessity of the pupil attending school every session. Various others points of interest and education bearing on the influence exerted by the parents over their children were brought out to advantage and the speaker was given a vote of thanks at the conclusion of his remarks.

At the adjournment of the meeting the social hour, in charge of Miss Elsie Martin of grade one, was enjoyed. She was assisted in serving the refreshments by a committee of mothers. Miss Rena B. Mannix rendered selections on the piano at this time and played in a most delightful manner. Her work proved her to be a talented pianist and was highly appreciated by those in attendance.

D. A. R. MEETING.

The Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R., were delightfully entertained at the residence of Mrs. George E. Healey, 24 Winthrop avenue, Monday afternoon, the Regent Mrs. Walter F. Jones in the chair. The Chapter placed itself on record as protesting against the use of the public press by members of the D. A. R., for discussion of persons, measures or details of management of the D. A. R. organization.

Miss Marion Moorhouse, the talented young musician favored the company with three selections on the 'cello as follows: Berceuse by Joscelyn, Gavotte by Cuppen, Melody by Massenet, with Mrs. S. P. Moorhouse at the piano. Mrs. Paige, chairman of the program committee then introduced the speaker of the afternoon saying—"Following the old Plymouth trail as we have done by the old homes along the Neponset and by the Hutchinson grant, we come next to the Dorothy Q. house—whose story will be told by Mrs. E. E. Jameson."

Mrs. Jameson presented a most interesting paper, showing how much of the early history of the colony was made in the City of Presidents, and its old homes. She also told of the regicides and of their concealment in some of the secret chambers of the Dorothy Q. house.

Mrs. Jones was able to secure a piece of wood from the old Josiah Quincy homestead to present to the John Adams Chapter for the ballot box to be made of historic wood, and by that Chapter presented to the State D. A. R.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, with Mrs. Harry R. Parker, Mrs. Nichols, Miss Ruby Bates and Miss Moorhouse assisting.

You need the Ledger every day.

ENCORAGING REPORTS READ

Business at Annual Parish Meeting St. Chrysostom's

PASTORAL LETTER

The annual parish meeting of St. Chrysostom's church was held Monday evening in the parish rooms, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, the rector, was in chair. After the clerk, Cornelius E. Manchester, had read the warrant and minutes of the last meeting, John W. Atkins read the treasurer's report which showed only a small deficit and that on account of extensive repairs in both church and rectory, because of $100.00 voted last week by the Woman's Guild to the vestry.

Mr. Steenstra read a pastoral letter from Bishop Lawrence in regard to general and diocesan missions, specials, apportionments, etc.

Reports of the different organizations were read by the secretaries, Miss Annie Clean for the Woman's Guild, Eleazer F. Drew for the Men's club, Miss Nellie M. Weeks for the Girls' Friendly society, Miss Louisa A. Ross for the Altar Guild, Archibald H. Briggs for the Boys' club, Miss Grace F. Purdon for the Junior Auxiliary and George E. Poch for the Sunday school. The building committee for a new parish house made a report through its chairman, Frank E. Cleveland. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Senior Warden—Frank E. Cleveland.
Junior Warden—Percy L. Davidson.
Treasurer—John W. Atkins.
Clerk—George E. Allen.
Vestrymen—Herbert H. Albee, Archibald H. Briggs, William J. Leslie, Edward F. Parlee, J. Albert Sevrence, Charles Q. Kolstad.
Delegates to Diocesan convention—Frank E. Cleveland, David L. Jewell, George A. Vibert.
Delegates to the Archdeaconry Convention—James W. Hallet, William Daniels, John L. Hamilton.
The rector appointed a nomination committee—Henry B. Barham, Woodford Ketchum, John L. Hamilton, Mrs. Ama K. Lee and Miss Nellie M. Weeks.

Refreshments of sandwiches and coffee were served by the Woman's Guild, Mrs. Daniel C. Miller, chairman.

In view of the way Bob La Follette and others are heaving stones through the Supreme court's windows, it might be more prudent for the justices to meet after dark in the woodshed until things quiet down.

DAVIS CLASS BANQUET

years ago, when I was a boy," and then proceeded to make a comparison of the spirit of brotherhood existent then and the spirit that prevails at the present time. "In those days," continued the speaker, "every man adhered to his own religion and could not see his way clear to mingle with his fellow men who were of a different sect himself. Inasmuch as the gathering was being held under the auspices of the Baptist Church, Mr. Miller applied the saying of an old timer, who asserted that all people were Baptists to a certain degree, the only difference being that some were hard, others were soft, some were fresh water, while still others were salt water Baptists."

Mr. Miller said that all were united in a common cause in the uplift of human beings and then proceeded to introduce a man who first saw the light of day in the far off Australian land. He paid a great tribute to the next speaker and introduced amid great applause the retiring president of the Galahad, which the toastmaster subconsciously called "Jellyhead" Brotherhood of Christ Church, William Walker.

Mr. Walker spoke briefly and was followed by Matthew Nicoll and Rev. J. L. Crane the new pastor.

REV. HERBERT S. JOHNSON D. D.

The principal speaker of the evening was then introduced and it was some moments before the well-known Boston pastor was allowed to begin his speech, owing to the deafening applause that greeted his rising. Rev. Johnson proved himself to be all that had been anticipated with regard to his ability and showed himself to be a speaker of much force and eloquence. He started out by saying that he was especially pleased with the witty remarks that had been poured forth, but felt that he himself was not in a position to add to the merriment of the evening by telling funny stories. In this statement he was fallacious, for he not only proved to be the orator of the evening, but his remarks at the opening teemed with jokes and witticisms that fairly kept the audience in a state of continual laughter. Rev. Mr. Johnson said he did not like the injection of wine in the introductory words of the toastmaster, as he was Superintendent of the Mass. Anti Saloon league and felt that his honor in this regard was too much at stake to allow any such references to be made. He created a great hit, when referring to Mr. Miller, who was on his right and Mr. Mundie, who was on his left, he added "Inasmuch as I am situated between two tomb stone makers, I feel that I must proceed with my remarks whether I succeed or not. To be frank with you, all I have been thinking of since I came here is epitaphs, epitaphs, epitaphs." Rev. M. Johnson said that he was encouraged by the cheerful words of the speakers who had preceded him and took occassion to refer several times to the matrimonial tendencies of the president of the Davis Class, making him the target whenever he adduced a matrimonial inference. He said that he always enjoyed talking to a mixed congregation, inasmuch as he could trace his ancestry back to those of his immediate family whose religious beliefs were all different from his own. He said that even his own wife was a Congregationalist and he believed that his two months' old son, from his present actions was a "howling Methodist." He then began to draw analagous inferences with regard to the new year and the old, and the old, and brought forth a number of jokes which were especially pleasing and appreciative.

Confining himself to serious utterances, he then launched forth into an eloquent discourse on "The goal in life." He spoke of the north star as an inference of a guiding principle, by which the points of life are fixed, caravans are steered and ships are guided. He then portrayed the meaning of life as God had bestowed it upon us. He added that people should have a fixed idea, or ideal by which they should guide their actions in life. He spoke of the Roman Coliseum and the Grecian Stadium where the great games of ancient times were held. He pictured the pomp and splendor of those games and then showed the bearing they had with reference to the goal of man at the present time. The goal of life, he argues must be upheld by a spiritual realization. He then spoke of the success attained by Horace Greeley and advanced the many things that had made him famous. Continuing he said;

"It is true that our lives have issues which are within our power to control and which have been created by the power of choice. Life itself has tremendous isues, all of which are in our own hands."

Referring to the Richeson case, the speaker said, "We are within the shadow of the worst tragedy imaginable. I know of nothing more dreadful, more tragic or pathetic than the confession made by this minister of God. Richeson fell and with him fell his spiritual life, stark, cold and dead. The castles of his ambition have gone dull and dim, and the influence of this young man has waned to oblivion. The fall of the body is great, but it is nothing compared with the fall of the soul.

"Had Richeson kept his eye fixed on one object, Jesus, lust and greed would have shrivelled down to the very dimensions of the worms of the dust."

Rev. Mr. Johnson, portrayed many images of beauty and exquisiteness that he had seen in his travels and drew many inferences from them applicable in reaching the goal in life. His discourse was interesting and instructive throughout and he was accorded thunderous applause at the conclusion of his remarks.

NEW MARRIAGE LAW PUZZLING

At Least 7 Days Must Elapse Before License is Issued

A RULING

The new marirage law, requiring five days' notice of intention to marriage which went into effect Jan. 1, is causing considerable misunderstanding as to just what is meant by the five days' notice. That is, shall the five days begin to count from the hour of notice or shall the day application is made be considered as one of the five days? In order that there may be some uniform procedure the City Clerks' association appealed to Attorney General Swift for a ruling.

The ruling he has made is that the day the application, or notice is filed and the day that the certificate is issued, shall not be included in the five days. Neither shall holidays or Sundays be considered as one of the five days but it must be five working days. In other words if a man files notice of intention of marriage today with the City Clerk, he must wait until next Thursday before the certificate can be issued to him, so that in most cases at least seven days will be required to obtain a license.

LABOR BALL.

Members of Branch 8, Labor League, held their second annual concert and ball in Alpha hall Tuesday evening. The affair was largely attended, delegations from other branches of the labor league being present in large numbers.

The concert program was furnished by Wilson's orchestra from eight until nine o'clock, and the grand march, in which one hundred and fifty couples participated, was then in order, led by floor director, A. Weinhouse and lady.

Dancing was enjoyed until two A. M. with an intermission shortly before midnight, during which refreshments were served in Union hall.

Twenty numbers were on the program and the affair proved most successful. The floor was in charge of A. Weinhouse. The assistant floor director was I. Sternberg, Philip Kapsis was chief of aids assisted by D. Baden, L. Biller, N. Aronson, A. Tobin, L. Diamond, H. Rappoport, N. Newman, E. Motcowsky, H. Motcowsky, William Claidman, J. Motcowsky.

The committee on arrangements was composed of Ph. Kapsis, D. Baden, A. Weinhouse, B. Shwartz, J. Motcowsky.

Informers In Customs Frauds Get $50,000 and $25,000 Respectively

Washington, Jan. 11.—Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh awarded an aggregate of $75,000 to two informers in customs frauds cases. Joseph L. Payne will be given $50,000 for the evidence he contributed in the Duveen art cases and Peter Medling will receive $25,000 for his services in the Bradford lining prosecutions.

In the Duveen cases the government recovered $1,180,000 by civil processes and $50,000 in fines in criminal prosecutions. The recoveries in the Bradford lining cases amounted to between $400,000 and $500,000.

ROOSEVELT WON'T TALK TO REPORTERS

Says Certain Statements Are Without Foundation In Fact

New York, Jan. 11.—"The statements that have appeared in certain papers are absolutely without foundation in fact."

Lawrence Abbott, acting for Theodore Roosevelt, who declined to receive interviewers, issued this statement in repudiation of varying newspaper accounts purporting to quote Roosevelt on his attitude toward the presidential nomination, as voiced here at a private dinner.

Mr. Roosevelt is greatly annoyed at the incident and, although he was at his office, he would see no representatives of the press. Instead Abbott issued the statement.

The statements denied quoted Roosevelt as saying he would accept the nomination for president if tendered to him.

CABINET GOES DOWN AND OUT

French Premier Lacks Material to Complete Combination

RESIGNATION OF DE SELVES

Paris, Jan. 11.—The downfall of the Caillaux cabinet occurred suddenly last night. That the ministry would be overthrown in the chamber of deputies in the next few days was the general belief, but the announcement of the resignation of the ministry last night caused considerable surprise. It was logically due, however, owing to Premier Caillaux's failure to obtain material to complete a combination, which was practically confronted with the certainty of speedy collapse.

Only yesterday afternoon it was announced that the exraordinarily able Delcasse had been made minister of foreign affairs in place of de Selves, who had resigned because of a question of personal veracity between himself and the premier. De Selves had declined to confirm his chief's statement that there had been no secret negotiations between France and Germany on the Moroccan yuestion, thereby intimating that Caillaux was a liar. After that, his departure from the cabinet was a necessity. And now the whole organization of the Caillaux government is shattered.

The resignation Monday night of Foreign Minister de Selves, which followed a dramatic scene at a meeting of the senate committee, when de Selves declined to back up the premier in his statement regarding recent negotiations between Germany and France, resulted in immediate dissensions in the cabinet.

Theophile Delcasse, the minister of marine, accepted the portfolio of minister of foreign affairs, but M. Millerand, ex-minister of public works, Admiral Germinet and Pierre Baudin, to whom the marine portfolio successively was offered, in turn declined the honor.

Finally Delcasse sought the premier and explained that he agreed to accept the foreign ministry only on condition that a parliamentarian of distinction could be found for the portfolio of the navy, for the regeneration of which he had labored for months. Caillaux thereupon accepted the inevitable and announced to President Fallieres his retirement and that of his colleagues. Later he issued a statement, regretting that he was unable to retain the premiership and mount the tribune and defend himself against charges and calumies.

Among those mentioned as most likely to be in the new cabinet are Delcasse, Bourgeois, Poincare, Millerand, Briand and possibly Clemenceau.

The Paris newspapers, which unanimously regret the De Selves-Caillaux incident, quickly lined up for and against the premier. The Liberte accused Caillaux of secret negotiations with Germany before the dispatch of a German warship to Agadir.

Other charges brought in the newspapers against Caillaux assert that he has been trying to obtain the admission of German securities to the Paris bourse, and has threatened King Alfonso of Spain with the loss of the dynasty unless he acceded to the French demands in the negotiations over Morocco.

On the other hand, The Temps strongly defends the premier in a page review devoted to "The real negotiations between France and Germany." The Temps finds that all the negotiations prior to the Agadir incident were devoted exclusively to "economic collaboration, authorized by the accord of 1909."

The projected return of Delcasse to the foreign office was hailed as an event of international importance. Sacrificed, it was declared, in a moment of panic with Germany, his return would have had a significance which could not fail to satisfy French self-esteem.

DEATH OF BONANZA KING

Thomas Rooney Long a Picturesque Figure on Pacific Coast

San Francisco, Jan. 11.—Thomas H. Rooney, one of the most picturesque figures of the old bonanzo days and uncle of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, died here of heart disease.

Rooney was one of the few survivors of the romantic Comstock mining days. He was born in New York in 1846 and came to the Pacific coast with his parents when a child.

Snowslide Kills Many Men

Spokane, Jan. 11.—A snowslide swept down upon a rotary snow plow near Cutbank, Mont., and several men are said to have been killed. A great storm is raging in that district. Details of the accident are not available.

His Only Worry.

Graphter—I've got my hooks out for a swell political office, big salary and all that. Jenkins—Do you think you can fill it? Graphter—Never thought of that. What's worrying me is whether I'll be able to get it.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Telephone Rates

(Full Suburban Service)

Unlimited residence telephone service, embracing may all Suburban Exchanges, be had as follows:

One-Party Line . . . $45
(Old Rate $54 a Year)

Two-Party Line . . . $36
(Old Rate $42 a Year)

This is a desirable service for subscribers whose calls are distributed over a large number of distant suburban exchanges.

A one-party line subscriber has the exclusive use of his own line. A two-party line subscriber shares the line with only one other subscriber, but his line is equipped with divided ringing, so that he hears no bell except his own.

Those whose residence telephone requirements are not satisfactorily met by other kind of service, as, for example, the lower unlimited district rate (embracing any suburban exchange and all contiguous suburban exchanges), or by a measured service (embracing all Metropolitan exchanges within an 8-mile radius, with excess calls at 3 cents each), would do well to consider the above proposition.

If this outline interests you, call the Contract Department, Fort Hill 7600, and give your order. New contracts or changes, that can be completed in time, will have correct call numbers listed in the next Telephone Directory, now going to press. A call to Fort Hill 7600 may be made without charge from any telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District.

QUINN IS NAMED AS SHERIFF OF SUFFOLK

Member of Governor's Council Goes to New Position

Boston, Jan. 11.—John Quinn, Jr., a member of the executive council from Boston, was named as sheriff of Suffolk county to succeed the late Fred H. Seavey by Governor Foss at the meeting of the executive council yesterday afternoon and was immediately confirmed. He assumed his new office at once.

John Quinn, Jr., is serving his second term in the governor's council from the Third district, which comprises most of the city of Boston. He was the only Democrat in the council.

He is a native of Boston, being born here Dec. 16, 1860. He is a lawyer by profession and has had long experience in Boston politics.

SUYDAM GETS DIVORCE

Millionaire's Wife Cannot Wed Again In New York State

New York, Jan. 11.—A decree of absolute divorce was filed at Riverhead, L. I, in favor of Walter L. Suydam, Jr., of Bluepoint, the millionaire, whose handsome wife left his country home last September and frankly declared that she had found in Frederick Noble her true mate.

It had been expected that as soon as the final decree was registered Mrs. Suydam would marry Noble, but the court rules that she may not marry again in New York state, although her husband may take another wife if he so chooses. The decree forbids Mrs. Suydam to use any part of her former husband's name as her own.

V.A SKYLIGHT ROUTE

Two Prisoners Make Daring Escape From Detention Pen

Boston, Jan. 11.—Two young men sentenced to long terms at the house of correction made a daring escape from the detention room at Eastern wharf yesterday afternoon. Although a general alarm was sent out by the police, no trace of them has been obtained.

The men are Charles Davis, 23 years old, sentenced to eighteen months for breaking and entering, and Philip Pucci, 21 years old, sentenced to three years for assault with intent to rob.

The men, with twelve others, were in the detention room, where they had been placed after the arrival of the vans from the courthouse. One of the escaped men climbed on the shoulders of his companion and bent the iron bar which covered the skylight on the roof, which allows light to enter. After bending the bar so that he could squeeze his body through, he broke the pane of glass in the skylight. He then pulled himself to the roof.

After seeing that no one to stop his progress was in sight, he leaned into the broken skylight and many willing hands among the other prisoners caught the other man and aided his partner on the roof in hauling him through the skylight.

The two men then crossed the root of the building, which is a one-story affair, and dropped into the street and made their escape.

McManigal Said to Have Made New Dynamite Disclosures

Indianapolis, Jan. 11.—Subpoenas for scores of persons who are believed to know about explosions in New York city and in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa and other points in the middle west were issued by the government officials who are conducting the federal grand jury's investigation of the dynamite conspiracy.

Many of the witnesses are said to be called because of new disclosures made by Ortie McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, who for three days has been examined by United States Attorney Miller.

WINTER SQUASHES.

WINTER squashes are stewed, just as the summer squashes are, but they should cook awhile longer.

Squashes may be bought in quantity and kept until they are needed. If spread out in a dry place they will last all winter.

Squashes which have been frozen lose their flavor.

Easily Cooked.

If the squash is hard it may be sawed with a sharp meat saw or broken into pieces with a hatchet. Take out the seeds and wash.

Winter squashes are richer and firmer than the summer ones.

Squash is most easily cooked by boiling or steaming. This recipe follows the usual method:

Boiled Squash.—After breaking up the squash remove the seeds and stringy parts and rind if possible. If not, the rind must be taken off after it is boiled. Cook in a steamer or in a strainer over boiling water for about forty minutes, or else boil in a small quantity of water. Drain and press through a colander. Season with salt, butter and pepper.

Ways of Baking.

Baked Squash.—Use a small squash, sawing it in half. Remove the seeds and parboil the squash. Mix together one cupful of breadcrumbs moistened with a very little milk; one egg, beaten light; two slices of onion, minced fine, and one-quarter of a cupful of grated cheese. Fill the squash with this mixture, seasoning it with salt and pepper, put it in a baking pan and bake until tender all through.

Squash au Gratin.—Scoop the inside out of a boiled or steamed squash and pass through a colander. Season with salt and pepper, and add the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter and two of milk. Mix well. Place a layer of breadcrumbs, well buttered, on the bottom of a baking dish and then put in the squash. Cover with cracker crumbs moistened with butter, and bake in a slow oven for about thirty minutes.

A Squash Novelty.

For those who are fond of trying unusual dishes this recipe is given:

Squash Muffins.—To a cupful of dry and strained squash add two eggs that have been beaten light, with the yolks and whites separate. Add a cupful of cream or sweet milk, a little salt, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two cupfuls of well sifted flour and a tablespoonful of butter. Beat and bake in a hot oven for half an hour.

Success of White Plague Experiment at Very Outset

New York, Jan. 11.—That the experiment of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt of providing hygienic apartments for persons with tubercular tendencies has been closely followed by the public was made plain when it was announced that 250 of the 384 suites in the East River homes, founded through her generosity, had already been rented, notwithstanding the group of buildings at the foot of East Seventy-seventh and Seventy-eighth streets had only been open since last Saturday.

This exceeds the fondest expectations of the founder and practically assures the success of the experiment at the very outset.

It is expected the four buildings will shelter about 2000 persons when all the suites have been taken.

AMERICAN SPUDS SCARCE

Large Consignments of the European Tuber Are Arriving

Boston, Jan. 11.—The shortage of potatoes, due to the failure of the crops in Maine, Michigan and New York and other big potato raising states, has forced producers in this country to import them on a wholesale scale from Europe.

For the past month nearly every steamer arriving from England at this port of New York has brought in from 3000 to 5000 bags of potatoes, grown in Ireland, Scotland or France.

The Leyland liner Armenian, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, has nearly 4000 bags of potatoes, 1000 bags of onions and almost 3000 bags of turnips.

The United States has long been the leading potato producing nation and it is very unusual to be forced to import the vegetables on a large scale.

Dickens' Daughters Accept Offer of Trinity Church Plot

New York, Jan. 11.—It has been decided by relatives of the late Alfred T. Dickens, son of the English novelist, that the body of Dickens shall be buried in New York. Trinity church has offered a plot in its cemetery and the offer has been accepted.

Dickens' daughters, who live in Australia, cabled here that they preferred his burial in London, but Dickens' sister, Mrs. Kate Perugini of London, took up the matter with her nieces and cabled here yesterday afternoon:

"My nieces consent to burial in America. Accept offer of ground gratefully."

HOLE IS BORED IN THE SKULL

Heroic Method of Administering a New Drug

WILL SAVE BABIES' LIVES

Dr. Flexner Says Urotropin Will Do Away With Scourge Known as Infantile Paralysis, One of the Most Contagious and Deadly Diseases Among Young People—Some Modification of Drug Will Be Necessary

New York, Jan. 11.—Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the Rockefeller institute for medical research, has declared his belief that infantile paralysis, with which medical science up to this time has failed to cope, has been conquered.

The curative remedy is known as urotropin, and its value has been demonstrated as an apparent corrective agency. Infantile paralysis is one of the diseases that in recent years has staggered the medical profession, but its tremendous increase has only recently been suspected. Flexner declares the disease to be among the most contagious and deadly that young human life may have to face.

The noted pathologist is careful to qualify his announcement as a prophecy rather than a statement of accomplished fact. He believes, however, that with some modifications of the drug it will do away with the scourge medically called acute anterior poliomyelitis, and commonly known as infantile paralysis.

The drug urotropin is formed by the action of ammonia on formaldehyde, and is one of the greatest antiseptics known to science. It seems to lack the deleterious effects of other antiseptics when directly introduced into the human system.

The method of administering the drug is peculiarly heroic. A hole is actually bored in the skull and the brain entered by a hypodermic needle. This is done under anasthesia. In this way the specific is introduced directly into the nervous system. The reaction is sharp and pronounced.

It is evident, however, that some modifications of the drug are necessary before perfect results are obtained. It is upon this that Flexner and other Rockefeller institute scientists are now working.

The discovery of the use of this drug came to the doctors at a time when they almost despaired of finding a cure for the disease that annually wipes off tens of thousands of infants. The worst feature was that it was discovered that an antitoxine serum was passed through sixty individuals, and at the end was more virulent than when taken from the original patient. The immunity usually produced in most diseases by this process is entirely absent in infantile paralysis.

MISS LAMBERT'S DEATH

Doctors Submit Report That It Was Due to Poison

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 11.—That the death of Miss Lucy Lambert, 23, at her home in Westford on Jan. 6, was due to poison, is the substance of the report of the autopsy by Medical Examiner Bulkeley, Dr. Priest of Groton and Dr. Sherman of Graniteville, which was filed with District Attorney Higgins.

The report states that the girl died of poison, the exact nature of which will be determined by chemical analysis. The method of administering it is yet to be determined.

The state officials, from their investigation so far made, are of the opinion that it is a clear case of suicide.

The dry weather of last summer offered a favorable season for rearing young wives, and it is said the animals are more numerous than for many years.

GLOATS OVER ROCKEFELLER

Carnegie "Put One Over" on His Fellow Millionaire

DEAL IN IRON ORE HOLDINGS

Steel King Bought From Oil Magnate at Fifteen Cents a Ton Property Which Later Became Worth Hundreds of Millions—Proves an Interesting Witness Before House Committee Investigating Steel Trust

Washington, Jan. 11.—Intimate books and papers of the United States Steel corporation are to be examined by the government. Chairman Stanley of the house "steel trust" investigating committee last night issued subpoenas duces treum for all the documents, which thus far the steel corporation had not produced, although the committee expressed its desire to examine them.

"It does my heart good to think that I got ahead of John D. Rockefeller, my fellow millionaire, in that Lake Superior ore deal."

Andrew Carnegie, former ruler of the steel industry in the United States, gloated thus in testifying before the house committee of inquiry into the United States Steel corporation. Carnegie had just told the committee about his deal with Rockefeller whereby he obtained control of Rockefeller's iron ore holdings in the Lake Superior region at a rate of 15 cents a ton, holdings which when turned into the steel corporation later formed a large part of assets valued at $700,000,000.

As he spoke of Rockefeller he took the committee into his confidence and told of a New Year's call he and Mrs. Carnegie made on the oil king and Mrs. Rockefeller.

"We had an enjoyable chat, but in our conversation I never referred to that ore purchase," and Carnegie chuckled and his auditors laughed.

Throughout the inquiry Carnegie said he had come to tell all he knew. Nevertheless, he was unable to supply much data which the committee wanted. He explained that he never paid any attention to the books of the Carnegie company before its absorption by the steel corporation.

He was particularly emphatic in his testimony relating to the sale of his property to the United States Steel corporation at the behest of J. P. Morgan, and told the committee that he wanted to end the gossip that he held out for an unreasonable price.

Mr. Carnegie was asked about the Steel Plate association and other pools which lasted until 1904 and to which the Carnegie company was a party in the late '90s. He said he knew of the existence of pools, but he did not know that they were unlawful until many years afterwards.

Asked about the option valuation of $320,000,000 and the final disposition of the property to the steel corporation in 1901 for a much larger sum, Carnegie related the history of his retirement from the steel business. He said that Charles M. Schwab, then president of the company, came to him with a message from J. P. Morgan asking him if he desired to retire from business and how much he wanted for his properties.

"I told Schwab that it would depend entirely upon my partners," said Carnegie. "Schwab said the partners were willing and he went back to see Morgan.

"When he returned, he said Morgan wanted a figure. We went over the estimate and considered the former option of $320,000,000. Schwab had figures to show that since that was given—about two and one-half years before—the property had grown in value about $100,000,000. He thought we ought to add that, and I agreed with him. Morgan accepted that figure."

When asked about the statement made by Senator Oliver that the Carnegie company received railroad rebates Carnegie declared: "It's astonishing how suspected an honest corporation can be. I never received a rebate that I know of in all my life."

Mr. Carnegie then related how he fought the Pennsylvania railroad because of discrimination in rates against him; how he interested the Vanderbilts in a project to erect a competing road to the east, and how the Vanderbilts went "over to the enemy," ending the project.

TAFT CATCHES COLD

Cancels Engagements and Remains Away From Executive Offices

Washington, Jan. 11.—President Taft is suffering from a cold and last night White House officials cancelled all of his engagements for today, although no alarm is felt over the president's condition. He caught the cold yesterday and remained in his study in the executive mansion.

It is said the engagements were recalled so he might cure the cold without exposing himself by going over to the executive offices and that he intended to dispose of a large amount of correspondence.

BRIEFS

The Pickwick club observed its 39th anniversary Wednesday evening by a theatre party instead of its usual banquet.

Mayor Stone has directed Commissioner Bainbridge to flood the meadow off Cleverly court at Quincy Point for a skating pond, permission to do the same having been obtained from the owners.

A subscription German is to be held in Colonial hall, Friday evening, under the management of Miss Agnes Hayward the popular teacher of dancing.

There will be an organ recital in Christ church on Wednesday evening by F. Wrigley, assisted by J. W. McLeod of London, England, soloist. No tickets, church open to all.

C. C. Hearn, the new president of the Board of Trade reports, that he has secured the applications, of a number of business men, for membership, which will be acted upon at the next meeting.

The Ledger has issued large editions every day this week printing over 3,000 daily. The sales and demand for the Ledger is on the increase and it will not belong before an issue of 5,000 will be a daily necessity. The Ledger is certainly full of news.

"Should Richeson be electrocuted" will be the subject of Rev. Carl G. Horst at the morning service of the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday. This is a question that is arousing the public at the present time and a sane discourse on the question is greatly to be desired.

There was the usual attendance Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. Warren H. Rideout was the high man with 78-1 per cent while Ralph L. Lovell was a good second with 73 per cent. Ice cream and cake were served after the play.

SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT

Mayor Stone Present at Washington St. Church Social

GOOD PROGRAM

The supper and entertainment at the Point church, Wednesday evening, was an unqualified success. In spite of the severe cold and slippery streets more than eighty sat down to the bountiful supper which was promptly and efficiently served by Mrs. Thomas R. McKenney, chairman, and a corps of helpers whose names began with M, N, and P.

The entertainment at 8 o'clock, was in charge of Mrs. Walter Perry, and was much enjoyed. It consisted of piano duets by Mrs. Charles P. Marshall, and Miss Helen Lincoln; vocal solos by Miss Barnicoat; violin solos by Walter Perry; readings by Miss Catherine Yule, and a cute little dialogue by Jennie Gibb and Marie Lorenten, entitled "A Slight Misunderstanding." Both young girls did wonderfully well.

After the entertainment there was a social hour. All in all the evening was delightful. The ladies of the Aid were especially pleased over the presence of Mayor Stone, with Mrs. Stone, and daughter, Miss Edith Stone.

MOONS OF THE UNIVERSE.

Besides Our Own Luna Twenty-five Others Are Known to Exist.

There are in all twenty-five moons besides our queen of night. Mars having two, Jupiter eight, Saturn ten, Uranus four and Neptune one, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Of course new lunar additions are likely to be discovered at any time, although it is improbable that Mercury and Venus have any satellites or that Mars has more than two.

The two known moons of Mars are, indeed, very minute, neither being over fifty miles in diameter. On the other hand, Jupiter's first four satellites, as well as Ganymede, are each larger than Queen Luna, Ganymede having a diameter of about 3,550 miles. Titan of Saturn possesses a diameter approximating 3,000 miles, while that of Neptune's sole satellite is about 2,000 miles.

As respects our own moon, Queen Luna has only one-forty-ninth the size and one-eighty-first the weight of our earth. Luna's distance from us varies a good deal, from 221,000 miles to 252,000 miles. Her mean or average distance is about 238,000 miles.

QUINCY HIGH A DOUBLE WINNER

First and Second Teams Win from Milton High

THE SCORES

Quincy High was victorious in its second game of the season played yesterday in the gymnasium of the local school, and thereby caused the Milton High quintet to succumb to a 20 to 16 defeat. At the end of the first half the work of the local boys had enabled them to roll up a 14 to 2 score. The visitors showed great endurance in the last five minutes of play, during which time five baskets were made.

In the first half the local players outclassed their opponents in every department, and the work of Trask and Finlay showed up to great advantage. Time and time again the passing of the ball by these two players proved to be of the high class order.

Holmes also played well throughout the game, and managed to keep the ball in the territory of the local boys during the greater part of the game.

In the second half, Milton High came back with renewed vigor, and Carson, who held down the pivot position displayed great form, securing four baskets from the floor. The Milton boys were somewhat heavier than their local opponents, yet the team play of the latter was superior.

The game was rather rough at times, and referee LaRose was compelled to call a number of fouls. The local boys played a much better game than was noticeable in the first contest, and they give every promise of rounding into a winning combination. Great applause, on the part of the hundreds present, greeted the players as they caged the baskets and the enthusiasm became highly impulsive when the Milton boys began to make remarkable strides in the last few minutes of play.

For the local boys Trask and Finlay excelled, while Carson was the lone star for the visitors.

The summary:

QUINCY H. S..	MILTON H. S
Finlay, rf	lb Cross
Chapman lf	rb Leary
Trask c	c Carson
Holmes rb	lf O'Heron
Johnson lb	rf O'Connor

Score. Quincy H. S. 20, Milton H. S. 16. Goals from floor Finlay 4, Trask 4, Johnson, Carson 4, O'Connor 2, O'Heron. Goals from fouls, Finlay, Chapman, Leary. O'Heron. Referee LaRose. Scorer, Young. Timers, Reed and Mansur. Time 20m halves. Attendance 500.

SECOND TEAM.

The second team of both schools played between the halves and the Quincy High second easily emerged from the struggle with a 28 to 6 victory. It was the first game of the season for the local second team and the all round work of its players was highly commendable. During the first few minutes of play it looked as if the game was to resolve into a warm contest, but the local boys outclassed their opponents and began to shoot the baskets with little difficulty. Estey, who covered the centre position for the local team caged six baskets from the floor and proved to be the conspicuous player. Jenkins and Prout also played well, while Margeson and Kelley showed up to advantage for the losers.

The summary:

QUINCY H. S. 2D	MILTON H. S 2D
Jenkins rf	lb Adams
Prout lf	lb Margeson
Estey c	c Carter
Hall rb	lf Cummings
Crane lb	rf Kelley

Score, Quincy H. S. 2d 28. Milton H. S. 2d 6. Goals from floor, Estey 6, Jenkins 4, Prout 3, Hall, Margeson 2, Carter. Referee LaRose. Scorer, Young. Timers, Reed and Mansell. Time 15m halves.

—Coal exports from the United States have trebled in value in the last dozen years. The value of coal passing out of continental United States in the year 1911 is, in round terms, $80,000,000, compared with $65,000,000 in the immediately preceding year. Canada is the principal destination of the coal exported from this country, both anthracite and bituminous.

STENCIL LETTERS.

Used by Writers and Illuminators In the Early Ages.

Movable characters were known to the ancients. They were used in teaching children to read. The ancients had also stencil letters, which they used to secure a regular style of penmanship. They even made use of plates, thus open cut, containing an entire page. It was placed on the papyrus to guide the pens of children. "An excellent means," saith Quintilian, "to learn them not to exceed the desired proportions." The Emperor Justinian (A. D. 518) could neither read nor write, an unexampled thing in one of such high rank. When it was necessary for him to sign his name he had a sheet of gold through which were cut the letters of his name. "Then," said Procopius, "placing this tablet on the paper, one conducted the hand of the prince, holding the stylus dipped in purple on the type of the different letters, and took away the writing furnished with his signature." The same thing is reported of King Theodoric and of Charlemagne.

In the middle ages the illuminators and decorators made much of such tablets for tracing involved initial letters and even in a way composed entire works, such as copies of the plain songs, etc. A chartered abbey near Mayence possessed some sixty of the alphabets cut in leaves of latoun, a copper alloy. Later these patterns were replaced by stamps whose imprint is proved by the evidences on the reverse of the page as early as the thirteenth century. In 1288 the monks of Fribourg published a treatise relating to money in this way, and it seems, according to a passage in Pliny and another in Petronius, that these stencils were used to publish figures and designs as well.—Charles W. Hall in National Magazine.

SUPREME COURT GOWNS.

They Are Made of the Finest Silk and Are Quite Costly.

It is said that the cut and style of the gowns worn by the justices of the supreme court of the United States are so peculiar that it is not always possible to have one correctly made.

The wife of a former justice used to enjoy telling of her trying experiences when she wished to have made in Paris the gown her husband was to use. The gowns worn there by scientists, scholars and students differ altogether from those our justices wear.

In London any clerical tailor would have understood the kind of gown desired, but not so in Paris. Wherefore after many failures, the justice's wife gave instructions to the fashionable modiste who made her gowns. This modiste was entirely successful in turning out a gown for the justice.

The justice's gowns, which are always of the best quality of silk, cost upward of $100. When the supreme court was first organized the justices wore quite gaudy gowns.

A portrait in oil of the first chief justice, John Jay, now hangs in the robing room opposite the supreme court chamber, and in this portrait the chief justice is represented as wearing a black gown with a broad bright red border around the neck and down the front. It is edged with gray, and the sleeves show a red border at the top and bottom, also edged with gray.—Harper's Weekly.

A Curious Windstorm.

A peculiar freak of weather is the storm called the "williwau." This form of storm is confined to that far-off island Tierra del Fuego. The coast is indented with deep fiords crowned with high mountains. Down from their gorges drops the williwau. A low, hoarse muttering is heard in the distance. Suddenly, without the least preliminary puff, a fearful blast of wind drops upon the sea. The water is not raised into waves, but driven into fine dust. Fortunately the shock lasts but ten or twelve seconds, and calm follows at once, for no vessel could stand such a wind for even half a minute. During the coming and going of a williwau the barometer may be watched to drop a tenth of an inch or more and rise again at once.

She Was a Skeptic.

In pioneer days a settler near the present town of Albany, Mo., bought for his wife the first cook stove ever seen in that part of the state. It was an object of great curiosity, and the woman's next door neighbor, who lived ten miles away, came to see how it would work. Without comment she saw the dinner cooked. She ate the meal with judgment held in reserve and then remarked, with a shake of the head:

"Well, Sarah, it cooks all right, and the victuals taste good, but I don't believe it will ever be a success."

Mistakes.

To make mistakes is human. Everybody makes mistakes, the best of us included. To acknowledge mistakes is commendable. It is evidence that one is learning by experience, and it shows that he has the courage to acknowledge a blunder. Courage is a rare quality in these days.—Leslie's.

Badly Expressed.

"Yes, Aunt Mary went out without her rubbers, and now she is in heaven." "My, my! What dreadful things result from a little carelessness!"—Exchange.

The Wrong Man.

"Just a minute, old chap. You're just the man I want to see."

"No. I'm not. I can't spare a cent."—Pittsburgh Post.

If your eyes are always cast down, cobwebs will gather on the ceiling.

PERSIAN BAZAARS

Curious Business Methods of the Oriental Shopkeepers.

HAVE NO GENERAL STORES.

One Merchant Will Sell Only Muslin, Another Nothing but Silk, Another Spices, and So On—Water Is Difficult to Obtain and Is Very Expensive.

One curious thing about the bazaars of Persia, writes Mrs. Mary A. C. Colquhoun in the Los Angeles Times, is the fact that all the shops of one kind are grouped together, and so we speak of the "cloth bazaar," the "hat bazaar," the "shoe bazaar." There are both wholesale and retail shops, but there are no department stores as in America, nor is there such a thing as a general grocery or dry goods store.

One grocer keeps spices only, another tea, coffee, sugar, etc.; one dry goods merchant will sell you muslin, another broadcloth, another silk. There are no large manufactories in Persia. It is common to have a small factory and a shop together or side by side.

All the metal utensils used in the country are made of either brass or copper. These substances are hammered into shape. A stroll through the bazaar where this work is going on gives one the impression that pandemonium has broken loose.

Different kinds of bread are made in the bazaar. One kind which is especially liked by the people and which can be obtained fresh at almost every hour of the day is called "non-i-sangak," literally little stone bread. It is made by pouring the dough on very hot pebbles, which bake it quickly and give it a crisp crust. Of course it is thin, not more than a quarter of an inch in thickness. The sheet is about a foot and a half wide by two and a half long.

Near the bazaar where this bread is baked you will usually find a place where mutton chops are being cooked on skewers over a charcoal fire. Any one desiring a lunch will buy from the baker a sheet of the thin, crisp, freshly baked bread, then a few "kabobs," as the chops are called. Wrapping the chops in the bread, he will proceed on his way, eating his lunch as he goes.

As you walk through the bazaars or stand to examine or purchase goods, especially if you are a foreigner, you must expect to be jostled, not only by crowds of curious pedestrians, but also by caravans of horses and donkeys and even of vicious camels. You will perhaps have to wait also for the shopkeeper to finish his prayer.

Foreigners usually go to the bazaars not to purchase things, but to see oriental life, and in the bazaars are to be seen many interesting phases of it. When you really wish to buy something you will find the peddler, that supreme nuisance of America, your best friend. He will bring to your door anything that you wish to see and give you all the time that you desire in which to examine it.

You must needs be a haggler to deal with any merchant in Persia, but usually you can make a better bargain in the quiet of your own home than you can make in the bazaar.

Save for one month in the year the bazaars, even in the capital of 350,000 people, are never open at night. During the month when the Persians fast all day it is customary to do some marketing, some business and much visiting at night. Then the food bazaars, tea shops and so forth are open. Pedestrians with huge lanterns of oiled paper and people in carriages give an appearance of life and gayety to the streets which is quite unknown at other times.

Many occupations which in western lands are carried on in shops are in Persia carried on in the open air. This is due partly to the poverty of the people, partly to the warmness of the climate, partly to the fact that the Persian is pre-eminently a social being and—with the exception of his domestic life, which is lived in great seclusion behind high walls—he likes to be with his fellow men.

The barber, for example, seldom has a shop and never really needs one. At any street corner you are likely to stumble over a man sitting on a ledge of the wall and being shaved or having his hair cut. It is your one opportunity for seeing a man with his hat off, but as you look at his tonsured pate you do not regret that your opportunities in this direction are limited.

The only things that are free in Persia are air and sunshine. Water—not only in the cities, but everywhere—is one of the most expensive commodities and one of the most difficult to obtain. The entire water supply of Teheran comes from the snow on the mountains north of the city. It is brought for a distance of many miles in underground watercourses. There are thirty-four such channels which enter the city.

At various places as they pass along there are openings into these. Through these openings the water is dipped up with a leathern bucket and poured into a goatskin bag, which is slung over the shoulder of the private servant or the professional water carrier. Nothing is more common in the street than a sight of one of these carriers.

Recrimination.

He—My dear, you spend too much money in false hair. Look at your puffs. She—And you spend too much in cigars. Look at your puffs.—Baltimore American.

There is no happiness like that which comes from doing our level best every day.

GOOD BOXING AT QUINCY A.A.

Several Amateur Exhibition Bouts Tuesday Evening

THE SUMMARY

A number of boxing bouts were pulled off Tuesday evening at St. Mary's hall, West Quincy. The bouts were well attended but injury to the hands of the boxers spoiled most of them. A bout to the finish between Walter Ochs of Dorchester and Eddie Walker of South Bostin in the 125 pound class was won by Walker.

There was a special bout between Bob Gerstell of Quincy, 135 pounds and James Dundon of Boston 135 pounds. This was a very fast and exciting bout the decision going to Dundon. The result of the several bouts were as follows:

125-POUND CLASS.

TRIALS.

Walter Ochs, Dorchester, beat Richard Narr, two rounds.

John Saunders, Boston, beat Toni Ciampi, Boston, one round.

Henry Morley, Roxbury, beat Leo Powers, Cambridge, three rounds.

SEMI-FINAL.

Walter Ochs beat John Saunders, three rounds.

FINAL.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE QUINCY REPUBLICAN CLUB

George A. Sidelinger Re-elected as President at Annual Meeting

Important Amendments to the By-Laws Proposed

GEORGE A. SIDELINGER
President Republican Club

The second annual meeting of the Republican club of Quincy was held Thursday evening at Union hall, President George A. Sidelinger, presiding. The report of the secretary showed the membership of the club at the present time to be 42, that all bills were paid and that there was a good balance in the treasury. The first business was the election of officers. The nominating committee reported the following list, for the several officers and they were unamiously elected:

President, George A. Sidelinger,

VICE PRESIDENTS.

Ward One, George H. Brown
Ward Two, Edwin W. Newcomb
Ward Three, Alfred O. Diak
Ward Four, Joseph Walker
Ward Five, Albert W. Fay
Ward Six, Charles A. Hall
Treasurer, Edward E. Jameson
Secretary, Roy Prout

Executive Committee for three years, J. Frank Merrill, Frederick J. Kesler.

After the business session, President Sidelinger said that he expected to have two good speakers to address the meeting, but that it was a bad time of the year to obtain speakers and he had found it impossible to get the men he desired.

Speaking of the outlook of the club the President said that the executive committee had been somewhat handicapped in getting the membership committee it desired, owing to the peculiar wording of the by-laws. The by-law he referred to was article 3. This provides that no person who is a public office holder, by popular vote, shall be an officer of the club, and that any officer of the club upon announcing himself a candidate for any office elected by popular vote thereupon automatically vacates his office in the club.

This had been found a stumbling block in getting committees desired, for members of the several ward committees, who are looked upon as workers for the party interests were excluded from serving as officers of the club, or as members of membership committees. For this reason there had not been as large an increase in membership as anticipated. He believed that these clauses should be stricken out and if so he had no doubt but new interest and enthusiasm would result.

A motion was then made that the necessary steps be taken, as provided in the by-laws to eliminate the two sections referred to.

The club then passed the motion that the secretary notify the members that action would be taken on eliminating the sections at the next meeting.

An informal talk then followed in which several members spoke. Joseph Walker spoke at length on the importance of such a club as this, which was working for the welfare of the city. There was a great need that the young man just coming to be voters should be educated as to principles of the party and on the important questions that are constantly coming up. He knew for a fact that many young men went to the polls and voted without a thorough understanding of the matters for which they voted. The club therefore should be a club of education. We are a progressive people but do not know all that we should know. It was necessary for every citizen to consider the welfare of our city, state and nation. We can not know too much, not only for the party purpose but for the welfare of the government.

The purpose of our club should be to diffuse a spirit of good citizenship. There is a great deal of work ahead and we should show all the energy possible.

President Sidelinger agreed with the speaker and said that the executive committee had been unable to get a good working committee for the reasons already stated, but he had no doubt after the amendments had been passed that a good working committee would be secured.

Secretary Prout spoke of the need of co-operation in order that the principles of the party might become better understood, especially by the new voters.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall said that he had been a worker in the party for forty years. The idea of the club is to get in young men, educate them as to the principles of the party and in this way we shall build up the Republican party. We want young men who will stand by the party in defeat as well as in victory.

A. L. Whitman spoke of the strenuous fight that had been made in Ward Two at the recent election where a Democratic ward had been turned to a Republican victory. For our club to be a success we should change the by-laws As it is now some of the best workers are unable to hold office. Every man who believes in the principles of the party we want with us.

Fred F. Green spoke of the necessity of encouraging young men to become members and to become workers for the party's interest.

Other speakers suggested the advisability of holding frequent meetings with speakers and the president said in closing that if the by-laws were changed as suggested he believed that it would be possible to enthuse new life into the club and that meetings with good speakers would be held .

SUCCESSFUL WHIST PARTY.

A whist party was held in Poland hall, Wednesday evening, by the members of the Montclair Improvement Society. The affair was largely attended and a number of tables were in play. It was a successful event and the committee in charge is planning a series of parties. Souvenirs were awarded as follows: ladies, first, Miss Etta Goodwin; second, Miss Margaret Delory; men's, first, Samuel Quail; second, Theodore Parlee. The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee comprised of Joseph P. McCabe,, Frederick J. Kessler, Frank H. Byrne and Stephen M. Brown. Dancing was enjoyed after the whist until midnight to music by the Montclair orchestra.

WILL H. MAYHEW.

Will H. Mayhew, a prominent citizen of Braintree passed away this morning at 2 o'clock. His death was sudden and the news was a shock to the comunity as he was apparently as well as usual when he retired.

Mr. Mayhew was clerk of the First Congregational society in Braintree, burned Wednesday morning and was present at the fire. It is thought that this coupled with a recent fire in Boston, where his business was located werein a large measure contributing causes of his death.

He served the Braintree-Weymouth district in the legislature during the years 1897 and 1898 and was elected two years ago to fill out an unexpired term on the board of Water Commissioners and was re-elected at the last election. eH was a member of Puritan lodge of Odd Fellows and a past president of the Braintree Pine Tree club. He leaves a widow.

ELOPERS ARE ARRESTED

Italian Couple Arrested in Boston and Brought to Quincy

WILL BE MARRIED

A well planned elopement of a South Quincy couple was nipped in the bud by the Boston police Thursday evening at the request of Chief Burrell, when they were placed under arrest at the North End where they had gone on leaving Quincy.

The girl was Josephine Bova the 17 year old daughter of Casime Bova of South Quincy and the man Pasquale Calararuso aged 22 years. The couple left Quincy Thursday afternoon intending to get married in Boston. On applying for a license however they ran up against the new marriage law. They then went to the North End intending to go to New York this morning. The girl's absence was soon noticed by her parents who applied to Chief Burrell. He located them in Boston and their arrest followed.

They were brought to Quincy late Thursday night and this morning were arraigned in court, the man for abduction and the girl for being a stubborn child. As the parents were willing they should be married the case was continued until Saturday morning to enable them to do so. A special permit for the marriage will be issued today by Judge Avery.

THIRD ALTERNATE.

It was anounced this morning that Richard Ziegler Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery L. Crane of 20 Whitney road, had been appointed third alternate, to fill the vacancy at the Naval Academy at Annapolis from the tenth congressional district. The examination was held a short time ago on request of Congressman Jas. M. Curley. A number of students took the examination, resulting as follows, first Woodbury E. Mackay, of Milton, second Richard G. Donahue of Dorchester, third Edwin A. Desmond of Dorchester and fourth Richard Z. Crane of this city.

Crane is in the junior class at Quincy High school and besides being a scholar of proficiency, is also an athlete of great ability. He has frequently taken part in various athletic movements at the local school and is very popular among the students. He is not yet 16 years of age.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

A brilliant and pleasing lecture illustrated by 100 choice views was given in the Hall Place M. E. church, Thursday evening by Rev. Franklin Hamilton, D. D. Chancellor of the American University at Washington, D. C. The lecture was entitled "Through Ceylon, India, up to the Roof of the World." Rev. L. W. Adams of Lynn operated the lantern.

TRIP TO BROOKLINE.

The 1910 committee of Loyal Ladies No. 1., visited Mrs. Catherine Falconer, a member of the committee, at her home on Beacon street, Brookline Thursday evening.

An excellent collation was served by Mrs. Falconer, and the ladies enjoyed themselves with songs and music.

Those present were; Mrs. Effie Scarborough, Mrs. Mary Kennedy, Mrs. Fanny Wood, Mrs. Catherine Gordon, Mrs. Jennie Steinbrenner, Mrs Isabelle Pierce, Mrs. Jeanie Mitchell, Mrs. Elizabeth Russell and Mrs. Margaret Gammon.

DECLINES OFFICE.

Albert L. Whitman, one of the men named by Mayor Stone for the board of Park Commissioners has declined the office. There was but one office that he desired and that was Commissioner of Public Works. Not getting this he declines to accept any other office. He said Thursday night that he should notify the Mayor that he did not intend to accept the appointment.

THE LAW ABOUT SETTLEMENTS

Overseer Elcock Gives Interesting Talk on Duties of Office

OUTSIDE AID

The third of a series of talks being given to the members of the Ward Four Improvement Society by the different city officials, took place in St. Jean's Hall Thursday evening before a large attendance of members. The speaker of the evening was James H. Elcock, Overseer of the Poor, who delivered a most interesting and instructive discourse on the "Duties of the Overseer of the Poor."

The chairman of the evening was the president, Stephen B. Little, who praised the efficiency noticeable in Mr. Elcock's department, and portrayed the beneficial results that had accrued through the assiduous efforts of the overseer during his term of office.

Mr. Elcock gave an extended account of all the duties incumbent upon his office. and adduced many inferences as well, bearing on the care and treatment of those who are in need of help.

The settlement law, which was termed by the speaker, as a most complicated one, was explained in detail. Mr. Elcock brought forth numerous cases where the question of settlement was determined on a point of establishment He told of the settlements that were valid and invalid, and then proceeded to show the part the relationship to a father,

WOLLASTON GIRL BEATS FIVE-DAY MARRIAGE LAW

Refused License in Boston Couple Make Hurried Auto Trip to New York

Corinne E. Barbour Becomes the Bride of Sheldon M. Booth

Quincy people are interested in the alleged elopement of Miss Corinne Estelle Barbour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Barbour of Grand View avenue of the Brockton-Rand Company, leather merchants of Brockton and Sheldon M. Booth the youthful president of the International Automobile association.

It is said that the young couple applied for marriage license last Tuesday and for the first time learned of the new law which obliged them to wait a week before the license could be issued. It is said that Booth then declared that the only thing to do was to go to New York and that he would take one of his cars and go over. His plan evidently met with favor on the part of the would be bride for it is alleged that the trip was made, the marriage taking place immediately.

According to reported interview the bride's mother says she did not understand why if her daughter wished to get married she did not do so at home and the why is explained by the bride who said, "It was our intention to get married without fuss or feathers. And then we found that the Massachusetts Legislature had enacted a foolish law which makes it necessary to wait five days after serving notice of your desires before you can get a license."

The first word of the elopement and marriage came in a telegram to the parents of the bride, who left immediately for New York. A representative of the Ledger called at the Barbour home on Grand View avenue Thursday evening and found that Mr. and Mrs. Barbour had suddenly left for New York. The servant who answered the door bell could give no other information.

The bride is a very pronounced brunette and very vivacious. She is a graduate of the Quincy Mansion school of the class of 1906 and of Smith college class of 1911. The groom lives at the Tech chambers. He is 23 years of age. He is the son of William M. and Ada Sheldon Booth of Chicago and an enthusiastic automobilist as is also his bride.

OPEN MEETING NEXT SUNDAY.

The Men and Religion movement will soon be the principal topic of discussion in this city for the opening meetings of the big campaign come Sunday. The conference for leaders in Boys' Work and the committees of five older boys from each church in the Quincy district will be held at 3.30, Sunday afternoon in Bethany chapel.

A message will be given to the workers by one of the leaders in the big campaign and a start will be made in waking up the boys of Quincy and vicinity to the importance of their part of the program.

Announcements will be made about the meetings in Ford hall on Friday and Saturday of next week and advertising matter for the big mass meeting in Y. M. C. A. hall on Sunday, the 21st, will be distributed.

All boys in the city, fifteen years of age or over, whether regularly appointed delegates or not are cordially invited to attend this conference and get into line in order to boom the movement during this coming week. Every boy in Quincy will want to get one of the Men and Religion banners which will be given out for distribution at the meeting next Sunday afternoon.

INTERVIEWS GOVERNOR.

Mayor Stone and Senator Barnes called upon Governor Foss Thursday and the Mayor had quite a talk with His Excellency on local matters. They called incidently to speak a good word for the reappointment of Mr. Whitney of Milton as a member of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Chicago wished sincerely that all its police officers were as good as they are beautiful.

The western governors will at least have to admit that the East was a tip-top place to visit.

The thing we do not quite understand is why members of Congress do not vote themselves pensions.

Sweet old simple living on the plain substantial things of life doesn't cost any more than it used to long ago.

Oil has gone up in price, perhaps because it costs more to keep all those octopups in separate kennels.

There may be many occasions in the Senate when the balance of power will be held by the Smiths. It now has five.

An internal revenue report says that last year there were nearly 8,000,000,000 cigars smoked in this country. Holy smoke!

Having passed the national insurance bill the British lords doubtless regard themselves as confirmed progressives.

Kansas, with the "largest per capita of wealth," cannot have been investing very heavily in the wildcat stock schemes of other states.

Many single men will feel better about Leap year on learning that they are permitted to decline on presenting the proposer with a new silk gown.

After encountering the chilly atmosphere of the dining rooms, the non-tipping commercial travellers must be reminded of one of their winter trips up in Manitoba.

When the desirability of a western running mate for Mr. Taft is suggested, it may as well be understood at the outset that no reference is intended to Mr. La Follette.

The legislators listening to the governors' inaugurals must feel like a very small boy when his father presents him with a hoe and leads him out to a very large corn-field.

It is complained that the poor can't afford overshoes during the sloppy weather, because wealthy people use the rubber all up in automobile tires. But just think of how the country constables are putting in new sideboards and oriental rugs!

The February Baseball Magazine has just arrived at our office. It contains an instructive story on the big league magnates; a few "remarks" on the American League by "Chubby" Charles Murphy, owner of the Chicago Cubs; some timely boxing dope on Li'l Arthur Johnson including some entirely new reminiscences of his early career. In addition the magazine still prints news from the leading colleges, and contains this month a special feature in the form of a new and fascinating serial detective story.

INAUGURATED IN A DERBY.

A mild sensation was caused when Gov. Foss of Massachusetts, who is being groomed as a dark horse for the Democratic presidential nomination, walked from his home three miles distant to the statehouse to be inaugurated, wearing a derby hat. Other domes of thought, the reporter informs us, were surmounted by high hats.

Now our readers will differ on the question as to why Gov. Foss took this momentous step. Some will look at it as a militant defiance flung at the minions of aristocracy. Others will consider that it was all a card in a political game which the governor is playing for high stakes, that as the non-high hat wearers are in an enormous majority, he finds it good politics to arraign himself on their side.

However that may be, it does seem that the trend of the times is away from the high hat. It may do very well for titled England as a companion piece to decayed peerages. There the man of the classes must have some means to distinguish himself from the man of the masses.

In our country the high hat is mostly pushed to the two extremes of the social scale. The Four Hundred finds its glamor necessary to keep up the illusion of superior prestige. The youth of downy cheek just out of "prep" school finds it helps him believe in his own maturity and manhood.

On the other hand, the high hat, in some last stages of decreptiude, is in favor with Indian doctors, circus agents, and the more decadent type of real estate man and insurance agent. No matter how ruffled it may be by long exposure to weather, no matter how many regimes of style may have risen and fallen since its hey-day, the circus agent thinks it places him in the Bohemian world of artists, and the declining agent that it makes him a captain of industry.

But go down into the throbbing heart of some great city any morning, full of men who do large things, and patrician pretensions of the high hat give way to the smooth alert adaptibility of the derby or soft hat.

The more man adapts himself to his surroundings, the less he wants in the way of superfluous decoration. When the Pole just over from Warsaw gets up a secret society, the gorgeousness of his regalia out-dazzles Solomon and all his glory, making the comparatively reticent street outfit of our Knights Templar look like mere working clothes.

ALL SOULS' MEN'S CLUB.

Those who braved the cold air and icy walking were amply repaid by the very enjoyable evening at the regular monthly supper of the All Souls' Men's Club, Braintree, held in the parish hall Wednesday evening. There was a large attendance and all did full justice to the very excellent menu which concluded with that ever delightful New England dish, baked Indian pudding.

President Morrison introduced as the first speaker of the evening, J. Sterling Kingsley, who is professor of zoology at Tufts college. Professor Kingsley gave a very learned talk, illustrated by stereopticon on "A study in evolution." His remarks were free from technicalities and he gave a most interesting discourse on birds, their evolution as it were from reptiles, showing a bird from an embryo in the egg to the full grown specimen. He showed on the screen many striking points of similarity between birds and reptiles and his explanation of the growth of the bird in the egg was highly interesting.

The professor is an eminent authority on his subject and has devoted many years of his life to researches in zoology and has written many books on the subject. His clear and concise description of the intricate workings of nature opened up a new field of wonders and brought to the minds of all a feeling of reverence for the marvels of creation.

Professor Kingsley was followed by Edward H. Forbush whose remarks were also illustrated by pictures on the screen. Mr. Forbush is the state ornithologist of Massachusetts and he supplemented the remarks of the previous speaker by telling of "The economic relations of birds and man."

Mr. Forbush is an entertaining and witty speaker and his audience would gladly have listened longer. He told among other things that certain birds consume twice their weight of worms or insects in 24 hours because their natural functions are much quicker than man's and therefore they require an enormous amount of food to develop the required energy. Should a man eat the corresponding amount of bologna sausage, for instance in the same time, he would consume a strip 57 feet long and 9 inches in diameter.

Mr. Forbush said that the birds who live on weed seeds save the farmers of this country over thirty-five million dollars annually. He described the millinery business as the greatest cause of bird slaughter that exists and stated that to satisfy the exactions of fashions so many birds were being killed as to threaten the extinction of some of the most useful species.

He described the forests and fields as being dependent on birds for their very life because the feathered denizens eat up all the injurious insects and small rodents. Mr. Forbush told of his experience in feeding birds and observing their habits and of how beneficial some of the game laws are. He gave many phases of this interesting subject and the time till he finished was all too short. The meeting was adjourned at ten o'clock after a most delightful evening.

DON'T FEEL BLUE.

Joe Cone.

Oh, I like to hear a fellow who will whistle at his work!
I like to hear a worker who will hum a little tune.
Ef a feller's got some music, why, he ain't so apt to shirk,
He can change a bleak December into mild and merry June.

What's the use o' feeling blue?
There is sunshine here fur you.
Life is mostly what you make it. Make it mellerlike an' true.
Care will often run away
Ef he find you're feelin' gay,
Open up your music, brother, an,' by thunder, let it play!

There's enough uv gloom an' sorrer uv the kind that hez to be.
Lots uv it's imaginary; you kin whistle it away.
When you see ol' trouble skulkin' in the lots behind a tree
Let him see you're merry-hearted. Put your record on an' play.

What's the use o' feelin' blue?
Natu's happylike an' true.
Help the world to be more cheerful an' twill do the same fur you.
Blue is all right in the sky,
All right in a maiden's eye,
But don't git it in your system. It will kill you by an by.

The Stickleback Legend.

The stickleback is one of the species of fish that build nests. There is a legend that the stickleback builds a nest because during the deluge it pulled the tow out of the bilge hole of the ark, and if it had not been for the hedgehog, who plugged up the leak with his own body, Noah and his sons would have had an exciting time baling out their boat. When Noah found out who had done the deed he ordered as a punishment that the culprit should be compelled each year to build a nest, while other fishes would have an easy time of it.

BULL LINER ON ROCKS

Revenue Cutters and Life Savers Are Standing by the Carolyn

Rockland, Me., Jan. 12.—The Bull line steamer Carolyn, from Stockton Springs for New York, with 1500 tons of potatoes and paper on board, is still hard and fast on the north end of Metinic ledge, off White Head, at the western entrance of Penobscot bay.

The revenue cutters Woodbury and Androscoggin, with the life saving crews from the White Head and Burnt Island stations, are standing by and the steamer's crew is still on board. The Carolyn's engines are kept turning, so as to keep the steamer's bow on the rocks where she struck.

Her forward compartment is full of water, but she is sheltered from the moderate northwest wind whin is blowing. Should the wind shift to any other quarter, however, before the steamer floats, her position would be dangerous.

DECREE OF DRESSMAKERS

Skirts Must Be Wider Than the Hobble and Must Be Short

Chicago, Jan. 12.—This is what American women will wear the coming season as disclosed by the Style congress held here by the Ladies' Tailors and Dressmakers' Association of America:

No hobble skirt. Dresses must be two and a half yards wide, three-fourths of a yard wider than the hobble. They must be short—three inches from the ground. Blue and white are the colors, and the materials whipcords. Jackets are to be 26 and 28 inches long, and close fitting. Empire effects must be forgotten. If any waist-line is affected, it must be "at the waist or lower." Revers and sailor collars will remain, but collars will be different colored than the coats. No changes are ordered in plain tailored gowns or suits.

BAND OF HOPE AND HELPING HANDERS

Hopkins Apple Barrel Also Figures In Lorimer Probe

Washington, Jan. 12.—Details of the Band of Hope, the Hopkins Helping Handers and the Hopkins Apple Barrel, all things more of less synonymous with Republican politics in Illinois in the senatorial contests of 1908 and 1909, were told by Senator Lorimer before the committee of senators investigating his election.

It was Lorimer's third day as a witness and his testimony had reached only the ground-work stage. Counsel on both sides expressed the opinion that his cross-examination might not be reached before Saturday. Members of the investigating committee are taking a leading part in the inquiry.

Senator Lorimer gives complete answers and insists on explaining contributing incidents. Frequently when a question is asked he says: "I think I had better tell you the story it goes with that." Then he recites events which have political significance to the point in question.

HUSBAND CAUSES ARRESTS

Eloping Wife Is Forgiven and Returns to Her Home Repentant

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 12.—Sorrowful and repentant, Mrs. Bertha W. Carr, 25, wife of Fred W. Carr, a member of the Carr Concrete Construction company of Worcester, returned with her husband last evening to their home in that city.

Mrs. Carr was arrested with W. C. Proctor, manager of a sewing machine company office. Carr followed his wife to this city and made the complaint against her. The case of Mrs. Carr and Proctor were continued to March 1 and the bonds fixed at $300 each in the district court.

Mrs. Carr has a 20-months-old child in Worcester and Proctor, who came here from that city, has a wife and two children. Carr has forgiven his wife.

HELLO GIRLS SEARCHED

It Results In Reapparance of Missing Bag and Money

Brockton, Mass., Jan. 12.—The reported theft of a silver mesh bag containing several dollars, the property of Miss Ethel Wright, a telephone operator, caused a big commotion in the local exchange of the Southern Massachusetts Telephone company and head officials had considerable trouble before they were able to get twenty hello girls to submit to a search.

While the girls were being searched one by one, in a private room, the bag was mysteriously returned to its owner.

Hundred Days For Spanking Wife

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 12.—Charles Bulouis began a jail sentence of 100 days here for spanking his 16-year-old wife with a strap. Bulouis told Judge Green, who sentenced him, that he thought this was a free country and he believed he had a right to spank his wife if he wanted to.

Q.—Is the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest" true; and is it in harmony with the teachings of the Scriptures? (Troglodyte.)

Answer.—The combined testimony of the evidence in nature, aside from the inspired revelations of the Scriptures, is opposed to the theory of the best surviving the worst. In the realm of vegetation it is universally recognized that the finest flowers, fruits and vegetables, are produced only by the utmost care in training and cultivation. These fine varieties, if left to themselves, quickly deteriorate in quality or,else are entirely overcome by the weeds, thorns and briars. Does not this same principle hold in the animal kingdom? High-bred horses, dogs, and cattle, if left without the guiding hand of man, quickly degenerate into lower breeds, or else are entirely destroyed by inferior species of animals. This same principle is true with the races of men, as all history demonstrates, and as foretold in the Scriptures. Beginning with the Babylonian Empire, when it had reached to the very zenith of its glory, it fell in one night, yielding to the inferior kingdom of the Medes and Persians. These in turn yielded to the Greeks. Then Greece with all her learning succumbed to the inferior Latin races. And who is not familiar with the history of Rome which arose on the ruins of Greece? In the shattered remains of the Roman Empire, the modern nations of Europe and America, another mighty civilization has reared its crest to a vast height, and is doomed to destruction. (See Daniel iii, 31-45.) This present evil world, with its conditions of "the survival of the worst," is to pass away; and on its ruins will be established a new order of things, called "The world to come wherein dwelleth righteousness," in which "the survival of the fittest" will be absolutely true.—II Peter iii, 13.

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"THE NEVER HOMES."

"The Never Homes," the latest and one of the most spectacular of all the musical entertainments presented by Lew Fields will be the attraction at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, for the two weeks beginning Monday. The piece comes to Boston direct from the Broadway Theatre, New York, where it has just completed a run of fourteen weeks.

Like all the other "Lew Fields shows," "The Never Homes" is a merry mixture of musical comedy and burlesque, of irresponsible nonsense and delicious burlesque, staged with sumptuous lavishness and interpreted by a company of more than a hundred. Its story concerns conditions which exist in the fictitious city of Lillydale following the capturing of all the town offices by the women, and is a playful satire on the woman suffrage movement. Charming young women replace the regular male policemen, firemen and "white wings" and the city's affairs are conducted under the watchful eye of a female political boss, Patricia Flynn by name. The stage settings are unusually elaborate, including views of the public square of Lillydale on election day, interior of court house, Patricia Flynn's laundry and interior of engine houses. In the last mentioned scene a practical steamer and horses are shown. There will be the regular matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

JOHN DREW "A SINGLE MAN."

John Drew will be seen next week at the Hollis Street Theatre in "A Single Man," a delightful new comedy which has as its corner-stone a baby's cradle. The baby in the cradle does not belong to Mr. Drew. The baby belongs to Mr. Drew's sister-in-law in the play and she puts it in the study of the "Single Man," who is author. As usual, Mr. Davies has devised one captivating scene that always touches the hearts of the spectators to a very genuine degree. Then too, there is the usual sprightly dialogue for which all his plays are noted, notably "Cousin Kate" and "the Mollusk."

"The Single Man" is Robin Worthington. What with the influence of Spring and the sight of his brother and sister-in-law's happiness with their baby, he determines that matrimony is just what he wants. The sister-in-law, Mrs. Worthington thinks the same and brings down a friend of hers, Louise Parker, who is also desirous— very — of attaining wedded bliss. Robin however, has been inconsiderate enough to get engaged to Maggie Cottrell, a high-spirited, tomboyish young lady, who is obviously the very last person in the world he ought to marry. Maggie and her riotous young friend give the bridegroom-elect the time of his life. Suddenly he realizes that the real wife for him is his secretary, Miss Haseltine, a little woman of rare tact and character, and above all a woman who loves him devotedly. It is an awkward situation and one which sparkles with comedy and an excellent opportunity for Mr. Drew's distinguished company. The part of the secretary is played by Mary Boland, well known as Mr. Drew's leading woman. Louise Drew, his daughter, is the youthful sister-in-law, who wanted the hero married to a woman of suitable age. Thais Lawton is the designing spinster, and Carroll McComas the youthful fiancee whose alluring prettiness is designed to capture middle age just as it would in life.

BABY MINE.

Boston has not seen just such a genuine comedy success in years as "Baby Mine," which enters on its third big week at the Majestic theatre next Monday. It kept New York laughing for a year. There is no question about the quantity of fun or the quality of it in "Baby Mine." It is a comedy that does not depend upon buffoonery but rather on its ludicrous situations, which are frequent and natural. The beauty of it all is the quick action and human interest absurdities that crowd each other from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Miss Margaret Mayo, the author of "Baby Mine" conceived the idea of the play from an inspiration gained from a newspaper article that hundreds of men in Chicago are the proud although deceived possessors of adopted infants and that is the story upon which the comedy is built. "Baby Mine" is really an international comedy, as it is now in its second year and is being played to wonderful business at Sir Charles Wyndham's Criterion Theatre, London England.

MAY IRWIN AT PLYMOUTH.

May Irwin is dispensing three acts of contagious mirth at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. She begins Monday the last week of her New England engagement in her newest farce, "She Knows Better Now" which was written for her by Agnes L. Crimmins of Radcliffe College. Miss Irwin's newest offering has been declared to be the best vehicle she has had in many seasons. The authoress has selected woman's weakness for buying costly things abroad, and the neglecting to pay duty, as her theme for satrization. It is needles to say that this jolly comedienne, who just bubbles with good nature, makes the most of the opportunities supplied by the author, and indeed, furnishes many joyous moments on her own account. The Boston papers say of the offering: "In 'She Knows Better Now', Miss Crimmins has provided the best laughing material for Miss Irwin's fun that she has had for years."—Monitor. "Miss Irwin earns lots of laughter."—Globe. "The long absent star got a reception that must have warmed the cockles of her heart."—Journal. The engagement will end Saturday night, Jan. 20th. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The fourth week of "The Wizard of Oz" begins at the Castle Square on Monday. The general opinion seems to be that this is the best of John Craig's four annual holiday productions, and its continuation to large audiences every afternoon and evening is sufficient evidence of its popularity. One critic has well said: "As a specialist in Christmas shows, as well as in many other delightful things of the theatre, John Craig has few competitors." Every year he has surpassed previous efforts, and this year he has even bettered every possible expectations that arose from "The Circus Girl" "1915." and "Jack and the Beanstalk" To have brought these Christmas plays into being was a great achievement, but to have brought them to such astounding popularity was even greater. And the cast of "The Wizard of Oz." It could not be better. It includes, with Mary Young at its head, the full strength of Mr. Craig's company, and with its large chorus it is bringing this famous musical extravaganze to a renewal of its success.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Mabel Hite the clever little comedienne and late star of "A Certain Party," will make her first appearance this season at B. F. Keith's Theatre next week in a new act written especially for her, in which she is assisted by Thomas Kelly. Miss Hite is appearing this season without the assistance of her husband, Mike Donlin, that mighty batsman. She sings a number of songs written by herself including "You're Going to Lose Your Husband If You Do," "I really Hate to Talk About Myself," "Get a Girl From the Emerald Isle," and "Billy's Very Good To Me." Miss Hite will incidentally wear some of the most wonderful dress creations seen in Boston this year, designed by herself, that are bound to turn every woman in the audience green with envy. Joe Welch, the famous Hebrew and Italian character comedian, returns with new songs and stories; and a newcomer will be Little Lord Roberts, a tiny mite of humanity who is despite his limited size, a veritable pocket edition of Beau Brummell. Lord Roberts sings and dances in the most amusing fashion, making his entrance from a tiny crib clad in a pair of cute litle pajamas. Other big features will be Haydn, Borden and Haydn, a really different rathskeller trio with songs, dances and pianoisms; Covington and Wilbur in an original protean playlet entitled "The Parsonage;" Richards and Montroso, college boy and the athletic girl; and the 3 Josettys, European comedy acrobats.

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY.

The usual Tuesday rehearsal will be omitted next week, the last regular rehearsal before the Golden Legend concert of January 23 being announced for the folowing Sunday afternoon. Interest all through the season has been keen and friends of the singers anticipate hearing a splendid performance. The value of a season's study in music of this class cannot be over estimated. The power of chorus singing to uplift the singer mentally, morally and physically, is always felt at once by the understanding listener. Its power for good in any community is on a level with the highest philanthropies. One is almost as happy to sing with a chorus of entire strangers as with the most intimate of friends, for the blending of voices forms an intimacy of spirit that drives away all feeling of restraint and forms a fellowship with one's neighbor scarcely understood by those unfortunates who cannot sing.

As every singing society must draw its members from all walks of life, for the Giver of Good Gifts is no respector of persons, it is wise for any organization devoted to this art to have behind it sufficient financial and social support to assure its longevity; for once started, in these days of "canned music" and the general tendency to avoid doing anything that can be done for us, no work of this kind should be allowed to stop for want of financial support. It is too valuable to the community. Our own society recognized these things in the beginning, starting with a guarantors' list of fifty members, which they have since enlarged.

With a record of three seasons' splendid work, first class concerts, expensive soloists, orchestra and all the attractive details of artistic circulars, programs, etc., etc., the society has so far proved self-supporting, the guarantors never having been called upon to fulfill their yearly obligations. This speaks well for our city and is much more than the executive board dared hope for in the beginning. It encourages these indefatigable workers to new efforts in behalf of music in Quincy and those who know them best feel sure that the Quincy Choral Society will in time become one of the most prosperous singing societies in the country.

The guarantors for this year are: Brooks Adams, Amos D. Albee, Albert L. Barbour, William R. Bateman, Paul R. Blackmur, George H. Brown, Clarence Burgin, James F. Burke, Dr. E. H. Bushnell, Joseph Carruthers, Richard D. Chase, D. L. F. Chase, Joseph A. Dasha, Mrs. William H. Dole, Herbert T. Drake, Mrs. Herbert T. Drake, Henry M. Faxon, Thomas Fenno, George H. Field, Dr. John A. Gordon, Charles L. Griswold, Mrs. Otho A. Hayward, Charles C. Hearn, James D. Howlett, Eugene C. Hultman, Dr. N. S. Hunting, Delcevare King, John W. McAnarney, Mrs. George W. Morton, Arthur S. Newcomb, Weston W. Osborne, Edward J. Parker, Frank S. Patch, Charles F. Pettingill, Mrs. William B. Rice, Elmer F. Ricker, Joseph A. Sedgwick, William G. Shaw, Hon. William T. Shea, Dr. George M. Sheahan, Eben W. Sheppard, Frederick H. Smith, H. Gerrish Smith, Hon. Eugene R. Stone, William R. Thomas, Rev. Rufus B. Tobey, Dr. John F. Welch, L. Dowley Williams, T. L. Williams, Mrs. George H. Wilson and James F. Young.

COMPOSERS' RECITALS.

A species of concerts, new to Boston, but familiar to European capitals is to be tried during the present month under the auspices of the Boston Music Company. The concert to be given Saturday afternoon Jan. 27, in Jordan hall is styled a composers' recital, designed like similar concerts abroad to bring composers of ability and their works into prominence. The composers will perform some of the work, while others will be sung or played by resident singers and virtuosi who deserve, like the music, to be better known.

Among the composers at the recital will be Arthur Shepherd, Frederick S. Converse, Henry Eichheim, Heinrich Gebhard, Gustav Strube, T. Adamowski and Ch. M. Loeffler. The assisting musicians will be Miss Bessie Bell Collier and Mrs. Florence Stevens Low.

WARD FOUR SOCIETY

grandfather, or mother, played in the settlement question.

In order to have the settlement legitimate a man seeking aid should have resided, asserted the speaker, in this city for at least five years, during three of which he should have been a poll tax payer. He then went on to tell the overlappings that frequently occur in the departments of the state and city jurisdictions over the poor department.

The most minute points and technicalities involved in the proceedings of the poor department were placed before his auditors, and Mr. Elcock gave numerous instances where men, even though they had resided here for a number of years, could not become entitled to city aid through violation of certain conformities required by law.

The case of a woman's settlement was duly discussed. Mr. Elcock said that it devolved upon the overseer of the poor to make a survey of all cases of applicants desirous of aid, irrespective of whether the petitions are licit or illicit. The portions disbursed for the poor by both city and state were carefully compared and the relative share of each was depicted in diverse cases.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Elcock said, "It is a noticeable fact, and one too of which we may feel justly proud, that the city of Quincy never divulges the names of those who receive aid through the poor department, and only a short while ago, information in this regard was withheld from state officials who had asked for the names of those whom the city had assisted."

The matter of outside alms was presented as was also the matter of temporary aid. Mr. Elcock then spoke of the Almshouse, and laid down the necessity of having inmates guided by a discipline, which should be adhered to in order to insure harmony among all, and a systematic conducting of affairs. He said that the task of caring for those in the Almshouse was by no means an easy one, and that it demanded much consideration and attention on the part of those in charge.

The speaker then took up the care of the poor in the hospitals, and also the assistance rendered the poor in securing employment. Besides, through the efforts of the poor department, the sentence given an unfortunate prisoner has oftentimes been shortened, and work of a humanitarian nature has often been exerted along similiar lines.

Mr. Elcock closed by explaining the Johnson fund for Thanksgiving dinners and was given a rising vote of thanks when he concluded his remarks. He was asked several questions at the close of his address, but submitted to them all without the slightest reluctance.

Ex-Councilman John D. Smith was in the audience and was forced to reply to many questions bearing on the water meters and water system of the city. He readily responded on each occasion and evidently enlightened a number on the water situation.

Refreshments brought a most entertaining meeting to a close.

DANCING FROCKS.

Changeable Taffeta Frocks — the Vogue of Red—Bead Trimmings—New Bordered Cottons.

At this time of year great demands are made on all the daintiest pieces of a girl's outfit, and almost anyone is glad to know of new ways to wear dress-up fixings, and new wrinkles to freshen up much used frocks.

RED EVENING GOWNS.

The most popular color for evening wear is undoubtedly red. Many and various are the shades used but geranium is probably first favorite with rose and terra cotta almost as popular. Soft white satin makes the close-fitting narrow foundation, and this is often trimmed elaborately with lace with red chiffon veiling the whole. Sometimes black Chantilly lace trims the red, or jet fringes and beads are used to give contrast and style. Veilings of "Parme" or deep violet are also often used over the white satin and the latter frequently has a veiling of white chiffon or muslin under the chiffon to soften the color effect. A touch of gold trimming is excellent with violet, or a bit of ermine fur. With other colorings one of the favorite trimmings consists of beads matching the chiffon closely in color. These outline the neck and edge the hems.

BORDERED FABRICS.

The new cottons and foulards show a great variety of bordered patterns. Silk and cotton weaves have fringes of the silk and some of the most striking borders among the foulards imitate Spanish lace. Black on a gold ground was particularly effective. All these make very pretty gowns for informal gayeties, gowns that can be worn under a long, warm all enveloping coat, for luncheons, card parties or little dances now and will make the prettiest sort of dresses for more general use next summer.

LONG COATS.

Long coats of many sorts have not been so generally worn for many years as this season. The double faced woolen cloths have found a place in nearly everybody's outfit from school girl to grandmother. The only trouble with them is that they have become too popular. Some of the double-faced garments made of velvet or corduroy lined with cloth in pastel colors, or with satin are more distinctive, and where these have fur trimmings they are very handsome. Almost all the long coats have overlapping fronts, which adds not only to their style but makes them warm and conceals the frock completely.

FUR GARMENTS.

The long fur coat is a most desirable possession now that we are to have the winter weather so long delayed. No other coat is at once so serviceable, handsome in appearance, and suitable for day or evening wear. Such garments may represent any amount from several hundreds to the price of a nice cloth garment, and are of course much prettier when having a nice collar of contrasting fur though a plain coat may be made dressy by being worn with a contrasting set of muff and collar. Now that black and white is the tip of the mode, the girls are wearing black fox with white suits and white fox with black costumes. At C. C. Shaynes the other day I was surprised to see the figures at which even their imported model coats were offered, and the same reductions marked the small pieces shown so that one could save from one-third to one-fourth over the prices a few weeks since. This is because first-class stores here do not intend to carry over stock from season to season. One can pick up genuine bargains on all sides if only one is a judge of quality and style.

CHANGEABLE TAFFETAS.

Frocks of changeable taffeta are being worn by smart dressers here and in Paris for all sorts of functions. and these will be very fashionable next spring and summer. They are made with the usual narrow skirt but are otherwise copies of dresses worn when Queen Victoria was young. Nearly all have fichus either of embroidered lawn or lace trimmed lawn, or of the silk itself edged with scant ruffles finished with a row of narrow black velvet or having the edges finished with picked out fringe. The skirts have ruffles to match and these are often put on in draped scallops like an apron or overskirt.

The prettiest colorings have a tinge of red in their weaving, terra cotta in one light, cherry in another, or red and blue and brown playing together, or gray with flashes of red and green. All are made walking length and sleeves are long or half long as preferred. But all the ruffles are flat and scant so that there is no touch of tre bouffantry of our great grandmothers.

A BIT OF NAVAL HISTORY.

Origin of the Corps of Professors of Mathematics.

Before the Naval academy was established midshipmen received their education entirely on board ship. Their technical education was obtained in the school of experience, helped out occasionally by the voluntary efforts of the older line officers. Their general education was at first neglected, but later instructors were appointed for service on ships that carried midshipmen. These were appointed by the secretary of the navy for stated periods, much as civilian instructors at the Naval academy are appointed at the present time. In 1842 a general order was issued providing that they should live and mess with lieutenants. They were commissioned in 1848, but specific rank was not given them until the general reorganization of all staff corps during the civil war.

The late Professor H. H. Lockwood, U. S. N., in some very interesting reminiscences read before the Naval Academy Graduates' association in 1893 relates how the corps of professors of mathematics came to be formed. In the early days of the Naval academy he was one of its instructors. He had had service in the army, and in the development of the course of instruction he determined, after consultation with the superintendent, to give the midshipmen a little infantry drill. This did not suit the proud spirits of the young gentlemen of that day, and to show their disapproval of this and other efforts of the professor they hung him in effigy. An investigation and a court martial followed on the charge of insulting a superior officer.

The defense put up the plea that the instructor was not a superior officer. Such a condition is hard to understand at this time, when the status of officers, instructors and midshipmen at the Naval academy is well defined, but at that time midshipmen were officers, while instructors had no official standing. The plea was technically correct, and to punish the guilty midshipmen it was found necessary to substitute charges in which the anomalous position of the professor in the naval service could not be made to enter. Upon these the guilty midshipmen were condemned and punished.

This incident led to an amendment in the naval appropriation bill of 1848 giving authority for the commissioning of twelve professors of mathematics.—Commander U. T. Holmes in Engineering Magazine.

A Simple Get-rich-quick Scheme.

Take 1,000,000 cats and get rich quick. This is the advice of the Liberte of Paris to its readers. The prescription is quite simple. A million cats will supply you with 12,000,000 kittens a year. The skins are worth a little over 28 cents each, so there you have a daily gross revenue of about $10,000. To skin the cats you will have to employ 100 men, who will charge you $2 per fifty cats. Your net revenue will thus be reduced to about $9,000 a day. It should cost you nothing to feed your cats. Start a rattery. Rats breed four times as fast as cats, so the cats can have a daily diet of four rats apiece, which is ample. To feed the rats is perfectly simple. Give them the skinned cats. One cat will be ample for four rats. The scheme works out simply and automatically. The cats eat the rats, the rats eat the cats, and you have the skins.

LURE OF THE LAW.

The Craze For Litigation Is America's Most Costly Folly.

If one were asked to name the costliest folly known in this country he would not be far from the mark if he should say it was the American craze for litigation.

In some communities, especially the small ones in rural districts, a man's importance seems to be measured by the number of lawsuits he has on hand, and he who has none is often regarded as a person of slight consequence.

But the habit of going to law is not confined to small neighborhoods nor to persons of trifling affairs, as a single instance will show. There is now in process of settlement in a neighboring state the estate of a man which at the time of his death was valued at $1,000,000. Rival claimants to the property engaged in litigation, which has extended over a period of several years, and now, as the end approaches, it is said the estate has dwindled to about $23,000.

Manifestly the parties to this litigation have made a heavy investment in experience; but, unhappily for them, it is not what financiers call a "liquid asset."—Pocket.

The Kitchen Cupboard

BEAN DISHES FOR WINTER.

IN winter, when fresh vegetables are high and hard to get, beans may be substituted to advantage.

Beans are an especially good food for winter, for they contain a very large proportion of carbon, which is heat producing.

For those who do not care for meat, and in these days very many persons are joining the ranks of the semi-vegetarians, beans are a strengthening food. The fact that they contain so much nitrogen should recommend them as muscle builders in place of meat.

Dried Beans.

Besides the standard baked beans there are a number of nutritious dishes that can be prepared from dried beans.

Bean Loaf.—Clean and soak a pint of navy beans in water overnight. Pour off the water and put into a pan with three or four slices of pork fat. Place the pan in the oven and cook until the beans are tender. Take out and let cool; then chop the pork fine as well as the beans and add a little melted butter, a tablespoonful of milk or cream, a well beaten egg and half the bulk of breadcrumbs. Pour over this enough bean broth to make moist and press into well greased square or oblong molds and bake until brown. This may be sliced for sandwiches or served on a platter with sprigs of parsley.

Dainty, Yet Nourishing.

Bean Croquettes.—This is a nice luncheon dish. Wash, soak and boil until they are tender about a pint of navy beans. Press the beans through a colander. Then add a tablespoonful of molasses, vinegar and butter. Season with a dash of herbs if you prefer. Add salt and pepper to suit. Form into small cakes, dip in yolk of egg and then in cracker crumbs and fry in boiling fat. Drain on paper and serve on thin slices of toasted bread garnished with watercress.

Baked With Sausages.

Sausage Beans.—Beans taste well cooked with any kind of pork, so it is not surprising that beans baked with sausages should be popular. Take a pint of the navy beans, soak overnight, wash and drain. Boil until tender, but not broken. Pour off the water and place the beans in a shallow earthenware baking dish. Lay links of sausage on top of the dish. Moisten with about a pint of hot water seasoned with a teaspoonful of salt. Bake in the oven until well browned.

Anna Thompson.

The Seeing Eye.

I know a man who has lived on one farm half a century. He sleeps in the room in which he was born. He knows every rod of his farm in the dark. Yet his lambs and his pigs, the velvety roll of new sprouting wheat, the procession of the seasons, the apple trees he planted and has watched for years—all are new to him each day. I have seen him stand and look at his sheep as if he were a city man long shut out from such sights. A sunset or a sunrise is to him a miracle new performed each day. That man has the seeing eye.—Detroit News.

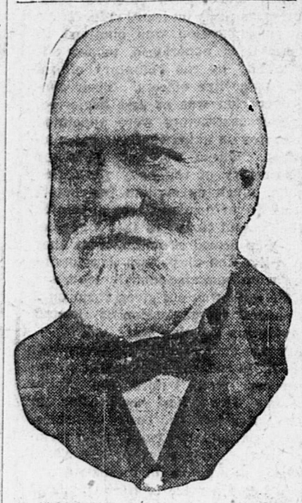
ANDREW CARNEGIE

Admits Recommending Knox For Cabinet Post



CARNEGIE INDORSED KNOX

Urged His Former Counsellor's Appointment to Cabinet

Washington, Jan. 12.—Andrew Carnegie, when pressed hard by the members of the house committee of inquiry into the United States Steel corporation, admitted that he recommended the appointment of Philander C. Knox, the present secretary of state, as attorney general in President McKinley's cabinet in 1901, Knox having been one of the chief councillors for the Carnegie Steel company since 1890, when the Sherman anti-trust law was passed.

Carnegie has repeatedly told the committee that he never knew that the participation of his company in the steel plate pool and other like pools was unlawful, and Representative McGillicuddy sought to show that he recommended Knox's appointment to McKinley after the former, as counsel for his company, had left him in ignorance of the federal statutes for so many years.

The ironmaster was given an uncomfortable half hour by McGillicuddy, and he is to be recalled.

25,000 OPERATIVES MAY BE AFFECTED

500 Have Already Quit Work In Lawrence Mills

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 12.—Five hundred weavers and spinners in the Everett, Arlington and Lawrence Duck company mills went out yesterday afternoon when they found that they were paid for the fifty-four-hour week instead of the fifty-six-hour week. Last night the Industrial Workers of the World, with which most of the textile workers of this city are affiliated, held an informal meeting to discuss the matter.

No definite action by the organization as a whole was taken, but it was reported that 1000 Italian spinners employed in the Ayer, Wood, Washington and Arlington mills would go out today, which is their pay day, if they found that their pay had been reduced. Between 20,000 and 25,000 operatives may be affected.

A meeting of the organization is scheduled for tonight at which some definite step by the industrial workers as an organization will be discussed. Persons close to the mill situation in this city say that the city faces one of the biggest strikes in its history.

WILEY TALKS TO DAIRYMEN

Tells Them Women Folks Should Have as Good Care as Cows

Burlington, Vt., Jan. 12.—"Your women folks are just as important as your cows and should have at least as good care," said Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the United States department of agriculture, to the members of the Vermont Dairymen's association at their closing session here last night.

Dr. Wiley told the dairymen that a bathtub with hot and cold running water in the house was just as important and no more expensive than a silo for the cows.

DECLARED A SUICIDE

Theory of Foul Play In Lambert Case Is Dispelled

Westford, Mass., Jan. 12.—The state police, who have been investigating the death of Lucy Lambert, aged 22, by strychnine, have come to the conclusion that the girl was a suicide.

It has been discovered that she had bought the strychnine herself and that she had made known her intention of committing suicide to her relatives.

RICHESON WILL STAND BY PLEA

His Counsel Will Refuse to Rely on Technicality

WON'T ASK WRIT OF ERROR

Plea of Guilty of First Degree Murder Was Made Just as It Was Intended It Should Be—Head of Theological Seminary, Who Was to Have Married Murderer to Miss Edmands, Scathingly Denounces Him

Boston, Jan. 12.—Attorney William A. Morse, in a statement issued last night, denied that any writ of error would be asked by Richeson's defending lawyers to prolong the fight for their client. He declared Richeson would plead to murder in the first degree again if necessary. Morse said:

"There will be no writ of error asked for in the Richeson case and there has been no understanding or agreement with the district attorney as to the final disposition of the case.

"These stories in the press have come about from a reported intimation of one of the justices of the supreme judicial court to the effect that a justice of the superior court could not permit a man to plead guilty to murder in the first degree without the formal sanction of a jury. From my investigation of the question, I do not believe that to be the law. I think a justice of the superior court can accept a plea of murder in the first degree without the sanction of a jury.

"I think Judge Sanderson took particular care to inquire of Richeson with reference to his particular case, and when Richeson made his plea of murder in the first degree he made it as he intended to make it and as counsel intended he should make it.

"If there is any error in this situation, and I do not believe that there is, Richeson, by his own willingness and sanctioned by his counsel, will again plead guilty to murder in the first degree.

"I think I should make this statement that there may be no public impression that he is attempting by technicalities to evade what he has desired so earnestly to do."

In a scathing denunciation of Richeson, delivered yesterday to the students of the Newton Theological seminary, of which the minister-murderer was a graduate, President Horr, who was to have solemnized the marriage of Richeson to Miss Violet Edmands, reviewed the sensational case.

He described Richeson as a scoundrel, a man convicted of colossal crimes and a traitor to God and man. The deepest sympathy was expressed for the families of Avis Linnell and Miss Edmands. Of the latter young woman he says he has no doubt that her moral revulsion against the murderer is complete.

Dr. Horr told of Richeson's desire to take a post-graduate course for the Master's degree and the refusal of the seminary authorities to let him because they felt that he was not of the proper mental calibre, although when he was graduated it was believed that he would make a faithful minister.

The faculty believed that Richeson was a young man of good character, but "barely of average mental capacity and attainments." After his graduation little was seen of him at his alma mater.

Dr. Horr pointed out the trust placed in ministers and said that a crime such as Richeson's is one of the most heinous. A minister must not be content with the man among men doctrine, but must rise above men. Regarding Richeson's repentance being genuine, the speaker expressed doubts. He said that the criminal must be left with his God.

There was nothing in the address of Horr which showed that there is any feeling except that of repugnance at the crime and sorrow that such a thing could be possible; no expression of a desire to save Richeson from the electric chair.

CHEATED UNCLE SAM

Rich Man Who Tries to Save a Cent Pays Fine and Costs

Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 12.—Because he tried to beat Uncle Sam out of a cent by sending through the mail a check and letter folded in a newspaper, F. J. Schaffer, a wealthy citizen of Hummelstown, and a member of the Dauphin county bar, was fined $20 by Judge Witmar in the United States court. He was also required to pay a bill of costs amounting to $80.

It was alleged that this was not the first time Schaffer had sent written messages through the mail in this way. The Hummelstown postmaster had warned him, but he continued the practice. Schaffer is said to be worth $75,000, and is prominent in Hummelstown church circles.

NOT GUILTY OF KIDNAPPING

Federal Judge Rules In Favor of Detective Burns

Indianapolis, Jan. 12.—Detective W. J. Burns was not guilty of the crime of kidnapping when he captured John J. McNamara here last April 22 and took him to California. Federal Judge Anderson said the case against Burns was without merit.

The action came up on Burn's petition in a habeas corpus proceeding for permanent release from an indictment by the Marion county grand jury charging him with kidnapping.

"If I or this court had had anything to do with the arrest of Burns in this instance, I should certainly now tender him an apology," said Judge Anderson in dismissing the indictments brought by the county grand jury, under which the detective had been held in $10,000 bail.

Judge Anderson complimented Burns for having "rendered a great service to his country."

PRINCETON'S NEW HEAD

Hibben Succeeds Wilson as President of the University

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 12.—Dr. John G. Hibben, Stuart professor of logic, was elected president of Princeton university by the board of trustees of the institution. He succeeds Woodrow Wilson, who resigned the presidency in the fall of 1910 to make the run for governor of New Jersey.

The new president was graduated from Princeton in 1882 and since 1891 has been a member of the faculty. He is popular with both the alumni and undergraduates and his election was received with joy by Princeton men. He has for years been a prominent educator and writer of philosophy and is president of the American Philosophical society and editor-in-chief of International Series of Philosophical Monograms.

SHUSTER POPULAR WITH THE PERSIANS

Given Great Send-Off as He Departs From Teheran

Teheran, Jan. 12.—Escorted by a troop of Russian Cossacks, W. M. Shuster, American ex-treasurer general of Persia, accompanied by his wife and family, left here for home. Shuster will return to the United States by way of Constantinople, Paris and London.

The trip from Teheran was made by caravan, and all attaches of the party were heavily armed for fear of an attack by Persian brigands.

Shuster's departure from the Persian capital brought about a striking demonstration of friendship on the part of the populace, who idolize the young American. Parties of men and women accompanied Shuster's party to the edge of the city. Some of them carried United States flags.

WILL END OPPOSITION

Twenty-Six Moros Killed by Americans on Island of Jolo

Manila, Jan. 12.—Twenty-six Moros were killed while they were attempting to ambush a body of American troops on the island of Jolo. In the course of the fighting Lieutenant McGee of the Second cavalry was shot twice and one American soldier was wounded.

Brigadier General Pershing, commander of the department of Mindanao, declares that he believes this fight will mark the end of the armed opposition of the Moros to American rule in the island of Jolo and more especially so in regard to the resistance against the order for general disarmament of the natives. The band of Moros who lay in ambush for the American troops on this occasion comprised, he says, the last of the remaining malcontents.

ODD BILL HITS BEACON HILL

Provides For School For Judges and Legislators

CURRICULUM A THOROUGH ONE

No Diploma Until After Year's Course, During Which Period Candidates Must Spend Time In Massachusetts Prisons and Slums and Ten-Cent Lodging Houses In Boston—Petition Is Admitted to House Files

Boston, Jan. 12.—The strangest bill that ever fought its way into the Massachusetts legislature won a place in the house files yesterday afternoon. It was presented by request by Representative Morrill of Haverhill on the petition of Morrison L. Swift, agitator and lecturer on social topics, and provides for the establishment of a school for judges and legislators.

The curriculum of the school is a thorough one. The student legislators and judges are required to spend five days and nights in different prisons of the state, to live one month in the slum districts of Boston, to pass two nights in the 10-cent lodging houses of Boston, to spend three successive nights in the Wayfarers' lodge on Hawkins street. The course required for securing a diploma is one year.

Those judges and legislators who are now in office may take the course upon petition to the governor and council. Those who do not petition may be examined by the governor and council. If recommended for the course, they must take it or retire from public office. The selection of teachers or professors for the school is not provided for, but a suggestion is made that they be elected each year at the state election.

When the bill was called to the attention of Speaker Cushing, he looked puzzled. It is explained that the speaker is quite prominent in the Associated Charities of Boston and that he felt considerable responsibility about the reference of the measure to a proper committee.

Mr. Cavanaugh of Everett thought that the new redistricting committee might take it, and provide that it be made applicable to congressmen, United States senators and to other state officials.

The bill was criticised severely and one man thought that the allotment of days in various places was too arbitrary. "Why," it was asked, "should there be one month in the slum district and only five days in jail?"

An amendment will be offered to make it one month in jail, one month in the Wayfarers' lodge, but only half an hour in a 10-cent lodging house, because more than half an hour might be attended with fatal results.

Mr. Swift has requested the use of the largest committee room at the state house for his hearing and expects a big crowd.

CRAWFORD HOUSE FAILS

Boston Hotel Popular With Canadians and "Down East" People

Boston, Jan. 12.—Henry Goodwin and George H. Rimbach, proprietors of the Crawford House, one of the best known hotels of the city, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, disclosing liabilities amounting to $96,268 and assets of $6800.

Immediately following the filing of the petition, Referee Olmstead of the United States bankruptcy court appointed C. M. Rimbach receiver under $6000 bonds, for the purpose of carrying on the business.

The hotel stands in Scollay square, at the corner of Court and Brattle streets, and is famous all through the Canadian provinces and "down east" as the stopping place of traveling people from that section and especially of horsemen.

EMPLOYES ARE BLAMED

Destruction of the Equitable Building Was Due to Carelessness

New York, Jan. 12.—"The official investigation of the Equitable building fire reveals pretty certainly that this disaster was caused by the careless throwing away of a match," reads a report submitted to Mayor Gaynor by Fire Commissioner Johnson.

"Our investigation indicates," the report continues, "that employes of the building discovered the fire at 5:14 a. m., and that they tried to fight the fire until 5:34 a. m., when a policeman turned in an alarm. If the employes of the building had called upon the fire department promptly, I am sure the fire could easily have been extinguished."

To Vote For Frye's Successor

Washington, Jan. 12.—Senator Gallinger gave notice that on Tuesday he will ask the senate to vote for a president pro tem to succeed the late Senator Frye. Since Senator Frye's resignation from the position April 27, 1911, there has been a deadlock over the selection of his successor.

Sheriff of Suffolk County Had Accumulated Estate of $140,000

Boston, Jan. 12.—The late Sheriff Fred H. Seavey, who was unmarried, left no will to dispose of his estate, which is estimated at $140,000. The property goes entire to his sister, Mrs. Belle A. Floyd, who is his nearest heir-at-law.

Mrs. Floyd filed a petition in the probate court seeking to be appointed administratrix of her brother's estate without the usual sureties. She also filed a bond for $200,000 in which she estimates the real property at $50,000 and the personal property at $90,000.

Fire Destroys Flannelette Factory

Oxford, Mass., Jan. 12.—The flannelette mill of A. Howard & Son at Howard village was totally destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at between $60,000 and $75,000. An overheated bearing started the fire.

Blackjacks.

The earliest drinking vessels for wines and ales were those made from skins of animals, and these vessels still retain their popularity in the east and on the continent. In England these vessels were made of carefully tanned hides which were unbreakable and possessed everlasting properties. The blackjacks, famed in song and story, were shaped like pitchers and were fashioned from one large piece of leather, which was curled in the necessary manner. Pitch was smeared over the inside. These old blackjacks gave their name to the heavy riding boots worn by cavaliers, which came to be called jackboots. Owing to the popularity of the blackjacks the French declared that the English drank out of their boots.—London Globe.

Gave Him the Limit.

"I'm licked!" sobbed the hobo, beating an undignified retreat from the back door at which he had bummed a handout.

"How do you mean—licked?" chorused his comrades. "Did she hit you wid a brick?"

"Worser'n dat."

"What? She didn't t'row—water on you?"

"Worser'n dat, fellers."

"What? Not boilin' water?"

"Even worser'n dat yet."

"Dere ain't nothin' worser."

"Yes, dere is. She t'rowed soapsuds on me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

AS FELLOW OF FAIR HARVARD

New Honor Is Thrust Upon Ambassador Bacon

RESIGNS HIS POST IN PARIS

Will Move Family to Boston, City of His Birth and Early Life—Success as Financier Gained Him Partnership In Firm of J. P. Morgan & Co.—Secretary of State Before Accepting Position In France

Boston, Jan. 12.—Robert Bacon, Harvard '80, United States ambassador to France, has resigned that post to accept a position among the president and fellows of Harvard college, otherwise known as the Harvard corporation. Bacon will replace Judge Francis C. Lowell, Harvard '76, who recently died.

The selection of Bacon for the position was made some time ago by the Harvard corporation, which is a self-perpetuating body, and the nomination was received at the meeting of the board of overseers of Harvard college, the concurrence of which is necessary as a matter of form.

The action of the board of overseers in this matter was postponed until Wednesday of next week, when a special meeting of the board has been called for this purpose. Since, however, the board has never been known to veto any selection made by the Harvard corporation, the nomination of Bacon is equivalent to his formal appointment.

Ambassador Bacon will move his family from Paris, where they are now occupying the American embassy, to Boston, the city of his birth and early life, in which he has not made his home for nearly twenty years.

Mr. Bacon prepared for Harvard at Groton school, entering college in the fall of 1876. He was a classmate and intimate friend of Theodore Roosevelt and one of the best oarsmen Harvard ever had.

After graduating from college at the early age of 20, Bacon spent one year in travel, and upon his return entered the employ of Lee, Higginson & Co. He remained there only two years, but in this period his financial abilities demonstrated themselves so conspicuously that he received an offer of a partnership in the firm of E. Rollin Morse & Bro. This same year he married Miss Martha W. Cowdin of New York.

The firm of which Bacon was a member was the Boston representative of the interests of J. P. Morgan, and the appreciation which that financier felt for young Bacon's abilities was significantly displayed in an offer of partnership in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., which was made him in 1896. It was accepted and in that year Bacon and his family moved to New York.

From the beginning of his New York career Bacon displayed strong and effective qualities and his place in the firm was second only to that of Morgan himself, while in the absence of his superior Bacon was placed in complete control.

In May, 1902, during the absence in Europe of his chief, Bacon was called upon to protect the Morgan control of the Northern Pacific, a fight in which he won a technical victory. Soon after Morgan's return, Bacon's resignation from the firm startled Wall street. His resignation was caused by his ill health.

Mr. Bacon became assistant secretary of state in October, 1905. He succeeded Elihu Root as secretary of state in January, 1909. This honor was conferred upon him because he had, by three years of the most excellent service in that department, proved himself worthy of it.

Mr. Bacon was appointed ambassador to France on Dec. 21, 1909.

Resignation on Way to Taft

Paris, Jan. 12.—Robert Bacon, ambassador of the United States at Paris, confirms his resignation. The first intimation that he was about to resign his post was received from Boston.

Ambassador Bacon's letter, in which he announces his resignation to President Taft, was sent on board the Olympic and is now due to reach the president at Washington. Bacon especially refrained from making his retirement public, as he desired the first announcement to come from Harvard.

STEAMER GOES DOWN

All on Board, Numbering 172, Are Lost In the Black Sea

Bucharest, Roumania, Jan. 12.—The Russian steamer Russ has foundered during a gale in the Black sea with the whole of her passengers and crew, totalling 172 persons.

The Russ, which belongs to the Russian Steam Navigation company of the Black sea and the Danube, was steaming from Galatz to Odessa. Among her passengers were Carl Anusoff, who was recently appointed Russian consul general at Galatz, and his family.

Her Act.

"Well, have you heard the news," asked a friend brightly. "My wife and I are going on the vaudeville stage. A clever friend has written an act for us and we are going to put it on next week."

"Good work, old man," we exclaimed enthusiastically. "What is it—a song and dance act or a society sketch?"

"Neither—it is a monologue."

"A monologue? I thought you and your wife were both in the act."

"We are. But—do you know my wife?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

You Can't Lose It.

"Of course," said the optimist, "if a man gets into the habit of hunting trouble he's sure to find it."

"Yes," replied the pessimist, "and if he's so lazy that he always tries to avoid it it will find him. So what's the difference?"—Catholic Standard and Times.

SOCIALIST LECTURE.

A fairlylarge audience were present at Alpha hall, Thursday evening at the second in a series of lectures in the Socalist Lyceum course. The speaker was Walter J. Millard. is subject was "Why things happen to happen." It was an interesting subject, and the sepaker explained how the things that you do not want sometimes happen to you. The speaker who grew up in London, and now lives in Cincinnati, has spent years in studying the cause of things and his lecture was a particular interesting one.

How Parchment Got Its Name.

The Greeks of Pergamus are said to have first prepared parchment from the skins of the goat or sheep. They were curried, deprived of all fat, thinned uniformly by the knife, dyed or whitened and finally rubbed down with pumice stone to a smooth and even surface. Called pergamenum from the city of its origin, the new material became parchemin in archaic French and parchment in the English tongue.—National Magazine.

Dr. J. G. Smith gave an interesting talk before the Adams Parents and Teachers association, Thursday evening on "The department of Physical Education," An abstract of the address will be given Saturday.

QUINCY TEAM DOUBLE WINNER

THE SUMMARY

The walls of St. Mary's hall re-echoed with sounds of enthusiam Thursday evening when the basket ball teams of the Quincy A. A. succeeded in making the strong fives of the St. Joseph's A. A. North End, taste the spoils of their first defeat of the season. The first team of the local association managed to keep control of the situation at all stages and emerged easily in triumph with a 34 to 13 victory.

With the second teams, however, the case was entirely different, for it was only when the whistle was blown announcing the close of the game, that it could safely be asserted that the local second five was a winner by the close score of 19 to 18. The local boys of the junior team had a substantial lead in the early part of the second half, but the seemingly renewed vigor and endurance of the Boston boys, who scored a number of baskets in the last few minutes of play, that caused a feeling of disdain to course through the veins of the 500 present, made the outlook for a victory appear rather dubious for the local players.

In the first games, the team work of the Quincy players was superior to that displayed by the visitors, and the all round work of O'Rourke and the Duggan boys was of itself sufficient to enable the Quincy A. A. to annex a victory. Boyle also played well in his position, and time and time again kept the ball out of danger.

To secure a victory over the leaders of the Greater Boston Basket ball league, was the height of the local players' ambition last evening and their hopes were realized to a superlative degree, for Manager Flynn's team is now in a most advantageous position to strive for the honors of superiority and if the form exhibited last evening can be taken as any assurance of the calibre to be noticeable in future games, there is every possibility that the local aggregations will be found on the top of the ladder when the season is drawn to a close.

All the players on the local contingency are to be commended for their work while Maguire and Grant played well for the visitors. In the game between the second teams Dackers and "Brutus" Chapman played well for the winners, while Gallagher, the former Boston College player, was the conspicuous star for the losers.

ELOPEMENT

A dispatch from New York which gave the first informatiooffnn of the elopement says:—

Rumors of an elopement reached the City Hall this afternoon at just about the time that Sheldon M. Booth, 24 years old, president of the Inaernational Automobile Association, and Miss Corrinne Estelle Barbour, 23 both of Boston, asked Alderman Smith to marry them. eH did.

Booth said they intended to be married in Boston, but that they couldn't wait five days, as required by the law there, so they came to New York and procured a license.

"You see, its like this," Booth explained to Alderman Smith. "We intended for some time to be married. Miss Barbour is the daughter of John A. Barbour of Boston. We came here because of a peculiarity in the Boston marriage laws.

"Last Tuesday we went to the marriage bureau in Boston, and there we learned that we could not have the license until five days later. They gave us a card. We decided that we did not want to wait an so we came to New York."

HUMAN DERELICTS.

There never was a boy who at some time or other in his life did not want to go to sea or who was not thoroughly fascinated by the life of the mariner Thus the meeting at the Y M. C. A. Saturday morning should draw out a big crowd of boys. Fred E. Davis of Brown, who is thoroughly acquainted with life at sea, will tell of one of the greatest menaces to 'sea-going vessels, namely "Derelicts." A derelict is a wrecked and dismasted ship half water-logged which floats with its deck half submerged so as to be scarcely visible in the day time and wholly invisible at night. Mr. Davis will tell of disasters at sea caused by derelicts and will also take up the subject of human dereicts; those men who, have dropped out of the battle of life and are a menace to all others with whom they come in contact. The meeting promises to be one of the best o fthe season and no boy should miss it.

KNIFING A SHEEP.

Modern Slaughter House Method Painless and Rapid.

INSTANT DEATH IS ASSURED.

One Dexterous Thrust Through the Animal's Head by an Expert Workman Ends Consciousness—How the Carcass Is Skinned and Dressed.

The easiest way you could possibly think of is the way sheep are killed in the packing houses. Most persons mistakenly imagine that they are treated horribly and see in their minds a bloodthirsty man, with shoulders like hams, standing over a poor, defenseless sheep with a bludgeon in his hands ready to send the creature straight to the promised land. But there is where the sentimentalist goes completely wrong, for if there is an animal that is treated right—in speaking of its death—it is the sheep. There is only one thing that doesn't look as though desth was absolute pleasure for the sheep, and that is right at the very start of the killing operation.

The sheep are driven from the yards up a long chute, and when they enter the pathway a leader sheep puts himself at their head to take them up into the killing room. These sheep are trained and are nearly always black so that there will be no mistake made and the leader sheep killed.

This leader takes the animals up the chute to a pen that will hold about fifty sheep. Here a man catches them, two at a time, and shackles them by their hind legs. This is the operation referred to as the only one painful to the sheep.

The animal is then swung on to what is called the Ferris wheel. This wheel is constantly revolving, and as it reaches a certain spot the sheep are transferred to a track from which they hang head downward. At that point their suffering ceases, for the next workman is the man who kills them.

The killing process is one that is absolutely painless to the sheep. The workman is adept and never misses the mark at which he strikes. With a sharp knife in his hand, he moves down the row of hanging animals, and as he comes to each one he feels of the head just behind the ears and finds the point where the bones of the head leave an opening. In this the knife is thrust and goes through the head of the animal, completely severing on both sides a large artery. The sheep is killed instantly. Five hundred sheep can be handled every hour at this point. They are then "pated," an operation that consists of skinning the fore part of the head and the neck.

The next workman cuts through the hide on the breast and skins just one spot below the neck. The fore legs are then broken and cut off to be sent to the bone room.

The fact that there is a time for everything and one man to do just his part and no more is emphasized in the sheep room when one sees just one hind leg skinned by one man and the other skinned in an entirely different operation. The sheep is then put on what is called the endless chain. This chain consists of hooks at intervals and is constantly moving, making the rounds of the room in about twenty minutes. Along this chain are the workmen, and as the sheep is passed on to them by the chain they do their work and wait for the next carcass.

After the two hind legs have been skinned the back is partly skinned and the animal is passed on to the next man who is called a "pelter." He grasps the pelt just above the hind legs, and, with a few deft twists of it, it is pulled off and the sheep passed on to the next workman.

After being skinned the sheep are carefully washed and wiped, a new towel being used on every animal. An endless chain is in progress here also, for when a towel is used it is thrown into a vat of boiling water, washed and put into a drier to be used over and over again. After the animal has been washed the head is taken off and the neck washed in the same manner as the rest of the carcass. The government inspector then gets it, and it is subjected to a rigid examination, after which the stamp of approval of the United States is put on.

After the head is taken off it is sent to the floor below, where the tongue is taken out and the remainder of it sent to the bone room.

There are two ways of dressing the sheep. Some of the buyers insist on having the caul fat with the animal, while others do not care about it. If the fat is desired it is put on the hind part of the animal, covering about one-half of the body, and is then split, revealing the carcass shorn of the viscera.

The dressed animals are hung on overhead tracks and put on an elevator to be sent to the cooling room.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ancient Proofreading.

The editions of books printed 200 or 300 years ago are almost entirely free from typographical errors, which may be attributed to the fact that early publishers were generally eminent scholars and themselves gave much attention to the revision of their proofs. After reading the proofs they frequently turned them over to other scholars with the request to revise and correct, and as the printer's time was then deemed a matter of small consequence a perfection was attained which is seldom equaled by modern printers.—Exchange.

The man who does you a wrong has need of pity.

FRENCH AND GERMAN COLORS

Supposed Origin of the Tricolor and the Teuton Flag.

For five centuries black and white have been the Hohenzollern colors, and the first verse of the German war song, "Ich bin ein Preusse," is:

I am a Prussian! Know ye not my banner?
Before me floats my flag of black and white!
My fathers died for freedom; 'twas their manner—
So say these colors floating in your sight.

The mercantile marine tricolor of black, white and red is emblematic of the joining of the Hohenzollern black and white with the red and white, which was the ensign of the Hanseatic league. This flag came into being when the North German Confederacy was established, Nov. 25, 1867, at the close of the Austro-Prussian war. The red and white represent the commercial prosperity of the nation, while the black and white symbolize the strong arm of the state prepared to protest and foster it.

Nowhere have historical events caused so much change in the standards and national ensigns of a country as in France. The oriflamme and the chape de St. Martin were succeeded at the end of the sixteenth century, when Henry III., the last of the house of Valois, came to the throne, by the white standard, powdered fleur-de-lis That in turn gave place to the famous tricolor which was introduced at the time of the revolution, but the origin of that flag and its colors is a disputed question. Some maintain that the intention was to combine in the flag the blue of the chape de St. Martin, the red of the oriflamme and the white flag of the Bourbons. By others the colors are said to be those of the city of Paris Yet again other authorities assert that the flag is copied from the shield of the Orleans family as it appeared after Philippe Egalite had knocked off the fleur-de-lis.—Kansas City Star.

VAGARIES OF THE TIDE.

Mysterious Currents, the Secrets of Which No One Has Solved.

There are as many vagaries in the waters as in the winds. Why, for instance, should great ocean currents send their warm waters across the wide Pacific and Atlantic? Other and equally mysterious currents exist in well nigh all parts of the world.

It is on record that the sea has run for weeks out of the Java sea, through the strait of Sunda and thence back again for a like period without any perceptible rise and fall during those times.

Then there is the equatorial current that flows into the Caribbean sea, the ever flowing current to the eastward around Cape Horn, the cold stream flowing from the icy regions of the north past Newfoundland and Nova Scotia and along the American coast to the extreme end of Florida, the continual current running with a velocity of from four to five knots an hour through the strait of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean sea, the swift current running across the rocks and shoals off the end of Billiton island, which apparently starts from nowhere and ends somewhere in the vicinity of the same place, and the current which, starting halfway up the China sea, runs from two to three knots an hour to the northeast and finally ends abruptly off the north end of Luzon.

Then we have those tidal vagaries known the world over as bores. Those that run up the Hugli and Irawadi rivers, from side to side, till they reach their limit, often tearing the ships from their anchorage, originate nobody knows where or why.

At Singapore it has been observed for days at a time that there has been but one rise and fall in the twenty-four hours.—Boston Globe.

The Seckel Pear.

The Seckel pear is one of the sweetest and daintiest fruits that grow. As another describes it, "The flesh is melting, juicy and most exquisitely and delicately flavored." That is just what it is. And the tree on which this pear grows is beautiful and vigorous, which indicates that nature has a great fondness for it. The pear is named after a Mr. Seckel of Philadelphia, on whose estate in 1817 the Seckel pear started on its happy career. Some one writing in 1847 said, "The parent tree still lives about three miles from Philadelphia."—Pittsburgh Press.

Too Suggestive.

"The health officer advised me to ask every man with whom we had domestic dealings if he was careful to boil the water he used in his business."

"Yes."

"Well, I asked the milkman first. And what do you think? He got mad and wanted to lick me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Previous Employment.

"You say, Rastus, that you want work for your wife," said Gunbusta, eyeing the husky darky before him from head to foot. "Was she ever employed before?"

"No, sir," replied the negro nonchalantly; "dis am her first marriage."—New York Times.

The Sleep of Life.

We talk about the sleep of death. How much deeper, how much sadder, is the sleep of life—the unresponsive heart, the unawakened mind, the hand palsied by lack of will to do!

She Will Change Then.

Mrs. Crawford—Although my daughter is such a big girl, she's still afraid of the dark. Mrs. Crabshaw—Don't worry about that, my dear. She'll soon be in love.—Judge.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Sausages, Apple Garnish. Fry half a dozen small sausages slowly, first pricking them with a steel fork to prevent bursting open while cooking. Or the sausages may be set in the pan into the oven and baked. Be sure they are browned on all sides, then take up on to a hot dish. Have three large apples pared, cored and cut into thick slices across to form rings. Cook these rings in the fat and use as a garnish for the sausage.

Sweet Potatoes au Gratin. Slice cold boiled sweet potatoes and place in a baking dish, sprinkle each layer with salt, pepper and sugar, and adding a few bits of butter. Cover the top with buttered bread crumbs and cook in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Country Fruit Cake. Soak three cupfuls of dried apple over night, chop them fine and boil them in two cupfuls of molasses and one cupful of the water in which they were soaked. Mix with one cupful of butter and one of brown sugar creamed together, one pound of seeded raisins, one quarter pound of citron, two well-beaten eggs, the juice and rind of one lemon, two teaspoonfuls of soda and one pound and a small cupful of flour. Flavor with nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves, beat thoroughly and bake.

Pound Cake. Take a pound of sifted sugar and a pound of fresh butter; mix them with the hand 10 minutes, and put to them nine yolks and five whites of eggs, well beaten; work all together and add a pound of flour sifted with four level teaspoons of baking powder, some caraway seeds, four ounces of candied orange peel, cut into slices, a few currants, well cleaned; mix all together very lightly.

Cream Peppermints. Boil two cups of sugar and one-quarter cup of water 20 minutes without stirring. Flavor with one teaspoonful of peppermint; stir until almost cold, and drop on buttered paper. Cream wintergreen candy is made in the same way, using one teaspoonful of wintergreen and a few drops of red coloring.

METROPOLITAN PLANNING COMMISSION APPROVED

Mayors and Selectmen Hear Plan of Metropolitan Commission Explained

Quincy Was Well Represented at Dinner at Boston City Club

Quincy was well represented Friday evening at the Boston City club dinner given to the Mayors, Selectmen and official delegates from the 38 cities and towns comprising, what is known as the Metropolitan district. The dinner was in the interest of the bill recenly proposed in the legislature, in order to create and interest in the project of establishing a Metropolitan Planning Commission to consider all public improvements of common interest to the whole community.

Mayor Stone was unable to be present but he delegated John L. Miller chairman of the school committee and Charles C. Hearn to represent him. Others present included President Hobbs of the City Council, Councilmen Gouthier, Sodergren, Craig, Barker, Bailey, Murray, Beeman, Gilliatt, Thompson, Abele, Cunningham and Richards, City Engineer Sargent, F. F. Green of the Advertiser and George T. Magee of the Ledger.

While no special seats were assigned to the different delegations, it happened that all the Quincy men sat together at the same table and during the dinner the councilmen got into an animated discussion on the temporary loan order now pending before the City Council.

There was a free expression of opinion on the Metropolitan bill and but one voice was raised against the plan. That came from F. E. Turnbull of the Lynn finance commission.

John . Fahey presided and in opening said that there had been many commissions and many reports but unfortunately they had come to naught.

It was true however that in the area covered by the Metropolitan district there had been a gain in public interest during the last few years, and we had now passed to the era of discussion. The need of a comprehensive plan for a great city has long been felt. We therefore are dealing with a definite suggestion. Why should not a city be planned? The gain in population in rural districts has been 500,000 in the past ten years while in cities it has been 2,000,000. The same is true all over the world. If cities are to continue to grow, is it wise to continue to go on with the old time plans? Our interests are in common. What are the advantages we may gain? Better transportation to enable us to get to our work and to our homes quicker. Better and wider streets, etc. Time is money and the time wasted in getting to and from work is valuable. The results of a deffinite plan are plain. There is less death rate, and better health. Anotheradvantage is to make our cities more attractive and beautiful.

Mayor Hatfield of Newton said:

"I am heartily in favor of the bill providing for a planning board for metropolitan Boston. I have come to the conclusion that something of the sort is needed and that it is inevitable. I opposed, last year, the bill providing for a Greater Boston, for I considered it dangerous, but I am in favor of this one."

John Nolan of Cambridge demonstrated by views thrown upon a screen by the steroptiton what had been done by other large cities of the world in the line of improvements. He showed main streets in the larger cities of the United States, particularly Washington, Chicago, and New York as well as in those of the foreign countries, which he contrasted showing views of some of the narrow business streets of Boston, like Washington, near the newspaper district. He also showed what was being done in London and other foreign cities in the way of homes for the workingmen, and the back yards of these workingmen's homes which he contrasted with views of the tenement houses in the Greater Boston district and their back yards, all of which showed the possible development by a comprehensive plan.

Edward A. Lilene explained the great advantage of representative men getting together to make plans for the mutual benefit of their respective communities, and said the plan devised by the organization of which he is chairman, which is embodied in the bill before the Legislature, was designed for the service of every community in the proposed district.

He gave assurance that there is practically nothing in the bill to diminish the authority of officials of the comunities. The sole requirement, he said, is that each community shall fairly consider the schemes advanced, and that then they are at liberty to accept or reject, as they see fit.

The proposed law, he said, involves the assessment of 65 percent of the cost of a work on the community that directly benefits from it, 10 percent on the State, and 25 percent by the other communities in the district.

Mayor Fitzgerald spoke at length in favor of the proposed planning and of the advantages, that had come from the Metropolitan, Water, Sewer and Park Commissions. As it is now there is no distinguishing line between Boston and the surrounding cities. It is only an imaginary line. Our interests are in common. The idea is simply for a commission to consider the good of the whole community. There was no city where the opportunity was so great for planning as was the Metropolitan district. In closing he said that Boston entered heartily into the scheme, but with no selfish thought, and we will give our heartiest support to the movement.

Mayor Barrett of Cambridge said that Cambridge entered heartily into the scheme and that his city was the first to declare itself in favor of the plan. We have gone over the plan carefully and it has our hearty endorcement. We believe that it will benefit the whole district and we want the other 37 cities and towns to join with us.

E. E. Turnbull of the Lynn finance commission was the only speaker to throw cold water on the plan. He declared that while the purpose of the bill was laudable in the extreme, and while he praised the motives of the men who were behind it, he feared that it would be his painful duty to oppose it in behalf of the city of Lynn on account of the apportionment of 25 per cent of the cost of improvement among the various communities of the district.

"Lynn has kept out of the Metropolitan Park system," he said, "and the water system and the other Metropolitan plans. She maintains her own departments. She does not feel the need of Boston's aid."

"I would like to ask Mr. Turnbull," interupted Mayor Fitzgerald, "if he knows that the city of Boston pays 60 per cent of the cost of the boulevard through Lynn and that Lynn is in the Metropolitan Park system?"

"And I would like to ask," said Representative Kiley, "If the gentleman is aware that the Metropolitan Park Commission paid for two boulevards, one from Saugus and the other from Nahant to Lynn, and that on the latter the city of Lynn at its own request has had the commission erect a bathhouse that is patronized exclusively by the citizens of Lynn?"

This concluded the speaking .

MAYOR STONE LEADS MARCH

First Annual Ball Town River Yacht Club Social Success

GALA AFFAIR

The members of the Town River Yacht club launched forth their initial social function by holding their first annual dance in Music Hall, Friday evening. The affair was largely attended and although the Quincy Point Yacht club has been established only a short time, the numbers who gathered in the popular dancinz rendezvous for the event attested greatly to the fact that the organization has already attained a conspicuous position, not only in yachting circles, but in social ranks as well.

MAYOR EUGENE R. STONE.

To add to the significance of the first annual dance, the stage was very tastefully and artistically adorned with decorations, all emblematic of the organization, and of especial significance to yachtsmen in general. Vareigated colors were displayed among the entwinings of the stars and stripes, and the pennants of the Town River Yacht club were conspicuously exhibited, while the letters T. R. Y. C. showed up to great advantage among the decorations. Carey's orchestra furnished the music for the event and an instrumental concert was in order from eight until nine o'clock.

At this period the grand march took place. It was led by Mayor and Mrs. Eugene R Stone, followed by Commodore Ira M. Whittemore of the Quincy Yacht Club, and wife and about one hundred couples. Dancing was then enjoyed till midnight, with a short intermission taking place at eleven o'clock, during which time refreshments were served.

A dance order of twenty numbers was provided and the affair proved most successful. F. A. Drake was the floor director, and was assisted by the following aids, T. B. Crane, J. C. Carruthers, J. R. Emery, J. Sullivan, L. Laing, C. Mellen and J. D. MacBride

The officers of the Town River Yacht club are as follows:

Commodore—Mayor Eugene R. Stone.
Vice-commodore—E, W. Emery,
Secretary—W, C, Luther.
Treasurer—A. A. Richardson.
Executive Officers—W. H. Godfrey, T. B. Crane and J. Gibbs.

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

The Sewer department has this week sent out bills for main sewers constructed during the year 1911. During the year three miles of main sewer has been built and the 375 assessments sent out aggregate $16,127. During the year 403 house connections with the sewer were made. This is the largest number of connections ever made in one year. Of the new connections 106 were made in the Wollaston district.

SUFFER MUCH FROM THE COLD

Firemen Have Hard Time at West Quincy Fire

THE NOON FIRE

Quincy firemen got an early call this morning, the coldest of the year, when an alarm was sounded from Box 446 at 3.08, at which time the temperature varied from 8 to 10 below zero. There was little wind but the servere cold handicapped the firemen and they suffered much from the extreme cold. Chief Williams, who could hardly speak out loud from a cold, in addition to suffering more or less from injuries received at the Braintree fire, was on hand to direct the efforts of the firemen.

The fire was in an unoccupied house on Copeland street owned by Louis DiBona and had been occupied up to Friday when the family moved out. Nothing was left that could cause the fire and the Chief is of the opinion that it was the work of an incendiary. The house adjoins the Mayo business block, and sets back from the street and was therefore a dangerous locality, for if it got beyond control it meant the wiping out of the Mayo and Smith blocks to the corner of Cross street.

The firemen found the hydrant to be working all right and it was not many minutes after they got to work before they were covered with a coat of ice, as the spray from the streams froze as soon as, it struck them. It was a hard fire to fight and it was nearly 7 o'clock before the recall sounded. Chief Williams estimates the loss at $800.

The firemen suffered greatly by the severe cold. Chief Williams had one of his hands frozen, District Chief Packard had both hands frozen and Louis White of Hose 3, also had his hands frozen. Officers Curtin and Doran assisted the men to the Copeland club where a physician attended to them. District Chief Packard suffered the most and is still in bad shape. Some idea of what the men must have suffered can be had when it is realized that the temperature was eight below zero at the time.

The alarm from Box 37 at 11.25 ths noon was for a slight fire in the tenement house at 19 North Payne street owned by Mrs. Annie McGinty and was caused by one of the tenants trying to thaw out water pipes. Papers in the basement were set on fire and the flames creeped to the roof before being extinguished. Chemical streams soon put the fire out Loss $100.

TWELFTH NIGHT REVELS.

The Twelfth Night Revels, the jolliest party of the season will be held at Alpha hall, Tuesday evening. The indications are that there will be a large number present, for the enthusiasm is growing steadily.

A number of prominent Quincy people are to take part in the entertainment. The coronation ceremony is expected to be letter perfect this year. Talent from Boston will assist in this part of the entertainment. The Junior Laymen are to give a little performance; Miss Florence Barker will dance; some young women from Sargent's Gymnasium will give an exhibition of fancy dancing; a number of Quincy's favorite soloists are expected to sing and a double quartet from the High school, under Miss Perkins musical instructor, will be in costume and sing The committee is hoping to hear Edward Angier's 'Merry Men" again. A tremendous cake is in process of baking . There will be dancing for all, good music, pretty costumes, artistic decorations, plenty of refreshments and no end of fun.

The patronesses are: Mrs. Albert E. Avery, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs Albert L. Barbour, Mrs. C. M. Bryant, Mrs. E. H. Bushnell Mrs. Horace G. RED MEN PUBLIC INSTALLATION

Representatives of Other Fraternal Organizations Present

SPEECHES

The annual installation of Hodenosaunee Tribe, No. 62, Improved Order of Red Men, took place Friday evening in Greenleaf hall, before the largest gathering in the history of the Tribe. It took the form of a public installation and practically all the fraternal organizations of the city were represented. The installation work was performed by Deputy Great Sachem Fred W. Buker of Massapoag Tribe No. 111, Campello and suite, consisting of Great Misleinewan M. W. Wright of Matakeeseet Tribe, No. 153, Rockland, Great Prophet, William Brine of the Campello Tribe, Great Senior Sagamore, Past Great Sachem William Scampton of Boston, Great Junior Sagamore Edward C. Carr of Campello, Great First Sannap, Dana Snow Campello, Great Second Sannap Past Great Sachem A. P. Calder of Campello, Great Chief of Records Fred C. Gruber of Campello and Pianist, Frank McCue, of Campello. All of the Campello Redmen are members of the Massapoag Tribe.

Sachem—Alfred J. Clapp
Prophet—Knox S. Ruggles
Senior Sagamore—H. H. Holmes
Junior Sagamore—W. H. Waterman
Chief of Records—E. M. Dunn
Keeper of Wampum—William Hobart
Collector of Wampum—George A. Dickie
First Sannup—Fred Gerstel
Second Sannap—Elmer Pooler
Guard of Wigwam—Edward Pierce
Guard of Forest—Matthew Kennerberg.

WARRIORS.

First—James Bell
Second—Albert Farnum
Third—Louis E. Gerstel
Fourth—Arthur Phillips.

BRAVES.

First—Norman Pemberton
Second—Bernard Rogers
Third—Thomas Colligan
Fourth—John Cronin.

The Sons of St. George were represented by Edward Trejakis, Granite Conclave, Improved Order of Heptasophs by A. R. Mackay, Quincy Nest of Owls by A. H. Taber, Royal Arcanum by Daniel Miller, British War Veterans by Lieutenant-Colonel W. J. Cole, Court Roger Wolcott, F. O. A. by Chief Ranger Edward P. Caron, John Hancock I. O. O. F. by Noble Grand Joseph Pickering, American Benefit association by Hilcome Young. Other organizations represented at the public installation were the Elks, Moose, Order of Scotish Clans, Merymount lodge, A. O. U. W., Manet Encampment, and Quincy Council of Knights of Columbus.

All the details of the installation were carried out in a successful manner and the affair eclipsed anything held in previous years by the local tribe. At the conclusion of the installation, refreshments were served.

The occasion was graced by the presence of Mayor Eugene R. Stone, who addressed the gathering. Other addresses were made by the various officers of the Red men and by the different delegates from other orders who were in attendance.

It looks as if Col. Bryan intends to keep within hailing distance of Miss Democracy during leap year.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The newspapers used to give lots of time to writing up golden weddings, but the divorces take up all the space now.

In Los Angeles 85,000 women voted, and they voted against a rigid prohibition ordinance, too Ladies! Ladies!

Persons who desire to attain philosophic calmness of soul should never add up the totals of their cash books for the year.

Woodrow Wilson has "faith in the common people" but a Carnegie pension for teachers looks mighty good to Woody.

Mr. Taft may console himself with the thought that it is a pretty poor president who cannot stir up some opposition.

One of those California women juries decided a case in 20 seconds. Probably they waited that length of time just for the looks of the thing.

The newspapers give much space to the fact that shoes will be higher. As everything is always going higher, there is no news in this.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen has been elected president of China. He will have to get up early mornings to shake hands with 400,000,000 people.

As paint costs high and a lot will be required. Mr. Taft will have to pay roundly for that portrait he has been having done recently.

In view of the superfluity of invitations showered upon eligible young men, it looks as if every year'd be Leap year by and by.

Bob LaFollette removed his collar while speaking at Dayton, O. This renews our faith that he is loyal to the people's cause.

With snow storms in Texas and ripe strawberries in New England, the sagacious weather man shuts his eyes and snaps up a cent, confident of getting it right half the time.

President Taft is asked to appoint a labor commission. This would care for a number of worthy persons who at present are unprovided with any office.

In effect, President Taft says in his message on the trust question. "If you do not believe the Sherman law has teeth, just let it bite you once"

The New York police breathe much more freely now that the peace dinner has got by without having to call out the Boy Scouts to preserve order.

As running off with Miss Ellen Stone was an industry that netted the brigands $70,000 before, the former captive missionary would better not get beyond the electric car lines if she goes back to Turkey.

The movement of Register of Deeds Fitzgerald of Boston for a briefer form for deeds and mortgages apepals not only to lawyers but to conveyancers and real estate men generally.

If such legislation is enacted, it will make a tremendous saving in time for everybody having occasion to examine the records; it will greatly reduce the amount of space necessary for storing record books in the various registries, and will simplify the work of transferring titles to property.

The sample warranty deed submitted contains but 36 words and the mortgage 54.

AMERICANS BADLY TREATED

Shuster's Successor In Persia Cables Home For Help

Washington, Jan. 13.—F. F. Cairns, the American who was left in charge of the Persian treasury by W. M. Shuster, the deposed treasurer general, when he left Teheran for the United States, cabled Chairman Sulzer of the house committee on foreign affairs an urgent appeal for help.

He charged the Persian government with refusing to release the other Americans from their contracts and said the state department at Washington was "influenced by American Minister Charles W. Russell" against their claims.

Mr. Sulzer announced he would immediately take up with Secretary Knox the matter of helping these fourteen American officials.

DR. WEBSTER PLEADS GUILTY OF MURDER

Eases Conscience on His First Wedding Anniversary

Oregon, Ills., Jan. 13.—Dr. Harry E. Webster pleaded guilty to murder here on the first anniversary of his marriage to Bessie K. Webster whom, by his own confession, he killed near here last September. Webster withdrew a former plea of not guilty.

Summarized, Webster's confession said that after driving out of Dixon on the morning of the murder he and his wife quarreled, that he drew a small knife from his pocket.

"Bessie jumped from the buggy," said Webster, "and I threw her handbag at her. She ran, screaming, down into a wood. I ran after her. She stumbled and fell, and I fell over her.

"She was screaming and I slashed her head with my knife. Then I cut at her throat. I hacked at her until she stopped yelling. The next thing I remember I was lying on the grass exhausted. Then I climbed into the buggy and drove back. I don't remember whether I disrobed Bessie's body, or if I covered it with leaves."

MAY GET OFF WITH FINE

Dynamite Bribe Defendant Expected to Reveal Secrets

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 13.—It is said that Burt H. Franklin, former United States deputy marshal, a detective arrested on charge of bribery in the murder trial of James B. McNamara, has agreed to enter a plea of guilty. Franklin had a conference with Deputy District Attorney Ford.

The agreement, it is asserted, is that the state will be content to impose a fine of $5000 upon Franklin should he consent to tell the county grand jury all he knows about the alleged jury bribing.

Q.—What did Jesus mean when He declared, "There hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least in the Kingdom of heaven is greater than he"—Matthew xi, 11. (I. B. S.)

Answer.—To understand this statement of the Master it is necessary to remember the clearly marked distinction between the different "Ages." John was the last of the Prophets and belonged to the dispensation which was closing. The Apostles and other followers of Jesus, on the contrary, belonged to the New Dispensation, which Jesus was inaugurating. The Gospel call is a call to participate in the Kingdom of God—Messiah's Kingdom. Our Lord Jesus is to be the Great King of the World during that Millennial Age; and the Heavenly Father purposes to select from among men a "little flock" to be our Lord's associates in the work of uplifting and blessing the world of mankind. The first to be accepted into this kingdom condition received the holy spirit at Pentecost. Since then, all who similarly consecrate and are similarly begotten of the holy spirit are accepted as of the same class, namely, as members of the Kingdom class. If faithful through the trials and testings of the present life, these shall be "kings and priests unto God" and unto Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years for the uplifting and blessing of mankind. (Revelation i, 6; xx, 4.) The least one in this class will have a higher station than John the Baptist or any of the Prophets of the preceding dispensation; for all these will be spirit beings on the spirit plane. On the contrary, while John, with all the faithful of the past, will have great blessings, yet, since they will be on the earthly plane, their blessings will be restitution blessings to human perfection, etc.

DYNAMITE PLOT DETAILS

McManigal Makes Further Revelations to Federal Jury

Indianapolis, Jan. 13.—Descriptions of how Ortie F. McManigal, with a suit case filled with explosives and time fuse, sneaked about the streets of Pittsburg and Buffalo, and met men who discussed or picked out "open shop jobs" which were to be blown up, and photogrphs of wrecked places which were forwarded to John J. McNamara were presented before the federal grand jury in its investigation of the dynamite conspiracy.

It appeared that McNamara, as secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, obtained whenever possible photographs of structures which McManigal blew up, in order to keep a check on the dynamiter in paying "fees" out of the $1000 a month allowed McNamara for organizing purposes. Many of these photographs are in the hands of the government.

GRILLING IS COMPLETED

Carnegie Squirms Under Questions Put to Him By Steel Probers

Washington, Jan. 13.—Andrew Carnegie finished his testimony before the house steel trust investigating committee yesterday. He admitted that in 1900 he contributed $15,000 to oppose the policy of imperialism and the annexation of the Philippines; assailed Wall street and branded "stock jobbers as parasites," urged Theodore Roosevelt's policy, in preference to that of President Taft, in dealing with the trusts, and asked congress to consider carefully that problem.

After a day of examination on many subjects Carnegie was subjected to a fire of questions which put him on his mettle. His attack on stock jobbing will probably influence legislation to be proposed by the committee, and the ironmaster was taken over some political jumps which were altogether unexpected.

HOOK WRITES TO TAFT

Candidate For Supreme Court Judgeship Denies Charges

Washington, Jan. 13.—United States Circuit Judge Hook of Kansas, one of the most prominent candidates for the existing supreme court vacancy, has made a personal reply to President Taft to charges recently made against him with the idea of preventing his nomination.

Through Senator Curtis of Kansas Hook laid before the president a letter denying the charge that his son had been an attorney for the railroads in the Oklahoma 2-cent fare case in which Hook issued an injunction in favor of the railroads.

The chief attorney for the railroads also denied in a letter to President Taft that Hook's son had been employed as a lawyer in the case.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

At the regular meeting of Amana Rebekah lodge, the officers for the ensuing year were installed. The work was done in an excellent manner by D. D. G. M., Mrs. Ella M. Downs and suite of Brockton. Past Grand, Mrs. Alice Rogers was presented by Mrs. Downs with a past grand's jewel and Mrs. Rogers in behalf of Amana lodge presented Mrs. Downs with a handsome bouquet of carnations.

There were short speeches by the deputy and members of her suite followed by refreshments of ice cream and cake served under the direction of Mrs. Alice Rogers. The appointive officers of the lodge are as follows:

I. C.—Mrs. Jennie Chase.
O. G.—Solon David
Warden—Mrs. Bertha Call
Conductor—Miss Elva Bates
Chaplain—Mrs. Virgie Sears
R. S. N. G.—Mrs. Jennie Holbrook
L. S. N. G.—Mrs. Laura Proctor
R. S. V. G.—Mrs. Annie Woodworth
L. S. V. G.—Mrs. Emma Remick.

BUSINESS AND LABOR.

Notwithstanding the storm, Horace M. Eaton was greeted by a fairly large audience last night, when he spoke before the members and guests of the Men's club of the South M. E. church, on "Business and Labor." Mr. Eaton comes from Wakefield, and has had practical experience as a business man, and in labor matters also, having for several years served very acceptably as general secretary of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

Mr. Eaton said that labor people or laborers should not be judged by the actions of any person or persons within their ranks referring to the McNamara case in Los Angelos, nor should the actions of hypocrites with in the church be any criterion by which the really religious person should be judged. He spoke fairly for the cause of labor, and for the business man, manufacturer or merchant, and lead up to his very interesting comparisons by well told illustrative anecdotes and happenings. The remarks were very instructive and the audience was well pleaseed.

Pres. I. Wendell Gammons presided and the usual supper was served previous to the address of the evening. George W. Woodruff, assisted by A. H. Clark, S. B. Gammons, Fred B. Watson, Harry Madden and C. E. Thomas had the supper in charge and it was well served.

PHILERGIANS.

At the next meeting Tuesday, Jan. 16, in charge of the home economics department, Mrs. Mary J. Lincoln will lecture on "The Simplicity of Living"—a subject that is of great interest to every woman, particularly to every housewife.

Guests tickets for Gentlemen's night February 6th, are on sale that those who wish may procure them in advance. They may be had at the meeting next Tuesday, from the custodian, Mrs. George W. Stevens. Members are limited to one guest each.

Attention is called to a clause in the by-laws of the club, reading "Residents of the town who are eligible for membership may be invited to attend but two afternoons during the year."

Four tickets to the Boston Art Museum are with Mrs. William Gallagher, 714 Washington street, and Mrs. George Witherbee 123 River street. These tickets may be used by any club member any day of the week; they are not transferable.

J. P. S. A.

The Jonas Perkins School Association held its regular monthly meeting in the school hall, Thursday evening. The musical part of the program consisted of violin selections by Master Ernest Adams.

President Aitken introduced Judge A. E. Avery, who delivered an able address especially valuable to teachers, on the work of the Juvenile court. Judge Avery prefaced his remarks by a strong appeal to all instructors of the rising generation to implant and cultivate in the hearts of youth a clear knowledge of the principles of our government and a sacred regard for civic obligations.

The Judge's synopsis of the development of the probation system was particularly interesting. He convinced his hearers that while the special children's courts were but recently established, Massachusetts had, for a great many years, statutes the provisions of which drew a line of demarcation between the manner of trying cases of youthful delinquents and those of adult offenders

Many of the problems cited by Judge Avery, the solution of which falls upon him in his official duties confront school authorities as well. Occasional meetings of those mutually engaged in this line of work, for interchange of opinions as to the most salutary methods of dealing with wayward and misdirected young people, cannot fail to be productive of beneficial results.

BAD OUTLOOK IN LAWRENCE

Operatives Call General Strike In Great Mills

AN OUTBURST OF VIOLENCE

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 13.—At a mass meeting of more than a thousand of the leaders abong the 15,000 mill operatives of this city last night it was decided to call a general strike which will paralyze the woolen and cotton industries here.

The leaders urged the operatives not to resort to violence. They announced a meeting today, when two organizers of the Industrial Workers of the World, with which the local workers are affiliated, will arrive to take charge of the strike.

The mule spinners have decided to support the other branches of industry for the same wage they received under the terms of last year. They object to the cutting down of the pay as a result of the fifty-four-hour law which was passed by the last legislature and which has just gone into effect.

For more than two hours yesterday the police fought the rioting strikers in the vicinity of the immense mills into which the frenzied strikers had gained forcible admission. Six of the strikers, including a woman, were arrested, several were injured and thousands of dollars' loss caused property by their attacks.

An arbitration committee of the city government is trying to secure a peaceful return of the strikers to their looms, but unless the mill agents accede to the demands this effort will be futile.

Word had been received by the mill agents that trouble might follow the appearance of the paymasters in the mills. For this reason the pay hour of 9 o'clock passed at the Washington mill, one of the biggest of the group, without the customary appearance of the paymaster.

Italian operatives in the mill suddenly left their machines, and gathering force as they swarmed through the rooms and corridors soon cleaned it of its workers. Some violence was done, the cloth being injured in the looms and parts of machinery broken. In a short time the mill had been cleared of the operatives, who were either forced from their positions or voluntarily joined the mob. Dashing through the main gate nearly half a thousand of the men, all foreign born, and worked up to a state of high excitement, formed in a straggling procession and headed for the nearest mill, the big Wood woolen mill.

American and Italian flags popped out from the assembly. Yelling and brandishing sticks, knives and revolvers, they swept past the Washington mill office building, where a riot call was sent in by the officials.

Before the police could be assembled the mob had reached the Wood mill, where the watchman was swept aside and the strikers entered. As they ran through the immense workrooms they displaced the electric wires connecting the machines, detached pulleys and drove the operatives who would not willingly join them from their positions. The great belt, three feet in width, which moves the ponderous machinery in some of the rooms was cut and the water sprinklers opened.

While the strikers were demolishing things in this mill, the office of the Ayer mill, across the canal from the Wood mill, was notified of the riot. The paymaster was just making out the envelopes and these were hastily put into the safe and locked up. The big iron gates were shut, too, and everything made fast as possible against invasion.

A small deputation of police had arrived at this time, but their attempts to stem the tide were unavailing and in the mastery of numbers the strikers swept them aside.

Rushing at the gates the force of men bulged the centre and fairly lifted the gates from their pivots. Then they swarmed within, where similar violence was done as in the Wood mill. By this time a number of women had joined the strikers. The girls were working at tables and these with the chairs were demolished and made clubs for the men.

At the Ayer mill the engineer was told to shut off the power at the point of a revolver, and the strikers cleaned out about 3000 operatives.

Policemen had by this time commenced to arrive in squads and about eighty officers were concentrated before the strikers when they next attempted to visit the Lawrence Duck company mill.

It was here that the bulk of the injuries were received. The strikers, forced back from gaining an entrance at the gates, threw pieces of ice at the windows, breaking many, and calling upon the workers within to come out and join their ranks. Plate glass windows in the office were also broken and three of the police officers were injured by the missiles thrown.

The strikers tried to climb the walls surrounding the mills, and the police clubbed them back.

The police, finding the mob increasing, ordered strenuous measures taken, and with drawn clubs and revolvers they beat back the strikers, across the Merrimack river and Canal bridges up to Eliot street, where they began to disperse. Members of the city government had collected some of the cooler headed Italian, Syrian and Lithuanian men and sent them among the strikers, which aided greatly in the final settlement of the violence.

When an account of the damage was taken it was found that some lime had been thrown into one of the motors in the Wood mill, which put it out of commission. The damage in this mill alone is estimated to be about $2000.

OHIO'S NEW CONSTITUTION

It Is Likely to Be Drafted Along the Most Radical Lines

Columbus, O., Jan. 13.—The state constitutional convention which, after organizing, adjourned to next Tuesday, then to take up the real work of preparing for Ohio her fourth constitution, gives strong evidence of being thoroughly progressive.

Rev. Herbert S. Bigelow of Cincinnati, who was elected its president, is almost radically progressive. After his election the conservatives sought to tie his hands by taking from him the right to appoint the committees, but after an all-day fight, the conservatives' opposition to the appointment of the committees by the chair was withdrawn.

There seems but little doubt that the initiative and referendum will be written into the new constitutiin and possibly also the recall of all public officials.

BABIES SOLD FROM PROVIDENCE "FARM"

Little Ones Said to Have Been Subjected to Much Abuse

Boston, Jan. 13.—A "baby farm," where little babies are offered for sale at prices ranging from $25 to $50 each, has been unearthed in Providence, through the activities of the Boston Society for Helping Destitute Mothers and Infants, according to the statements of the society's agents.

The agents declared that not only are the babies offered for sale, but that they are drugged, treated with inconceivable cruelty, poorly clothed and fed, and subjected to all sorts of abuse.

At the time of the agents' invasion there were seven babies in the Rhode Island institution.

Men In Sympathy With Boston Longshoremen Go Back to Work

Boston, Jan. 13.—"I do not consider that the action of District Assembly 30, K. of L., Original, in ordering a general strike of freight handlers, clerks and others connected with the railroads at the docks constitutional, and we won't abide by it," said Master Workman White of the Boston and Maine Railroad Freight Handlers' Assembly 5572 yesterday.

He had just ordered back to work nearly 100 Boston and Maine freight handlers who failed to return to their work on the Hoosac tunnel docks. They had gone to dinner at 12 o'clock and returned at 1 o'clock, but refused to go to work until they had seen White.

WILL NOT "LOOSEN UP"

Charles Taft Not Financially Interested In Presidential Campaign

Washington, Jan. 13.—The financing of the Taft campaign for renomination will have to be done by the party or by individuals in it who are friendly to the president. Charles P. Taft, whose fortune was placed at the disposal of his brother in 1908, will not "come across" next year.

Charles P. Taft is still friendly to his exalted brother, but those who are in the confidence of both declare emphatically that he has done all the financing of campaigns that he intends to do.

The family ambitions of the Tafts included the presidency for William and the Ohio senatorship for Charles.

The Rayo Lamp

The Lamp That Saves The Eyes

Children naturally never think of possible strain on their eyesight when poring over a fascinating book.

It is up to you to see they do not ruin their young eyes these long evenings by reading under a poor light.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp, but it is constructed on the soundest scientific principles, and there is not a better lamp made at any price. It is easy on the eye because its light is so soft and white and widely diffused. And a Rayo Lamp never flickers.

Easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Solid brass throughout, with handsome nickel finish; also in many other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of the

GUNBOATS AT BOTTOM OF SEA

Italian Warships Destroy Seven of the Turkish Fleet

VICTORS SUFFER NO LOSS

Rome, Jan. 13.—A severe naval action occurred in the Red sea when seven Turkish warships were destroyed and an armed yacht was captured by Italian warships.

The division of Italian cruisers which has been scouring the coasts of the Red sea in search of Turkish war vessels and ships conveying contraband destined for the Turkish garrisons in the Yemen province in Arabia encountered the flotilla of Turkish gunboats and at once opened fire.

The Turks replied, but their feeble armament succumbed to the superior weapons of the Italian war vessels. The fight was stiff but soon ended in the victory of the Italians, who sustained no loss.

The action occurred outside the Bay of Kunfida, a small walled town with a garrison and two forts about 500 miles north of Aden on the east coast of the Red sea. The Italian warships which took the principal part in the battle were the cruiser Piemonta and the destroyers Garibaldino and Artigliere. The commander-in-chief had received orders to destroy or capture the Turkish gunboats, as advices had been received that they were transporting from Arabia Turkish troops destined to reinforce the Turkish army in Cyrenaica by way of Egypt.

As soon as the Italian warships encountered the Turkish gunboats they sent shots across their bows and called on them to surrender. The Turkish vessels gave no sign of compliance and the Italians immediately opened a terrific fire, throwing in a hail of shells from their broadsides.

The Turkish gunners replied feebly, but did not succeed in striking the Italian vessels. All seven of the Turkish boats were soon on fire and in a few minutes began to sink. Boats were lowered from the Italian warships, which picked up many Turkish seamen, but a large number were drowned.

During the brief combat the Turkish gunners displayed utter incompetence, their small guns being fired wildly. The shells from the Italian ships were not directed at the Turkish yacht Fauvette, which accompanied the gunboats, and she was the only unit of the Turkish flotilla which was not destroyed during the fight. The Fauvette is being brought to Italy under convoy.

MEANS A BIG SAVING

Abolition of Customs Naval Officers Favored by Economy Commission

Washington, Jan. 13.—That President Taft's commission on economy and efficiency will shortly recommend the abolition of the office of naval officer of ports of Boston, New York, San Francisco, Chicago, New Orleans, Baltimore and Philadelphia has become known.

The office in Boston has a total payroll of $36,280, the officer receiving a salary of $5000. The total amount of money to be saved by this reform comes to $439,410.

It is felt that the work of the naval officer is largely a duplication of the work of the collector of the port, and that in many cases the office has been used merely for political purposes. This has been particularly true in Brooklyn, where the naval officer is a very powerful political boss.

VISITING NURSING.

The report of the Visiting Nurse for the past months, shows such development that the public should know of the work being done.

For the month of November the Visiting Nurse with her assistant made 238 calls, against 50 calls for the corresponding month of last year. These calls represented the care of 32 patients, and fifteen physicians called for the services of the nurse.

The territory covered by the work included every section of our city. Quincy, West and South Quincy, Wollaston, Atlantic, Quincy Point and Norfolk Downs. The larger part of the work has been with the very poor of the city.

During the past six months 2000 cards explaining this work were circulated; and it looks as if these cards had been read.

The plan of financing the work inaugurated a year ago, by which subscribers to the fund were invited to make a contribution for the year, met with encouraging support. A second permanent nurse is now being considered and it is believed that the growth of the work, will compel the support it so richly deserves.

People who received new pocket books Christmas are apt to be embarrassed for some time to know what to do with them.

HIRTLE—JOSLIN.

A home wedding recently of interest to Quincy people was that of Mrs. Alice Joslin and Allen Tremain Hirtle, formerly of Wollaston, and brother of Mrs. Daniel C. Miller, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin D. Bryant, 3241 Thompson avenue, Kansas City. The Rev. Dr. George Combs of the Independence Boulevard Christian Church performed the ceremony which took place in the living room before a bank of palms, ferns and roses.

The bride was gowned in apricot silk with an over drapery of gold lace and a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley completed a charming costume. Mr. O. E. Renfro sang "Love is a Rose" and Miss Bessie Zollars sang "I love you truly" followed by Mendelssohn wedding march played by Miss Zollars.

Pink and white were the colors throughout the house and in the dining room where on the table was the bride's cake.

A reception followed for the relatives and friends, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hirtle left for the East.

They will make their home at 203 Mersington avenue, Kansas City.

Mr. Hirtle was born in Wollaston and is a graduate of Quincy High.

LOOKING FOR A PREMIER

President Failleres Is Meeting With Considerable Difficulty

Paris, Jan. 13.—The gravity of the ministerial crisis, the solution of which is not yet in sight, was shown by the fact that President Failieres summoned into consultation the leading statesmen of France to discuss the best means for the formation of a government strong enough to meet all current problems, both domestic and foreign, especially foreign.

Leon Bourgeois, a former prime minister and at one time or another the holder of nearly every portfolio in the cabinet, declined the honor, as in the past, advancing the state of his health as a reason.

LAND COURT.

To Frederick G. Hobbs, Edward O. Woodward and John C. Bagloe of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Mary H. Murray of New Bedford, in the County of Bristol, and said Commonwealth; William H. Faxon of Buffalo, in the State of New York; Frank P. Murray of Eddington, in the State of Pennsylvania; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Climena H. Drake of North Hampton, in the State of New Hampshire, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Quincy, being lot numbered 259 on a plan of Charles S. Miller, dated April 10, 1890 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book of Plans 13, Plan 566, and bounded Northwesterly by Bass Street fifty feet; Northeasterly by lot 260 on said plan now owned by Frederick G. Hobbs, ninety-four feet; Southeasterly by lot 246 on said plan now owned by Edward O. Woodward fifty feet; and Southwesterly by lot 258 on said plan now owned by John C. Bagloe ninety-four feet. Containing according to said plan four thousand seven hundred square feet.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the fifth day of February A. D. 1912, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

Another Fatal Accident with Scalding Wash Water.

Anty Drudge—"Oh! Mrs. Happydays. Here's another child scalded to death! Too bad. And just to think, that could have been avoided if the mother had only washed with Fels-Naptha soap in the Fels-Naptha way—with cool or lukewarm water. Criminal negligence, I call it!"

The woman who considers her health won't tempt fate by standing for hours over a steaming tub, opening the pores in her chest and neck (the very place where grip and pneumonia strike) and then going right out in the cold to hang the clothes on the line.

No need. Wash the Fels-Naptha way—in cool or lukewarm water. No steam; no hot water; no nauseous odors.

It saves money and doctor bills, and keeps hands and face clear and smooth instead of chapped and blotchy.

Washing the Fels-Naptha way, does away with the back-breaking drudgery of wash-day. No hard rubbing.

Fels-Naptha dissolves the dirt; makes the clothes look a lot cleaner and fresher than you could ever get them by boiling and rubbing.

Clothes last longer, too—washed with Fels-Naptha. There is no boiling to weaken the fabric and no hard rubbing to wear it to shreds. Do your next wash the Fels-Naptha way. You will be all through in one-half the time and with one-tenth the effort.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of the year.

A Fire Fighter's Astounding Story
OF THE UNPARALLELED MERITS OF "BLOODINE"

ENGINE WHICH MR. GLAZIER RUNS.

HARRY A. GLAZIER

A Prominent Fireman of Malden, Mass., writes:

Mar. 28th, 1903.

Last winter I had a severe cold and it settled on my Kidneys, causing the most excruciating pain almost every time I attempted to move; I had tried evreything imaginable to get relief, with no success, until I was advised to try "Bloodine," which to my great surprise, gave me relief almost from the first dose, and before I had taken one bottle I was completely cured. "Bloodine" is a wonderful, vitalizing tonic. If the blood is impure, complexion bad, appetite lost, strength gone, and the whole system is upset by an accumulation of humors, it is time to try "Bloodine" today.

Bloodine Cured Hemorrhage of the Kidneys.

MARSHFIELD, VT., Sept. 2, 1904.

THE BLOODINE CO., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:—I received one of your books, yesterday. I have been a great sufferer for thirty-three weeks, passing bloody water, have been to the hospital, have had four different doctors. They called it most everything, and I got no better. Please send me a sample bottle of your Bloodine for which I enclose ten cents in stamps to pay for same. If it will do me any good I will take it the rest of my life.

Signed, MRS. OCTAVIA E. CARPENTER.

MARSHFIELD, VT., Sept. 14, 1904.

THE BLOODINE CO., Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen:—I received your trial bottle of Bloodine. That was not enough to do much for me, for I am very bad and weak, passing quite a lot of blood. Now, if you think that Bloodine will help me, you may send me one dollar's worth. I think by the time I take that I can tell if it will do me any good.

Signed, MRS. OCTAVIA E. CARPENTER.

MARSHFIELD, VT., Oct. 22, 1904.

THE BLOODINE CO., Boston, Mass.

Dear Sirs:—Please send me six bottles of Bloodine. It has done me a world of good; it has stopped the hemorrhages; and I am feeling much better.

Respectfully,

Signed, MRS. OCTAVIA E. CARPENTER.

We will forfeit $1,000 if the originals of the above letters, proving genuineness, cannot be produced.

Signs of Danger.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Cats is Cats at Hub's Annual Showing of Felines—Five Rules for Leap Year Proposing—Calf Did Not Recognize Rights of Small Stockholder — Commonwealth's Good Roads Will be Benefitted by Electric Express—Business Interests Further a Garden City Development South of Boston.

An amusing story is going the rounds about a Massachusetts legislator who is also a large stockholder in the steamship merger. In talking with a brother Solon recently he remarked: "When I was a barefoot lad I had to spend a good deal of time minding the stock on father's farm. I'll never forget the day when father told me to take a rope and hold a couple of bull calves." His companion inquired what they did. "They scorched my hands with the rope and stepped on me," came the reply. "Unruly disposition?" queried the other legislator. "No Wonderful instinct. They recognized me at a glance as a small stockholder."

Five rules to govern the hopeful maid who is planning to pop during the present year are formulated by a prominent Boston business woman. The girl, according to these rules, may take advantage of the Leap Year privilege providing either that "he" is bashful or stupid; that she is a business woman; that both are over thirty; that she is sure he will accept, or when it's a matter of long standing. Therefore, if any of these conditions prevail, take heart girls and break it gently to the unsuspecting man—but be prepared to accept gracefully the possible throwdown.

Cats in bags, cats in baskets, cats in arms—cats and cats and cats and all bound for the big show. Such was the impression gained by those who frequented street cars or sidewalks in the vicinity of Boston's Mechanics Building during the preliminary preparations for the poultry, pet stock and cat show which held sway for the large part of the week. There were all sorts and types of feline beauty, adorned with all sorts and styles of festive decorations and the blissful Ohs and Ahs which emanated from cat lovers filled the cars with entertaining music.

Electric express service into Boston interest thousand of householders of the metropolitan district who understand that better transportation facilities may help somewhat in bringing down the much discussed cost of living. So convincing was a recent demonstration beforethe railroad commissioners, at which several hundred representative citizens of Massachusetts towns and cities as far west as the Connecticut river appeared to plead for entrance of their products to the Hub over the handy electric railways, that the commission has at last issued its mandate to the effect that Boston Elevated Railway Co., shall henceforth serve as a common carrier of express and freight matter. Every part of eastern and central New England is affected by this decision. It means that commodities from the farms and factories of the Merrimack, Connecticut and Blackstone valleys may henceforth reach Boston via a quick, convenient and inexpensive service. It means saving of the wear and tear on the good roads constructed by the Commonwealth and the municipalities at large expense of the tax payers' money. The Bay State street railway has already developed the system in southeastern Massachusetts and has franchises permitting its operation in most of the places in northeastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. Extension as far north as Concord and Portsmouth may easily be among the possibilities. There is also talk of a through express service by way of Fitchburg and Gardner, as far as Greenfield, with possibly a Keene, N. H., connection later. Meantime the Boston and Worcester line is said to be ready to put into effect an express plan of its own just as soon as a terminal station has been established. Everything, therefore, indicates that the introduction of this up-to-date method of express and freight transportation means a great deal to the shippers and those to whom goods are shipped in and around Boston.

Incidentally, shopping women in many of the suburbs look forward to improved delivery of parcels from the department stores and down town markets. Complaint of the express facilities in Suburbia has for a long time been as chronic and persistent asgrumbling at the weather. Some of it, possibly, has not been justified by the facts, but surely the local expressman, with frequent electric expresses delivering consignments at his door, will be able to do better by his customers than when, as now, he sends his own teams into the heart of the city to get the goods.

And speaking of Boston's suburbs, the stockholders of America's most progressive traction company are being asked, as individuals, to assist in a very promising plan for model homes on a tract of nearly 30 acres of land not far from the Arnold Arboretum at Forest Hills. Garden city schemes are much in evidence in European communities, sometimes managed on a purely philanthropic basis, sometimes expected to pay their way. The first design of the kind in Boston follows the latter principle as being more in accordance with New England traditions of personal independence and self-help. The shareholders of the Boston Elevated Company are invited by President William A. Bancroft to subscribe to this undertaking with the triple purpose of demonstrating that living conditions throughout the community can be improved, of incidentally benefiting the company through the regular revenues that should accrue from a new suburban colony and of securing for themselves a reasonable return upon a stable investment.

General Bancroft's circular states that a voluntary association has been formed, under the name of the Boston Dwelling House Company, which has acquired a valuable site on Hyde Park Avenue, over which street the surface cars pass at the rate of twelve cars per hour in the mornings and afternoons. The location is about half a mile beyond the Forest Hills terminal of the elevated road, which is within fifteen minutes of the business centre of Boston on a five-cent fare. One of the most important services which the local traction system has rendered to the community is the reduction in time of transportation from the outlying sections of Greater Boston to the center of the city. This has made it possible for thousands of families to live where they may find more air and light, and at the same time be within easy access of their places of employment. To further this tendency it is now proposed by the new association, of which Robert Winsor, Jr., is treasurer, to develop the land in question, by laying it out under expert advice, building, as fast as they can be readily rented or sold, chiefly single and double houses, of modern design, comfortable, but of moderate cost. By laying this tract out as a whole, and by building the houses under the direction of good architects in conformity with a general plan, it is believed that reasonably low-priced houses, more attractive than any now offered so near the city, can be furnished, and that financial results may be obtained that will show the advantage of this kind of development on other lands near Boston.

BELL GIVES PARTING ADVICE TO TROOPS

Transport Leaves Manila With Infantry For Duty In China

Manila, Jan. 13.—The transport Logan, carrying the first battalion of the Fifteenth United States infantry to China, left Manila yesterday afternoon. The American troops are to be employed in guarding a section of the Pekin railroad from Tangshan to Ianchow against the possible attack of either imperialists or republican troops.

Major General Bell, commander-in-chief of the army in the Philippines, made a parting speech to the officers and men of the expedition just before the transport sailed. He urged the troops to show pride in their American citizenship while they were on foreign soil.

The Chinese, he said, were worthy of a square deal and he expected the American soldiers to treat them in a worthy way. He impressed upon the men the necessity for maintaining their reputation for cleanliness and a neat personal appearance.

Grand Chief Wm. Mitchell Guest of John Adams Court

INSTALLATION

The officers of Court John Adams No. 144 F. of A. were installed last evening by D. G. C. R. Daniel Forde, and G. H. Wm. Hebert.

There were over two hundred members present, including delegations from Court Monatiquot of Weymouth and Courts Roger Wolcott and John Ericson of Quincy.

Wm. Mitchell, Grand Chief Ranger of Mass. paid Court John Adams a very unexpected visit and he was royally received. He took a keen interest in the initiation of three candidates by the Court Degree Staff.

After the installation Chief Ranger Steinbrenner made a short address, thanking the members for his re-election and exhorted the members to work for the upbuilding of the court.

Grand Chief Ranger Mitchell was next called on and he complimented Court John Adams on its splendid condition and briefly referred to the anditors report which showed a balance of five thousand dollars in treasury, he also complimented the degree staffs of Courts John Adams and Roger Wolcott for the excellent work which they are doing in making the initiation ceremonies so interesting.

Songs and story telling were in order while the amusement committee served coffee and sandwiches after which the cigars were passed.

The members of the different Courts present engaged in a friendly rivalry as to which Court could produce the best talent and an excellent entertainment was the result.

The Grand Chief Ranger left about 11.15 for Boston and stated before leaving that his visit had been an enjoyable one and he hoped that 1912 would prove a prosperous year for the Quincy Courts

Willard Flint who will sing in the Golden Legend concert of Jan. 23, needs no introduction in Quincy for he is a favorite here. His splendid voice and fine presence, together with his great artistry and dramatic force. make a combination impossible to resist. He wins his audience by sheer merit, and it is good to hear him. In the part of "Lucifer" he is sure to satisfy all demands and for those who know his work in Elijah and similar roles reuiring, in the main, great dignity and repose, it will be most interesting to note the satanic mockery of his "Piff and Paff" solo, against the devout chanting of the monks. The part offers many opportunities for fine work.

Large Attendance at Dance of John A. Boyd Camp S.W.V.

MANY GUESTS

Attired in full military uniform members of John A. Boyd Camp, No. 2, United Spanish War Veterans, observed their second annual military dance in Alpha hall, Friday evening. The affair was largely attended and delegations were present from other Camps.

The hall had been tastefully decorated for the occasion, and the stars and stripes were displayed most conspicuously. Wilson's orchestra furnished music giving a concert from eight until nine o'clock, after which dancing was enjoyed till midnight. There was a short intermission during which refreshments were served.

The affair was a most successful one. The committee in charge included Joseph McKinnon (chairman) Henry J. Matthews, Fred Kelcourse, Wilbert F. Doyle, William J. Colligan and Walter F. Carmen.

During intermission Philip Dolan, a well known theatrical performer of the Daley Publishing Company, rendered a number of songs which called for prolonged applause. The dance order comprised twenty numbers.

LEAP YEAR PARTY.

A very pretty leaf year party was given in Brazee's hall, Wollaston, Wednesday evening. Dancing including three "Oh you moonlight waltzes" was enjoyed, one candle furnishing sufficient illumination Suspicious noises were heard during the moonlights but no explanations as yet have been forthcoming. A liberal shower of confetti decorated the happy dancers and presented a pretty spectacle Many favor dances were introduced the tag two-step, receiving many encores. The jingle of sleigh bells hidden in the clothing of the young ladies added to the merriment and novelty of the occasion

At the close all extended their thanks to Miss Gertrude Sass who gave and so nicely directed the party. Campbell's orchestra which furnished the music came in for generous applause many times and added to the pleasure of all.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Misses Lena Macdonald, Angie Rose, Hazel Jones, Clara Mansfield, Nellie Palmer, Anna Brundage, Margaret Bisson, Helen Baker, Edna Holyoke, Mila Bates, Margaret Dunn, Bessie Couley, Myrtle Brundage, Elsie, Fenly, Alva Lenard, Sadie Griffin, Miss Jones. OBSERVE FEAST OF HOLY NAME

Special Services Sunday Afternoon at St. Mary's Church

ADDRESS BY FR. SCANNELL

In fitting commemoration of the Feast Day of the Holy Name, members of the Holy Name Societies of the churches of St. John, St. Mary's and the Sacred Heart, Quincy, and St. Francis, Braintree, to the number of 500, assembled at the grand union services held Sunday afternoon in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, at 3.30 o'clock. The services consisted of solemn vespers, sermon and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The celebrant at the vesper and benediction services was Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, Atlantic, assisted by Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, as deacon and Rev. Andrew J. Fitzgerald of St. Francis Church, South Braintree as sub-deacon Rev. William J. Duffy, of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, was Master of ceremonies

The members of St. John's Holy Name Society assembled in the Parochial School on Phipps street, at 2.30 o'clock and thence marched to St. Mary's Church, in a body under command of Edward J. Lennon, vice commander of the Grand Army post and escorted by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, spiritual director of the Society.

The music for the occasion was furnished by the regular choir of St. Mary's Church, under the direction of Mrs. Frank Reardon, organist. During the services solos were rendered by Miss Alice O'Neil, Peter Morrissette, Miss May Kapples, and Mrs. James L. Fennessey.

The sermon, a discourse on "Personal Responsibility," was preached in a most eloquent manner by Rev. Patrick J. Scannell, of St. John's Church. Fr. Scannell is an orator of great repute and his sermon was delivered in a most forceful manner. He said in part:—

"What do I mean by personal responsibility? Simply—that I, individually, am held accountable by Almighty God, not only for my own soul, but in a more or less degree for the souls of all those with whom I come in contact.

"For instance, a man finds himself in the company of others and in the course of conversation attacks the reputation of one who is absent.

"This may seem a slight thing, but listen. He injures the absent one, of course, and may do him irreparable harm. But that is not all. No. Many of those listening may take up the calumny and spread it. The injury increases in magnitude. Still others take it up—and so on it goes—each one adding to the tale and each one, besides injuring the reputation of the absent one, is injuring his own soul and the souls of all who are affected.

"It is like when one drop a pebble into the lake, ripples run out from the center and widen and spread out, going on and on until the farthest shore is reached.

"So an injury done another may spread in the minds of men and widen its influence until it reaches the shores of eternity.

"Now suppose the individual who started the story, suppose him to be a Holy Name man, then indeed is the whole society affected, for each member is responsible to all the others for his conduct be it for good or evil and no one can escape that responsibility. It is a part of the moral law and is as fixed as eternity itself.

IS A RELIC OF BARBARISM

Capital Punishment is So Called by Rev. Carl G. Horst

LEGALIZED MURDER

"Capital Punishment" was the subject of Rev. Carl G. Horst of the Wollaston Unitarian church, Sunday morning, in place of the subject "Shall Clarence Richeson be electrocuted" as advertised, the sermon was one against the taking of human life by the state. Among the things brought out during his able sermon were:

"Capital punishment is legalized murder and is a relic of barbarism. Punishment should have three ends in view: Justice, the protection of society and the reformation of the offender.

"The last-named was seldom, if ever, thought of in former centuries. It is the 19th century view, so modern that the majority of people are ignorant of it. Any punishment that considers only the sense of justice, the good of society, leaves out the one thing needful, which is the reformation of the criminal.

"The objections to capital punishment are many.

"1. Society has no right to take life. The time has gone when the life of a State can be saved only by taking life. It is better to cure than to kill.

"2. It does not deter others from comimtting crime. Most murders are committed in the heat of excitment and passion and too often, when are intoxicated.

"3. It injuries the moral standard of the community. Taking life never increases reverence for life. After an execution too often the children are found playing at hanging.

"4 The security of the public does not demand the execution of the criminal any more than that of a maniac who may be far more dangerous to life.

"5. I object to capital punishment because it may happen, as it has happened, that innocent persons may be made to suffer the extreme penalty of the law. Liberty may be taken away and afterward restored, but no power, save God himself can restore life.

"6. It is contrary to the spirit of the religion of Jesus Christ, which I believe in profess and preach. The Old Testament sanctions it, but we are disciples of Jesus Christ not of Moses.

"When you ask what the Old Testament teaches you really ask what was supposed to be right by a people of much lower civilization 3000 years ago. Our Bible, is not a fetish to be blindly reverenced, out a book to be reverently studied in the light of reason. No matter how low a man may fall there is left within him a divine spark which never wholly dies out. We are all God's children and there is no depth of perdition into which we can sink into which God will not dive to lift us up, said the great preacher, Phillips Brooks.

"Having suffered the tortures of hell in punishment for his crime and sin, through thorough repentance, I believe, the criminal, by the grace of and with the help of Almighty God, can become a new creature and be mitted to the company of the Redeemer."

—It is already reported with entire assurance that the plan of shipping magazines by freight is proving a complete success, and will save millions of dollars every year to the post-office department without perceptibly impairing the service. That is to say, the difference in freshness between a magazine that comes to the Missouri river from New York in a week and one that comes through by mail in a little less than two days is not noticeable to the most highly-trained and sensible nostril. This is but one of a multitude of reforms quietly inaugurated under the administration of President Taft that seem to have escaped the attention of his critics entirely.—Nebraska State Journal.

BETHANY SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS

Class No. 18 of which Louis F. LaRose is the teacher, met at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon and organized into a club for general usefulness and help to the church and Sunday School.

The following officers were elected:
President—Guy Shaw.
Vice President—Warren Crane.
Secretary—Theo. Rice.
Treasurer—Albert Beach.
Sergt. at Arms—William Everson.

The club will meet once a month at the Y. M. C. A. and will have regular dues and initiation exercises which will be secret. The following are the charter members—Guy Shaw, Warren Crane, Theo. Rice, Albert Beach, William Everson, Carl Pierce, Wendell Feltes, Sherman Mugford, Franklin Austin, William O'Brien, Earl Bates, Phillips Innes and Paul Hohngren.

LEWIS BASS.

Lewis Bass, one of Quincy's long-time residents died at his home on Granite street Sunday aged 79 years. Mr. Bass has been a sufferer from asthma for many years and to this was due the primary cause of his death. Mr. Bass retired from active busines pursuits many years ago. and since that time has lived the life of a retired gentleman. He leaves a widow and two sons, one of whom is Lewis Bass, Jr., for several years a member of the City Council and a well-known lawyer.

DERELICTS.

A very interesting talk on "Derelicts" was given the boys of the Y. M. C. A. in the assembly room of the association, Saturday by Fred Davis, a freshman at Brown University. Mr. Davis had much experience at sea and related many interesting stories. He told of his work on the St. Paul, one of the large steamers of the White Star line and had his auditors with him as he told of his trip to Europs. On the return trip, he received from the Lusitania, while he was assistant wireless operator, a wireless mesage, stating that a derelict was in such a longitude and that danger was in the vicinity. Other experiences were equally interestingly told.

The speaker then spoke of human derelicts and told of the harm wrought by them. He imparted sound advice to those present and in closing was heartily applauded.

FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral of Captain John Hall, was held at the residence of his sister, Mrs. George L. Phillips, Saturday afternoon. Rev. Charles L. Marshall, pastor of the Washington street Congregational church, officiating. Relatives and friends were present. The deceased leaves a brother, Walter Hall of Marshfield, three sisters, Mrs. George L. Phillips, Mrs. Foster Crocker and Miss Mary Half of Barnstable on the Cape. Captain Hall was a man of genial and hospitable nature, kind hearted and generous. He was well known to the older residents of Quincy. The body was taken to Marshfield to be interred in the family lot. There were many beautiful floral emblems.

ENLISTING QUINCY BOYS

Sunday Afternoon "Men and Religion" Meeting for Boys

PROGRAM EXPLAINED

A meeting in the interest of the Men and Religious Forward Movement was held Sunday afternoon for boys at the Bethany church, and was very largely attended. Many were present from the district, which includes Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Braintree and East Milton.

Alden Blanchard who has charge of the boys' work at the Y. M. C. A. presided and the principal speaker was Joseph A. Sedgwick of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. The larger part of the meeting was devoted to explaining the program for the coming week, especially the part which the boys are to take.

A mass meeting for boys will be held at the Bethany church next Sunday afternoon at 3.30. The speaker will be H. C. Leggat of Worcester whose subject will be "Victory."

DODD—DAMON.

A very pretty wedding took place Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Damon, 107 Atlantic street, Atlantic, when their daughter, Miss Ethel, was married to Mr. Ralph Dodd, of Milton. The couple were unattended. The wedding marches were played by Miss Claire Rand of Botolph street. The bride was gowned in white landsdown, trimmed with Brussels lace and silver and pearl. She carried a large bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

Many guests were present including all the members of the Sevsters club of which the bride is a member, and relatives and friends of bride and groom.

Mr. Dodd and his bride have for years been active in the Vilage church of Dorchester, and the ceremony was performed by their pastor, Rev. G. Wolcott Brooks.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Dodd wil make their home in Milton, where Mr. Dodd is employed by the Neponset Coal Co.

Sleiging parties accommodated. Two horse sleigh for afternoon or evening, large enough for twenty or more. Apply to J. W. Walsh, 1495 Hancock street. Tel. Quincy 1200. tf

TWO LIQUOR RAIDS SUNDAY

Sunday was a busy day with the police department for two liquor raids were made in the Fore River district. The raiding officer was Inspector Goodhue who was accompanied by Officers Cahill, Farrell, Dhooge, Malone and Olsen.

The first place visited was that of Felix Charubini at 11 Lancaster street. Here the police seized 50 bottles of beer, eight galoins of beer in a barrel a barrel of wine, three empty beer barrels and a bottling outfit.

The second place visited was that of Gille Charubini at 9 Lancaster street

Here the police got two barrels of beer and forty empty beer bottles.

When the police entered the premises they found a game of cards in progress and there was a great hustle on the part of the occupants to get away. Most of the men jumped out of the windows leaving their coats behind, and in this manner got away.

Those that did not get away were arrested. They were Giovanni Dinuzie, for gaming on the Lord's day. Frank Cochie and Caesar Monteromamo for being present at a game on the Lord's day. The men who occupied the tenements were among these that fled on the approach of the police.

BRIEFS

Joseph W. Hayden of Howard avenue is confined to his home by illness.

A social dancing party was held in Electa hall, Saturday evening by the Colonial orchestra.

Officers of Mt. Wollaston lodge I. O. O. F. will be publically installed tonight at Alpha hall. The installation ceremonies will be followed by a banquet and dancing.

Herman H. Wieting, S. D. G. R., accompanied by members of John Adams Council, will install officers of Manet Council, Royal Arcanum, Wednesday evening.

John Hay of Cherry street recently received a box of coffee, sent him by mail, from a friend in the Sandwich Islands. He is very generously giving samples to his friends.

Never was there a more handsome sight than the front of the First church this morning. The whole front was covered with a white frost making it look almost like marble.

Cornelius M. Duggan of this city High Chief Ranger, M. C. O. F. will be one of the guests at the 28th anniversary of Shield Court, Holyoke, at Hotel Hamilton, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Albert H. Hall of East Squantum street entertained a party of friends Saturday evening. Several games were played and songs were sung, and all had an enjoyable evening. Light refreshments were served by the hostess.

The annual installation banquet of Ave Maria Council K. of C., will be held in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, this evening. The officers will be installed by Deputy Charles J. Brady and suite.

Mrs. Estelle I. Evans P. G. C., assisted by Mrs. Marguerite G. Brunet, G. C. Miss Mary M. Doyle, G. G. N. and Mrs. Mary E. Oxton of the grand committee on appeals will install officers of Quincy Lodge, New England order of Protection on Friday evening.

—Free flour and cereals for the first 12 months of married life will be presented to the first three girl students of the domestic science department of the Cheney State Normal school at Cheney, Wash., who become brides. This is the promise made to the 20 members of the class by Samuel Glasgow, president of the Centennial Mill company of Spokane. Mr. Glasgow entertained the co-ed cooks here last week. He took them to visit the Spokane bakery, the Washington cracker company's plant and a cold storage house and offered to keep the domestic science department of the school supplied with white flour, Graham flour, whole wheat flour and cereals as long as he is at the head of the company. As a parting souvenir each of the girls was presented with a bon bon dish and a silver spoon. Mr. Glasgow some time ago made a similar pact with the girls of the Washington State College at Pullman, and already has been called upon to send flour to college girl brides.

CATHOLIC CLUB MATINEE WHIST

Ladies Play Whist for Charity Saturday at Colonial Hall

HANDSOME PRIZES

A most enjoyable whist party was held Saturday afternoon in Colonial hall, by the Quincy Catholic club, the committee in charge being Mrs. Charles C. Hearn, Mrs. Edward D. Barrett, Mrs. John A. McGowan, Mrs. John Lyons, Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha, Mrs. Edward J. Murphy, Mrs. J. J. McAnarney, and Miss Mary Carey, assisted by Misses Esther Dasha, Esther Beckford, Lillian McDonnell, Emily Dinegan, Carmel Brogan, Agnes Reardon and Stella Brown.

After two hours of play and good scoring, all interest centered on the result of the play, the following carrying of the honors: Mrs. M. E. Cook, Mrs. R. E. Foy, Mrs. Geo. T. Magee, Mrs. W. E. Murphy, Miss Julia Dolan, Mrs. Rednor Coombs, Mrs. James E. Coyle, Mrs. M. C. King, Mrs. Elizabeth Neary, and Mrs. Francis Dolan, and consolation, Mrs. Joseph Griffin.

BOWLING AND BASKET BALL

The local Y. M. C. A. Bowling team will journey to Boston tomorrow night for the first game in the roll-off, of the Y. M. C. A. league. The Quincy team meets Brocketon, and will be composed of the following men: Burns, Beane, Brooks, Jones and Alstein

The matches will be rolled at the Old South alleys on Washington street.

BASKET BALL RESULTS.

1st Game	Yale	28
	Michigan	8
2nd Game	Columbia	29
	Navy	14
3rd Game	Harvard	24
	Tech	14
4th Game	Carlisle	24
	Army	22

Carlisle sprung a big surprise package on Lee Brooks' Army team in the last game of the evening, by outplaying them all through the 1st half thes core ending this session 7 to6.

In the 2nd half, Army soon evened up the score, which then see-sawed back and forth until the end of the half, with a tie at 22 to 22. After two minutes of extra play Capt. Thomas of Carlisle caged a dandy basket from the extreme right of the floor, and the game was over, ending 24 to 22.

This is the first game which Carlisle has won and also the first that Army has lost. The latter team probably underated Carlisle, who found their opponents easier than they thought.

The defat from Army gives Harvard a clear lead in the League.

TODAY'S COURT.

James P. Flanagan was arraigned for assault on William J. Vaughn at the Quincy Home. Case continued until Friday.

Frank Tochmia and Ceasere Monteromani were fined 5 each and Giovanni Dinsugio 15 for gaming on the Lord's day.

Martin MBcCarty of Weymouth and Daniel J. Doran of Quincy were fined 15 each for drunkeness.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Col. Roosevelt's conversation these days seems to consist mainly of declarations that he will not say anything.

From the way some one leaves that door open up in Medicine Hat, we are convinced that he was brought up in a barn.

We can't tell whether we shall need any more wood or coal this winter until we hear from the ground-hog Feb. 2.

When a very rich man marries a very poor girl, that's romance. When a very rich girl marries a very poor man, that's fiction.

As the woman suffrage movement is spreading rapidly, it would be well to have all school boys instructed in sewing on buttons and darning stocking.

48,000 quarts champagne were absorbed in 35 Chicago hotels New Year's eve. Those that attended the Christian Endeavor society that night did more work next day.

Relative to the crusade against public drinking cups, some one suggests a device that a man can carry in his hat. But if a fellow has a hat, what else does he need?

Now it appears that Morse won $2,000 while speculating in Atlanta jail. If he were given a free hand, no doubt the government could get all the jail expenses paid.

THE WINTER VACATION.

It is with much envy that the average man, barely able to squeeze out a beggarly week or two outing in the heat of summer, reads of the growing habit of the winter vacation among people of wealth. The glowing pictures of life at Palm Beach and in Southern California seem suggestive to him that the good things of life are distributed with tragic lack of justice.

And yet after all, the majority of the men that hustle to these scenes of rest and amusement live under such a strain as to be on the verge of nervous prostration. In spite of all his systematic devices to handle great masses of detail, the modern business man can not avoid the penalty of this high tension.

Every time he takes on a new factory or new railroad or new law case to a day's work already filled to the limit, he wears down in nerve fiber, he pushes his jaded machine of a body to the verge of neurasthenia. Similarly with women whose struggle to keep up appearances on a given income involves an equal grind.

Thus many a man who to an observer might appear care-free and luxurious, conceals at heart the burden of overwork and conduct of top-heavy enterprises, and has garnered very little of the world's happiness.

THE REVELS.

All roads will lead to Alpha hall, Tuesday evening when the Art committee of the Quincy Women's club will hold Twelfth Night Revels. It is expected by the committee that only those in costume will go on the floor in the early part of the evening, otherwise the beauty of the scene will be marred. Eight o'clock is the time set for the procession to start. If there is no delay in starting there will be time for the ceremony and the entertainment and general dancing. The order of dance provides two square dances, so that all may have an opportunity to take part in the festivities. The great big cake is baked a beautiful rich brown and was made by a member of the club, members of the club are also providing bountifully for the refreshments. The prospects are for a very large gathering.

AN ALLEGORY OF METROPOLITAN PLANNING.

(By J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr.)

Once upon a time 38 families agreed to build a house. They had enough land, considerable borrowing capacity and unlimited self-confidence. Each family wanted to build its own part of the house exactly as it pleased. The cellar and the roof were admitted to be common to all, and after some discussion they decided to go shares on these parts of the building and have a builder and a building committee to look after them.

Then they started to draw their plans. And the Brooklines planned an elegant suite with tiled baths, French windows, open fire-places and white marble exterior. The Miltons schemed a cosy flat with English half-timbered work outside and leaded windows, the Bostons laid out three stories of rooms, 26 in all, the lower story fireproof, the upper two warranted to burn in any weather. The Nahants wanted sleeping porches and white stucco, the Somervilles chose concrete blocks, the Wakefields stained shingles and the Winchesters a Colonial effect in white clapboards. The differences did not stop with the outside, for the Quincys stood for 7 foot studding while the Reveres on the same floor wanted 12. The Lynns were content with a narrow entry, while the Swampscotts beyond them wanted a wide one, and everybody quarreled over the placing of the stairs. The families on the ground floor didn't need stairs and didn't want to pay for any. The top story families didn't care to deaden their floors, and most of the plumbing pipes had to run through a neighbor's best rooms and could be heard if not seen.

When the plans were completed, the heads of families held an interesting meeting at which each proclaimed his own needs and intentions to be carried out regardless, or else he and his would go on living in a back street in an inconvenient ugly house all by themselves. At last some one said, "Let us call in an architect and show him our plans. I don't suppose he can give every one of us exactly what we are asking for. Maybe some of our climbers will have to comfort themselves with cut-glass door knobs and silk rugs just for their own use, but if he knows his business he will give us the right kind of entries and halls and stairs and lifts, and will make the house look better, sell better and cost less than our brilliant inharmonious efforts. If we don't like his plans we can make him show others till we get what we want—within reason.

Shall we do it?" And the 38 families saw the light and employed the expert and he builded better than they knew.

MRS. MARY W. PAINE.

Mrs. Mary W. Paine, wife of Lewis W. Paine, and mother of Elmer L. Paine of Hall's undertaking rooms, died suddenly at her home 44 Revere road, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Paine, wha had apparently been enjoying her usual health lay down to take a nap and passed away while she was sleeping. Death was due to heart trouble. Mrs. Paine was 81 years of age and leaves a husband and one son, Elmer L. Paine.

TROLLEY EXPRESS.

Throughout eastern Massachusetts there is at present time a great awakening of interest in the Electric Express.Communities where the service is not being operated, having seen the advantages being received by those where it is, are demanding that it be installed and it is probable that the coming year will see a very wide extension of this newest and best method of transportation.

There is a strong, fundamental reason behind all of this interest. This reason is that the service has now been given a good trying out and it has demonstrated beyond all question that it has great merit and that it is possessed of advantages that must be obained if the march of progression is to be kept up.

In this section he service has been running since last September and nothing but the best of comments are heard concerning it. Four services a day are being given to and from Boston with pick-up and delivery at each end on each service. The cost is extremely low and the service has been very prompt, reliable and generally satisfactory.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Talk of Dr. J. Gardner Smith Before Parents' Ass'n.

WHAT IT IS

Following is an abstract of the address of Dr. J. Gardner Smith on "Physical Education in our Public Schools, What it is and why," delivered Thursday evening before the members of the Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Adams school.

"The department of physical education should include within its domain every environmental influence which is related to the health, form and efficiency of the child.

"It should be the object of this department to apply to the growing boys and girls all available means that have a tendency to develop a perfectly harmonious individual, whose efficiency will enable him to meet all the ordinary calls of life and most of the extraordinary ones, not omitting the inculcation of those virtues and principles which will fit him to become a part of organized society to its advantage.

"As this department grows and develops, more and more will it view with a critical eye and question, as to deleterious effects upon the health and physique of the child, every phase of educational activity, brought into the life of the child, whether that activity be the purely sedentary one on the mental and theoretic side or the cramped physical activities of a pseudo industrial side.

"It should not be concluded from the above statement that this department necessarily opposes either the cultural or utilitarian physical activities of the present educational system, but rather that it aids those activities by supplying a counteracting healthful, good form and energy producing environment that will neutralize the ill effects of those artivities and return to those departments more enthusiastic and efficient pupils.

The importance of steps looking toward the health of children in our public schools is indicated by the following facts:—The school is the only governmental department that directly assumes control of children's lives; 2—At least nine out of every ten of all American children are subject to this control; 3—Such control is maintained during the critical years of from six to fourteen.

"With the changes in the length of the school term and the increase in the number of years of schooling demanded of the child, has come a great advance in the standards of the work required. When the standards were low, the work was not beyond the capacity of even the weaker children, but with close grading, fuller courses, higher standards and constantly more insistent demands for intellectual attainments, this has changed. Pupils have been unable to keep up with their classes.

"As a result of physical examinations conducted by the physicians connected with schools, surprising numbers of children have been found who, through defective eyesight or hearing, have been seriously handicapped in their school work.

"Other conditions are found which have a great and formerly unrecognized influence on the welfare, happiness and mental vigor of the child. Attention has been directed to the real significance of the adenoids and enlarged tonsils and swollen glands. Communities are beginning to ask, not whether they can afford to take a step to safeguard in schools the welfare of their children, but whether they can afford not to take such steps.

"Individual efficiency, however, rests not alone on education, or intelligence, but is equally dependent on physical health and vigor. Hence, if the state may make mandatory training in intelligence, it may also command training to secure physical soundness and capacity.

"A wrong concept is often deduced from the familiar phrase "A sound mind is a sound body." Some are apt to get the concept of mind and body as two independent entities, living in close relationship, but either one or both of which may be independently educated to a degree of soundness.

"A truer concept is that of a sound mind in absolute control, of a body whose soundness, capacity for, and responsiveness to service, has been created by the mind. The problem is primarily psychological and the child should be given as clear a concept as he is able to grasp, of the

In many cities where the eight-day campaign has been held those who are closest to the movement give unqualified testimony to the fact that they believe it to be the greatest movement in the christian church in many years The specialists place the emphasis in the right place they believe.

The following is from a letter to John A. Gardner a merchant in Boston, which was written to him by his former pastor in St. Louis, the Rev. I. W. McCreary: "Having passed through the Eight-Day Campaign. I can speak with assurance when I say that the Men and Religion Forward Movement is one of the greatest and most significant movements of the churches of America in the last fifty years. I am coming to believe that this movement is God's last call to the Church. He is not shut up to the present church organization to accomplish His purposes, and unless the aroused manhood of the Church shall rally to the crying need of the hour, God will choose some other agency by which to save the city and the rural community as well. I am not unmindful as I make this statement, of the fact that Christ said 'The Gates of Hades shall not prevail against His Church, but unless the Church readjusts herself, it would be hard to convince me that the present, divided, worldly, visionless, irresponsible organization we call the Church of today is Christ's church.

"I tell you Prof. James was right when he said the Church needs today the moral equivalent of war. We need prophets of God to call us to repentance as in Jeremiah's time, and I believe this movement with its five fold messiage is placing the emphasis where it properly belongs. Not that other things could not be emphasized (I wish they would give special emphasis to the prayer meeting) but the things they do stress are absolutely essential to the salvation of the church. And even as I use the term salvation of the church it is with a sense of crushing humiliation for God knows the Church is the institution to save men, not the institution to be saved.

"Yet with the present world-wide restlessness, the Church is not prepared to meet the demands of the hour. I believe that the readjustment will come, for I have said all the time that I might show you how important the work of this movement really is. I wish I might have been in such a conference 10 years ago, for I believe it would have been worth more to me than any one year of my college course. By all means get into it body, mind and soul. Lay aside business for the next fifteen days if need be. You will meet me before Our Master in the judgment to thank me for such advice. Get all the men of our acquaintance into it. It will revolutionize their lives. Its only value to Boston can come in direct proportion as it gets a prayerful hearing. I covet your opportunities. It will mean strenuous days but it is the Master's business. Foreswear ease that will come yonder. Enough for us to know this fevered old world awaits from us the Great Physician's remedy."

There are three important features of the campaign that interest the men of the Quincy district. These are, first the big banquet at Tremont Temple, Boston, Monday evening at 6.30 o'clock; second the two conventions to be held Tuesday and Wednesday mornings at 9.15 at Park Street church, Boston, and third the five institutes to be held in five different places around Park Street church which come at 4.30 each day. These institutes are in charge of the specialists and are as vital to the success of the movement as any part of the program. Already nearly 200 men have pledged their attendance.

The fourth and the one which will be attended by probably more men that can find it possible to get into Boston to the institutes will be the platform meetings in the Quincy Y. M. C. A. hall Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings at eight o'clock. These meetings were to be held at Bethany church but on account of meetings to be held there on two of the evenings the change was necessary.

SPEAKERS.

The man who probably towers above the others, is Fred B. Smith of New York City. Mr. Smith is one of the religious work secretaries of the International committee. In fact Mr. Smith is the discoverer of the movement. He is a sane but very forceful speaker. Another man who is widely known is Charles Stelzle also of New York City. He is the missionary of the Presbyterian church to the working men. He is probably better known to the working men of American than any other preacher. Among the other speakers Monday evening at the banquet are R. A. Waite, M. A. Honline, Y. Minakuchi, John H .Elliott and Jas. R. Smith.

PLATFORM MEETINGS.

Included in the Quincy district are the churches in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, East Milton, Quincy and Weymouth. At the platform meetings to be held on the five evenings referred to the subjects will be Tuesday evening Boys' work, C. C. Robinson; Wednesday evening Missions, J. M. Moore; Thursday evening Evangelism, W. E. Biederwolf; Friday evening, Bible Study, M. A. Honline; Social Service, Saturday evening, T. N. Carver. These men are among the best in their line that can be secured in the country.

TOLERANCE IN GOOD WORKS.

The Men and Religion Forward Movement may not achieve its results or reach the men outside in precisely the direct manner hoped for. But it may have a good effect that was not anticipated upon the workers and missionaries themselves. Tolerance must be the basis of successful work in such a field, and men working side by side are likely to become vastly more tolerant of each other's sects and creeds and learn the secret of strength in union. Sympathy on the inside means momentum and is the magnetism to draw men from the outside. The principal significance of the Men and Religion Forward Movement at this time is its promise of more permanent unity and a vastly broader religious spirit.—St. Louis Republic.

It is to be hoped that the result will be the same as it has been in other cities. If this is the case there is no question but that Quincy will be a better city to live in and there will be a change in the lives of men.

It is understood that these meetings are for men only, but that all the men in Quincy are most welcome. There will be good singing and after the address there will be an opportunity to ask questions of the speaker.

Men who believe that the religion of Jesus Christ can do what he taught His disciple it would, would do well to think twice before they let this opportunity go by them.

The meetings are for the purpose finding out just where the churches stand in relation to various lines of work they are doing and see why they are not doing more to accomplish the object they are organized to gain. After finding out where their weakness is they will be shown practical ways in which to accomplish this end.

The official program may be had at the office of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Quincy is especially favored in being one of the centres and for this reason the men should make the most of this opportunity.

Q.—"Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?"—I Corinthians vi, 2. Does this signify that the world is not now on trial for eternal life? (C. J. W.)

Answer .—This Scripture is in conformity with the united testimony of the teachings of all the Prophets and the Apostles to the effect that he world's judgement day, or trial time, is not in this present Christian Era, but is yet future.—"God hath appointed a day (a thousand-year day—2 Peter iii, 8) in the which He will judge the world in righteousness." (Acts xvii, 31.) Those who, in association with Christ, shall judge the world in mercy, justice and love, are now being qualified for that high office, by having developed in them saintly, Christlike characters. These "saints," who have learned to love their neighbors as themselves, and who even love their enemies, are the ones who, in the future age, will offer every inducement to the world of mankind to come into harmony with the gracious requirements of the Divine Law of love and justice and receive eternal life. The fact that the followers of Christ are not judging now proves conclusively that the world is not on trial for eternal life at the present time. The judgment day, in place of being a time of terror, distress and sorrow, is represented in the Scriptures as being a special time of joy and gladness for the world. —Psalm xcvi.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

CHRIST CHURCH.

Holy communion was held as usual at eight o'clock and morning prayer and sermon at 10.30, the Rev Richard E. Armstrong officiating. Interesting sessions of the Sunday school and Galahad Brotherhood were held at noon and the choral even song was well attended.

This evening at eight o'clock will be held the annual Ladies' night of the Men's club. Instead of a banquet as in past years an illustrated lecture will be given by Edwin W. Pierce after which refreshments will be served, and an entertainment given. The hospitality of the club is extended freely to all ladies of the parish, and it is expected that the parish house will be filled by members of the club and their guests.

Tuesday afternoon at 3.45 a party is to be given for the Junior Auxiliary to which all members are invited. It will be a New Year party.

It is hoped the meeting of St. Margaret's Guild on Jan. 19, at the home of Miss Nellie Drummond will be fully attended so that a good evening's work may be successfully accomplished.

Officers elected for the year 1912 of the Women's Guild are: President —Mrs. C. E. Haskins, 1st Vice President—Mrs. H. E Ricker, 2d Vice President—Mrs. F. Brewer, Secretary—Mrs. G. H. Brown, Treasurer—Mrs. C. Wilson. The next meeting will be held on Thursday Jan. 18. Important business concerning the annual parish meeting All members are urged to be present.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Rev. Fannie Austin, pastor of the Universalist church, occupied the pulpit Sunday, taking for her topic, "The Unknown Quantity." "In the soul of every person is implanted the sense of divine right. The underlying principle of all that tends to uplift and elevate mankind is inherent in a greater or less degree in the human heart. We may be discouraged at its slow development in some instances, but we must also take into consideration the environments and surroundings by which they are encompassed.

The child who is born into a christian household who is taught religiously from the mother's knee is immeasurably blessed, while in sad contrast the child who is born to lowly and degraded parents, where the divine sense is undeveloped and lies dormant, is to be infinitely pitied. But we trust that God in his infinite charity and wisdom will finally bring all souls into the light of his Imperishable Love." The sermon was very inspiring. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH

At the morning service yesterday Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a strong sermon against Capital Punishment from the text "Thou shalt not kill" In the light of the 20th century, he said, punishment should have three ends in view. 1—Justice, 2—The protection of society. 3—The reformation of the criminal. Capital Punishment, being a relic of barbarism, ought to be abolished because—1—Society has no right to take life; 2—It does not deter; 3—It injures and lowers the moral standard of the community 4—The security of the public does not demand it; 5—It is contrary to the spirit of the religion of Jesus.

At the vespers another large congregation gathered. A fine musical program was rendered by the Alpha Male quartet of Boston and the pastor delivered a fitting sermonette from the text "Overcome evil with Good" Romans 12-21.

The Unitarian Sunday school union of Greater Boston meets in the Church of the Disciples tonight at 7 o'clock.

The meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Social society will be held in the vestry at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening. The entertainment will be given by Walter G. Gile, impersonator.

At the Women's Alliance meeting Wednesday, at 2.30 Mrs. W. I. Lawrance will speak on "The Sunday school its purpose and its needs." Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney wil speak on the needs of our Sunday school All are invited.

The mid-winter meeting of the New England Associate Alliance will be held in West Newton, Thursday, Jan 18, at 10.45 A. M. Rev. W. I. Lawrance will speak on "Consecration" and the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes on "Church Unity." Trains leave South Station for West Newton at 10.10 A. M.

Members and friends of the Y. P. R. U. are invited to an indoor picnic to be held in the parish house of the Third Religious society, Richmond Street, Dorchester, Jan. 20 from 4 till 10.30 P. M. There will be games, supper, a twilight organ recital.

Sunday, Jan. 21 at 7 P. M. Rev. William Ware Locke will give an illustrated lecture on the American Indians.

The annual business meeting of the church will be held Monday evening, Jan. 22.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

Rev. L. C. Manchester, D. D., of Wollaston preached at St. Chrysostom's church Sunday morning He is a frequent attendant at the church and well known to the church people. He was greeted by a large congregation which appreciated his able and thoughful discourse.

The meeting of the Men's club tonight will be taken up with business. The club is planning for an old fashioned minstrel show in February.

A dance is to be held Thursday evening in Brasee hall by the Girls' Friendly society.

The Junior Auxiliary meets at 4 and the Boys' club at 7.15 on Tuesday and the Girls' Friendly on Friday at 8 P. M.

No department of parish life feels the need of a parish house more keenly than the Sunday school, and the pupils, even the very small ones, are to be given the chance to assist materially in procuring it. Can 180 pupils with their heart in the work, collect a mile of pennies? Others have done it, and ours can try at any rate, for a scheme is being devised by the committee of arrangements, consisting of Mr. Purdom, Mr. Poch, Mrs. Fulton and Mrs. Parlee, which, once it gets a start, will bear good results What is necessary is enthusiasm, and this the School can be depended upon to provide.

BETHANY CHURCH.

The morning service at Bethany church was well attended, despite the cold weather. Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Lowell, occupied the pulpit and took for his text, 10th chapter 38th verse of St. Matthew; "And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me."

Mr. Willmott said in part that Jesus has many noble followers to perpetuate his teachings. Taking up the cross is not synonymous with long faces, sorrow and adversity, but of joy and happiness. Taking up the cross does not mean laying down our highest aims, and loftiest ideals, but using them for the advancement and uplifting of our fellowmen. Devoted men and women are giving their time and talents to settlement work in the slums and to Salvation Army work and are accomplishing a vast amount of good. Taking up the cross does not mean duty, but love. The love of Christ in our hearts will make us more charitable to each other, more loving in the larger relations of life and better christians.

The sermon was eloquent and inspiring. The choir rendered appropriate music. Mr. Willmott conducted the services in the chapel in the evening which were well atended.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Alfred R. Hussey of Baltimore again occupied the pulpit of First church Sunday morning, bringing out a good-sized congregation to listen to his sermon.

There was the usual good attendance of the Sunday school under the leadership of Supt. Johnson assisted by Rev. Mr. Hussey.

The Junior Laymen will hold their regular meeting on Monday evening, at 7.45.

The Fragment Society holds an afternoon sewing meeting on Wednesday, at 1.30. The date for the fair has been fixed for March 6. An outside friend of the society has offered to make holders for the sale if she is provided with the proper pieces. Any one having suitable pieces which she would be willing to donate for this purpose, may send them to Mrs. John Christiansen, Irving place.

Sunday, Jan. 21, Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, will occupy the pulpit.

The parish meeting on Monday, Jan. 22, at 8 P. M. is important. All members of the parish should attend as matters of great moment are to be discussed.

If every one could have heard the appreciative letters of thanks for Christmas cards and gifts which Mrs. Nichols read from her Cheerful Letter correspondents, her appeal for picture postals and postage would receive immediate attention, as it should. The Alliance does no work which is more worth while or more far-reaching in its mission of cheer and comfort. Postal cards cost a trifle but the pleasure they give, cannot be estimated and every postage stamp carries encouragement to some soul shut away from the outside world either by illness or isolation.

HOLY NAME SOCIETIES

"The very presence of one who is evil exerts an evil influence, just as the presence of one who is good exerts a beneficent influence."

Fr. Scannell then went on to explain such characters as Windthorst and Bismarck, David, Goliath, and Daniel O'Connell. He depicted the different traits of these men, and paid a great encomium to the last mentioned for the wonderful achievments attained. Concluding he said:

"Personal responsibilty! How have you men of the Holy Name Society caught it?

"Listen men! Grasp this subject! Realize it! Make it your own! Live up to it! Put it in practice and you shall become a power for good that nothing can withstand!

"Know you not, you men before me this afternoon, the pick of four parishes, the flower of Braintree and the Quincys,—know you not that you are sentinels on urgent duty, keeping watch over Catholic interests of your respective parishes, ever ready to answer the guard? Watchmen, what of the night! How stands the Holy Name Society in Braintree, Atlantic, West Quincy and Quincy? Each one as sentinel shall be personally responsible to Jesus Christ for his answer.

"It is said that brute creation knows not its power. If it did, it might sweep men from the face of the earth.

"The Holy Name Society knows not its power—the power of personal responsibility centered in a single thought, working for a common end —greater honor for the Holy Name.

"If it did, wrong would go down before it and the society would go onward in its march of triumph until some day, in the never ceasing battle against error, the men of the Holy Name must take their place in the vanguard of the champions of the church—everywhere sounding the slogan—personal responsibility and greater honor and glory to the Holy Name of Jesus."

COMING EVENTS CALENDAR.

PREPARED TO ENTER BOSTON

Grand Trunk Railroad Makes Long Contemplated Move

FORMALLY ASKS PERMISSION

Petitions Massachusetts Legislature For Permission to Build From New Hampshire Border—Two Independent Lines In State, as Well as Operation of Steamshipss, Also Planned—Great Trade Possibilities

Boston, Jan. 15.—Officials of the Grand Trunk railroad have issued a statement that the Grand Trunk railroad is headed for Boston. From some point on the Central Vermont road in the Connecticut valley the road plans to build across New Hampshire and Middlesex county into Boston; also the big Canadian company proposes to build a line from Blackstone to Boston, which, with the new Palmer-Providence road, will give an independent Grand Trunk line between Boston and Providence and another line from Douglas to Worcester.

A steamship line in New England waters, giving a new independent line between Boston and New York or other points, is also planned.

The Southern New England Railroad company, which is the legal name of the Central Vermont-Grand Trunk corporation, petitioned the Massachusetts legislature for the right to extend its lines in Masaschusetts and to operate steamships under authority of Massachusetts law.

Although no mention is made of the Boston location of the railroad, it is believed that a site has already been discussed and that the company is only awaiting the permission of the legislature to complete its plans.

This move, which has been contemplated for some time, means a direct connection between Boston and the Pacific coast, and great trade possibilities for Boston in the northwest.

When work will be started depends entirely upon the legislature. The Grand Trunk is ready to go ahead. The line will enter Massachusetts from some point on the New Hampshire line. It may parallel the Boston and Maine Concord division line.

Application will at once be made for similar rights in New Hampshire, to provide a connection from White River Junction, to which point the road's line now extends. Owing to the fact that the New Hampshire legislature meets biennially and not again until 1913, the matter will be taken up at once with the railroad commission in that state, the company asking permission for authority to go ahead until the legislature shall give final authority.

Business men and city officials who learned of the intention of the Grand Trunk rejoiced at the opportunity it would give for the development of the port of Boston. It will mean, they said, that Boston will become the virtual outlet of this great system during a period of six months in the year when Montreal is inaccessible to steamships.

IN HORSE'S NOSEBAG

Bandits Drop $2600 When Closely Pursued After Bank Robbery

Newport Beach, Cal., Jan. 15.—Posses have kept up the search for three bandits who blew open the safe of the State bank at Newport and escaped.

The robbers reached Olive, eighteen miles southeast of here, before their stolen horse dropped from exhaustion. When the horse fell the bandits separated. Two went opposite ways, apparently abandoning a companion, wounded by a charge of buckshot fired by William Hall, a saloonkeeper.

The robbers escaped with $599. They dropped a horse's nosebag containing $2600 taken from the bank vault when Hall opened fire.

Bert Kimball, mistaken by Hall for one of the robbers, and shot, is in a critical condition.

WILSON FOR FRENCH POST

Assistant Secretary of State May Become an Ambassador

Washington, Jan. 15.—Huntington Wilson, assistant secretary of state, is to succeed Robert Bacon as ambassador to France, according to persisten rumors in diplomatic circles.

Thomas C. Dawson, resident diplomatic officer of the state department, whose name was mentioned in connection with the post of ambassador to Brazil, to which Edward V. Morgan was appointed, will be made assistant secretary of state, the same rumors say.

Mr. Bacon resigned a few days ago, because he has been elected a fellow of Harvard university.

Aged Woman Burns to Death

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 15.—Death by burning occurred to Miss Annie Merrill, aged 76, at her home here. The woman's body, with the clothes entirely burned off, was found in a sitting position on a chair in her apartments. How the woman came to be burned is unknown.

ultimate ideal to be attained, even though the idea in the child's mind may be very crude in the beginning, developing as he progresses towards the true ideal.

"Given the strong impluse toward a healthy body with correspondingly healthful thoughts, and the vitality and physical inspiration resulting from properly supervised games, with their adjuncts; fresh air, proper diet, cleanliness, sufficient sleep and we are now able to call forth the next step in our building and this step will be the corrective gymnastics.

"The ends for which corrective gymnastics are given are, from the artistic point of view, to mould the body in form and proportion to the highest ideal conceivable by human mind and from the physiological point of view, to stretch the flexors and shortened ligaments and to strengthen the extensors so that the vital organs may have unrestricted room for growth, development and functioning.

"The third step necessary to attain our ideal is a system of educational gymnastics, the effects of which are neuro-muscular and the purpose of which is to give absolute control of the body through a graded system of increasingly complex movements resulting in that high capacity for co-ordination, which means ability to do things.

"Capacity for adaptability is the keynote of efficiency. All the strength desirable for efficiency, it seems to me, will be developed incidentally in the use of the other factors of this work.

"While much could be said as to the development through the games, of those mental and physical qualities that make for the efficiency of the individual in caring for himself in society, we should not forget, that in our entire educational system, it is only in these games that we find a means naturally adaptable to the child for the development of a capacity for organized effort and for securing those psycho-sociological effects making for social adjustment, to fit him to become a part of society.

"In order to secure all advantages offered by the play factor of physical education, there should be organized a public school athletic and gymnastic league, with divisions and subdivisions, corresponding to the separate schools and grades. The entire student body should have the opportunity of taking part in field and track work.

"Class contests and class records should be given preference, though not necessarily to the elimination of individual contests and records, the policy of the department being the greatest good to the greatest number."

Bryan's Presidential Ticket

Washington, Jan. 15.—Following a visit to Washington by William J. Bryan, when he conferred with Senator Kern, it was reported about the capital that Bryan's choice for Democratic standard bearer is Senator Kern of Indiana, with Senator O'Gorman of New York for vice president.

FOUR ARE SUFFOCATED

Women and Children Perish In Their Home While Asleep

Boston, Jan. 15.—Trapped by an exploding lamp, Mrs. Catherine Connors, her daughter, Mrs. Mary Logue, and the latter's two children, John and Julia, were suffocated in their attic room on the top floor of the 3½-story brick dwelling at 153 Leverett street late last night.

They were found lifeless when the firemen rushed up stairs. Quickly the occupants on the lower floors sought the street upon the discovery of the blaze, which burned itself out in the attic, causing only about $200 property damage.

The victims occupied a double attic room and were asleep when suffocated. According to the fire officials the fire was due to a lighted lamp setting fire to the room.

GOING BEFORE CONGRESS

Hitchcock Favors Government Ownership of Telegraph Lines

Washington, Jan. 15.—Acquisition of the telegraph lines of the United States by the government and their operation as a part of the postal service will be recommended to congress in a short time by Postmaster General Hitchcock.

For a year or more Hitchcock has had this recommendation under consideration. After a thorough study of the operation of government controlled lines and postal telegraph systems in foreign countries, he has decided to urge the matter upon congress.

GULL POINT QUINCY FAVORED FOR DRY DOCK

The following letter received by the Directors of the Port of Boston, respecting the report of January 15th to the General Court of Massachusetts is of interest to Quincy.

It is the unanimous opinion of competent, critical, skilled engineers that the best kind of Dry Dock for merchant steamships is a Roller Dry Dock, because it brings the vessels high and dry in light and air, especially as the main use of Dry Docks is for cleaning and painting vessels. The work can be accomplished in half the time otherwise required, and with all the benefit of wind and sun, instead of the work being down ina cramped hollow and in dampness as is found in graving docks.

The largest merchant ships of the greatest tonnage capacity seldom, if ever, exceed seven thousand tons dead weight; so that a Dry Dock of that capacity is ample for any mercantile port. Should a greater dock ever be necessary, it is only a matter of arithmetic to calculate for a greater strain.

LOCATION.

Gull Point, Quincy, is an ideal sot for the site of such Dry Dock, having a good, bold water front, is well protected and eminently suitable, and again the land is at very small cost and is the best site available in Boston harbor.

PROBABLE COMPLETE COST.

The Dry Dock, with site and appurtenances, may be furnished for a half million dollars, and it is more adequate to marine demands than either a graving or floating dock, it being superior in landing a ship high and dry. Shipwrights who have used all kinds of dry docks prefer to use the Roller Dock as the most healthful, serviceable and economical; so that the expensive floating or graving dock is a sheer waste of public money, and in most cases unremunerative; whereas the Roller Dry Dock is more than self supporting and generally proves a good investment.

Some such docks are even rented to shipworkers, year after year, upon lease, at ten per cent per annum upon capital.

Ship agents express themselves, and say:—"That they can induce many more liners to come to this port if dry dock facilities and low rates of using are available." So that a Roller Dry Dock is shown to be a good paying investment.

Those who demand a graving or floating dock would seem unaquainted with requirements or incompetent agitators, not knowing what is really most beneficial to serve the end in view.

The Navy Department look after their weighty battleships themselves, citizens are not invited and should not be compelled to provide for that class of craft. Honesty and economy forbid the wasting of public money upon floating or graving dry docks when the purpose is better served at one-sixth of the cost.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Women Control Their Own Savings In Postal Savings Banks

Washington, Jan. 15.—About 15 percent of the depositors in the postal savings banks are married women, over whose money on deposit there a husband has absolutely no claim, postal officials say.

Of the 13,869 depositors on June 30, the latest date for which figures are available, 2159 were married women and 2769 foreigners. While no statistics have been prepared, it is estimated there are now about 200,000 depositors.

TROOPS AWAIT MAYOR'S CALL

Two Hundred and Fifty Men Under Arms In Lawrence

OPEN THREATS OF VIOLENCE

Strike Leader Attacks Mill Owners, Newspapers and City Officials—Says There Will Be Trouble, but His Followers Will Not Be to Blame If Blood Is Shed—Workers Drawing Up Their Demands

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 15.—All hope of a peaceful settlement of the mill operatives' strike has been abandoned, and so serious does the situation appear that three companies of militia, including a battery of artillery, have received orders to stand in readiness to aid the police in quelling the expected demonstration today.

A repetition of Friday's riot or worse is feared. The foreign operatives have been worked up to a high pitch by their leader's oratory, and seem to be determined to make trouble for those who desire to remain at work.

The strikers announced that every mill will be surrounded by pickets. They also will distribute circulars, printed in various languages, among all the operatives in the city.

Adjutant General Pearson of the state militia arrived in Lawrence yesterday afternoon from Lowell to consult with Mayor Scanlon and Commissioner of Police Lynch. He advised against ordering out the militia unless it is absolutely impossible for the police to handle the strikers.

The militiamen, some 250 in number, reported at the armory at 6 o'clock this morning. They donned their uniforms, armed themselves and are ready to respond should Scanlon issue a precept. The adjutant general furnished the mayor with blank precepts ready to be filled out should the occasion arise.

Firemen and reserves will increase the regular police force to nearly 150. Every available officer is on duty at the mills. Many of the force declare they will draw their clubs at the first sign of a disturbance, instead of attempting to disperse the mob by persuasion, as on Friday.

Any pretence of peacefulness has been thrown aside by the strikers and their leader, Joseph J. Ettor, national organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World. Several mass meetings were held yesterday afternoon and many of those in attendance, encouraged by the absence of uniformed policemen, made open threats of violence. In an inflammatory speech before the French and Italian workers, Ettor attacked the mill owners, the newspapers and city officials, urging the strikers to stand up for their rights and declaring they must win at whatever cost.

"We must keep peace," he said, "but if the mill owners do not keep their 'watchdogs' away from the mills and their 'scab' operatives from work we can't have it. We must do our best to keep those scabs from going to work, regardless of what the police have to say."

The more rabid element of the strikers appear to have gained complete control. At most of the meetings the conservatives, who have counselled peace, were absent.

There was a violent demonstration when two strikers with bandaged heads, participants in Friday's riot, appeared on the platform. Both made short speeches, pointing often at their bandages.

After the close of the meeting Ettor reiterated his statements about trouble.

"Undoubtedly there will be trouble," he said. "However, the blame for it will lie not upon our shoulders, but upon the shoulders of the mill owners. If there is any blood shed it will be their fault. We are not going to allow anyone to work in the mills."

Ettor advised that the mills be shut down until certain demands, which a committee of the workers is drawing up, can be presented to the owners. These demands will be a request for the same wages as before the cut in hours. According to reports submitted by the committee of twenty-eight to Ettor, 1600 operatives now are out. This, however, includes not only trickers, but the several hundred who have been forced out by the walkout.

MADE COINS AT HOME

Youthful Counterfeiter Caught While Passing Bogus Fifty-Cent Piece

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 15.—William Ruediger, 17, of Methuen, was arrested, charged with attempting to pass a counterfeit half-dollar in a 10-cent store. When searched at the station house, seven other spurious coins of the same denomination were found in the boy's pockets.

He finally confessed that he had made the coins himself at his home. The police went there and found several moulds, some lead and copper. The coins were a good imitation except for the ring, which was lacking.

SIDETRACKS LA FOLLETTE

Cummins Said to Be Ready to Announce Candidacy For President

Washington, Jan. 15.—Indications that Senator La Follette will have to take the advice given him at the Jackson day banquet by William R. Hearst and get out of the Republican party are multiplying.

The man whom he counted on most for support was Senator Cummins of Iowa, but Cummins is now on the point of announcing his own candidacy, an action which will drive the last spike into the hopes of the Wisconsin leader.

Iowa will instruct for Cummins, if Cummins is willing, and may instruct for Roosevelt if Cummins thrusts personal ambition behind him.

CERTAIN EMPLOYERS CALLED HEARTLESS

Commission Asks to Fix Minimum Wage For Women

Boston, Jan. 15.—The report of the minimum wage commission was submitted to the legislature today.

The report recomends the appointment of a commission of three members with power to inquire into the wages paid to women in any occupation in the state.

The bill accompanying the report if passed will give the commission power to name a wage board to consist of six members representing the employers, six representing the employes and three others.

It is provided that the commission after a public hearing and an investigation may fix the minimum wage for an occupation. The report says:

"Investigation has shown the commission that certain employers of labor, particularly in the case of women and minors, are avaricious and heartless, oblivious to the needs and morals of their employes, absolutely ignorant of their own wage scale, and what constitutes a living wage."

Sterilized Milk Bad For Babies, According to Harvard Doctor

Boston, Jan. 15.—During the course of his lecture at the Harvard medical school yesterday afternoon upon "The Feeding of Infants," Dr. John L. Morse, assistant professor of pediatrics at the medical school, exploded the popular confidence in scientifically purified milk when he said:

"I fully expect to see a considerable increase of rickets, scurvy and anemia among the babies because of the increased use of sterilized and pasteurized milk. Digestive trouble, always frequent in the case of infants, is increasing to an alarming extent and the trouble is directly traceable to sterilized and pasteurized milk."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SERVING SWEETBREADS.

IN many country neighborhoods sweetbreads can be bought very cheaply from the butcher, chiefly because there is no demand for them in some localities. In cities where they are considered a dainty the price varies.

Calf's sweetbreads should be used. When brought home the sweetbreads should be at once placed in cold water. Soak for an hour, then remove the windpipe, skin and membrane. Put some boiling water into a saucepan, add a teaspoonful of salt and parboil for about a quarter of an hour. Then drain and put into cold water for five minutes. Take away any skin or rough parts that may yet remain. Thus prepared the sweetbreads, if placed where it is cold, will keep for a day and a half.

Broiled Sweetbreads.—Drop the sweetbreads in cold water for an hour. Then place them in boiling salt water, in which there is a teaspoonful of lemon juice or a tablespoonful of vinegar. There should only be water enough to cover them. After they have boiled for twenty minutes take out and put in cold water to stiffen them. When cold wipe and rub with salt and pepper. Wrap with one thickness of buttered paper, pin them in and broil for ten minutes.

Fried Sweetbreads.—Slice the parboiled sweetbreads. The slices should be about three-quarters of an inch thick. See that they are perfectly dry. Flour them, dip in egg and then in bread or cracker crumbs. Fry until they are a light brown. Cut out some rounds of toasted bread and serve on these with cream sauce.

Creamed Sweetbreads. — Parboil a pair of sweetbreads, removing the fibers and waste parts. Take five mushrooms and chop these and the sweetbreads fine. Melt a tablespoonful of butter and mix into it a tablespoonful of flour, stirring until it is smooth. Add a half pint of milk to the flour and butter. Stir until it boils and then put in the mushrooms and sweetbreads, removing from the fire and allowing it to stand in boiling water for about five minutes. Season with a teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Serve on toast or in pattie shells.

HOUSES IN ENGLAND.

Hot In Summer and Seldom Really Warm In Winter.

The Englishman is always surprised by his climate. And you may find that surprise on the face of the man who never prepares for anything but moderate temperature. It is cold. It is hot. The Englishman has built his house on the supposition that it is never going to be either—just temperate. In hot weather he does not think of electric fans, and in cold weather he shrugs his shoulders and endures the cold. But his house is seldom really warm. The Englishman has never taken to his bosom the question of cold. The fireplace is an absurdity. It warms but a section of the room, and few can afford to warm a whole house with fireplaces in every corner!

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu found in Vienna that life would be intolerable (in December) without furs and stoves. And she is surprised at "our obstinacy in shaking with cold six months in the year rather than make use of stoves, which are certainly one of the greatest conveniences of life." So far from spoiling a room, they add to the magnificence of it as shaped in Vienna and Dresden, says Lady Mary. She threatened that on her return there would be a stove in her chamber; but, while the Berliner ofen is still the warmer of the homes across the channel, we stick to the expensive and incompetent fireplace that warms only a corner of the room and one joint of the human body at a time.—London Chronicle.

TO EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ALONE

Belongs the Right to Grant Pardons In the Bay State

GOVERNOR ISSUES STATEMENT

Does Not Seek to Evade Responsibility Under the Law, Though He Personally Does Not Believe In Capital Punishment—Thought to Close Book In Phelps and Richeson Cases—Sheriff Quinn Cautious

Boston, Jan. 15.—An important and significant statement was given out at the state house by Dudley M. Holman, secretary to Governor Foss, in relation to recent criticism relative to the use of the pardon power in this commonwealth.

The statement discloses the fact that the governor recently asked the supreme court to inform him just what part the executive council, under the constitution, plays in the exercise of the pardoning power.

The governor did not announce whether he favored the death penalty for Rev. C. V. T. Richeson or not. This is as close as he came to it:

"The governor personally does not believe in capital punishment; nevertheless, the death sentence is imposed by the courts of this commonwealth in conformity with law. Such being the case, Governor Foss has never sought to go beyond the clearly defined duty of his office, and he directs me to state that under no conditions whatever will he either seek to exceed the power vested in him or to evade the responsibility fixed upon him by the constitution and statutes of the commonwealth."

The statemen said farther:

"In view of the wide misapprehension which appears to exist regarding the pardoning power in this state, Governor Foss directs me to state as follows:

"The only duty of the executive upon receiving petitions for pardon is, if these appear to raise and reasonable doubt of guilt, or to show that the ends of justice have been fully met, to transmit them for the consideration of the council. An affirmative vote of this body is the only condition on which any pardon can be granted.

"The great majority of such petitions for pardon are denied by the chief executive without being referred to the council because of their failure to set forth any adequate reason for the exercise of clemency. Those that reach the council are either approved or rejected, after a full hearing, by vote of that body, of which the governor is not a member, and in which he has no vote."

This statement is regarded as extremely significant and as closing the book as far as the governor is concerned in the cases of Silas N. Phelps and Richeson, both under sentence of death for murder.

Richeson's eyeglasses have been taken from him by order of Sheriff Quinn, and the prisoner's guard was doubled to prevent actions of a violent nature. The sheriff will let him have the glasses only when he is reading. "We are taking no chances with this prisoner now," said the sheriff.

The prisoner was indignant and inquired of the guards by what right his glasses had been taken from his cell. The guards summoned the sheriff, and Richeson cooled his anger.

WITHOUT CAUSING HARM

Runaway Engine Travels Thirteen Miles While Traffic Is Heavy

Minneapolis, Jan. 15.—After traveling thirteen miles without a guiding hand, during which it switched itself from one road to another, a Northern Pacific engine came to a stop at Cedar station without harm to itself or other trains.

The engine started in some manner unknown at Northtown Junction and rushing northward hit the switch ten miles further, where it was thrown over to the Great Northern tracks, upon which it proceeded.

Railway officials declare it extraordinary that there was no accident, for he traffic on each line at that time of day is unusually heavy.

Five Killed In Joy Ride

Trenton, Jan. 15.—Three young women and two men met death in a "joy ride" at Brookville when a big touring car in which they were riding skidded on the icy highway and plunged into a canal. All the victims plunged through the ice and were drowned.

NATTERSON SOME PROPHET

Prediction as to Taft, Roosevelt and Cannon Comes to Pass

New York, Jan. 15.—The New York World, in a leading editorial, concedes that Colonel Henry Watterson has won from it a dinner for himself and twenty-three guests on the proposal which he advanced more than two years ago, and which The World disputed, that the first Monday in December, 1911, would see William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt at daggers drawn.

While Watterson's triumph is a vindication of his sense of prophecy, he believes in paying bets when he loses them and collecting when he wins. In the present instance Watterson not only made the prediction mentioned, but when Joseph G. Cannon, then speaker of the house of representatives, declined on etnical grounds to be one of three distinguished statesmen to decide the bet, Watterson remarked that "Uncle Joe" need not distress himself "because on the first Monday of December, 1911, he will not be speaker of the house."

DON'T LIKE GRECIAN ROBES

Duncan's Fellow Tenants In Paris House Register Complaint

Paris, Jan. 15.—A petition for the expulsion from this flat of Raymond Duncan, the American exponent of Grecian garb, came before the civil tribual of the Seine.

The proprietor of the house where Duncan resided declared that the other tenants objected to the sensational manner of dressing adopted by Duncan, who is conducting a Helenic act campaign here, walking the streets in loose Grecian robes.

Duncan arrived at the court, followed by a score of his disciples similarly attired. The municipal guard on duty first refused him admission, but afterward allowed him to enter when he had explained the reason for his appearance. Duncan announced that he had moved to another house and the case was withdrawn.

KELIHER'S CHANCES APPEAR TO BE SLIM

Little Hope of Evading Sentence of Eighteen Years

Boston, Jan. 15.—The chances of William J. Keliher escaping the eighteen-year sentence passed on him for his complicity in the wrecking of the National City Bank of Cambridge are very slim, according to the most optimistic friends of the gambler.

"Big Bill" is now in Cambridge jail. In the decision handed down by the circuit court of appeals, confirming his sentence, it was provided that Keliher may be taken for re-sentence before the district court within sixty days.

All of Keliher's money is gone and there are no finances to carry the case to the United States supreme court, even if his lawyers deemed that step expedient.

The fact that the circuit court of appeals declared that Keliher was just as guilty as though he had put his own hand in the till of the bank and had taken the money which he helped George W. Coleman dissipate, would seem to show that Keliher's hope for any help in the courts is futile.

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Quincy Readers.

For months Quincy citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by residence of this locality.

Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable?

Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement?

No stronger proof of merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time.

The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Quincy reader.

John Callahan, 55 Prospect Street, Brockton, Mass., says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have been greatly benefited by their use. I was annoyed by a lame and aching back and my kidneys did not act regularly. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills, and they gave me entire relief. I am glad to confirm the statement given in their praise by a member of my family in 1908."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BRIEFS

Mrs. James B. Walker is seriously ill at her home on Thayer street.

Members of St. John's Dramatic club hold a dancing party in Parochial hall Wednesday evening.

An optimist is one who enjoys a good snowstorm without worrying about how sloppy the front yard will be when the thaw comes.

A benefit dance, in aid of Louis Ross, a well known young man of this city is to be given in Electa hall tomorrow evening.

E. E. Willey of Walker street has returned from his winter trip for the George E. Keith Co., and will remain home until March.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade has been called for Wednesday evening at quarter of eight. The special comimttee on amending the by-laws will report and the question of raising the annual dues will be considered.

Push Out the Chest.

Lock at your figure in the next full length mirror you see, says the Woman's World. Nine chances out of ten your chest curves in, your shoulders round like a bow, your stomach protrudes, and your chin is thrust forward like a prizefighter's. Now make an experiment. Take a long breath, push your chest out and hold it to that position. Behold a miracle! Your shoulders straighten till your back is like a line, your stomach retreats, and your chin assumes a position of modest dignity. Now you are standing correctly, and if you place any value at all upon a good appearance you must practice this position until it becomes second nature. Remember that the grand secret is, "Push out the chest." The rest of the figure will take care of itself.

Pessimistic.

Optimist—A gran' mornin' the morn! Misanthrope (grudgingly) — It's no a'thegither ill—(brightening) but, eh, mon, think o' the national debt.—London Sketch.

A new kind of clover, said by those who have experimented with it to produce many tons of feed to the acre has been discovered. The plant is a native of Tillamock county, Ore., and is called a perennial clover. It is a specie of the alsike with the alsike food value. It perpetuated itself from node buds and bulbs and has no bloom, flower, seed or sex. It grows in winter as well as in summer and frost does not interfere with or stop its growth. A sample of clover was sent to the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., ant J. M. Westgate, agronomist, writes that it is one of the most interesting specimens that has come to the attention of the department.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WASHINGTON STREET CONG.

There was a good attendance and much interest at the morning and evening service at the Washington street Congregational church, with preaching at both services by the pastor, Rev. C. P. Marshall. At the morning service his subject was "The business of life" and the words of his text "Enter ye in at the straight gate." At the evening service the topic was "The life that is Christ" and the words of the text "For we live in Christ."

An all day sewing session will be held by the ladies aid society, Thursday at the home of Mrs. T. W. Lincoln at 618 Washington street from 10 to 4.

The usual midweek service will be omitted on account of the meetings of the men and religion movement.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

General Secretary A. F. Bromley of the Y. M. C. A. spoke in Memorial church, Atlantic, on the Men and Religion Forward Movement Sunday evening. Mr. Bromley in his remarks said There was something the matter in the religious life of today as so many men had their religion in their wives' names. And there was also the lack of free discussion on the social and labor conditions in religious circles.

Mr. Bromley said that even in the Y. M. C. A. it was difficult to get people to study social conditions. He highly commended the work of the Rev. C. P. Marshall of Quincy Point as Mr. Marshall had been a member of a labor union and could talk sympathetically from the laborer's standpoint.

In closing the meeting the Rev. T. W. Davison said that as far as he knew most churches had the open door for all classes alike. And that most ministers had either worked for their education or had come from homes of workmen. Mr. Davison said that he looked at his church as a working men's church. Men were urged to either attend the meetings in Quincy or Boston to put themselves in the way of service.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached on "An Exchange of Two Kinds.—Brass for Gold and Gold for Brass." Text Kings 14:27; Isa. 60:17.

In giving the notices the pastor made a strong plea for a large attendance at all the meetings of the Men and Religious Campaign, saying that it is the greatest opportunity that the church has had since Pentecost.

The Sunday school was well attended and manifested great interest in the new series of lessons just begun. The subject was the Birth of John the Baptist and his relation to Jesus Christ. Elford L. Durgan is the efficient superintendent of this important part of church activity.

The Junior Endeavor society met as usual at 3. 30 under the leadership and supervision of Miss Ethel M. Campbell.

At 6 o'colck the Y. P. S. C. E. met in the chapel. Rev. Mr. Walther led the meeting and the subjecmt considered was, "How to Win young people to Christ.

The pastor's evening sermon was number thirteen in the series of sermons he has been delivering mostly to men on "Men who did things" and the subject was "The man who degenerated." It was a strong message.

This evening at 6.30 the opening banquet of the Men and Religion Campaign is being held in Tremont Temple. One thousand men are expected to participate and many of our men are in attendance.

Noon meetings will be held from Tuesday to Friday 12.10—12.50 this week in Park St. Congregational church, Boston, for busy men and older boys.

At 8 o'clock P. M. from Tuesday to Saturday and 3. 30 Sunday, platform meetings will be held in Y. M. C. A. hall, Washington street, Quincy for our district which comprises the churches in Quincy—Atlantic, Wollaston, Norfolk Downs, East Milton, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset.

Tuesday evening, the annual meeing of the Sunday school will be held in the chapel. Reports for the past year will be given and officers for the new year appointed.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies will be held with Mrs. G. F. Pinkham at the home of Mrs. Charles E. Goodspeed, Grand View avenue. At the close of the meeting a social hour will be enjoyed.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel. The pastor will take for his subject, "the MBanliness of Jesus." This subject will continue our meditations on the Life and Character of Jesus" and will be in harmony with the Men and Religion Movement meetings held during the week.

A n important business meeting of the church will be held at the close of this meeting. A large number should be present.

HIS MEMORY CLEAR.

The Witness Proved to the Lawyer That He Could Remember.

A story is told of an eminent lawyer receiving a severe reprimand from a witness whom he was trying to browbeat. It was an important issue, and in order to save his cause from defeat it was necessary that the lawyer should impeach the witness. He endeavored to do it on the ground of age in the following manner:

"How old are you?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two years," replied the witness.

"Your memory, of course, is not so brilliant and vivid as it was twenty years ago, is it?" asked the lawyer.

"I do not know but it is," answered the witness.

"State some circumstance which occurred, say, twelve years ago," said the lawyer, "and we shall be able to see how well you can remember."

"I appeal to your honor," said the witness, "if I am to be interrogated in this manner. It is insolent!"

"You had better answer the question," replied the judge.

"Yes, sir; state it," said the lawyer.

"Well, sir, if you compel me to do it I will. About twelve years ago you studied in Judge ——'s office, did you not?"

"Yes," answered the lawyer.

"Well, sir, I remember your father coming into my office and saying to me, 'Mr. D., my son is to be examined tomorrow, and I wish you would lend me $15 to buy him a suit of clothes.' I remember also, sir, that from that day to this he has never paid me that sum. That, sir, I remember as though it were yesterday."

Ate With Tears In His Eyes.

On one occasion General Scott attended a banquet where all the states of the Union were represented by a dish in some way characteristic of each commonwealth. Pennsylvania was represented by a bowl of sauerkraut, and in speaking of the fact the next morning the general remarked, "I partook of it with tears in my eyes." This fondness of Scott for the good things of the table, taken in conjunction with the famous "hasty plate of soup" incident, gave point to the name of "Marshal Turenne," with which he was once saluted by the Rev. Dr. Smith Pyne, an inveterate punster. It was Dr. Pyne who once exclaimed after hearing Ole Bull play, "If honorary degrees were conferred upon musicians Ole Bull would be fiddle D. D." —Marian Gouveneur in "As I Remember."

Physical Difficulty.

"Is it anything serious, doctor?" asked a youth of a doctor after the latter had examined him.

"No, no; not at all," replied the medical man. "Nothing serious—just a little stiffness in the back of your neck my lad. But you must keep an eye on it."—London Telegraph.

A FIVE-YEAR CAMPAIGN

Thousands Interested In Men and Religion Forward Movement

Boston, Jan. 15.—The eight-day campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement started in Greater Boston yesterday. In practically every evangelical church within Greater Boston the services were given over to what is expected to be the greatest religious campaign yet started.

Thousands of men in New England have become interested in this, the first endeavor made by the men of the Protestan churches to place Christianity in the place here they believe it rightfully belongs.

Clergymen, laymen and the boys of the church form the vast army that is starting this campaign that is expected to stretch over a period of five years and during which they hope to remedy not alone the social problems, but other conditions that are keeping men away from the church.

SOCIALISTS' GREAT GAINS

They Are Credited With About 4,400,000 Votes In Germany

Berlin, Jan. 15.—The immense rally to the Socialist flag during the elections to the reichstag is indicated by the figures of the number of voters in fifty constituencies taken at random. These show that nearly 32 percent of the voters were Socialists and foreshadows an aggregate Socialist vote of 4,400,000.

The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung heads its column with warnings to the government and to all the non-Socialist parties to make strong efforts in the second ballots, which will take place from Jan. 20 to Jan. 24, against the return of Socialist candidates.

A late analysis of the situation gives some reason to believe that the Radicals, after the reballoting, may return to the reichstag in nearly their former strength.

MARRIAGE NOT VALID WITHOUT THE "OBEY"

Legal Ruling Is Announced by a London Chaplain

London, Jan. 15.—The omission of the word "obey" from a marriage service celebrated in church is illegal and invalidates the ceremony, according to a sensational announcement made by Rev. Hugh Chapman, chaplain of the Chapel Royal Savoy.

Before the altar stood Miss Una Dugdale, daughter of Commander Dugdale and niece of Viscount Peel, and Victor D. Duval, waiting to be married. Both are prominent supporters of the militant suffragists and had decided that the word "obey" should be omitted from the marriage service and had communicated their decision to the chaplain.

Just before the time appointed for the ceremony Chapman sought legal advice and obtained a ruling which is likely to invalidate many marriages.

Miss Dugdale and Duval, after the announcement by the chaplain, decided to waive their objections and the marriage ceremony proceeded.

A PROBLEM IN FIGURES.

It Scared the Mathematician, but the Women Solved It.

One day a teacher of mathematics went shopping with his wife. He tagged along listlessly from counter to counter until they came to the dress trimmings department, and there he found something in his line. Said his wife to the saleswoman:

"How wide is that gold spangled black crape?"

"Three-eighths of a yard," said the girl.

"How much is it a yard?"

"Three dollars."

"Well," said the professor's wife, "how much of three-eighths wide material will it take to put four six-inch strips around a two and three-quarter yard skirt that is seven inches narrower at the knees than it is at the bottom, and how much will it cost?"

At the first mention of those figures the professor's head began to reel, and it reeled still more when his wife and the girl got out pencils and paper and began to do their sum. Presently his wife said:

"Here, dear; you know all about mathematics. Help us solve this problem, won't you?"

But the professor said: "Excuse me; I feel faint; I must get a little fresh air," and ignominously fled.

His wife came home with exactly the amount of material required, and the professor took her word for it that she didn't pay a cent too much.—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Suspicion.

"Well, whaddy you want?"

"I am the man who was married in the cage of wildcats."

"I asted ye whaddy you want."

"I thought I would like to look into the cage again. I fear I left my wife there and took one of the wildcats."—Houston Post.

Something New.

"Your snowstorm made a hit."

"I knew it would," declared the proud playwright.

"Yes; they turned it loose in the drawing room scene."—Exchange.

QUINCY HIGH vs. WINTHROP HIGH

First Team Beats Champions 26 to 23. Second Team Loses

CLOSE GAME

That the Students at Quincy High can rest assured that the players who represent them on the basket ball court will be foremost among the contenders for the championship interscholastic honors of the state, was demonstrated to the complete satisfaction of the five hundred in attendance Friday at the game in the school gym, when the formidable Winthrop High, conceded to be the foremost contender for the title, suffered a 26 to 23 defeat at the hands of Coach Staff's contingency.

Interest in the contest was keen and the gym presented the liveliest spectacle in its history, as waving flags, fluttering hands, intermingled with shouts of joy.

It was a blow to the Winthrop lads, but the victory has so inspired the local players that they are prepared to try conclusions with the best high school five to be found.

Strictly speaking on the merits of the game, it must be admitted the visitors had the better team from certain standpoints. They were heavier and therefore possessed greater endurance. They displayed greater team work in passing the ball, and consequently each player had to be carefully "covered" at all stages. Their inability to triumph over the local boys was because they were unable to locate the baskets or to shoot for the same with the accuracy noticeable on the part of the local boys.

Trask, Finley and Chapman, who play the three forward positions for Quincy High, exhibited rare form throughout and it was mainly through their work that the local players were enabled to take the measure of Winthrop High. Johnson added to the features of the game by securing two goals from the floor, of the most sensational order. In justice to Holmes, it must be said the work of the entire Quincy team was worthy of all the praise showered upon it.

Evans, who played right back for the losers, was the star player of the game. Besides caging three baskets, he seemed to be all over the court, and managed to get within reach of the ball at all times. Mecca also played well. The game was void of any of the so called "roughhouse" tactics and referee LaRose called few fouls.

With this victory from Winthrop High and the expectation of a triumph over the Oliver Ames High, there is no doubt but what many a warm struggle will ensue before the honors of supremacy are wrested from the hands of the local players.

Between the halves the second teams of both schools played. In this game the visitors won by the close score of 8 to 6. The failure of Estey to come up to his standard of the last game, was largely responsible for the defeat sustained. The work of the Winthrop forwards was highly conspicuous, while Jenkins played well for the losers.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It was very encouraging to see a large number of skaters take advantage of the favorable condition of the ice yesterday as a result of the recent flooding of the different playgrounds, but it is to be regretted that rainy weather has come today, thus to deprive all local lovers of skating of the opportunity to enjoy themselves for a much longer period. There are a number of places in local circles especially suitable for hockey contests and it is hoped, with the weather conditions permitting, that teams will be formed and that ice hockey will be enabled to accupy the position in local athletics that it should.

The move to inaugurate a baseball league in this city for the coming season is indeed a commendable one and if the plans now under contemplation are perfected there is every reason to believe that the fans of Quincy will be afforded the same article of baseball, (if not even better,) that was noticeable last season. At present a number of basemall enthusiasts have become interested in the project and beginning next week, meetings will be held regularly.

The league will be composed of well-konwn players and will include the following cubs:—National Associates, Manet A. A., Fore River A. A., West Quincy A. C., Quincy Independents, Atlantic O. A., Adams A. A., Braintree White Sox and Clapp Memorial. Invitations are to be extended to all managers of baseball clubs desirous of becoming affiliated with the league and it is expected that a few more teams will apply for membership. With such a league in existence the fans of Quincy will have al lthe baseball they desire and there is no doubt but the national pastime will mee with greater success in the Granite City than ever before.

ODD FELLOWS INSTALLATION

Exercises are Followed by An Entertainment and Dancing

THE OFFICERS

The officers of Mt. Wollaston Lodge, No. 80, I. O. O. F. were publicly installed into office Monday evening in Alpha Hall before an attendance of three hundred people. The exercises were carried out most successfully and all things pertaining to the installation were performed in a manner that proved most interesting to those who were present. A significant feature of the affair was the installation for the twenty second consecutive year of Arthur W. Stetson who fulfils the duties incumbent upon the office of financial secretary.

Besides the installing officers, delegations from other lodges of Odd Fellows were present in large numbers, as were also Representative William J. Leslie, Councilman Edward J. Sandberg and a number of city officials.

The following officers were installed:

Noble Grand—Arthur H. Dunston.
Vice Grand—Matthew Swanson.
Recording Secretary—Charles H. Wood, P. G.
Financial Secretary—Arthur W. Stetson, P. G.
Treasurer—E. Frank Mitchell.
Warden—William S. Esau.
Conductor—Robert W. Wood.
Chaplain—John Michael.
Right Supporter of Noble Grand—Thomas G. Smith, P. G.
Left Supporter of Noble Grand—Everett E. Wheeler.
Right Scene Supporter—Percy E. Bates.
Left Scene Supporter—Walter T. Newcomb.
Inside Guardian—John W. McPherson.
Outside Guardian—Abel S. Gomez, P. G.

The installing officers were as follows:

District Deputy Grand Master—Harry C. Collett.
District Deputy Grand Warden—W. P. Staples.
District Deputy Grand Recording Secretary—Andrew S. Johnstone.
District Deputy Financial Secretary—C. M. Austin.
District Deputy Grand Treasurer—W. F. Thayer.
District Deputy Grand Chaplain—A. N. Furlong.
District Grand Marshal—E. C. Emery.
District Deputy Grand Inside Guard—George W. Wood.
District Deputy Grand Outside Guard—E. L. Cook.

At the termination of the instaHation exercises, the presentation of the Past Noble Grand's collar was made by D. D. G. M. Harry C. Collett to Abel Gomez, who has just acquired that title, and to P. G. Frank W. Flowers and P. G. Archie Macleod.

G. H. P. Sam Wood, Jr., of the Grand Encampment of Massachusetts gave a very interesting address on Odd Fellowship, and in closing presented the installing deputy with a handsome bouquet of flowers to which he responded very touchingly in acceptance. Remarks were made by Noble Grand Dunston, who thanked those present for the interest manifested in the public installation and added that the members of the lodge will henceforth launch forth every month with an entertainment of some form.

Refreshments were then served in Union hall, and dancing brought a most enjoyable affair to a close shortly before midnight.

CITY HOSPITAL ANNUAL MEETING

Reports of Trustees, and Treasurer. Work of the Year

TRUSTEES ELECTED

The annual meeting of the City Hospital corporation was held Monday evening at Colonial hall and considering the weather there was a good attendance.

President red B. Rice, presided and reports of the Trustees and Treasurer were received and accepted.

The report of the trustees showed the number of patients admitted during the year to have been 420. Of this number 388 were discharged, 32 died and 20 now remain. There were 129 medical cases, 291 surgical cases, 47 appendicitis cases, 29 pneumonia and 13 typhoid fever cases.

The receipts for hospital week amounted to $1,852.70. The additions to the endowment fund amounted to $20,100 making the total amount of the endowment fund to date $92,115.33.

The Trustees also reported that the new operating ward fund amounted to $6,200. The contributions to this fund were C. F. Adams 2d, $2,000, Arthur Adams, $2,000, Abigail Homan's, $2,000, given in memory of their mother, T. L. Sturtevant $100 and Joseph A. Dasha, $100.

The treasurers report showed the receipts of the year including a balance on hand of $1,110.72 Jan 1 1911 to have been $27,549.88 and the expenditures $27, 522.98 leaving a balance on hand Jan. 1,, 1912 of $26,90

The endowment fund includes the bequest of Joseph and Sarah Baxter. Up to the present time the amount realized from the sale of land for this fund amounts to $2,103.87 and there is land left from the sale of which will probably bring the bequest up to $5,000.

The contagious ward fund now amounts to $1,116.47.

The election of officers then followed.

Warren W. Adams was reelected clerk and the following as trustees.

A SURGEON IS WHAT IS NEEDED MAYOR SHOULD BE THE SURGEON

Temporary Loan Order Passed by the City Council After Short but Sharp Debate

Separation of Houghs Neck to be Opposed. Committee on Metropolitan Planning. Other Business

Monday night's meting of the City Council was a short one but considerable business of importance was transacted. The discussion of the evening came on the temporary loan order. An attempt was made to reduce the amount to $475,000 but failed and the order for $500,000 was passed with only three dissenting votes. Another important matter was the appointing of a committee of three to appear before the legislature and oppose the bill to make Houghs Neck a separate town, a committee of five to confer with like committees of other cities and towns in the Metropolitan district relative to the so-called Metropolitan planning bill and requesting the Mayor and City Solicitor to appear before the legislative committee and urge the passage of the bill to complete the Furnace Brook parkway from Quincy shore to Hancock street.

Councilmen Mahoney and Studley were absent.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing T. L. Williams as park commissioner in place of A. L. Whitman, resigned. Placed on file.

A communication was received from the Mayor inclosing a petition of the Citizen's Gas Co., to lay mains. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A communication was received from the Mayor giving notice of the change in the driver of a junk collector's wagon. Placed on file.

Communications were received from the Mayor appointing Mabel McQuade, Temple A. Winslo, James Robbie and John Robbie as public weighers. Confirmed.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Carmini Colletti a constable. Confirmed.

A DEFICIT.

A communication was received from the City Auditor stating that bills to the amount of $493.79 had been received from the Board of Health, for contagious diseases in excess of the appropriation. Referred to Finance Committee.

A communication was received from the Central Labor Union relative to two gatemen at the Water street railroad crossing. Referred to Committee on Streets.

PERMANENT SIDEWALKS.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Public Works giving cost of construction of permanent sidewalks in 1911. Referred to Finance Committee. The sidewalks built during the year 1911 and the cost of the same were as follows.

Whitwell street	$2,037.78
River street,	956.74
Franklin street,	1,217.27
Crescent street	881.44
Hall place	566.31
Copeland street.	33.62
Corner Beale street and Standish avenue,	132.76
Webster street,	968.36
Elm avenue,	941.59
Appleton street	1,373.63
East Squantum street,	552.42
Washington street,	246.42
Independence avenue,	1,471.77
Highland avenue,	773.10
Brook street,	841.70
Beach street	317.27
Berlin street,	183.32
Pleasant street	246.00
East Howard street	371.10

These figures give the total cost of construction, one half of which will be assessed upon the abutters.

Applications for minor licenses were referred to the Committee on Licenses.

WOODWARD FUND.

Under unfinished business Richard R. Freeman was elected as a member of the Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property.

HOSPITAL TRUSTEES.

On ballot, Councilman George W. Abele and Charles W. Bailey were elected as the council members on the Trustees of the City Hospital.

LIGHTS WANTED.

Councilman C. A. Ross offered an order for a light at the corner of Water street and Brook road. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Devaney offered an order for a light on Dysart street. To Committee on Streets.

Councilman Craig offered an order for a light on Franklin place. To Committee on Streets.

TAX REFUND.

Councilman Bailey offered an order refunding Esther E. Knop taxes amounting to $23.49 illegally assessed. Referred to Finance Committee.

TRANSFERS.

Councilman Craig offered an order transferring $125. from Horses to Miscellaneous Fire Department; $50 from Horses to Fire Alarm and $30 from Fire Alarm boxes of 1910 to Fire Alarm. Adopted.

METROPOLITAN PLANNING.

Councilman Sandberg offered an order for the appointment of a special committee of five to confer with a like committee of other cities and towns in the Metropolitan district relative to the so called Metropolitan plan. Adopted.

The President appointed as the committee Councilmen Sandberg, Bailey, Murray, Abele and C. A. Ross.

FURNACE BROOK PARKWAY.

Councilman Craig offered a resolution requesting the Mayor and City Solicitor to appear before the committee of the legislature and favor the passage of the bill for $240,000 to complete the Furnace Brook parkway, from the Quincy shore reservation to Hancock street. Adopted.

HOUGHS NECK.

Councilman Cunningham offered a motion for a special committee to consist of the President and two members of the City Council to oppose the bill to separate Houghs Neck into a separate town. Adopted.

The committee is President Hobbs, Councilman John R. S. Ross and C. W Bailey.

TEMPORARY LOAN.

The temporary loan order came up for its second reading.

Councilman Richards moved to amend by making the amount $475,000.

Councilmen Craig and Bailey wanted to know why the amendment was made.

Councilman Richards replied that the proposition was put up at the last meeting that $450,000 would not be sufficient and he hardly thought that we could get by on the $500,000.

Councilman Bailey did not think the answer very enlightening.

The motion to amend was lost on a rising vote 8 voting yes and 12 no.

The order then took its second reading and the question came on passing to be ordained.

Councilman Cunningham said that he did not want to open the question again but he wanted to ask the members if it was their own business they were conducting, and they found that there were outstanding $400,000 in temporary loans to meet which was $30,000 in the treasury and $361,000 outside taxes, some of these worthless, and they were $75,000 to the bad what would they do? This situation was due to the juggling with temporary loans and covering up deficits. Would you continue in this way. Why not resolve to take a step at this time and make the amount $450,000?

Councilman Richards went into the loan question in detail. He had hoped he would not have to go into this matter in public meeting. Going back to 1906 he had found that of the

LADIES' NIGHT OF MEN'S CLUB

Address on "The Telephone" by Edwin W. Pierce of Newton

CHALLENGE ACCEPTED

A lecture of a most interesting nature was given before the members of the Men's Club of Christ shurch, in the parish house, Monday evening by Edwin W. Pierce ot Newton, supervisor in Commercial department of the New England Telegraph and Telephone Company. The subject of the lecture was "The Telephone."

Previous to the lecture a short business meeting has held, at which the challenge of the Galahad Brotherhood, to a debate on the question "Resolved that not more than one tenth of the voters vote intelligently," was accepted for the next meeting.

The meeting was also the annual ladies' night and the fair sex were present in large numbers.

The lecture followed the business meeting. Mr. Pierce was thoroughly at home on the subject. The various incidents and methodic systems of the company as well as the diverse steps that led up to the development of the telephone, were all vividly brought forth by stereopticon views the illustrations playing a prominent part in bringing out the facts the lecturer wished to convey.

Mr. Pierce started out by giving a history of the telephone, by relating the steps attending the installation of the telephone system, at the same time mentioning obstacles encountered from time to time, before the telephone system was finally placed on a progressive basis.

A short sketch of the life and characteristics, together with the almost superhuman courage of the undaunted inventor was given. This was followed by an account of the first telephone in use and the idea it presented to those who had occasion to view it.

The speaker went on to tell of the opposition and the seeming apathy and despair that were likely to follow, unless active steps were taken. He told of the voluntary assistance of different men of financial means, and paid tribute to them, as well as to inventor Bell for the success later attained. The first telephone installed in Salem, was explained in detail and the workings of the same were very ably brought out. The fact that the telephone did not meet with success in the early stages was laid to the effects its tendencies had on business itself. The advent of the telephone was a step to revolutionize business, and the speaker depicted the trouble that always emanates from any movement of a revolutionary movement. The speaker told of the failure of the telephone among the banking houses in which it was

A Suit or Overcoat At a Marked-Down Price

You can come into this store and buy any suit or overcoat at a marked-down price; a price that's low enough to insure quick disposal of all winter stock.

I sincerely wish you'd come in and see just what the goods look like; how they fit, (you can leave the wear to me) and then ask the price—you'll not be urged to buy in any case, as I believe the perfect sale is that sale which is equally good to buyer and seller.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Tong war has again broken out among New York's Chinese, but the andirons remain quiet to date.

We hope, however the election goes this fall, that there will be no kicking. It is always possible that the majority may be right.

As neither side is able to make the steam roller work, it looks as if Congress might as well shut down until they get the machinery repaired.

The expected January rise in the stock market has not come off. Not merely does Wall street have cold feet, but it won't stand over the register to warm them.

If Morse is really sick, the country would be willing to let him out, but some people thinks it simply makes him sick to see these opportunities slipping by in Wall street.

Under the Taft theory of delaying action until the tariff board has reported on each schedule, the people will have to pay the present exactions for about ten years.

The Powers are trying to persuade Italy and Turkey to stop the war. The Powers can bear up under the bloodshed with equanimity, but there is the possibility that one of the combatants might get some territory.

There is a popular demand to witness murder trials. Why not have them in halls like those used by the national conventions, where the jury could know how to decide by the cheering in the galleries?

In places where the skating is good it is complained that the children take their skates to Sunday school. It shows unusual forbearance, however, that the children do not demand that the Sunday school furnish the skates.

NO SHOE TRUST POSSIBLE.

Dispatches forecasting a fifty per cent increase in the price of shoes and predicting that a trust is to formed to acquire control of shoe manufacturing, need not be taken very seriously.

Shoe manufacturing is one line in which control by combinations is almost impossible. Deceptions and imitations are so easy in handling leather, that it would be very hard to maintain any fixed standard of grades.

A lot of the big fellows might perhaps agree that certain grades should sell at a price large enough to give them good profits. But there are shoe factories scattered through the back towns of a dozen states, whose proprietors live the simple life and are content with small profits. They would much rather sell under the combine price for a narrow margin, than take such pickings as might drift their way if they sold for combine prices.

There is no line of business in which the small manufacturer is more of a factor than in shoe making. He avoids the high salaries of the big concern, and personal attention to the wants of his customers balances the economies that come from doing a big business.

ANOTHER OF OUR BONFIRES.

The destruction of what some have called the most valuable property in New York city, the Equitable Life Assurance building, in less than two hours, is a big item in our great national bonfire record.

The building was forty years old and not considered fire-proof, and does not afford basis for an estimate of the safety of the best modern construction. But it tells the story of what the present generation of Americans is paying for the fun of a spendthrift national temperament.

It is customary to denounce the burden of militarism in foreign countries. Yet Germany the most heavily loaded of all, could pay for its entire army out of our annual fire loss, and have $20,000,000 left over to buy fireworks with.

The trouble is not with our firemen, brave boys and practical scientific workers that they are. A European fire department looks like a comic opera company beside one of ours. In Rome they burn up only $56,000 worth of property a year, and in New York with only nine times the population, they burn up $7,000,000 a year, beside spending $10,000,000 on fire fighting.

The great trouble is that the average man will put up any kind of a tin roofed or thin metal covered building, on which an insurance company can be found to write a policy upon.

Important as strictly fire-proof construction is, there are comparatively inexpensive preventives that save enormous loss. One brick building in San Francisco, whose construction was way below fire-proof specifications, was saved from the path of the flame merely by having metal shutters and wired windows, and an alert watchman.

In the San Francisco fire, it was estimated that an expenditure of $60-000 for window protection would have saved the burning up of $9,000,000 worth of property in supposedly fire-proof buildings.

MASSACHUSETTS FORESTERS.

The annual report of the high secretary treasurer of the Massachusetts Catholic order of Foresters, for the year ending, Dec. 31, which has been sent to the various subordinate courts, shows the year just closed to be one of the best in the history of the order, both as to the number of applications received, and the amount of money paid in mortuary benefits.

In a fraternal insurance organization, based upon a graded assessment plan, as is the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, it is necessary that there should be an annual increase in membership and that the increase should be sufficiently large and of an age that would keep down the average age of the entire organization. How well this has been accomplished may be learned from the fact that this order, in the thirty-three years of its existence, has been enabled by its constant increase of younger members, so that the average age is now but a fraction over forty-one years, which life insurance actuaries proclaim to be many degrees within the safebound of fraternal insurance.

The total number of applications received during the year was 3,085. Of this number 2,557 were initiated, and in addition to this 155 had been approved, and would be initiated early during the present year. The membership January 1, 1911 was 31,886, which together with the 2,557 initiated during the year made a total of 34,443. There were losses by suspension and deaths of 701, which left the membership, January 1, 1912, 33,742. A net gain for the year of 1,856.

There were paid during the year, in Mortuary Benefits $362,659.55, making a total paid since the order was instituted of $4,013,498.

There are 236 subordinate courts in the order, all with the exception of one being in Massachusetts. It embraces within its ranks many of the most prominent Catholic clergymen and laymen, as well as men and women in all ranks of life.

The first court of the order was formed in Boston, starting with a membership of fifteen men. The first court of women was instituted in Brockton, June 15, 1894. There are now sixty courts composed exclusively of women, one hundred exclusively of men, and seventy-six composed of both men and women.

The governing board is called the high standing committee, and at present consists of Cornelius M. Duggan of Quincy, High Chief Ranger; James Dignam of New Bedford, High Vice Chief Ranger, Daniel H. Maguire of Haverhill, High Secretary Treasurer, Edward N. Clancy of Watertown, High Senior Conductor, Cornelius F. Buckley, of Dorchester, High Junior Conductor, Timothy J. Collins of Springfield, High Inside Sentinel, Joseph T. Brennan of Boston, High Outside Sentinel, Frances J. Hanley, M. D., of Whitman, High Medical Examiner, and Rev. James H. O'Neil, L L. D. of E. GRANGE NOTES.

Saturday afternoon and evening there assembled in Odd Fellows' hall, South Braintree, members of Mayflower Pomona Grange which includes the towns of Braintree, Hingham, Hanson, Weymouth, Halifax, Whitman, Plymouth, Duxbury, Marshfield, East Bridgewater and Pembroke. The officers were installed by Rev. W. H. Wheelock, chaplain of the Mass. State Grange, assisted by Mrs. Nettie Simpson of Halifax. The officers are:

Master—L. M. Peterson of Duxbury
Overseer—George A. Estes of Halifax.
Sentinel—Miss Nannie B. Holmes of Hanson.
Steward—H. C. Bacon of E. Bridgewater.
Assistant steward—Charles W. Matthews of East Braintree.
Chaplain—Mrs. Grace I. Day of Whitman.
Treasurer—R. W. Seymour of East Bridgewater.
Secretary—Winthrop Fillebrown of Plymouth.
Gate keeper—William B. Wood of Halifax.
Ceres—Elva W. Hatch of E. Bridgewater.
Pomona—Emily Davis of Braintree.
Flora—Lydia Foster, Pembroke.
Lady assistant steward—Emily Baker of Hanson.
Member of executive committee for three years—Dr. A. W. Gorham of Hanson.

There was a farmers' institute held in conjunction with the meeting and Professor H. F. Hall spoke on "Packing and marketing of vegetables and fruits." The installation was at 3. 30 and at 7.30 the fifth degree was conferred.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Another enjoyable meeting of the people's forum was held in All Souls' church, Braintree, Sunday afternoon when Henry Jewett spoke on "An Actor's ideal of a theatre." Mr. Jewett is a well-known actor and will be remembered for his masterful work in the role of the grand duke in William Hodge's success, "The Man from Home."

Mr. Jewett in his talk commented on players, playgoers, playhouses and plays. He believes in clean theatres not only in a material but also a moral sense and thinks there is a growing tendency to plays of a purer type which portray the best and truest in life and thought. He condemned strongly the so-called problem play and thinks that its vogue is passing to give place to dramas of a more uplifting nature. He is a firm believer in the stock company idea and says it is surely coming into its own again and favors the stock company because he believes in team work and feels that to get the best results all players must work together and merge themselves into one grand whole.

He says nothing is so productive of stagnation and mediocre work as the playing of one part month after month or year after year. He described the awful monotony of it and calls it one of the best arguments for the stock company where a man plays Othello one week and perhaps the next week may be called upon to impersonate a Western bad man.

Mr. Jewett has been on the stage thirty years and in all that time had never gotten over his fear of an audience. He said for that reason he was a little timid about addressing the forum assembly. In his time he has appeared in many productions and played many characters, gaining his experience in many parts of the world.

He criticised severly owners of theatres who lavish huge sums of money on foyer, stair-case and proscenium arch even to the point of gaudiness and yet behind the scenes provide inferior and sometimes unsanitary quarters for the performers.

Mr. Jewett has a most genial and pleasing personality and delighted his hearers with his broad and optimistic views about various aspects of his chosen profession. He is a firm believer of schools for actors where they may be trained properly although he is of the opinion that the best way to learn to act is to act rather than to leave too much to theory.

Mr. Jewett answered questions questions from his auditors in a very pleasing way and was only prevented from staying longer by reason of his train being due.

Next Sunday afternoon, Mr. W. E. B. DuBois will speak on "The souls of black folk," at 3.30 o'clock.

Washington, Jan. 16.—The report of the committee on expenditures in the agricultural department on its investigation of the bureau of chemistry will be submitted to congress within the next two or three days. Representative Moss of Indiana has submitted the report as agreed on by a sub-committee to the full committee.

The specific charge before the investigating committee was that Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, had entered into a secret agreement, under which Dr. Rusby, an expert analyist, stationed in New York, was to receive compensation contrary to law. The investigation naturally took a somewhat wide range, and the report of the committee, it is understood, will cover a good many points not raised by the specific charge against Wiley.

As for the charge made against Wiley it is well understood that the committee will completely vindicate him, just as President Taft did last fall. The committee was bound to find under the evidence that Wiley was not a party to any secret agreement relating to the salary of Rusby.

The chief interest in the report will centre on the recommendations the committee may make with respect to the general administration of affairs in the bureau of chemistry. It is fairly well understood that the committee will recommend changes in the administration of the pure food law, which would make the chief of the bureau of chemistry supreme. The investigation last summer brought out very clearly the fact that the friction in the department was due to several persons having co-ordinate authority.

For instance, the board of food and drug inspection under the old arrangement was composed of Wiley, chief of the bureau, Dr. Dunlap and Solicitor McCabe of the department. The committee is of the opinion, so it is understood, that this board ought to be composed of the chief and two subordinates of the bureau. This arrangement would eliminate McCabe, and it would make the bureau of chemistry supreme in administering the pure food law, as the authors of the law intended it should be.

Much interest will centre in the committee's recommendation with reference to the Remsen referee board. The testimony before the committee showed that when President Roosevelt proposed to appoint this board Assistant Attorney General Fowler held that there was no legal authority for the creation of such a board. Later McCabe wrote an opinion in which he held that the board could be legally appointed and since that time there has been an opinion by the attorney general that the board is legally constituted.

It will be no surprise if the committee of the house of representatives holds that the board is illegally constituted. If the committee should reach this conclusion, it undoubtedly would recommend that the services of this board be dispensed with unless congress shall see fit to give it a legal status. The general impression is that Moss' committee will recommend that this board be dismissed.

Undoubtedly the report will deal at very considerable length with the administration of the pure food law, and will suggest reforms, in addition to those already mentioned, designed better to carry out the intent of the framers of the law. Members of the committee have talked right along as if they will take the view that the functions of the secretary of agriculture with respect to the pure food law are in no wise judicial, but are administrative.

BECOMES MRS. LYNDEN

Miss Le Blanc, Who Figured In Glover Murder Case, Is a Bride

West Arichat, C. B., Jan. 16.—At the little village church here a romance which started at the Glover murder trial culminated by the marriage of Miss Hattie Le Blanc, the girl who was tried and acquitted on the charge of shooting the Waltham, Mass., laundryman, to Felix Lynden.

The groom was living in Boston at the time of the trial, but as soon as the girl was acquitted he returned to his home in Sydney. Many wedding gifts were received by the couple from their Massachusetts friends.

For New Federal Judge

Washington, Jan. 16.—The senate committee on the judiciary returned a favorable report on the bill for an additional district federal judge in Massachusetts.

Q.—Are we to understand from the words of St. Peter (II Peter iii, 10) that the earth is to be burned up at some time or other? And what is the meaning of the expression—"the elements shall melt with fervent heat?"

Answer.—The symbolical earth of St. Peter's prophecy doubtless refers to the social order of things or organized society, represented in the various forms of government now existing. In referring to the last times or the last days, our Lord foretold a time of trouble such as was not since there was a nation—Matthew xxiv, 21, and the Scriptures in general show how this "trouble" will be developed, and that it will be so destructive in character that it will result in the dissolution of the present evil, selfish social structure, preparatory to the establishment of the "new earth"—verse 13—founded upon principles of equity, justice and love. The "elements" which constitute the present "earth" or social order, are the socialistic element, the capitalistic element, the labor element, etc. Who can not see that the friction existing between the various elements is constantly increasing, and that it is a question of but a short time when the friction will become so intense that the elements, bursting forth into open flame, "will melt (be dissolved) with fervent heat," and thus the entire social fabric will be destroyed? As showing that the "fire" is not literal, we have in mind the Prophet's description of this same destructive time of trouble in which it is stated that after the "fire" has done its work the Lord will "then" turn to the people a pure language.—Zephaniah iii, 8,9.

To Compete With Argentine Beef

London, Jan. 16.—It is reported that a wealthy syndicate comprising United States and Canadian capitalists, has been formed with the purpose of inaugurating a Brazilian beef trust. It is stated that 9,000,000 acres of land in Brazil has been acquired for the purpose of rearing cattle and competing with the great Argentine cattle rearing industry.

Do You Believe in Signs?

Too many storekeepers depend upon signs. They are all right to mark your place of business, but you need something more forceful to bring customers right up to your counters. You need general, far-reaching publicity as a real trade-getter.
It matters not how elaborate or artistic your business sign may be. It will be read only by a very small percentage of those who pass your door. It is necessary in a way. And yet you know that its sphere of usefulness is very small. On the contrary a business announcement in the columns of THE DAILY LEDGER will be read each day by thousands and thousands of regular readers of this paper.
DON'T RELY ON SIGNS.
PIN YOUR FAITH IN THE DAILY LEDGER.
IT WILL PUT GINGER IN YOUR BUSINESS.

FIRE DESTROYS MASONIC HALL

East Weymouth Gets a Fire Scare. Aid from Hingham

TOTAL LOSS

Masonic hall East Weymouth within whose walls many of the Quincy Knights Templars received their degree, was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon entailing a loss of $37,000. Only the charters of the lodges and the silver service presented to South Shore commandery by a California lodge were saved. Many of the Sir Knights uniforms were in the building and were also lost.

The blaze was discovered at 4.23 by Charles T. Humphrey, janitor of the building, but it made such progress before the firemen got at work that only the front and side walls were left standing when the all-out signal was sounded at 6.30.

Mr. Humphrey and Edward Burrill fought the flames with extinguishers while Weston Cushing gave the alarm from box 25. This was followed at 4.35 by a second alarm, which brought all the apparatus in the town to the fire.

Showers of sparks were carried to the roofs of houses in the vicinity, but the snow and ice prevented a spread of the fire. It was feared, however, that some of the houses would be destroyed and many persons deserted their homes.

Two women, both invalids, were removed from their homes. Mrs. Mary Bearce, 82 years old, was carried across the street to the house of Robert S. Hoffman, and Mrs. Carrie Ingalls to the house of Otis Humphrey.

The firemen telephoned for help to Chief Engineer Cushing of the Hingham Department. Chief Cushing sent a steamer and a combination hose and ladder truck, which completed the journey of 3 1-2 miles over the slushy roads in 15 minutes. The arrival of the Hingham steamer was fortunate, for Steamer 3 of the Weymouth department broke down.

It is thought the fire originated from some defect in the furnace. The loss on the building is about $25,000. It was occupied by Orphans Hope Lodge, A. F. and A. M., whose loss is $8000; Pentalpha Chapter, R. A. M., whose loss is $2500; South Shore Commandery, K. T., whose loss is $6000; Court Marlboro, Loyal Knights and Ladies, whose loss is $500, and by Crary Lodge, A. O. U. W., whose loss is $500.

The building which was erected in 1884 was a three-story structure, 65 feet long and 50 feet deep.

CHALLENGE RACE.

Billy DiBona, of the Italian American athletic club, a well-known Quincy boy has challenged his club mate Domenic Withey, who he claims is knocking his running, to a race. Withey has accepted and a three mile race will be run for a silver cup at the Coliseum Wednesday evening.

OPPOSITION.

A petition was filed in the legislature Monday opposing the bill to make Houghs Neck a separate town. When the matter comes before the committee for a hearing there is sure to be some fireworks, as the plan will be strenuously opposed.

☞The special cars which will run from Alpha hall to accommodate those who attend the Twelfth Night Revels will be a great convenience to those who wish to get home quickly. There will be plenty of time to get on wraps comfortably. The manner in which Quincy people are showing their interest in the affair is gratifying to the committee. It is worth while to prepare an entertainment when the response is so hearty.

CITY COUNCIL

$360,000 temporary loans borrowed but $100,000 was paid. In 1907, $363,000 borrowed and $50,000 paid. In 1908 $500,000 was obligated and $150,000 paid and $341,000 taxes collected. In 1909 $500,000 was obligated, and $75,000 paid and $379,000 taxes collected, and in 1910 $500,000 obligated and $75,000 paid and in 1911, $500,000 obligated and $75,000 paid and $440,000 collected.

The temporary loans have got beyond the temporary loan stage and was a permanent deficit. We are using next year's money to run the city this year. The idea of reducing the amount of the loan was a step in the right direction. He was candid to confess however that he could not see how we could get by on $500,000.

NEEDS A SURGEON.

Councilman Bailey said that the gentleman had now answered the questions that had been asked earlier in the evening. If it were his own business he would see that the patient got out of debt. He would put a certain amount into the tax rate. The gentleman is giving us a symptom of one treatment with his suggestion of $450,000. It means simply an ice bath but does not eradicate the trouble. What we need is a surgeon and he believed that the Mayor should be the surgeon and put a certain amount in the tax rate. Give him the instruments and do not tie his hands. It will be better for the patient than an ice bath.

Councilman Craig opposed any reduction.

The rules were then suspended and the order passed to be ordained 17 voting yes and 3 no as follows.

Yes—Abele, Bailey, Barker, Beeman, Boyd, Carruthers, Craig, Devany, Ericson, Forde, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Murray, C. A. Ross, J. R. S. Ross, Sandberg, Thompson—17.

NO—Cunningham, Richards, Sodergren—3.

Absent—Mahoney Studley—2.

Not voting President Hobbs.

Adjourned at 8.23 until Feb. 5.

CUTLER HARDWICK.

Funeral services were held this afternoon for Benjamin Cutler Hardwick at his late home 484 Washington street, Dorchester, and interment was at Mount Wollaston cemetery .

Mr. Hardwick died suddenly at his home Saturday evening. He had just returned from a meeting at the Dorchester Second church, when he was overcome by heart failure from which he did not rally.

Mr. Hardwick was born in Quincy, Oct. 3, 1833, one of five children of Charles and Mary Hardwick. At the age of twenty-six he went as a pioneer to Alpena, Mich., where he achieved success in the business of general merchandise and real estate. He helped to build up that flourishing town.

Returning to Quincy in 1868, Mr. Hardwick assumed the care of the estate of his father, who had been one of the leading granite dealers. After ten years he moved to Dorchester, where he had lived quietly for thirty-four years. In 1887 he built the residence on the corner of Washington and Tremlett streets adjoining the Walter Baker estate, of which he was made executor by Mrs. Baker.

Mr. Hardwick was a liberal supporter of the Second church in Dorchester, where his constant attendance emphasized his loyalty. Missionary causes, like Hampton and Tuskegee, appealed to him with unfailing force, and his gifts to the American Board were generous, yet quietly bestowed. He shrank from any official position, but by abundant reading kept himself well informed in all the enterprises of the church in the world.

Mr. Hardwick was a brother of the late Charles H. Hardwick of Chestnut street and the late Franklin Hardwick of Spear street and is survived by an only sister, Mrs. M. J. Hall who has cared for him in the last years of his infirmity. He was in his 79th year.

Beside his sister he leaves two nephews, Charles Frank Hardwick of Spear street and Charles Theodore Hardwick of Chestnut street and two nieces Mrs. William E. Alden of Chestnut street and the only daughter of his sister Mrs. Hall of Dorchester.

LADIES' NIGHT

tried, due to the disfavor of those who were told of its benefits, and to the refusal of the parties to become convinced of the desirability of transacting business over the telephone.

The installation of telephones as a means of issuing calls to express companies, was portrayed in full, and here was laid the first successful attempt of the telephone to prove its efficiency.

The first long distance telephone at Salem was explained. Mr. Pierce stated that a reporter for the Boston Globe was covering a meeting in Salem and conceived the idea of sending his account in by wire. The necessary connections were made with the result that the attempt was successful. The rapid growth of the telephone at all points was brought out in a pleasing manner. The different devices, mechanisms, and electrical instruments necessary in the installation and the many added improvements made from time to time were all considered by the speaker, who endeavored to familiarize his auditors with the same.

The long distance telephone used by Governor Russell and the consternation created at the time were dealt with, while a resume of other steps brought the speaker to a discussion of the modern telephone system.

He said that in the whole world, two telephone calls were registered to every match that was burned. Right here in Quincy, he added, there are 12,000 calls every day. The speaker had a chart which showed the most calls are sent in the morning between eight and twelve o'clock and in the afternoon between three and six.

After giving a short account of the apprenticeship of the operator, he explained the system in vogue. He complimented the operators for their efficient work at all times, and took occasion to refute the arguments advanced by a number who are inclined at different intervals to censure the operator for her seemingly indifferent service. He told of the various duties incumbent on the operator, and explained in detail the amount of work involved in each call. He said that a girl, in order to become an operator, must prove herself to be apt, capable, intelligent and efficient. An explanation of the switchboard and the operating of the same by the operator herself was then given.

The strict supervision exercised over the operators and the desire at all times to please came in for their share of consideration.

A number of statistics bearing on the part played by the telephone in the advance and progress of scientific movements of the age, brought to a close one of the best lectures ever given in the parish house of Christ church.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the speaker was accorded a rising vote of thanks. Refreshments were served and an entertainment was in order. Arthur L. Thomas, chairman of the Men's club, brought the meeting to a close by extending an invitation to all to be present at the next lecture.

He Liked Scotchmen.

The late Meredith Townsend had an affection for Scotsmen as contributors to the Spectator, of which he was for so many years proprietor and coeditor. Mr. Townsend's liking for the Scots was based on an experience he had in Leith when a boy. He was on a holiday and had run short of money for his return to London. He boldly boarded a London passenger boat, intimated his desire to the captain to go south, explained who he was and stated that he was without funds. Seemingly favorably impressed by the lad's tale and appearance, the captain, a Scot, said that would be all right and showed him to a cabin. "But," said young Townsend, "this is a saloon. As things are steerage would do all right." "Na, na, my mannie," said the captain. "If I trust ye at all I'll trust ye first class!" London Spectator.

USEFULNESS OF OUR PUBLIC LIBRARY

A young Technology student having to take part in a debate upon the influence of newspapers upon the growth of crime, applied at our Public library. Just the material wanted was obtained and his side won in the debate. Again, a young woman had to write of the history and construction of Minot's Ledge lighthouse. The assistants having looked in vain for books, magazine articles and even encyclopaedias to cover just the special ground, the Librarian applied through the research bureau of Nelson's Loose-leaf Encyclopaedia and a type-written account giving the exact information desired was sent to the Library and furnished the applicant in season for her work.

A beginning has been made in the purchase of books of musical composition, and if these prove to be appreciated, others will be added. Those already purchased are Grieg's Piano lyrics and shorter compositions, Fifty songs for high voice from Schubert, and Fifty Shakespeare songs.

A few more books in the Italian and French languages have lately been added, and still more Italian books must be bought to help satisfy the patrons, especially of the West Quincy reading room. The following new magazines may now be found on the reading tables at Crane Memorial Hall. "The Theatre," the playgoer's magazine; "Aeronautics" the aviator's magazine, and "System" the business man's magazine.

A MOONSHINING PARSON

Pleads Guilty to Running a "Wild-Cat" Still Near His Home

Nashville, Jan. 16.—Rev. Joseph R. Smith of Sewanee was brought to Nashville after having been bound over to the April term of the federal court on a charge of making moonshine whiskey. At a preliminary hearing Smith pleaded guilty to the charge.

The minister has for several months been the regular pastor of three small churches near Sewanee. His "wild-cat" still was located in the smokehouse a few yards from the parsonage. The outfit destroyed by the officers was complete and nearly 100 gallons of good beer and mash were found.

Smith asserts he did not know it was a violation of the law to make whiskey, but knew it was wrong to drink it. He also stated he had never sold any of his whiskey, but had given some of it to a few of his parishioners for medicinal purposes.

FISHERMEN IN DISTRESS

Cargoes Valued at $500,000 In Vessels Locked In by Ice

Gloucester, Mass., Jan. 16.—Two vessels ashore, one of them a total loss, and twenty-five others imprisoned in the ice floes of Newfoundland, with cargoes valued at $500,000, is the news contained in a dispatch received by the fish merchants of this port, and all are waiting anxiously for some definite explanation as to the exact extent of the damage done their craft by the storm and ice.

The schooner William E. Morrissey, Captain Daley, owned by Benjamin Smith, is ashore at Table Point, N. F., and is, according to the information received here by Smith, a total loss. The crew have all been saved.

In the meantime revenue cutters are being rushed post haste to the Gulf of St. Lawrence in an endeavor to rescue from the threatening ice floes the vessels imprisoned there.

MORSE DECLINES TO GO TO HOT SPRINGS

Convict Banker Suffers From Three Incurable Diseases

Washington, Jan. 16.—Charles W. Morse, the convicted New York banker, may not accept the privilege of treatment at Hot Springs, Ark., as a prisoner patient, in accordance with the authority granted by President Taft. It is understood that Morse has declined to leave the army hospital at Fort McPherson, Ga., at present.

Officials here are reticent in regard to the matter. All details for making the transfer had been arranged and the time of departure depended only upon Morse's readiness.

Morse is suffering from three incurable diseases — valvular heart trouble, Bright's disease and arterio sclerosis.

BRIEFS

Twelfth Night revels tonight at Alpha hall.

Sunday, Quincy Bay was frozen so solidly that several parties of boys and young men walked over a large area of it between Wollaston, Atlantic and Squantum. An experiment it would not have been safe to have undertaken on Monday.

Quincy friends regret to learn of the death on Jan. 11 at Jamaica Plain of Philip Hoffman Downes, son of the late Capt. John Downes, U. S. N., late superintendent of the National Sailors Home at Wollaston. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon.

Miss Marguerite Harding, contralto soloist for the Quincy Choral Society concert of Jan. 23, has sung with many of the leading choral societies of New England and always acceptably. She has a deep contralto voice and sings with artistic taste and skill. In the "Golden Legend" solos, calling for rich tonal effects and intelligent interpretations, she is sure to be heard at her best.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

Letters remain at the Quincy Post Office uncalled for: Mr. Anderson, Mrs. Fred Andrews, Chester Borrie, A. Bowers, P. G. Brenner, Carmine Calianozzi, S. Cashool, Mrs. Alden D. Cheeney, James R. CHRISTIANS AT BANQUET

Men and Religion Forward Movement Formally Launched

Boston, Jan. 16.—No more enthusiastic religious demonstration has been held in Boston in years than the banquet that formally opened the active campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement last night in Tremont Temple.

Approximately 1000 men, representatives of many denominations, business men, professional men, laborers and men of all walks in life, sat seemingly spellbound when the issues of this, one of the greatest of all modern religious movements, were placed before them by the campaign leaders.

There were many addresses. Each one was short and each had its own important part in the work.

STRIKERS NOT YET OVERAWED

Half a Thousand Militiamer on Duty in Lawrence

MILLS WILL NOT SHUT DOWN

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 16.—Every mill in Lawrence will start the million of wheels whirring today in defiance of the 15,000 strikers who sat last night in stuffy halls and crowded tenement houses, peering out of windows with angry eyes at the soldiers pacing the streets through the snow and slush, guarding the mills.

Half a thousand militiamen, 300 policemen and a company of artillery have been insufficient to overawe the strikers. One of their number is perhaps dying of a bayonet thrust, scores are nursing broken heads from policemen's clubs and the long ash sticks of Battery C, twenty-eight of the leaders arrested have been sentenced to jail, several for two years, the others for one year, yet last night the most enthusiastic mass meeting the strikers have ever held jammed city hall full and overflowed into the square and the common.

Fiery speeches that the struggle be prolonged were shouting in many languages to the surging throng which had entered the hall through a double line of bayonets.

No one believes that the fight has yet been won by the mill men. The mass of soldiery has served to infuriate rather than to subdue the strikers.

Mill Men Won't Yield

The only way that further rioting and bloodshed possibly can be avoided, according to men in a position to know, is by the mill owners shutting down every mill and starving the strikers out.

This the mill owners will not listen to. They are rushed with orders. The strike has come at the busiest season of the year and they are determined that, come what will, they will not concede a point to the strikers.

Mayor Scanlon is plainly in sympathy with the mill owners. He had a conference with Lawrence Maroney, one of the strike leaders, yesterday afternoon.

"Why don't you go out there and tell those strikers to go home?" said the mayor to Maroney. "I want you to understand that a crowd of bandits is not going to run this city. I will keep order here if I have to call on the whole federal army, and believe me when I tell you that if today's riots are repeated tomorrow there will be an awful slaughter."

Operatives' Demands

In a conference which followed Strike Leader Ettor showed his contempt for the display of force and his confidence that the workers would win by making the first formal demands which have been made on the mill owners.

The original trouble was started last week when the workmen got their pay envelopes and discovered that they had been paid for fifty-four hours' work instead of fifty-six.

They struck for that extra two hours' pay. Yesterday Ettor demanded a straight increase of 15 percent and declared that under no other terms would they go back to work. This raise, if granted, would be equivalent to 10 percent over the old fifty-six-hour rate.

The mile-long string of giant mills, which rise five to seven stories on Canal street, are like fortresses. Inside Pinkerton men and militia slept last night with rifles at their sides. Hundreds of cot beds have been brought into the mills and on them sleep also the clerks and such loyal workers as are afraid to go home.

Sharp-Shooters on Duty

High up in the towers of the mills are stationed the best sharp-shooters of the Masaschusetts militia, loaded rifles in their hands, with instructions to shoot down any man they see who climbs the gates.

What the mill owners fear most of all is dynamiting and they think it most likely that an attempt of this sort would be made in the night time. That is why the sharp-shooters are there.

The mills could not be better situated to resist an attack. The strikers found that out yesterday when they attempted to rush the mill gates.

Virtually all the mills concerned in the strike are on Canal street, a great, wide thoroughfare, on one side of which is the canal, perhaps seventy-five feet wide. To enter the mill it is necessary to cross the canal via one of the numerous bridges which lead to the gates. So long as the bridges are held, the mills cannot be entered by any mob, however strong, save by a narrow railroad track easy of defense.

Many Clashes

There were several clashes between the police and strikers yesterday and it was necessary for the police to make several arrests and to fire shots in two cases. The most effective method of subduing the combative spirits of the crowd was found to be the use of streams of water from fire hose.

The most serious of the morning's disorders were efforts on the part of the strikers to rush through the doors at the Wood and Prospect mills. The attempts at both places were repulsed by the police, of whom more than 200 were on duty.

They found it necessary to use their clubs on several of the leaders at the Prospect mills and made arrests at both places.

The greatest crowd gathered at the Wood mill of the American Woolen company before the hour of opening. Pickets were on duty as early as 5 o'clock to prevent operatives from entering the mills. Force was often used and women and children were roughly handled when they insisted on going to their work.

About a thousand hands got to their places in the mill only to be met there by other strikers, who, having evaded the police and watchmen, brandished clubs in an effort to force the operatives out. These agitators had their way until the mills were closed down shortly after 7 o'clock.

Workers Do Not Favor Strike

Mayor Scanlon said last evening: "This trouble comes from about 500 Socialists and anarchists, who are stirring up the mill hands and intimidating them and preventing them from going back to work. We have been free from strikes in this city, which has been a peaceful industrial centre.

"These men picked out this place to try out the strike and believe they can intimidate the workers from remaining in the mills. The majority in the mills do not want to strike."

FEDERAL CONTROL OF BIG CORPORATIONS

Bill Introduced Into Congress Looking to That End

Washington, Jan. 16.—Constructive legislation looking to federal control of the great corporations engaged in the manufacture of goods of all kinds for purposes of interstate commerce is the object of a bill introduced in the house of representatives by Congressman Roberts of Massachusetts.

The new corporation bill is well supplied with punitive paragraphs looking to the discouragement of efforts to defeat its object and these paragraphs in almost every case carry with them penalties of imprisonment for offenses against the law.

The bill prohibits stock watering of new corporations, and is applicable to all corporations, exclusive of national banks and insurance companies, all of which now have what appears to be sufficient federal or state regulation. In scope it aims to control through the medium of the bureau of corporations all corporations of a valuation greater than $5,000,000.

LIABILITY LAW STANDS

Supreme Court Says State Courts May Enforce the Act of 1908

Washington, Jan. 16.—The constitutionality of the employers' liability law passed by congress in 1908 was upheld by the supreme court of the United States in all cases before it. The court also decided that state courts may enforce that act when local laws are appropriate.

This was the second and finally successful attempt of congress to change the old common law rule that an employe of a common carrier could not procure damages for injuries received in his employment when the injuries resulted from the negligence of a fellow-servant.

The first law, that enacted in 1906, was declared unconstitutional in 1908 because it embraced within its terms a regulation of intrastate commerce as well as interstate.

TAFT SET THE EXAMPLE

Hearings on Treaties to Be Public, Contrary to Custom

Washington, Jan. 16.—Because President Taft set the example on his recent western trip and frequently since, of discussing openly and unreservedly the pending arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France, the senate voted to admit the public to its debates and preserve them in the Congressional Record.

The vote was decisive, only eight senators of the sixty-eight recorded being in favor of closed doors.

The controversy as to whether the discussion should be in open or closed session was almost entirely executive.

HAS BEST OF MATERIAL

French Cabinet Hailed as the Greatest In Many Years

Paris, Jan. 16.—The readiness of such prominent men as Leon Bourgeois, Aristide Briand, Theophile Delcasse and Alexandre Millerand to accept minor places in the cabinet formed by Senator Poincare is generally regarded as a striking evidence of the solidarity, self-sacrifice and patriotism of Frenchmen at a time of national need.

The press of all shades of opinion comments on the strength of the new ministry. Even the monarchistic Gaulois admits it is the greatest cabinet ever formed since the foundation of the third republic.

Washington Congressman Scents Shipping Combine

GREAT SHIPPING TRUST

Said to Be Working With Railroads Under "Gentlemen's Agreement"

Washington, Jan. 16.—Evidence was presented to the house committee on rules proving the existence of a gigantic international shipping trust which works in the closest sympathy with the railroad interests of the United States to the detriment of American commerce.

Representative Humphrey of Washington, who made the charges before the committee, also stated that this combine could be brought to obey the law both under the Sherman act and under the authority of the interstate commerce commission.

"There is a gentlemen's agreement," said Humphrey, "between the railroads and the foreign steamship lines which will crush any attempt for low rates through the Panama canal. The combine, and not the government, will fix the rates."

MASSACRE OF MANCHUS

Report of Killing of Ten Thousand In Shensi Is Confirmed

Pekin, Jan. 16.—The Kansu imperial army, after much fighting, has succeeded in pushing its way to within sixty miles of Sinafu, the capital of Shensi province.

The entire province is in a state of complete turmoil. Many towns have been looted and deserted.

The reported massacre of 10,000 Manchus by rebels in the Shensi district is confirmed.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

ABOUT SWEET POTATOES.

SWEET potatoes may be boiled, baked or fried. They are best baked. Do not pare sweet potatoes before boiling. They should be pared after cooking and dried for a few minutes in the oven before serving.

Warming Over Sweet Potatoes.

When you have cold boiled or baked potatoes they may be used in making up various dainty dishes. For instance: Take a pint of sliced cold sweet potatoes, three tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of chopped onions, a half teaspoonful of chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste and a half pint of stock. Put the potatoes, butter and onions in a frying pan and fry them until they are brown. Then lift out and place on a hot dish.

Add some flour to the butter still in pan and stir these together. Then pour in the stock, seasoning with salt and pepper. When it is lifted off the fire add the beaten yolk of an egg. Pour this sauce over the potatoes when they are served.

A Novel Dish.

Browned Sweet Potatoes.—Wash and boil some sweet potatoes until tender. Scrape off the skin and cut in half lengthwise. Lay the side down on a buttered pie plate. Dust with salt and pepper and put a little bit of butter on each piece of potato. Brown in hot oven.

Sweet Potato Strips.—Peel several large sweet potatoes and let stand in cold water an hour. Then wipe and pare round and round in a long strip without breaking. Drop in boiling lard and fry light brown. Put on paper to drain. When ready to serve sprinkle with salt.

For Dessert.

Sweet Potato Custards.—Here is a recipe that will make a dessert dish.

Bake several sweet potatoes. Scrape out the inside and press through a colander.

For each custard cup allow a half cup of the potato, half a cup of cream or sweet milk, one tablespoonful of sugar, one egg and a piece of butter the size of a walnut.

Stir the butter into the potato while hot and add the sugar, then beat the yolks of the eggs and add them, then cream or milk. Beat well. Butter the custard cups and pour the mixture into each. Then add to the top of each some of the whites of the eggs which have been beaten stiff and sweetened a little.

Place the cups in the oven and bake until the white of the egg is a delicate brown. Serve cold with whipped or plain cream.

UNAUTHORIZED BY PRESIDENT

Hitchcock's Government Ownership Plan Stirs Taft

SUMMONED TO WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Jan. 16.—Postmaster General Hitchcock's pronouncement in favor of government ownership and operation of the telegraph lines, as an adjunct of the postoffice department, stirred official Washington as few administrative acts have in recent years.

The postmaster general's statement was news to the White House and is said to have caused the greatest surprise there. This was evident when efforts were made to recall the announcement. This effort, however, did not come from Hitchcock.

President Taft sent for Postmaster General Hitchcock to explain why he announced he would recommend to congress the government ownership of telegraph lines without first consulting the president.

From the White House came word before the arrival of the postmaster general that any view which Hitchcock might express upon the question of government ownership of telegraph lines or any other public utility was his own personal view and was not the policy of the administration.

Shortly after the conference, the White House issued a formal statement saying that there was no friction between the president and his postmaster general and making it clear that Hitchcock would not leave the cabinet as a result of his statement.

Mr. Taft's official statement says the recommendation of the postmaster general that it would be well for the government to buy the telegraph lines and incorporate them in the postoffice system appeared in an earlier annual report submitted by him to the president. It was decided at the suggestion of the president to postpone reference of the matter to another year and not to bring it forward then, because of the recommendation of many other important changes, including the postal savings bank and the parcels post.

"The postmaster general intended to bring this matter to the attention of the president before the publication in advance of this part of his report," says the statement. "After having made preparation for publication he was suddenly called out of town without having done so.

"His conclusion as to the wisdom of taking over the telegraph lines had been reached only after a full investigation and consideration. As the report containing the recommendations has not yet been submitted to the president it has not yet been considered by him or by the cabinet with a view to presenting it to congress."

Senators and representatives generally did not learn of the proposed recommendation until they read it in the papers. Most generally discussed on all the reports is one to the effect that pressure may be brought to bear upon Hitchcock not to make the recommendation.

Russell Cables That Shuster Has Taken Passage For Paris

Washington, Jan. 16.—W. M. Shuster, lately American treasurer general of Persia, with his little party, is at length safely out of the disturbed kingdom, where, for a time, he played an important part.

American Minister Russell cabled the state department from Teheran that the Shuster party sailed from Persia (presumably from Enseli), intending to proceed to Paris via Batoum and Constantinople.

The minister made no report upon the status of the fourteen other American treasury officials.

AGED RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

BORN IN 1814

William Garrity, one of Quincy's oldest if its oldest citizen passed away at 3 o'clock this morning at his home 13 Cottage street, aged 98 years, his death being due largely to old age. Up to three years ago Mr. Garrity enjoyed unusual good health for one of his age, and although a little hard of hearing his eyesight was of the best and he was able to read his daily paper, in which he took great delight without the aid of glasses. He also read many of the standard books and was thoroughly conversant with the doings of the public

Although obliged to use two canes he for years took a morning walk, which he thoroughly enjoyed. He has been a resident of Quincy for many years and has seen the town grow from a little village to a flourishing city of 32,000 population.

He was born in Roscommon, County, Roscommon Ireland, in 1814. For 33 years he remained in his native country. While in Ireland he was married and the one child that was born there died.

On June 4, 1847 the vessel James of Belfast landed in New York city and aboard it was Mr. Garrity and his wife. The trip across took six weeks and three days and he lived to see the day when the voyage can be made in four days.

Arriving in New York, Mr. Garrity made his way at once to Milton coming to Boston by the way of Fall River. He lived in Milton for six months and then took up his residence on Cottage street where he since made his home the house later being remodelled and up-to-date.

The chief business of his native town being farming. Mr. Garrity naturally sought that work when he came here. The first man he worked for was Harvey Field, father of John Q. A. Field. He then took up the trade of a currier in the tannery of Frank Williams and followed this work for many years.

When Mr. Williams' tannery passed into the hands of William Panton, Mr. Garrity still remained with the firm. After the tannery business went out of Quincy, about 33 years ago, Mr. Garrity went into the express business, having a large trade for about fifteen years, when his age and health compelled him to retire his son carrying on the business.

Mr. Garrity lived with his son and three daughters, all that remain of a family of ten. His son Lawrence carries on a well established milk business. His three daughters are Agnes, Elizabeth and Ellen, one a school teacher, one a dressmaker and the other housekeeper at home.

He also had a son Rev. John J. Garrity, who died a few years ago and a son William who died a little over four years ago.

QUINCY WANTS INFORMATION

Mayor Stone continues to furnish evidence that he is onto his job, for this morning he was represented at the hearing at the state house on the bill to authorize the Old Colony railroad to construct an extension of its tracks from Mattapan to East Milton, by Dock Commissioner Crane. The Board of Trade was also represented at the hearing by President Charles C. Hearn. The passage of the bill was advocated by Charles R. Usher and opposed by Representative Wolcott of Milton and ex-Assistant District Attorney Hill.

The Quincy delegation when called upon stated that they desired more information on the matter before they committed the city to any action. The bill will be referred to the Directors of the Port of Boston, the Park and Railroad commissioners for consideration.

MISSING HEIRESS IS FOUND IN NEW YORK

Girl Worth More Than $100,000 Working as Domestic

New York, Jan. 16.—Violet Buehler, the missing Chicago girl, was found working in a tenement in this city. The girl has been employed by Mrs. Annie Brett.

Miss Buehler, who is an heiress, was taken to a police station. She told the police she came to New York about a month ago with the idea of seeing the world.

Miss Buehler said that after her money began to get low she answered a newspaper advertisement for a nurse. She was employed by Mrs. Brett. For more than three weeks the young girl, who is said to be worth more than $100,000, has been acting as a nurse for the mother of Mrs. Brett, as well as doing light domestic work.

FALSE PRIEST IN CUSTODY

Pope Included In List of Victims From Whom He Got $200,000

Rome, Jan. 16.—Giovan-Battista Gindri, a pseudo-Roman Catholic priest, was arrested on a charge of extensive swindling. He has also been known as Mgr. De Sevigny, prince of Belmonte. He confessed to the police that he had swindled the pope, many cardinals and religious orders and royal personages out of about $200,000.

Gindri not only pretended to be a priest, but celebrated mass regularly. He is wanted in several countries, particularly in France, Germany and Austria, where he pretended to be an emissary of the pope and swindled the Roman Catholic clergy and many diplomats.

HACKNEY COACHES.

Tradesmen Protested When They First Appeared In London.

In a letter dated April 1, 1639, Mr. Garrard, writing to the Earl of Strafford, says: "Here is one Captain Baily. He hath been a sea captain, but now lives in London, where he tries experiments. He hath erected according to his ability some four hackney coaches, put his men in a livery and appointed them to stand at the Maypole in the Strand, giving them instructions at what rate to carry men into several parts of the town, where all day they may be had.

"Other hackney men seeing this way, they flocked to the same place and performed their journeys at the same rate, so that sometimes there are twenty of them together, which disperse up and down."

Citizen shopkeepers bitterly complained of this, saying:

"Formerly when ladies and gentlemen walked in the streets there was a chance of customers, but now they whisk past in the coaches before our apprentices have time to cry out, 'What d'ye lack?'"

The word cab, a contraction of cabriolet, was not used until 1823.—London Standard.

FENCES THAT BLOOM.

They Grow Twenty Feet High and Are Armed With Great Thorns.

Throughout the older parts of Mexico, Texas and New Mexico many of the fences around the corrals and often the gardens are made of "ocatilla." This is a cactus-like plant growing in a stalk form and often reaching a height of twenty or twenty-five feet. It is completely covered with long, stout thorns.

The stalk is tough, hard to cut, almost impossible to break, and, growing to the height it does, it makes an effective protection. It is planted usually in three or four alternate rows and is held together by buckskin strings or with strong wire. It needs but little water.

I believe this ocatilla fence would be found very satisfactory to use on country estates, and even the owner of a modest plot of ground would find it a good thing. It prevents stock from breaking in, effectively keeps at a distance all marauders and when in bloom is a beautiful sight, for at the tip of the stalk there comes early in summer a cluster of deep crimson, ball shaped blossoms. I remember once the astonished, almost horrified, expression of an eastern woman to whom I mentioned the beauty of the corral fence when in bloom.—Country Life In America.

A Wonderful Vine.

Grapevines are known to live a great many years and bear almost yearly crops of good fruit. One of the oldest grapevines in this country, which grows on Roanoke island, North Carolina, is claimed to be more than 300 years old. Its yield is still very abundant, and the vine appears to be in good health. Historians declare that it was planted by members of Sir Walter Raleigh's party, who sailed from England for the coast of the new world in the year 1584. Many persons have secured cuttings from this plant, but few will grow.—Harper's Weekly.

Old Time Vintners.

In the city of London at the time of King John every vintner was required to hang outside his shop an iron vessel with pegs marking the different quantities sold.

MASS MEETING TO OPEN CAMPAIGN

The first big mass meeting of the Men and Religion campaign in the Quincy district will be held in Y. M. C. A. hall this evening at 8 o'clock. This opening service will have for its special theme "Boys' Work" and one of the ablest speakers in this country along that line will deliver the address Mr. Clarence C. Robinson of Atlanta, Georgia, one of the International Y. M. C. A. secretaries, is to be the orator of the occasion and no boy should miss the rare opportunity of hearing him.

A special invitation is extended to all boys fifteen years of age and over in this city and surrounding towns to come to the Y. M. C. A. for the purpose of meeting Mr. Robinson and hearing what he has to say.

He has the reputation of being at the same time one of the most brilliant and the most practical of speakers on the Boy problem.

Special notice should be taken of the fact that this meeting and those which are to follow will be held in Y. M. C. A. hall instead of at Bethany church as was first intended.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO A QUARRYMAN

John Heenue, a quarryman employed at the Granite Railway quarry was seriously injured this morning about 10.30 when a box of tools dropped from the top of the quarry striking him on the head. Heenue was at work in the quarry hole when a box of tools that was being carried by some workmen slipped from their hands and fell into the quarry. The unfortunate man was removed to the City Hospital in the police ambulance where he was treated by Dr. D. R. Bruce who found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the skull.

BRIEFS

Professor Wrigley is to give an organ recital tomorrow evening Christ church.

Robert M. Gurney of Marblehead, has returned home after a brief stay with relatives on Greenleaf street.

Thomas T. Maguire of Hancock street has gone to Augusta, Maine, on a business trip.

News has reached Quincy of the death on Jan. 2d of Mrs. Christine Vinal, wife of James W. Vinal of Roslindale, formerly of Quincy.

Fragment society of First church meets in the church parlor tomorrow afternoon at half past one for sewing for the fair to be held March six.

The entertainment to have been given tomorrow night at the First Presbyterian church has been postponed on account of the prevalence of measles.

WILL HOLD DANCE.

The members of St. John's Dramatic club hold their first dancing party in the assembly hall of the Parochial school, Phipps street, tomorrow evening. The committee in charge is looking forward to a most successful affair, and from present indications, everything points to success.

The committee comprises:—John Duggan, Daniel Driscoll, Miss Eleanor Moriarty, Miss Louise Driscoll and Miss Nellie Desmond.

TESTIMONIAL DANCE.

A testimonial dance will be tendered Louis Ross, a young man popularly known in local circles, this evening in Electa Hall. Colonial orchestra will furnish music. The committee in charge includes George A. Rooney, George M. Shortle, James E. Bourke, Miss Carrie Woodsum and Miss Eleanor Taylor.

A Wily Mocking Bird.

A naturalist tells of a droll exhibition of fun evinced by a mocking bird. It had only recently been captured and was placed near another cage in which were two canaries, both excellent singers. The mocking bird at first seemed to be struck dumb by his voluble neighbors; but, as it turned out afterward, he was only biding his time. For several days he remained silent, taking notes, until he had mastered their song, when one day, without even a preliminary rehearsal, he burst out into a canary song in a loud, ringing tone that struck his yellow throated neighbors mute with astonishment. After this it was a favorite amusement of his to drown the voices of the canaries with his own loud notes whenever they attempted to sing.—Detroit Free Press.

MEN AND BOYS NOT ALLOWED

Quincy Girls Defeated by Cunningham Gym at Basket Ball

THE SCORE

In a game which was close and exciting from start to finish, the Girls' team from the Cunningham Gymnasium defeated the Quincy Gymn Girls in basketball, at Milton, Monday evening, the score being 10 to 9. The game was attended by 450 fans and by an anamalous procedure from the spirit of the Leap Year season, there were no members of the male sex in attendance. Then to, an admission fee was charge, and this had a tendency to bring out the lady rooters in large numbers.

Two sets of rules were used, because of the fact that each team has been accustomed to play under different rules. The local girls have conformed in their playing to the same rules which have governed regular basketball playing, the Milton Girls have under rules governing games in which girls paritcipate.

Both teams exhibited great form. It was only in the last few minutes of play that the Milton girlls succeeded in annexing a victory. Captain Grace Barry played well for the winners while Frances Curtin and Mildred Smith excelled for the losers.

Natural Error.

"Will you take me to your circus, Mr. Merry?"

"Why, Willie, I have nothing to do with any circus. What makes you ask that?"

"Why, mother said you was a clown."—New York Times.

HORSE KILLED BY TROLLEY WIRE

A horse owned by George E. Fobb, the Braintree expressman was electrocuted on Hancock street near the Atlantic bridge this noon by a falling trolley wire. The car for Squantum which left Neponset at 11.30 had nearly reached the bridge when the motor became heated and took fire. This caused a ground and the trolley wire was burned off. As the wire fell it struck the lead horse of Fogg's team and the animal dropped dead.

Combination 2 of Atlantic was summoned on a still alarm and put out the fire. There were a few passengers in the car, but beyond receiving a bad frieght no one was injured.

—Just how far censorship of newspaper advertising should extend is a point suggested by a display "ad" in a Boston paper. It showed a picture of a five-story corner building, covered by the names of the firm and the goods it sells. There was plain inference, if not direct statement, to those not knowing otherwise, that the entire building was occupied by the advertisers. As a matter of fact, no such number of signs were on the building and from all an observer could see the firm occupies, not all five floors but a single store and two floors above. The advertisement was clearly misleading and of the type to cause distrust of the other advertising in the paper printing it. Does such advertising pay?—Boston Common.

HOUSE BILL 131

In view of the agitation that has taken place during the past few weeks relative to setting off Houghs Neck as a separate town, and the action of the City Council Monday evening in appointing a committee, to appear before the legislative committee in opposition to the passage of the bill it will be of interest to know just what the proposed bill calls for.

The name of the new town as proposed is Seagirt and the bill which accompanied the petition of John P. Moses, and known as House bill, No. 131 is as follows:—

AN ACT.

To incorporate the Town of Seagirt.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

CLEAN RECORD FOR ATTENDANCE

Annual Meeting of Wollaston Baptist Sunday School

REPORTS

A remarkable record for Sunday school attendance was brought out at the annual meeting of the Wollaston Baptist Sunday school Tuesday evening. For nine years Miss Ednah Rhodes has attended the regular sessions of the school without missing a Sunday. Miss May Critchley is a close second with seven years of continuous attendance to her credit.

Following are the officers and committees for the ensuing year: Superintendent—Elford L. Durgan; assistant superintendent—Louis S. Cleaves secretary and treasurer—O. A. Blaisdell; assistant secretary and treasurer—Miss Isabel L. Albee; superintendent primary department—Mrs. Charles B. Hall; secretary primary department—Miss Margery P. Rideout; superintendent home department—Mrs. William Dimock; librarian—Francis H. Corey; musical director—Amos D. Albee; auditor—Charles B. Hall; pianists—Mrs. Chas. M. Roach, Mrs. Emma Perry, Miss May Critchley and Mrs. Joseph Walther.

Following the election of officers Francis H. Corey who has served as librarian for five years announced his resignation but consented to serve until a suitable successor was appointed.

The report of the secretary showed an enrollment of 449 members an increase of 96 during the year. The past year $200 have been contributed for benevolences and missions besides a sum for rebuilding the Sunday school room.

There have been eight with perfect attendance during the year: Ednah Rhodes, May Critchley, Martha Waring, Ethel Hatfield, Muriel Dresser, Revere Dresser, Palmer Mitchell and E. L. Durgan the superintendent.

The librarian's report was given by Francis H. Corey and Mrs. Chas. B. Hall reported for the primary department.

Eben Hardy reported for the Walther class and Mrs. A. H. Kendall gave a most flourishing review of the work of the Albee class.

Charles M. Roach, president of the Rand Class reported for this body telling of its enrollment and attendance. In speaking of the work of these classes, J. Arthur Sparrow who presided was of the opinion that organized classes were the ones that paid.

Rev. Joseph Walther reported for the nominating committee and votes of appreciation were extended Superintendent Durgan and other officials.

JOHN QUEENY KILLED BY CARS

Body Found on Tracks Near President's Bridge

LIVED ON SPEAR STREET

John Queeney, of 25 Spear street, and for 27 years the manager of the Glenrose farm at East Braintree, was killed by the cars near the Presidents bridge this morning. Just how the accident happened, or what train struck him is not known. The body was found by the crew of a gravel train that passed through Quincy about 7 o'clock. They notified the police and Medical Examiner Jones, after viewing the body turned it over to Undertaker Hall.

When found the body lay between the two tracks at the northerly end of the bridge and his hat and gloves were found near the south end of the bridge which leads to the belief that it was an inward train which struck him.

The unfortunate man was 66 years of age and is said to have brooded considerable over the fact that he had lost his position at the Glenrose farm. According to the police he has been in the habit of getting up early every morning and walking about the streets, and had frequently been seen by the policemen at as early as 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

It is generally supposed that he was about this morning and while walking on the railroad tracks he got too near a passing train and was struck.

He leaves two sons, John T. who is employed by the General Electric Co., of Boston and James a wool merchant in Boston The sons were notified by Chief Burrell, and came to Quincy this noon. He is also survived by a widow.

TESTIMONIAL DANCING PARTY

About 250 friends of Louis Ross, a young man highly esteemed in local circles assembled in Electa hall Tuesday evening, at a testimonial dance given in his interest. Friends were present from Dorchester, Roxbury, South Boston, Hyde Park, Weymouth and Braintree.

Music was furnished by the Colonial orchestra, and dancing was enjoyed from eight o'clock until midnight, with a short intermission at eleven o'clock. During which songs were rendered by Joseph Fay, Frank Taylor, Henry Burke and Clarence Carson. The Harmony quartet, composed of Peter Hines, Jacob Silverman, Joseph Currie and Louis Katafalkas responded to numerous encores.

The affair was a great success due to the efforts of the committee composed of George A. Shortle John J. Rooney, Miss Eleanor Taylor and Miss Carrie Woodsum.

FINE MUSICAL PROGRAM GIVEN

Annual Entertainment of Unity Circle King's Daughters

BETHANY CHAPEL

The annual entertainment, held under the auspices of Unity Circle, King's Daughters at Bethany chapel, Tuesday evening, was very entertaining and a large audience was present to enjoy it.

The singing by the Mendelssohn trio of Quincy was excellent; Irene Chapman Tirrell, first soprano; Emma Schufeldt Moore, second soprano; Alice Gertrude Coe, contralto and Mrs. John F. Hunt at the piano.

The musical program was varied and pleased the audience, which showed appreciation by prolonged applause. Mrs. Tirrell sang in her usual admirable voice, Miss Coe possesses a splendid contralto voice and sings with great expression; Mrs. Moore's voice is sweet and flexible with a round pure quality that always pleases. All of the numbers were thoroughly enjoyed and were exceptionally fine.

Miss Irene Bewley read the three act play, "Polly of the Circus" by Miss Margaret Mayo, very effectively. Miss Bewley portrayed the different characters, the minister, the deacon, Jim the circus man, Amanda the colored maid and Polly in a masterly manner and displayed exquisite taste and ability. The evening's entertainment was a decided success.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S MEN'S MEETING

The meeting of the Men's club of St. Chrysostom's parish Monday evening was confined strictly to business and plans were completed for the coming minstrel show, the first rehearsal of which will be held Thursday evening.

Resolutions were offered on the death of Harry Beckwith, a member of the club Rev. Frederick H. Stennstra and John W. Atkins were appointed a committee for the same.

Horace W. Richmond spoke eloquently on the subject of letting down the bars and allowing women to become members of the club. His remarks were as strongly opposed.

An invitation from the Wollaston Congregational club to attend their meeting on Tuesday evening when Judge Shute, author of the "Real diary of a real boy" will be the speaker, was read.

The meeting adjourned with refreshments and a discussion of the coming shows.

MEETINGS OPEN FOR THE WEEK

First Meeting in Men and Religion Forward Movement

AT Y. M. C. A.

The open meeting in the Men and Religion campaign of the Quincy district took place in Y. M. C. A. hall Tuesday evening. Clarence C. Robinson international secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, gave an inspiring address on "Boys." He believed that religious life was just as natural in a boy as the physical. To prove his statements he quoted several experiences he had himself and then referred to Dr. Charles Eastman's book "The Indian Boy."

Mr Robinson proved to be not only an able speaker but a magnetic personality and everyone in the audience appeared to be captivated by him Following the address there was a very helpful conference in which the Boy problems were discussed at some length and it was after ten o'clock when the meeting was finally adjourned

This evening the subject of the meeting will be "Missions." The speaker will be J. M. Moore of the American Baptist Missionary Union, probably one of the first five in the list of great missionary authorities. Those who have heard his addresses in Boston cannot say enough in praise of him and the people of Quincy and vicinity who do not come out to hear him this evening are making a great mistake. To many "Missions" suggests something dry as dust, but no one who hears Mr. Moore will have that same opinion thereafter. The meeting starts at 8 tonight in Y. M. C. A. hall and there should be a record audience present.

GOLD PIECES FOR PROPOSALS

The spirit of the leap year season will be manifest at Parochial School hall this evening, the occasion of the leap year party of St. John's Dramatic club. A souvenir gold piece is to be awarded the girl who makes a legitimate proposal to a young man. This will be the special feature of the evening and in case more than one proposal is offered, the committee is prepared to give the souvenirs to each and every one. This innovation will no doubt prove a great drawing card and it is expected that the hall will be taxed to its utmost.

The affair is in charge of the following committee—Daniel Driscoll, John A. Duggan, Matthew Fay, and the Misses Louise Driscoll, Nellie Desmond and Eleanor Moriarty.

TWELFTH NIGHT REVELS SCENE OF MERRIMENT

Social Conventionality Departed From and Fun and Frolic Reign Supreme

Mr. and Mrs. W. Ward Whitcher Crowned King and Queen

Merriment reigned supreme Tuesday evening at Alpha hall at the Twelfth Night revels. Indian braves, monks, courtly gentlemen, clowns, students, maidens fair, gypsies, princesses, Miss Muffets, Bo-Peeps and ladies of every nation mingled in the frolic, the effect being kaleidoscopic and one of beauty to look upon.

That everyone likes to get away from social conventionality was demonstrated Tuesday evening by the large party assembled to participate and to look on at the Revels. The attendance last year at the first one ever given in the city was good and the affair so successful in every way that this year's frolic was assured of success from the start. For weeks costumes have been planned and the result was variety, originality and beauty such as is seldom brought together.

At eight o'clock when the grand march began the balcony was filled with spectators who showed their appreciation of the costumes and the beautiful effects of the evolutions of the march by frequent bursts of applause. Delcevare King was master of ceremonies and none could have been better for under his guidance the march was a brilliant success.

Mr. King was the Beadle and read the proclamation calling the people to the revels and made all the announcements of the evening in his jolly characteristic way, entering into the spirit of the affair whole-heartedly. His announcements were greeted by cheers by the populace and jeers by the clowns and merriment ran riot.

Interest centered in the huge brown cake borne in on the shoulders of John Kitson and Bruce Saville, the pages, and search was made for the gold ring and Boston bean, which had been baked in the cake, to see who would be king and queen of the revels. Mr. and Mrs Williams Ward Whitcher were the lucky ones (or the victims) to find in their pieces of cake the symbols of honor to be conferred

The crowning ceremony was beautifully carried out, the king and queen being preceded to the throne by the cardinal Carroll Bill and acolytes in red gowns, carrying wax tapers After the king was duly crowned he crowned his queen who was stately and royal in robes of red velvet, lace and diamonds He most happily welcomed his subjects in a clever address

Ladies in waiting were selected from the populace, Mrs. John J. Crain and Mrs. H. F. Ruggles, also a charming little maiden, Theo Kitson making up an attractive group.

The fun and entertainment then proceeded There were dances by Miss Florence Barker, folk dancing by Miss Mary Murray and Miss Helen Sibley; solos by Miss Catherine Saville and William P. Thompson; double quartet of High school stu-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Good resolutions also make good paving material for that hot place.

Mr. Shuster's real ability as a financier will be shown if he manages to collect his salary in full.

A diplomatic sedative we may say, is having two battleships where the other power has but one.

It is Wall street's rueful opinion that the Sherman law and the Sherman definition of war are not very far apart.

No matter where you go you will will find some one anxious to separate you from your hard earned wealth.

A newspaper heading reads; "Cold wave is general." Most of us wish it were no more than a second lieutenant.

In view of the easy way in which murderers get away now-a-days, it would seem a good idea to jail a few of them for about 30 days.

MEN AND RELIGION.

The local world is destined from now on to hear more of the movement which is known as "Men and Religion Forward." It should be explained that this is an attempt to meet the general charge that the Christian church—chiefly, of course, the Protestant branch thereof—is no longer able "to hold its men." Men don't go to church—that's the cry, and it is largely justified. Why they don't go, if it can be discovered, will unquestionably help in seeking the remedy. It is useless to guess at a cure; and the only way to find what remedy is "indicated," as the doctors put it, is to discover the cause of the trouble.

Now the movement just starting is nation-wide. It has committees everywhere and it has its committee here. There is nothing denominational about it—and if there were, it would be a waste of time. Nor is it in the nature of the old-fashioned "revival," which would be worthless as a permanent benefit, whatever its transitory effect. It is we believe, an honest attempt to awaken men to the absolute need of religion to the human race, and to the necessity of saving all men interested therein.

DEPARTMENT STORE METHODS.

The growth of department stores in our great cities is one of the most remarkable phases of modern business. Of course the policy of sending money away from home to buy goods "unsight and unseen" by mail order, is expensive and unscientific.

But the methods by which these great city stores have built up their business among their own townspeople, offer every merchant, big or little, the most suggestive object lesson as to how he can improve his own methods. Millions of dollars are spent by these stores in experiments. The home merchant can often profit by this experience, instead of wasting his time, effort, and money in mistakes of his own.

Department store growth is based largely on advertising. Probably the most essential principle that the big store follows is that the advertisement should be a little newspaper all itself. There are things of interest happening all the time in every store. The writer's function is about like the newspaper reporter's. Let him not spend much time talking in a vague general way about his great bargains. But let him pick out the most attractive values and describe them. His readers will read his production with much more interest than they give to the doings of Congress or the trouble in China.

To get a newspaper article read, the newspaper reporter has to give definite facts about something that interests the people. He does not pile up one adjective after the other, but tells the facts about a thing so that people can see the thing for themselves. So with the advertisement writer.

Who can doubt the power of advertising when one sees what it has done in building up the great department stores? Was ever a great department store built up without advertising?

If then advertising is an absolute necessity in building up a great business, why is not a proportionately smaller amount of advertising an absolute necessity in building up a smaller business?

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

We wonder just how many of the Ledger readers make a habit of reading the advertising columns of our paper each day. We know some do, because we have daily proof of it in the answers to advertisements. The writer has for a long time made it a practice in reading magazines and other periodicals to first of all read the advertising pages and he would not keep up that practice did he not get satisfaction from it. Those pages usually give more real news of latest improvements than do the other pages.

The same thing holds true of the Ledger very often. The advertising columns often tell most interesting stories of the arrival of new supplies, of improvements upon goods, of aids, in sickness or preventatives, of help wanted or to be secured, of tenements, lost and found and no end of other things. Cultivate the habit of looking through the advertising columns and you may be surprised at the news you will get and the money you can save.

KEEP PLUGGHING IS HIS ADVICE

City Clerk McGilvray Gives Some Sound Advice to Young Men

INTERESTING TALK

City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray gave an interesting talk Tuesday evening to the members of the St. Mary's C. T. A. of which he is a director. His subject was "Ideals of American Manhood." It was a good thing for young men, he said, to keep plugging. Instead of spending your evenings in pool and cards it was better for young men to try and improve their learning and thus gain a knowledge that would be of inestimable value to them later in life. As an illustration what might be accomplished by this constant plugging, he cited the case of "Honest" John Quinn, who had recently been appointed as sheriff of Suffolk county.

Sheriff Quinn was a classmate of City Clerk McGilvray and what he said of his rise in position was obtained from personal acquaintance with him. He also spoke of J. A. Sedgwick, treasurer of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., who was also a classmate of the speaker at the Y. M. C. A. law school. Another illustration of what push and perseverance will accomplish was found in Hugh Bancroft, who although a young man held the important position as chairman of the Port of Boston board at a salary of $15,000. All of these men had risen to prominence by not wasting their spare moments but by plugging.

to Town River bay; thence southerly by a line following the center line of Town River bay to the Weymouth Fore river; thence easterly following the center line of Weymouth Fore river to the West Gut, so called; thence northerly by the center line of said West Gut between Nut island and Peddock's island to Quincy bay; thence by the center line of Quincy bay until it intersects with the first mentioned line produced north 20 degrees west with Quincy bay; thence by the first mentioned line south twenty degrees east to the point of beginning, is hereby incorporated as a separate town by the name of Seagirt, and the said town of Seagirt is hereby vested with all the powers, privileges, rights and immunities, and shall be subject to all the duties and obligations conferred or imposed on towns by the constitution and laws of the commonwealth.

SECTION 2. The inhabitants of and the estates within the town of Seagirt, and the owners of such estates shall be holden to pay all the arrears of taxes which have been legally assessed upon them by the city of Quincy, and all the taxes heretofore assessed and not collected, shall be collected and paid to the treasurer of the city of Quincy. and all moneys now in the treasury of the city of Quincy or that may hereafter be received from taxes now assessed shall be applied to the purposes for which they were raised and assessed in the same maner as if this act had not been passed; and until the next state valuation, the town of Seagirt shall annually in the month of November pay to the city of Quincy its proportion of such state and county taxes as may be assessed upon said city of Quincy, said proportion to be ascertained and determined by the last valuation of said city of Quincy, and the assessors of the city of Quincy shall make return of said valuation and the proportions thereof in the town of Seagirt and the city of Quincy respectively to the secretary of the commonwealth and the county commissioners of the county of Norfolk.

SECTION 3. The town of Seagirt and the city of Quincy shall be respectively liable for the support of all persons who now do and shall hereafter stand in need of relief as paupers whose settlement was gained whether by original acquisition or by derivation within their respective limits; and the town of Seagirt shall pay annually to the city of Quincy such proportion of all costs for the support or relief of those persons who now do or shall hereafter stand in need of relief or support as paupers whose settlement, by original acquisition or by derivation, was gained by reason of military service as part of the quota of the city of Quincy, or who cannot be located on the site whence their settlement was derived or whereon it was acquired as the valuation of the town of Seagirt shall bear to the city of Quincy according to the last state valuation made prior to the giving of such relief or support.

SECTION 4. All suits and proceedings at law or in equity where the cause of action in favor of or against the city of Quincy arose before the passage of this act, shall be instituted and prosecuted or defended by the city of Quincy with the same effect as if this act had not been passed, and the amount recovered in any such suit or proceeding by or against the city of Quincy shall be received or paid as the case may be by the city of Quincy and including costs, expenses and counsel fees, shall be divided between the town of Seagirt and the city of Quincy in proportion to the last valuation made prior to the passage of this act.

SECTION 5. Said town of Seagirt and said city of Quincy shall each retain and hold all the city property, real or personal, now in or belonging to their respective limits, and the town of Seagirt shall assume and pay its just and equitable proportion according to its present assessed valuation of any debt due or owed from the city of Quincy at the time of the passage of this act, including its proportion of any obligation on the part of the city of Quincy for the expenses of the metropolitan park and the metropolitan sewers until a new apportionment is made concerning the same, and shall be entitled to receive its just and equitable proportion according to said assessed valuation and a valuation hereafter to be made of all corporate property then owned by the city of Quincy including in said calculations all the property mentioned in this section. If the property retained and held by the town of Seagirt, as aforesaid, shall exceed its just and equitable proportion of said corporate property, it shall refund to the city of Quincy such sum as shall make such proportion just and equitable. In case the valuation of proportions aforesaid cannot be agreed upon by the city of Quincy with the town of Seagirt, the same may be determined by three commissioners, neither of whom shall be residents of the city of Quincy or the town of Seagirt, to be appointed by the superior court for the county of Norfolk upon the petition of either the town of Seagirt or the city of Quincy, and said petition may be filed and appointments made in vacation.

SECTION 6. Any justice of the peace residing in the county of Norfolk may issue his warrant directed to any inhabitant of said town of Seagirt requiring him to notify and warn the inhabitants thereof qualified to vote in town affairs to meet at the time and place therein appointed for the purpose of choosing all such town officers as towns are by law authorized and required to choose at their annual meetings; and said warrant shall be served by posting copies thereof attested by the person to whom the same is directed, in three or more public places in the town of Seagirt seven days at least before the time of the meeting, and said justice, or in his absence the inhabitant required to notify the meeting, shall preside until the choice of a moderator of said meeting. The registrars of voters of the city of Quincy shall before said meeting prepare a list of voters in the town of Seagirt qualified to vote at the meeting, and shall deliver the same to the person presiding at the meeting before the choice of a moderator thereof.

SECTION 7. The town of Seagirt, until it is otherwise provided by law, shall continue to be a part of the judicial district of the district court of eastern Norfolk, of the tenth congressional district, of the second councillor district, of the first Norfolk senatorial district, and of the fifth representative district of Norfolk county, and the inhabitants of said town shall vote for member of congress, councillor, senator and representative in said districts, respectively, in the town of Seagirt. The selectmen and clerk of the town of Seagirt in each of said cases shall make returns as if said town has existed at the time of the formation of said district.

SECTION 8. The town of Seagirt shall receive from the city of Quincy a proportional part of whatever amount may hereafter be paid by the commonwealth or by the United States to reimburse the city of Quincy for bounties to soldiers or for state aid heretofore paid to soldiers' families after deducting all reasonable expenses.

SECTION 9. All rights heretofore secured to existing corporations upon the territory hereby incorporated shall continue as though this act had not been passed.

SECTION 10. The town of Seagirt shall bear the expense of making the necessary surveys and establishing the lines between it and the city of Quincy.

SECTION 11. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

—Rev. Carl G. Horst of Quincy thinks that capital punishment is "legalized murder and a relic of barbarism," and yet we read in the ninth chapter of Genesis "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." Aside from the Scripture, however, the sentence pronounced on Richeson is in accordance with the statute law. That must be changed before judges can take a different course.—Waltham Free Press.

Q.—When will the world come to an end? (T. W. L.)

Answer.—According to the Scriptures, the term "world" signifies age or dispensation. Three great "worlds" are outlined in the Divine plan of the Ages, as revealed in the Bible. (See 2 Peter iii, 5-13.) The first "world" or dispensaion passed away at the time of the Flood. The second "world," or "present evil world," is likewise to pass away, in a fiery time of trouble—not a literal "fire," but a destructive season of lawlessness that will destroy the "elements"—labor, capitalistic, etc., etc., that go to make up the present social order. "The world to come wherein dwelleth righteousness" will never come to an end, but it is to continue throughout eternity. "The world that now is" (Titue ii, 12), is already being violently shaken, and is beginning to crumble away financially, politically, socially, and ecclesiastically. The evidences about us, in the fulfilment of the Scripture prophecies, are clear and strong that within the next decade, the new and better order ("the world to come") will be established in the earth.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The Girl's Friendly society of St. Chrysostom's church is to give an assembly dance tomorrow evening in Brasee hall, Wollaston.

* * *

Owing to the storm on Monday, the meeting of the Junior Friday club to have been held with Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield of Arlington street, Wollaston, was postponed to next Monday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. Frank L. Young of Boston is to speak on "Conservation of Humanity" at the meeting of Quincy Alliance in First church chapel on Monday afternoon.

* * *

Next week Wednesday the Katharyn Crane Memorial club is to meet with Alice B. Miller of Russell park .

* * *

Owing to illness among the members of the Quincy Women's club, the Dickens afternoon by home talent has been given up. In its place will be a lecture on Charles Dickens by Mrs. Lillian Fuller Jackson. Mrs. Jackson is a graduate of the Leland Powers school and excels in reading interpretations of human nature. This makes her a peculiarly sympathetic reader of Dickens, whose characters have been real to her from the time she was a child. Her lecture, which discusses the author and gives illustrative readings from his works, should be of particular interest at this centennial time. Club members are looking forward to the annual dramatics to be given at Music hall, Feb. 13th.

* * *

Next week Friday, Mrs. Wilson Marsh of Irving place will be the hostess for the club and Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. Emery L. Crane, the committee for the afternoon.

* * *

Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett of the School of Social Workers of Boston was the speaker Monday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Framingham Nursing Relief and Anti-Tuberculosis association.

* * *

Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus, first president of the Quincy Women's club, goes over to New York this week to give a series of talks on Italian art at Newark, Montclair and Orange, New Jersey. She will be away most of the mid-winter as she goes to Washington later.

* * *

Members of the Quincy Young Women's club are preparing for a gentlemen's night to be held at the club house, Jan. 27.

* * *

We are glad to welcome the stalwart and genial president of the Cranch School Parents' and Teachers' association into the folds of the Women's clubs. It's reversing the suffragette idea but it is all right. Mr. Pfaffmann and the doings of the School association have appeared all the season in the Women's club column of the Boston Saturday evening Transcript which is such good authority that probably Mr. Pfaffmann will apply for admission to the Federation of Women's clubs.

ANNUUAL D. R. CONVENTION.

The Daughters of the Revolution, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, will be the hostess this year at the annual convention of the general society, to be held in Boston during the week of May 13. Elections are biennial, and this year comes the election of all of the national officers. During the past two years Massachusetts has had seven officers on the general board, Mrs. Adeline Frances Fitz holding the highest office, president-general, for four consecutive years. The registrar-general, Miss Mary A. Todd of Lynn, is also a Massachusetts woman.

These annual conventions are held in states in various parts of the country, the respective state D. R. societies acting as hostess. The headquarters of the convention will be at the Vendome, where ample accommodations have been secured, and many guests have already engaged rooms there for the week. The meeting will open Monday, May 13, when the delegates will establish their credentials. Monday evening the Massachusetts society will give a brilliant reception at the Vendome, the business sessions opening Tuesday morning, May 14.

Tuesday evening, at the Algonquin Club, comes the annual banquet. Various excursions, teas, receptions, and social affairs are being planned for the visiting daughters. Wednesday evening, May 15, the Dolly Madison chapter will give a reception and tea to the out-going and in-coming officers and delegates. Thursday, May 16, Mrs. A. F. Fitz will give a reception to some of the officers and delegates at her home, Lakeside, Wakefield, followed by an auto trip to Newburyport.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

A large number of the members of the Young Women's club gathered at the club, Saturday evening to hear Mrs. A. J. George, whose subject was "Why I am an Anti-suffragist?" A short business meeting was held, Miss Marie Bass, presiding.

Mrs. George gave a very interesting account of the work being done by women without the vote, and showed by illustration how much easier it was to do this work without suffrage.

At the close a rising vote of thanks was given, after which dancing was enjoyed. Several members of the Women's club were present including the president, Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard.

The dramatic club will meet Saturday evening at seven-thirty.

The next regular meeting of the club will be gentleman's night. A very interesting program is being arranged by the chairman of the social committee.

DORCAS SOCIETY.

Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, an honorary member of the Dorcas society, being connected with the Universalist church entertained its members Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. B. G. Barnes, Faxon avenue. The occasion was the annual meeting and it was very interesting. Despite the extreme cold, a large number were present. Reports were read from the various committees.

Mrs. Addison and Mrs. Spooner acting in the capacity of visiting the sick and distributing flowers, reported a number of cases where they had carried flowers to sick rooms and sent flowers to the hospitals. After the reports had been approved and accepted an election of officers was held, which resulted as follows: President, Mrs. G. F. Spooner; vice president, Miss Annie Hobart; secretary, Miss Maud Cudworth; treasurer, Miss Florence Holton; committees, Mrs. Thomas A. Addison, Miss Mary Blake and Mrs. E. H. Wright.

Rev. Fannie Austin, pastor of the church made a few remarks, in which she complimented the members for their efficiency and punctuality. She said she always found them faithful and could rely upon them as they gave her much valuable assistance. Miss Austin spoke of the religious services to be held during Lent, and that the social functions at that time would be in accordance with that season.

Mrs. Addison spoke briefly upon the work and mission of the Dorcas society after which refreshments were served, consisting of cocoa, dainty ices and delicious cake. Miss Maud Cudworth presided at the cocoa urn, and Miss Bertha Newcomb assisted in serving. Miss Lillian Cudworth arrived home from Concord, N. H. in time to participate in the social hour, which was informal.

The china upon which the refreshments were served was very rare, being a hundred years old and handed down from the Saville family, and very precious to lovers of the antique. A rare old platter which called forth much admiration came from England, a relic from Mr. Barnes' family.

The meeting was very much enjoyed and at the close, the entire company gave a rising vote of thanks to Mrs. Addison for her generous hospitality.

Y. M. C. A. AUXILIARY .

Those who braved the storm last Friday afternoon and were present at the regular meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary were well repaid by a program of unusual merit.

In the devotional service, Mrs. E. S. Tenney, gave a talk to the mothers, full of deep feeling, bringing out the thought that the Auxiliary supplies the mother element in the Y. M. C. A.

The address of George E. Day, general secretary of the Somerville Y. M. C. A. on "Laureates of Faith" was a literary treat. He quoted at length from many authors gems of length from many authors, gems of religious sentiment and showed a fine appreciation of their meaning.

MOTHER'S PENSION BILL.

The idea of this bill is to have fewer children in institutions and more in homes. The great mortality in institutions, and the fact that mothers will do, unpaid, what the State must pay some else to do, has led philanthropists and politicians to agree that the best and cheapest way to board the dependent child out, is if possible, with its own mother.

A small pension paid to the mother during the years when her children are too young to work, under existing laws, may insure the continuance of the home, and give the mother a fair chance to take care of her children In the case of widows with young children the usual choice has been between leaving them all day while the mother struggled to earn a livelihood and the children were neglected and drifted into sickness and crime or giving them up to the care of some institution, which frequently boarded them out, at a cost per child of ten dollars a month, which is what it is estimated each dependent child costs the State at present.

This separation has a double evil. Only a few years will pass and the mother might look to the children for strength to re-enforce her own, but with the family broken up too often the institution takes her, too, at last. Separating families for poverty alone has its economic shortcomings, as well as those of nature. Illinois has followed the example of Missouri, where the pension has been tried of ten dollars a month for the first child and five dollars a month for each succeeding child, until the first child is 14 years old, when its pension goes to the next child. The work was started here under the auspices of the Mass. Congress of Mothers, and aided by the Fathers' and Mothers' Club of Boston, and the Legislative Committee of the Quincy Women's Club.

Directors of the Children's Aid Society at their annual meeting in Boston expressed their desire for further investigation before approving the proposed pensions for mothers. They expressed deep interest in the fundamental causes of poverty and their control, but they believe all effort should be toward its ultimate removal, rather than mere palliative measures. The pressing needs of certain families cannot be met solely by the payment of money. The causes in practically all cases on this basis would still go untouched. They favor a careful study of the problem before final action.

J. Prentice Murphy, the secretary, reported that between Oct. 1, 1911 and Jan. 1, 1912, 43 children were placed in family homes, making a total of 286 cared for by the society during that period, an increase of almost 7 per cent over the number cared for during the corresponding period of the last fiscal year, which was 269. The demands made by these additional children is still further taxing the limited resources of this society. Mr. Murphy said that the mothers of most of these children, although widows, asked assistance for reasons that no pension law would correct or help.

JUST BOYS.

"Get out of my sight" is too often the injunction that the boy gets and he gets out into any kind of company that he may happen to fall into. He is looked upon as a necessary evil. He's here and he's got to be endured. What a mistake. The boy is the most valuable, most precious asset in the home, with possibilities of development impossible to forecast. His parents will spend infinite pains and expense upon the improvement of a piece of land, a colt, dog, lot of hens, or in furnishing the home of in countless other directions, while the boy is left to chance.

It has been said that if you scratch a boy you will find a savage. This does not of necessity mean that you will find cruelty, but you will find the primitive, elementary man, ripe for development in any direction. With such plastic, receptive material then about anything may be moulded. Shall it be done by mere chance, a misshapen thing? Does a sculptor expect to gain fame and fortune by such methods or the lack of them? Does he not rather spend years of study in order that he may the better perfect his man of bronze or stone. Is the man of flesh, or heart, soul, brain, spirit of less value? There is no reasonable limit to the possibilities awaiting an intelligent cultivation of the boy. He's a miniature steam engine and his talented but expansive energy must be directed. The force must have an outlet. Give him something to do. Study and interest him and the effort will be richly repaid.

Boys' clubs, scout work and scores of other agencies are doing very much for the boy, but the one thing above all others is personal interest by parents, brothers and sisters, teachers and the public generally. Don't take him as a nuisance, although he may be. Give him a chance. Kill him (his errors) by kindness, but wise kindness, not indulgence. He needs a guidance rein like any other colt. He needs exercise, wisely directed.—Framingham News.

SMALL PROFIT ON MEAT

Witness Says It Is One-Eighth Cent a Pound on Fresh Product

Chicago, Jan. 17.—In an effort to refute the charges made by the government, the defense in the packers' trial submitted figures from the books of Morris & Co. showing that in 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910, 1,156,622 cattle were killed at the company's Chicago plant, on which the total net profits realized by the sale of fresh meat and by-products was $1,008,-215.76, or 87 cents a head.

The net profit on fresh meat in this period was one-eighth of a cent a pound, according to the books of the company.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Only Four Yards of Cloth Needed For a Gown.

Spring Styles Are Slim. Evolution of Skirt Coming.

The manufacturers in Europe, as well as a large number in this country, are making no concealment of the fact that they are worried about the outlook for the output of cloth for the year 1912. The advance guard of the commissioners who come to America with samples of the new fabrics have already arrived, and they say that the most momentous feature of the new season is the scarcity of material to be used

From four to five yards per gown is the amount If you digest that well you can easily see what a blow this will be everywhere to the manufacturers of cloth. The incoming of this fashion in the Autumn put so many girls out of work in France and England and stopped so many mills that even so honorable a body as the French Chamber of Commerce took up the subject.

Those who were used to such problems thought that the fashion for slim garments would soon pass; that the narrow skirt and the attenuated bodice, the scanty coat and the small cloth hat would go quickly by as other revolutionary fashions had done. But they didn't. And they are not going to go out of fashion soon. Review their history for yourself and see how astounding has been the hold of the so-called hobble skirt and the tiny bodice.

The fashion began in the sheath skirt, which was changed into the peasant skirt, which had a broad band at the ankles to hold in the fullness. Next came the hobble skirt, and then the divided skirt, and each of these was accepted in turn. We don't talk much about the divided skirt these days. Do you know why? Because it is an accepted fact, modified, of course, and no longer a theory or an experiment. All but the most sedate gowns have a slash somewhere at the hem; sometimes it is hidden, again it reveals the ankle.

The hobble skirt brought so much ridicule upon itself that the world dismissed it in conversation as a silly and unworthy fashion; it was hard to get any one to approve of it openly except the artists, who made a great clamor for it in London and Paris. Dressmakers over here, and many in Paris, shrugged their shoulders and said they only made it on the demand of their patrons, and advised the purchase of extra cloth.

Tailors who were not ultra fashionable took on a righteous air and continued to put in a flare at the hem. It was for this reason that three-fourths of the women were not dressed in a style that was not only fashionable, but was to become settled.

This narrow, so-called hobble skirt has lasted now for eighteen months, and none of the new models show any change. It is for this reason that the statement of these commissioners with the new fabrics has so much interest. These men are the skirmishers far in front of the line, as may be seen from the fact that they were selling Spring and Summer fabrics in New York and Philadelphia the first week in December.

They could not foretell what the public would decide about fashions, but they knew to a certainty what the factories were going to put out, and how many yards they expected to handle. Their work must be done six weeks ahead of the fashions as the public sees them, and, as they are not in the business for pleasure, but for money, they are not going to take any risk in overproduction.

It is to be believed that they have many councils with the great dressmakers in Paris as to the probable amount of each fabric that will be needed, and when the dressmakers have decided on four yards to a gown, it is to be supposed that the manufacturers figure on this statement in their production.

Unless everybody who ought to know is very much mistaken, we will start out on narrow skirts in 1912, and not consider a change until May, if then. This is not a prophecy for there is no counting on the public, but it is guessing made from a good deal of certified information.

Here is where the dressmakers, however, will appeal to the public to buy more clothes, they will accept the slim skirt as a foundation, but they will trim it so that it will make the plain skirt out of fashion. This has already begun. It is hard to find a perfectly plain coat suit. Even the women who go in for emphasized mannish effects accept some plaiting and ruchings, some fringe and embroidery on their afternoon gowns, and they allow the tailor to put loose folds and stitched tunics on their street skirts.

If you watch the smart skirts of today you will see how much they have changed in the last few months, although there has been little talk about it. Those who have clung to the entirely plain affair look a trifle out of date, although they look trig. The skirt has changed more than the coat for we accepted ornamented jackets last Spring and wore them all Summer. And yet there is something new in the coat, too; it is elusive, undefined, but it is there It sounds like going back on one's word to say that it is less ornamented than before, but this is the case

That well-known model, deservedly popular, which was a little below the hip length, had an ornate shoulder collar and a fancy method of fastening across the front, has given way to a more severe style which in Paris they are calling Robespierre. It is nothing more or less than a return to the Napoleonic coat, but the other name is less stale.

It consists of a good many revers, which cover the shoulders, a side breasted fastening at and below the waist line and a slim, well-cut lower part, with two large buttons below the waist line at the back. It is cut away in front, while the real Robespierre was not, and it is often made with two peplums instead of one; but the resemblance is there, and a good strong one at that.

This coat is devoid of all ornament, with the exception of the two buttons at the back. It is minus braid, minus satin cording, minus ornamental shoulder cape. And, isn't it strange, that it should be invented to wear with trimmed skirts, while the short, ornate jacket was worn with plain skirts? You never can tell the reason why in fashion. It always starts off well with some clearly defined aim in view, or some retrospect of a period that was graceful, but it gets stranded midway, and we never fail to get something of a hodgepodge.

The dressmakers acknowledge this and say it is necessary because of the atmosphere of the day into which gowns must fit; that they must be reminiscent rather than actual copies of the creators of clothes would be poor beings indeed. To each season its own ideas, is their motto, although their inspection for all ideas usually comes from the picture galleries and the museum.

By the way, another fact that the Commissioners brought over from the inside in Paris is the fact that the dressmakers will push the use of crisp, changeable taffeta as the foremost fabric for January and February, which means that they will make their leading gowns of it for the American buyers on Feb. 15. There is nothing new about these, for France had them last Summer, and we have had them all Autumn, but it must be confessed that they were not popular. Women talked about these little taffeta gowns a good deal, but they didn't wear them.

The trouble was that they were not becoming to the majority in the way they have been made. No one attempted any other style in them except the Victorian one, with its many plaitings and ruchings, its velvet bands, short sleeves, broad fichu, and folded girdle with a rose in front.

It takes a picturesque person to wear this, although grandmothers insisted upon adopting it in that era when it was in first fashion. Maybe we know better than they did, or maybe we do not like the style; whatever it is the taffeta gown in that phase did not take. Now we are promised something else. Taffeta is to be used for all kinds of gowns instead of this one.

The new kind is changeable in color. One of the best samples brought over for the dressmakers to choose was a decided blue over half the width, and a decided green over the other half. That will take very sure handling on the part of the dressmaker, but the fabric is lovely in the piece.

And with the taffetas come miles of fringe and velvet ribbon. We shall not escape from either. It goes to show, this bringing back again of all these fabrics, that the tentative offering of them by the Paris dressmakers in September meant just what we who were there thought it meant.—a trying out of a fashion that was to be.—Anne Rittenhouse in N. Y. Times.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN COOKING SPINACH.

WHEN buying spinach don't insist that the leaves be fresh and green. If you do you are likely to get some that is wilted and has been put into water to freshen it up.

Spinach can be bought in the markets at nearly all seasons, and it is very wholesome. The salts of potash which it contains are especially valuable, and when cooking the greens the water should be saved, as the salts are partly in solution in the liquid.

Spinach should be cooked in its own juices, heating it for about fifteen minutes. Old spinach is cooked in a little water and drained.

Boiled and Creamed.

Boiled Spinach.—Wash and prepare half a peck of spinach. Place in a kettle with a cupful of water, cover and cook over a moderate fire. The spinach should steam for twenty minutes. Drain, chop fine, season with salt and pepper and butter and serve with slices of hard boiled egg.

Creamed Spinach.—Drain some boiled spinach and chop. Pass it through a colander. To every pint of the spinach add a tablespoonful of butter. Salt and pepper to taste. Put on the stove in a saucepan and stir until the spinach is heated. Take a third of a cup of cream and add to it the beaten yolk of an egg. Stir this into the spinach and let it remain on the stove a minute. Then serve.

With Fish.

Spinach and Fish.—Take a half cup of grated breadcrumbs and an ounce of butter. Heat these together. Boil and chop a half peck of spinach leaves. Add the breadcrumbs and butter and a half dozen sardines chopped fine or an equal quantity of canned salmon. Mix if too dry with a little of the broth in which the spinach has been boiled. Salt and pepper and shape into ovals or oblongs on cut out pieces of toast. Garnish with sliced boiled eggs and parsley or leaves of the fresh spinach.

Spinach Croquettes. — These croquettes are nice for luncheon. They are made with cold boiled spinach and thus afford a convenient way of using left over portions of the vegetable. The spinach must be chopped fine. Take an ounce of butter, the grated rind of a lemon, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, a little sugar, a little flour or cracker crumbs to bind, a half cup of milk into which has been stirred the yolk of an egg and salt and pepper to taste. Make into croquettes, which should be dipped in yolk of egg and then in cracker crumbs. Fry and serve hot with sprigs of parsley.

SOCIAL SOCIETY ENTERTAINED

At the meeting of the Wollaston Social society Tuesday evening, a pleasing program by Walter C. Giles an entertainer from Boston, was enjoyed. Mr. Giles contributed a score of readings running in the scale from the sublime to the ridiculous keeping his audience in roars of laughter.

Among the numbers in the first part were "The morning mail," "The horserace," "Absentmindedness" concluding with the cute child poem "When papa holds my hand."

In part second Mr. Giles appeared as an old maid of the Aunt Betty type. His selections included a dissertation on "Boys" a monologue entitled "Gossip" and a humorous piece "An uncomfortable hostess."

Between the two parts, Irving L. Shaw, the club's ever versatile president pleased those present with a number of selections on the piano ranging from grand opera to ragtime. Refreshments were served.

At the business meeting plans for the coming vaudeville were discussed and Jesse I. Litchfield reported for the advertising program.

BRIEFS

Percy Holman of South street has gone to Plymouth for a week.

Miss Florence Mason of Saco, Me., is the guest of Mrs. Percy Holman of South street.

The slippery walking Tuesday caused quite a few people to sit down on the sidewalk in anything but a graceful position.

An important meeting of the Board of Trade will be held tonight at which action will be taken on the report of the special committee who have been considering the proposition to raise the annual dues to $10.

Several sleigh parties passed through City Square Tuesday evening and although the air was cold the young people with their warm wraps did not seem to mind the cold. Several of the parties stopped in City Square and had lunch at the restaurants.

Members of the Wollaston Kindergarten association have arranged a course of four demonstration lectures by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, editor of the Boston Cooking School magazine, and a marketing lecture by Wilmot A. Seiders, at Brasee hall on Monday afternoons, the first one on Jan. 29 to be on marketing.

YUAN ESCAPES ASSASSINATION

Bomb Is Thrown at Premier's Carriage In Pekin

TWO MEN INSTANTLY KILLED

Aim of Man Who Threw Missile Was Poor and It Misses Intended Victim by Twenty Feet—Outrage In Presence of Large Escort of Cavalry on Route Lined by Soldiers and Police —Conspirators Arrested

Pekin, Jan. 17.—A bomb thrown at Premier Yuan Shi Kai's carriage while he was on his way from the imperial court instantly killed a soldier and a policeman and injured seventeen others, comprising both civilians and soldiers. Eight or ten of these who were struck by the splinters from the metal case of the bomb are expected to die of their injuries.

Several horses belonging to the military escort, besides those attached to Yuan's carriage, were killed. The streets were crowded with pedestrians at the time of the attempted assassination, but the bystanders in general did not evince any hostility to the premier.

The assailants selected a moment when the premier, who has been one of the pillars of the Manchu dynasty, was on his way from the imperial court, where he had had a long audience with the princes of the imperial clan.

The men who attempted to take Yuan's life hoped to get away from the scene of their crime by mixing with the crowds in the streets, which were thronged at the time. They were, however, pursued and captured and were taken by a detachment of Manchu soldiers into a house in the vicinity.

The public executioner was at once called and with his assistants is now standing sentinel in front of the house where the assassins are confined.

The premier's assailants were three well-dressed Chinamen, who are said to be prominent revolutionaries. They were standing on the sidewalk when the premier's carriage approached. When the vehicle was about thirty yards from the spot where they were standing one of them threw a large bomb in its direction, but his aim was so poor that the missile exploded twenty feet from the carriage.

The vehicle rocked from the shock of the explosion, but Yuan escaped unscathed. He appeared, in fact, not to be greatly perturbed.

The havoc caused by the explosion was immense. Immediately around the carriage a policeman, a soldier and two horses were struck dead. The force of the explosion when the bomb hit the earth was so great that many houses hundreds of yards away were shaken from top to bottom.

The premier, who was driving in a carriage with open windows, was preceded and followed by an escort of cavalry. The route was lined by soldiers and police stationed five yards apart. The men faced alternately inwards and outwards and were carrying loaded rifles with fixed bayonets. When Yuan's carriage arrived opposite the residence of Dr. Morrison, correspondent of the London Times, at the corner of which the assailants had been observed standing, a bomb was hurled.

Without waiting to see the effect of their deed the perpetrators rushed toward a neighboring tea house. Soldiers and police, however, were close on their heels and they were arrested before they were able to escape by a rear door. The other men who are suspected of being accomplices in the attempted assassination have been arrested.

LODGE IMMIGRATION BILL

Will Be Reported to Senate With Illiteracy Test Eliminated

Washington, Jan. 17.—The senate immigration committee, of which Senator Lodge is chairman, voted to report the Lodge immigration bill, but without the clause imposing the illiteracy test on immigrants.

There has been great agitation pro and con over this clause and especially much opposition from Massachusetts. It was decided not to imperil the bill with this clause, but to embody the clause in a separate bill to be submitted to congress, there to stand or fall on its own merits.

LAND COURT.

To Irene M. Forbes and Angus A. Stuart of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Mary J. Belcher of Braintree, in said County of Norfolk; Fred W. Wood, Trustee, Henry Thornton, Trustee, Clifford H. Tabor, Robert E. Belcher and I. Warren Flagg, Trustee, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk, and said Commonwealth; Ella E. Trifet, administratrix, residence unknown, and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Annie E. Youngquist of said Quincy, to register and confirm her title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Quincy, bounded Easterly by Beach Street fifty feet; Southwesterly by lots 747 to 751 inclusive, on plan hereinafter referred to, two hundred and sixty-one feet; Northwesterly by centre of brook as shown on a plan filed with said petition fifty-four and 61-100 feet; and Northerly by lot 745 on plan first above referred to two hundred and thirty-nine and 02-100 feet containing 12,500.3 square feet of land, and being lot No. 746 as shown on plan drawn by Charles D. Elliot and recorded with Norfolk Deeds Plan Book 141 plan 640, to which reference is hereby made.

Petitioner claims as appurtenant to the above described land riparian rights in said brook.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition, and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston, in the County of Suffolk, on the fifth day of February A. D., 1912, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, CHARLES THORNTON DAVIS, Esquire Judge of said Court this ninth day of January in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

Perfectly Safe To Wash Fine Dress Goods.

Saleswoman to Customer—"Yes ma'am, this batiste is much the prettier and finer of the two. But if I were you, I would take the percale—it's heavier and will stand the boiling and rubbing of the 'wash' better."

Anty Drudge—"Look here, young lady, where have you been these past 15 years? Don't you know that with Fels-Naptha, there is no such thing as 'boiling and rubbing of the wash'—to wear fine fabrics to shreds? You take that batiste. It'll wear longer washed with Fels-Naptha the Fels-Naptha way than the heavy percale will washed the old-fashioned way."

You've heard a woman say:

"This waist has worn terribly. I've only washed it a couple of times and it's falling to pieces."

Clothes cost too much nowadays to be worn out in the wash,—to be boiled and scalded until the life is gone out of the fabric—and then rubbed to shreds on the washboard.

You must use the soap that preserves the fabrics—Fels-Naptha.

Use it the Fels-Naptha way—in cool or lukewarm water, with no hard rubbing. You'll get through the day's wash in one-half the time and with much less effort.

And your clothes will look whiter and fresher than you ever saw them before. Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

THIRTY THOUSAND ARE MADE HOMELESS

More Than Five Thousand Buildings Burned at Osaka

Osaka, Japan, Jan. 17.—A series of fires swept unchecked across the southern half of this city, fanned by a strong wind. According to official figures, 5268 buildings were destroyed and 30,000 persons rendered homeless.

Osaka, the "Venice of the East," has a population of about 1,000,000, and is rated one of the most important manufacturing and commercial cities of Japan. It is visited by travelers for its Buddhist temple and its picturesque canals, spanned by 1300 stone and bamboo bridges.

It has been the scene of frequent conflagrations, mainly because the buildings are mostly flimsy bamboo or wooden structures, built close to each other and very inflammable. An official report of the damage in the city's "great fire" of Aug. 1, 1909, gave the number of buildings destroyed as 11,368. The loss of life was limited to one, but the property loss ran into the millions.

PROLOGUE.

This romance of Freckles and the Angel of the Limberlost is one of the most novel, entertaining, wholesome and fascinating stories that have come from the pen of an American author in many years. The characters in this sylvan tale are:

Freckles, a plucky waif who guards the Limberlost timber leases and dreams of angels.

The Swamp Angel, in whom Freckles' sweetest dream materializes.

McLean, a member of a lumber company, who befriends Freckles.

Mrs. Duncan, who gives mother love and a home to Freckles.

Duncan, head teamster of McLean's timber gang.

CHAPTER I.

THE LIMBERLOST GUARD.

FRECKLES came down the corduroy that crosses the lower end of the Limberlost. At a glance he might have been mistaken for a tramp, but he was intensely eager to belong somewhere and to be attached to almost any sort of enterprise that would furnish him food and clothing.

Long before he came in sight of the camp of the Grand Rapids Lumber company he could hear the cheery voices of the men and the neighing of the horses, and could scent the tempting odors of cooking food. A feeling of homeless friendlessness swept over him. He turned into the newly made road and followed it to the camp.

The men were jovially calling back and forth as they unharnessed tired horses that fell into attitudes of rest and crunched, in deep content, the grain given them. As he wiped the flanks of his big bays with handfuls of pawpaw leaves, Duncan, the brawny Scotch head teamster, softly whistled, "Oh wha will be my dearie, Oh!" and a cricket under the leaves at his feet accompanied him. Wreathing tongues of flame wrapped about the black kettles, and, when the cook lifted the lids gusts of savory odors escaped.

Freckles approached him.

"I want to speak to the boss," he said.

The cook glanced him over and answered carelessly, "He can't use you."

The color flooded Freckles' face, but he said simply, "If you will be having the goodness to point him out we will give him a chance to do his own talking."

With a shrug of astonishment, the cook led the way to a broad, square shouldered man. "Mr. McLean, here's another man wanting to be taken on the gang, I suppose," he said.

"All right," came the cheery answer. "I never needed a good man more than I do just now."

"No use of your bothering with this fellow," volunteered the cook. "He has but one hand."

The flush on Freckles' face burned deeper. His lips thinned to a mere line. He lifted his shoulders, took a step forward, and thrust out his right arm, from which the sleeve dangled empty at the wrist.

"That will do, Sears," came the voice of the boss sharply. "I will interview my man when I have finished this report."

Freckles stood one instant as he had braced himself to meet the eyes of the manager, then his arm dropped and a wave of whiteness swept over him. The boss had not even turned his head to see the deformity pointed out to him. He had used the possessive. When he said "my man" the hungry heart of Freckles went reaching out after him. The boy drew a quivering breath. Then he whipped off his old hat and beat the dust from it carefully. With his left hand he caught the right sleeve, wiped his sweaty face, and tried to straighten his hair with his fingers. He broke a spray of ironwort beside him and used the purple blossoms to beat the dust from his shoulders and limbs.

McLean was a Scotchman. The men of his camps had never known him to be in a hurry or to lose his temper. Discipline was inflexible, but the boss always was kind. He shared camp life with his gangs. The only visible signs of his great wealth consisted of a big, shimmering diamond stone of ice and fire that glittered and burned on one of his fingers and the dainty, beautiful, thoroughbred mare he rode.

No man of McLean's gangs could honestly say that he had ever been overdriven or underpaid. They all knew that up in the great timber city several millions stood to his credit.

He was the only son of that McLean who had sent out the finest ships ever built in Scotland. That his son should carry on this business after his death had been the father's ambition. He sent the boy through Edinburgh university and Oxford and allowed him several years' travel.

Then he was ordered through southern Canada and Michigan to purchase a consignment of tall, straight timber for masts and down into Indiana for oak beams. The young man entered these mighty forests, parts of which still lay untouched since the dawn of the morning of time. The intense silence, like that of a great empty cathedral, fascinated him. He gradually learned that to the shy wood creatures that darted across his path or peeped inquiringly from leafy ambush he was brother. He found himself approaching, with a feeling of reverence, those majestic trees that had stood through ages of sun, wind and snow. Soon it became a difficult thing to fell them. When he had filled his order and returned home he was amazed to find that in the swamps and forests he had lost his heart, and it was calling, forever calling him.

When he inherited his father's property he promptly disposed of it and, with his mother, founded a home in a splendid residence in the outskirts of Grand Rapids. With three partners he organized a lumber company. His work was to purchase, fell and ship the timber to the mills. Marshall managed the milling process and passed the lumber on to the factory. From the lumber Barthol made beautiful and useful furniture, which Uptegrove scattered all over the world from a big wholesale house.

McLean faced a young man, still under twenty, tall, spare, heavily framed, thickly freckled and red haired, with a homely Irish face, but in the steady gray eyes, straightly meeting his searching ones of blue, there were unswerving candor and a look of longing not to be ignored.

"You are looking for work?" questioned McLean.

"Yis," answered Freckles.

"I am very sorry," said the boss, "but there is only one man I want at present—a good, big fellow with a stout heart and a strong body. I hoped that you would do, but I am afraid you are too young and hardly strong enough."

"And what was it you thought I might be doing?" asked Freckles.

The boss could scarcely repress a start. Somewhere back of accident and poverty had been an ancestor who used cultivated English, even with an accent. The boy spoke in a mellow Irish voice, sweet and pure. It was scarcely definite enough to be called brogue, yet there was a trick in the turning of the sentence, the wrong sound of a letter here and there, that was almost irresistible to McLean. He was of foreign birth, and, despite years of alienation, in times of strong feeling he fell into inherited sins of accent and construction.

"It's no child's job," answered McLean. "I am the field manager of a lumber company. We have just leased 2,000 acres of the Limberlost. Many of these trees are of great value. We can't leave our camp, six miles south, for almost a year yet, so we have blazed a trail and strung barbed wires securely about the extent of this lease. Before we return to our work I must put this Limberlost lease in the hands of a reliable, brave, strong man who will guard it every hour of the day and sleep with one eye open at night. I should require the entire length of the trail to be walked at least twice every day, to make sure that our lines were up and no one had been trespassing."

"But why wouldn't that be the finest job in the world for me?" pleaded Freckles. "I am never sick. I could walk the trail twice, three times every day, and I'd be watching sharp all the while."

"It's because you are little more than a boy, and this will be a trying job for a work hardened man," answered McLean. "You would be afraid. In stretching our lines we killed six rattlesnakes almost as long as your body and as thick as your arm. You would always be alone, and the Limberlost is alive with sounds and voices. I don't pretend to say what all of them come from, but from a few slinking forms I've seen and hair raising yells I've heard I'd rather not confront their owners myself, and I am neither weak nor fearful.

"Worst of all, any man who will enter the swamp to mark and steal timber is a desperate fellow. One of my employees at the south camp, John Carter, compelled me to discharge him for a number of serious reasons. He entered the swamp alone and marked a number of valuable trees that he was endeavoring to sell to our rival company when we secured the lease. He has sworn to have these trees if he has to die or to kill others to get them."

"But if he came to steal trees wouldn't he bring teams and men enough, that all any man could do would be to watch and be after you?" queried the boy.

"Yes," replied McLean.

"Then why couldn't I be watching just as closely and coming as fast as an older, stronger man?"

"Why, by George, you could!" exclaimed McLean. "I don't know that the size of a man would be half so important as his grit and faithfulness. What is your name?"

Freckles grew a shade whiter, but his eyes never faltered.

"Freckles," he said.

"Good enough for every day," laughed McLean, "but I can scarcely put Freckles on the company's books."

"I haven't any name," replied the boy.

"I don't understand," said McLean.

"I was thinking from the voice and the face of you that you wouldn't," said Freckles slowly.

"Does it seem to you that any one would take a newborn baby and row over it until it was bruised black, cut off its hand and leave it out in a bitter night on the steps of a charity home to the care of strangers? That's what somebody did to me.

"The home people took me in, and I was there the full legal age and several years over. They could always find homes for the rest of the children, but nobody would ever be wanting me on account of me arm."

"Were they kind to you?" asked McLean.

"I don't know," answered Freckles. The reply sounded so hopeless even to his own ears that he hastened to qualify it by adding: "You see, it's like this, sir. Kindnesses that people are paid to lay off in job lots and that belong equally to several hundred others ain't going to be soaking into any one fellow much."

"Go on," said McLean.

"There's nothing worth the taking of your time to tell," replied Freckles. "The home was in Chicago, and I was there all me life up to three months ago. When I was too old for the training they gave to the little children they sent me out to the nearest ward school as long as the law would let them, but I was never like any of the other children, and they all knew it. I'd to go and come like a prisoner and be working about the home early and late for me board and clothes. I always wanted to learn mighty bad, but I was glad when that was over.

"Then a new superintendent sent me down in the state to a man he said he knew that needed a boy. He wasn't for remembering to tell that man that I was a hand short, and he knocked me down. Between noon and that evening he and his son, as out my age, had me in pretty much the same shape in which I was found in the beginning, so I lay awake that night and ran away. I'd like to have squared me account with that boy before I left, but I didn't dare for fear of waking the old man, and I knew I couldn't handle the two of them, but I'm hoping to meet him alone some day before I die."

McLean liked the boy all the better for this confession.

"I didn't even have to steal clothes to get rid of starting in me home ones," Freckles went on, "for they had already taken all me clean, neat things for the boy and put me into his rags, and that went almost as sore as the beatings, for where I was we were always kept tidy and sweet smelling anyway. I hustled clear into this state before I learned that man couldn't have kept me if he'd wanted to. I commenced hunting work, but it is with everybody else just as it is with you, sir. Big, strong, whole men are the only ones for being wanted."

"I have been studying over this matter," answered McLean. "I am not so sure but that a man no older than you and like you in every way could do this work very well if he were not a coward."

"If you will give me a job where I can earn me food, clothes and a place to sleep," said Freckles, "if I can have a boss to work for like other men, and a place I feel I've a right to I will do what you tell me or die trying."

He said it so quietly and convincingly that McLean found himself answering: "I will enter you on my payrolls. We'll have supper, and then I will provide you with clean clothing, wading boots, wire mending apparatus and a revolver. The first thing in the morning I will take you over the trail myself. All I ask of you is to come to me at once at the south camp and tell me like a man if you find this job too hard for you. It is work that few men would perform faithfully. What name shall I put down?"

Freckles' eyes never left McLean's face, and the boss saw the swift spasm of pain that swept his lonely, sensitive face.

"I haven't any name," he said stubbornly, "no more than one somebody clapped on to me when they put me on the home books, with not the thought or care they'd named a house cat. What they called me is no more my name than it is yours. I don't know what mine is, and I never will. But I am going to be your man and do your work, and I'll be glad to answer to any name you choose to call me. Won't you please be giving me a name, Mr. McLean?"

The boss wheeled abruptly and began stacking his books. In a voice harsh with huskiness he spoke.

"I will tell you what we will do, my lad," he said. "My father was my ideal man, and I loved him better than any other I have ever known. He went out five years ago. If I give to you the name of my nearest kin and the man I loved best—will that do?"

"WON'T YOU PLEASE BE GIVING ME A NAME?"

Freckles' rigid attitude relaxed. His head dropped, and tears splashed down on the soiled calico shirt.

"All right," said McLean. "I will write it on the roll—James Ross McLean."

"Thank you mightily," said Freckles. "That makes me feel almost as if I belonged already."

Freckles' heart and soul were singing for joy.

TWO LIVES PERHAPS LOST

Damage by Fire in Boston Hotel Is Figured at $200,000

Boston, Jan. 17.—Two women employes of the Revere House are believed to have met death in the fire there yesterday. They are Misses Susan Dougherty and Annie McDevitt. Both were employed as chambermaids.

Police headquarters officials and Chief Mullen of the fire department declare that no one was lost in the blaze. Neither of the women, however, has been heard from.

The total assessed valuation of the Revere House property this year was $345,000, of which $301,900 was placed on the land and $43,100 on the building. The building is considered a total loss with all its contents. The loss has been figured at $200,000, though this is not official.

Two hundred persons were asleep in the house when fire was discovered underneath the old main diningroom on the street floor, known for the last few years as the Grotto.

COLT'S SLATE WINS

Rubber Magnate Secures Control of Industrial Trust Company

Providence, Jan. 17.—Samuel P. Colt, president of the United States Rubber company, won his fight for the control of the Industrial Trust company of this city when H. M. Brown, his candidate for president, was elected, with his complete slate for the board of directors. Colt was re-elected chairman of the board.

The fight for control of the institution, which is the largest bank in Rhode Island and one of the largest trust companies in New England, was long and hotly contested. Colt was formerly president of the company.

QUINCY HIGH AGAIN WINNER

Outclasses Oliver Ames High at North Easton Tuesday

22 TO 19

As was expected, Quincy High was successful in sending down to defeat the much heralded Oliver Ames High, in the basket ball game played at North Easton, Tuesday afternoon. It must be stated, however, that the home team made a strenuous endeavor to wrest a victory in the second half, and it was only after a gruelling struggle had issued that the local boys were pronounced victorious by a score of 22 to 19.

So completely did Captain Chapman's team outclass the North Easton boys, that when the first half ended the score stood 16 to 4 in favor of the Granite City lads. The North Easton players seemed considerably strengthened in the second half, and speed endurance and general basketball work which they began at once to exhibit had a tendency to dampen the ardor of the many rooters who accompanied the local team. But the local players managed to maintain control of the situation by making more points and thus keeping ahead of their opponents all the time.

Only one goal from foul was made throughout the contest. The work of the Quincy backs was greatly in evidence and was worthy of commendation at all times.

For the local team, Chapman, Finley and Trask played their usual star game. Finlay secured four goals three baskets were caged by Trask, while Chapman put the ball through the loop hole on two occasions. McDonald was tried out in one of the forward positions and showed himself aggressive at all times. He secured two baskets of the sensational order, thereby proving himself to be worthy of a first team berth.

Nelson, the stella player of the North Easton team, showed forth in the limelight as conspicuously as ever. In the first half he registered but one basket, while in the second half he had three to his credit, together with the only goal from foul that was made. Cutter and Grant also showed up to advantage for the home team.

The local players were especially anxious to annex a victory over Oliver Ames High, and now that coach Staff's aggregation has made it four straight, all of which were played against teams contending for the championship interscholastic basketball honors, it looks as if Quincy High is the challenge holder, and as such will use every endeavor to carry off the honohs of supremacy.

Quincy High second team also won in a close contest, the score being 10 to 9.

LIVELY SCRAP AT ALMSHOUSE

Keeper Vaughn and Boss Flanagan Come to Blows

MAN BITTEN

There was a lively scrap at the Quincy House this morning between William H. Vaughn, keeper of the Almshouse and James P. Flanagan, boss of the ash cart division, in which Flanagan is said to have some out second best.

The trouble between the two started Monday over a sleigh, which Vaughn claims belongs to him. Flanagan it is alleged took the sleigh without permission and during the argument which followed, Vaughn alleges that Flanagan struck him with a shovel The result was that Flanagan was summoned into court for assault and battery and the case was continued until Friday morning for a hearing

This morning there was a further argument over the sleigh and it is alleged to have ended by Vaughn getting a blow in on Flanagan's jaw. Both men went down and it is said that Devany, one of the employees who tried to separate the men had his finger badly bitten by Vaughn and that Flanagan was also bitten in the leg before the trouble was over.

No warrants have been issued as yet, as far as known, but it is said that both Vaughn and Flanagan will be summoned before a joint arbitration board composed of the Overseer of the Poor and Board of Health on Thursday when the thing will be thrashed out and if possible the hatchet buried.

REDUCED TO STARVATION

Russian Peasants Sell Their Children to Khirgese Nomads

London, Jan. 17.—The terrible conditions prevailing among the peasantry in southeastern Russia are depicted in a telegram from a doctor in Orenburg which is published here as a special article.

The doctor says that the starving peasantry in the government of Orenburg, on the River Ural, owing to not having received any assistance from the authorities, are selling their children to the Khirgese nomads in the government of Saratov.

Many of the people in the vicinity have died from hunger and typhus, and more than 70 percent of the children are stricken with a fearful epidemic in some of the villages, while in other districts the distress is extreme.

ENGLISH FREE LANCE DIES IN FLORENCE

Labouchere Was Long a Relentless Foe of Abuses

Florence, Italy, Jan. 17.—Henry Labouchere, the editor of the London Truth, died at his villa here. He was 80 years old.

Until a few years ago Labouchere was one of the most prominent independent politicians in the British Isles. He was a member of parliament for nearly a half a century, but always declined to take office in any cabinet.

His political views were extremely radical, but he preferred to give expression to them as a free lance in the house of commons.

WOMEN IN SWEDEN TO HAVE SUFFRAGE

Full and Equal Share With Men In the Government

Stockholm, Jan. 17.—Women are henceforth to take a full and equal share with men in the political life of Sweden. The speech from the throne at the opening of the riksdag contained the announcement that a bill was to be introduced enfranchising women and making them eligible at the elections to the riksdag on the same conditions as men.

Every Swede over 24 years of age and not under any legal disability has the right to vote for members of the second chamber.

King Gustaf, who opened the sessions of the riksdag in person, says he regards it as right and in the best interests of the state that women should be placed on this equality with men.

MINISTER IS INDICTED

Charged With Performing Operations Which Caused Woman's Death

Pittsburg, Jan. 17.—An indictment was returned by the grand jury against Rev. Dr. W. D. McFarland, minister and educator, of Cedar Creek, Tenn., charging him with a felony in committing two operations upon Miss Elsie D. Coe, his former secretary, which resulted in her death in a local hospital.

According to a report here McFarland was arrested and is being held at Knoxville.

McFarland was formerly head of the academic department of the Pittsburg high school. Miss Coe, aged 28, had been McFarland's secretary. He is 60 years old and married.

RETURN TO NEW YORK

Men Who Took Striking Longshoremen's Places Quit Their Jobs

Boston, Jan. 17.—One hundred and seven strike-breakers in the employ of Agent Louis Burgoff, who brought them to Boston to break the local strike of longshoremen, struck yesterday afternoon and left for New York on the last boat train in the early evening.

Poor food and lodgings, cold weather, inadequate clothing and ill treatment are what they say caused them to throw up their jobs.

German Princess Betrothed

Berlin, Jan. 17.—It is reported in court circles that Princess Victoria Louise, daughter of Emperor William, has been betrothed to Archduke Adolf Friedrich of Mecklenburg-Strelitz.

MODERN LITERATURE

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney Talks to Club Women

HOME OF MRS. BROWN

At the home of Mrs. George H. Brown, Elm street, club women met Wednesday afternoon for the sixth lesson in modern literature by Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, under the auspices of the Literature committee of the Quincy Women's club..

Arnold Bennett the most-talked of English author of the day was Mrs. Gurney's subject and was thoroughly enjoyed.

Mrs. Gurney spoke of his recent visit to this country and of the impression he made on those who met him, being a most peculiar person, and very conceited; but we study him for his literary worth, the variety and quality of his work, not as a man. He is a brilliant realistic philosopher and a description writer gifted with rare powers both of observation and expression. His opinions and frankness in regard to the writings of Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot and others were amusing though no one agreed with him. He was born in North Staffordshire England, 1867 and educated in the New Castle Middle school, trained to the law, was a short hand writer. He was a collector of books, then a free lance writer, an English journalist then a novelist, playwright, critic and essayist, but we study him as a novelist. In his "The Old Wives' Tale," which he says is "a novel of life"—he has made the Five Towns live on the map of English fiction as Thomas Hardy has endowed Wessex with life "In Clayhanger" and "Hilda Lessways" the same situation is handled from both the man and the woman's point of view, and that he can be gay is proven in his comedies of fiction, "Leonora," "Buried Alive" "Helen with the High Hand" and "Anna of the Five Towns" are full of a real sense of humor he gets at the heart of woman, dealing in Feminine interpretations, for which his study of French literature and as editor of a woman's magazine fitted him

"How to live on twenty-four hours a day" aroused a lot of controversy as also "The Human Machine" "Mental Efficiency" and "Literary Taste."

"The Truth about an Author" in his literary autobiography. He is the author of three plays, two of which "Cupid and Common sense" and "What the Public wants" are printed in book form and they are gaily clever in their study of certain half-serious half-humorous phases of contemporary life. Mrs. Gurney read selections from the "Clayhanger" and "Denry the audacious" in her delightful way and she sketched "A Man from the North" which claimed attention chiefly as an idyl of love in London and "The Old Wives' Tales" considered by many his greatest novel. The next lesson on Feb. 7 will be on John Galsworthy for which Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker of 24 Whitney road is to open her home at 3 o'clock.

IMPETUS GIVEN TO MISSIONS

Address of John M. Moore at Men and Religion Meeting

TONIGHT'S MEETING

It is a pretty safe thing to say that it has been a long time since the subject of missions has received such an impetus, if ever the subject has, as it did last night at the Platform meeting in the Y. M. C. A. hall in the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

This impetus was given it by the leader of the team on Missions, John M. Moore of oBston. There were not frenzied efforts on Mr. Moore's part to awaken a great burst of enthusiasm that will be gone when the thought of the campaign is over.

Rev. J. A. Matheson of the First Presbyterian Church presided over the meeting which opened with a short devotional service.

Mr. Moore had read the passage from the Scripture dealing with the report of the spies sent up to view the promised land. Mr. Moore thought that perhaps there was a message from Kadish Barnea for missions. There was no question about its being a good land. No question about God's will in the matter. There was no question as to the ultimate success of the matter in that they would possess the land. The only question was whether this was the time or whether they should wait for some other time. It was the practicability of the plan. It was too hard of accomplishment, they could not do it. They had fortified cities and the men were giants. They had a perfect genius for finding excuses or reasons why the thing could not be done. There were only just two men who said the thing and should be done. They could if they would. God is with us. This one reason was sufficient for their possessing it, and doing it then. But a whole generation passed away before the thing was accomplished. Mr. Moore was afraid that history would repeat itself in the matter of missions. There may be no question about the evangelizing of the world, but the question is when? There is no question about God's will in this matter for that is settled for all time. The only question then will this generation be true to its trust? Will we fail as did the people of old because the task is difficult?

Mr. Moore then took up the matter of the problem offered by the constant moving of the people into the cities. In another generation we will nearly all be living in cities and they will dominate the country. If this is true and the country is dominated by unchristian cities what is to become of the country. There are great communities in the west that are being formed today and they are open to Christian influence if we make use of it. If we do not it is going to take a long time to bring about a change. Now is the time to take and possess the land for God. We are inclined constantly to be looking backward to

INNOVATION MADE A HIT

Leap Year Party of St. John's Dramatic Club Great Success

THOSE PRESENT

The assembly hall of St. John's Parochial school was fully taxed Wednesday evening on the occasion of a leap year party given by members of St. John's Dramatic club. The affair was a great success.

The dance order of twenty numbers, was unique and appropriate being inscribed in white letters on a red heart. Music was furnished by Wilson's orchestra, and after a promenade concert from eight until nine, dancing was in order till midnight.

A special feature was the 1912 number. All the young ladies assembled at one side of the hall, while the young men congregated at the other. When the music sounded the ladies invaded the men's camp, each capturing a young man. This innovation proved a decided hit.

It was the first endeavor of the St. John's Dramatic club in giving such a function of this nature, and much of the success attained is due to the committee in charge composed of John A. Duggan, Daniel Driscoll, Matthew Fay, and the Misses Louise Driscoll, Eleanor Moriarty and Nellie Desmond, assisted by the members of the club.

Among those present were: Marguerite Morrissey, Elizabeth Morrissey, Annie Guggenheimer, Margaret Burke, Marion Bill, Nellie Desmond, Annie Clinton, Mary Summers, Catherine F. Houston, Mary A. Hughes, Minnie Flaherty, Gertrude Flaherty, Helen Walsh, Mabel Blonde, Katheryn Hagerty, Clara Lillie, Elizabeth Rouleau, Mary Sheehan, Margaret Manning, Rose Dovan, Zoie Goodook, Vera Burke, Mary Ferriter. Nellie Cronin, Katherine Cronin, Frances Curtin, Margaret Coughlan.

WANT NUISANCE ELIMINATED

Squantum wants the mosquito nuisance eliminated in that section and is seeking legislative aid in the extermination of the pest. With this view in mind Representative Leslie by request presented a petition in the legislature accompanied by a resolve of William N. Kenyon, President of the Squantum Improvement society for legislation relative to the extermination of mosquitoes.

Representative Leslie has also presented a petition accompanying a resolve for the Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs for improving the channel of Quincy bay.

TODAY'S COURT

A hearing was held before Judge Avery this morning in the case of Giacconio Pachioletti for assault on Charles Kiveojo, Dec. 22, last year. There was a quarrel between the two men at one of the quarries and it is alleged that during the fight the Italian pushed the Finn over into one of the quarries. The result was that Kiveojo had one of his ribs fractured by striking a rock in the quarry. He was removed to the City Hospital where he has been since, until this morning.

The hearing was a lengthy one, each side being represented by counsel. After the hearing the case was continued for judgment for two weeks.

NEW WOMAN OF THE ORIENT

Address of Mrs. Badger Before Women's Missionary Society

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Women's Missionary society, of Bethany church held its annual meeting for the election of officers, Wednesday afternoon. The meeting opened with the singing of one of the grand old missionary hymns, and Mrs. Charles W. Miller, the president, offered prayer, followed by the reading of the scriptures.

The reports of the secretary, Mrs. Charles Sampson, and the treasurer, Mrs. George A. Sidelinger, were read and showed an increase in membership and were very encouraging.

The old board of officers were re-elected as follows: President, Mrs. Charles W. Miller; vice presidents, Mrs L. E. Wetherell and Mrs. Charles Gragg; secretary, Mrs. Charles Sampson; treasurer, Mrs. George A. Sidelinger.

Mrs. Miller spoke briefly in regard to the missionary work after which she introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. George L. Badger of West Quincy, who took for her subject, "The New woman of the Orient." Mrs. Badger said in part, that until the advent of Christ, woman was a menial, her position in life was the lowest and most degraded. But the teachings of our Saviour have changed these conditions, and our missionaries are achieving wonderful results. Woman was a poor drudge, the mere tool of a brutal husband, but now if you could visit India you would see a vast difference. You would see a group of women converted to Christianity, neatly clad and revealing by their demeanor, what the gospel has done for them.

Mrs. Badger cited an incident of a young Chinese woman, who was barely twenty-two, who had educated herself to be a doctor. She had two children, but her work among her own people was marvelous. In closing Mrs. Badger read a beautiful story, the lesson of which was to teach us to work with renewed zeal and with reverent hearts.

During the social and informal hour which followed, Mrs. Badger was greeted very cordially. Refreshments were served, consisting of cocoa and fancy crackers.

Next Tuesday there will be an all day service held by the Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch, Woman's Board of Missions. Morning session at 10.15. devotional service led by Mrs. John E. Bradley; welcome to the Branch Mrs. C. W. Miller; response, Mrs. W. M. Tirrell; conditions and needs of the treasury, Mrs. Mark McCully.

10.45 Gleanings from annual meeting of Woman's Board, by delegates, Miss Mary Thayer, Mrs. Charles T. Crane, Mrs. D. N. Crawford and Mrs. Mark McCully.

11.15 Discussion, "What should be the attitude of the church to the Missionary Cause?" Leaders: Mrs. H. S. Huntington, Miss Mary F. Loud, Mrs. Rufus Keith, followed by Mrs. Miller, Miss Ford and Mrs. Studley.

12.00 Thank offering service and prayer hour, led by Mrs. A. O. Crawford.

1.30 Meeting of Executive Committee.

1.45 Devotional service, Rev. Edward Norton.

2.05 Report of junior work and bureau of exchange, Miss Susan W. Smith, and Mrs. George H. Murray.

2.25 Missionary address, Mrs. George Rowland of the Japan mission.

3.05 Missionary letters, Miss Mary F. Loud.

3.20 Roll call and offering.

ORGAN RECITAL.

An appreciative audience listened to a very fine recital given by Mr. Frank Wrigley, organist of Christ Church, assisted by Mr. J. W. McLeod of London at Christ church, Wednesday evening. Mr. Wrigley rendered a number of beautiful selections, of which "The Storm" by Wely, was particularly impressive. Mr. McLeod's solos were also much enjoyed. He has a most pleasing baritone voice.

IMPORTANT SPECIAL MEETING OF QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE

Resolution Favoring Building of Quincy Shore Boulevard to Hancock Street Adopted

Discussion on Proposed Changes of the By-Laws. Dues to be $10 after Jan. 1913. 13 Members Admitted

A special and important meeting of the Board of Trade was held Wednesday evening in the rooms in the Adams building and was largely attended.

The business as stated in the call was to hear the report of the special committee, appointed to consider the proposition to raise the dues of the Board to $10 a year, and to transact any other business that might properly come before the Board.

President Hearn presided and several communications were received in regard to various matters including one from the Automatic Phonograph Co., who were seeking a location.

Under reports of committees, William H. Teasdale, for the special committee on dues reported. He stated that under the by-laws the initiation fee was $5 and the dues $5 per year. Sometime ago, in order to increase the membership, the initiation fee clause of the by-laws was suspended and had since remained so. The committee recommended that after the February meeting this clause be put into effect again. That is, after this meeting the annual dues for the yer 1912 should be $5 and the initiation fee $5.

They also recommended that after year 1912 should be $5 and the initia- $5 and the annual dues $10. The reason, for having the matter of initiation fee go into effect after the February meeting, was that many had already paid their dues for the year and that there were a number of applications for membership that had been taken under the suspension of the initiation fee rule.

Several did not seem to understand the proposition but it was made clear to them. The report was accepted and after some little discussion it was voted to rescind the vote suspending the payment of an initiation fee after the February meeting.

The question then came on raising the dues to $10 after Jan. 1, 1913. Some question was raised if it would be legal under the by-laws to amend them at this meeting as they provide that notice of amendment shall be sent to every member.

It was then voted that the secretary be instructed to notify all members of the proposed amendment, to increase the dues, and that action would be taken at the next meeting.

Delcevare King then moved, and after some little discussion it was voted, that a committee he appointed to consider what changes, if any, are necessary, in the constitution and by-laws, and to recommend any such.

Applications for membership were received from the following parties: John W. McAnarney, Michael T. Sullivan, John F. Merrill, William T. Donovan, Elmer F. Ricker, John H. Johnson, Frederick E. Tupper, Charles M. Bryant, Joseph W. Dennen, Albert C. Bruff, B. F. Hodgkinson, John Cashman and William E. Hingston.

These were referred to the membership committee whose report being favorable they were elected.

Vice President Shaw was then called to the chair and President Hearn taking the floor offered the following resolve.

"That the Quincy Board of Trade respectfully petitions your honorable body to expedite as fast as consistent with a proper consideration, the matter of the desired entrance of the Grand Trunk railroad into Boston."

The resolution which was addressed to the legislature was quickly adopted.

BOULEVARD.

The debate of the evening came on a resolution of John O. Hall, that the Quincy Board of Trade earnestly recommends the completion of the Quincy Shore boulevard to Hancock street, and that in view of the large payments to the state by the city, it is entitled to have it completed its entire length at the earliest possible moment.

John R. Richards said that the same conditions prevailed today as a year ago when the Board of Trade opposed the bill. The contention of the Board of Trade at that time was unanimous, that before a matter of this kind was adopted the commission on the separation of the grades should make its report. Before the Board of Trade endorses the extension of the Furnace Brook parkway to a point where it would establish a grade for the Commission to act upon in relation to the grade crossings. It should have their report. This was an important matter and before such action should be taken a notice of it should be sent to every member.

Mayor Stone said that the completion of the boulevard had nothing to do with the grade crossing question as the bill only provided that the boulevard should be completed as far as Hancock street.

The Board of Trade had asked for a hearing on the matter of the grade crossing but it had not been given. He believed that the report that this commission would make was well fixed in their minds even now, and that no protest of the Board of Trade to them would amount to anything.

Secretary Hall said that ten years ago, when he was Mayor, it was understood that this portion of the boulevard could not be built until it was known what the railroad was to do in regard to the grade crossing question.

Mayor Stone again stated that the

FUNERAL OF WILLIAM GARRITY

The funeral of William Garrity, Quincy's oldest resident, and for a long time one of its most widely known and highly respected citizens, was held this morning from his late residence, 13 Cottage street, at 9.30 o'clock. The funeral cortege proceeded to the church of St. John the Baptist, where a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by the pastor, Rev. John J. Coan, assisted by Rev. John J. Casey as deacon and Rev. Patrick J. Scannell as sub deacon. The master of ceremonies was Rev. Daniel Riordan of Newton, a life long friend of the deceased. Seated within the sanctuary were Rev. John B. Condon and Rev. Fabian V. O'Connell, of the church of the Assumption, East Boston, both of whom were intimately associated with the late Rev. John J. Garrity, a son of the deceased, also Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, Atlantic, for a number of years a close friend of the late Mr. Garrity.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, rendered by regular choir under the direction of John Mahon, organist. During the services solos were rendered by Mrs. Mary Burns King and Miss Angela McCarthy. The former sang The "Piu Jesu," while the latter rendered the "Tremens Factus.'

The pall bearers were John Harkins, Edward J. Murphy, Eugene O'Connor, Thomas H. McDonnell, Michael T. Sulivan, Eugene Farley, John C. Knapples, George Duane, and Patrick Kelley.

Interment was at St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy, where prayers were said by Rev. Daniel C. Riordan. Among the profusion of floral tributes, was a wreath of carnations, the token of the teachers of the Atherton Hough school. where Miss Elizabeth A. Garrity a daughter of the deceased is assistant principal.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Outlook could get a very good scoop now by sending out Teddy to interview the Colonel.

Congress is supposed to be in session, at least the door-keeper goes in and brushes off the cobwebs every morning.

Russia is now civilizing the Persians by hanging them, which is much the same way in which we proceeded to Christianize the Indians.

We wish Mr. Roosevelt would stop giving us his opinions on the care and feeding of infants, and let us know whether he is going to run for president.

Wall street note: The report by wireless that J. P. Morgan ate a square meal was hailed with intense enthusiasm, and the bull bid up prices rapidly.

This is the year when the women can propose, or more correctly it is the year when it isn't necessary to make the men think they are doing the proposing.

The sum of $14,000,000 was deposited in the postal savings banks last year, and we are not informed that a single one of the bankers who fought the proposition so hard has yet gone to the poor-house.

Our readers are perhaps disappointed that we have not got out any puns on the name of President Sun of China. But as 8,663 paragraphers have done so, we feel that all the requirements of the situation have been well met.

The installation of telephones in mines is advocated as a great safeguard for the men. But as the expense might make it necessary for the owners to get along with last year's automobiles, it would of course involve too much hardship.

GOLD AND SILVER ROMANCE.

The annual report of the United States Geological survey, shows that in spite of the tremendous difficulties of modern mining for the precious metals, the production of gold is but slightly less than usual. while silver increased the past year.

Conditions have indeed changed from the day when a man or two could set out with picks, shovels, and pans and return regularly with a golden hoard of dust.

To-day gold mining is about the most expensive way of making money, and a company must often sink a fortune before taking out a bit of precious metal.

At the Trinity mine in California they had to build a tunnel a mile and a half long to carry water from a point thirty miles away, and now they are sluicing out whole sections of the mountain to the figure of 10,000 cubic yards daily.

And yet the old prospectors will wag their bushy beards, and after a life time of straining their eyes amid the desert, will still aver that big strikes will yet be made hap-hazard in the most unexpected places.

The wonderful Bullfrog mines in Nevada were found by a party of prospectors who had given up at Goldfield and Tonopah, and were travelling cross country to see what they could find in California.

The early story of Cobalt, the new Silver city of Canada, is even more romantic. When they were building a railroad through the district a few years ago, a blacksmith threw a hammer at a fox in the bushes. Going out later to pick up his hammer he noticed a bluish scar in the rock where his hammer had fallen. He broke off a piece of the rock, had it assayed, and found that it was a wonderful ore.

A few months previous the railroad workmen had been taking this rock as ballast for the track, worth $5000 a ton Now Cobalt turns out $1,000,000 in silver a month.

The modern mining town like Bullfrog is not that of the days of Bret Harte. There are good schools, business blocks costing $50,000 and more, neat homes and prosperous churches. To be sure there is high play and hard drinking in the saloons, but the pop of the six shooter is rarely heard.

NEPONSET FOR DEVELOPMENT.

At the annual meting of the Neponset Improvement Association the following were elected: President, Matthew F. Cummings; vice president John J. Reilly; treasurer, James Flanigan; secretary, William H. Murphy, B. Dorsey was appointed agent for legislative business.

The president, the treasurer and Mr. Dorsey were made a committee to arrange a meeting with the new port directors, so that Neponset may come in for some of the improvements they are to make.

THE NATIONAL.

When the limelight of popular interest is focused upon Washington, the National is even a more welcome visitor than usual, for there is a sort of face to face glimpse of affairs at the national capital in Joe Chapple's chat. It may be the titillating thrill of a vision of international warfare incident to the abrogation of an ancient treaty with an old ally, the latest bit of society gossip, or a brand new "cloak-room joke," but it always makes one feel as if he had been right there "among the folks" at Washington.

There are the usual number of charming stories for the long cozy winter evenings, stories that have just the pulsating move and go of American life. A new serial, "The Minor Chord," is begun in this issue. The "Nobility of the Trades" series gives an ehaustive resume of the progress of the printer and publisher from the fifteenth century down to the nineteenth century. Unique experiences in catching burglars awheel are related by Jack Francis Cremer under the title "Caught with the Goods."

ENGINEERING MAGAZINE.

The leading place in the Special Number of The Engineering Magazine for January is given to the first of a series of papers by Major Charles DeLano Hine, in which he describes the "unit system" of organization as it is being developed by him along the entire Harriman System, on a scale approached, in magnitude, by but one other example in the world.

Among the important illustrated features of this issue may be mentioned the fourth installment of Robert L. Streeter's papers on internal combustion engines, in which he takes up the cost of generating power in small plants; and a paper by T. Lane Carter describing the modern high-extraction processes in the metallurgy of gold and silver. A history of the growth of the marine boiler in the last twenty-five years is given by Rear Admiral George W. Melville, U. S. N. The number also carries the full Review of the Engineering Press, and The Engineering Index.—The Engineering Magazine, New York.

OUR STRONGEST MUSCLES.

The Chief One and the Largest Is the Gluteus Maximus.

The strongest muscle in the human body is the gluteus maximus. Hardly a movement of the lower extremities can be made without bringing it into play, but its chief duty is to balance the pelvis on the head of the thigh bone. It assists in carrying the leg forward and outward in walking, and without its aid any movement of the body from the hips would be impossible.

As it is the strongest, so is it also the largest muscle we possess. In the full grown man it can exert a force of 110 pounds to the square inch of its section in the thickest part.

Another strong muscle, which is situated in the calf of the leg, is capable of sustaining seven times the weight of the body. The great tendon which is inserted in the heel bone and which is called tendon achilles, is also of singular strength. When removed from the body it has sustained a weight of 2,000 pounds, yet sometimes by the sudden action of the muscles of the calf, to which it belongs, it has been snapped across.

BOARD OF TRADE

grade crossing had nothing to do with the completion of this part of the boulevard. If we oppose the bill we shall lose the appropriation.

Frank F. Crane said that down in Lynn, the Board of Trade had formed a combination with the Boards of Trade in Essex county with the result that by putting up a unanimous front, that section had got the larger part of the money expended for boulevards. He hoped that the Board would take no action that would have a tendency to stop the appropriation.

John R. Richards thought that the Commissioners were hestitating in making their report, hoping to get a loop hole to let them out on reporting against depressing the tracks.

Mayor Stone said that he was very much in favor of depressing the tracks. It was the only thing to do but this proposition had nothing to do with it. He had appeared before the legislature two years ago when the matter of an appropriation for the completion of the boulevard to Hancock street had come up, and opposed it. He felt sorry to have done so. He had now found that he had been wrong. We are not doing the city justice if we vote this resolution down. He however would eliminate that part of the resolution which referred to the completion of the boulevard for its entire length.

Ex-Representative Peter T. Fallon spoke at length on the boulevard question and how it was through his efforts that the first appropriation for Quincy was made. He believed that we could do nothing without influence. He advocated the appointment of a member of the park commission from this section of the state. The grade crossing had nothing to do with the completion of the boulevard to Hancock street.

Ernest W. Branch, was asked as a civil engineer if he thought the boulevard would have anything to do with the grade crossing question. Mr. Branch said that he saw no reason why the grade crossing question should enter into this matter of the boulevard. He should be sorry to see the Board of Trade again oppose the boulevard.

The resolution was then changed so as to eliminate that part relative to the completion of the boulevard for the whole length and adopted.

A committee consisting of the President with Messrs Austin, Whitman, Kincaide and King was appointed to attend the legislative hearing and favor the passage of the proposed bill.

As there seemed to be some misunderstanding of just what the proposed bill calls for, the first section of the bill, known as House Bill 111 is given in full. The second section of the bill simply relates to the matter of raising the money for the purposes named in section one.

Section 1. The metropolitan park commission, created by chapter four hundred and seven of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three, is hereby authorized and directed to complete the construction of the Furnace brook parkway in the city of Quincy from Hancock street to the Quincy shore reservation and, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, are hereby authorized to expend an additional sum of two hundred and forty thousand dollars.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

A. L. Whitman brought up the matter of the annual banquet and after some little discussion it was voted to appoint a committee of five to take entire charge of the banquet as to time and place and to report at a later meeting. The committee appointed were A. L. Whitman, W. H. Teasdale, Henry L. Kincaide, Charles H. Johnson and W. G. Shaw.

The president reported that he had attended the dinner of the Boston City club at which the Metropolitan plan was discussed and that he had attended hearings at the state house.

The meeting then adjourned.

FARLEY GIVEN OVATION

Prince of Church Welcomed Home by More Than 300,000 People

New York, Jan. 18.—John M. Farley, achbishop of New York, came home a cardinal to a welcome that will mark an epoch in his life. After an absence of two months abroad, he was the first of America's new "princes of the church" to touch home shores, and, as such, more than 200,000 Catholics and half as many Protestants paid him honor.

Thousands massed along the line of march from the Battery to St. Patrick's cathedral and thousands more, including a choir of 6000 parochial school children, gathered within the edifice to note with reverence his progress to the Episcopal throne.

Last night the cathedral itself became a structure of fire, having been strung from spire to sidewalk with 40,000 electric bulbs. When these lights burst forth their radiance was visible throughout the city and far out to sea.

ASKWITH'S PLAN MAY END COSTLY STRIKE

English Cotton Operatives Are Ready to Return to Work

Manchester, Eng., Jan. 18.—The proposals made to the employers and workers at the cotton trade conference of Sir George Askwith, representing the board of trade, appear likely to put an end to the industrial war which has been so costly to both sides.

The suggestions of Askwith are framed in such a way that both sides can maintain their principles without injuring the rights of the other. Neither side, under the terms of the proposals, shall be entitled to take action on the question of the employment of non-unionists, which shall involve the stoppage of the machinery of the mills, without giving six months' written notice to the other side.

It is expected that the mills will resume work Monday, after three weeks' idleness. The operatives are beginning to feel the pinch, and the news of a probable settlement has been received everywhere with rejoicing. The trouble has already entailed a loss of $30,000,000.

FINED FOR BLACKLISTING

Secretary of Manufacturers' Association Convicted at Hartford

Hartford, Jan. 18.—The first conviction for the violation of the "blacklisting law," passed by the last general assembly, was secured in the police court here when Charles Lay, secretary of the Manufacturers' association of Hartford, was found guilty and fined $50.

The case was brought on complaint of Labor Commissioner Connolly, who charged that Lay gathered and disseminated among members of the association information regarding the character, skill and habits of persons, whereby their chances of securing employment were affected.

GOVERNMENT'S EXPENDITURES

Taft Outlines Plans For Saving Millions Annually

SWEEPING REFORM IS URGED

Would Have Complete Departmental Reclassification, With Civil Service Throughout—Congress Asked to Continue Economy and Efficiency Commission—Many Ways to Cut Expenses Are Pointed Out

Washington, Jan. 18.—How the people of the United States may have saved for them millions of dollars annually in the operation of their governmental machinery was outlined by President Taft in a special message to congress.

"What the government does with nearly $1,000,000,000 each year," said the president, "is of as much concern to the average citizen as is the manner of obtaining this amount of money for the public use."

Probably the most radical proposal advanced by the president in the message was that all administrative officers of the government in the departments at Washington and in the field be put under the civil service; be removed from the influence of politics, and that their terms of office be not limited as at present to four years.

Such officers should not be appointed by the president with the necessity of senate confirmation, he said, but upon merit. "The extension of the merit system to these officers and a needed readjustment of salaries," haid he, "will have important effects in securing greater economy and efficiency. The view that these various offices are to be filled as a result of political consideration has for its consequence the necessity that the president and members of congress devote to matters of patronage time which they should devote to questions of policy and administration."

The president sketched the outlines of improvements he said could be made in government service, and asked that congress continue the economy and efficiency commission by granting an appropriation of $200,000, with $50,000 for printing its reports.

"To date," the president said, "the commission has cost the people about $130,000. Without having put in effect more than a few reforms, it has suggested changes that will save $2,000,000 a year."

In many ways, the president informed congress, a decrease in the cost of government might be assured. There is need, he said, of reorganization of the government departments, a consolidation and a weeding out of bureaus that overlap in their work; scores of local offices throughout the country should be abolished and hundreds of political appointees who do but little work should be taken off the pay roll, and there should be an improvement in the personnel of government employes through the introduction of the civil service in practically every field; business methods should be employed by Uncle Sam just as big corporations use them, a modern system of accounting and reporting should be adopted, and, last of all, the economy commission should be continued in its work.

The commission, he said, had recommended the abolition of the revenue cutter service, which would mean a saving of $1,000,000 a year.

Giving examples of excessive government expenditure along certain lines, the president told congress that in one department it cost $5.84 per 1000 to handle incoming mail and in another department $84.40 per 1000; another $69.89. In travel alone the government expends about $12,000,000 a year. Definite tests, he pointed out, have shown that a saving in this item alone of a little over ½ cent a mile probably could be effected.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

The committee which is preparing a report on vocational training for boys meets this evening at the school committee rooms. The committee which is preparing the report on the girl's problems meets Monday afternoon of next week.

All coal deliveries have now been completed by the Neponset Coal Co., the entire school contract having been handled in fifteen days. Samples have been taken and analysis made by Arthur D. Little of Boston and settlement will be made in accordance with the result of these tests as specified in the contract.

EVENING SCHOOLS.

The Adams and Willard evening schools closed their sessions on Monday when certificates were given those who had attended 30 or more evenings. At both these schools, the average attendance has been larger than in previous years and excellent work has been done.

The evening drawing school is continuing on its second term of 20 sessions with a steady attendance. Mr. Whitehouse of Boston, a well-known monument designer comes to the school two evenings a week to give instruction to the class on monument designs.

HIGH SCHOOL.

On Tuesday, January 9, Quincy High School defeated the basket ball team of Milton High School by a score of 20 to 16. Milton High School had a strong team and put up a close, interesting game. Milton second team was defeated by Quincy second team by a score of 24 to 6.

On Friday, January 12, Quincy High defeated the Winthrop High five by a score of 26 to 24. Winthrop High has one of the strongest, if not the strongest, basketball team in or about Boston. Winthrop second team defeated Quincy second team by a score of 8 to 6.

On Tuesday, January 16, Quincy High sent its first and second teams to North Easton to play the Oliver Ames teams. Both Quincy teams brought back victory; the first team by a score 22 to 19, and the second team by a score of 10 to 9. It will be remembered that Oliver Ames had what was probably the strongest high school team in the state last year.

Mr. Fred Woodcock, the well-known baseball coach at Brown University, called at the school yesterday afternoon. Both Mr. Staff and Mr. Mansur were on Brown teams under Mr. Woodcock.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

The new Wollaston school building is rapidly nearing completion. The only work remaining being of a minor description. The class room desks and chairs are being put in place this week and the furniture for the offices and hall will be installed as soon as the building has been turned over by the workmen and thoroughly cleaned.

The telephone system between the rooms has been adjusted and the clock signal system will be installed within a few days. Although the date when the school will be occupied has not yet been fixed, it is the hope of Wollaston parents that the dedication may take place on the evening of Feb. 12.

That is the date of the next regular meeting of the Wollaston Parents' and Teachers' Association and the guest and speaker of the meeting is to be Mr. Henry T. Bailey, editor of The School City Book, and for a long time connected with the State Board of Education. Mr. Bailey is a brother of Mr. Charles W. Bailey, member of the City Council for Wollaston and has many friends in this city. The subject of his address, "Then and Now" will be very apropos. The Parents' and Teachers' Association of Wollaston has many members and is one of the best and most helpful organizations in Quincy.

Those who have been through the new building are agreed as to its beauty of design and finish. The assembly hall which seats five hundred people is without question the most attractive hall in the city.

It will be necessary for the school Committee soon to rearrange the district lines in consideration of the opening of the school at Montclair. It is understood that there is considerable reluctance on the part of many parents living comparatively near the Montclair school, toward sending their children to that school, on account of the bad condition of the roads and they will ask that they be allowed to continue in the Wollaston district.

The regular meeting of the Quincy School Masters' Club was held last evening at the high school building with a large attendance. The subject of discussion for the evening was "Efficiency in School Work" and it was considered from the standpoint of administration, and of high and elementary school teaching.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

Some difficulty was found during the last few days of cold weather in properly heating the school. But by closing one of the rooms on the top floor. Mr. George Linton the janitor, was able to keep the rooms comfortable.

At the next meeting of the Parents' and Teachers' Association, Mr. Horace W. Rice, principal of the Woodward Institute, will speak on "Vocational Training for girls in the Public Schools."

CRANCH SCHOOL.

Every Thursday morning the whole school assembles in the lower corridor and holds together the devotional exercises. At these times the attendance record of the different rooms is announced. This morning the seventh grade, Miss Nellie March teacher, had the highest per cent of attendance.

More than thirty cases of adenoids and enlarged tonsils have been found among the pupils of the school this year by the school physician, Dr. George M. Sheahan. The parents have been notified and the pupils in most cases have received proper medical attention.

WILLARD SCHOOL.

A candy sale will be held at the Willard school, Monday, January 22, at 3.30. The proceeds of the sale will go towards purchasing a piano.

SCHOOLHOUSE AN INSTITUTION.

A gymnasium in every grammar school, the abolition of the public dance hall and the noodle joint and the substitution of the supervised playground and the neighborhood social center will be urged by the Spokane, Washington committee appointed by the Child Welfare league to investigate conditions in oriental cafes and public ballrooms. This is the statement of Mrs. W. H. Page, secretary of the league and chairman of the committee. Continuing she said:

"Why spend thousands and thousands of dollars upon our high school equipment—the school of the favored few—and not one cent upon the masses of children whom ever reach the high school? The cause of their failure to reach the high school may be lack of physical strength to stand the mental strain of school.

"The public dance hall and the noodle joints must go. The schoolhouse must be made an institution—a university of the people. It is here we want our boys and girls to meet for social life. Here we want the tired father and mother to find recreation, relaxation and stimulus.

"Our campaign will not alone be corrective, but preventive. It is not our intention to take away the noodle joint and the public dance hall, places of amusement, without providing healthy substitutes.

"We want supervised playgrounds and the wider use of the schoolhouse as a social center, without having to pay fees to the janitor.

"This committee will be enlarged and it will number upon it the most progressive men and women of the ciety. We are determined to get results."

BRIDGEWATER NORMAL ALUMNI.

President Alonzo Meserve has arranged for a meeting of the Bridgewater Normal Association, to be held in Kinsley hall, Ford building, Boston, Saturday, Feb. 3. The guest of honor will be Dr. George H. Martin, formerly secretary of the State Board of Education. Addresses will be made by Dr. David Snedden, State Commissioner of Education; Rev. Edward Cummings, and Dr. Martin. Others expected to be present are Miss Sarah L. Arnold, dean of Simmons College; Mr. Albert G. Boyden and Mr. Arthur C. Boyden. The members will gather at 12.30 P. M. for a social reunion. Dinner will be served at 1.15.

—One hundred and seventy-five thousand post-cards sent out at Christmas time failed to reach the persons for whom they were intended—failed to carry the token of good will and to bring the cheering sense of being remembered, because the senders of them blundered; blundered either through ignorance of postal regulations or were heedless of them, or were careless, or placed too great reliance in the postal department.—New Bedford Standard.

IMPETUS GIVEN TO MISSIONS

find great things that have been accomplished. It is true that there was never a time when there were so great opportunities as today. This is especially true in relation to the Church.

There is no place where most wonderful things are being done as in China. China is a great country. She has great men and native resources. The question is whether we are going to take China for our Christ or not take the opportunity. It is a question of what kind of a civilization she is going to have as well as we. Whether our western civilization is going to dominate theirs or whether theirs will dominate ours. Thus missions become big business. They become the matter of empire building. Ten years ago at the time of the Boxer uprising who would have thought that China would become a Republic? No one would dare have prophesied that this would come true.

Now there is no way out but a real revival of the Spirit of Christ in the Churches. This movement is one to definitely define the task of the Churches. We will do well to hear what the Spirit is saying to the Churches. Let us go up and possess the land. We are able to re-enforce the Missionary work. Enough has been done to demonstrate that peoples of these lands do respond to these calls and that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto Salvation.

Enough has been done in this and other lands to demonstrate that this Gospel will meet the various crises as we meet them. It is a question of men and money.

At this point Mr. Moore stopped his address and opened the meeting for questions and discussion. That he had some definite workable plans all those who were present would agree. Many a man got a new inspiration to go home and go to work in his Church.

This evening in the same place, Y. M. C. A. hall at 8 o'clock, the great Biederwolf will conduct the platform meeting on Evangelism. There is no comparison between the men or the messages. It is absolutely necessary for a person to hear them all in order to get the complete message and program of the movement.

The Movement is an all round one and is planned to develop every side of church work. Three hundred men ought to be present tonight.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

Madison's Part In Giving the Executive Mansion Its Name.

Just how the White House came to be so designated is a question on which historians differ. A local historian in Washington thinks that the burden of proof tends to give credit for the name to President Madison.

The structure was made of Potomac river freestone, and the capitol proper was built of the same stone. At the time the British burned the executive mansion they did a lot of other damage, and the country was pressed for money to repair the same. The walls of the mansion were only slightly damaged, other than being blackened by smoke. Money was scarce, and congress made an appropriation to have the outside of the house painted. White was selected as the best color. Madison in a letter to a personal friend wrote: "Come in and see me at any time. You will always find me in at the White House."

The executive mansion may have been called the White House before that time, but this investigator says that he has never been able to find any record of it. If Madison did not officiate at the christening it has been emphatically stated by the historian that he took a prominent part in publishing the fact that the White House was to be the name of the mansion. Up to the time of President Madison the executive mansion, which is the legal name for it, was generally spoken of as the president's house, but since then it has been known by its permanent name of White House.—Exchange.

A Tragic Possibility.

Uncle Leven, a grizzled old wood sawyer, was told by a lady for whom he had been working to wait in the kitchen for his supper. Aunt Caroline, the cook, filled his plate with choice bits from the "great house" table, and Uncle Leven fell upon them with relish. Soon, however, a cloud crossed his face.

"What ail you, Unc' Leven?" asked Aunt Caroline solicitously. "Is you got er pain?"

"'Tain't dat, Sis' Calline," said Uncle Leven, "but I's feared I'll git filled up befo' I eats all I wants."—Youth's Companion.

The Cure.

"Alas, I am blind!" wailed Love.

"Why don't you consult a doctor?" asked Experience. "I know a famous specialist who could cure you."

"What is his name?" asked Love.

"Marriage," replied Experience.—Philadelphia Record.

UNCLE SAM'S HINT TO CUBA

Believed to Be Sufficient to Avert Intervention

ARMY PLANS ARE WELL LAID

Will Be No Difficulty In Hustling Troops and Warships to Island Republic Should It Become Necessary—Advent of Military Element Into Councils of Cuban Veterans Considered Menace to Peace

Washington, Jan. 18.—Having served notice on President Gomez's government that the United States expected Cuba to live up to her treaty agreements and maintain a Republican form of government, the state department now is awaiting developments.

Officials here are confident that when Cubans understand the motive of the United States is simply to discharge its treaty obligations, there will be little dissatisfaction outside of the veterans' organization.

So well laid are the plans of the general staff of the army, that news of the possibility of intervention in Cuba has caused scarce a ripple at headquarters here. Should it become necessary to send troops to Cuba, the whole mechanism of the transportation and mobilization services could be in operation within a few hours and probably within two days the first army transport would be sailing for Havana with a full regiment of infantry aboard.

Long before that transport had reached Cuban waters, several American battleships would be lying off proper strategic points on the Cuban coast. War department officials, however, do not anticipate any such order and the Atlantic fleet is pursuing the routine of the winter drills off the south coast of Cuba.

The note intimating that President Gomez must set his house in order is intended not so much as a notice to Cuba of a determination upon the part of this government to intervene again as a warning of what may be expected unless the Cuban government remedies the exisctng political situation.

The veterans have been active in the past three months in attempting to have displaced from the civil service persons who sympathized with the Spanish cause in the rebellion. Press dispatches indicate that the veterans are threatening to coerce members of congress now in session to nullify the law regarding the participation of the military in politics.

The state department fears that the advent of the military element into the councils of the veterans will lead to the formation of a military party which will in itself be a menace to peace and order. The appearance of such a party at this time would be especially fraught with danger because of the approaching presidential campaign and the elections in December next.

There is a conviction in Washington that the veterans' movement, which has been closely observed, is nothing less than a cloak for the movement of General Nunez toward the presidential nomination.

No Excitement In Havana

Havana, Jan. 18.—Tranquility reigns in Havana in spite of the shock of the announcement of possible intervention by the United States in Cuban affairs. The popular attitude is apparently one of intense silent expectancy. The meagre reports received from the interior do not give any indications of trouble, but some fears are expressed in Havana that disturbances are likely to occur in the rural districts when the news becomes more generally circulated.

IRISH PLAYERS ARRESTED

"Play Boy of Western World" Called an Immoral Performance

Philadelphia, Jan. 18.—Warrants for the arrest of every member of the cast of "The Play Boy of the Western World" were served and bail was entered for them for a hearing before a magistrate. The players are charged with "taking part in a theatrical performance of an immoral character, or which might tend to corrupt morals." The warrants were sworn to by Irishmen opposed to the production.

Fourteen men accused of inciting to riot in trying to break up a performance of the play were arraigned. Those whose offenses were deemed most flagrant were held in $800 bail for court, while others were discharged.

$1,250,000 Fire Loss In New York

New York, Jan. 18.—The seven-story warehouse of the Terminal Storage company, containing merchandise valued at more than $10,000,000, was damaged by fire to the extent of $1,250,000.

Stiff Fighting In Paraguay

Buenos Ayres, Jan. 18.—There has been stiff fighting in the streets of Ascuncion, Paraguay, between the adherents of President Rejas and the revolutionaries. Many were killed on both sides.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Chocolate Pie. One coffee cup of milk, two tablespoons of grated chocolate, three-fourths of a cup of sugar, yolks of three eggs. Heat chocolate and milk together, then beat yolks and sugar to a cream and add the chocolate and milk. Flavor with vanilla. Bake with an under crust. Make a meringue of the whites and spread over the top.

Preparation of Gilblets. Drop livers, hearts and gizzards into cold water; wash thoroughly; split the hearts, and wash inside. Use only the fleshy parts of the gizzards. Drain, place in a small sauce-pan and cover with boiling water to which a little salt has been added and simmer gently. The livers will be done first and should be removed as soon as tender. Next the hearts, and last the gizzards. Cover with a cloth to prevent drying and set away until needed.

Chocolate Cake. Cream one cup of butter, add two cups of sugar, the yolks of five eggs and the whites of three, seven-eighths cup of milk and three cups of flour sifted with four level teaspoons of baking powder. Bake in two long shallow pans and cover with a chocolate icing.

Feather Cake. One cup sugar, one cup flour, one level teaspoon cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon soda; mix all together and sift; put in a measuring cup enough lard and butter to one-fourth fill the cup, on stove and melt, then add two eggs to the melted butter and lard and fill the rest of the cup with milk; add this to the flour and sugar and beat well, then add a few drops of almond lemon, and vanilla and beat well again. Bake in a hot oven 20 or 25 minutes.

How to Use Cold Coffee.

If you have a cupful of strong coffee left from breakfast prepare it with sugar and milk to taste. Put into a bowl one cupful of white flour, one cupful of whole wheat flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt and three level teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat one egg lightly, add to the coffee and stir into dry mixture. If it should be too stiff add a little more milk or water. It should be more like a stiff drop batter than dough and not thin enough to pour. Bake in hot buttered muffin pan twenty minutes.

How to Remove Rain Stain.

To take out rain marks from the cloth on the right side with a moderately hot iron, placing a clean damp cloth between the material and the iron. The cloth must be kept damp in order to be a success. Treated in this way the rain marks will not only disappear, but the cloth will not spot again.

TURNER SUES HAMMOND

Says Head of National Republican League Owes Him $17,368

New York, Jan. 18.—A suit against John H. Hammond was filed in the supreme court by Jesse E. Turner to recover $17,368. Turner says the money is due him as an organizer of Republican clubs in the various states of the National Republican league, of which Hammond is the president.

Turner states that he was employed by Hammond on April 7, 1909, at a salary of $1000 a month and expenses, to continue until the close of the first term of President Taft, on March 4, 1913.

Turner complains that he performed valuable work with success, but that he was dismissed by Hammond on Sept. 10, 1910, without just cause, and that the sum sued for is due him as a result.

Hammond filed an answer setting up a general denial.

FOSS' LIFE THREATENED

Boston Police Looking For Desperate Italians From New York

Boston, Jan. 18.—Inspector Rooney of the local police, with six Italian-speaking patrolmen, scoured the North and West Ends last night in a search for men who had arrived in Boston from New York, and who had threatened the life of Governor Foss because of his having ordered out the militia in Lawrence.

The information had come to the state and city authorities through an informer, a resident of New York city.

All day yesterday there was an additional state officer on guard at the executive rooms, and every visitor was a subject of careful inspection. The governor himself paid no attention to the report sent by the informer.

CONFIRMED AS FELLOW

Harvard Overseers Act on Bacon's Election by Corporation

Boston, Jan. 18.—The election of Robert Bacon, '89, to be a fellow of Harvard university, made recently by the Harvard corporation, was concurred in by the board of overseers at an adjourned meeting held in this city. He will take the place of Francis C. Lowell, who died several months ago.

Mr. Bacon, who for two years has been French ambassador, has sent his resignation to President Taft and it has been accepted. He will remain in Paris until his successor has been appointed and has qualified.

Wilhelmina Suffers Mishap

The Hague, Jan. 18.—Queen Wilhelmina, who two weeks ago was said to be expecting an interesting family event, is said to have suffered another mishap which dissipates the immediate hopes of the birth of an heir to the throne of The Netherlands.

The Cree Indian's Wooing.

The Cree Indian girl is sought in marriage not for love, but because she is strong and useful. The young brave who wishes to take her for his squaw is often faint hearted and frequently sends by a disinterested person or secretly leaves in her tent a gaudy silk handkerchief purchased from the Hudson Bay company. When his intentions are thus declared he goes, shy and awkward, to the father and asks for the hand of his daughter. Should the parent refuse consent to the union the undaunted wooer seeks a bride elsewhere. He never sulks or mopes; he never feels that his heart will break, but calmly selects and makes proposals for another maiden. Women are plentiful, and perseverance is sure to end in success.—Wide World Magazine.

BRIEFS

Mrs. H. E. C. Burns of Granite street is confined to the house with a severe cold.

There was quite a fall of snow Wednesday night but not enough to interrupt street car travel. There is now quite a heavy coating of snow and ice in the streets and sleighing should be good.

The high men at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club Wednesday night were John Curtis and Nathan Ames. After twenty-five hands, a lunch consisiting of fried scallops was served.

Friday evening, Mr. S. Newton Cutler and Mr. William Howard are to give a recital of chamber music in Livermore hall, Quincy Mansion school. A Norwegian sonata by Anders Rachlew, will be presented for the first time in America. All the friends of the school are invited to this concert.

LEWIS BASS.

The funeral of Lewis Bass was held Wednesday afternoon from his late residence on Granite street. The services were conducted by Rev. D. R. Freeman of Braintree. During the services the Temple quartet sang "Gathering Home," "Abide with me," and "Looking this way," the burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

—Dr. Wiley's declaration that "every person who dies of a preventable disease is either a suicide or a victim of murder" may seem extravagant. Put into another form, that all preventable diseases ought to be prevented, it becomes an indisputable truism.—New York Tribune.

IN A FERMENT OF EXCITEMENT

Warlike Preparations Being Carried Out at Lawrence

SHARPSHOOTERS GUARD MILL

Stationed at Windows of Atlantic Plant, Upon Which It Is Believed Rioters Will Vent Their Fury—Large Quantity of Dynamite Said to Have Been Purchased For Strikers—Clash Between Soldiers and Strikers During Parade Comes Close to Disastrous Ending

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 18.—Following a clash between a band of several thousand striking mill workers and the militia yesterday, in which many were injured and bruised, the circulation of Black Hand letters and the report that many gun men have augmented the ranks of the radical demonstrators, the city is in a state of high excitement.

Fearing a night attack and dynamiting, the mills were barricaded last night and extreme precaution was taken.

Mayor Scanlon today will ask a loan of $500,000 for the city from the state, to be made outside the debt limit and on long-term bonds.

Bales of cotton were rolled behind the gateways of the Atlantic mills and sharpshooters were stationed at its windows. On this mill, which has been running in the face of opposition, it is believed the strikers will vent their fury.

While warlike preparations are being made, strenuous efforts are still in progress to put an end to this great industrial struggle. Colonel Sweetser called Joseph J. Ettor, organizer of the strikers, to a conference last evening. He suggested that a settlement might be made and Ettor promised to hear the plan. There will be another conference today. Sweetser will be arbitrator.

Movement on Large Scale

Bread riots are feared as the strikers become low in funds. The demonstration of the numerical force of those out of the mills shows that the movement is of a greater scale than has been admitted. Its members have been inflamed by the harangues of the labor leaders who are shouting the Socialistic theories of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Lawrence is filled with ugly rumors and it is feared that there may be a desperate encounter between the militia and the strikers today, when another big parade is planned.

The military authorities have been informed that a large band of armed Italians is coming here from Boston with the intention of fighting the troops if the parade is interfered with, and Sweetser has been told that a large quantity of dynamite has been purchased for the strikers.

Many of the Italian operatives who have refused to join the strikers have received Black Hand letters, threatening them with death if they do not leave the mills, and secret information has been given to mill owners which makes them fear that attempts may be made to blow up the mills.

Clash Follows Parade

The fight between the strikers and soldiers yesterday afternoon culminated a mammoth parade through the streets of the city. By a narrow margin, slaughter was prevented. The diplomacy of Sweetser diverted an opening of hostilities that might have turned the city into a battleground.

Led by a young man carrying a large American flag, the strikers attempted to enter Canal street, which is a private way and which runs past nearly all the larger mills. As several thousand swept into the narrow thoroughfare, they encountered a platoon of Battery C, which had been stationed to prevent access to the mills from this point. Rushing on them, the soldiers pounded the strikers over the heads with the wagon spokes they carried in the absence of rifles.

Overpowered by numbers they were pushed back, though several of the strikers were seriously injured. Realizing that more desperate measures must be taken, the batterymen drew their revolvers, and the advancing line halted, the strikers beginning throwing chunks of ice. Several of the soldiers were hit in the faces, and one of them was knocked down and trampled on.

A Second Attack

Just as Captain Cox, in command of the battery, came to the head of his men to order them to fire, the strikers fell back into Hampshire street, and one of their leaders shouted: "Don't fire, we will not make any trouble." A second later, 300 or more of the strikers plunged headlong at the soldiers, and the smash of the clubs began a second tattoo on heads and backs of the strikers. No shots were fired.

At Atlantic street, a detachment of infantry that had been summoned from the mill entrances came down on a double quick. They faced the strikers in a solid line with fixed bayonets, dropped to waist level. "Back or we will charge," shouted an officer.

"It is a mistake," said one of the strike leaders. "We simply want to march. Let us go on and we will go to our halls and break up."

Sweetser's Diplomacy

Colonel Sweetser just then arrived and it was about time, for there was trouble brewing on both sides. Sweetser, after a short parley, said they could go through one of the streets but not upon any of the other mill streets.

Cheering the militia and waving their flags, the strikers started on, apparently peacefully, toward Union street. At the junction of Union and Canal streets, they suddenly veered to the right and attempted to rush past the infantry stationed there and toward the Wood, Ayer and Duck mills, in which much machinery was demolished Friday.

Lieutenant Davis swung his platoon across the street and ordered the strikers back or he would charge.

One of the strikers started forward with the flag. He was pulled back and the order went out to forward march for the infantry. Before the advancing line of steel, the strikers dispersed and the crisis was past.

BLOWS TOP OF HEAD OFF

Suicide of Farmer Who Possessed Estate Worth Nearly $300,000

Lexington, Mass., Jan. 18.—F. P. Kendall, 58 years old, a wealthy farmer, killed himself with a shotgun at his home here. Medical Examiner Keliher said last night it was a case of suicide.

Kendall stood in front of a mirror, placed the end of the barrel between his eyes and pulled the trigger. The entire top of his head was blown away. Blood bespattered the walls of the room in which he killed himself.

Kendall was one of the wealthiest men in Lexington and it is estimated that he leaves an estate worth nearly $300,000. He was owner of the Valleyfield farm, home of his blooded dairy herd and of the Kill Kare kennels, where his wife rears her prize-winning dogs.

PHELPS MUST DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Decision of Governor's Council Seals Fate of Richeson

Boston, Jan. 18.—The fate of Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, in the opinion of lawyers, officials and members of the governor's council, pactically was decided by the council yesterday afternoon.

It was not an out and out vote on the sentence to death of Richeson, for several of the councillors do not believe the commutation of Richeson's sentence will ever come to them. It was their action on the efforts of the governor to commute the sentence of Silas N. Phelps that gives a line on the action on Richeson, if they are called on to act.

When the decision on Phelps came it was the same as given by the old council, and it would seem now that Phelps must die during the week beginning Jan. 21.

This decision generally is regarded as settling Richeson's chance of escaping death. It is held at the state house that if the council would not show leniency in dealing with a man who forcibly repelled an outsider's entrance into his home there can be no possible chance for leniency in the case of a man who coolly and deliberately plotted the death of a loving, trusting girl.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

Concerning Executive Right to Send American Troops to China

Washington, Jan. 18.—The Hitchcock resolution demanding what law, treaty or agreement existed to warrant sending American troops into China provoked a lively discussion in the senate foreign relations committee and finally was referred to a subcommittee.

There was much difference of opinion. Senator Bacon agreed with Mr. Hitchcock that whatever authority existed it did not extend to independent action by the executive branch of the government. Other members took a contrary view and declared that the Boxer treaty warranted the recent action.

Husband Need Not Pay Men Who Furnished Her Meals

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 18.—The suit of cafe proprietors against John O. Schenk for $142 for meals served to his wife, Laura F. Schenk, while she was in jail charged with trying to poison him, was decided in favor of the defendant.

The court held that a husband was not responsible for his wife's meals while she was in jail. This decision may affect the suit of Mrs. Schenk's counsel for $45,000 fees.

SAYS WIFE KEPT HIM LOCKED UP

Rich Man Claims That He Has Been Cruelly Treated

BRINGS SUIT FOR $310,000

Alleges That He Was Forced to Transfer Stocks and Securities Valued at That Amount Under Threat That He Would Be Placed In Asylum—Climax In Domestic Troubles Reached on Trip to Europe

Boston, Jan. 17.—S. Arthur Bent of this city filed a bill in equity in the Suffolk superior court against his wife, Mary E. Bent, seeking to recover stocks and securities worth $310,000 which he claims he was forced into transferring to his wife by threats while they were in Europe in 1909.

Bent's bill states that he was married to Mrs. Bent on Aug. 30, 1890, and that he was 49 years of age at the time and his wife was 25. He declares that in June, 1909, he owned stocks and securities worth $310,000.

On June 15, 1909, the bill alleges, Bent and his wife went to Europe with their two children. Shortly after their arrival in Europe, Bent alleges, Mrs. Bent made charges against him for his alleged actions while on the way across the ocean. He was charged, he says, with having given money to a woman and of having promised to give more. These charges, Bent says, were false and known to be false by Mrs. Bent.

Mrs. Bent, however, so the bill alleges, demanded that Bent transfer all his property to her with threats that she would have him committed to an insane asylum if he did not. Prior to making these threats Bent claims that his wife had treated him with great cruelty and that in consequence his will power has become weakened.

He was in a foreign country and was afraid that in his condition he might be committed to an asylum. He therefore, under duress, assigned and transferred through a third person, whom he does not know, all his property to his wife, leaving himself without means of support.

Since the transfer of the property, Bent alleges that he has been treated worse than he was before and has even been locked in a room and otherwise treated with great indignity, to such an extent that he has been obliged to hide from his wife.

The bill asks the court to issue an injunction preventing his wife from disposing of the stocks or the money secured from their sale and to compel Mrs. Bent to return his property to him. A temporary injunction was issued, restraining Mrs. Bent from selling the stocks. An order of notice has been issued for Jan. 23.

Bent is a lawyer and author of several books. He was graduated from Yale and Harvard law school and has been American editor of the Swiss Times of Geneva and Galignani's Messenger of Paris. He was later superintendent of schools in Nashua, N. H., and Clinton, Mass., and served on the Boston school board. He was at one time treasurer of the Bostonian society.

GETS HEAD OF CORPSE

Fee of Doctor Who Saved Man's Life by Hazardous Operation

Middleboro, Ky., Jan. 17.—Representatives of Dr. Blair of Apache, Okla., claim the head from the corpse of Smith Fouch, promised twenty-five years ago as payment for Blair's services in saving Fouch's life.

Fouch was shot in the eye. Blair performed a hazardous operation and discovered, he says, that Fouch was able to perform normal functions with a bullet in a lobe of his brain.

After Fouch's apparent recovery he said he could not pay the doctor, but offered to will the physician his head. The doctor accepted and when Fouch died, a couple of days ago, he left a note asking that Blair be reminded of the bequest.

A medical student reaced Fouch's Whitesburg home last night. Fouch's kinsmen say they will permit decapitation of the corpse. Blair wants to prove Fouch lived twenty-five years with a bullet in his brain.

WHISKEY BOTTLE'S CRUISE

More Than Two Years at Sea, but Its Fumes Still Linger

New York, Jan. 17.—The adventures of a whiskey bottle which drifted with the ocean currents all the way across the Atlantic, are told in a letter received from England by J. C. Lavin, a New York engineering expert.

Lavin threw the bottle over the rail of a houseboat on the Long Island coast in August, 1909. He left a card with his name and address inside, and has just received a response from Merionetshire, Wales, saying that the bottle was picked up there on Dec 20.

It took the bottle nearly two years and four months to cross the ocean. When picked up the odor of whiskey was still strong, according to the Welsh preacher who found it.

GIVES A MILLION IN GEMS TO HIS BRIDE

$500,000 Pearl Necklace Is Among Stotesbury's Gifts

Washington, Jan. 18.—Edward T. Stotesbury has showered $1,000,000 worth of bridal gifts of gems on Mrs. Oliver Cromwell, whom he married today.

The most marvellous of the Philadelphia banker's regal presents is a pearl necklace, which cost more than $500,000. It is one of the finest collections of pearls in the world. When the bride clasps the long string around her neck it reaches the floor at her toes.

J. P. Morgan, Stotesbury's partner in Drexel & Co., gave the bride a diamond chain with a superb pear-shaped diamond as a pendant. The gift is valued at $25,000.

The bride has received an astonishing number of watches and clocks. One tiny watch is set on the base of a tremendous diamond which hangs from a long platinum chain set with diamonds.

ENGAGED TO RICHESON

Affidavit Filed In Colorado by Daughter of Baptist Minister

Colorado Springs, Col., Jan. 18.—An affidavit, executed here Feb. 18, 1910, before L. P. Lawton, a notary public, by Miss Patsey Felts of Salt Lick, daughter of a Kansas City Baptist minister, regarding her relations with Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, confessed murderer of his fiancee, Miss Avis Linnell, was made public here.

A certified copy of the affidavit has been requested by the district attorney at Boston for the purpose, it is believed here, of combatting any attempt to save Richeson from the electric chair. It sets forth, among other things, that Miss Felts became engaged to Richeson Dec. 29, 1903, when Richeson was a student in William Jewell college, Liberty, Mo.

GOLD IN BIDDIES' CROPS

Leads to Staking Out Many Claims In Manitoba District

Minitonas, Man., Jan. 18.—As a result of the finding of nuggets of gold in numerous fowl killed on the Elliott farm, four miles from here, stores and shops have been closed here while their keepers hastened to the place to stake out claims.

More than fifty claims already have been taken up and scores are hastening to the place.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

CHAPTER II.

FRECKLES PROVES HIS METAL.

NEXT morning the boss showed Freckles around the timber line and engaged him board with his head teamster, Duncan, whom he had brought from Scotland and who lived in a small clearing he was working out between the swamp and the corduroy. When the gang pulled out for the south camp Freckles was left to guard a fortune in the Limberlost. That he was under guard himself those first weeks he never knew.

Every hour was torture to the boy. The restricted life of a great city orphanage was the other extreme of the world from the Limberlost. He was afraid for his life every minute. He cut a stout hickory cudgel, with a knot on the end as big as his fist, and it never left his hand. What he thought in those first days he himself could not clearly recall afterward.

His heart stood still every time he saw the beautiful marsh grass begin a sinuous waving against the play of the wind, as McLean had told him it would. He bolted a half mile with his first boom of the bittern, and his hat lifted with every yelp of the sheitpoke. Once he saw a lean, shadowy form following him and blazed away with his revolver. Then he was frightened worse than ever for fear it might have been Duncan's collie.

The first afternoon that he found his wires down, and he was compelled to plunge knee deep into the black swamp muck to restring them, he could scarcely control his shaking hand to do the work. With every step he felt that he would miss secure footing and be swallowed up in that clinging sea of blackness. In dumb agony he plunged along, clinging to the posts and trees. He had consumed much time. Night closed in. The Limberlost stirred gently, then shook herself, growled and awoke about him.

There seemed to be a great owl hooting from every hollow tree and a little one screeching from every knothole. Nighthawks swept past him with their shivering cry, and bats struck his face. A prowling wildcat missed its catch and screamed with rage. A lost fox bayed incessantly for its mate. The hair on the back of Freckles' neck rose like bristles, and his knees wavered under him. He could not see if the dreaded snakes were on the trail nor in the pandemonium hear the rattle for which McLean had cautioned him to listen.

Something big, black and heavy came crashing through the swamp, and with a yell Freckles broke and ran—how far he did not know. But at last he gained some sort of mastery over himself and retraced his steps. When he again came toward the corduroy the cudgel fell to test the wire at every step.

Sounds that curdled his blood seemed to close in about him and shapes of terror to draw nearer and nearer. Just when he felt that he should fall dead before he ever reached the clearing came Duncan's rolling call, "Freckles, Freckles!" A great shuddering sob burst in the boy's dry throat. But he only told Duncan that finding the wire down had made him late.

The next morning he started out on time. Day after day with his heart pounding like a triphammer he ducked, dodged, ran when he could and fought like a wildcat when he was brought to bay. If he ever had an idea of giving up no one knew it. All these things in so far as he guessed them Duncan, who had been set to watch the first weeks of Freckles' work, carried to the boss at the south camp, but the innermost, exquisite torture of the thing the big Scotchman never guessed, and McLean with his finer perceptions came only a little nearer.

After a few weeks, when Freckles found that he was still living, that he had a home and the very first money he had ever possessed was safe in his pockets, he began to grow proud. He was gradually developing the fearlessness that men ever acquire of dangers to which they are hourly accustomed.

His heart seemed to be in his mouth when his first rattler disputed the trail with him, but he mustered courage and let drive at it with his club. After its head had been crushed he cut off its rattles to show Duncan. With the mastery of his first snake his greatest fear of them was gone.

Then he began to realize that with the abundance of food in the swamp flesh hunters would not come out on the trail and attack him, and he had his revolver for defense if they did. He soon learned to laugh at the floppy birds that made horrible noises. One day watching from behind a tree he saw a crane solemnly performing a few measures of a belated nuptial song and dance with his mate. Realizing that it was intended in tenderness, no matter how it appeared, the lonely, starved heart of the boy went out to them in sympathy.

When day after day the only thing that relieved his utter loneliness was the companionship of the birds and beasts of the swamp Freckles turned to them for friendship. He began by instinctively protecting the weak and helpless. He was astonished at the quickness with which they became accustomed to him once they learned that he was not a hunter and that the club he carried was used more frequently for their benefit than his own. He could scarcely believe what he saw.

When black frosts began stripping the Limberlost he watched the departing troops of his friends with dismay. He made special efforts toward friendliness with the hope that he could induce some of them to stay. It was then that he conceived the idea of carrying food to the birds, for he saw that they were leaving for lack of it. But he could not stop them. Day after day flocks gathered and departed. By the time the first snow whitened his trail about the Limberlost there were left only the little black and white juncos, the sapsuckers, yellowhammers, a few patriarchs among the flaming cardinals, the bluejays, the crows and the quail.

Then Freckles began his wizard work. He cleared a space of swale, and twice a day he spread a birds' banquet. By the middle of December the strong winds of winter had beaten most of the seed from the grass and bushes. The snow fell, covering the swamp, and food was very scarce and hard to find. The birds scarcely waited until Freckles' back was turned to attack his provisions. In a few weeks they flew toward the clearing to meet him. By the bitter weather of January they came halfway to the cabin every morning and fluttered about him like doves all the way to the feeding ground. By February they would perch on his head and shoulders, and the saucy jays would try to pry into his pockets.

Then Freckles added to wheat and crumbs every scrap of refuse food he could find about the cabin. One morning, coming to his feeding ground unusually early, he found a gorgeous cardinal and a rabbit sociably nibbling a cabbage leaf side by side, and that instantly gave to him the idea of cracking nuts from the store he had gathered for Duncan's children, for the squirrels, in the effort to add them to his family. Soon he had them coming—red, gray and black—and he became filled with a vast impatience that he did not know their names nor habits.

So the winter passed. Every week McLean rode over to the Limberlost, never on the same day nor at the same hour. The boy's earnings constituted his first money, and when the boss explained to him that he could leave them safe at a bank and carry away a scrap of paper that represented the amount he made a deposit on every pay day, keeping out barely what was necessary for his board and clothing. What he wanted to do with his money he did not know, but it gave to him a sense of freedom and power to feel that it was there—it was his and he could have it when he chose.

That winter held the first hours of real happiness in Freckles' life. He was free. He was doing a man's work faithfully through every rigor of rain, snow and blizzard. He was gathering a wonderful strength of body, paying his way and saving money.

Mrs. Duncan had a hot drink ready for him when he came in from a freezing day on the trail, knitted a heavy mitten for his left hand, devised a way to sew up and pad the right sleeve which protected the maimed arm in bitter weather, patched his clothing and saved kitchen scraps for his birds, not because she either knew or cared a rap about them, but because she herself was near enough the swamp to be touched by its utter loneliness. When Duncan laughed at her for this she retorted: "My God, mannie, if Freckles hadna the birds and the beasts he would be always alone. It was never meant for a human being to be sa solitary."

The next morning Duncan gave an ear of corn he was shelling to Freckles and told him to carry it to his wild chickens in the Limberlost. Freckles laughed delightedly.

"Me chickens!" he said. "Why didn't I ever think of that before? Of course they are! They are just little brightly colored cocks and hens. But what would you say to me 'wild chickens' being a good deal tamer than yours here in your yard?"

"Hoot, lad!" cried Duncan.

"Make yours light on your head and eat out of your hands and pockets," challenged Freckles.

"Go tell your fairy tales to the wee people! They're juist brash on believin' things," said Duncan.

"I dare you to come see!" retorted Freckles.

"Take ye!" said Duncan. "If ye make juist ane bird licht on your heid or eat frae your hand ye are free to help yoursel' to my cornerib and wheat bin the rest of the winter."

After that Freckles always spoke of the birds as his chickens. The next Sabbath Duncan, with his wife and children, followed Freckles to the swamp.

Freckles' chickens were awaiting him at the edge of the clearing. They cut the frosty air about his head into curves and circles of crimson, blue and black. They chased each other from Freckles and swept so closely themselves that they brushed him with their outspread wings.

At their feeding ground Freckles set down his old pail of scraps and swept the snow from a small level space with a broom improvised from twigs. As soon as his back was turned the birds clustered over the food, snatching scraps to carry to the nearest bushes. Several of the boldest, a big crow and a couple of jays, settled on the rim and feasted at leisure, while a cardinal that hesitated to venture fumed and scolded from a twig overhead.

Then Freckles scattered his store. At once the ground resembled the spread mantle of Montezuma, except that this mass of gayly colored feathers was on the backs of living birds. While they feasted Duncan gripped his wife's arm and stared in astonishment, for from the bushes and dry grass with gentle cheeping and queer, throaty chatter, as if to encourage each other, came flocks of quail. Before any one saw it arrive a big gray rabbit sat in the midst of the feast, contentedly gnawing a cabbage leaf.

"Weel, I be drawed on!" came Mrs. Duncan's tense whisper.

"Shu-shu!" cautioned Duncan.

Lastly Freckles took off his cap. He began filling it with handfuls of wheat from his pockets. In a swarm the grain eaters rose about him like a flock of tame pigeons. They perched on his arms and the cap, and, in the stress of hunger forgetting all caution, a brilliant cock cardinal and an equally gaudy jay fought for a perching place on his head.

"Weel, I'm beat!" muttered Duncan, forgetting the silence imposed on his wife. "I'll hae to give in. Seein' is believin'."

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

Quincy People Have Absolute Proof of Deeds at Home.

It's not words but deeds that prove true merit.

The deeds of Doan's Kidney Pills,

For Quincy kidney sufferers.

Have made their local reputation.

Proof lies in the testimony of Quincy people who have been cured to stay cured.

Mrs. G. McDonald, 276 Water street, Quincy, Mass., says: "When I used Doan's Kidney Pills in 1908 the results were so satisfactory that I publicly recommended the remedy. That statement still holds good. I felt all out of sorts for at least six months, and was at a loss to know what ailed me. I had but little energy to attend to my housework and my back was painful and weak. An acquaintance hear me complain and suggested that probably my kidneys were disordered, and advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so, getting them at Cox's Drug Store, and they soon fixed me up in good shape, making me feel like a different person.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME RICE RECIPES.

WHEN cooking rice remember that it will absorb three or four times as much water as there is rice. When milk is used instead of water a little more than this quantity is needed.

Rice ought to be very carefully washed before cooking. It should be put through several waters and rubbed between the hands.

The best way to clean rice is to blanch it. To blanch rice put it over a hot fire in a saucepan of water. Boil for five minutes and drain. Place on a sieve and let cold water run through it. The grains will then be clean and will not stick together.

The rice when blanched may be returned to the fire and cooked in hot water or milk. Rice should always be cooked as rapidly as possible. When nearly all the water or milk has been absorbed by the grains the cooking should be completed over hot water.

For Luncheon or Tea.

Rice and Cheese.—This makes a nice dish for luncheon or tea. Boil four tablespoonfuls of rice in salted water and when it is tender drain it and season with a heaping tablespoonful of grated cheese, stirring it around with a fork. Heap the rice in a dish and turn another heaping tablespoonful of cheese over it.

Browned Rice.—Wash a cupful of rice through several waters. Put over the fire in four quarts of boiling water and boil twenty-five minutes. Drain and blanch. Sprinkle a teaspoonful of salt over the rice and shake well. Spread the rice on a platter and cover with a cupful of brown sugar. Bake in a moderate oven for five minutes. Serve warm with or without milk, as preferred.

A Standard Recipe.

Last of all, here is a recipe for rice pudding, recommended as true and tried:

Rice Pudding.—Take two tablespoonfuls of rice, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, a half teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, four cupfuls of milk and a handful of raisins. Put the washed rice into a pudding dish, pour in the cold milk and bake a half hour in a slow oven. Then stir thoroughly and bake another half hour, adding the salt, sugar and grated nutmeg. Bake thirty minutes more and stir vigorously. Bake still another thirty minutes, making two hours, in a slow oven.

NO COMMENT ON RUMORS

Roosevelt Says That He Is Not Discussing Pipe Dreams

New York, Jan. 17.—Theodore Roosevelt declared he was not discussing "pipe dreams" when he was asked about a report from Indianapolis to the effect that he was favored by the steel interests for the presidential nomination.

"That is a depth of tomfoolery to which I cannot go," he said.

"Have you read Mr. Carnegie's testimony before the house committee?" he was asked.

"I didn't know he testified," Roosevelt replied smilingly.

"We hear from Washington," said a reporter, "that Postmaster General Hitchcock said that government ownership of the telegraph lines is favored by Mr. Taft."

"Do you?" asked Roosevelt as he turned away.

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK.

Filled With Scenery of Wonderful and Reckless Grandeur.

Glacier National park, it may be said without fear of contradiction, is the most wonderful natural park in the world. It comprises approximately 915,000 acres in northwestern Montana and embraces more than 1,400 square miles of the Rocky mountains.

This vast park is bounded on the north by the Canadian line, on the east by the Blackfoot Indian reservation, on the west by the north fork of the Flathead river and on the south by the main line of the Great Northern railway, by which alone it can be reached.

Within its great area are 900,000 acres of wild land that has never been trod by the surveyor. It is filled with scenery of reckless grandeur. Within its confines are more than sixty glaciers and many mountain peaks clad in the eternal snows. Lake McDonald, another of its wonders, is 3,150 feet above sea level and surrounded by lofty mountains.

Avalanche basin, a most remarkable U shaped valley, is another of the endless works of Mother Nature to be found in this great national playground. The entire scope of it, in fact, is laden with things to attract the interest of the tourist and student of science as well.—New York Times.

—Miss Lizzie A. Williams, for twenty-one years librarian of the Malden Public Library, has resigned. Since the death of the chairman of the board of trustees, the duties which have fallen to Miss Williams have become too arduous. Mayor Farrell who has known of the intention of Miss Williams to resign, has asked the trustees to appoint a man to the position of librarian.

INSTALLATION K. AND L. OF H.

Collation and General Good Time Follows Business Meeting

LIST OF OFFICERS

The annual installation of the officers of Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies of Honor No. 313 took place Wednesday evening. The officers were installed by D. D. Mrs. C. Briggs and suite of Friendship lodge of Boston. There was a large attendance of members of Maple lodge as well as many visitors from other lodges in the immediate vicinity of Quincy.

After the installation there were remarks by the grand officers and others and a collation was served and a general good time enjoyed. In connection with the installation it is worthy of mention that the lodge is 32 years old in the coming May and that Miss M. Lizzie Furnald one of the charter members has held office for over thirty years at the present time being the Financial Secretary. Two applications for membership were received at the meeting. The officers installed were:—

Protector, Miss Nellie M. Gate .
Vice Protector, Mrs. Sarah C. Williams.
Chaplain, Mrs. Emma Marnock.
Secretary, Mrs. Agnes G. Fletcher
Financial Secretary, Miss M. Lizzie Furnald.
Treasurer, Mrs. Alberta Hewson.
Guide, Mrs. Christina Tirrell.
Inside Guard, Miss Fannie Gregnon.
Outside Guard, Fred P. Bennett.
Past Protector, A. H. Taber.
Pianist, Mrs. E. L. Rhines.

—The engineering suggestion that the expensive dredging machinery used in excavating the great ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama might be brought northward and economically set at work in opening the inland waterway along the Atlantic coast is well worth serious consideration. Work cannot begin too soon in breaking the way through Cape Cod and deepening and widening the channel in the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal as very important links of the system.—Philadelphia Record.

A MEAL FOR A TIGER.

The Ram Was a Fighter, Though, and Furnished a Surprise.

Nature has made the tiger unequaled in the combination of speed, strength, cunning, daring and physical beauty. A tiger's first bounds are so rapid as to bring it alongside an antelope, and a blow of its paw will stun a charging bull. It has been known to spring over a wall five feet high into a cattle pen and to jump back with a full grown animal in its jaws. Sportsmen say they have known it to carry away the bait while they were putting up the shelters from which to shoot it.

It is a fact, however, that the tiger makes no pretense to invincible courage, as may be seen in the instance of one kept in the Calcutta zoological gardens, which was butted to death by a ram. A soldier owned a fighting ram, which became so troublesome it had to be sent to the zoo. There it caused so much annoyance it was decided to give it to the great tiger.

The tiger was so ferocious its food was let down through a sliding grating in the roof of its cage. The ram was lowered down. The tiger, dozing in one corner, saw the ram descend and, rising, began to stretch itself. The ram, not knowing he was intended to be food for the big beast, supposed the stretching was the signal for a fight. Stepping nimbly back to the farthest corner of the cage, it put down its head and went straight at the tiger and in a few minutes butted it to death.—New York Press.

The Chapel of Bones.

One of the most interesting sights of Malta and at the same time rather a grewsome one is the Chapel of Bones. Guides who show visitors round the island never fail to point this out. The whole of the sides, arches and about the altar are the skulls and crossbones of the long departed monks. In niches round the chapel stand skeletons of monks in their habits. On either side of the altar stands a skeleton representing Father Time with a scythe. Standing at the rear of the chapel one cannot but admire and wonder at the regular manner in which the skulls and bones are placed.

BELLIGERENTS GIVEN HEARING

Flanagan--Vaughn Hearing This Morning at City Hall

RESULT NOT KNOWN

James P. Flanagan of the ash cart division and William H. Vaughn, keeper of the Almshouse, between whom bad blood has existed during the past few days, and who came to blows Wednesday morning, were given a hearing this morning at City Hall. The hearing was held in the office of the Overseer of the Poor, behind closed doors, reporters being rigidly ecluded. The board before whom the hearing was held consisted of Overseer Elcock and Dr. Burke of the Board of Health.

It is said that fearing an outbreak, a wide table was placed between the two men so that there should be no repetition of Wednesday's knock out blows.

Both men were given an opportunity to tell their story which they evidently did in a positive way, judging from the sounds that occasionally came through the crack of the closed doors.

It is understood that the two departmens desire, if possible to avoid, any court procedure and that Chief Burrell was called in for his advice. Just what the outcome of the hearing was has not as yet been given out, but it is understood that the two men refused to kiss and make up. It is probable however that hereafter there will be a full understanding that one department shall not use the sleighs or other paraphenalia of the other department, which seems to have been the cause of all the trouble.

This noon it was given out at City Hall that at the hearing both men were given an opportunity to state their case, after which Vaughn agreed to withdraw his complaint against Flanagan for assault and then both men acknowledge satisfaction and shaking hands got into a sleigh together and drove to the City Stables.

A Little Something For the Waiter.

"The biggest tip I ever saw given a waiter in my life was bestowed by the late John W. Gates in Paris," said a man who is accustomed to be generous in that line himself. "Gates entertained a party of about a dozen of us at dinner at the Ritz hotel and had the little private dining room on the right as you go toward the restaurant. Before the meal was finished Gates called for Olivier, the head waiter. John never did succeed in getting that man's name right.

"'Oliver,' he said, 'here's a little something for you,' and he handed him a 1,000 franc note ($200). I told Gates he was foolish and that he was spoiling things for the rest of us, but he guessed he knew what he was doing."—New York Sun.

The Duke's Advice.

The great Duke of Wellington had an unfortunate experience at Oxford. He pronounced Jacobus with the second syllable "short" and was duly admonished. Shortly after the word Carolus came in his speeeh, and, profiting, as he thought, by experience, he made the second syllable long, only to be pulled up again. Possibly he reflected that there are worse terrors than those of the battlefield. This, at least, was his advice to an aspiring orator: "Say what you have to say, don't quote Latin and sit down."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An Exchange

What Came of a Man's Unwittingly Appropriating Another's Coat

By WALTER B. STURGIS

I never put on a winter overcoat until the days begin to lengthen and the cold begins to strengthen. One morning about the 1st of January, when the thermometer had dropped to zero, I took out my heaviest outdoor garment and took it to the window to see if the moths had been using it. It did not look familiar to me. I get all my clothes at Darby's, so I looked at once at the tailor's mark under the collar and saw the name of a London maker. I was astonished. The coat was not mine and never had been mine. The most natural and probable explanation was that the last time I had worn a heavy coat the season before I had gone into a restaurant or hotel and hung it up. On going out I had taken another man's coat, leaving him mine.

Thrusting my hand into the pocket, I took out an unsealed envelope with a photographer's printed name and address on it. Within was the likeness of a girl, about which was folded a bit of paper on which was written:

My Dear—I send the picture. Some say it is very good of me; others don't like it. I'm curious to hear what you have to say about it. Your loving MOLLY.

Monday evening.

There was no address on the envelope, and I inferred that either it had not been sent through the mail or, if it had, it had been inclosed in another envelope. The only clew I had to the owner was the name of a tailor in London. I being in America and there not being much likelihood that the maker could tell for whom the coat had been built, I did not think it worth while to try to recover my property or return what I had taken.

When I first looked at Molly's photograph I was not especially attracted by it. But I am free to confess that the faces which have most impressed me have at first made little or no impression on me. Possibly in this case I was later influenced by something I noticed written on the back of the photograph in pencil and which escaped my observation when I first discovered it. The words were, "A peach!"

However, I had changed from indifference to interest in the face photographed before seeing this encomium, which I inferred had been written by the recipient. It was rather a confirmation of my later impression than a creator of it. Being a bachelor and fancy free, together with a bit of romance in my nature, I confess I was on the lookout for a mate. Indeed, it is a question with me if both men and women, unmarried, are not, though unconsciously, always in their hearts expecting the appearance of a life companion.

At any rate, I put Molly's photograph on my dresser and became very fond of her. It grew upon me that she was one to trust—one who, in case of need, would step to the front, a tower of strength. One evening when I came to my room Molly had disappeared from my dresser. I was surprised at the disappointment I suffered at not seeing her. I moved the dresser to see if the photograph had not fallen and found it on the floor. The incident, though trifling, suggested to me that if the photograph had become so necessary to my comfort, what would the original be.

One evening I went to a function—a bridge party, if I remember correctly—and on leaving stood waiting in the hall, hat in hand and overcoat on, for my sister, who was putting on her wraps above. On changing the direction of my eyes whom should they hit upon but Molly. She was standing in a doorway looking at me curiously, but the moment I fixed my gaze upon her she turned away and passed out of sight.

I did not leave the house till I had learned her address.

Why had she looked at me, whom she had doubtless not seen before, with more than the interest she would take in a stranger? I was puzzled for a reason. I was interested in mental telepathy, believing that there is something in it, and wondered if the interest that had developed in me for her could have communicated itself to her through some mental process not yet laid bare to us.

I had no trouble in making Molly's acquaintance and lost no time in doing so. My sister Ruth managed it for me, first laying a plan for her own acquaintance with Molly, then contriving a meeting between Molly and myself. Molly said she would be pleased to meet Ruth's brother and would like to have her own brother meet Ruth. Of course I cautioned Ruth to say nothing about the photograph which she had seen often on my dresser. I proposed to announce my acquirement of it in my own good time.

There was no reason for me to suppose when I was presented to Molly that she had any knowledge of me whatever except having seen me for a moment in the hall after the bridge party. Indeed, she gave no evidence of remembering having seen me then. I was certainly much more pleased with her than with her photograph and struck with the advantage or disadvantage a living person has over his or her likeness. Character may be stamped on a photographed face, but other attributes are lacking. Molly, for instance, had an extremely pleasant voice, an honest smile, and when her face lighted she was a very different person from when her face was at rest. While she was sedate rather than frivolous, at times she was merry.

From the moment I saw Molly in the flesh I resolved to win her if possible, and I wished to withhold any mention of having fallen into possession of her picture and keeping it on my dresser, falling gradually in love with merely her image, till my proposal, when I intended to make the most of it. Molly accepted my attention. But most girls, I believe, like to keep a suitor in doubt, which they can do without the slightest trouble. All they have to do is to frown occasionally or excuse themselves when he calls on the plea of indisposition and the bottom of his universe drops out immediately. Molly played these little games on me so often that I was discouraged. I thought that if I could only reach a point where I could ring in my long adoration of her photograph her heart would warm toward me at once.

Meanwhile another little romance that I cannot develop here was going on between my sister Ruth and Molly's brother. Molly had noticed it and spoke to me about it, but I was so interested in my own affair that I had no thought for any others. I didn't happen to meet Molly's brother, but I was not slow in making up my mind that he was the person to whom she had given the photograph. A brother would not be likely to write "A peach" on the back of a sister's picture, but the brother in this case might have had a friend who admired the sister.

One thing I noticed in Molly's treatment of me that I construed favorably. Whenever she would give me the cold shoulder she would follow up her act by being especially gracious. After one of these fits of graciousness I resolved to bring matters to a crisis. I did not begin with so unromantic a matter as an exchange of overcoats. I led up to the subject by telling her that I had been familiar with her lineaments before I had ever seen her. She evidently saw what was coming, not from my words, but my manner. When a man has a proposal on his mind and trying to find words in which to make it there are few girls who do not know the inevitable result. I might just as well have said nothing after making the start, and what I did say was not what I had intended to say. At any rate, I forgot to tell her that her likeness had been on my dresser for a long while before I had met her. Her reply to my proposition was startling.

"Why haven't you returned Bob's overcoat?"

I drew aside to get a better view of her expression. She was toying with some ornamental work on her skirt, her eyes cast down. Nevertheless I detected a slight quirk to the corner of her mouth.

"Wh-a-at do you mean?" I asked.

"Come; don't pretend what's not true," she replied. "You know you have had a picture of mine that didn't belong to you."

My astonishment, my curiosity, went down before the desire of my life. I told her that fate had thrown into my possession a picture which from the day I first saw it had grown upon me, had enthralled me, had been the beginning of my first and only love. Fate had thrown it in my way—

"You mean fate threw Bob's overcoat in your way, the overcoat happening to contain my photograph."

This matter of fact reception of my outburst somewhat cooled me.

"How did you know about the exchange of coats?" I asked.

"Bob had his coat taken the day I sent him my likeness. I knew the pattern of the cloth well and have been looking for it ever since. The moment I saw you at the breaking up of the bridge party, standing in the hall with Bob's coat on, I recognized it at once."

"And Bob?"

"I saw by the way you were looking at me that you had recognized me and had done so by my photograph. I inferred that you would seek me and kept my own counsel. I haven't yet told Bob or any one else that you have been wearing his coat."

I looked at her steadily for a few moments, then broke out again, but in a different vein:

"I've been nursing this matter for months, intending a pleasant surprise, and now you've taken the wind out of my sails. Ever since I met you you've known that I had been in possession of your picture. There's no use in a man trying to impress a woman by chicanery or concealment. She'll beat him every time. When I saw you look at me the evening you first saw me I fancied that some telepathic process had informed you that I and you were destined"—

"It did. I saw admiration in your glance."

"Oh, that was it! Anyway, the game has all been in your hands. I count for nothing. I am only a beggar."

She was touched by my disappointment, the abject position in which I found myself. She felt for my hand and drew closer to me. My victory came through defeat, but since I had achieved all I had set out to achieve I did not repine.

What was my gain was another's loss. The man—a chum of Bob's—who had written "A peach" on the back of Molly's photo was an aspirant for her hand when I appeared on the scene and was obliged to withdraw in my favor. Bob and Ruth are married, and Molly and I are engaged. It's all out now, and Bob and I have re-exchanged coats. As Molly's likeness grew on me before I had seen her and as she grew on me before we were engaged, she is now growing on me in our betrothal. I wonder if she will continue to grow on me after we have been married. I believe she will.

QUINCY MEN GET SECOND PLACE

Triangular Meet Between Quincy and Cambridge Teams

AT NEWTON

The members of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. track team were unable to show up to advantage in the triangular meet held in the gymnasium of the Newton Y. M. C. A., last evening between the members of the track team of that association, Cambridge Y. M. C. A. and the local association. The result was that the Quincy runners were compelled to rest satisfied with second place, which they acquired by a lead of one point over Cambridge.

The Newton boys outclassed their opponents in nearly every department and rolled up a total of 29 points, to 10 for Quincy and 9 to Cambridge. McArdle and Trask of the local team won first places in the three jumps and potato race respectively. The local boys won the relay race in the fast time of 2 minutes 17 3-4 seconds. The team was composed of Estey, Cranshaw, Chell and Trask.

The summary:

20-yard dash.—Won by Morton, Newton; second, Litchfield, Newton; third, Adams, Newton. Time 3s.

Shot-put—Won by Bills, Newton; second, Belding, Cambridge; third, Dent, Newton. Distance 38 ft. 6 1-4 in.

High jump—Won by Morton, Newton; second, Green, Cambridge; third Irving, Newton. Height 5 ft. 5 in.

Three jumps—Won by McArdle, Quincy; second, Morton, Newton third, Chamberlain, Newton. Distance 30 ft. 1-2 in.

Potato race—Won by Trask, Quincy; second Wilson, Cambridge; third, Chamberlain, Newton Time 34 4-5s.

Relay race for time—Won by Quincy (Estey, Cranshaw, Chell and Trask): time 2m 15 1-5s. Second Cambridge (Stockton, Still, Mauger and Wilson): time 2m 17 2-5s. Third Newton 2d team (White, Rogers, Litchfield and Morton); time 2m 17 3-5s.

STEAM PUMP FISHING.

It Was Rapid, but Disastrous, and France Stopped It.

One of the most singular fishing devices imaginable was discovered by accident in France. Though extremely simple, the system is revolutionary.

A pond on the farm of La Marlequette, bordered by rocky shores, was drained one year by the aid of a steam pump. Each stroke of the piston drew up twenty-five gallons of water, and the pond was emptied in a few hours, and not only was the water drawn off, but all the fishes also were transferred to a new element.

This was a revolution. The owners of ponds in the neighborhood followed suit, and the proprietor of the pump made a specialty of this sort of work. He "let" one of his pumps, modified for the purpose. The peasants of the region called it "the fish pump." Each stroke of the piston brought up torrents of water, in which were fish and crawfish, together with mud and debris.

One pond of several acres was cleared of fish at an expense of 36 francs, or $7.20. The process was ingenious, but as one cannot have his fish and eat it, too, and as such rapid consumption would have led to equally rapid extermination, the authorities stopped the practice.—Scientific American.

There is an impression among the churches that the Richeson case has seen Judas Iscariot and gone him one better.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN

What Men and Religion Campaign Hopes to Accomplish

THE PROGRAM

Greater Boston is in the midst of The Men and Religion Campaign, for which plans had been in progress for many months. The opening meetings of the campaign were held Saturday, Jan. 13, and continue through to the 21st. Not only has the program provided for large public metings in Boston, but a two-days convention, institutes, lectures, prayer services, noon day sessions, luncheons and platform meetings have been included in the daily operation of the great undertakings. Suburban Boston comes most directly in touch with the movement through the district meetings which have been held nightly, and the close of the campaign will be marked by meetings on Sunday night in each of these districts. With the passing of the numerous events scheduled for this week, Boston has had a chance to judge in a slight degree at least of the value of the movement. It has heard Fred B. Smith, "The Campaign Leader," and Charles Stelzle, the leader of the "Teams," assigned to Boston, and the other experts who now make up the working force connected with the undertaking and the comment of those interested seems to be unanimous that a success exceeding expectations has resulted.

Mr. Smith, the campaign leader, has addressed gatherings of ministers, assemblies of laymen, a great mass meeting at which 2000 men were present, a banquet at Tremont Temple with upwards of 1000 men seated at the tables, and a luncheon of the members of the Chamber of Commerce, before all of which he sounded the keynote of the Men and Religion Forward Movement by saying that the time had come when no man should apologize for presenting forcefully the question of religion. Again and again he said, I have no apology to make for appearing before you to speak of religion because it is fundamental and any man who would apologize for religion doesn't know history."

The convention, the institutes and the platform meetings have all been devoted to the educational rather than to the inspirational phases of religious work. Those who have assembled have been instructed definitely as to the methods of meetings and the exceptional need in and around Boston. These needs have been placed before the assemblies in the form of charts made to display the conditions as revealed by a Survey which was taken in December, in order that the visitors might have definite material about which to talk to Boston, as distinct from any other section of the country. These charts show among other things the relative attendance of men in the churches, the number of arrests for boys for truancy, the average wages received by women and young girls in certain occupations. In fact, some 1200 questions were submitted to the church workers of Boston, the answers to which form the basis of these charts.

With this material prominently displayed, the visiting men who are specialists in the various branches, draw conclusions and give instruction with regard to Boys' Work, Missions, Evangelism, Bible Study and Social Service. The prosecution of this program for 8 days in Boston it is believed will result more to the benefit of the churches and the communities than any other religious movement hitherto undertaken.

Previous to comnig to Boston, the experts have conducted similar campaigns in more than 20 cities in the United States and some 70 cities yet remain to be visited. Just previous the campaigns were conducted in Hartford, Worcester, Springfield and Portland. The campaign started in Minneapolis and moved down the Mississippi Valley into Texas and then jumped across into Masachusetts. The New England and two other teams which make up the corps engaged in the work wil move through the central part of the country to the Pacific Coast. Later they will go to Chicago, and the movement for the year will terminate in New York about the first of April.

Aside from the district platform meetings which carry the propaganda out into the suburbs of Boston, the Institutes are the mose important feature of the Campaign. These Institutes are very informal. The program consists simply of an informal talk by one of the 'Specialists" on his topic, whether it be Bible Study, Boys' Work, Evangelism and Community Extension, Social Service or Missions, followed by an informal discussion by the leader and delegates on church work and methods.

PARISH SUPPER UNION CHAPEL

A large number of the parishioners attended the supper in Union Chapel, Houghs Neck, Thursday evening. After the supper an entertainment took place and a most enjoyable time was had. The affair began at seven and concluded shortly after ten o'clock.

Those who assisted in serving the repast comprised Mrs. Franklin G. Saylor, Mrs. Waldo Hutchins, Mrs. Walter Lincoln, Mrs. Emma Sumner, Mrs. George Brown, Mrs. Angus A. Brown, Miss Ella Acorn and Miss Teresa Slaunwhite. The entertainment was furnished by a number of local talent. Solos were rendered by Wallace Higgins, William Acorn, and Florence Sweares, While Miss Florence Brown and Miss Ella Acorn elicited great applause with their many piano duets.

During the affair remarks were made by the pastor of the church, Rev. W. J. Sayre and the event itself was pronounced a huge success. In closing all present united in singing the "Star Spangled Banner.

"THE WAR OF THE CLASSES"

Lecture in Socialist Lyceum Course by Rev. B. F. Wilson

AN ABSTRACT

The third lecture in the lyceum course under the direction of the National Socialist Lyceum Bureau was held Thursday evening at Alpha hall. The subject of the lecture was "The war of the classes" and the speaker Rev. Benjamin F. Wilson.

There was an attendance of several hundred people at the lecture and the speaker was frequently applauded showing that his hearers were thoroughly in accord with the points brought out by the speaker. Mr. Wilson said in part:—

"Today the old order is changing and a new order is coming in. With the dawning of the new century, a new consciousness has taken possession of man, for he has learned that there are larger things ahead of the race. There is nothing wrong with the earth, but he has found there is with those in possession of it, and now realizes he must fight a battle in comparison with which that of the fathers pales into insignificance, that is the battle between capital and labor. In this realization is to be found his salvation. The speaker here showed how man began by using his hands in industry, then by using a pair of oxen, and then a team of horses to help him, and how he has now harnessed steam and electricity and made them his agents. He said that the productions of the world have thereby been so accelerated that the earth's greatest scientists have declared that in the past century more wealth has been created than in all the known centuries that preceded it. There are some things that we must all have; we must have food, clothing and shelter. Formerly we could provide these things ourselves. But during the last 25 years every branch of industry has been revolutionized until today there is the great social production by machinery, instead of the individual hand production of former years. As these specially-used machines are privately owned, the users, the working classes, must go to the owners and beg them for the opportunity to earn their bread. The machine owners all try to secure workers for the least possible wage. More than this, by refusing employment, they can withhold the very things—food, shelter and clothing—that we all need."

To enforce these generalizations, the speaker said "that a few years ago 73,000 children in New York went regularly to school without breakfast, and that the condition prevailed because the wheat market had been cornered by exploiters."

The address was closed with a glowing picture of a better day, in which the workingman will come into his own. "Formerly," said the speaker, "the slave was sold to the highest bidder. Now the job is sold to the lowest bidder. This century, however, will witness the passing for all time of the mass of men begging the few for the right to work and thereby to eat; the passing forever of woman's bondage to the greed of the taker of profits and the lust of men who fatten off their lives; and the little children will not have to work in mill and mine before they can eat their bread. This day will come only when the means of production shall be owned by all the people and operated for their benefit."

MEN'S MEETING.

On Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in the Association Hall, Mr. A. M. Bruner Railroad Evangelist from Chicago will speak at the evangelistic meeting for men. His subject will be "Startling Questions." For many years Mr. Bruner has been working for and with railroad men and is a powerful speaker to men. It is hoped that the hall will be packed.

Men who are willing to assist in the distribution of cards for this meeting can secure them at the meeting this evening.

THE NEPONSET BRIDGE BILL

How Expense of the New Structure is to be Apportioned

QUINCY'S PART

One of the important bills before the legislature in which Quincy is interested is House bill No. 120 which accompanied the petition of Representative Leslie, to provide for the construction of a new bridge over the Neponset river to replace the present bridge. The bill provides that a commission shall forthwith construct a new bridge near the site of the present bridge with necessary approaches, etc.

The commission to whom the construction of the bridge is delegated shall consist of one member to be named by the Mayor of Boston, one member to be named by the Mayor of Quincy and the third member to be named jointly by the said Mayors. In the event of their failing to agree the third member shall be named by the Governor. This commission shall receive such compensation as the Mayors may agree upon.

The bill also provides that the bridge shall be constructed as per plans submitted by the Metropolitan Park Commissioners and shall provide for a double track for the street railway. It shall not be less than sixty feet in width and with a draw having a clear opening of not less than fifty feet.

It also provides that the street railway may construct a temporary bridge with single track location while the new bridge is under construction.

The cost of the bridge shall not exceed $250.000 to be paid for as follows:

City of Boston fifty percent; City of Quincy, fifteen per cent; County of Norfolk ten percent Street Railway, ten per cent, but not exceeding $25,000 and the cities and towns constituting the Metropolitan district ten per cent. The amount from the cities and towns in the Metropolitan district shall be in the same proportions as are now assessed for other Metropolitan purposes.

The cities and towns are also permitted by the act to borrow money outside of the debt limit for the purpose of the bridge.

After completion the care of the bridge shall be vested in a commission consisting of the Mayors of the City of Boston and the City of Quincy, for the time being. The funds for the policeing, lighting and maintenance of the bridge shall be paid by the parties named who are to bear the cost of the original construction of the bridge, in their proportion.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

One of the daintiest birthday parties of the season was tendered Emma May Savoie on her eleventh birthday anniversary Wednesday evening at her home 35 Penn street, where a number of little friends gathered. Each helped to entertain which made the evening a very enjoyable one. Emma May was the recipient of many beautiful and useful presents among them a magnificent birthday cake from the Schraut bakery. A variety of good things to eat were served.

The matrons were Misses Agnes Reardon, Bessie Bigelow, Elizabeth McKee and Ruth Kelly. The games were in charge of John Reardon.

Among those present were: Gladys Kelley, Gertrude McGran, Claire Flohock, Amelia Ferratzi, Anna Byron, Margaret McKee, Marion Hollis, Catherine Osborne, Beatrice Brown, Lillian Coots, Mabel Brown, Marie Moore, Mildred Brown, Raymond McCabe, Eugene Kelley, Mario Ferratzi, Joseph Tite, William Malnati, George Raymond, James Brown, Clarence Watson, Eddie Bryon, George Bryon, John Moore, Fredie Steinbrenner, Willie Kelly and Master McGran.

THE WORK OF EVANGELISM

Address of W. E. Biederwolf at Men and Religion Meeting

BIBLE STUDY TONIGHT

There were men present last evening at the meeting in the interest of evangelism from nearly every part of the Quincy District in the Men and Religion Movement. While it is undoubtdly true that the people in the East do not take up a new plan as readily as do the people who live in the West still when they do once get interested in a movement they stay by it till the last gun is fired.

The meeting last evening was presided over by the Rev. Wesley Wiggin of the Wollaston Methodist Episcopal church. The largest audience of the week was present, there being nearly 100 men present.

W. E. Biederwolf is a giant when one comes to consider the subject that was discussed at this meeting. For many years he was a successful pastor. He then began the work of an evangelist and has done a mighty work in this field. From having had the experience in both fields he is particularly fitted to advise others of the way the work: can best be done.

He said there were four reasons why we are not winning more men to Christ than we are.

In the first place there are three kinds of evangelism. First there is professional evangelism, as it is called. But he said there were no more professional evangelist than were there professional pastors. There were vocational evangelists. This method was much criticised by reason of the many unwise men who are going up and down the land. He sympathised with this feeling. But in spite of this criticism the greatest gains to the churches have come when there has been the labor of the professional evangelist in the churches reporting. Mr. Biederwolf illustrated from the reports sent in by the churches in Greater Boston. The years when there had been large accessions to the churches had been at these times. Surely whatever brought about such a result was a good thing. The coming of the evan-

HAD REVOLVER WAS FINED $50

Word was received by the poilce Thursday night requesting them to look out for a young man who had stolen a horse in Roxbury and was last seen going toward Quincy. The officers on the different beats were notified and about 12.30 today Officer Duffy held up a man at Atlantic who answered the description of the party wanted. He proved to be the right man and was sent to the police station. He was somewhat under the influence of liquor and in his pocket was a loaded revolver.

He was arraigned in court on three complaints charging him with larceny of a horse of Mrs. Margaret A. Kelly of Roxbury, for drunkenness and for carrying a revolver without a permit. Mrs. Kelly identified the horse as belonging to her and the young man who gave his name as James O'Brien admitted that it was her horse. He said that he had done some work for the woman and that she had not paid him so he took the horse. He was fined $50 for carrying the revolver and placed on probation for the larceny of the horse and the complaint for drunkenness was placed on file.

FALLS ON ICE BREAKS WRIST

William J. Cocoran a well-known West Quincy busines man fell on the ice on Bates avenue Thursday afternoon. When he fell his right arm was doubled beneath him and his wrist was fractured.

TODAY'S COURT.

James O'Brien was fined $50 for carrying a revolver without a permit at Quincy. A case against him for larceny was placed on probation.

Michael Downey was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Maurice Bronin, an old soldier, without home or friends, at his own request was sent to the state farm.

SOCIAL SET AT WAR OVER CAT

Cohasset Society Woman Accused of Larceny of Cat

COURT TO DECIDE

A case that seems likely to rent asunder the sacredness of Cohasset's social set, is being heard today before Judge Avery in the district court. It is all about an angora cat. Chief Bates has spent many sleepless nights for the past few weeks trying to settle the trouble without the necessity of bringing the parties at interest into court and to leave the social set intact. But all to no avail and now His Honor Judge Avery is trying to dertermine the ownership of puss.

According to Chief Bates Mrs. Mary Curtis had a pet angora cat which suddenly, one day last September, failed to return at night for its supper and any amount of calling and coaxing was of little avail for the cat did not come back.

Shortely afterward Mrs. Curtis saw a cat at the home of Mrs. Mabel Barnes, and immediately made up her mind that it was her pet.

There upon she made a social call upon Mrs. Barnes and incidentally asked for the cat. Mrs. Barnes brought the cat forward in her arms. Mrs. Curtis made a grab for it but failed to connect A demand was made to immediately give up the cat which was indignatly refused by Mrs. Barnes.

Then it was that Chief Bates began to figure in the case. He saw Mrs. Barnes who said that the cat belonged to her. That it had come to her last March and that she had it ever since. Chief Bates tried to have the matter settled peacefully but without avail. Then a warrant was sworn out against Mrs. Barnes and she was arraigned in court this morning.

Through her counsel, Elmer Curtise, Mrs. Barnes pleaded not guilty. Then Mrs. Curtis, who was represented by Thomas M. Buttimer called a large array of witnesses and the case went on trial at 10 o'clock. At 1 o'clock the defense had just begun to put in its testimony and as the end seemed far off Judge Avery said that the court would take a recess until 2 o'clock. As there are fully as many witnesses for the fair defendant as for the plaintiff it will be late before it will be known whether, in the mind of Judge Avery, Mrs. Barnes is guilty or not.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The weather man does not seem to be able to hold down the lid.

Now that J. P. Morgan is on his way to Egypt, we wish he would attend to the long postponed duty of removing one or two of the pyramids to Coney Island.

There is a general agreement in Congress that a determined and patriotic resistance must be made to the encroachments of the economy power.

Mr. Taft says nothing but death can keep him out of the fight now, but if he got around to the 18th hole of the golf links with one up and one to play the fight might have to wait.

Murderer Richeson wants to be commuted so as to spend his life in jail. All our efforts, however, to make jails really popular will be thrown away if the prisoners have to associate with the likes of him.

They have been getting temperatures of 42 below up in Canada, but in that climate this is merely a reminder to cover up the garden vegetables before the really heavy frosts come along.

There is a general feeling that if the Monetary Commission law goes through, the new association should meet in Walla Walla, Wash., or Key West, Fla., or some place a good long distance from Wall street.

Supervision of loan agencies is a good thing and according to an act of the Legislature passed in 1911 all persons engaged in the business of making small loans must be licensed. Copies of the laws can be obtained of E. Gerry Brown, Supervisor of Loan Agencies, also a license to conduct such a business. The law should prove of great benefit to those having to borrow money as it is intended to protect them from loan sharks, so called.

DOES THE CLIMATE CHANGE?

The opinion is frequently expressed in nearly every section of the United States, that the climate is undergoing some fundamental change, particularly that the winters are growing milder.

In the snow belt, the older people are always saying that the deep snows of their childhood never come now-a-days. Some historic records are appealed to, as that Chesapeake Bay was frozen over below the mouth of the Potomac in the winter of 1779—80, and that Long Island Sound was frozen over in that winter, also in 1740—41.

Still one must remember that distance not merely lends enchantment, but magnitude. The writer well recalls visiting some years ago the place where he attended his first circus. His memory had recalled some vast ring where a great and gorgeous pageantry was enacted. Great was his disappointment when once more he gazed upon the scene of his former magnificence, for the grassy remnants of the little ring looked tiny enough to manhood's eyes. So with the remembered snow-drifts of the old time Northern winter.

That this general tendency of human nature applies to weather observation is suggested by the fact that recently in England it has been asserted with much emphasis that the climate of that country has become much milder in winter. The subject was taken up in a recent paper read before the British Scientific Association, in which a leading scientist seemed to disprove the claim.

A part of his argument was based on a very carefully written weather record prepared away back in the year 1341 by the Rev. William Merle of Lancashire. This showed a phenomenally warm winter, with vegetables blossoming in the gardens, indicating that 600 years ago the sun used to shine and the rain and snow to fall about as they do to-day.

A compilation of the temperature records made by the Weather bureau for ten American cities from 1854 to 1879, and from 1879 to 1904 was made not long ago. The earlier quarter of a century differed from the latter by only a trifling fraction. As said wise old Solomon, "There is nothing new under the sun."

HOME WEDDING AT WOLLASTON

Sally T. Baker Becomes Bride of Arnold Hopkins

RECEPTION FOLLOWS

A very pretty home wedding took place in Wollaston, last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Smith Baker of Farrington street, when their daughter Sally Thompson became the bride of Mr. Arnold Hopkins. Rev. Frank Rideout of Newton, a personal friend of the groom officiating and the ring service was used.

The reception which followed the ceremony was largely attended and included a hundred relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins, from all parts of Quincy, Plymouth, Whitman, Brockton, Stoneham, Dorchester and Tampa, Florida who testified by their presence the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white satin messaline with over drapery of embroidered chiffon trimmed with narrow fringe—designed and made by a dear friend of the bride's, Mrs. Knowles of Everett. The bridal veil was held by small pink rose buds and maiden hair fern and she carried a large bouquet of lilies of the valley and made a charming picture standing beneath an arch of greenery from which a white dove was suspended by white ribbon.

The young couple were assisted in receiving by the bride's parents The ushers were Dr. C. Roy Given of Somerville and Harry Otis Baker of Boston, cousin of the bride.

Ices and cake were served by Mrs. Elisha D. Atkins and Mrs. Etta Holmes, who were assisted by Miss Helen Atkins, a cousin of the groom, Miss Bertha Given and Miss Marrion Hicks, class mates of the bride, and Miss Flora Nash, Harold Nash and Bert Ransom, cousins of the bride, and Harry Hopkins of Florida, brother of the groom.

Miss Olive Baker of Kingston, arranged the many and beautiful gifts which included cut glass, silver, hand painted china and table linen, etc., prominent among which was a large oil painting from the Norfolk Whist club of which they are members. The guests departed at a late hour after vainly seeking the happy couple who had left for parts unknown. The next day they sailed for Yarmouth, New Brunswick, where they will spend three weeks at Halifax and Port Medway where the groom formerly lived. On the morning they sailed, a party of friends went aboard to see them off and not only left congratulations and good wishes but confetti in such an abundance that it made known to all that they were bride and groom much to the chagrin of Mr. Hopkins.

The bride is a graduate of Quincy High 1910, a member of the Congregational church and choir club; the groom is employed by the Quincy Electric Light Company and is a member of the Squantum Yacht club. After Feb. 15 they will be at home to their many friends at 92 Farrington street, Wollaston.

VISITORS EXAMINATIONS.

A competitive examination will be held Feb. 16, to fill positions as visitors in the departments of the Commonwealth and the city of Boston. Applicants will be allowed to elect for examination any one of the following kinds of visiting, and, if time allows, may also select one additional subject:—

(A) Admission of children to support; (B) Babies; (C) Children under self-supporting age, not including babies; (D) Older girls; (E) Older boys; (F) Needy families; (G) Settlement and support.

The salaries of these positions range from $50 per month upwards. Applicants for these positions will be examined in letterwriting, handwriting, arithmetic, verbal orders, fitness and experience, as well as in the special subjects selected. Only residents of Massachusetts for the past year, have a right to apply. Persons desiring to take this examination may secure application blanks by applying in person or by letter at the office of the Civil Service Commission, Room 152, State House, Boston.

Q—What is meant by Divine nature, angelic nature, human nature, etc.? What is the meaning of the word nature in these connections? (A. P. N.)

Answer.—The word "nature" in its true sense, as applied to creatures, or beings, signifies the kind of organism and sphere of existence in which they live and move and have their being. Thus when human nature is referred to, it signifies the conditions of existence relating to the human race. The angelic nature is in a higher and different sphere of existence than that of humanity. (Psalm viii.) As there is a vast difference between the conditions of existence of a fish and a bird, so we may reasonably suppose there is just as wide a difference between the human and angelic. The Divine nature is the highest of all natures, and is different from all others in this regard—it possesses inherent life and is, therefore, immortal. Whereas all other natures possess life that is not inherent, but is sustained by partaking of the life-giving elements peculiar to the different natures. A blending of natures would be a hybrid thing—a monstrosity. The Lord Jesus experienced two changes of nature,—from spiritual to human (Hebrews ii, 16, 17) and then from human to Divine. It is promised in the Scriptures that the faithful followers of Christ shall also experience a change of nature, and will "become partakers of the Divine nature"—the nature of God.—IIPeter i, 4.

SOUTH CHURCH MEN'S CLUB.

The meeting of the South parish Men's club held in the chapel, Wednesday evening was well attended and enthusiastic. At 7.45 o'clock a bountiful and appetizing supper was served under the auspices of the executive committee. After some well rendered piano selections by Leroy L. Day, the meeting was called to order by Mr. R. L. Wiggin, vice president and chairman of the executive committee. It was the annual election and the evening was occupied with the transaction of business. The report of the treasurer was read and accepted, after which the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year.

Pres.—Foster F. Tupper.
Vice Pres.—George W. Stevens.
Second Vice Pres.—B. H. Woodsum, Jr.
Sec.—Frank C. Allen.
Treas.—Robert E. Whitman.
Executive committee—H. C. Thayer, R. L. Wiggin, H. A. Simonds, M. C. Gillette, E. S. Loring, O. M. Rogers and W. A. Torrey

A vote of thanks was tendered the retiring officers by the club and the following members offered remarks. Harry C. Thayer related his experiences in 'hunting for speakers." Dr. J. W. Watson was very entertaining and witty in his remarks on "The laymen in church work." Mr. R. E. Whitman was inspiring in outlining the work which the club ought to do and Benjamin H. Woodsum dwelt briefly on "The men's club in church work."

The origin of the chapel fund was explained by Mr. M. C. Gillette and some suggestions made as to the needed alterations. Interesting remarks were listened to from Mr. W. A. Torrey, the club's first president and the new president, Mr. F. F. Tupper. Mr. O. M. Rogers explained some little understood points in "a deacon's point of view" and the pastor, Rev. Tyler E. Gale, spoke very optimistically concerning "The hopes of 1912."

It was the sense of the meeting that immediate action be taken by the club in relation to co-operating with the other church organizations in taking steps to enlarge and renovate the present chapel so as to make it a larger and more up-to-date annex to the church. To this end the following committee was appointed to confer with committees from the church and the guild; R. E. Whitman, F. F. Tupper, O. M. Rogers, Dr. J. W. Watson and M. C. Gillette.

Beginning next Sunday there will be a Bible class, meeting each Sabbath and made up of members of the club and other gentlemen who may wish to join. The meeting was adjourned after tendering a vote of thanks to the waiters and the ladies of the guild, who assisted in making the supper a success.

Providence, Jan. 19.—A bill prohibiting "third degree" methods in obtaining confessions from persons under arrest was introduced in the senate by Senator Munroe of Providence.

MORSE GIVEN HIS FREEDOM

Civil Rights of Banker, However, Are Not Restored

PARDON IS GRANTED BY TAFT

Based on Surgeon General's Report That Prisoner Could Not Live Another Month In Confinement, and Not Much Longer Even at Liberty—Wife Has Been Persistent and Hard Worker In His Behalf

Washington, Jan. 19.—President Taft has commuted, to expire at once, the sentence of Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, serving a fifteen-year sentence in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. The commutation was granted because of Morse's physical condition and on the recommendation of Attorney General Wickersham and Surgeon General Torney of the army.

The commutation of sentence gives Morse his complete freedom but does not restore his civil rights. According to the surgeon general's report to the president, Morse could not live one month longer in confinement, and even at liberty probably would not live six months.

Mrs. Morse, who arrived here yesterday from New York, was informed last night of the president's clemency toward her husband.

She left last night for Atlanta to join her husband. While here she was the guest of friends and refused to be interviewed. As she boarded the train she was radiant, but she still declined to discuss President Taft's action.

Immediately after the president's action, the attorney general telegraphed to Warden Moyer of the Atlanta penitentiary, who was technically in charge of Morse, although he had been removed to the Fort McPherson hospital, to release the prisoner.

The army surgeons at Fort McPherson were similarly instructed. Morse will be freed by the telegraphic orders, it being unnecessary for the authorities at Atlanta to await the formal warrant of commutation, which will be sent by mail.

Efforts made for a complete pardon were unavailing and under the law Morse could not be paroled until he had served five years. Under the commutation he will be allowed to leave the army hospital at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta, at once.

Recent efforts in his behalf showed that his friends wished to take him to Carlsbad for treatment, and it is deemed probable here that he will be taken abroad at once.

The commutation of Morse's sentence was the end of months of unremitting effort by Mrs. Morse and the banker's friends. Almost since the day the doors of his cell in Atlanta closed upon him Mrs. Morse and influential persons have besieged the department of justice and through it the White House for some mitigation of the sentence.

Mrs. Morse herself conducted a canvass among senators and members of the house of representatives and obtained the signatures of scores of prominent men to a petition she circulated in her husband's behalf.

Rejoicing In Bath

Bath, Me., Jan. 19.—The news of Charles W. Morse's pardon spread quickly last evening and hundreds of people soon gathered in Sagadahoc square. The Bath band, which was playing for a local masquerade skating party, was pressed into service and a huge bonfire lighted in the square.

The band played, the crowd cheered and the climax was reached when the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," the crowd singing and men tossing their hats in the air and giving vent to their pleasure in various ways.

Bath is a city of gladness. Everywhere the good news is the subject of conversation, for Bath has stood loyally by Morse through his troubles.

Hub Longshoremen Begin Third Week of Contest With Employers

Boston, Jan. 19.—The third week of the Boston longshoremen began last night at midnight, with both sides confident and determined to continue the contest to a finish.

The steamship agents profess satisfaction with the character and manner of work being done by the strike-breakers. The longshoremen claim that the strike-breakers are incapable of doing the work formerly done by them in five times the time they did it, and accomplish it with much damage to the cargo and considerable personal injury to themselves.

At the meeting of the Longshoremen's Trade Council last night the delegates representing the four longshoremen's organizations, whose 2500 members are on strike, unanimously voted to continue.

900,000 INVOLVED IN WAGE DISPUTE

Majority of British Miners Vote In Favor of a Strike

London, Jan. 19.—The recent ballot taken by the coal miners of Great Britain, the result of which has just been officially declared, was overwhelmingly in favor of a strike for a fixed minimum wage. The actual figures were: For a strike, 445,801; against, 115,921.

Notices to quit work will doubtless promptly be handed in by the miners and this will bring about a national stoppage of coal mining on March 1.

The intervening weeks, however, give plenty of time for negotiations between the employers and the workers and efforts at mediation may be expected to avert what would otherwise prove a national calamity. A strike would involve 900,000 miners.

SILENT ON WATTERSON

Wilson Does Not Reply to Attack of "Nice Old Gentleman"

Detroit, Jan. 19.—Governor Wilson of New Jersey was besieged by newspaper men, who begged him to make some sort of an answer to Henry Watterson's attack upon him for cutting loose from Harper's Weekly and George Harvey, but he steadfastly declined.

"Mr. Watterson is a nice old gentleman, but I have no reply to make to him, not just now," was the most that could be gotten out of him. He intimated, however, that he had read the Watterson statement very thoroughly, and that when he had considered the situation from every angle he might issue a prepared statement in reply.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

"THE COUNTRY BOY."

The theatre goers of New England are indeed fortunate in having presented to them Edgar Selwyn's great comedy success "The Country Boy," now playing at the Park Theatre, Boston, to crowded houses nightly and the Boston critics are unanimous in their aproval of it. Its success is doubtless due to its realism as it is a picture faithfully drawn by a man who knows his subject. Broadway, The Gay White Way is presented as it really is, not as it is imagined. To those acquainted and those unacquainted with New York life, "The Country Boy" should prove an interesting study should furnish an appeal of the most vital kind; it presents all of the distinctive types of Broadway habitues and of the Bohemian atmosphere, the journalist, the theatre ticket speculator, the man-about-town, the traveling salesman, the prima donna, the typical city girl, the boarding-house keeper, and in pleasing contrast; the country gentleman, the country girl and the charming speciman of motherhood which the country boy's mother presents.

It is the kind of a play the business man enjoys, full of the keenest humor and with a well-sustained interest. It is the story of so many men who have gone from the shelter of home full of confidence and ambition to wrestle with fate for the fame and fortune which they feel sure awaits them. To those who have succeeded in the struggle "The Country Boy" brings back only memories without bitterness, but to those who have not done so well the play is like a voice from the past pointing out the place where the mistake was made.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

Monday, Miss Viola Allen, one of the foremost actresses of the American stage, will begin a limited engagement at the Plymouth Theatre Boston. Miss Allen, who returns to Boston, after an absence of several seasons, will appear in a new comedy drama of today entitled "The Herfords." It was written especially for her by Miss Rachel Crothers, authoress of the "Three of Us" and "A Man's World." The play, which is a woman's play, is said to be the strongest yet written by this eminent woman playwright. It deals with the story of a sculptor and his sculptress wife. The latter in her anxiety to outdistance her husband in her art's achievement has carelessly neglected her little daughter. It is around this point that Miss Crothers has constructed a powerful play. Aside from its interest as the latest dramatic work from the pen of Miss Crothers, "The Herfords" is interesting because of the fact that it will be the first American play by an American author that Miss Allen has appeared in since her first stellar triumph in "The Christian." It is also the first play that this popular actress, frequently referred to as "a woman's woman," has had that was written by a woman.

Liebler & Company, with whom Miss Allen has been closely allied for a number of years, have provided their star with one of the most notable casts of the year. Charles Waldron, who will appear as the leading man, is well remembered for his brilliant work in "The Fourth Estate;" George Fawcett and Grace Elliston both of whom have headed companies of their own within the past few seasons, John Westley, who has been featured in the leading roles of "The Upstart" and "The Family," Jessie Izett, who was for a number of years, leading lady for Arnold Daly and Maude Burns.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Charles Kellogg, the great California naturalist and the only living man who can actually sing bird songs will be one of the principal novelties of a splendid all-star vaudeville bill announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre next week. Mr. Kellogg is a genuine child of nature, that is, he only ventures out of his native haunts in the heart of the Californja Sierras for a period of about three months each year. The rest of the time is spent in the vast solitutes on the Pacific slope, living among the wild creatures that he loves so much. As far as wild animals are concerned, Mr. Kellogg knows no fear. He has hobnobbed with grizzly bears and held converse with rattlesnakes, for according to his statements, if one goes to dumb creatures with nothing but love in his heart, the wild beast loses all fear or desire to harm one and may be closely approached without the slighest danger. Mr. Kellogg will present a number of remarkable features original with himself, including his wonderful "Dancing Flame," and the Digger Indian Death Tie. This remarkable man will be only one feature of an extraordinary show. Charles E. Evans & Co., will be seen for the first time in a screamingly funny farce, "It's Up To You, William;" Will Dillon, the author of a thousand songs, returns after a long absence; Grace Hazard will appear in her musical oddity, "Five Feet of Comic Opera;" the Great Golden Troupe will be seen in Russian dances; Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Connolly have a new sketch entitled "Sweethearts;" and several other features, as yet unannounced, will also be presented.

BOSTON THEATRE.

Charlotte Walker and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" are names to conjure with. Presented four weeks ago at the Boston Theatre, both star and play won such instant favor with theatre goers that the big theatre has been packed nightly since then, to see Eugene Walter's visualization of the delightful mountain folk who were first introduced to lovers of good literature by John Fox, Jr. in the pages of his widely read and charming book. Everyone who has seen Miss Walker's portrayal of "June" admits that she possesses all the qualities necessary to the realism and naturalness of one of the most interesting book characters ever put upon the stage. Blood and bone of the southland Charlotte Walker is the embodiment of Mr. Fox's book character. Everybody leaves the Boston playhouse feeling that they have enjoyed a thorough treat and they are also satisfied with the supporting company, a most excellent one in every respect, as well as the magnificent stage equipment of scenery and electric effects with which Klaw & Erlanger have rendered Eugene Walter's play all the more vivid in beauty of locale and action. In the scenes of each of the four acts, there is range and variety; graceful lightness; delicacy and fancy; tenderness and sweetness; the charm of happy invention and the splendor of glorious creation. It is a production that pleases every theatre goers.

JOHN DREW AT HOLLIS.

John Drew will be seen for the last week of his Boston engagement at the Hollis Street Theatre Monday night in "A Single Man," the clever new comedy by Hubert Henry Davies, the English playwright so well known for his "The Mollosc" and "Cousin Kate." In the role of Robin Worthington, author, recluse, dreamer, the man who lives with his books and his dreams John Drew encounters two experiences in juxtaposition. Spring and the arrival of his brother with an adoring wife and an adoring baby. Result, Robin resolves to forsake bachelor ways and to marry. But, inexperience in affairs matrimonial, he picks out the wrong girl, a naive, hoydenish little thing quite overlooking his pretty and attractive secretary, who has unobstrusively made her way into his heart and has been indispensable to his work. Robin and Maggie are engaged for three weeks during which time there is an awakening all around. Robin trying to keep up with the antics of a younger generation, Maggie trying to adapt herself to his more serious ways, the little secretary trying to hide her breaking heart, and Louise Parker, who has paid the Worthingtons a visit with the distinct intention of annexing Robin for herself making a try at him in a most brazen manner. Robin and Maggie realize the truth in time. Robin finds out that he loves his little secretary who loves him, Maggie realizes that she can't be staid and serious and that Robin, although charming, is not the mate for a gay, pleasure-loving girl; Louise finds out that a demure secretary can foil a designing spinster and the curtain drops on peace and happiness at last.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Middleman," one of the most popular of modern dramas, will be given one week only at the Castle Square, beginning on Monday. It was first played here by the famous English actor, E. S. Willard, and it has ever since retained the approval of the public because of its strong dramatic force, and the great importance of its title character. This role of Cyrus Blenkarn will be played by Mr. Craig, and he has promised to make it one of his finest interpretations of character. It is now several seasons since "The Middleman" was last played at the Castle Square, and it will therefore appeal to many theatre-goers as something both old and new. Its prevailing quality is one of human sympathy and moral influence, and Cyrus Blenkarn, as played by Mr Craig, will represent honor, manliness, generosity, devotion to duty and fidelity. The character is one of the strongest ever seen on the modern stage, and filled with a great variety of human emotions, it always attracts both the attention and the approval of an audience.

The cast of the Castle Square revival of "The Middleman" is a long one, and it will include, in addition to Mr. Craig, the entire list of Castle Square players. It will be given for positively only one week.

Monday, Jan. 29, "The Product of the Mill," the second of the John Craig Harvard-Radcliffe prize plays, will be given at the Castle Square for the first time on any stage.

YAWL SEA BIRD.

The little auxiliary yawl Sea Bird that made the voyage from Providence, R. I. to Rome, Italy, last summer will be on exhibition at Boston Motor Boat Show, fitted and rigged just as she was when she made the remarkable passage. Thomas Fleming Day, her owner and skipper has loaned the boat for exhibition and will during the show deliver an illustrated lecture describing the trip. Sea Bird is 25 feet over all, 19 water line, and carries 400 square feet of sale. She is equipped with a 3 H. P. Knox engine.

Sea Bird for so small a craft has a remarkable record, having during an existence of nine years been sailed over 30,000 miles She was the first American yacht to be reported by wireless, passing Nantucket Light Ship the day after the Marconi system was installed, and is the first American ship to ascend the River Tiber and enter the Port of Rome.

Sea Bird was 32 days making the passage from Providence to Gibraltar, a distance of 3260 miles. Her longest day's run was 183 sea miles or 214 statute miles, a record distance for so small a craft.

LEAP YEAR PARTY.

A leap year party of a most enjoyable nature was held in Colonial Hall, Thursday evening by members of the Goddard club, an organization of young men, all well known in local circles.

Dance orders, in the form of hearts and darts predominateed, and two numbers on the program were devoted to the ladies, who were allowed to perform the duties incumbent upon a gentleman at a dance.

Nothing startling resulted in the line of proposals, yet the evening was happily spent. Provosts' orchestra furnished music for the occasion and dancing was in order from eight o'clock until shortly before midnight. Frappe was served during the evening.

SURROUNDED BY POLICE

Every Effort to Prevent Attempt to Kill Governor Foss

Boston, Jan. 19.—Never in the history of Massachusetts has the chief executive of the state been more closely guarded than has Governor Foss since the rumor of a possible attempt upon his life by members of the Black Hand society.

Upon the receipt of secret information to the effect that two desperate members of the Black Hand society were on their way from New York, and that there was a possibility of an attack upon the governor, both the state and municipal police have been at work on the case.

Yesterday morning the governor was met at his home by four state inspectors who escorted the governor to his office. Throughout the day these officers remained either in the outside chamber or at the office door, allowing no person to enter until he first had stated his business.

At the conclusion of the day's work the governor was escorted to his home. An extra number of patrolmen was detailed to that vicinity throughout the day and last night.

PHELPS IS AGAIN IN DEATH HOUSE

He Learns That Governor's Council Refuses Commutation

Boston, Jan. 19.—Silas N. Phelps, the Monroe Bridge murderer, has been returned to the death house in Charlestown state prison. He was taken from the death house Jan. 6, when the 1911 executive council granted him a respite to Jan. 20, and was put in a cell in the Cherry Hill section of the prison.

Phelps was visibly disappointed when he was removed from the fine, airy quarters provided for life prisoners, to the death chamber, and informed of the failure of the governor's council to act favorably upon the commutation of his sentence.

Phelps' respite from execution will expire at midnight Saturday. Legally he may be executed any time during the week following that hour during the periods between midnight and dawn. But executions never take place Sunday mornings at Charlestown prison, so Phelps will not go to the chair before Monday.

THE INLAND WATERWAY.

It is now possible for a man, in pursuit of either health, pleasure, or business, to board a motor yacht in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or Washington, and, leaving the ice and snow of northern latitudes, to travel through inland waters all the way, with the exception of 160 nautical miles, to the orange groves and flower-clad lands of the far South.

The eastern coast of the United States offers ideal conditions for yachting, and especially for motor boating, that are unrivalled anywhere A great chain of sounds, bays, harbors, and a network of rivers extends along the coast from Maine to Florida, offering inland passage for hundreds of miles. The importance of these through passages is becoming more generally appreciated, not only by yachtsmen but also by commercial interests, and Government and private canals are being cut to extend them.

With the exception of the coast between Beaufort, N. C., and Georgetown, S. C., boats drawing not over 4 feet of water can go by inland waters from New York to the southern end of Florida, and larger vessels can use many parts of the route.

The Federal Government which controls all navigable waters, is becoming more and more active in making these waters more useful to the public, both for business and pleasure.

Section 1: From Boston to Long Island Sound, including a waterway from the protected waters of Narragansett Bay through the ponds and lagoons lying along the southern coast of Rhode Island to Watch Hill and Fishers Island; thence to New York Bay; thence across the State of New Jersey to a suitable point of Deleware River or Bay; thence to Chesapeake Bay; thence from Norfolk, Va., to the sounds of North Carolina and Beaufort Inlet, N. C.—maximum depth, 25 feet.

The inland waters east of New York are well known to large numbers of people who use these waters in the lines of steamers and private yachts in going from their homes to the Nation's summer recreation grounds along the New England coast. Long Island Sound, Narraganset Bay, Buzzards Bay, and Nantucket and Vineyard Sounds have water deep enough for vessels, and also have many safe and convenient harbors for smaller boats. The Cape Cod Canal is under construction from the head of Buzzards Bay to Cape Cod Bay, and is expected to be open for navigation in 1913. It will not only greatly shorten the distance from New York to Boston but will also provide a safer route than the present exposed one around the eastern coast of Cape Cod. When the canal is open the number of motor boats visiting the New England coast every summer will probably be largely increased.

STEAMER GOES ON ROCKS

Fifty-Three of Crew Drowned as the Wistow Hall Goes Down

Aberdeen, Jan. 19.—The British steamer Wistow Hall was wrecked on the Bullers of Buchan, a group of dangerous rocks off the coast of Aberdeenshire. Fifty-three of her crew were drowned.

The seas were so huge that it was impossible to launch a lifeboat. The lifeboat crew of the village of Bullers tried several times to put out to sea but their craft was hurled back on the shore. Most of the drowned sailors were Lascars.

LAWRENCE IN GREAT TERROR

Fear of Dynamiting or Armed Attack on Soldiers

PLOT TO WRECK MANY MILLS

No Immediate Hope of Settling Strike, Which Has Resulted In Idleness of Twenty Thousand Operatives—Inflammatory Speeches Add Fuel to Doctrine of Anarchistic Band—Militia Will Be Doubled If the Trouble Is Not Adjusted Next Week—Only Utmost Coolness of Soldiers Prevents Open Battle

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 19.—At midnight last night the three-day closing of Lawrence saloons ended and this morning they reopened their doors. With the circulation of rumors of a plot to dynamite the armory, the mills and Governor Foss and the mill men, grave fears have arisen among Lawrence business men that with the reopening of the liquor stores the riotous element of the strikers, inflamed by liquor, may take charge of the situation, resort to giant powder or an armed attack on the soldiers.

Already suggestions have begun to pour in upon Mayor Scanlon, again to invoke his statutory right to close the saloons, and it is possible that the order may go forth today for the saloons to close Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

The fear of dynamite outrages grips the hearts of many a Lawrence citizen, and extreme precautions are being taken here to guard against dynamiting, following the discovery of a plot to wreck several mills, the Lawrence armory and end the lives of Governor Foss and others.

Wagon loads of ammunition were taken to the mills yesterday afternoon. Double guards are doing sentry duty. A committee of citizens, alarmed by the revelations to the militia and police, have asked an additional thousand of troops to patrol the city.

Strikers' Ranks Grow Larger

Joseph J. Ettor denies point blank that there is any immediate hope of settling the strike. As the recognized leader of the strikers, he insists that they stand firm for their full demand. Hundreds yesterday joined the striking force. Actual figures show that more than 20,000 mill workers are out. It is asserted that within a few days the entire mill section will be paralyzed.

Twice the strikers paraded yesterday, in the afternoon fully 20,000 men, women and children surging in procession through the streets. They sang the "Marseillaise" and a wierd song taken up by the Slavs, which was said to be the great European industrial hymn.

The first paraders clashed with the militia. The second swept through the streets a mile in length. They interspersed their songs with booing at the soldiery and jeering.

Anarchists In Evidence

Trouble is feared from an anarchist band, which, although insignificant in the striking force, is known to contain desperate characters. Fuel has been added to the doctrine held by these men by the inflammatory speeches which have been made. Circulars advocating the abolition of the wage system entirely and placing the instruments of production to the free use of everyone have been spread broadcast.

Militia, police and strikers are planning for a siege. If the strike is not over by next week, the number of militia is to be doubled. Today soup kitchens will be opened by the strikers. The Bakers' union of Boston has sent $300 to the strike committee, and other financial doors have been opened which have aided in stimulating the movement for higher wages.

The average wage throughout the entire 35,000 employes in the mills of this city is between $5 and $6. These figures have been verified and are used to good effect by the speakers.

TwentyThousand In Parade

The assembly of strikers here has been the largest gathering ever witnessed in this city. Thousands of lightseers joined the immense throng which mobilized on the common. More than 35,000 persons were in the crowd and more than 20,000 paraded.

Mayor Scanlon asked a legislative committee at the state house yesterday for the privilege of making a $500,000 loan. The loan was opposed by former Mayor Cahill. The city needs the money to keep up the protection of property, especially of the mill owners.

Great care is being taken to prevent gun men and dynamiters from entering this city. State police are watching the railroad stations, searching suspicious characters. Both the South and North terminal stations in Boston also are said to be guarded.

News that dynamiting might follow the course of the strike created great excitement here. A committee composed of bankers and merchants called upon Colonel Sweetser and asked him for another regiment. Sweetser told them they need have no worry; that every precaution necessary would be taken.

Close to Open Battle

People of Lawrence realize they are living above a volcano, which is a seething furnace within. The shouting, pushing parade of strikers throws the populace into a constant state of terror. No one knows when someone may lose his self control and precipitate a slaughter. The strikers, in their frenzy, press against the line of bayonets of the soldiers, flaunting jeers in their faces, and only the utmost coolness prevents open battle.

With their vast numerical majority, once the howling horde is loosened with bloodshed, they could annihilate the force of militia, but only after a terrible slaughter. Thus far, the militia officers who have had control of the mill section have proved themselves as good diplomatists as soldiers. Convincingly, but giving a ready ear to arguments, they have talked with the strikers against precipitating a battle by pressing beyond their lines.

FEDERAL LAW IS ENOUGH

Appellant In Indiana Case Attacks State Food Laws

Washington, Jan. 19.—May the states enact pure food legislation now that congress has passed a pure food and drug act? This question was presented to the supreme court of the United States for decision. The constitutionality of the Indiana pure food act of 1907 was up for argument before the tribunal.

Marion W. Savage, manufacturer of veterinary medicines, attacked the law as raising two standards for the manufacturers of food and drugs entering into interstate commerce to obey. His attorneys contended it was enough to obey the federal law, to say nothing of a state law.

Attorney General Honan of Indiana, in a brief, outlined the state's defense and said that the Indiana law was supplemental and complimental to the federal law.

YUAN SHI KAI GIVEN LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Men Who Attacked Him Are Strangled by Executioner

Pekin, Jan. 19.—The three men who were arrested after they had thrown the bomb at the carriage of Premier Yuan Shi Kai were strangled to death by the public executioner.

The premier has been granted three days' leave, ostensibly on account of indisposition arising from the excitement caused by the attempt on his life. It is thought, however, that the real reason is that he does not desire to attend the conference of the empress dowager and the princes of the imperial clan on the question of the abdication of the throne, which has been called at the imperial palace.

Seven of the Mongol princes persist in their determination to oppose abdication and stand firmly against the idea of a republic.

SECOND DEGREE MURDER

Ryan Pleads Guilty and Is Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 19.—Frank E. Ryan of Boston, who shot and killed his young wife, Georgiana, in Somerville, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Ryan is 27 years of age. He and his wife were estranged. She lived on Winter street, Somerville. He called there and induced her to start for a walk with him. Then he turned a revolver on her, fired five shots, four of which hit her.

Jealousy, unfounded, it was said, in connection with actions on the part of Ryan that caused his sanity to be questioned, led to the crime.

BURNS MUST WAIT

State Hasn't $10,000 to Pay Him For Work on Dynamite Case

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 19.—The application by William J. Burns for the reward of $10,000 offered by the state assembly for the arrest and conviction of the Los Angeles Times dynamiters was rejected by State Controller Nye, because, he said, there was not $10,000 in the assembly "contingent fund."

Nye suggested to District Attorney Fredericks of Los Angeles that Burns' proper course would be to have a claim bill introduced in the legislature at the next session.

HAS ENOUGH OF CONGRESS

Littleton of New York Will Retire at End of Present Term

Chattanooga, Jan. 19.—Congressman Martin W. Littleton of New York will quit congress and resume the practice of law after his present term expires. Littleton made the anonuncement here.

Referring to national politics Littleton said: "The east and the south will have to elect the Democratic candidate for president and in my opinion they should have recognition."

CUBAN EVENTS BEING WATCHED

War Department Ready to Intervene If Necessary

ISLAND IS WELL MAPPED OUT

Guerillas Could Not Successfully Operate Against American Soldiers as Did Cuban Patriots Against Spaniards—Warning of United States Leaves Gomez Free to Adopt Drastic Repressive Measures

Washington, Jan. 19.—After a conference with President Taft, Secretary of War Stimson declared that he did not believe the United States would have to intervene in Cuba. President Taft, Stimson said, agreed with him. Although the situation is regarded as most hopeful, the White House and the war department will watch developments closely.

Although still confident that there will be no occasion for military intervention in Cuba, the general staff is laying its plans whereby an adequate force of troops could be placed in the principal Cuban ports in a fortnight at the outside. As a result of painstaking work by American officers during the last period of occupation almost every inch of the island has been surveyed and explored; every road and trail is known and mapped and it would be quite impossible for any guerilla force to operate successfully against American soldiers as did the Cuban patriots against the Spaniards.

Transportation for a preliminary army of approximately 4250 men is available for immediate use in the transports Meade, Kilpatrick, Sumner and McClellan. These vessels are now lying at Newport News in readiness for immediate service.

In addition to the regular transports, it would be necessary to charter merchant vessels for the transportation of horses to be used in a campaign. But officials of the army say they do not anticipate any trouble in obtaining ships for this purpose.

President Gomez's position will be made much more secure by the warning issued by the state department, in the opinion of the officials here. It is held that the threat of intervention will go far towards relieving the Cuban president of his apprehension that this government is about to begin another period of occupation.

For some time past Gomez has been contemplating dealing forcibly and sternly with an element in Cuba which seems determined to force its will upon the executive and congress in defiance of law and the constitution. To undertake to bring these people to terms by force, involving the arrest and perhaps the death of some of them, might be regarded by the United States as evidence of a revolutionary outbreak, which would compel armed intervention.

By the demand upon Gomez to carry out the constitutional guarantee, the United States government has virtually assented in advance to any drastic measures Gomez may feel called upon to take.

MONEY FOR ECONOMY BOARD

Congress May Supply the $200,000 For Which the President Asked

Washington, Jan. 19.—The Democrats of the house are going slow in the matter of either condemning or praising the president's message on economy and efficiency and it is improbable that any definite opinion will be expressed till the report of the committee, now in the hands of the printer, is made available.

Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the committee on appropriations, as well as other members of the majority party, will give the commission a fair show, and it is not at all impossible that they may conclude to appropriate the necessary $200,000 asked for by the president.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

A week later Duncan and Freckles rose from breakfast to face the bitterest morning of the winter. When Freckles, warmly capped and gloved, stepped to the corner of the kitchen for his scrap pail, he found a pan of steaming boiled wheat on the top of it. He wheeled to Mrs. Duncan with a shining face.

"Were you fixing this warm food for me chickens or yours?" he asked.

"It's for yours, Freckles," she said.

Freckles faced Mrs. Duncan with a trace of every pang of starved mother hunger he had ever suffered written large on his homely, splotched, narrow features.

"Oh, how I wish you were my mother!" he cried.

"Lord love the lad!" exclaimed Mrs. Duncan. "Why, Freckles, are ye no bright enough to learn without being taught by a woman that I am your mither? If a great man like yoursel' dinna ken that, learn it now and ne'er forget it. Once a woman is the wife of any man she becomes wife to all men for having had the wifely experience she kens! Once a man child has beaten his way to life under the heart of a woman she is mother to all men, for the hearts of mithers are everywhere the same. Bless ye, lad die, I am your mither!"

She tucked the coarse scarf she had knit for him closer over his chest and pulled his cap lower about his ears, but Freckles, whipping it off and holding it under his arm, caught her rough, reddened hand and pressed it to his lips in a long kiss. Then he hurried away to hide the happy, embarrassing tears that were coming straight from his swelling heart.

Mrs. Duncan threw herself into Duncan's arms.

"Oh, the pair lad!" she wailed. "Oh, the pair mither hungry lad! He breaks my heart!"

Duncan's arms closed convulsively about his wife. With a big brown hand he lovingly stroked her rough sorrel hair.

"Sarah, you're a guid woman!" he said. "You're a mighty guid woman! Ye have a way o' speakin' out at times that's like the inspired prophets of the Lord."

All through the winter Freckles' entire energy was given to keeping up his lines and his "chickens" from freezing or starving. When the first breath of spring touched the Limberlost and the snow receded before it; when the catkins began to bloom; when there came a hint of green to the trees, bushes and swale; when the rushes lifted their heads and the pulse of the newly resurrected season beat strong in the heart of nature, something new stirred in the breast of the boy.

Nature always levies her tribute. Now she laid a powerful hand on the soul of Freckles, to which the boy's whole being responded, though he had not the least idea what was troubling him. Duncan accepted his wife's theory that it was a touch of spring fever, but Freckles knew better. He had never been so well.

CHAPTER III.

A FEATHER FALLS.

THE sounds that had at first struck cold fear into Freckles' soul he now knew had left on wing and silent foot at the approach of winter. As flock after flock of the birds returned and he recognized the old echoes reawakening he found to his surprise that he had been lonely for them and was hailing their return with great joy. He was possessed of an overpowering desire to know what they were, to learn where they had been and whether they would make friends with him as the winter birds had done, and if they did would they be as fickle? For with the running sap, creeping worm and winging bug most of Freckles' "chickens" had deserted him, entered the swamp and feasted to such a state of plethora on its store that they cared little for his supply, so that in the days of mating and nest building the boy was deserted.

The yearly resurrection of the Limberlost is a mighty revival. Freckles stood back and watched with awe and envy the gradual reclothing and repopulating of the swamp. Keen eyed and alert through danger and loneliness, he noted every stage of development from the first piping frog and unsheathing bud to full leafage and the return of the last emigrant.

The knowledge of his complete loneliness and utter insignificance was hourly thrust upon him. He brooded and fretted until he was in a fever, and yet he never guessed the cause. He was filled with a vast impatience and a longing that would not much further be denied.

It was June by the zodiac, June by the Limberlost, and by every delight of a newly resurrected season it should have been June in the hearts of all men. Yet Freckles scowled darkly as he came down the trail, and the running tap, tap which tested the sagging wire and telegraphed word of his coming to his furred and feathered friends of the swamp this morning carried the story of his discontent a mile ahead of him.

Freckles' special pet, a dainty yellow coated, black sleeved cock goldfinch, had for several days past remained on the wire, the bravest of all, and Freckles, absorbed with the cunning and beauty of the tiny fellow, never guessed that he was being duped, for the goldfinch was skipping, flirting and swinging for the express purpose of holding his attention that he would not look up and see a small cradle of thistledown and wool perilously near his head.

A peculiar movement under a small walnut tree caught his eye. He stopped to investigate. It was an unusually large Luna cocoon, and the moth was just bursting the upper end in its struggles to reach light and air. Freckles stood and stared.

"There's something in there trying to get out," he muttered. "Wonder if I could help it? Guess I best not be trying. If I hadn't happened along there wouldn't have been any one to help it, and maybe I'd only be hurting it. It's—it's—oh, skaggany! It's just being born!"

Freckles gasped with surprise. The moth cleared the opening and with great wobblings and contortions climbed up the tree. He stared, speechless with amazement as the moth crept around a limb and clung to the underside. There was a great pursy body almost as large as his thumb and of the very snowiest white that Freckles had ever seen. There was a band of delicate lavender across its forehead, and its feet were of the same color. There were antlers like tiny straw colored ferns on its head and on its shoulders little wet looking flaps no bigger than his thumb nail. Freckles saw that those queer little wet looking things were expanding, drooping, taking on color, and small oval markings were beginning to show.

The minutes went by. Freckles' steady gaze never wavered. Without realizing it he was trembling with eagerness and anxiety. As he saw what was taking place "It's going to have wings" he breathed in hushed wonder. The morning sun fell on the moth and dried its velvet down, and the soft air made it fluffy. The rapidly growing wings began to appear to be of the most delicate green, with lavender fore ribs, transparent, eye shaped markings edged with lines of red, tan and black and long, crisp trailers.

Freckles was whispering to himself for fear of disturbing the moth. It began a systematic exercise of raising and lowering its exquisite wings to dry them and to establish circulation. Freckles realized that it would soon be able to spread them and sail away. His long coming soul sent up its first shivering cry.

"I don't know what it is. Oh, I wish I knew! How I wish I knew! It must be something grand. It can't be a butterfly. It's away too big. Oh, I wish there was some one to tell me what it is!"

He climbed on the locust post and, balancing himself by the wire, held a finger in the line of the moth's advance up the twig. It unhesitatingly climbed on, and he stepped back to the path, holding it up to the light and examining it closely. Then he held it in the shade and turned it, gloating over its markings and beautiful coloring. When he held the moth back to the limb it climbed on, still waving those magnificent wings.

"My, but I'd like to be staying with you!" he said. "But if I was to stay here all day you couldn't get any prettier than you are right now and I wouldn't get smart enough to tell what you are. I suppose there's some one that knows. Of course there is. Mr. McLean said there were people that knew every leaf, bird and flower in the Limberlost. Oh, lord, how I wish you'd be telling me just this one thing!"

The goldfinch had ventured back to the wire, for there was his mate only a few inches above the man creature's head, and, indeed, he simply must not be allowed to look up just them, so the brave little fellow rocked on the wire and piped up, just as he had done every day for a week, "See me; see me?"

"See you! Of course I see you," growled Freckles. "I see you day after day, and what good is it doing me? I might see you every morning for a year and then not be able to be telling any one about it. 'Seen a bird—little and yellow as any canary, with black silk wings.' That's as far as I'd get. What you doing here anyway? Have you a mate? What's your name? 'See you?' I reckon I see you, but I might as well be blind for any good it's doing me!"

Freckles impatiently struck the wire. With a screech of fear the goldfinch fled precipitately. His mate tore from off the nest with a whirr. Freckles looked up and saw it.

"O-ho!" he cried. "So that's what you are doing here! You have a wife."

Freckles climbed up to examine the neat, tiny cradle and its contents. The hen darted at him in a frenzy. "Now, where do you come in?" he demanded when he saw that she was not like the goldfinch.

"You be clearing out of here! This is none of your fry. This is the nest of me little yellow friend of the wire, and you shan't be touching it. Don't blame you for wanting to see though. My, but it's a fine nest and beauties of eggs. Will you be keeping away or will I fire this stick at you?"

Freckles dropped back to the trail. The hen darted to the nest and settled on it with a tender, coddling movement. He of the yellow coat flew to the edge to make sure that everything was right.

"Well, I'll be switched!" muttered Freckles. "If that ain't both their nest! And he's yellow and she's green, or she's yellow and he's green. Of course I don't know, and I haven't any way to find out, but it's plain as the nose on your face that they are both ready to be fighting for that nest, so of course they belong. Don't that beat you? Say, that's what's been sticking me for all of these two weeks on that grass nest in the thorn tree down the line. One day a bluebird is setting, and I think it is hers. The next day a brown bird is on, and I chase it off because the nest is blue's. Next day the brown bird is on again, and I let her be because I think it must be hers. Next day, be golly, blue's on again, and off I sent her because it's brown's, and now I bet my hat it's both their nest, and I've only been bothering them and making a big fool of meself."

Freckles plodded on down the trail, scowling blackly and viciously spanging the wire. At the finches' nest he left the line and peered into the thorn tree. There was no bird brooding. He pressed closer to take a peep at the snowy, spotless little eggs he had found so beautiful, and at the slight noise up flared four tiny baby heads with wide open mouths and hunger cries. Freckles stepped back. The brown bird lit on the edge and closed one cavity with a wiggling green worm, and not two minutes later the blue filled another with something white. That settled it. The blue and brown were mates. Once again Freckles repeated his "How I wish I knew!"

About the bridge spanning Sleepy Snake creek the swale spread wide, the timber largely dropped away, and willows, rushes, marsh grass and splendid wild flowers grew abundantly. Lazy big black water snakes, for which the creek was named, sunned on the bushes, wild ducks and grebe chattered, cranes and herons fished, and muskrats plowed the bank in queer, rolling furrows. It was always a place full of interest to Freckles.

Freckles struck slowly into the path leading from the bridge to the line. It was the one spot at which he might relax his vigilance. The greatest timber thief the swamp had ever known would not have attempted to enter it by the mouth of the creek on account of the water and because there was no protection from surrounding trees. He was swishing the rank grass with his cudgel and thinking of the shade the denser swamp afforded when he suddenly dodged sidewise. The cudgel whistled sharply through the air and Freckles sprang back.

Out of the clear sky above him, first level with his face, then skimming, dipping, tilting, whirling until it lit quill down in the path in front of him, came a glossy, iridescent big black feather. As it struck the ground Freckles snatched it up and with an almost continuous movement faced the sky. There was not a tree of any size in a large open space. From the clear sky it had fallen, and Freckles, gazing eagerly into the arch of June blue with a few lazy clouds floating far up in the sea of ether, had neither mind nor knowledge to dream of a bird hanging as if frozen there. He turned the big quill questioningly, and again his awed eyes swept the sky.

"A feather dropped from heaven!" he breathed reverently. "Are the holy angels molting? But, no; if they were it would be white. Maybe all the angels are not for being white. What if the angels of God are white and those of the devil are black? But a black one has no business up there. Maybe some poor black angel is so tired of being punished it's for slipping up to the gates, beating its wings trying to make the Master hear!"

Again and again Freckles searched the sky, but there was no answering gleam of golden gates, no form of sailing bird. Then he went slowly on his way, turning the feather over and wondering about it. It was a wing quill eighteen inches in length, with a big, heavy spine, gray at the base, shading to jet black at the tip, and it caught the play of the sun's rays in slanting gleams of green and bronze. Again Freckles' "old man of the sea" sat sullen and heavy on his shoulders and weighted him down until his step lagged and his heart ached.

"Where did it come from? What is it? Oh, how I wish I knew!" he kept repeating.

Before him spread a great green pool, filled with rotting logs and leaves, bordered with delicate ferns and grasses, among which lifted the creamy spikes of the arrowhead, the blue of water hyacinth and the delicate yellow of the jewel flower. As Freckles leaned, handling the feather and staring first at it and then into the depths of the pool, he once more gave voice to his old query. "I wonder what it is?"

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CONCERNING FRITTERS.

FRITTERS are small cakes of batter containing a slice of fruit or fruit, vegetables or meat chopped fine, sweetened or seasoned according to requirements and then fried in boiling lard.

A fritter batter that will do for any ingredients may be prepared thus: Take a half cup of milk, the beaten yolks of two eggs, a tablespoonful of olive oil or butter, a saltspoonful of salt and enough flour to make a drop batter. Add the beaten whites of the eggs when you are ready to use it.

Preparing the Batter.

If making for fruit fritters put about a teaspoonful of sugar into the batter.

If the fritters are to be of chopped meat, oysters, clams or fish mix in a tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar.

Most vegetables should be boiled until tender before being chopped up for the fritters.

Any good batter for pancakes may be used in making fritters.

Fritters must be sent to the table as soon as cooked or they will become heavy.

Fruit fritters are served with powdered sugar. A dash of cinnamon may be added.

Some Simple Recipes.

Plain Fritters.—For these take a pint of sweet milk, two beaten eggs, a quart of flour, three tablespoonfuls of baking powder and salt to taste. Fry a golden brown in deep fat and serve with sirup. One cupful of dropped fruit can be added to the batter if desired.

Ginger Fritters.—Put one pint of water, one tablespoonful of butter and one-half cupful of sugar into a saucepan and when it boils stir in one pint of sifted flour, stirring briskly until smooth. Remove from the fire and when nearly cold beat in four eggs, one at a time and beating well between each, then add one cupful of preserved ginger, chopped fine. Fry brown in boiling lard and serve with a sirup and flavored with ginger and lemon juice.

Corn Fritters.—These may be made with canned corn. To one pint of corn add the well beaten yolks of two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one cupful of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder sifted together and, lastly, the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Drop in spoonfuls into deep hot lard and fry.

Peach Fritters.—For these also either canned or fresh peaches cut in halves may be used. Dip each half, after draining thoroughly, into the batter and fry, or the peaches may be chopped and mixed into the ordinary batter and dropped in spoonfuls into the hot oil.

At William C. Caldwell's weekly whist Thursday night the lucky players were J. Drumgold and Pearl Damon 48 each; Mrs. Gragg 44, unknown 42 and Mrs. Saunders 41.

Senator George L. Barnes presided at the dinner held in the Boston City club, in honor of Louis D. Brandueis the noted attorney, who spoke on "Trusts and the Sherman Law."

The last dance before the Lenten season will be held in Music hall, Tuesday evening, Feb 20th, under the auspices of the Manet Social club. A special feature will be the music, which is to be furnished by Risema Ladies' orchestra of eight pieces.

The Gospel Team holds its meetings at the Wollaston Methodist church tonight, tomorrow night and Sunday. These meetings will be interesting to everybody. There will be good music and the team will have an interesting meeting each evening.

The regular weekly whist party of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum took place in the club rooms, Thursday evening. A number of tables were in play. At the conclusion of the whist, refreshments were served. Prizes were won by George Frettie, William Fay, Arthur Moorhouse, Mrs. Cleary and Miss Gertrude Kiley.

Miss Bertha Kinzel who will sing at the Quincy Choral concert on Jan. 23 is one of the younger sopranos who has come to the front within the last few years. Her voice is sweet and lyric in quality and she sings with exquisite sympathy and expression. She is at present the soloist at Rogers Memorial Church, Fair Haven, and in addition to this work is doing a great deal of concert and oratorio singing. Elsie's beautiful solos in the "Golden Legend" should show her voice at its best.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN

The Institute idea is simply to educate. The specialists who lead them are men trained by long and varied experience. Their ideas are the best; their methods distinctly modern and forceful. Saturday afternoon in Tremont Temple, a joint institute will be held with conservation for the topic. This will be the climax of this part of the program. The daily meetings have been so successful, and the delegates have shown so much enthusiasm that the propaganda will undoubtedly spread throughout the Greater Boston District and the 22 auxiliary cities of Eastern Massachusetts and Southern New Hampshire.

The district platform meetings have been uniformly enthusiastic. The meetings in the central church of each district were led by the specialists who worked in rotation so that each district was enabled to have one night's discussion on each of the five topics selected for the campaign work. They have averaged from 100 to 150 in attendance Sunday these will culminate in each district in two simultaneous meetings, afternoon services—one for men and one for boys. The leaders are as follows: Newton District, Dr. James A. Francis; Cambridge District, Dr. Charles H. Moss; Roxbury District, James R. Smith; Dorchester District, John H. Elliott; Quincy District, A. M. Bruner; Hyde Park District, Fred S. Goodman; Somerville District, Yutaka Minakuchi; Boston South District, M. A. Honline; Malden District, Dr. George L. Cady; Boston North District, W. E. Biederwolf. These final district meetings will be evangelistic in nature.

NOT GUILTY, SAYS JARDINE

Locomotive Joy Rider Is Held In $2000 Bail For Trial

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 19.—Ralph I. Jardine of this city, who took a locomotive out of the railroad yards, invited a few friends into the cab and then ran it at the rate of fifty miles an hour on a "joy ride" to Webster, pleaded not guilty in the local police court to the indictment charging him with endangering passengers on a railroad train.

Jardine ran the locomotive into a "boat train" filled with passengers and the grand jury considered that phase of the case in acting in the matter. The case will come up for trial Monday. In default of $2000 bail, Jardine was committed to jail.

QUINCY PLAYS WINNING GAMES

Fr. Matthew Fives Lose in Basket Ball at West Quincy

THE SUMMARY

The sturdy walls of St. Mary's hall in West Quincy have resounded with echoes of many a memorable conflict, both from a political and athletic standpoint, but never before was there displayed such enthusiasm as coursed through the veins of 400 ararent roters Thursday evening, when both basket ball teams of the West Quincy A. A. succeeded in vanquishing their respective opponents from the Father Mathew Association of Cambridge. As for the second team, of the local association; it need only be said that its members kept control of the situation at all stages and emerged from the contest with an apparently easy victory.

But with the first teams, the case was entirely different. In the first place it was not definitely known until late Thursday afternoon that the players from the University city would put in an appearance. It seems that they had a game scheduled in the earlier part of the week with the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. quintet, but the latter failed to present themselves, with the result that the Cambridge boys were to play Quincy A. A. with practically no practice work, owing to the fact that the disbanding of the team was being seriously questioned.

Be that as it may, they displayed great form, especially in the first period, yet the form of the local boys was ever better, and as a consequence the struggle was pronounced to have been the best ever witnessed in St Mary's hall

The local team lost many opportunities to score more points, through failures to secure the greater portion of goals from fouls that were tried. This was due mainly to the fact that instead of allowing one player to shoot fouls, each man on the team was called upon in accordance as the fouls were called.

The score at the end of the first half stood 13 to 12, with the long end belonging to the visitors. The visitors seemed to exhibit fine team work in the beginning of the second half, but the endurance was not noticeable and the Quincy contingency lost no time in taking advantage of the situation. It must be stated that, however, that the local boys did not play as well as they have at other times this season. The work of the back's was especially commendable, and though they passed the ball with accuracy, it seemed, on a number of occasions as though there was no one to receive the ball on the other end.

Then too, but most especially in the first half, it was noticed that when a visiting player shot for a basket, he was invariably allowed to do so, unhampered by a local player

Toward the end of the second half, things took a decided turn, and the all round team work enable Quincy A. A. to annex a victory. O'Rourke and P. Duggan showed up exceptionally well at critical moments, while the work of Boyle was conspicuous throughout the game. Carroll and Wilcox played well for the Cambridge team.

As for the second teams the local boys easily proved their superiority. The team work was of the first order throughout and the work of the Chapman brothers and Harmon was greatly in evidence. Shannon, the star centre of the visitors' second team, failed to show up to advantage as he was covered at all times. Coveney played well for the losers.

The summary:

WORK OF EVANGELISM

gelist left an atmosphere which made it easier for the pastor to continue this work and the year following the evangelist was the next largest year as also shown by the reports made by the churches in this district.

Bishop Berry of the Methodist Episcopal church said recently that although it was humiliating to say it, that it took 6,000,000 members of the church of that denomination to bring in 30,000 members in a year. That one third of these came from the work of the public evangelist.

He said we churches were just about holding our own in membership. What would have been the result in the increase of membership had the thousands of special meetings not been held, that have been held?

The second kind of evangelism is pastoral evangelism.

It is the business of the church to save men just as much as it is the business of a flouring mill to make flour.

The third kind of evangelism is individual evangelism. It is the business of each one of us to do this, but most of us are too busy doing other things. We are after the almighty dollar. We are steeling our minds away from Christ. It reminded him of a story. A young couple were fondly looking upon the form of their first baby as it lay in the cradle before them. The mother was intently looking at the little form and trying to see just what his future would be. The father too was looking intently into the little face, as the mother thought, and upon turning round asked him about what he was thinking, he replied "That he didn't see how it was that so good a cradle could be made for $1.68." This is the thing that is gripping us.

The second reason why there is so little personal evangelism is because we do not believe God is going to hold us responsible for the other man. Most of us think that when we come to die we have provided for ourselves a life boat that is going to safely carry us over the river. It makes men shout because of this, but it dosn't stop there. God saved you to become a saviour. He does not care so much about our being saved as our becoming a saviour of others. No quarrel with you about your theology. But if you believe in God you must believe that Christ was His Divine Son and that He is our Saviour. When you realize then, that a man without Christ is lost, then you will be stirred to do personal evangelism. We do not realize how much a man is worth. Some men believe today that when we die it will be just like the sheep that dies. This a young man told him recently. The speaker suggested that he hang crape upon his ears as his brain was dead. He said that one soul was worth just as much as another soul. That the soul of the saloon keeper was worth just as much as that of the minister. When you become the kind of an evangelist that knows and believes this you can win that man next you. He closed his address with an illustration showing how the winning of one man to Christ had been the means of that man's leading over one hundred and fifty to Christ.

At the close of the address an opportunity was given to ask questions and to offer suggestions. Mr. Biederwolf certainly outlined a plan that if the churches in this Quincy District take it up with a will is sure to produce such a change in them that this section of the State will be vastly different.

The men who stay away from the meeting this evening will miss one of their opportunities. Prof. M. A. Honline of Ohio will conduct the Platform Meeting in Y. M. C. A. Hall at 8 o'clock upon Bible Study.

CRAM SURRENDERS

Broker Charged With Larceny Is Held In $15,000 Bail

Boston, Jan. 19.—Benjamin H. Cram, the New York broker, and formerly a member of the defunct firm of Cram, Mulliken & Co, of Boston, surrendered himself at police headquaters yesterday to answer to a thirty-count indictment, charging him with the larceny of nearly $70,000.

Cram is 32 years of age. The defunct firm of which he was formerly a member filed a voluntary partnership petition in bankruptcy last August.

Cram smiled as he gave his history to Inspector Lynch. His nonchalant demeanor remained as he was escorted to the superior criminal court.

He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was held in $15,000 bonds. As bail was not furnished he was taken to jail.

INQUEST HELD THIS MORNING

An inquest was held before Judge Pratt in the district court this morning on the death of Guiseppi Rucher, who was killed during a row in a boarding house at 35 Water street, Dec. 3. The alleged murder was the outcome of a row Sunday noon over the payment of thirty cents. From a row of words it is claimed that Savario Espanio drew a revolver and fired several shots in the house one of which took effect in the dead man and a second in the head of the dead man's brother. After the shots it is alleged that Espanio chased Rucher into the street and stabbed him with a bread knife.

The police were early on the scene and the alleged murderer was arrested and later in court was held for the grand jury.

For the inquest 22 witnesses were summoned but it is doubtful if it will be necessary to hear all of them as the material evidence can be obtained from a few. The case for the government is being conducted by Assistant District Attorney Fatzman.

RECORD BROKEN BY QUINCY BOY

Paul Poehler, a Quincy boy who at the present time is located in New Hampshire set a new mark in candle pin bowling Thursday night in a ten string match with Archie Walsh of Boston at Portsmouth, N. H., when he made a three string total of 1111, which is the world's record. The former world's record was 1091 which was also made by Poehler at Berlin, N. H., in a ten string competition.

The scores of the two men were as follows:

Within a month Poehler will bowl John Christopher of Boston for the New England candlepin championship and New Hampshire expects Poehler to win.

SOCIALIST PARTY AVOIDED

Mine Workers Vote Against Going Into Political Socialism

Indianapoolis, Jan. 19.—By a vote of 515 to 155 the convention of the United Mine Workers of America refused to adopt a resolution committing the organization to the Socialist party and approved the substitute measure of the resolutions committee declaring "it would be well if workers would unite on the political as well as the industrial field."

The resolutions committee had reported that it would be unconstitutional for the United Mine Workers to indorse any political party.

GET THREE YEARS EACH

Germany Jails Russian and Hungarian Officers as Spies

Leipsic, Jan. 19.—Two spies, Baron Vinogradoff, a lieutenant in the Rusisan navy and Lieutenant Von Cerno, belonging to the reserve of the Hungarian army, were both condemned to three years' imprisonment.

Baron Vinogradoff was detailed to supervise the operations of Von Cerno and stimulate him to further activity. While he was engaged in this work the German secret service police captured both of them.

Demand Revision of Price List

North Adams, Mass., Jan. 19.—Sixty weavers at the Hoosac worsted mills are out because they maintain they are getting 28½ cents a week less than the weavers at the Eagle mills. The strikers demand a revision of the price list, but the manager declines to accede to the request.

German English.

While visiting a small manufacturing town in Germany last summer a New York woman bought a tortoise shell hair ornament which was badly injured through a servant's carelessness. The saleswoman to whom it was returned with a request to have it repaired, wishing probably to air her English, sent it back to the hotel with this note: "The hair comb sending to me is heavy to repair whilst the pieces only through wire fastening can be. I would the destroy of the hair comb resolve—then could the lovely ornamental for other one hair comb be accomplish."—New York Tribune.

A Cigar Lighter.

Gibbs—I went a railway journey the other day and took a box of cigars with me. Nibbs—Well, I suppose you had a good smoke? Gibbs—Aye, I had that, but when the train had started I found I'd no matches. Nibbs—No matches, and yet you'd a good smoke? How did you manage for a light? Gibbs—Well, you see, I opened the box, took out one, and that made the box "a cigar lighter."—London Tit-Bits.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 27 No. 18 QUINCY. MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, JANUARY 20, 1912 PRICE TWO CENTS

FORE RIVER CO. TO GET BATTLESHIP CONTRACT

27,000-Ton Super-dreadnought Nevada to be Constructed by Quincy Company

A dispatch from Washington says that the contracts for the two 27,000 ton superdreadnought battleship of the Rivadavia type, bids for which were opened a few weeks ago, will be awarded to the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., of Quincy and to the New York Shipbuilding Co., of Camden, N. J.

These two firms were the two lowest bidders and there was but little difference between them, that of the Fore River Co., everything considered being the lowest.

The Nevada will be constructed at the Fore River yards and will have the Curtis turbine engines while the Oklahoma which will be built by the New York company will have reciprocating engines. The dispatch further says that the contracts will probably be signed today by Secretary Meyer. The price to be paid for the vessel however was not made public. Congress however alolwed $6,000,000 for each vessel.

At the time the bids were opened, Jan. 4, it was announced that the bid of the Fore River Co. for one vessel was $5,935,000 and that of the New York Co. $5, 926,000. It should be understood however that the bid of the Fore River Co., quoted was but one of the several bids submitted and that for the same style of engines as the New York Co. bid upon, the Fore River bid was the lowest.

Under the law these vessels must be built under the eight-hour law which means that when work is commenced on the vessel that the Fore River Co. yard will be put on that basis. It is understood that the company has been getting ready to put the yard on an eight-hour basis for some weeks.

The awarding of the contract to the Fore River should be good news to Quincy for it means employment to several thousand workmen for the next three years at least.

Although the citizens will not celebrate as they did at the home coming of Admiral Bowles after he had secured the contract for the Argentine battleship Rivadavia, citizens should not lose sight of the fact of the amount of good that the awarding of such a contract means to Quincy aside from the world wide advertising that the city gets, and our wide-awake Board of Trade should take cognizance of it

SUNDAY MASS BOYS' MEETING

The big mass meeting for Boys under the auspices of the Quincy District committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement will be held in Bethany chapel Sunday afternoon at 3.30. A. H. Blanchard, chairman of the District committee on Boys' Work, will preside.

The speaker of the afternoon will be H. C. Leggat of Worcester. Mr. Leggat has been Boys' Work Director in the Worcester Young Men's Christian Association for the past six years and it may be said with perfect honesty that he practically owns the boys of the city. His subject at the Sunday afternoon meeting will be "Victory."

The older boys, fellows from 15 to 18 years of age, from all the churches in this city and surrounding towns should come to Bethany chapel en masse Sunday afternoon to meet Mr. Leggat and hear his address. There will be inspiring music and a thoroughly helpful and inspiring address.

CONCERT AT LIVERMORE HALL

In Livermore hall Friday evening pupils and guests of the Quincy Mansion school were privileged to hear the first performance in America of Anders Rachlew's "Sonata for violin and piano."

This number concluded a program of chamber music excellently rendered by S. Newton Cutler and William Howard of the faculty.

The sonata was rendered in four parts "Moderato," "Scherzo" "Romanze" and "Finale" and its conclusion was followed by continued applause.

The entire recital was well received and many of the number required and received the touch of a finished hand. The program:

Sonata, violin and piano Mozart
Sonata, piano Grieg
Wiegenlied, Elman-Schubert
German Dance, Von Dittersdorf
Meditation from "Thais," Massenet
Minuet, Beethoven
Sonata, violin and piano,
Anders Rachlew

BRIEFS

A meeting of the special committee of the City Council on the separation of Houghs Neck will be held in the Mayor's office Monday evening.

Perry Lawton of President's Hill, who is at the Quincy Hospital for an operation which was performed Thursday is reported as resting comfortably.

The Boys' staff of the Thomas Crane public library held its first meeting in the library this morning. Miss White was the presiding officer at this opening meeting.

Mark J. Mytte and Joseph Fostello, doing business under the firm name of the Boston & Quincy Express Quincy, have been petitioned into bankruptcy at the instance of four creditors whose claims amount to $1586.

Arthur Hackett who will sing at the Choral Society concert on Jan. 23, has a very pleasing tenor voice, of a pure sweet quality well adapted to the solos of Prince Henry in the Golden Legend. His work is commended highly by press and public wherever he appears.

D. King entertains a small party at luncheon at the Boston City club Monday to meet Mr. Cooledge of the Metropolitan Plan commission, for an informal discussion of the plan. The guests will include the special committee of the City Council appointed to confer with other cities and towns on the subject.

It is reported that the First church of Christ Scientist of Braintree has purchased the lot on Greenleaf street now occupied by Miss Wright's private school and will eventually erect a church on the site. It is understood however, that Miss. Wright is to be allowed to occupy the premises until June 1913, when she will have completed fifty years as a teacher.

GAY SCENE AT MUSIC HALL

Annual Dance, Office Fmployees of Rice & Hutchins

THOSE IN CHARGE

Music Hall was taxed to its utmost Friday evening on the occasion of the second annual dance of the office employees of the Rice and Hutchins Shoe Company. The affair was pronounced a complete success and even eclipsed the dance of last year, as was evidenced by the numbers who came from outside districts, including Weymouth, Brockton, South Boston, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and Hyde Park.

The guests of the evening included John Connell superintendent and other prominent officials of the factory, numbered among them being all the assistant superintendents and foremen. The music for the occasion was furnished by Cuff's six piece orchestra, which added great charm to the enjoyment of the evening.

The affair began at eight o'clock, and from that time until nine a most entrancing instrumental repertoire of musical selections was in order, composed of the following numbers:

March—"Sheridan Sabres" Hall
Overture—"Romantic" Kela-Bela
Concert Waltz—"Caresses" Lesser
March—"Winning Fight" Holzman

This was followed by dancing, which was enjoyed till midnight, with a short intermission taking place at 10. 30 o'clock. The stage presented a most pleasing appearance, with large number of jack-o-lanterns strung from one side to the other, all encompassing an electric moon which was called into prominence at the moonlight waltzes.

The dance order comprised eighteen regular numbers, with an addition of three extras. As over 800 people were in attendance, a large sum of money was realized. This will be disbursed for charitable purposes.

The success attained was due largely to the untiring work of the committee in charge.

Miss Abigail L. Sullivan was chairman of the general committee. Miss Ada G. Fogarty was secretary and John B. Crowe was treasurer.

Joseph V. Cuff was floor director. The assistant floor director was Warren J. Reardon, who was assisted by the following aids:

E. Miller, A. Buckley, L. Norris, L. Donovan, M. Reveny, Z. Creswell, M. Moran, L. O'Brien, M. Kelley M. Reynolds, O. Hill, H. Shannon, A. McGaughy, A. Shannon, F. Dreghorn, F. Daley, L. Finn, M. Malloy, C. McDonnell, L. Hansen, A. Anderson, K. O'Neill, C. Doughty, H. Marcelle, A. Heney, K. Schraut, A. Sullivan, M. McClellan, M. White, E. Daley, E. Lock, C. Hennessey, E. Keating, H. Sturgis, J. Rooney, A. Bustard, N. McGaughy, F. Mooney, C. Devine, M. Carrigg, G. Hoar. C. Creeden..

ORGANIZE FOR MISSION WORK

A party of young ladies of the Swedish Baptist church met at Rev. Paul Hallin's home, Glendale road last evening, for the purpose of organizing a society, it's chief aim being Foreign Missionary work. It was decided to adopt the work of the King's Daughters society of the church and meet the first Friday of each month. Various officers were elected, and important matters discussed.

After the business had been transacted, a social hour was enjoyed, refreshments served, and the evening spent with music and singing.

Officers elected were as follows—
President—Lillian Lindberg.
Vice President—Florence Lund.
Secretary—Helga Carlson.
Treasurer—Rebecca Nelson.

M. A. HONLINE ON BIBLE STUDY

Friday's Meeting of Men and Religion Forward Movment

TONIGHT'S MEETING

There remains but one more platform meeting in the campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. This meeting takes place at 8 o'clock this evening in Y. M. C. A. hall. The speaker will be T. N. Carver of Boston. His subject will be Social Service. Today there are a great many men who are becoming interested in this important work. They will miss a rare opportunity to get help in the carrying out of a more efficient work in this direction if they do not hear Mr. Carver.

The meeting last evening was presided over by the Rev. Chas. P. Marshall the chairman of the Quincy District committee. The speaker was M. A. Honline of Dayton Ohio. His subject was Bible Study.

He said that perhaps some of the men expected to hear a sermon, but he was not a precher. You cannot educate a man unless you educate the entire man. It is a unity process.

When a man comes into the world, he has a four fold nature. He has a physical nature, an intellectual, social and religious nature. Any true system of education must comprise these four sides of the man. Tendencies are born in a man but training is given to them. There is nature and nurture. Some call it heredity and environment. Nature gives us the dessert but nurture converts the desert into fertile plains. Nature give the barbarian but nurture gives us the finished product, a Gladstone. Nature gives us the raw material but nurture gives us the finished product. Nature never could give us the grape fruit or the seedless orange. It is the nurture he wanted to speak about not the nature.

A human being is born with instincts, capacities and tendencies. We talk about training instincts. We try to aid immature human beings to attain their proper destination. There are however certain limitations beyond which nurture cannot go. We cannot make a silk purse out of a pig's ear. On the other hand there is a chance with God's help to bring about a great change in a man's life through education. The fact is that everything that goes into a man's life is education. The school of experience is in session every day. It has never had a vacation.

There are four gateways through which this education comes, the five senses. Close these up and you close up your chance to teach them anything. We must take into consideration the physical gateway when thinking about teaching boys the Bible many times this determines the cause for the lack of grasping the subject on the part of a boy. They are not at their best. We are beginning to find this out and to reckon with it in dealing with children.

In the city of Oklohoma, a 17 year old city, the finest building in its is the High School. And this building is simply crowded. We are not neglecting the physical and intellectual side of the boy. But how about the religious side of him? Are we neglecting it? Yes to a large degree. The home is not attending to it. The public schools are not doing anything about it. Then the church-

The church finances showed an advance but considerable money must be raised before the close of the conference year, April 10th.

The Ladies' Aid reported through Mrs. George Hawes, president, that $204 had been raised during the year.

The money for benevolence will exceed that of last year considerably.

The pastor reported over $1,000 worth of improvements in the church property and more to be undertaken. He was given a unanimous invitation to return another year.

CITY OFFICIALS REAPPOINTED

Under the provisions of Section 41 of the City Charter it is necessary for persons appointed as City Officials by the Mayor to appear before the City Clerk within five days, from the date of appointment and quality. The most of those named by Mayor Stone, Jan. 8, did appear and qualify. There were several however who failed to do so. It was therefore necessary that they be reappointed. This the Mayor did this morning. The gentlemen reappointed were William Ward Whicher, Trustee of the Thomas Crane Public library; A. W. Fay and Andrew Johnson as members of the Managers of Public Burial Places and George M. Sheahan, Joseph L. Whiton, Walter S. Pinkham and Perry Lawton as Managers of the Adams Academy.

In the case of Rev. Ellery Channing Butler, who was appointed as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public library, City Clerk McGilvray called upon Mr. Butler at his home and swore him in.

GRAND TRUNK FOR BROCKTON.

Brockton wants the Grand Trunk railway. An effort is on foot among the leading business men to get the officials to come Brockton way. A meeting of the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce has been called and plans for a definite campaign to get the road to consider Brockton will be started.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Some people think that the exceptional vigor with which Theodore chops trees suggests that he would like to put equal fervor ineo removing the official heads of certain office holders.

When the residents of that section of the city now trying to become 'Seagirt" were given a hearing on the school question, one of them stated, in advocating the erection of a school "This is the proudest moment of my life." He voiced the sentiments of a large number and we now await what will be forthcoming at the hearing to be given on the divorce question. O tempora! O mores! Verily did the pagan Horace say, "Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur," Times change and we change with them."

LIKELY TO BALK.

The proposition to compel the cities and towns within a radius of ten miles of the state house to become part of Boston if five-eighths of the electors in the entire district so vote is scarcely likely to become a law. Consolidation of the kind contemplated is highly undesirable. If a city or town wishes to join the Hub and Boston is willing to absorb it, well and good, but to compel them to come in is intolerable. Whether the proposed scheme for a greater Boston is constitutional is a matter of doubt but there can be no question of its unfairness. And the legislature is likely to take that view of the scheme.—Framingham News.

EDNA C. DONOVAN.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Donovan, of 18 Hunt street, were the recipients of many expressions of condolence today and have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends, in the death of their beloved daughter Edna C. Donovan, which occurred at the Quincy City Hospital at two o'clock this morning. She was 10 years and six months old and departed this life after a brief illness.

Michael Donovan is connected with the local police department, and is stationed on the night beat in Atlantic. The funeral services will take place next Monday morning from the Church of the Sacred Heart.

Q.—"For we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men."—I Corinthians iv, 9. How were the Apostles made a "spectacle" to the angels? (Curious).

Answer.—Evidently the angels and all other spirit beings, of which there are myriads upon myriads, (Revelation v, 11,) are interested observers of the events transpiring upon this little globe of our. What the race of mankind is learning by actual experience the spirit beings are learning by observation. As the poet has expressed the thought—"All the world's a stage and men and women merely players." The word "spectacle," in the marginal rendering of the Authorized Version, is theatre. The Apostles were being made "a show of" before the world, and angels, and men, because of their loyalty to the cause of Christ. Enduring all manner of hardships, bitter persecutions, and regarded as religious fanatics—"fools"— because of their prominence in advocating the teachings of Christ, they were specially observed. Thus it was with the Master Himself: by His sufferings, His death, and His resurrection, He preached a powerful sermon in pantomine to the "spirits in prison"(The fallen angels who disobeyed in the time of Noah. II Peter ii, 4: I Peter iii, 18-20).

ANNUAL MEETING, HALL PLACE M. E. LADIES' AID.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Hall Place M. E. church met at the parsonage for their annual meeting Wednesday evening, and the following officers were elected: President—Mrs. Geo. Hawes; vice president—Mrs. T. C. Martin; secretary—Mrs. F. L. Badger; treasurer—Mrs. James R. McCormick.

It was voted to have a "Get-together" supper in the vestry, Jan. 31st with entertainment and invited guests. An effort will be made to get out at least one hundred.

BRIEFS

TheWalther Men's class holds their monthly social Monday evening at 7.45 in the Wollaston Baptist chapel. Rev. A. A. Forshee, missionary in the Philippine islands will give an address, illustrated by the stereopticon This address and the pictures are spoken of very highly and every member of the class ought to be present. Ladies will be permitted and welcomed at the lecture.

Word was received from E. A. Barber of Webster street this week, that the thermometer registered 30 degrees below zero at St. Paul, Minn., where he was stopping.

Rev. William Ware Locke is to speak on "The New American" at the Y. P. R. U. meeting Sunday evening at the Wollaston Unitarian church.

The men of the Memorial church are to give their annual supper the last of January.

Rev. Julian C. Jaynes a very able minister from West Newton is to preach at First church, Sunday morning. A parish meeting is to be held in the chapel, Monday evening at 8 o'clock to discuss important business.

The next number in the lecture course at the Hall Place M. E. church will be a grand concert, Thursday evening, Feb. 8 by Prof. F. M. Davis and his ensemble of ten musicians from the Copley Square School of Music.

While attempting to cross Hancock street, in the square, Friday morning en route to his cafe, Anthony J. Thompson slipped and fell to the ground. Outside of a severe drenching to his clothes, no damage was sustained.

A special parish meeting of First church is called for Monday evening in the chapel to transact important business preparatory to the annual meeting in March. It is probable some action will be taken on the resignation of Rev. E. C. Butler which takes efefct, March 1st, also the calling of a pastor.

Friends of Mrs. John Aulbee, who is living with her son on Hollis avenue, will be sorry to learn of her severe sickness again.

Miss Zilpha Coombs of Billings street, who has been quite sick for a week is improving.

☞Morning, noon and night, plain or toasted, PRATT'S BREAD is delicious.

BOURNE'S FIGHT FOR RE-ELECTION

Senator Will Conduct It on the Oregon Plan

MEANS SMALL EXPENDITURE

Will Stand Upon His Record and Make No Campaign—Will Be Opposed by Lowell—Clark's Presidential Boom Making Progress—Taft Gets Information That Hitchcock Is Backing Roosevelt

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator Bourne of Oregon will be opposed for re-election and will put the Oregon primary plan to the test by refraining from making any campaign in his own behalf. Judge Stephen A. Lowell of Pendleton will enter the lists against Bourne.

The Oregon law forbids any but the most nominal expenditures by a candidate for public office, the money to be used for defraying the cost of printing in connection with the primary ballot, a concise statement of the views of the candidate upon public questions and such other statements explaining his candidacy as he may choose to make.

Senator Bourne is the foremost champion of the idea that the "composite citizen" can be trusted to vote intelligently upon candidates or proposed legislation. He says his record is known to the people of Oregon and he will submit to their decision without further effort on his part, whether he shall be re-elected.

Bourne's first election to the senate was accomplished in part by a lavish and not wholly creditable use of money, in accordance with the traditional custom then prevailing. Bourne's chief interest just now centres in the proposed extension of a parcels post.

The Champ Clark boom made a jump upward when word reached Washington from St. Louis that an agreement had been reached between the speaker and ex-Governor Folk, his rival for the presidential nomination, that both would abide by the decision of the Democratic state convention to be held Feb. 20, and either would withdraw if the other were favored by that convention.

A stiff fight now will be made, but the Clark men here say it will result in Missouri presenting only the name of Clark in the Baltimore convention.

Persons close to the president believe the near future will witness a request from Mr. Taft for the resignation of the postmaster general. Mr. Hitchcock's espousal of government ownership of telegraph lines is merely incidental. The real trouble is that Hitchcock stands before his chief charged with political treachery.

President Taft has been informed by close personal and political friends, including at least one cabinet officer, that Hitchcock is aiding and abetting the movement inaugruated and financed by George W. Perkins for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for president.

The White House will not discuss the matter. The postmaster general waves aside the charges with a laugh.

The president will not admit a belief that Roosevelt is a party to the scheme. He is making an investigation of the charges against Hitchcock.

ADVISED ON SHIPMENTS

Boston Agents of Big Beef Men Knew the Business of Rivals

Chicago, Jan. 20.—At the packers' trial Everett B. Dill and Perry N. Waterhouse, formerly manager for the National Packing company at Boston, 1903 to 1906, testified that it was the practice for the representatives of Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co., and their company to exchange memoranda of the daily shipments, margins and selling prices.

They said that in this way the representatives of each company knew what the other was doing. Sometimes this information was obtained by telephone, and at other times the branch managers made the rounds of the other offices to get the figures.

BRIGANDS GOT RANSOM

Government Asked to Repay Those Who Helped Miss Stone

Washington, Jan. 20.—Miss Ellen M. Stone of Chelsea, Mass., is here in the interests of her bill to reimburse the subscribers whose money ransomed her from the hands of Raisuli and his Salonica brigands.

It will be remembered that Senator Crane's bill appropriating the necessary money passed the senate twice, but the companion bill in the house, introduced by Representative Roberts, is pending still.

Members of congress are receiving thousands of petitions from all over the country to ask them to help the passage of this measure.

SENATOR BOURNE

He Will Put the Oregon Primary Plan to the Test

A DESPERATE CHARACTER

Hears Death Sentence Pronounced While Strapped to Litter

New York, Jan. 20.—Strapped to a litter, Joseph Ferrone, a wife murderer, was carried into the court of general sessions and sentenced to death. The sentence was that he be put to death some time during the week commencing Feb. 26.

Ferrone's hands and feet were bound and he was rendered powerless on a litter, because it was feared he would attempt to attack someone in the courtroom or do himself some injury. The murderer was propped up when Judge Foster passed sentence, and even then he was closely guarded by nine court attendants and deputies.

DYNAMITE OUTRAGE IN HEART OF PUEBLO

One of West's Largest Laundries Partly Wrecked

Pueblo, Col., Jan. 20.—A terrific dynamite explosion partly wrecked the Colorado laundry, in the heart of the business district of this city, and damaged the office of the Globe Express company. City detectives, who immediately began an investigation, found a dynamite fuse in the alley outside of the express offices.

The laundry, one of the largest in the west, is a non-union plant. It is believed the object was to destroy a large tank used as a water softener. When this was being erected several years ago it mysteriously toppled over one night. The tank was erected by a Chicago Heights, Ills., company.

Heartless Father's Bargain Wins Divorce For His Wife

Pittsburgh, Jan. 20.—Mrs. Frances B. Lisbon won a divorce from her husband, Harry D. Lisbon, chiefly because Lisbon wanted to sell their 6-year-old daughter, Margaret, to an Italian count several weeks ago for $50,000. Mrs. Lisbon testified:

"My husband came home one evening and said: 'Bessie, an Italian count has just offered me $50,000 for Margaret. I told him I would bring the baby to him at once if you would give your consent.' I nearly fainted at this."

On the following day Mrs. Lisbon started divorce proceedings.

Eyestrain in Children---
ZOROID LENSES FOUNDED 1893
When children wear glasses it is a sign that prudent parents are protecting the eyes, that they may have proper vision later in life and during old age.
Headache, indigestion and attendant discomforts are often directly traceable to eyestrain that may be readily remedied.
Advanced optometry offers this remedy without the use of drugs, thereby avoiding all possibility of permanent injury to your children's eyes.

The Social Realm

A very pretty dancing party was given in Colonial hall last evening by Mrs. Horace G. Crocker of Park lane for the girls' club, composed of girls who assisted at the bazaar at Colonial hall last November. Dancing was enjoyed until half past eleven, music being by Miss Ruth Keating's orchestra. Frappe was served. The matrons were Mrs. Crocker, Mrs. Ira M. Whittemore, Mrs. Victor E. Miller and Mrs. Frank J. Moore.

MATINEE WHIST.

Colonial hall was the scene of a brilliant party Saturday afternoon the occasion being a matinee whist given under the auspices of the Quincy Catholic club. The ladies were becomingly gowned and their witty remarks and merry laughter rang through the hall.

Whist was played at fifteen tables and all entered into the spirit of the game and enjoyed it greatly. The game was played about three hours after which refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Charles C. Hearn, Mrs. Joseph D. Dasha, Mrs. Edward J. Murphy and Mrs. Edward Barrett.

Miss Mary L. Gavin, president of the club, announced the winners as follows: Mrs. M. E. Cook, Mrs. Rednor P. Coombs, Miss Julia Dolan, Mrs. M. C. King, Mrs. W. E. Murphy, Mrs. R. E. Foy, Mrs. Elizabeth Neary, Mrs. Francis Dolan, Mrs. James E. Coyle, and Mrs. George T. Magee. Mrs. Joseph Griffin was awarded the consolation, a fine two pound box of candy presented by Charles C. Hearn. The other souvenirs were donated by friends of the club.

Much credit is due Miss Gavin and the comimttee for the success of the party. The markers were Misses Esther Beckford, Esther Dasha, Stella Brown, Carmel Brogan, Emily Dinegan, Lilian MacDonnell, and Agnes Reardon.

Guests from out of town were, Mrs. W. E. Murphy of Brighton, Mrs. James E. Coxle, Ashmont, Mrs. Francis Dolan, Ashmont, Mrs. Margaret Ryan, Brighton, Mrs. Richard Lynch, Dorchester, Miss Julia Dolan, Dorchester, Miss Gertrude Kelly, Watertown, and Mrs. J. R. SUN APPEALS TO THE WORLD

He Asks For Recognition of New Republic of China

SENDS ULTIMATUM TO YUAN

Last Word of Rebels Pending National Convention Demands Abdication of Throne and Surrender of Sovereign Powers—Dual Role Proposed, the North for Yuan and South for Republicans, Accepted and Rejected

Nankin, Jan. 20.—The republican government has sent an appeal to the powers for recognition. This took the form of a circular which was sent to Washington, Tokio, London, Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg, and was signed by Wang Chung-Wei, the foreign minister of the republican cabinet.

The terms of the circular are as follows:

"The Manchu government having entered into negotiations with the republic of China for the purpose of abdicating its entire sovereign rights, powers and privileges, we fervently pray for recognition in order to avoid a disastrous interregnum."

The appeal follows an ultimatum delivered by President Sun to Premier Yuan Shi Kai demanding the abdication of the Manchu dynasty and containing a threat of a resumption of hostilities unless the demand is complied with.

The ultimatum telegraphed to Yuan by the republican government contains, according to the republican leaders, the last word of the republicans.

President Sun said to the press:

"I have taken an oath to oust the Manchu rulers and restore peace to the country before resigning. I have taken an oath to establish a republic in China, and if I consented to the propositions laid down by Yuan Shi Kai, I should be foresworn.

"China cannot permit outsiders to dictate her form of government. This republic is now an established fact. Nothing can swerve me from what I consider my duty to my fellow-countrymen.

"We are now confident of the righteousness of our cause and of the superiority of our military strength. If Yuan persists in obstructing, our armies will be ordered to march north."

Republican officials assert that one and possibly two foreign powers are urging Yuan to insist he should be constituted the head of the entire government and that Yuan has been given the assurance by those powers of assistance. Hence his change of attitude.

Yuan, it is stated, agreed a few days ago to the unequivocal retirement of the Manchus and to the recognition of a republic as the government of the southern provinces. He accepted the idea of a dual administration, the north to be under Yuan and the south under Sun, pending the decision of the national convention on the future government, which is to be held at a neutral point.

There is reason to believe this arrangement may be the final outcome of the negotiations between the republicans and imperialists.

It appears to be absolutely certain fighting between the revolutionists and the imperialists will be resumed on the morning of Jan. 28 unless Yuan concedes the demands of the republican government.

The republican government telegraphed these demands to Yuan at Pekin. The terms of the ultimatum are drastic and are substantially as follows:

The abdication of the throne and the surrender of the sovereign powers.

No Manchu to participate in the provisional government of China.

The capital of the provisional government cannot be established at Pekin.

Yuan cannot participate in the provisional government of China until the rebublic has been recognized by the foreign powers, and the country has been restored to peace and harmony.

The decided action by the republican government is due to Yuan's demand that Sun resign the presidency, permitting Yuan to exercise sovereign powers until the national convention which is to be called to decide on the form of government of China shall have reached a conclusion. In the meantime Yuan desires the court to retire, temporarily transferring its powers to him.

The court, however, objected to leaving Pekin until the national convention had reached a decision.

BIBLE STUDY

es and Y. M. C. A's must look after it or it will not be done.

There are three generations upon the stage at a time. There is the one that is going off; the one that is occupying the center of the stage and the one that is just coming onto the stage. The present generation is hopeless mortgaging the future if it does not look to this religious education in a very serious manner.

Boys today often drop out of Sunday School at 15 years. Why? Because we do not know the boy. We can talk about the bad boy problem but we never can solve it until we know the boy. The trouble is not with the boy but with the teacher. He will wriggle if he is alive. Boys are wound up to wiggle and girls are wound up to giggle. In Bible study we are feeding the boy of 6 as we are the boys of 16 or the man of 60. The boy of 10 is no more interested in Jeroboam than he is in trigonometry. When the speaker began teaching it was in the days of the three Rs. Then was added physiology; then psychology and lastly pedagogy. We have found out something about the boy. We have been trying to fit the child to the lessons rather than the lessons to the child. The child of four years is interested in fairy stories while the boy of 12 years is interested in hero stories. On one occasion while speaking to an audience of adults in which was a few boys he at one part of the address began "Once upon a time upon a very dark night etc" and whereas before that time the boys were in no way interested, they then began to take notice. We must find the point of contact. Mr. Honline once heard a speaker at a Chautaqua get his audience in which were a goodly number of farmers, by talking to them at the start about hogs and corn. You must get the point of contract in teaching your boys in Bible classes. You must take him exactly as he is. He has not a Monday mind and a Sunday mind. He don't want to go to heaven. Just offer him a ticket to heaven or one to the circus and he will take the one to the circus. Some of us have been trying to force grandmother's religion upon the boy. Not one word against the grandmother's religion. But she has nearly all her friends on the other side while he has never lost one and is interested in things here. There are many men who have never blossomed out into a full grown christian life because someone tried to force grown folks' religion upon them when they were boys.

If a man fails to join the church before he is 25 he does not often come into the church at all. He did not mean to say the Christian religian could not save him then, for it could.

If then we do not take up the problem of the child, who will? We ought to be trained for it. In other words it is our duty to train teachers for it. A preacher, and the missionary who is going to teach the little black or yellow children of the east must spend much time in preparation and yet when we come to our own children we are not nearly as particular as to their training. We must spend more time and money in doing this work. We equip a teacher with a 3 cent lesson book and expect she is going to teach the Bible to the children. And much of that stuff is warmed over. It is not a snap method work.

Not long since he was in a pottery factory. He was taken from the clay bank to the place where the finished product was produced. There were a great many workmen whose work went into the making of that vase. If anyone of those many hands who had a part in its production had not done good work upon it, it was thrown upon the dump heap. If somewhere along this process of forming the man some workman does not do his best work is the man to be thrown upon the dump heap because of his neglect? It makes it a great responsibility upon the persons who come in contact with those persons all along the way of life. We are coming today to see the need of better trained teachers and are providing for this training.

As Mr. Honline had to catch a train out of Boston for the west the time for the asking of questions was somewhat shorter than it has been on most of the other evenings.

There will be ample opportunity to ask Mr. Carver questions this evening and it is hoped that there will be the largest audience of the week out at this meeting.

Doubtless the hall will be filled tomorrow afternoon at 3.30 when A. M. Bruner of Chicago will speak on "Startling Questions." This meeting is open to every man in the city and vicinity and ought to be one that will be long remembered. The doors will be open at 3.

BRIEFS

The Walther Men's class holds their day at 12.15 in the Wollaston Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Alexander Blackburn of Boston will lead the lesson discussion and will also give an address in the men's department. All men, young or old not in other similar classes invited.

Funeral services for Eben A. Folsom of Atlantic street were conducted by the Rev. Thomas W. Davison on Wednesday. John Hancock lodge of Odd Fellows took part with their ritualistic service. Mr. Folsom was a member of Putnam Lodge of Roxbury which order took charge of the interment at Forest Hills cemetery.

Rev. Asher Anderson, D. D. is to preach again on Sunday at Bethany church.

The Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church is preparing for a turkey supper to be given Wednesday evening in the parish rooms. Mrs. D. C. Miller is in charge. The monthly missionary meeting of the Guild will be held Wednesday afternoon.

The Christian Endeavor of Memorial church is planning for a social on Tuesday evening. If the snow lasts the next social affair will be a sleigh ride.

Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton, a very able Unitarian divine is to preach at First church Sunday morning.

At the all-day sewing bee for benevolence of the Ladies Benevolent Society of Memorial church, Thursday, a dinner helped in the social enjoyment of the work. Mrs. Sarah Butler and Mrs. Welcome Young had the work laid out so that every one was kept busy from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Mrs. A. H. Hall, and Lyndon T. Gurney had charge of the chowder and coffee and others furnished rolls, cake and ice-cream.

Olive Fuller of Botolph street, who has been ill from a very severe cold is improving and hopes to be out soon.

The annual installation and banquet of Lodge Scandia, Order of Arthur took place Thursday evening in Protection hall.

Miss Leah Hennigar's class of St. Chrysostom's Sunday school, which is striving to win the prize to be presented to whomever first completes her apportionment of feet in "the mile of pennies" scheme for the Parish house fund, is holding a food and candy sale today at Miss Hennigar's home, 214 Safford street.

The Dramatic club of the Ladies' Society of Memorial church are to give the drama "Our Fair," the last of February.

At the next regular meeting of St. John's Holy Name society, to be held Tuesday evening, the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Fifteen or more Wollaston ladies attended the midwinter meeting of the New England Associate Alliance at Newton on Wednesday. Mrs. Chandler W. Smith is president and presided at the meeting.

At the prayer meeting of Memorial church Thursday evening W. F. Cummings gave an enthusiastic report of the Men and Religion movement. At first thought he did not think that some of the problems touched our church but when figures were compared it was seen that no church could escape the searching and scientific work of the present Religion Movement.

The annual parish meeting of Christ church is to be held Wednesday night in the parish house at quarter of eight. After the business session the Woman's Guild is to serve refreshments.

GREAT STRIKE STRENGTHENS

American Element at Lawrence Joins With Foreigners

A LARGER MILITARY FORCE

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 20.—Minor clashes between the strikers and militia, several arrests for assault and drunkenness, with alarming rumors and the announcement that the present military force will be augmented today by four companies, kept this city in a state of unrest.

A restless army surged through the streets all day and detectives, speaking different languages, sent out among the trubulent factions, brought back ugly rumors which have led to the unofficial but authentic report that te military will be soon increased to a full regiment.

The attitude of the strikers was not improved by the announcement that the Pacific mills had declared a dividend of a little over 10 percent to its stockholders.

Before paytime there were hungry mouths clamoring for bread. Two bakers' carts were stripped by strikers and this is taken as a warning to what will follow when the week's pay is spent.

To protect the mills from dynamiting from the river side, all persons owning boats or having them for rent have been asked to notify the headquarters at the armory just as soon as anyone appears to secure a boat. A patrol boat system is to be inaugurated.

Mayor Scanlon was informed that an attempt may be made on his life. He appeared on the street with a guard accompanying him.

Saloons Are Closed

The saloons were closed at 7 o'clock last night. Several arrests for drunkenness led to the taking of this action. Late last night an order was issued that all saloons must stay closed today. This includes hotels.

The charge that intimidation is keeping 20,000 persons from going back to the mills was somewhat battered when 1400 mill operatives, all higher paid English-speaking, voted to join the strike. Many of these are members of the unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Efforts are still being made to bring the strike to an end. Charles G. Wood of New Bedford and a member of the state board of arbitration will be in this city again today to confer with the strike leaders. These men say that they intend to fight to a finish.

On Mill street pickets of the strikers clashed with the militia and two of the mill workers were battered by the gun butts of the soldiers. Several times during the day it looked as if there would be trouble. The soldiers charged up the short streets leading from Canal street, where the mills are located, to Essex street, driving the strikers before their fixed bayonets.

Alleged Threat to Kil

An important arrest was made during the afternoon, when State Officer Thompson called Michael Cubera from Chadlitz hall, where Joseph J. Ettor, leader of the strikers, was making an address, and placed him under arrest. Captain Proctor of the state police assisted Thompson when they got Cubera outside the meeting place. He was charged with intimidating Pul Cassananca, a mill worker who has not joined the strikers. It is alleged he threatened to kill Cassananca if he persisted in going to work.

Corporation Detective Murphy arrested Ettor Giannini for intimidating. A revolver was found in his clothes and he was fined $100 and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. He appealed and was held in $1300. Giannini was a lieutenant of Joseph J. Ettor, and the police say he is an anarchist.

Several of the mills paid off the back money due the striking operatives. The men and women were paid through an iron grating.

Payment Under Armed Guard

All day a restless crowd walked the streets and the payment at the mills was done under heavy guard. When the money received is gone then trouble is feared. Organizer Ettor made urgent state wide appeals for financial assistance, but when 20,000 people become hungry what will be done is a grave question.

Late last night the police received word that nearly 100 Italians had arrived in Lawrence and they are investigating the newcomers.

Three searchlights played on the riverfront at the big Wood mill and along the bridge over the Merrimac a line of sentries was posted last night. It was rumored that this mill was to be attacked. A full company of militia is stationed in the mill.

Several of the militia companies have been shifted. One of the Lawrence companies contains several mill employes and this company is placed farthest from what is believed will be the important position.

Pay day and the opening of the saloons coming at the same time caused the already overworked police much trouble.

STOLE FROM THE INSANE

Judge Hands Out Two-Year Sentence to "Meanest of Grafters"

New York, Jan. 20.—Simon Katzenstein, a Bronx bone and fat dealer, convicted of bribery in connection with the theft of 100,000 pounds of meat from the Manhattan state hospital for the insane at Ward's island, was sentenced in general sessions to two years in Sing Sing.

In pronouncing sentence upon Katzenstein Judge Swann deonunced him as "the meanest of all the grafters who stole from the insane," and said that although the jury strongly recommended mercy he felt it his duty to impose a severe sentence in order to deter others from stealing from public institutions.

SAYS RICHESON IS NEAR TO BREAKDOWN

Counsel's Statement Is Not Agreed to by Sheriff Quinn

Boston, Jan. 20.—William A. Morse, attorney for Clarence V. T. Richeson, said last night that the man under sentence of death for the murder of Avis Linnell was on the verge of a nervous shock that undoubtedly would mean a serious illness.

"I am very sure," said Morse, "that Richeson will be seriously ill in a few days. His condition at present is awful. He is in such a state that I believe if he were told of the action taken by the governor's council in regard to Phelps the words would be a death blow to him"

Sheriff Quinn disagreed with Morse when he said last night: "Richeson is not in any danger of a collapse. He is in good physical condition."

The sheriff further stated that Richeson still is hopeful that his sentence may be commuted. So fearful is Quinn that the prisoner in some manner may harm himself that, in addition to the two guards who are ever in his cell, he has ordered that the prisoner receive no food from outside the jail.

EXPERTS AT FAULT

Man Unjustly Sent to Prison Is Pardoned by the President

Washington, Jan. 20.—A miscarriage of justice caused President Taft to grant a full and unconditional pardon to Oscar Krueger of New York, who has served nearly one year of an eighteen months' sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for a crime he did not commit.

Expert handwriting testimony, it was said, was responsible for his conviction on a charge of mailing an obscene letter. An exhaustive investigation by the department of justice established Krueger's complete innocence.

The Right Way to do Your Housecleaning.

Mrs. Tired N. Weary—"Here's a letter from Mrs. Sprightly. She wants John and me to come over on Wednesday night. I would just love to go—but no, I will be housecleaning next week. Scrubbing and rubbing make me unfit for everything. It is worse than a whole week of washdays, isn't it, Anty Drudge?"

Anty Drudge—"It depends altogether on how you do your housecleaning, my dear. If you do it the Fels-Naptha way—rub up your floors and paints with cool or lukewarm water and Fels-Naptha Soap, you will be fresh enough for any entertainment when night time comes."

Is it any wonder that the woman with a big family who washes the way her grandmother did has red swollen hands—big knuckles—large veins?

Yours would be that way too, if you had to spend one whole day out of each week, standing over a tub of steaming suds, rubbing like mad on the washboard.

To say nothing of the labors of housecleaning.

But, "thank goodness!" times have changed since grandmother was a girl.

Fels-Naptha has relieved the world of the hard rub and scrub; of the steaming suds. It washes clothes white as snow in cool or lukewarm water, in one-half the time and with one-tenth the effort of the old-fashioned way.

That is why so many housewives of today are retaining their soft, white and shapely hands; their fine nails and their clear, girlish complexion.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Straight across from him, couched in the mosses of a soggy old log, a big green bullfrog, with palpitant throat and batting eyes, lifted his head and bellowed in answer, "Fin' dout, fin' dout!"

"Wha-what's that?" stammered Freckles, almost too much taken aback to speak. "I—I know you are only a bullfrog; but, be jabers, that sounded mightily like speech. Wouldn't you please to be saying it over?"

The bullfrog cuddled contentedly in the ooze. Then suddenly he lifted his voice and, like an imperative drumbeat, rolled it again. "Fin' dout, fin' dout, fin' dout!"

Freckles had the answer.

Like the lightning's flash, something seemed to snap in his brain. There was a wavering flame before his eyes. Then his mind cleared. His head lifted in a new poise, his shoulders squared, and his spine straightened. The agony was over. His soul floated free. Freckles came into his birthright.

"Before God, I will!" He uttered the oath so impressively that the recording angel never winced as he posted it up in the prayer column.

Freckles set his hat over the top of one of the locust posts used between trees to hold up the wire and fastened the feather securely in the band. Then he started down the line, talking to himself as men that have worked long alone always fall into the habit of doing.

"What a fool I have been!" he muttered. "Of course that's what I have to do. There wouldn't likely anybody be doing it for me. Of course I can! What am I a man for? If I was a four footed thing of the swamp maybe I couldn't, but a man can do anything if he's the grit to work hard enough and stick at it. Mr. McLean is always saying, and here's the way I am to do it. He said, too, that there were people that knew everything in the swamp. Of course they have written books. The thing for me to be doing is to quit moping and be buying me some books. Never bought a book in me life or anything else of much account, for that matter. Oh, ain't I glad I didn't waste me money! I'll surely be having enough to get a few. Let me see."

CHAPTER IV.

FRECKLES' WORLD OF PROMISE.

FRECKLES had walked the timber line ten months. His pay was $30 a month, and his board cost $8. That left $22 a month, and the $2 was more than his clothing had cost him. At the very least he had $200 in the bank.

"I'll be having a book about all the birds, trees, flowers, butterflies—and, yes, by gummy, I'll be having one about the frogs—if it takes every cent I have," he promised himself.

Freckles fell into a rapid pace, for he had lost time that morning, and as he rounded the last curve he was almost running.

Then, wavering, flickering, darting here and there over the sweet marsh grass, came a great black shadow. He had seen some owls and hawks of the swamp that he thought could be classed as large birds, but never anything like this, for six feet it spread its great shining wings. Its big, strong feet could be seen drawn up among its feathers. The sun glinted on its sharp, hooked beak. It lit on a low tree, and a second later Freckles saw another shadow sweep the grass.

They were evidently mates, for with a queer rolling hop the first comer shivered his bronze wings, sidled up to the new arrival and gave her a silly little peck on her wing. Then he coquettishly drew away and ogled her. He lifted his head and waddled from her a few steps, awkwardly ambled back and gave her a sort of kiss on her beak.

The lover sidestepped a few feet. He spread his wings and slowly and softly waved them precisely, as if he were fanning his charmer, which indeed was the result he accomplished. Then he hobbled up to his bombardment once more. He faced her squarely this time and turned his head from side to side with queer little jerks and indiscriminate peckings at her wings and head. She yawned and shuffled away indifferently. Freckles reached up, pulled the quill from his hat and, looking from it to the birds, nodded in settled conviction.

With a ravishing swagger, half lifted wings and deep, guttural hissing the lover came on again. He suddenly lifted his body, but the other bird coolly rocked forward on the limb, glided gracefully beneath him and slowly sailed off into the Limberlost.

Freckles hurried down the trail, and when he neared the path to the clearing and saw the boss sitting motionless on the mare that was the pride of his heart the boy broke into a run.

"Oh, Mr. McLean," he cried, "I hope I haven't kept you waiting very long! And the sun is getting so hot! I have been so slow this morning! I could have gone faster, only there were so many things to keep me, and I didn't know you would be here. I'll hurry after this. I've never had to be giving excuses before. The line wasn't down, and there wasn't a sign of trouble. It was other things that were making me late."

This flushed, panting, talkative lad was not the same creature that had sought him in despair and bitterness. With an eloquence of which he never dreamed Freckles told his story. He talked with such enthusiasm that McLean never took his eyes from his face nor shifted in the saddle until he described the strange bird lover, and then the boss suddenly bent over the pommel and laughed with him.

"They're back there in the middle of the swamp now," said Freckles. "Do you suppose there is any chance of them staying with me chickens? If they do they'll be about the queerest I have. But I tell you, sir, I am getting some plumb good ones. There's a new kind over at the mouth of the creek that uses its wings like feet and walks on all fours. It travels like a thrashing machine. There's another, tall as me waist, with a bill a foot long, a neck near two, not the thickness of me wrist and an elegant color. He's some blue and gray, touched up with black, white and brown. The voice of him is such that if he'd be going up and standing by a tree and sawing at it a few times he could be cutting it square off. I don't know but it would be a good idea to try him on the gang, sir."

McLean laughed. "Those must be blue herons, Freckles," he said. "And it doesn't seem possible, but your story of the big black birds sounds like genuine black vultures. They are common enough in the south. I've seen them thick about the lumber camps of Georgia, but I never heard of any this far north before. They must be strays. You have perfectly described our nearest equivalent to a branch of these birds called in Europe Pharaoh's chickens."

"He was loving her so," said Freckles in a hushed voice. Freckles lifted his brave, steady eyes to the boss. "If anybody loved me like that, Mr. McLean, I wouldn't be spending any time caring how they looked or moved. All I'd be thinking of was how they felt toward me. If they will stay I'll be caring as much for them as any chickens I have."

The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

ASKS ANOTHER JUDGESHIP

Several Strong Boston Indorsements Presented by Peters

Washington, Jan. 20.—Representative Peters appeared before the house committee on the judiciary in behalf of his bill creating an additional district judgeship in Massachusetts. Contrary to expectations there was no opposition.

Mr. Peters read a letter from Governor Foss indorsing his bill, and several strong Boston indorsements of the measure. The only objection suggested by the committee was when a member pointed out that the Massachusetts federal district has the lightest work of any district in the United States.

Mr. Peters is confident that the committee will follow the example of the senate committee which reported the Lodge bill favorably a day or two ago.

GETS VERDICT OF $7639

Claim That Man's Life Is Shortened by Loss of His Spleen

New York, Jan. 20.—Arthur Gallo, a young machinist, was awarded $7639 by the appellate division of the supreme court for the loss of his spleen, which, it was alleged, will shorten his life to five years.

In August, 1909, a surgeon was forced to cut out Gallo's spleen because of injuries he received in falling through an open grating to the basement of a building. He sued the owner of the building for $50,000 damages.

The doctor who performed the operation on Gallo testified that many medical authorities believed that a man ordinarily dies within five years after removal of his spleen.

BRIEFS

A beautiful sunset last night for a winter evening.

The annual ball of the Milton Firemen's Relief Association is to be held at the Town hall, Feb. 7.

S. Gunaris, the well-known candy manufacturer, was the guest of Anthony J. Thompson, proprietor of the Thompson Cafe, Thursday.

Charles H. Johnson is to give his illustrated lecture "Historic Quincy" in the First Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, Jan. 30.

The January meeting of the Hospital Aid Association will be held next Thursday afternoon Jan. 25, at the home of Miss Prescott, 41 Spear street, at the usual hour 2.30.

Master Charles W. Johnson son of Mr. and Mrs. August V. Johnson of Kendrick avenue, while sliding down Penn's hill, met with an accident, cutting his leg which has confined him to his bed.

Mrs. Chester Studley, president of the local auxiliary, Woman's Board of Missions of Rockland , will take part in a discussion "What Should be the Attitude of the Church to the Missionary Cause?" at the January meeting of Norfolk and Pilgrim branch, W. B. M., to be held at Bethany Congregatinal church, Quincy, Tuesday, Jan. 23.

The efficient management of Mrs. Daniel C. Miller, chairman of the supper committee of the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church and the number of tickets already sold assure the success of the turkey supper. Those assisting will be truly thankful when better conveniences and increased facilities are provided by the New Parish house which is now certain. The proceeds are to be added to that fund.

QUINCY HIGH ROCKLAND GAME

Quincy Boys Score Victory in Face of Seeming Defeat

THE SUMMARY

The ability of the players of the Quincy High basketball team was greatly demonstrated in the game with Rockland High yesterday, for after the home team had secured a lead of 13 to 2 in the first half, the local players entered the game in the following half with renewed vigor, confidence and determination, the result of which was that they not only proved their superiority over their opponents, by emerging with a victory, but gave evidence of it in a splendid manner by holding them down to one point more than was made in the first half. The work of coach Staff was productive of great good, and even in the face of an apparent defeat, it was clearly shown that his team work instruction was just the thing needed in order to enable Quincy High to round out a victory.

Over confidence may have figured to some extent in the defeat sustained by the Rockland players, yet their lack of endurance, together with their inability to display the necessary form at crucial moments, figured largely in the final result. It was the fifth straight victory for the local players and it was the second time this season that they have triumphed over the Rockland High team. The game in the second half was keenly interesting and exciting and it was a source of inspiration to Captain Chapman's team, in its endeavors to contest for the championshop interscholastic honors.

PLANS FOR THE POLICE BALL

An orchestra of eleven pieces will be the special feature at the annual concert and ball of the- Quincy Police men's Mutual Relief Association, to be held in Music Hall, Friday evening, February 2nd. All plans for the affair have been perfected and it is expected that the hall will be taxed to overflowing on this occasion. The affair will begin at 8 o'clock and conclude at 2 o'clock the following morning, at which time special cars will be run to all points.

February dates are beginning to come in for the "Coming Events" column and it looks as though it was also to be a busy month socially Look over the list and keep posted on the doings of the city

BASKET BALL AT WOODWARD

Blanche Hayden Secures Thirteen Baskets from Floor

THE SCORE

Thirteen baskets were secured from the floor by Miss Blanche Hayden, in the game played Friday at the Woodward Institute between the classes of 1914 and 1915. The game resulted in a victory for the former by the score of 28 to 1. Of the thirteen baskets, Miss Hayden caged seven in the first half and six in the last.

She was the star players of the contest, which was one of a series for the championship of the school, a gold cup being the prize at stake, to be awarded to the winning contingency. Miss Hayden pursues the ball at all stages of the game and this, added to her endurance and possession of a marked accuracy in locating the baskets, makes her a school girl basket ball player without a peer. Miss Helen Bishop also played well for the victors and succeeded in making a goal from the floor at a difficult angle.

The losers failed to make a single basket, Miss Marion Duffy saving them from a shut out by putting the ball through the loop hole on a try from foul.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

I am given to understand that Frank Bruce, a well known local runner, and champion Italian runner of America for 15 miles, is contemplating a monster indoor meet, to be held next month in the Coliseum. Two men relay races will be arranged between some of the foremost associations of Greater Boston, including the Brookline Gym A. A., North Dorchester A. A., South Boston A. A., and the Italian American A. C.

In addition, the meet will bring out such stars as Clarence DeMar, winner of the Boston Marathon, James Hennigan, William Hackett, the Brockton Marathoner, and John J. Cook, the ten mile amateur champion of New England.

Fasci and Bruce will endeavor to bring home laurels to the Italian American A. C. Next Tuesday evening, in the Coliseum, the trials for the local association will be held, and as some sterling runners will perform for the occasion, it now begins to look as if we are on the progressive path of indoor athletics in local circles.

A sporting critic muses thus in the morning Globe:

Of course, the aphorism "Better late than ever," could be made applicable in this case, yet we would like to impress forcibly upon the writer of the above, that coach Staff made good some time ago and it is only natural to assume that his "making good" still continues to exist.

The much heralded St. Joseph's team was given another set back last evening in the Boston College Gymnasium—this time by the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. five. By the victory the latter acquired the leadership of the Greater Boston Basketball league. This will put the Quincy A. A. more conspicuously in the limelight and will now make its members foremost contenders for the honors at stake.

There is to be a double wedding this evening at Electa hall, followed by a reception which will be of special interest to our Swedish people, the contracting parties being Otto Sedon Johnson and Augusta Hendrickson, and Erik Albin Erikson and Hannah Johnson.

* * *

The Cinerario club had its first meeting of the season at the home of Miss Louise H. Mahoney, 8 Barry street, West Quincy, on Friday evening after the business was transacted, refreshments were served and an enjoyable hour spent.

SECOND DEGREE MURDER

Keys Pleads Guilty and Is Sent to Prison For Life

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 20.—Judge Crosby, in the superior court, sentenced Lewis Keys, a negro, to life imprisonment in the Charlestown state prison, after he had pleaded guilty to an indictment of murder in the second degree in causing the death of Ernest Hays, also a negro, in Washington.

The government charged that Keys shot Hays, who was a fellow workman on the dam the city of Pittsfield is building at Washington mountain, during a dispute over a card game.

Turks Slain by Hundreds

London, Jan. 20.—A report of an attack by 3000 Turks on Italians who were engaged in repairing the water supply at Derna says that the Turks were repulsed, hundreds of them being killed. The Italians had three killed and seven wounded.

BOWLING.

If the McGregors had started in the manner in which they rolled the last string, they would not have succumbed to a defeat at the hands of the McKenzie Caln of the Scotish Clans' league in the game bowled last evening at the Brunswick alleys. Maverton of the winning team, had the highest mark for a single string, which was 115 Stewart of the winners, was high man for the sum total, attaining the 302 mark

The members of the Quincy team were defeated by the Cambridge five in the game bowled last evening at the Hub alleys, in connection with the Pattern Makers league

Horsfall, of the local combination, reached the century mark in the single string, while the largest sum total was made by Bieg, of winning team his grand average being 278. Both teams were off form, the local boys, especially failing to come up to their usual standard.

PRICELESS RELICS.

In the destruction by fire of the North Congregational church at Braintree last week Wednesday, several priceless relics were lost, including a silver communion service which has been in the possession of the society for nearly 150 years, the old clock which had held a place in the front of the balcony, inside the church so long that the oldest communicant cannot remember when it was not there. There was also a bible 150 years old and beautiful memorial windows.—Bryantville News.

Men and Religion Movement Meetings Close in Quincy

GOOD RESULTS

When the Campaign for the Men and Religion Forward Movement began in this district, there were a great many who looked upon the plan with a good deal of doubt. It was the experience with nearly everyone who came into contact with the work that the plan was headed in the right direction. The only question was that of Dr. O. P. Gifford, of Boston, "Whether you could keep her headed that way." In this respect as well there has been a great change of sentiment.

The meeting yesterday, while purely an evangelistic meeting, showed the increased interest on the part of the men. This was the first meeting of the kind that has been held in Quincy for some time. The large attendance told of the interest that has been awakened.

A song service was greatly enjoyed for some fifteen minutes, after which the Rev. J. A. Mitchell of the Braintree Baptist Church read the Scripture and offered prayer.

The speaker was A. M. Bruner, of Chicago, for many years an evangelist to railroad men. Mr. Bruner is one of the team of experts who had not visited Quincy on any of the other nights. He gave the men a straight out from the shoulder gospel talk upon "Startling Questions."

He began with some of the startling questions that have confronted many men in various walks in life. Some of these were questions that have confronted men in public life in

CLAIMS QUINCY TO BE HIS HOME

A dispatch in a morning paper from Vassalboro, Maine, tells of the arrest of a man giving the name of William Bissett, of Quincy, for breaking into the Maine Central station at that place Saturday night. Entrance was made through the ladies room and Bissett who was seen about the station Saturday night when the agent closed up, was overtaken by a section hand on a hand car between Vassalboro and Riverside. Deputy Sheriff L. J. P. McCarthy of Waterville came down by the special freight train and took Bissett to Waterville

BRIEFS

The annual reunion of St. Mary's parish will be held Feb. 19. The St. Mary's guild are rehearsing a drama for the event.

A whist party, which will conclude with dancing, will be held in St. Mary's Hall, next Wednesday evening by the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus.

The semi-annual meeting of the Massachusetts City Messengers' club of which City Messenger Tirrell, is vice president will be held at the Quincy house Boston Saturday.

Letters received this morning from ex-Mayor Shea say that he is in good health and enjoying himself. When he wrote he was in Columbia, S. C., but intended to go to Pinehurst.

The second half of the school year begins Monday, Jan. 29, and children will be admitted to the first grades on that date if they are six years of age or become six years before Feb. 29.

The young people of Atlantic feel that it is just the time to flood the play ground. Last year an attempt was made, but it could not be done. However conditions are now more favorable.

Ex-councilman Frank Badger who has sailed Quincy bay every summer for years, tried his hand at sailing an ice-boat Sunday, but he had a summer experience in not getting wind enough and some of the skaters towed him ashore.

While skating in the vicinity of his home, Saturday afternoon, Phillips Marr, a youngster residing at 115 Summer street fell on the ice and fractured his collar bone. He walked to the office of Dr. W. J. Middleton, where he received treatment it seems that young Marr has been unfortunate in skating on different occasions for Saturday made the fifth time that he has sustained a similiar injury to his collar bone.

Miss Maud Pearl Craig of 127 Franklin street accompanied Madame Edith R. Noyes (Mrs. Greene) of Boston to Symphony hall on Saturday afternoon to hear Josef Hofmann, the celebrated pianist. After the concert, Miss Craig was introduced to him and obtained his autograph which she highly treasures. She greatly appreciated his wonderful playing as she is an accomplished pianist herself.

It is going to be hard to collect campaign funds this year, according to the general prediction. The trusts are probably tired of buying legislative goods on the mail order plan, and want them delivered before paying for them.

CRUELTY TO A HORSE ALLEGED

Wm. Cunningham Accused of Abandoning Stolen Horse

ARRESTED IN CITY SQUARE

Inspector Goodhue arrested Wm. Cunningham, aged 55 years, in City Square Saturday night on a charge of cruelty to animals. Cunningham was formerly employed by Lotta Crabtree as foreman of her farm at Squantum.

Last winter Cunningham had some trouble with Miss Crabtree and left her employ. A few days later it is alleged that he entered her stable and took out the famous stallian Nut Tree, which was valued at several thousand dollars.

After driving the horse for a considerable distance it is claimed that he turned the animal loose at Squantum. The night was a bitter cold one and the temperature fell to four below zero during the night.

The next morning the motor man on the first electric car for Squantum saw the animal in the marshes near the aviation field, buried nearly to his neck. The authorities were notified and it was with great difficulty that the horse was extricated. The night's exposure brought on pneumonia and it was with great difficulty that the animal's life was saved, but he has never been as well since.

The Mass. Protection to Animal society took up the matter and have been looking for Cunningham ever since but have been unable to find any trace of him although he claims he has been living in Haverhill.

Saturday Inspector Goodhue who is also an agent for the society learned that Cunningham was in Quincy and was on the look out for him. Saturday evening he saw his man in City Square and placed him under arrest.

It is reported that Miss Crabtree may bring charge of larceny against Cunningham.

EDNA C. DONOVAN.

The funeral of Edna Catherine Donovan, the ten-year old daughter of Michael and Elizabeth A. Donovan, who died early Saturday morning in the Quincy Hospital, after a brief illness, took place from her late residence, 18 Hunt street, this morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated in the church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, at nine o'clock, by the pastor, Rev. John P. Cuffe. The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished by the regular choir, under direction of Miss Louise Costello, organist. At the offertory Miss Clara Duggan rendered the "De Profundis," and Miss Catherine Dolan sang the "Piu Jesu," after the libera. The pall bearers, all officers connected with Quincy police department, of which the father of the deceased is a member, were John Halloran, John Larkin, John Duffy and James Whelan. The funeral was attended by a large circle of friends and there was a great profusion of floral tokens, including a large standing cross from the members of the police department. The little Donovan girl was familiarly known in the Atlantic district and had endeared herself to a number of friends. The funeral services were in charge of Edward L. Bean and interment was at the family lot in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

BROTHER AND SISTER MARRY

Reception at Electa Hall Follows Double Ceremony

BRIDES GOWNED ALIKE

Electa hall was the scene of a gay and merry party Saturday evening the occasion being the marriage reception of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sidan Johanson and Mr. and Mrs. Albin Erickson. The contracting parties had previously furnished very pretty homes in one of the pleasant apartment houses on Nelson avenue and it was there the double weddings were solemnized, the Rev. Axel Andrea, a close friend of the grooms, and pastor of the Lutheran church of Waltham officiating.

The hall was very brilliantly lighted, the stage banked with potted plants and palms, and to the strains of the wedding march played by the Quincy National orchestra, the wedding party was ushered in taking position at the head of the hall. Mr. and Mrs. Johanson and Mr. and Mrs. Erickson were assisted in receiving by the bridesmaids, Anna Gustafson and Anna Lund, the best men Algot Erickson and Charles Hendrickson.

Both brides wore the conventional white, Mrs. Johanson, who was Miss Augusta Henrickson was attired in white marquisette with lace trimmings, cut princess. Mrs. Erickson (Miss Hannah Johanson) was gowned in white embroidered net with lace trimmings. Both carried large bouquets of bride roses, tied with long wide white satin ribbon.

Anna Lund and Charles Hendrickson attended Mr. and Mrs. Johanson and Anna Bustafson and Algot Erickson Mr. and Mrs. Erickson. Mrs. Erickson is a sister of Mr. Johanson.

After the company had congratulated the brides and grooms and wished them much joy, Nils Nelson served wine, Esther Askland and Helen Peterson assisting in serving cake.

Dancing was indulged in until ten o'clock, when the company was invited to a collation, served in the banquet room, consisting of hot coffee, Swedish bread, various kinds of delicious cake, and at the head table occupied by the bridal party, was a large and beautiful loaf of wedding cake, daintily frosted, which the brides cut. Many of the young girls laughingly declared they were going to take their pieces home to dream on.

Dancing was resumed and enjoyed until half past eleven, when ice cream and cake were served. The young ladies assisting in serving refreshments were Esther Hogeback, Irene Bjorklund, Ida Bjorklund and Olga Londquist.

There were about 150 guests present, among whom were : Dagmar Nelson, Esther Hogeback, Edward Matson, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Matson, Ida Bjorklund, Albion Matson, Selma Bjorklund, Helen Peterson, Esther Asklund, Edric Matson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Asklund, Mabelle Wentworth, Gerda Johnson, Elsie Peterson, Lillian Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. John Lindholm, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Backman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Erickson, Miss Edith Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. John Gullen, Mr. and Mrs. Swen Cederstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Matson, Gunner Dattman, Lena Hedlund, Mr. and Mrs. Ander Johnson, Mr and Mrs. Charles Johnson, Emily Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Nils Nelson. Gust Erickson, John Lindgren, Eric Carlson, Axel Peterson, Agnes Johnson, Emma Larson, Emma Anderson, Hilma Sondberg, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Halstrem, Mr. and Mrs. Alget Ekblom.

The guests from out of town were: Hulda Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Johnson, Cambridge; Karinsa Matson Neponset. A party who came from Norwood in an automobile were Mr and Mrs. John Oleson; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Sweburigren, Mr. and Mrs. M. Erickson and Ivin Lindell, Selma Carlson, Emily Carlson, Oscar Carlson, Philip Larson, Alma Unger and Peter Larson from Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Johanson and Mr. and Mrs. Erickson departed for their respective homes, amid showers of rice and confetti with expressions of good will and hearty wishes for their happiness and prosperity.

PARISH TO HOLD GRAND REUNION

Parishioners of St. John's Church Plan for Reunion

COMMITTEES

A meting of the parishioners of the Church of St. John the Baptist, was held Sunday afternoon in the assembly hall of the Parochial school and plans were formulated for a grand parish re-union, to be held Monday evening, Feb. 19. The affair will take place in Parochial school hall and no efforts will be spared to make the occasion a gala one for all.

In previous years, the parish reunions have been looked forward to with great anxiety and enthusiasm and consequently the committee in charge is especially desirous of having this coming event eclipse anything yet undertaken by the parishioners.

A large number of parishioners attended the meeting Sunday and Rev. John J. Coan, Rev. Patrick J. Scannell and Rev. John J. Casey, addressed the gathering. A number of others also spoke, each one bringing forcibly to bear the effects the re-union would have, in enabling the parishioners to renew old acquaintances and to become more intimately associated with one another.

All the committees were appointed at the meeting, and active work has already begun. The committees will meet again next Tuesday evening in the school hall. The re-union will take place in the form of a whist party, concert, supper and dance.

The following comprise the general committee:

Chairman,—Patrick J. Driscoll.
Secretary,—Miss Mary Costello.

MEN.

Ward one.—John H. Dinegan, M. E. Cook, Michael T. Sullivan, John T. Caine, John W. Walsh, Edward D. Barrett.

Ward two,—John A. Avery, John W. McAnarney, James McGovern, John J. Cunniff, John T. Bruton, Henry T. Gallagher.

LADIES.

Ward one,—Mrs. M. E. Cook, Miss Mary Colligan, Mrs. Daniel Deasy, Mrs. John W. Walsh, Mrs. Edward Murphy, Mrs. Edward D. Barrett, Mrs. Charles C. Hearn, Miss Mary Harkins.

Ward two.—Miss Nellie Desmond, Miss Mary Costello, Mrs. John T. Bruton, Mrs. James McGovern, Mrs. John J. Cunniff, Mrs. Henry T. Gallagher, Mrs. William Sullivan, Miss Margaret Sweeney and Miss Agnes Crowley.

Ward three,—Miss Jane Griffin, Mrs. M. E. Foy, Mrs. Thomas De Coste, Miss Agnes Deasey, Mrs. James Heaney, Mrs. R. E. Foy, Mrs. George Ferguson and Mrs. George A. Deehan.

The press committee includes Peter M. Sullivan (chairman)) Timothy J. Collins and Leo P. Noonan.

WATTS H. BOWKER.

Watts H. Bowker, who was one of the orfolk County Comimsisoners at the time Dedham courthouse was built, dropped dead Saturday at Brookline. He was 76 years of age and was born in Machias, Me. He was a veteran of the civil war, serving as musician in the 6th Maine volunteers.

TODAY'S COURT.

Edward McRae was fined 10 for drunkenness and 25 for creating a disturbance on the cars at Braintree.

William Cunningham was fined $100 for cruelty to a horse at Quincy.

SACRED HEART CHURCH REUNION

The annual reunion and coffee party of the parishioners of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantis, will take place tomorrow evening in Alpha Hall, and from present indications everything points to a most successful observance of this annual event. It is expected that a large gathering will be in attendance and everything has been done to make the occasion prove a most gala one.

A concert of a most enjoyable nature has been arranged and will comprise the following: soprano solo, Miss Catherine Duggan, violin duet, the Misses Margaret and Florence White, soprano duet, the Misses Dorothy and Nora Duggan and a Scotch dance by Miss Grace MacDonald. A supper will be served during the evening and the affair will terminate at midnight with dancing

Francis J. Lavery is in charge of the general committee. The floor director will be John A. McGowan, and the chairman of the refreshment committee is Wendell J. Sprunk.

GRIGNON WINS CHECKER MATCH

Napoleon B. Grignon of West Quincy, the champion checker player captured his match Saturday night with Frank L. McClennan at the Wells Memorial Institute. The match ended abruptly when McClennan had lost two of the eight games played, six of which having been drawn.

An attempt will be made to match the two men for another series. The series which closed Saturday commenced Dec. 30.

HARRY BUTTERFIELD.

Harry Butterfield, a long and well-known resident of Quincy, passed away at the Quincy Home Sunday evening of a shock received Saturday. Up to Saturday morning he had apparently been in his usual good health. It was during the morning while about the Home that he had a shock. He remained unconscious until 7.30 Sunday evening when he died. He was 70 years of age, his death occurring on the anniversary of his birth. Years ago he was engaged in the tanning business in the rear of the Keating buildings on Washington street but had not followed any business for many years. His wife died some years ago in Cambridge.

KILLED BY CARS AT SO. QUINCY

Body of Ernest Ceapitti Found Near Old Pumping Station

BADLY MUTILATED

A track walker found the body of Ernest Ceapitti, of Quincy alongside the railroad tracks near the old pumping station at South Quincy early Sunday morning. The body was cut in two and badly mutilated.

Medical Examiner Jones was notified and from the position of the body thought the man had probably been struck by a late inward train. There is a foot path across the tracks at this point, used extensively by granite cutters going too and from work and it was near this path that the body was found.

Ceapitti who was 38 years of age and resided at 13 Brook avenue, left home early Saturday evening and it is thought that he was returning by this path when struck by the train. There are some however who are inclined to think the case one of suicide for it is said he had not been very strong mentally for sometime.

He was employed as a stone cutter and leaves a widow and two children. The body after being viewed by Medical Examiner Jones was given in charge of an undertaker.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

It takes a fire in a fire-proof building to bother the firemen much now-a-days.

Gov. Wilson has declared war on the mosquito and the house-fly, but he says nothing about presidential bees.

If Woodrow Wilson succeeds in knocking Mr. Bryan into a cocked hat, we presume he would then proceed to sit on the "lid.

If they had only called out the Vet firemen with the hand tub, we feel sure the Equitable building might have been saved.

While we are keenly interested in Mr. Roosevelt, we decline to devote a column and a half to a description of his powers in cutting down a birch sapling.

The Carnegie monument should commemorate some truly historic event, like getting the better of John D. on the ore deal, rather than merely getting rid of a few thousand libraries.

Andrew Carnegie is to be depicted in a statue representing him in the act of handing out a book. We hope the book is some real enduring classic like the Base Ball guide for 1912.

When the Equitable company officers remove that billion of securities from the burned building, they should not take them home and put them under that loose plank in the back stairs for safe keeping.

From the grouchy way Wall street talks, one would think that some of those brokers had lost as much as $4.98 by speculation, instead of spending their time supporting their families by honest industry.

Pastor Richeson is to be electrocuted for killing Avis Linnell by quick poison, but the newspaper reporters who are worrying his fiancee, Miss Gertrude Edmands, to death by inches, will no doubt get an advance in salary.

Harry Thaw is trying to get out of the Insane Asylum again. In view of the tremendous services to mankind which Harry Thaw is rendering by staying in his present position, we trust he consents to remain in the hands of his friends.

An anonymous writer asks the Ledger to call the attention of the police and those in authority to the great number of lunch rooms and boarding houses doing business without a license. As there is some truth in the letter we give publicity to the facts therein contained.

AMERICAN LAWLESSNESS.

"I declare to you tonight that we are even now in our youth the most lawless of any of the great civilized nations."

The foregoing statement, made by Senator Borah of Idaho in a speech recently given, has been widely quoted.

From the boy who regards the fruit trees of the neighborhood as his private property, up to the corporation magnate who considers councilors and legislators salable to the highest bidder, Mr. Borah can no doubt find an ominous array of facts to support his claim.

Too often, however, the man who denounces corporation lawlessness will himself go hunting and fishing on land posted with No Tresspass signs. If he had a high powered automobile, he would be the first to drive the machine forty miles an hour through a city street.

It seems to be hard for most people to realize that in a republic we are all partakers in a joint stock company. The most valuable asset in the possession of that company is the willingness of the partners to play square with each other, for each one to be content with the same privileges that he is willing to give to every other partner. Every time one of us breaks a little law therefore, he encourages some of his partners to break a big law.

THE 54-HOUR LAW.

Those who "demanded" in theory at least, the 54-hour law seem to have had very little knowledge of the movement and its effect. The law went through without proper comprehension, without proper discussion, and without any real insistence on the part of those most affected. It may turn out not to be the blessing that it was hailed to be. The net cost of producing a given product is the only criterion by which the power to pay higher wages in a restricted locality must be governed.

This state has got to face the fact that it is surrounded by other states in the same general line of business, which have not the same regulation as to the hours of labor.

Those conditions Massachusetts has got to meet. She cannot go ahead making conditions of her own that differ seriously from neighboring localities, heightening the cost of production here at home while others enjoy a decided advantage, and still continue in business. It is a good deal like deciding that we will coin our money on some new-fangled standard that no other country recognizes. In this world as it is constituted, no man lives to himself alone, and no state lives to itself alone. We've got to face things as they surround us and take things as we find them.—Ex.

JUST SO.

January has started out as if intending to break all United States fire records. In this the month has been assisted thus far by the cold weather, which has caused people to drive their heating apparatus full tilt, with some calamitous results to life and property. There has also been the usual number of careless and what are called "preventable" fires, which means fires that ought never to have occurred if common sense and sane judgment had been exercised in certain situations. The situation is reaching a point in this country where it would seem that some legislative action would soon become necessary in the various States in order to punish the people who manifest utter ignorance, and a recklessness but one degree above incediarism, in the mishandling of heating apparatus, and in throwing lighted matches and cigars and cigarettes around in places where common sense and a minute's thought would show the insanity of the move.—Brockton Enterprise.

FINAL MEETING HELD SUNDAY

our own country. Then he came down through some of the questions that have confronted men in the Bible until he came to the one that was up to Pilate, "What will you that I should do with Jesus?" From there he showed the men how that this same question was up to each one of them, and how that they should answer the question. It is no wonder that he has been so successful in preaching to railroad men. First he knows men, and second he wastes no time in beating round the bush. He goes right at the subject he has in hand.

As was to have been expected there was not as large an attendance at the meeting Saturday evening as on the previous nights. The fact is that Saturday evening is not the best night in the week for such a meeting. It was necessary to hold the meeting on that night in order to secure an opportunity for hearing the five messages of the Campaign.

The speaker was Prof. Carver upon Social Service and he was introduced by the Rev. Jos. A. Walther of the Baptist Church, Wollaston. In introducing the speaker, Mr. Walther read part of a letter which Prof. Carver had sent to each of the pastors in this district. It brought a new message on Social Service. Following this introduction Prof. Carver referred to the man in the scripture read, with the one talent. What was he going to use his one talent for? What was it going to profit him to try to do his best? He would wait and see what the others were going to do. This was the danger as he saw it, to the Men and Religion Movement. Each one would wait to see what someone else was going to do in the matter. Do not wait for everyone else to act before we do. It takes faith and that is a good thing. It is a lack of faith to see it is our duty to do our best whether anyone else does or not.

Social service is every kind of service that is useful. Social service is to grow good corn. The mere fact that he has to grow corn does not destroy its benefit as social service.

Every act, of the christian, is a religious act, if not the religions do not go deep enough. This would be a fine world if everyone would act upon that principle. Social service is the focusing the real aim of this campaign. It gives a man a higher aim.

We ought to distinguish between vocational and avocational forms of service. If every farmer would do his work as to the glory of God we would not need to have impure milk etc. We need not have so many commissions looking into such questions. It all grows out of the fact that some man does not do his work well.

The principle of Social Service is not only the aim of evangelism but of missions as well; and the some applies to boys' work. It is the saving of waste.

Social service is the conservation of the human energy and should and should not be lost sight of. What is the use of Bible study if it does not hold a man true to his purpose and aim. You cannot have one branch of the work of the church unless you affect the others.

There are peculiar temptations of the wealthy. It is the temptation of wasting time in many ways. The wasting of talents. The laboring man is more under the temptation of the man of the one talent. What is the use of the laboring man's being good. His employer will get the benefit of it.

It is true that the Christian is living up to the principle that underlies the parable of the talents more than anyone else. Also business men who are really succeeding are acting up to this principle. We have more economizing in Christian civilization than in any other. The man who has done much is expected to do more. The man who has done nothing, of him is nothing expected.

It is a hopeless task if the world is going to talk the kind of social service of the man of one talent.

At the close of the address there were many questions asked of Prof. Carver showing the great amount of interest he had awakened by his address.

FINE WORK BY BOSTON POLICE

Linehan Is Trailed and Run Down In New Orleans

LUMBER FRAUD IS CHARGED

Boston Politician Became Fugitive From Justice on Day He Was to Appear In Court to Be Tried on Several Counts—Doubled on His Tracks When He Learned That Inspector Was Hot on His Trail

Boston, Jan. 22.—Just after he had drawn his mail at the office of the Young Men's Christian association in New Orleans, former State Senator Frank J. Linehan of this city was arrested. He is wanted here on charges of forgery and uttering, and since Nov. 28 last has been a fugitive from justice.

His arrest was brought about by information furnished the New Orleans police by Deputy Superintendent of Police Watts of Boston. Watts has already set in motion the machinery for Linehan's extradition.

The pursuit of the former state senator, engineered by Watts and Maurice Caro, attorney for Linehan's bondsman, is considered an excellent piece of police work. Linehan left so secretly that his absence from the city was not known until the hour of his trial. Quick work by the police traced him to St. Louis. There all trace of him was lost.

On the theory that he was making his way south along the Mississippi, probably to South America, the southern states, Mexico, the countries of Central America and South America were flooded with circulars bearing his picture and an accurate description of the man. On the chance that he might have sailed from New Orleans for Europe, the police of all European cities were put on the lookout.

Linehan, however, kept out of sight. It was some time before it was learned that he had taken passage from St. Louis to New Orleans. More time elapsed before the police unearthed the fact that he had sailed from New Orleans for Colon and was trying to make his way to Valparaiso, Chile.

With this knowledge Police Inspector Wolf of Boston was sent to Colon. Before he arrived there Linehan, in some way yet unknown to the police, was apprised that the police had his plans. The day before Wolf reached Colon Linehan took passage back to New Orleans.

This, with other information as to the alias and disguise Linehan was using, came to Watts Saturday morning. From then on he kept the wires hot between Boston and New Orleans with the result that Chief of Police Reynolds of the southern city made the arrest Saturday night. In New Orleans Linehan was known as "Frank J. Spencer."

Linehan became a fugitive from justice on Nov. 28 last, when he failed to appear in the Suffolk superior court to be tried on charges of forgery, uttering, conspiracy and larceny.

John L. Sullivan, who was indicted with Linehan, pleaded guilty. It is understood that he will testify for the state against Linehan.

Search was prosecuted at the instance of Joseph Scholl of Chelsea, who was on Linehan's bail bond for $5000. The other bondsman is dead. Suit was entered against Scholl by the state, and he offered $500 reward for the arrest of Linehan.

Linehan is alleged to have attempted to obtained lumber on the name of D. H. Sullivan, superintendent of the public grounds department. The lumber was traced to railroad yards. The alleged offenses took place during December, 1910.

Linehan broke into politics in 1899, when he was elected to the common council. He served in that body till 1902. In 1903 and 1904 he was a member of the house of representatives and served in the board of aldermen in 1905 and 1906. In 1907 he was a member of the senate.

Linehan had a stormy political career, his use of vigorous language being a strong point with him. His erection of the wall at Deer island was investigated by the first finance commission, and he made hearings on the matter turbulent. At that time he gave the commission a nickname which has stuck—"fin. com."

ROYALTY IN NEW YORK

Duke and Duchess of Connaught Guests of Ambassador Reid

New York, Jan. 22.—British royalty visited in New York for the first time in more than fifty-two years when the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, their daughter, with a small train, arrived here today to be the guests of Whitelaw Reid.

None of the British royal family have visited this country since 1860, when the then Prince of Wales, who was the late King Edward VII., and brother of the duke, came here and traveled from New York to the far west, where he hunted buffalo.

Although it has been commented upon that no attempt will be made by the duke to call upon or meet President Taft, a rather unusual procedure for one of a ruling family visiting this country for the first time, it is said that a meeting may be arranged.

ANOTHER RESPITE IS GRANTED PHELPS

Governor's Council to Formally Consider Murderer's Case

Boston, Jan. 22.—Another brief respite has been granted to Silas N. Phelps, condemned to death for the alleged premeditated murder of a deputy sheriff at Monroe.

The dread summons for which the Franklin county farmer has been waiting since the dawn of the new year did not come to him last night in his cell in the death house at the prison. By request of Governor Foss Warden Bridges has postponed the execution until after the council meeting Wednesday.

Following an interview with Thomas L. Walsh, attorney for Phelps, the governor summoned Bridges to a conference yesterday afternoon. Walsh had demanded that the question of commuting the sentence of death should be formally placed before the executive council.

NO TRACE OF HERMES

Norwegian Bark Suddenly Disappears After Being Sighted

Boston, Jan. 22.—Old sea dogs along the water front were shaking their heads yesterday trying to puzzle out the disappearance of the Norwegian bark Hermes, which was sighted thirty miles east of Boston light Saturday morning coming in, with her topmasts gone and under a jury rig.

All Saturday night and yesterday tugboats, motor boats containing provision dealers and junk collectors, and the revenue cutter Winnisimet cruised about the harbor and bay trying to find the bark, but none of them succeeded, for, like the phantom Flying Dutchman, she had disappeared.

WON'T HAVE REVOLVERS

House Refuses to Make Appropriation For Washington Police

Washington, Jan. 22.—The use of firearms by municipal police throughout the country was condemned in the house while an appropriation for the District of Columbia police, authorizing the purchase of modern revolvers, was under discussion.

Representative Sherley of Kentucky said that American cities would remove a menace to public safety by prohibiting the use of any firearms by the police. The house concurred in this view and refused to make any appropriation.

Q.—Please explain Isaiah lxv, 20, which reads: "There shall no more come thence an infant of days, nor an old man that shall not have the full length of his days; for as a lad shall one die a hundred years old; and as a sinner shall be accursed he who dieth at an hundred years old?" (G. A. N.)

Answer.—The verses connecting, particularly the 25th, show that is is during the Age in which divine favor and blessings are to be disseminated over the world, and when the terms of salvation are much more favorable to humanity than now, that an incorrigible sinner dying at an hundred years of age will be but as a child. The apparent teaching of the Scriptures is, that a thousand years have been set apart in the Creator's plan of salvation, and that this period of time, constituting the judgment or trial day of the world, will immediately follow the Christian Era. In the meantime those who are to be the judges and rulers over the world in that day are now being prepared and qualified for that future work. (Acts xvii, 31; I Corinthians vi, 2, 3.) In that Age of joy and blessing (Psalm xcviii, 4-9), when a wayfaring man though a fool shall not err concerning the way of salvation (Isaiah xxxv, 8-10), all will have at least an hundred years to make some progress in the way of righteousness. Failing to do this they will die as an infant for one an hundred years of age comparatively speaking, is but an infant to one a thousand years old, for all who will comply with the terms of righteousness will live to the end of the thousand years, and may make their existence eternal if they successfully endure the final trial or test at the end of that Age, when Satan is loosed for a little season.—Revelation xx, 7.

—Strikes are never projected with much regard for existing business conditions, but could a time more ill chosen than the present be conceived of for their outbreak. In desperate winter weather, with the wheels of business moving with scarce their wonted velocity, and confidence trembling in the balance, it is not a joyous symptom that so many serious labor disturbances are in evidence. Dim for the moment grows the cheer of the new year. There is need for wise advisers.—Springfield Republican.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Annouucements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

CHRIST CHURCH.

Early communion, the regular 10.30 service, followed by the Sunday school session and choral even song was the order of service at Christ church on Sunday.

The Junior Auxiliary meets at 3.45 P. M. Tuesday.

At 7.30 P. M. Wednesday an adjourned meeting of the Vestry will be held in the rectory. Every member is asked to come promptly that the necessary business may be transacted before the annual meeting, at 7.45.

Every adult in the parish should feel the individual responsibility of the annual meeting. Here is given every opportunity to approve or disapprove of the management of parochial affairs. The special subject this year concerns a free church. Shall we continue the old custom of rented pews and sittings, or shall we make our church the free home of the entire parish, and support it by pledges? This is a big question. As a financial venture it may work and it may not. This measure should not be left to a few to decide. Every member should be present to express an opinion and to vote. After business session, refreshments will be served by the Women's Guild.

St. Margaret's Guild on Friday night promises a delightful evening. Mrs. Marion F. Miller, will give a talk on Celia Thaxter and her Island Home. Many of Mrs. Thaxter's poems have been set to music, and some of these charming songs will be rendered by Mrs. Emma S. Moore. The ladies of the parish are cordially invited, the Women's Guild, the Reapers' Circle, and all other ladies in the parish as St. Margaret's Guild is happy to have this opportunity to offer so rare a pleasure.

The Reapers will meet Friday evening with Mrs. MacLeod, 2 Graham terrace.

UNIVERSALIST.

Rev. Fannie E. Austin, pastor of the Universalist church occupied the pulpit, Sunday morning and preached from St. Matthew, 19th chapter, 19th verse: "Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

Miss Austin's topic, was, "The highest Love," and this thought pervaded the sermon. In many cases we find these two commandments the most difficult to perform. But if we would follow in the footsteps of our Saviour, we would try with His help to bear with the weakness of other, and cheerfully minister to the needy as the opportunity may present itself. A kind word, a loving smile has often brought peace to a sorrowing heart.

Miss Austin mentioned Jane Addams as an example of one who had done much to elevate and uplift humanity. Jesus when on earth found no one too humble or too lowly to love. May life be to us one long day of joyful service. Then shall reign "Peace on earth, Good will to men." Miss Edith Hyland sang the twenty-third psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd," Mrs. Cutter at the organ.

The evening service was omitted as a large delegation from the church and Y. P. C. U. attended the mass meeting of the Universalists,—held in the Universalist church, Columbus avenue, Boston, Sunday night.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

The usual services of communion, sermon, Sunday school and evening prayer were held as usual on Sunday.

The regular monthly missionary meeting of the Woman's Guild will be held Wednesday afternoon at half past two in the parish rooms. Officers for the present year are: Mrs. G. A. Vibert, president; Mrs. E. F. Parlee, 1st vice president; Mrs. F. White, 2d vice president; Miss Annie Clean, secretary and treasurer.

Wednesday, between 6.30 and 8 P. M. the Guild will serve a Turkey supper in the parish rooms, the proceeds of which are for the Parish House. Under Mrs. D. C. Miller's supervision the ladies of the Guild intend to equal the high standard set at the last supper on Dec. 14, which was so excellent in qualfty and so well served that one man paid twice for his supper saying that it was well worth double the money charged.

There will be an important business meeting of the Parish House Building committee on Tuesday evening, eight fifteen in the parish rooms. A descriptive pamphlet, containing the accepted plan and information regarding it, together with a pledge-card, has been mailed throughout the parish. No self-supporting individual has been omitted intentionally.

The value of a parish house is generally realized. When it is once an actuality, with the spirit of the various parish organizations what it is today, with their increased facilities which will then be at command, the debt incurred will be steadily decreased until it disappears. To begin the work of building, however, it is necessary to raise the sum of $3000, at once. This can be done by the generous and conscientious support of every individual, everyone giving something according to his means. The project is one that concerns vitally the efficiency and growth of this parish, and as such it personally concerns all who desire the progress and welfare of the Episcopal Church in this great section of Quincy.

Members of the Sunday School have not only entered into this scheme with enthusiasm but are finding lots of fun in it. Twelve teams of ten members each have been formed each with a captain, and are striving to win the prizes to be presented to the members of that team first completing its apportionment of feet. Bulletins announcing the standing of the teams are to be seen in the parish rooms. If anyone happens at any time to be held up for pennies by some eager competitor, let him remember the good cause, and that every penny is one 84480th part of what the school is hoping to raise for the parish house.

BETHANY.

Services at Bethany church were well attended Sunday morning, Rev. Asher Anderson D. D., occupying the pulpit and taking for his text, St. John 12th chapter 24th verse: "Verily, verily I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

Dr. Anderson said in part, we would find in the study of these words a principle, a philosophy and a prophecy. A principle which incites us to nobler living, to broaden our horizon, a principle which inspires us to attain to a higher spiritual level and brings us nearer to God and His divine influence.

A philosophy which enables us to trust without questioning God's ways to rest in the consciousness of His care, and to become truer disciples of the Master. A prophecy of death, but we should not think or fear physical death but spiritual death. We do not have to die to go to Heaven: Heaven begins right here on earth, and if we seek to live in the spirit of trust and aspiration, we shall go on and up to still higher attitudes, and continue on with God's love into the fulness of spiritual life.

It was a forceful and inspiring sermon: The choir rendered appropriate music.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

A large number of Loyal Ladies and Clansmen were present last evening at the First Presbyterian church by special invitation. The pastor Rev. James A. Matheson preached from the text 2nd Thess. 2:15, "Stand fast—hold." Some men are standing on sand and are fast losing their faith in God and love toward him. Others stand by the precipice of doubt, seeing how near they can come to doubt without absolutely doubting. Others stand in the wrong environment out of which they should come if they cannot make it better or are being made worse by it.

The qualifying term is fast, "stand fast." It implies a strong foundation as that of a building. It means roots as those of a tree for strength and life. It signifies a constitution as that of a country, becoming the controlling factor. All these are found in the life, principles and sayings of Jesus. Other foundation can no man lay than Jesus Christ. From the cross must be our growth and strength.

"Stand and hold." The thought emphasized was that of holding firmly and not lightly the great principle of life. The talents given us are from and for God to be used for man's uplift, yet they are ours while we possess them, for all are yours and ye are Christ's and Christ is God's. Around the symbol of the cross all must be built.

We should be loyal to our organizations; to our country that fosters them; to the church of Christ that makes them possible, and to Jesus without whom none of these can exist.

Hold fast what we have been taught about God, who is infinite, eternal and unchangeable in his attributes. Hold to the teachings of his book and not the weak thought of others concerning his word. Hold what we have learned about Jesus, he is our Saviour. Hold that which has been instilled in us concerning these lest we let them slip and thus lose all.

The Christian Endeavor society is holding an interesting contest at present. It is one of doing. Great interest has been awakened and one must be alert in order to find a place to take part. There are no silent or wasted moments lost, every minute is occupied. It is part of an efficiency campaign that counts.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

At the morning service of worship in the Wollaston Unitarian church, Rev. Carl G. Horst quoted at the opening of his sermon the covenant given the denomination by Rev. Charles G. Ames, pastor emeritus of the Church of the Disciples, Boston; "In the love of truth and in the spirit of Jesus Christ we unite for the worship of God and the service of man."

"This statement of our belief," declared Rev. Mr. Horst "is simple, brief, positive, inclusive, unmistakable,—a solid foundation upon which to build principles which shall last when opinions have changed, faith which will abide when present beliefs have been displaced by new and better ones.

The spirit of truth leads us to seek God in the daily life, believing the present and future sacred, as well as the past; and our capacity to receive is the measure of His Giving to us, since he is still revealing himself as truly as to the Hebrews of old. No creed is permanent, we are all learners, and disciples of the religion of Jesus, which stands for heart and mind, open to receive the truth of God, and not the doctrine formulated by man. True worship of God and a sincere following of the leadership of Jesus lead to a deep sense of fellowship among men, and the best and truest religion finds expression in service for mankind. The keynote of the able sermon was in one of the four short texts given "The Truth shall make you free."

The Young People's Religious Union is having a fine series of stereopticon lectures, the third Sunday evening in each month. Last evening the Rev. William Ware Locke of Boston, who formerly had charge of our missionary work among the Indians, gave a most interesting and instructive account of his labors and experience with them. There was a large attendance. The lecture next month is upon "A Pilgrimage to the home of St. Francis" by the Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, Ph. D., of Winchester, who has a worldwide reputation as an astronomer.

Rev. Carl G. Horst was called to West Upton, last week to officiate at the funeral of one of his former parishoners.

Our minister has received a good many messages expressing appreciation of his strong sermon against Capital Punishment, which was reported in the Boston as well as in the Quincy papers.

The annual business meeting of the Parish will be held this evening at 7.45 in the vestry. The following is the order of business:

Reading of Warrant.

Report from president, treasurer, heating fund treasurer, editor of the Dial and parish house committee.

Reports from Allied Societies: Junior Lend-a-Hand club, Earnest Workers, Sunday school, Young People's Religious Union, Wollaston Unitarian club, Unitarian Church-Helpers and Ladies' Aid Alliance

Minister's report

Nominating committee report

Election of officers: President, Clerk, Treasurer, Committee of Five and Sunday School committee member.

Other Business.

The next regular meeting of the Unitarian Church-Helpers will be held at the home of Mrs. E. S. Taylor, 10 Cushing street, Thursday, at two o'clock.

During the past week were organized a Finnish Unitarian church at Virginia, Minnesota, under the care of the Rev. Risto Lappala, a Danish Unitarian church, called Folketes Kirke, at Superior, Wisconsin, with the Rev. Hagerup-Nissen as pastor, and an American Unitarian church with a membership of fifty-four at Lincolnville, Maine.

The new Unitarian hymn and service book upon which a large committee is at work is making good progress and will be ready for the printer in spring.

The First Unitarian church in Calgary, Alberta, of which the Rev. Frank Wright Pratt, our much esteemed former minister, is pastor, has just dedicated a fine parish hall of classic architecture.

The "Men and Religion" movement, which is now holding a campaign in Boston, is a strictly so-called "evangelical" movement, from which the Unitarian church is excluded. "Men and Religion," says Prof. Francis G. Peabody, "seems to be the somewhat ambitious title for a proposed revival, not of religion in terms of manhood, but of religion in terms of Christology; and Unitarians, however much they may care either for religion or for men, must watch the progress of the undertaking as friendly lookerson, with fraternal hopes that it may promote a manly religion, yet not without a flicker of amusement at its appropriation of so comprehensive a name."

We take great pleasure in announcing that the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes of West Newton will be one of our special Lenten preachers.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Rev. Charles H. Washburn of Neponset, preached in exchange with Rev. T. W. Davison, Sunday morning. Mr. Washburn spoke of Atlantic twenty-seven years ago, and how little anyone of that time thought of the present structure now standing on that corner.

W. A. Harvey of Braintree led the Christian Endeavor. He gave an earnest and most appealing talk on "Worth-while ambitions."

Rev. T. W. Davison spoke in the evening on "The Influence of Thought." He said that the workers in the Men and Religion movement had not uttered one word or thought that had not been thought and spoken by most of the ministers of greater Boston. He said it would require a microscope to see anything original in the week's works. But the men had suggested what we already know and their suggestions would not be lost if we went to work to carry out the ideals the men emphazied. Mr. Davison said that the church membership of today called for chivalry, deep thought, and earnestness. He illustrated his talk on what thinking had accomplished in the way of modern progress, and said that this is an age when men must think of their relation to God and man.

The men of the church are planning to give a supper Wednesday, Jan. 31. This supper by the men has always been popular, and there are plans to have a good speaker this year, giving a talk on immigration.

There are also plans to have a boys' club started in the near future. W. F. Cummings and W. F. Blake plan to have the young men start The Knights of King Arthur. J. M. Houston will organize the younger boys. But in both organizations the membership will be only for those who attend church and Sunday school.

The Sunday school has planned to have a monthly mothers' meeting for the mothers of the scholars.

The first Sunday evening of every month is to be given over to the Sunday school for an evening concert.

—It is not to be supposed that the clerical profession needs the slightest vindication because the exceptional wolf in sheep's clothing has once more made an appearance and ravaged the innocents almost within the very limits of the sanctuary of religion. Yet every clergyman and every well-wisher of all religious faiths will mourn because such a blow should have been struck at the Church and its moral influence by one who had taken ministerial vows. —Springfield Republican.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN COOKING TURNIPS.

WHITE turnips need to boil about as long as potatoes.

When tender take them out of the boiler, peel, mash and season with a little salt and butter.

If the turnips are very large cut them up into pieces the size of ordinary turnips.

When Turnips Are Good.

To be palatable turnips should be firm and unspoiled. When soft and shrunken they are not good.

If turnips are old they may be boiled with corned beef or ham.

Turnips should be well salted, as they themselves contain so little salt. They should by preference be cooked with fat meats, like pork, mutton or corned beef. This is because they themselves contain little starch or fat.

Creamed Turnips.—Peel and slice several nice turnips. Blanch by boiling from five to ten minutes, then taking out and draining and rinsing in cold water. Next boil until nearly tender in salt water. Drain and cut into cubes. Cut the turnips into cream, to which add two tablespoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper to taste. Let these simmer about fifteen minutes, then serve hot.

Diced Turnips.—Take a pint of diced turnips, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, a half teaspoonful of salt and a half cupful of milk. Put the diced turnips on to cook in boiling water. Boil without cover until tender. Drain and add sauce made as follows:

Put butter on in saucepan, melt and add flour, mix well, add cold milk slowly and stir until smooth and creamy. Add the salt and pepper and boil three minutes.

Turnips In Sauce.—Peel, wash and cut up turnips into half inch slices. Cut the slices into stripes and then into small cubes. Boil in salt water till tender. Drain season and place in a dish and pour white sauce over them.

Baked Turnips.—Pare and boil some turnips in salted water, adding half a teaspoonful of sugar to six or seven turnips.

When tender slice them half an inch thick and place in a saucepan with two tablespoonfuls of butter to six or seven turnips. Shake them about until they are slightly browned. Season with salt and pepper, a dash of ground mace and sugar. Turn into a heated dish and pour over them a pint of rich brown sauce or gravy.

WHEN FIGS ARE CHEAP.

WINTER is a good time to buy figs. Then they are more abundant, fresher and considerably lower in price.

The best figs have a tender, silky skin. They do not need to be cooked so much as do figs that are old and have become somewhat hard.

Figs contain from 50 to 75 per cent of grape and other fruit sugars. For this reason they are a nourishing food.

Figs are best eaten with cereals and such starchy foods. When thus served with these no other sweetening is needed for the cereal.

An Appetizer.

Fig Preserves.—To one pound of figs take three-quarters of a pound of sugar and one cupful of water. Boil five minutes and skim. Put in the figs and simmer, being careful that they are not too soft.

Put in jars with cloves, cinnamon and a little mace. Cover with sirup.

Do not close jars for several mornings. Each day pour off the sirup without removing the figs. Reheat to the boiling point and pour over the figs. On the last morning measure the sirup and allow one cupful of vinegar to three cupfuls of sirup. Boil and pour over the figs. Seal while hot.

Figs In Pastry.

Fig Pies.—Take one pound of fresh figs and a quarter of a pound of seeded raisins. Add to them a cupful or two of water and stew for half an hour on the back of the range. When soft reduce to a paste. Then add the juice of one lemon, the rind of half of one grated fine and add the juice of half an orange. Then fill into rounds made with puff paste. These rounds may be the size of a teacup or of a saucer. Cover with a layer of pastry. Bake like pies.

Delicious Sweets.

Stuffed Figs.—Steam some figs for an hour. Remove one at a time, clip off the stem end, open and press in a marshmellow. Roll in powdered sugar.

Fig Cup.—Take a pound of figs to one-half cup of sugar and one-half lemon. Wash the figs, cover with cold water and soak one hour.

Cook in the same water fifteen minutes, then add the sugar and cook fifteen minutes longer. Now put in the lemon juice and half of the grated rind. Cook five minutes.

Skim out the fruit, place in jars without breaking it.

Boil the sirup down to half its quantity and strain, add to fruit and seal. This will keep indefinitely.

Serve very cold in individual glasses for dessert. Top with whipped cream.

Anna Thompson.

GIRLS WIN BOYS LOSE

Although the boys' basketball team of Thayer Academy succumbed to a defeat at the hands of the Milton High aggregation at South Braintree, last Saturday, the girls of the same school made the balance hang evenly by defeating the Stetson High girls' quintet. The boys' game was played first, and resulted in a 28 to 23 victory for the Milton boys.

The academy girls defeated the Stetson High girls by a score of 24 to 19. Both games were close and exciting from start to finish. Carson for Milton secured six baskets from the floor, while his team mate Leary got three. C. Reed, of the losers was credited with eleven of the twenty-three points made by his team.

For the girls, the features were contributed by Miss Foss and the Kimball sisters, while Miss O'Neil of Stetson High, one of the foremost girl basketball players in the state, made fifteen points for her team

CHORAL SOCIETY CONCERT.

Among the visitors at the Choral rehearsal Sunday afternoon was Mrs. Osbourne McConathy who is deeply interested in her husband's work. The Golden Legend choruses offer many opportunities for beautiful effects in light and shade and Conductor McConathy has taken full advantage of this in working out some fine contrasts in tone and intensity. The singers have gained in many ways through the study of this modern classic and everything promises a concert tomorrow evening of great artistic value.

DANCING PARTY.

A private dancing party was held in Colonial hall Saturday and a most enjoyable time was in order from eight until eleven o'clock. Pinkham's orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyler Brigham and Mr. and Mrs. N. Gorham Nickerson did the honors in receiving. Frappe was served during the evening and the affair was pronounced most charming.

Morse Unlikely to Divulge Sensational Inside Information

New York, Jan. 22.—Charles W. Morse's reticence on matters on which he has inside information which, if divulged, probably would put the financial world on edge and perhaps send some of the big men of the country scurrying to cover, will be in no wise affected by the commutation of his sentence.

This opinion was expressed by F. L. Seeley, editor of the Atlanta Georgian, to whose efforts more than any other agency the convicted banker owes his freedom.

"Morse will never write that chapter of his career," said Seeley, "unless he changes materially his present point of view. He has suffered the tortures of imprisonment without telling those things that he could which would shake the foundation of Wall street, and it is unlikely that he will break his silence now."

MORRIS STEINERT DEAD

Widely Known Music Dealer Succumbs to Paralytic Stroke

New Haven, Jan. 22.—Morris Steinert, one of the best known music dealers and collectors in New England, died at his home here from a paralytic stroke.

He was the founder of the New Haven Symphony orchestra and his collection of old string instruments, the greater part of which he presented to the Yale school of music, was one of the largest in the country. He was 81 years of age and leaves four sons and two daughters.

Morris Steinert founded the firm of M. Steinert & Sons, including its Boston branch, about thirty-five years ago. The firm is one of the largest music establishments in the world at present, putting out 6000 pianos annually.

MISS BIRD IS BRIDE OF GOVERNOR BASS

Ceremony In Temporary Chapel In Her Parents' Home

Walpole, Mass., Jan. 22.—At "Endean," the residence of her parents, Miss Edith H. Bird became the bride of Robert P. Bass, governor of New Hampshire.

The entre interior of the house had been transformed by the decorations. The electrical fixtures had been removed and candles supplied the light.

The large music room had been made into a chapel, the walls of which were hung with rich velvet of royal purple and gold. An aisle through the centre of the room was marked by white columns surmounted with delicate pink roses and fragrant white lilac. Royal purple cords of silk marked the seats, which were individual gold chairs.

At the end of the room a prie-dieu was erected for the bridal party. On either side were tall candelabras of bronze with many candles. Behind hung an exquisite piece of old Flemish tapestry.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Thompson, rector of the Epiphany church of Walpole, assisted by Bishop Parker of New Hampshire.

After the ceremony the couple left Walpole for a wedding trip and on their return will reside in Concord, N. H.

FIRE INSURANCE FOUNDER

William Dexter, Also Noted as Philanthropist, Dies at 89

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 22.—William H. Dexter, millionaire philanthropist and originator of the first fire insurance company in this country, and who has given away nearly half a million of dollars to churches, Worcester academy and the town of Charlton. died at his home, 3 Charlton street, from pneumonia.

Dexter, who celebrated his 89th birthday on the 11th of this month, was born in the town of Charlton and was a direct descendant of Gregory Dexter, one of the companions of Roger Williams when he founded Providence plantation in 1636-7.

PEACE PLANS ARE REJECTED

Strikers Will Not Accept Proposals of Mill Owners

AN ALL-NIGHT MASS MEETING

Controversy Declared to Be With All Lawrence Mills and Cannot Be Settled by Each Mill Settling With Its Employes—Representatives of Both Sides Meet With Mayor and Ettor Gives His Version of Trouble—Declares Dynamite Was "Planted" by Detectives—Strikers Have Sympathy of Clergymen

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 22.—At a mass meeting of the strikers that broke up at 12.30 this morning, after an all-night session, it was the almost unanimous vote to reject the proposal of the mill owners that each mill would treat with its employes. The controversy, they declare, is with all the mills and must be treated by all or none. The meeting was orderly, but fiery speeches were made against the peace proposals of the mill owners.

At a succession of conferences held in various parts of the city Sunday, efforts were made to bring the striking mill workers in touch with the owners for a settlement.

These conferences reached a climax at 9 o'clock last night, when delegates from all the unions affected and representatives of unorganized workers, met at Loomfixers' hall to decide what action they should take on the proposition of the mill agents to meet the employes of their different mills.

Streets Clear of Strikers

The various mass meetings, at which a more complete organization was constructed and the position of the strikers more fully outlined, kept the great body of operatives from the streets, and the day passed without excitement.

Only the soldiers marching in companies from the armory through the day, passing and repassing through the streets with fixed bayonets, bespoke the force of the undercurrent that is surging through this city.

Lawrence feels intuitively that the greatest industrial disturbance in the history of the state is now in progress, and its people are sympathizing with the strikers. The eyes of the textile industry of the whole state are fixed on the developments here.

In their pulpits, the clergymen used the great unrest as a topic for sermons. All spoke seriously of the fear of violence, but all declared the step taken by the twenty odd thousand men and women justifiable. The social condition born of the low system of wages was condoned.

Meeting at City Hall

The real business of the day commenced when Mayor Scanlon brought to order a meeting of the delegates of the unions at city hall at noon. He was supported by the committee of citizens which announced that they had assurances of the mill owners that they would meet the striking employes of their own mills to talk over terms of settlement.

At this meeting Joseph J. Ettor, organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was a central figure. Both members of the city government and opposition union men put it squarely up to him that he held the solution of the strike in his hand. When he had finished talking, there was a marked change in their attitude.

Ettor said that if the mill workers received $4 a day instead of an average of $6 a week, all he or anyone would say could not entice the workers from the mills. He declared that the men and women were striking over a condition which had become gradually worse. He said that no settlement would be reached until the operatives themselves had voted in mass meeting on the questions.

Won't Walk Into Trap

"The strikers are now viewing the proposals of the mill owners carefully and will walk into no trap," he said. "The mill agents have sought to play one faction in the mills against another to break the strike. I do not stand in the way of settlement. No one wants a settlement more than I. But we must have a settlement that will benefit all classes.

"By ways devious and dark they have tried to prevent organization, and they are reaping the harvest of the ill wind they have been sowing. The rights of 20,000 men and women must be taken into consideration.

"They have sent detectives among us to add to the strife, and they have planted dynamite to turn public opinion against us."

The meeting concluded with the agreement of delegates of the various parties to meet at the Loomfixers' hall at 9 o'clock. When that time arrived there was a big crowd in waiting. The meeting was soon called to order, and the struggle to decide whether there is to be a prolonged strike, with all the acrimony which follows an industrial turmoil, was begun.

It became known that the mill owners and their representatives met at the home of Agent Parker late Saturday night, and until nearly midnight discussed the situation. It was said they are in a frame of mind to make some concessions.

Wood Must Take Notice

An afternoon meeting also was held at Loomfixers' hall, at which Ettor spoke among many others. He said that while the strike was disorganized in a measure, it had become necessary to make President Wood sit up and take notice that the people working in the mills were something more than cattle.

All day a force of plain clothes officers and inspectors was about the city, but there were no arrests and no trouble was reported.

Dynamite was unearthed Saturday by raiders in three parts of the city. The companies of militia have been directed to keep even greater watchfulness as they tramp their lonely beats at night.

Rumors of mill wrecking will not down. The police are compelled to believe that the discoveries of explosives indicated a plan to place it under some of the mills.

Inspector Rooney and Special Officers Cavagnaro and Ferrari of Boston, directing a band of more than a dozen local police and state detectives, went to three places with uncanny precision and found enough dynamite to wreck every mill in the city.

MUMPS AT CLARK COLLEGE

Many Students Forced to Lose Considerable Class Work

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 22.—One-tenth of the students at Clark college are sick with mumps, and it is feared that an epidemic is under way which will affect everyone in the institution who did not have the disease in his younger days.

Because of the infection several students have been obliged to give up entering the trials for the college debating team, and other students will be forced to lose considerable class work.

It is believed that the epidemic started from a letter received by one of the students from a person afflicted with the disease, and the parotitis germ spread rapidly.

SCIENTISTS MAKE GREAT DISCOVERIES

Bones of Man Who Lived 10,000 Years Ago Are Found

New Haven, Jan. 22.—The Yale corporation meeting heard a report of the Yale expedition to Peru, headed by Professor Hiram Bingham, in which were made known for the first time some remarkable discoveries.

Chief among the results was the finding for the first time of bones of the prehistoric man of the age before the glacial period. An estimate of the age of the bones is not less than 10,000 years.

Several archaeological discoveries made by Bingham included ruins of several Inca, or pre-Inca cities, and traces of a highly civilized people earlier than the Incas. Another discovery was that of the bones of the American bison.

Do You Believe in Signs?

Too many storekeepers depend upon signs. They are all right to mark your place of business, but you need something more forceful to bring customers right up to your counters. You need general, far-reaching publicity as a real trade-getter.

It matters not how elaborate or artistic your business sign may be. It will be read only by a very small percentage of those who pass your door, It is necessary in a way. And yet you know that its sphere of usefulness is very small. On the contrary a business announcement in the columns of THE DAILY LEDGER will be read each day by thousands and thousands of regular readers of this paper.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Foss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

The face of McLean was a study. "And now, Freckles, what has been the trouble all spring? You have done your work as faithfully as any one could ask, but I can't help seeing that there is something wrong. Are you tired of your job?"

"I love it," answered Freckles. "It will almost break me heart when the gang begins tearing up the swamp and scaring away me chickens."

"Then what is the matter?" insisted McLean.

"I think, sir, it's been books. Being among these beautiful things every day, I got so anxious like to be knowing and naming them that it got to eating into me and went and made me near sick when I was well as I could be. Of course I learned to read, write and figure some at school, but there was nothing there nor in any of the city that I ever got to see that would make a fellow even be dreaming of such interesting things as there are here. I've seen the parks, but they ain't even beginning to be in it with Limberlost. It's all new and strange to me. I don't know a thing about any of it. The bullfrog told me to 'find out,' plain as day, and books are the only way, ain't they?"

"Of course," said McLean, astonished at himself for his heartfelt relief. He had not guessed until that minute what it would have meant to him to have Freckles give up. "You know enough to study out what you want yourself if you have the books, don't you?"

"I am pretty sure I do," said Freckles. "I learned all I'd the chance at in the home, and me schooling was good as far as it went. Wouldn't let you go past fourteen, you know. I always did me sums perfect, and I loved me history books. I never could get me grammar to suit them. They said it was just born in me to go wrong talking, but I could knock them all out singing. I was always leader in the home, and once one of the superintendents gave me car fare and let me go into the city and sing in a boys' choir. The master said I'd the swatest voice of them all until it got rough-like, and then he made me quit for awhile, but he said it would be coming back by now, and I'm railly thinking it is, sir, for I've tried about the line a bit of late.

"That and me chickens has been all the company I've been having, and it will be all I'll want if I can have books and learn the real names of things, where they come from and why they do such interesting things. It's been fretting me to be shut up here among all these wonders and not knowing a thing. I wanted to ask you what some books would cost me and if you'd be having the goodness to get me the right ones. I think I have enough money."

Freckles handed up his account book, and the boss studied it gravely.

"You needn't touch your bank account, Freckles," he said. "Ten dollars from this month's pay will get you everything you need to start on.

"YOU NEEDN'T TOUCH YOUR BANK ACCOUNT."

I will write a friend in Grand Rapids today to select you the very best and send them at once."

Freckles' eyes were shining.

"Never owned a book in my life!" he said. "Even me schoolbooks were never mine. Lord, how I used to wish I could have just one of them for me very own! Won't it be fun to see me sawbird and me little yellow fellow looking at me from the pages of a book and their real names and all about them printed alongside?"

"I'll have Duncan get you a ten bushel store box the next time he goes to town," said McLean. "You can put in your spare time filling it with the specimens you pick up until the books come, and then you can study out what you have. I suspect you could find a lot of stuff that I could sell for you. I'll order you a butterfly net and box and show you how scientists pin specimens. But I don't want to hear of your killing any birds. They are protected by heavy fines."

McLean rode away and left Freckles staring aghast. Then he saw the point and grinned sheepishly. Standing on the trail, he twirled the feather and thought the morning over.

"Well, if life ain't getting to be worth living!" he said wonderingly. "Biggest streak of luck I ever had! 'Bout time something was coming my way, but I wouldn't ever thought anybody could strike such prospects through just a falling feather."

On Duncan's return from his next trip to town there was a store box loaded on the back of his wagon. He drove to the west entrance of the swamp, set the box on a stump that Freckles had selected in a beautiful and sheltered place and made it secure on its foundation with a tree at its back.

"It seems most a pity to nail into that tree," said Duncan. "I hadna the time to examine into the grain of it, but it looks as if it might be a rare ane. Anyhow, the nailin' winna hurt it deep, and havin' the case by it will make it safer if it is a guid ane."

"Isn't it an oak?" asked Freckles.

"Aye," said Duncan. "It looks like it might be ane of thae fine grained golden anes that mak' such grand furniture."

When the body of the case was secure Duncan made a door out of the lid and fastened it on with hinges. He drove a staple, screwed on a latch and gave Freckles a small padlock, so that he might safely fasten in his treasures. He made a shelf in the top for the books and last of all covered the case with oilcloth.

It was the first time in Freckles' life that any one had ever done that much for his pleasure, and it warmed his heart with pure joy.

"Mr. Duncan," he said, "I don't know why you are being so mighty good to me, but if you have any jobs up at the cabin that I could do for you or Mrs. Duncan hours off the line it would make me mighty happy."

"Freckles," said Duncan as he began gathering up his tools, "I canna see that it will hurt ye to be told that ye are doin' every day a thing that pleases the boss as much as anything ye could do. Ye're bein' uncommon faithful, lad, and honest as old Father Time. McLean is trustin' ye as he would his own flesh and blood."

"Oh, Duncan!" cried the boy. "Are you sure?"

"Why, I know," answered Duncan. "I wadna venture to say else. In those first days he cautioned me na to tell ye that, but now he wadna care. D'ye ken, Freckles, that some of the single trees ye are guardin' are worth a thousand dollars?"

Freckles looked limp, and his eyes popped.

"Ye see," said Duncan, "that's why they maun be watched so closely. The other night down at camp some son of Baalam was suggestin' that ye might be sellin' the boss out to Jack and lettin' him tak the trees secretly and nobody wad ever ken till the gang gets here."

A wave of scarlet flooded Freckles' face, and he blazed hotly at the insult.

"And the boss," continued Duncan, ignoring Freckles' anger, "he lays back just as cool as cowcumbers and says, 'I'll give a thousand dollars to any man that will show me a fresh stump when we reach the Limberlost,' says he. Some of the men just snapped him up that they'd find some. So you see how the boss is trustin' ye, lad."

"I am gladder than I can ever express," said Freckles. "And now will I be walking double time to keep some of them from cutting a tree to get all that money."

"Mither o' Moses!" howled Duncan. "Ye can trust the Scotch to bungle things a'thegither. McLean was only meanin' to show ye all confidence and honor. He's gone and set a high price for some dirty whelp to ruin ye. I was just tryin' to show ye how he felt toward ye, and I've gone and give ye that worry to bear."

"I am mighty proud of what you have been telling me, Duncan," said Freckles. "I need the warning sure, for with the books coming I might be timpted to neglect me work when double watching is needed."

Freckles picked up his club and started down the line, whistling cheerily. Duncan went straight to the lower camp and, calling McLean aside, repeated the conversation verbatim. "And, nae matter what happens now or ever, dinna ye dare let anything make ye believe that Freckles hasna guarded faithful as any man could."

"I don't think anything could shake my faith in the lad," said McLean.

Freckles kept one eye religiously on the line. The other he divided between the path, his friends of the wire and a search of the sky for his latest arrivals. Every day since their coming he had seen them, either hanging like small black clouds above the swamp or bobbing over logs and trees with their queer tilting walk. Whenever he could spare time he entered the swamp and tried to make friends with them, and they were the tamest of all his unnumbered subjects. They ducked, dodged and ambled about him, over logs and bushes, and not even a near approach would drive them to flight.

For two weeks he had found them circling over the Limberlost regularly, but one morning the female was missing, and only the big black chicken hung sentinel above the swamp. His mate did not reappear in the following days, and Freckles grew very anxious. He spoke of it to Mrs. Duncan, and she quieted his fears by raising a delightful hope in their stead.

"Why, Freckles, if it's the hen bird ye are missing it's ten to one she's safe," she said. "She's laid and is setting, ye silly. Watch him and mark whaur he lichts. Then follow and find the nest. Some Sabbath we'll all gang see it."

Accepting this theory, Freckles began searching for the nest, but as he had no idea where to look and Duncan could offer no helpful suggestion the nest was no nearer being found.

IT MUST BE TRUE

Quincy Readers Must Come to That Conclusion.

It is not the telling of a single case in Quincy, but scores of citizens testify. Endorsement by people you know bears the stamp of truth. The following is one of the public statements made in this locality about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles J. Somers, barber, 17 Newcomb street, Quincy, Mass., says: "It is a pleasure for me to tell of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers. This remedy worked wonders in my case. Lame back and weak kidneys bothered me for ten years and nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Cox's Drug Store. The promptness with which this remedy cured me was astonishing. My strength and energy was restored and my health improved one hundred per cent. I shall always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills when I have the opportunity." (Statement given September 2, 1908.)

A LATER ENDORSEMENT.

On August 9, 1911 Mr. Somers was interviewed and he said: "I am only too pleased to verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills. I still take this remedy occasionally and it keeps me in good health."

CUMMINS WILL BE CANDIDATE

Iowa Senator Makes His Long Expected Announcement

FURNISHES FOOD FOR GOSSIP

Republican Situation Complicated by Open Opposition of Iowa and Wisconsin Senators to Nomination of Taft—Pittsburg Leader Restores Roosevelt's Name to Editorial Page After Publisher Pays Visit to Him

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, progressive Republican, formally announced his condidacy for the Republican presidential nomination in a statement in which he says that if the Republicans of Iowa believe him a fit man to urge before the Chicago convention he will accept their decision.

The entrance of Cummins into the presidential fight materially complicates the Republican situation. President Taft is now openly opposed for the nomination by Senators La Follette and Cummins, both progressives, while still other progressives are urging the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

The announcement by Cummins had been expected for several days. Coming in connection with the report from Denver that Gifford Pinchot was taking the initiative in a movement for a conference of progressive Republicans to decide upon one candidate to oppose President Taft, it started a riot of political speculation which eclipsed the ordinary activities of the government.

Senator Cummins called together all the Republican members of the Iowa delegates in congress who were in the city and read to them the statement announcing his candidacy, which they approved.

At the progressive Republican headquarters here the declaration was made by W. L. Houser, in charge, that the fight for La Follette would continue as if there were no other progressive candidates on the horizon; that it was "La Follette, first, last and all the time."

Senator La Follette's only comment, when shown the Cummins dispatch, was: "I have nothing to say."

Renews Demand For Roosevelt

Pittsburg, Jan. 22.—The Pittsburgh Leader, which four months ago, at the request of Theodore Roosevelt, removed his name from its editorial page as its candidate for the presidency, has restored the name to the head of the column in this fashion:

"For President in 1912, Theodore Roosevelt."

This action followed a visit to Roosevelt in New York by William Flinn, publisher of the newspaper, a leader in Pennsylvania Republican politics.

At the time Roosevelt asked the removal of the name he said he would consider it a calamity if his friends made him a candidate. The Leader complied with the request, announcing that it would respect Roosevelt's personal desires.

While no revocation of the request is announced, The Leader explains that the name will remain at least until after the Republican nomination, because the issue is greater than the desires of any individual.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

Rev. Alexander Blackburn, D. D. of Boston preached in exchange with the pastor yesterday morning, taking for his subject, "God with us" and showing that in the great forward movement contemplated and urged by the specialists in the "Men and Religion Meetings" we may count on the presence of God in Jesus Christ. The sermon was a strong one and of great inspiration to many.

Dr. Blackburn also gave an address in the men's department of the Sunday school at 12.15 and took charge, in the pastor's absence of the Walther Men's class.

The Junior Endeavor met at 3. 30 with Miss Ethel M. Campbell in charge, a large number of our men and boys' attended the special meetings of the "Men and Religion Forward movement held yesterday at 3.30 in Y. M. C. A. hall and Bethany Congregational church.

At 6 o'clock in the chapel, the regular Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was held. Mrs. Joseph Walther led the meeting and the subject was worth-while ambitions." Scripture, John 17:20-24; Rom. 8:18-21. At 7 o'clock the pastor Rev. Joseph Walther occupied the pulpit and preached the fourteenth in a series of sermons to men on "Men who did things;" subject: "The Man who dallied." The chorus choir under the leadership of musical director A. D. Albee, sang "Send out thy Light". This was inspiring and it is hoped that they wil sing often if not regularly in the future.

This evening at 7.45 a lecture is to be given in the chapel on "The Philippine Islands." Rev. A. A. Forshee, a missionary of the American Baptist Foreign Misisonary society will be the lecturer, and he will illustrate his subject with a large number of stereopticon views. This lecture will be open to women as well as men and all the people of the community as well as of the church and congregation are invited.

Tuesday evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Porter, 109 Taylor street, Rev. Joseph Walther leader. In the afternoon at 3 the regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham, 109 Grand View avenue, subject: "What Quincy is doing for the health of its people;" with Mrs. Pinkham, leader, who will read reports of the Anti-Tuberculosis society, Day Nursery, Summer Playground committee, Visiting Nurses and Catholic Charitable Societies. The meeting is sure to be interesting and it is hoped that a large number of our ladies will attend.

Friday evening at 7.45 the regular meeting for praise, prayer and testimony will be held in the chapel; subject; "The January Number of Missions'" "Our Missionary Magazine." All our people are urged to read the magazine and then to come and tell what they have found helpful and interesting in it.

At the business meeting of the church held last Friday evening at the close of the prayer and social service it was voted to adopt, the duplex church and missionary envelopes in place of our present system of raising money and that the new order go into effect at the beginning of our Fiscal year. Five men and five women were also appointed to act with the board of trustees to secure pledges to cover contemplated enlargements to our chapel.

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Julian C. Jaynes one of the well-known denominational divines of West Newton, occupied the pulpit of the First church Sunday morning and preached an eloquent sermon before a large audience.

The regular meeting of the Young People's Religious Union in the chapel Sunday, at 7 P. M. was addressed by Rev. Mr. Dethlefs of Hyde Park.

The regular meeting of the Alliance was held this afternoon in the church parlor. Mrs. Frank Young of Asnmont gave a paper on "Conversation of Humanity."

This evening a special parish meeting is to be held in the chapel at eight o'clock when it is hoped all members will endeavor to be present and take part in the business of the church.

The date of the Junior Alliance meeting has been changed to Tuesday evening at 7.30.

The preacher for Sunday, Jan. 28, will be Rev. Hilary Bygrave of Cambridge.

WOLLASTON METHODIST.

Sunday was a great day at the Wollaston M E. church. The Gospel team of Boston University conducted all the services. Mr. Jones preached in the morning on "Obedience rather than sacrifice." At the Sunday school 8 or 9 took the stand for Christ for the first time. The Team took charge of the Junior League, an exceptionally large number being present. Mr. Atkins of the Team led the Epworth League. Chairs had to be brought in, the room being full.

The Team took charge of the evening services. An after meeting at which over 60 took part was held at the close of this service.

Great audiences were present all day. The Team did fine work, being here Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

BRIEFS

Cards have been received from Mr. and Mrs. Ben Johnson, who are visiting relatives, Mr. and Mrs. James McDonough, at Washington, D. C.

A poverty party will be held by the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum in the club rooms tomorrow evening. Prizes will be awarded for the most peculiar costumes and dancing will bring the affair to a close at midnight.

While coasting on Kendrick avenue in company with a number of playmates last Saturday afternoon, Edith Little, the 13 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Little of 16 Verchild street, fell to the ground. Medical assistance was called and it was found that she has sustained a broken arm.

UNCLAIMED LETTERS.

Letters remain uncalled for at the Quincy Post Office for Miss Amy Adams, Mr. Campbell, Mrs. G. S. Canfield, Jennie Carroll, Mrs. J. Carrol, Mrs. John H. Coombs, Dr. F. L. A NIGHT RUN

Story by a Locomotive Engineer of Civil War Service

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

There is one feature of the civil war that has never been written up.

I refer to the railroads. They were the main instruments of transportation and communication. Their possession was therefore usually the most important element in a campaign. And when taken the next problem that arose was how to hold them and the next how to operate them to a purpose. The people living in the south through which they passed were mostly sympathizers with the Confederacy and did all they could or dare do to wreck trains in Federal hands. They would take up a rail, saw the stringers of a bridge, so that the weight of a train would break it; they would interfere with switches. Indeed, there was no element of danger they could devise that they would not throw in the way of the Union operation of the road.

Before repeating a story that was told me by an ex-Federal railroad engineer I will mention a narrow escape to which I was a party. I was with a Union general who was riding on a locomotive through a hostile country. The engineer was a young southerner whom the general had impressed for the service, forcing him to run the engine. We were speeding along at night. Suddenly I saw the engineer reverse the wheels, then, pale as a ghost, wait for something terrible to happen. I felt a jolt, and the engineer at once recovered his courage. He had seen a tie wedged in between the rails with a view to throwing our locomotive off the tracks and down an embankment. The effort had failed. In a few minutes we thought no more about it. The deaths we missed and were constantly missing counted for nothing. Now for the story.

"One morning at daybreak," said the narrator, "after a forced march we struck one of the main railroad arteries in the southwest and captured a lot of rolling stock. My captain told me that the general had called for those of the command who had been railway engineers, conductors and trainmen, and I, being an engineer, was to report at once at headquarters. I did so. The general asked me a few questions about my experience and told me to report for duty to Captain Benton, who had been appointed railway superintendent. I was given an engine and hauled troops to the eastern end of the road, which they occupied.

"It was about two weeks after this that the superintendent told me to report in person to the general. I did so, and he said to me:

"'Sergeant, I have just received a telegram from L., at the other end of the road, that the force there has been attacked by a superior force. The colonel commanding has promised not to surrender for at least two hours. You must take a train through to him loaded with troops and ammunition within that period.'

"'But, general,' I expostulated, 'there are three elements against me. I must go in the night, the roadbed will not admit of a safe rate of over thirty miles an hour, and the people along the route will do all they can to wreck the train.'

"'You must go the whole ninety miles in two hours. The possession of L. is of vital importance. If you reach there before the surrender it will be saved. Better that you should wreck your train than be a minute late.'

"That's what a man's life—not one man's life, but thousands—is worth in war. I walked away from the general feeling that I had been ordered to take nine chances in ten of killing and maiming 800 men, including myself. But I'd been in it a year then and knew how little our lives were worth against the possibility of achieving success for the nation.

"I found that the superintendent had been getting a train ready for me and it was loaded with the probable victims. I sprang on to the cab and with a couple of short toots from the whistle started the machine, the one in best repair in our possession. I had been over the line nearly every day for a fortnight and knew where I must endeavor to make the best time. I hadn't had any time to figure it out mathematically. I must take frightful risks on the straightaway parts and let up on the curves. And even on the curves I must drive far beyond a safe rate.

"If I may be said to have got on well on any part of the journey it was the first half. For that period my arm was steady and my brain was cool. Nevertheless it was an hour calculated to break the stoutest nerve. Word must have got to some of the people along the line, for I had scarcely got over ten miles when I found an obstruction. Coming to a sharp curve around the base of a hill, I said to myself, 'If they're going to throw me off anywhere they'll do it right here.' So I cut my speed down to what would enable me to stop within less than a train's length. It was well I did so. At the farther end of the curve I pulled up within ten feet of a tree felled across the track.

"Ten minutes was all the delay occasioned, and I pushed on. But whatever of hope I had felt before that this element of danger would not come up before me was crushed out of me. Beyond the curve I came to the first long straight bit of the road on the line. I knew I must do over sixty miles an hour here in order to get through in the limit of time. For twelve miles I kept my eyes fixed on the track illuminated by the headlight, tearing along so fast that should an obstruction be on the track I could never slow up in time to avoid it. Every minute of strain on my nerves took just so much strength out of them. I believed that no one would place anything on a straight track to throw me off and took all the chance on this, besides the danger of leaving the rails. The locomotive swayed and groaned and bounced till it seemed that the next bump would surely throw it off. At even the slightest curve I held my breath, and every time I came to a switch which I could not plainly see I was sure the rattling and pumping beneath meant that we were on the ties and in another moment would be rolled up in a universal smash.

"I had an excellent headlight, the reflector of which I had polished myself. Under its glare the shadows before me looked black and heavy as if they had been stone. There were telegraph poles beside the track, and it seemed to me as I approached their shadows that I was about to encounter the trunk of a fallen tree. They faded in rapid succession, but the approach of every shadow was like the falling of a sledgehammer on my nerves.

"I had gone seventy miles and was on time when suddenly a big block of solid stone loomed up ahead. I reversed, whistled down the brakes and came to a full stop. But I neither knew when I stopped nor for a few moments after whether I had escaped the peril, for I was so benumbed with fright that my senses refused to act. As soon as I was conscious that the machine was at rest I took another look ahead. There was the block I had seen, but as far distant as it had been when I discovered it. I jumped down and ran ahead. I couldn't see the obstacle, for my own shadow concealed it. Nevertheless I did not reach it. I stepped aside, and there it was—ahead. I ran forward a bit and, not reaching it, returned and examined my headlight. There on the glass directly before the light was a tiny moth.

"Summoning all my resolution to disregard these phantom obstacles, I put on full speed, and when I came to a straight bit of road I shut my eyes that I might not see and be racked by them. Again the old iron swayed and groaned and wheezed and puffed and spit fire and smoke till I entered upon the last ten miles between me and my destination. Then suddenly there was a crash, and a bit of splintered glass struck me in the face. I supposed that at last the catastrophe had come.

"But, no. The cowcatcher had thrown up a chicken or some other object that had broken the lamp of the headlight. The lamp continued to burn, however, though unprotected, since I had reversed as soon as the crash came. However, I knew it would not keep lighted under speed, and I felt that after all I had been blocked. But just as I was about to give up hope I saw a light ahead, and presently a locomotive bore down on us, slowing up as it came. It had been sent out by the commander at L., who was hard pressed to learn if we were nearing him.

"We managed to get this other headlight in position on my locomotive, and again I pushed forward. From this point now and again we could occasionally hear the faint booming of guns and as we drew nearer the rattle of musketry. The moon was at the full. Evidently the Confederate commander was determined to crush his enemy before the arrival of re-enforcements, and the Federal officer was fighting against time.

"I did not know at what moment the latter might give way, and, although the road was as rough and as crooked as any part I had passed over, I drove the machine as rapidly and as recklessly as before. I approached our men from the rear, though they were being flanked, which we were made aware of by a sudden fire into our train.

"The commander of the troops I had hauled through pulled the bell cord and when I had come to a halt ordered his men out of the train. They drove back the Confederate flankers and joined the main body.

"The arrival of re-enforcements caused the Confederates to withdraw, and the place was saved.

"As soon as my work was over I tumbled over on the cab floor. My fireman picked me up, and I revived very shortly. I know what an important victory I had achieved and wanted to go right back and tell the general all about it. But instead of that I went to bed.

"The next morning I was all right and took a train back, passing over the route I had traversed the night before and smiling at the phantom obstructions that had filled me with horror the night before. As soon as I arrived an aid-de-camp told me to report in person to the general, and I went to his tent.

"He put out his hand to me, just as if I had as many stars on my shoulder as he had himself.

"'You've not only saved this army from a retreat,' he said, 'but have saved the force at L. from capture, besides preventing the loss of all this territory we have been months in acquiring. I shall recommend you to the governor of your state for a commission, and I wish you at once to take personal charge of the running of trains.'"

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

The attendance at last Sunday's session of the Braintree People's Forum was the largest thus far this season due doubtless to the fine weather and the desire to hear Professor Dubois speak on "The souls of black folk." Mr. Dubois is one of the ablest representatives of the colored race and presented many little known historical facts concerning his people. He is a finely educated man and gave his address in such pure English and in such a comprehensive way that his hearers were deeply interested.

He told of conditions in the south, industrial and political and showed clearly to his auditors that the black man although freed from the yoke of slavery is in many ways far from being a free man and at liberty to do as he wishes. He spoke of many cases of injustice to a man or woman simply because they were of the negro race and were not allowed some of their lawful rights. Related many facts going to show that the negro race has had a glorious past history in Africa and a degree of civilization hardly to be realized by people who have not studied into the matter.

Mr. Dubois told of many unjust discriminations against the negro by the trade unions and mentioned the evils of the contract system in vogue in some of the Southern states where he said the conditions were almost mediaeval.

He referred rather sarcastically to the Democratic party in the South and its attitude on the child labor laws which are so worded as to allow employers an excuse for employing negro children who are manifestly under the legal age.

He referred humorously to the inconsistencies of some of our societies notably the Christian Endeavorers who would prohibit moving pictures of Johnson—Jeffries fight but turned a deaf ear when asked to use their influence against lynching. All of the speaker's remarks tended to show that the black race while downtrodden for centuries had just as many talents, were just as human and possessed the same possibilities for advancement as did their white brothers. Many of the auditors availed themselves of the opportunity to ask questions all of which were courteously and tactfully answered by Professor Dubois.

Next Sunday Mrs. Maud Wood Park will speak on "Votes for Women.

BASKET BALL RESULTS.

Three games were played in the Y. M. C. A. league on Saturday night with the result that Harvard now has a clear lead for the championship with Army and Dartmouth but one game behind. Penn was put out of the running by a crushing defeat at the hands of Dartmouth, the score winding up 25 to 8.

Brown gave Army a good rub in the first game of the evening; the 2nd half of the game being especially close. Army, however, was without the services of its star guard, Holmes and this account for the close score. Army 29.—Brown 17.

The Cornell-Yale game was the "star" attraction of the evening. All through the first half, the lead alternated between the two teams until the last few minutes when Rich and Cranshaw scored in quick succession. The half ended 14 to 8 in Cornell favor.

The 2nd half was nip and tuck from the start. Gearmar of Yale scored two dandy goals within the first two minutes and then "Bob" Cranshaw of Cornell" went crazy and set the crowd wild by caging a clear goal from the center of the floor. Yale outscored Cornell in this half but the lead was too large, too overcome and the game ended 26-21.

Harvard now has a good lead for the championship not having last a game. Army and Dartmouth are tied for 2nd place with Penn and Cornell tied for 4th.

The Junior "Gym" classes began their winter schedule of group games on last Saturday morning by electing the following captains.

Howard Johnson,—Cubs
Elmer Ashland, —Red Sox.
Rob Davis,—Braves
Ken Briggs,—Tigers
Erastus Cleveland—Athletes.
James Smith,—Giants.

The Senior Bowling team will meet a picked team form the Tubular Rivet Co., tonight in the association alleys.

Tuesday night the Bowling team will roll against Hyde Park in the second match of the Y. M. C. A. League Roll off. The match will be rolled on the Old South Alleys in Boston.

QUINCYS KEEP WINNING STREAK

Defeats St. Alphonsus' Teams in Greater Boston League

THE SUMMARIES

The Quincy A. A. basket ball teams continued their winning streak Saturday when they took the crack St. Alphonsus teams into camp at Roxbury, in the Greater Boston league, the first team winning by a score of 27 to 12 and the second team winning by a score of 15 to 5. The Quincy teams are putting up a great fight for the leadership in the league and from the great work of the first team Saturday night it will give the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. team a hard tussle when they meet this week. The feature of the first team was the work of P. Duggan his elongated forward being all over the floor and his shooting of several sensational baskets.

Jenkins was the star of the second team securing five goals from the floor. The second team by its win Saturday is a little nearer the Cunningham Gym second team which is the leader among the second teams. The summary.

CITY COUNCIL COMMITTEES

President Hobbs Names Standing Committees of Council

SOME SURPRISES

There has been considerable speculation since inauguration day as to the make up of the council standing committees for the year. President Hobbs intended to announce the committees earlier but it has been quite a task for him to select the men he thought best for the several committees.

The most important committee of the City Council is of course that of Finance and this chairmanship goes to Councilman Richards. The committee is a strong one as it is comprised largely of men who have served in other years on the committee.

The chairman of the Street committee the next in importance to that of Finance goes to Councilman Sandberg. With him on the committee are two who served on the same committee last year.

The chairman of the Sewer Committee goes to Councilman Ericson who has done good service on the Street committee during his service in the council. Here he will have to be a teacher, for all of the others on the committee are members of the council who are serving their first year.

Councilman Studley gets the chairmanship of the Committee on Fire and Police and should do well there.

The Committee on Public Buildings which is also one of the most important in the council is given to Councilman Bailey while Councilman Sandberg who was chairman of the committee last year drops to third place on the committee.

The License Committee one of the busiest of the council, especially during the month of April, goes to John R. S. Ross who is a particularly good man for the position as many of the minor licenses granted during the year are to parties at Houghs Neck.

The only Democratic member to get a chairmanship is Councilman Boyd who is given the Committee on Legislative Matters. While this is sometimes looked upon as a joke committee, the fact that there are many important matters of interest to Quincy coming up in the legislature this year should make this committee a busy one.

The chairmanship of the remaining committee, that on Health and Poor is given to Councilman Craig.

The complete list of standing committees as announced by President Hobbs is as follows:—

Finance, Accounts, Claims, Contracts and Salaries—Richards, Bailey, Ericson, Abele, Cunningham, Sodergren, Murray.

Streets, Ways, Sidewalks, Bridges and Lights — Sandberg, Studley, Thompson, Craig, Sodergren, Boyd, Gilliatt.

Sewers, Drains and Water Supply—Ericson, Beeman, Devaney, C. A. Ross, Mahoney, Barker, Murray.

Fire Department and Police—Studley, Craig, J. R. S. Ross, Barker, Gauthier.

Public Buildings and Grounds—Bailey, Beeman, Sandberg, C. A. Ross, Thompson.

Ordinances, Licenses, Printing, Rules and Orders—J. R. S. Ross, Abele, Gauthier, Forde, Gilliatt, Carruthers, Beeman.

Legislative Matters, Elections and Returns—Boyd, Devaney, Richards.

Health, Poor, State and Military Aid—Craig, Mahoney, Carruthers.

SIGNS CONTRACT FOR BATTLESHIP

President Bowles Wires That Contract was Signed Monday

WORK ALREADY BEGUN

It is now a settled fact that the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. will build one of the two 27,000 ton superdreadnaughts for which bids were opened a few days ago. While it was announced last week that the Quincy company would be awarded one of the contracts it was not made certain until Monday afternoon when President Bowles officially signed the contract. The fact that the contract had actually been signed was made known early Monday evening in a telegram from President Bowles to the effect he had signed the contract.

President Bowles' telegram did not state which of the vessels would be built in Quincy but it is understood that it will be the Nevada. Work at the yards has already been commenced in the draughting rooms and from now on things will be hustling.

QUINCY TO HAVE CITY PLANNING COMMISSION

Announcement Made by Mayor Stone at Luncheon Given by D. King at Boston City Club

City Officials and Others Hear Proposed Metropolitan Plan Commission Discussed by Authors

A party of Quincy gentlemen were the guests of D. King at luncheon at the Boston City club, Monday noon, to meet J. Randolph Cooledge and Edward A. Filene of the Metropolitan plan commission, that they might hear from the authoritative heads, the object of the plan which is being so widely discussed among the 38 cities and towns of the Metropolitan district at the present time. In addition to the two gentlemen mentioned above and the host there were present Mayor Stone, City Solicitor McAnarney, City Engineer Sargent, President Hobbs of the City Council, Councilmen Sandberg, Abele, Bailey, Murray, and C. A. Ross of the special committee of the City Council, President, Charles C. Hearn, Vice President W. G. Shaw, Secretary John O. Hall, Thomas L. Williams, Henry L. Kincaide, William H. Teasdale, of the Board of Trade, Representatives Piper and Leslie and George T. Magee of the Ledger.

Immediately after luncheon Mr. King said that he did not believe in the combination of Quincy with Boston and that the Metropolitan plan simply meant co-operation and not combination. He looked upon it as a movement toward helpful business co-operation. He then introduced Edward A. Filene, one of the commission who drew up the plan.

Mr. Filene said that the spirit of the committee who went to work on the scheme, was with the idea of helping the whole district. Not a haphazard development that will create all kinds of conditions in which some places were bound to be left on the shoals, but a comprehensive plan of development for the whole community. What must benefit Boston in the way of transportation and traffic roads must necessarily benefit other communities, because it will have a tendency to do away with congestion, which breeds disease. It is for our interest therefore to have as many business men live in the country as possible and to do so they must have transportation facilities for reaching their business quickly.

In the little that has already been done in the development of our sea port it has been learned that Boston is nearer foreign ports than New Orleans. That two thirds of the best part of the continent is nearer Boston than New York or Chicago.

In the plan proposed no taxes can be imposed upon a town or city that does not vote for the improvements, and the 25 per cent assessed on the district for improvements is only in relation to the benefit each of these places receive. The whole plan is in being able to help plan for the benefit of the whole district in a comprehensive manner.

J. Randolph Cooledge said that the bill was a little different from other commissions. We mean the development of traffic highways which shall make traffic cheaper and better than now. If it was necessary to have a traffic highway it ought to be the business of someone to plan it. To think ahead for those things that will benefit more than one town.

The commission will have the studying of all these systems of distribution that shall relieve the present congested traffic. The men who planned the subway did not look ahead to the future. If such a condition has happened in Boston it is likely to happen in other places, because no one has any business to plan for the future.

Another thing was the protecting of the district against fire as well as to have good highways. There is an annual loss, representing the interest on $100,000,000 by fire. Five-sixths of this is preventable, if not now later on. It is now cheaper to build a house of wood than brick and cities and towns where wooden buildings are prohibited will lose in population. There should be some system of building laws so as to prevent the erection of fire hazards as we now have them. This question can not be settled individually but must be settled as a whole.

In many places they are already studying out ahead the proper kind of dwellings. In many places there are streets with single houses six feet apart largely occupied by their owners. Then some one comes along and puts up a three decker and the appearance of that whole street is spoiled for its beauty.

Therefore we can say that the plan of the commission has three things in view, laying out a direct traffic system of highways that will be for the benefit of the whole district; protection from conflagration and the housing of the population.

The commission has no executive power and nothing can be done without the consent of the town or city interested. The permisison of the city and town shall first be obtained. The first question is if the city or town will be willing to pay the 65 per cent.

President Hearn of the Board of Trade asked if in view of the opposition to more commissions the work could not be done by one of the existing commissions.

Mr. Cooledge replied that it was not advisable for the reason that in the case of the Highway commission it had been found that Boston was paying for three times as much as had been expended in the district, and it did not seem wise that any commission clothed with executive powers like the existing commissions should handle the questions.

Mayor Stone, "Then the board is not an executive commisison?" Mr. Cooledge, "No, we simply plan and you, carry out the work."

Mr. Filene, "the commission will be simply a board of experts, whose business will be to hold meetings in the towns and cities and get your ideas and then help you plan out for the best possible development. It means industrial and commercial development. The commission takes

JOINT PUBLIC INSTALLATION

Three Orange Lodges Install Officers at Electa Hall

BANQUET

Electa hall was taxed to overflowing Monday evening on the occasion of the joint installation of Bay View, L. O. Lodge 187, Quincy L. O. Lodge 194 and the Daughters of John Adams, L. L. O. Lodge, 11. The affair was made public and the different methods adopted in the triangular installation itself, together with the splendid manner in which all details were carried out, caused it to be highly appreciated by the large number who were in attendance.

The installation work began at eight and terminated shortly before eleven o'clock. The banquet, consisting of escalloped oysters, chicken salad, lobster salad, mashed potatoes, ham, ice cream, coffee, cake and tonic, was then in order, and fitting remarks for the occasion were made by prominent speakers. Dancing brought the exercises to a close at midnight.

The Daughters of John Adams, L. L. O. Lodge 11, were the first to be installed and much applause greeted the different participants from time to time as they executed the degree movements in a most commendable manner. The ladies were installed by grand mistress Mrs. Sarah Gordon, and staff of Boston. The following officers were installed:

Mistress—Mrs. Annie C. LaMotte.
Deputy—Mrs. Jane Murdock.
Secretary—Mrs. Jessie McCleod.
Chaplain—Mrs. Sarah McLane.
Financial Secretary—Miss Jennie Ellis.
Treasurer—Mrs. Margaret McKinnon.
Conductress—Mrs. Beatrice Budd.
Guards—Mrs. Flora J. McLeod, Mrs. Martha Beaton.
Trustees—Mrs. Annie A. McKenzie, Mrs. Margaret K. McKenzie, Mrs. Catherine McPhee.
Advisory Board—Andrew Stuart, James Ross.

Then followed the installation of the officers for the ensuing year of the Bay View Lodge. The installing officer was George Davidson, of Everett, grand secretary of the order, who was assisted by a staff of ten members. The following were installed:

Worthy Master—Isaac McLennan.
Deputy Master—Malcolm McKenzie.
Recording Secretary—Malcolm McLeod.
Financial Secretary — Alexander Ross.
Treasurer—William F. McCalder.
Chaplain—John McKinnon.
Director of ceremonies—Malcolm Stewart.
Inside Tyler—Malcolm McCleod.
Outside Tyler—Hugh J. McLean.
Foreman, committee on law—David L. Gordon.
Committee—William J. McLeod, Allen F. Finlayson, John McDonald, Allen McKay.

POVERTY PARTY PLAY FAIR CLUB

Universalist Vestry the Scene of Much Merriment

THE PROGRAM

Those who attended the poverty party, of the Play Fair club at the Universalist Church, attired in poverty-stricken garments were fortunate, for to them the price of admission was but five cents. Those that came in their Sunday clothes had to dig deeper into their pockets for the necessary coin to allow them to pass the sentinel who stood at the door. As many of the participants were gowned in raiment that had seen better days there was of course much laughter and merriment during the entire evening.

The fun began shortly after 8 o'clock with a grand march about the vestry by those in poverty costume, and there were many ill-mated couples among the participants of the march. There was an object in being gowned as they were, for it had been announced that he and she who, in the minds of the judges, was the most poverty stricken looking person should have a gift. This they all strove to capture. It laid to Miss Maude Cudworth and Lester Sprague to carry off the honors in the march.

Then there was a short entertainment which included a vocal duet by Misses Blanche and Annie Wright after which there was a series of contest that created a great deal of fun, not only for the spectators but for those who took part as well.

First came a doughnut eating contest and there was a hustle to see which would be the first to get outside of the doughnuts. Constant practice at eating doughnuts had made some of them very proficient and it was wonderful the way they disappeared. It was to Miss Elizabeth Reed however to whom the prize for being the most rapid went.

Then came a cracker and water contest which was also quite exciting but crackers being dry did not slip down quite as easily as doughnuts and it required considerable water to help along. Merton Grant was the most rapid manipulator in the cracker line and to him the prize was awarded.

The last game was a peanut hunt and this of course created a great deal of fun the peanuts were secreted in every conceivable place and the way the contestants hustled was remarkable. Miss Parmenter however found the largest number and secured the prize.

The judges were Mrs. Frank Hobart, George Wheeler and Mr. Graft. The committee in charge of the affair were J. Freeman Hyland, Lester Sprague, Bartlett Spooner and Everett Andrews.

EXTENDS CALL TO DR. HUDSON

Invited to Become the Pastor of First Church March 1

SPECIAL MEETING

In respones to a call for a special parish meeting there was a large attendance at First Church Chapel, Monday night. The attendance and discussion showed keen appreciation and interest in the welfare of the church and also the strength and support given by members of the parish.

The meeting was called to hear reports of committees appointed last spring; to discuss the calling of a pastor and as a preliminary meeting to the annual parish meeting in March. Owing to the illness of Rev. E. C. Butler pastor of the church the people had been without a regular minister but has had the opportunity of hearing some of the best ministers in the faith, some of whom might consider a call if extended.

As Mr. Butler's resignation would take effect in March, when he would become pastor emeritus it was thought it was time to take some action in calling a settled pastor.

John Q. A. Field was moderator of the meeting and J. Brooks Keyes, clerk, read the minutes of previous meetings.

George E. Pfaffmann gave a good report for the committee on gilding the dome, fixing the church grounds and the collections for church debt. A vote of thanks was extended the committee for its work.

Henry M. Faxon for the committee on calling a minister spoke briefly of those who had preached in the church since the summer and said that among them there was probably one or more who would consider a call if extended.

Charles H. Johnson briefly stated the qualifications of some of the ministers. He had been right in touch with them, his activity in Unitarian work giving him unusual opportunities for greater knowledge.

It was voted to have an informal vote to get the sentiment of those present and three names resulted, the votes for each being about equal.

There was much discussion as to the merits of each, by the men and also the women present. After several informal ballots a formal ballot

THE DRIED FRUIT SEASON

This is the time of year when dried or evaporated fruit begins to receive due appreciation. Fresh fruit is getting scarce with the exception of oranges, which are now at their best.

We have a large stock of new evaporated and dried fruits of various kinds and we invite your inspection.

PRUNES—when it begins to come along toward spring the appetitie craves the form of food that contains the iron, salts and sugar that nature has scientifically sealed up in prunes. We have just received last week a new lot of choice, fancy black Prunes which we will sell for

C. W. Morse used to make some big deals, but his best investment was Mrs. Morse.

It was 13 below zero in Washington, but the output of political hot air was not sensibly affected.

What a blessing it would be if the book agents that infest our offices could be interested in the "back to the land" movement.

We hope they don't get Mr. Roosevelt into presidential politics until he gets the June weddings reported for the Outlook.

It is said that little or nothing will be done by the present session of Congress, as otherwise a very dangerous precedent would be created.

There are 14 dark horses mentioned for the Democratic nomination, but several of them would not be safe for any lady to drive.

One of the greatest difficulties we encounter in supporting a family is the amount of time it takes to read the articles on the Cost of Living.

After quizzing Andy Carnegie, the steel trust investigators must know how a dog feels after running an anise seed bag all around the back pastures.

A woman has been suggested for senator from Colarado, but in case she should go, it would not be necessary for the other senators to take her out every day for ice cream.

Millionare-for-a-day McDevitt of Wilkesbarre who went down to New York to spend $2500, got along very well in Gotham by the exercise of moderate economy.

Six people were killed on their way to church at Philadelphia. It's bad enough for Sunday trains to run at all, and at least they should quit running over people that are going to church.

Although the Democratic convention is to be held at Baltimore, it does not follow that all the delegates will live on terrapin. The principles of Jeffersonian democracy can be exemplified by ordering fish balls.

ANDREW CARNEGIE.

As is so often the case, the portrait of our Andy occupies the front page of the newspapers, now that he has been summoned for a quiz by the Steel trust investigating committee.

Whatever one may think of the "System" which has made possible a social phenomenon like Mr. Carnegie and his $25,000,000 per year, few will deny that he has more original ideas than any other of our millionares.

Who can imagine John D. Rockefeller, when a propertyless clerk, having the kind of sentiment that would make him throw up his job for the sake of a walking trip through England, as did Carnegie during the early struggles of his career?

From the earliest days he had a way of doing things on his own original initiative in a big way. One day when he was a young telegraph operator on the Pennsylvania railroad, there was a smashup. Division Superintendent Thomas Scott could not be located. Carnegie, seeing that some one must take responsibility and take it quick, sent out telegrams right and left signed Tom Scott. At once traffic began to move. When Scott came back and recovered his breath, he made Andrew his private secretary, where he could get the advantage of his initiative, and at the same time watch him.

Mr. Carnegie's philanthropies have an individual character not found elsewhere. Outside of many gifts to needy steel workers and other private friends, he has given comparatively little to the sick and poor. He has shown little interest in churches, missions, hospitals, soup houses, or Young Men's Christian Associations. In giving a church organ, he once said that he could endorse all that the instrument said, which was not the case with the preaching. He never did much for the submerged. One great theory of his has rather been to find the exceptional man, and help him. Almost any expenditure is worth while, according to him, if you can locate a genius and set him to work for which he is fitted. He always preferred giving to small colleges rather than to the great universities. The latter have too many rich men's sons and too few who are working their own way.

The hero funds carry out the same idea by helping the man of extraordinary courage to get recognition and a start in life.

FARMER AND BATH-TUB.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief government chemist, perpetrated one of his characteristic epigrams the other day before the Vermont Dairymen's Association, when he said to the farmers that "Your women folks are just as important as your cows and should have at least as good care."

Dr. Wiley said a bath-tub with cold and hot water for the family is just as important as a silo for the benefit of the cows.

Perhaps some cynic will rise and say that the reason many farmers hestitate to put in a bath-room for the sake of their families, is not so much dislike of incurring expense, as it is the fear lest family pressure would be exerted to make them acquire the habit of regular bathing.

Though this may be regarded as a libel, there can be little doubt that the average farmer is much more careless of his personal appearance than the average farmer's wife.

Professor Charles Eliot Norton, the famous professor and critic of Harvard university, once said publicly that the farmers ought to make more use of the bath-tub and the tooth-brush. The remark was quoted far and wide, and it stirred the ire of many agriculturists, but there was much truth in what he said.

The majority of our younger farmers have learned that personal cleanliness is a business asset. But the older men are often very slovenly.

The Japanese have an innocent habit of wholesale family ablutions. The mother of the family takes the man of the house, strips him, places him in the tub, and scrubs him thoroughly. Then the man does the same for her. Afterwards all the children are tubbed and scrubbed. And all in the dubious privacy of the back yard.

While our custom requires such interesting ceremonies to be performed under cover, it is quite likely that the good health and capacity for work of the little Japs owes much to this national habit of cleanliness. Once a man acquires the habit of daily bathing, he feels jaded and unclean without the usual scrub.

"DOING NOTHING."

"Fifty per cent. of the children doing absolutely nothing" is rather a startling statement in the report of the recreation survey made by the Board of Education and the Child Welfare Commission of Milwaukee. A play expert of the national recreation association—Rowland Haynes— formerly a specialist in psychology, spent several weeks in making the study. Information was gathered as to what the children in a given district were doing on Saturdays and after school hours. It was found that 19 per cent, were working, 31 per cent. playing and 50 per cent. were doing absolutely nothing.

It is believed that these facts gathered in Milwaukee are fairly typical and present a strong argument for the necessity of providing more adequate playgrounds. "Doing nothing" is tremendously dulling and results in filling up the juvenile courts.

The national recreation association has four experts constantly traveling to help give the children a chance to play. Milwaukee is one of the first cities to undertake a thorough and comprehensive study of its recreation conditions and needs and possibilities.

VOTES AND PENSION MONEY.

Buying votes with money from the national treasury is about what some of the recent pension legislation amounts to. Mr. Charles Francis Adams's articles in the World's Work make perfectly plain the debauching system which has grown up. As one courageous Congressman put it in the debate on the Sulloway Bill: "I want to say this here and now, though I realize the effect of my vote upon this question, the $50,000,000 a year is too big a price for the country to pay to bring me back to Congress." "But the average member of the House," says Mr. Adams, "is not afflicted with any similar excess of modesty. In his estimation no price seems to be too considerable to pay for his retention in Congress, provided always the money paid to bring that result about comes not out of his private resources, but from the National Treasury."

PLAYGROUND ASSOCIATION.

Playground and Recreation Association of America to Hold New England Recreation Institute at Brookline.

The New England Recreation Institute of the Playground and Recreation Association of America will take place at the Brookline Municipal Gymnasium, Feb. 15, 16, and 17. The sessions will be addressed by experts in many branches of public recreation, and the program will include several speakers of national reputation. Among these will be Lee F. Hanmer, of the Sage Foundation, New York City, Dr. J. H. McCurdy, of Springfield, George A. Parker, of Hartford, Conn., Mrs. C. H. Israels, of New York City, Professor George P. Baker, of Cambridge, and Joseph Lee of Boston.

The wide range of subjects discussed will include Boys and Girls at Play, Athletics for All, The Wider Use of Public Parks, Holiday Celebrations, Playground Management, Boy Scouts, Boys' Clubs, Evening Recreation Centers, Commercial Recreation, The Civic Pageant, and The Place of Music in Public Recreation. An instructive part of the exercises will be the demonstration of games for all ages ,scouting, folk dancing, gymnastic dancing, and dramatic play .

Persons concerned with any of these phases of public recreation will have the privilege of attending as delegates, and the evening sessions will be open to the public. Of especial interest to the visiting delegates will be the luncheon at which officials in charge of recreation in the cities and towns of New England are expected to speak.

The newly appointed Playground Commission of Brookline will have charge of local arrangements.

ADVANTAGES OF SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE

It is the evident purpose of Savings Bank Life Insurance to give to its policyholders every benefit which is consistent with sound business methods. Sept. 15, 1910, a policyholder, who had been paying premiums for one year and three months, allowed his policy to lapse. Thinking there was no value in the policy, he gave it no further thought. Nov. 27, 1911, this man died and upon investigation it was found that the value which there was in his policy at the time it had lapsed had automatically extended the man's insurance until July 15, 1912. Therefore, although premiums had been paid upon his policy for only one year and three months, and although one year and six months had elapsed since the payment of the last premium, his widow received the full amount of the policy which was $500.

Recently, a policyholder was compelled to raise money in order that he might send his mother South for her health. Although he wanted to keep his insurance policy in force, he saw no other way to obtain money than to surrender his policy and take the cash value. It was shown to him that he could borrow from the Insurance Department of the Savings Bank upon his insurance policy, sufficient money for his needs and still keep his policy in force. He did this and the Insurance Department of the Bank charged only 5 per cent interest which was a much lower rate than he could have obtained from any loan company.

These are two of the many new benefits afforded to industrial policyholders under Savings Bank Life Insurance.

FISHING FLEET SOLD.

Quincy friends and relatives of Captain Philip Whorf, of Provincetown, will be interested to learn that he has sold his entire fleet of boats to the Gorton Pew Fisheries Co., of Gloucester. By their transfer the last of the salt fish interest at Provincetown passes, after a history in the business almost as long as that of the city.

Capt. Whorf for years has conducted the Grand Bank salt cod fishing, but has marketed his catch here. Having reached his 70th year he has concluded to retire. Provincetown still retains a large fleet engaged in the offshore fresh fishery.

☞One of the handsomest, as well as the most instructive calendars we have seen for this year, is that sent out by the White & Wyckoff Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of stationery, Holyoke, Mass. The large type, the featuring of holidays and notable days of the year, in three color process printing, makes the calendar a most desirable one. A calendar will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents in coin or U. S. stamps.

WOULD SMASH HIGH PRICES

Boycott on Butter and Eggs Urged In Baltimore

PRODUCTS IN COLD STORAGE

Plan Which Holds Up Seemingly Defenseless Public Can Be Smashed by Systematic Agitation—New Bill Lowering Oleomargarine Tax From Ten Cents to Less Than Cent a Pound Is Ready For Congress

Baltimore, Jan. 23.—Efforts are being made to start a boycott of high-priced butter in Baltimore. Members of the women's clubs are becoming interested. Dr. Guy Hunner, who has made a study of the conditions, is vigorously urging a boycott of both butter and eggs. He says:

"While in Chicago last September I learned that one of the largest butter and egg storage companies in the country was planning a winter campaign to corner the market and boost prices of these important food supplies.

"This same company two years ago, by an artificial inflation of prices, cleaned up more than $1,000,000, but as last winter proved so mild after Jan. 1, the hens and cows upset their plans to the extent of $500,000 loss. The government investigators report that on Jan. 1 of this year there were many millions of pounds of butter in cold storage, and it seems quite evident that certain organizations are taking advantage of the severe winter to swell their coffers by holding up a seemingly defenseless public.

"I believe systematic agitation would encourage the consumers' league and similar organizations of the city to take prompt action for a boycott."

Miss Weer, visiting home economist for the Federated societies, and Miss Lillian Armstrong, director of the Y. W. C. A. school of domestic science, advocate the use of oleomargarine and butterine as a means of breaking down the price of butter.

For Congress to Consider

Washington, Jan. 23.—The increase in the price of butter ordered by the Elgin butter board and the prediction that the commodity will go to 60 cents a pound has given impetus to the campaign in congress for a reduction in the oleomargarine tax.

Chairman Lever of the sub-committee of the house committee on agriculture, which has been considering the oleomargarine bills, will recommend a bill to the committee today designed to lower the tax from 10 cents to less than 1 cent a pound.

The bill provides a fine and imprisonment for the sale of oleomargarine under the guise of butter. The chairman hopes to get it through the house within a month.

It is believed this will do something to lower the cost of living. Letters from women's clubs, labor organizations and various civic bodies have been sent to the committee in great numbers since the butter market quotations from Elgin have become generally known.

Would Boycott Butter

New York, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Julian Heath, president of Housewives' league of New York, hasurged the 60,000 members to refrain from using butter as a protest against the present high price.

DEATH WARRANT READY

Paper Authorizing Electrocution of Richeson Is Prepared

Boston, Jan. 23.—Clerk Manning of the Suffolk superior criminal court has prepared the death warrant authorizing the electrocution of Clarence W. T. Richeson on May 19. Copies were sent to Governor Foss, Sheriff Quinn and Warden Bridges of the state prison at Charlestown. Manning will keep one of the copies himself.

Richeson was sentenced to death on Jan. 9, after he had pleaded guilty to murder in the first degree by giving cyanide of potassium to Avis Linnell.

Berlin, Jan. 23.—The report of the betrothal of Princess Victoria Luise, only daughter of Emperor William, to Grand Duke Adolph Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, is denied.

PRIVATE CAR WRECKED

Prominent Railroad Men Killed In Crash In Illinois

Chicago, Jan. 23.—In a rear-end collision on the Illinois Central, near Kinmundy, Ills., four prominent men were killed and many were injured.

Harahan's train, No. 25, had just drawn into the Kinmundy station when passenger train No. 3, running at high speed, suddenly crashed into the station and coaches.

The rear lights of train No. 25 are believed to have become extinguished in some manner, and the engineer of the following train failed to see the danger in time to apply the brakes. The pilot of the oncoming locomotive ploughed for twenty feet into the vestibuled private car.

The front end of the Harahan car telescoped into the coach ahead and a number of passengers, asleep in their berths, were injured, some of them fatally.

TEN PERCENT INCREASE

Operators Said to Be Prepared to Grant It to Miners

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 23.—It is reported in anthracite coal circles, on what is considered good authority, that a surprise awaits the representatives of the miners when they go into conference with the operators in New York on Feb. 27.

The surprise, it is said, will consist of an offer upon the part of the operators of an advance of 10 percent in wages, the sliding scale to remain as at present.

It is believed that if such an offer is made by the operators it will lead to a settlement of the other grievances presented by the miners.

BODIES OF TWO BOYS IN BIG CAKE OF ICE

Authorities Endeavoring to Establish Their Identity

Washington, Pa., Jan. 23.—A search extending over several counties is being made in an effort to learn the identity of two small boys whose dead bodies were found frozen in a great cake of ice brought to the surface of the Monongahela river by a towboat which was engaged in breaking the ice in the channel.

One of the boys was apparently about 6 years of age while the other was 8. When the dark mass was noted in the ice cake grappling hooks were attached and the block taken aboard the boat and the bodies removed.

Although a careful investigation has been made all along both sides of the Monongahela river no trace can be found of any two boys answering the description who have recently disappeared and the authorities are completely puzzled.

AGED EMPLOYES HELPED

Pensions Amounting to $281,457 Paid by Steel Corporation

Pittsburgh, Jan. 23.—The first annual report of the United States Steel corporation on the pension system for aged employes, inaugurated Jan. 19, 1911, has been made.

On Jan. 1, 1912, there were 1600 employes entitled to draw pensions. At the beginning of 1911 there were 1716 on the roll, but 111 died. The average age of pensioners is 66 2-3 years; the average number of years served 34 4-10; the average amount of monthly pension $20.75. The grand total paid out was $281,457.37.

MILLIONS GO TO NEPHEWS

Labouchere Also Leaves Large Yearly Income to Daughter

Florence, Jan. 23.—The will of the late Henry Labouchere, editor of London Truth, whose death occurred here on Jan. 16, provides for the appointment of three trustees, including British Home Secretary McKenna.

Labouchere left a large yearly income to his daughter, the Marchesa di Rudini, but his fortune, which is estimated at $4,000,000, will eventually be divided among his nephews who bear the name of Labouchere.

BEER IS A COMMODITY

Railroads Cannot Refuse to Transport It to Dry Counties

Washington, Jan. 23.—Beer is a commodity and railroads must carry it, when offered for transportation from one state into "dry" counties of another state, regardless of the laws of the latter state.

The supreme court of the United States made this ruling regarding a proposed shipment from Indiana into "dry" Kentucky counties.

Webster Gets Life Sentence

Oregon, Ills., Jan. 23.—Dr. Harry E. Webster, on trial for murder, was sentenced to life imprisonment. Webster was accused of murdering his second wife to hide the fact that he was a bigamist.

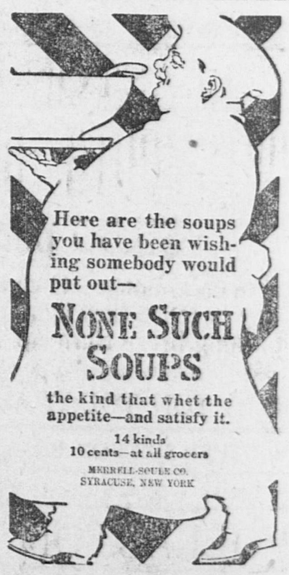
Q.—We know what becomes of the obedient and disobedient, but there is another class, which really cannot be called obedient nor yet disobedient, I mean the irresponsible, and they who love this present world and have not even a desire to know what God requires of them, and which, in my opinion, form the vast majority of mankind even in this enlightened age (so-called). What becomes of them? (P. E. T.)

Answer.—The answering of this questions involves the consideration of the doctrines of "Election" and "Free Grace," both clearly taught in the Scriptures, as all Bible Scholars recognize. It is only within recent years that the beautiful harmony existing between these two doctrines has been recognized. From the Scriptures, of which we will only cite a few, it will be seen that the entire Christian Era, from the time of our Lord Jesus' first advent down to the time of His second coming, is the period in which the "Election" takes place, the election or selection of those who shall constitute the Bride, the Church of Christ. (See I Peter i, 2; Ephesians i, 4; II Peter i, 10; Acts xv, 14-18.) When, at the close of this Christian Age, the work of election is consummated, then God's free grace will be extended to all the remainder of mankind, through the selected class, who were elected to be kings and priests unto God and with their Lord Jesus to reign for the space of a thousand years over the nations of the earth for the purpose of lifting them up out of sin and death to human perfection and eternal life. Now is the Church's opportunity to make her calling and election sure; then will be the world's opportunity of receiving God's free grace. Election now and Free Grace then. See Acts xv, 14-18; Revelation xxii, 17; Acts iii, 19-21.



TO OBSERVE ITS ANNIVERSARY

Wollaston Unitarians Planning for Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

ANNUAL MEETING

At the annual parish meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian society, Monday evening, plans were formed for the proper observance of its twenty-fifth anniversary which occurs in January of next year.

The following parish officers were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year:

President,—Charles S. Adams.
Clerk,—William H. Boynton.
Treasurer,—Walter J. Wellington.
Parish Committee,— Edward J. Cummings, David T. Whiton, William M. Chase, Charles E. Monroe, John E. Simmons.

Walter J. Wellington who was again re-elected as treasurer has held this office for 23 consecutive years having served since the second year of the society's organization.

The meeting opened with the reading of the warrant by William H. Boynton, the clerk Dr. C. S. Adams, reported for the parish committee paying a tribute to Rufus F. Leach, who passed away last year, and giving many recommendations for the improvement of the church interior and strengthening the society .

The report of the treasurer showed the society without debt, all bills paid and a balance on hand. Among the items of his report was the sum of 50 cents received from the sale of the old furnace.

Edward J. Cummings reported for the heating fund telling of the new furnace installed, the cellar repairs instituted, and showing a balance on hand.

For the Dial, the church calendar, its editor Mrs. Edward J. Cummings, reported. This department showed a marked increase, going into a larger number of homes than ever before.

Priscilla White told of the Junior Lend-a-hand club and Katherine Adams reported for the Earnest Workers Lend-a-hand club.

The Sunday school was represented by Fred M. Rollins, who spoke of increased numbers and attendance Much work of a charitable nature has been done the past year. Frank A. Page mentioned the cradle roll.

J. Harry Hooper read the report of the Young Peoples Religious Union and John E. Simmons that of the Unitarian club.

Mrs. William E. Rowe, told of the good work of the Unitarian Church Helpers, the past year in living up to the name of their society.

Mrs. W. F. Atwood, for the Ladies Aid Alliance reported a gain of 17 members over last year and told of the interesting meetings that had been held.

The third annual report of the minister, Rev. Carl G. Horst, contained recommendations for an endowment fund, electric lights for the church auditorium, a fireproof safe for parish records, the appointment of a social service committee to arrange public meetings on social ethics, the observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the society.

The election of parish officers followed with Charles E. Barker and G. Ernest Carr as tellers, Frank A. Page reporting for the nominating committee.

Fred M. Rollins was elected to the executive committee of the Sunday school. Dr. Charles S. Adams was elected a life member of the American Unitarian association and Mrs. Carl G. Horst and Mrs. W. F. Atwood as delegates.

For the first time women were appointed on the nominating committee the following committee being elected for next year: Thomas H. Lacey, Mrs. Frank A. Page, Arthur W. Rohn, Mrs. W. F. Atwood, Eugene H. Sprague.

The meeting closed with the swearing in of the president and clerk and the discussion of the question of a parish house.

A Queer Monument.

A monument erected in the Straglieno cemetery has a very curious history. It is that of an old woman of Genoa, who made a living by selling strings of nuts in the streets. By frugality and industry she succeeded in amassing a small fortune in this way and then commissioned a well known sculptor of Genoa. Luigi Orengo, to make a life sized portrait of her in marble just as she appeared at her pitch in the streets. This statue she ordered to be placed in the famous Straglieno cemetery, probably the largest in the world.—Wide World Magazine.

COMING MODES.

Parisian Spring Models—Fabrics and Textures—Opportunities for Clever Shoppers.

Spring models are already to be seen in certain quarters known to the initiated and the woman who wants her clothes to stay in style is always interested in the best Parisian gowns, for those have a way of remaining undated until they are worn out.

SKIRT LINES.

Skirts will remain narrow, and those without other trimming than plaits down the middle of the front and back are endorsed by Paquin for the street suit. On the other hand limp ruffles are to be worn on skirts of foulard and similar light, clinging fabrics. Crepe-de chine is once more in the forefront of fashionable fabrics and is very much used for odd blouses as well as for entire frocks.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York. Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

BLACK AND WHITE.

Black and white is an old story yet this combination remains and bids fair to continue in the van of modish effects. The combinations are simply endless and whatever the figure age or complexion, the sable and white can be arranged becomingly. White lace or tulle can be used near the face, and this is sure to be complimentary to anyone. Then all one's belongings go together and are interchangeable which makes for economy, and if one must have color a dash is easily introduced in a flower—one of the silk or velvet kind that have been such popular gifts lately.

SOME INSTANCES.

Coat suit of ratine or velour-delaine has a shawl collar and cuffs of black fur. The hat of white ratine is banded with matching fur, Cossack fashion. A black satin suit has enormous revers and flaring cuffs of white ratine—a cloth of velvet texture—a white satin waistcoat with crystal buttons, and a hat of black velvet with its rolling brim caught back with a white cockade.

FOR THE THEATRE.

LONG COATS.

Long coats of many styles are indispensable in a well dressed woman's wardrobe, and if, well selected are an excellent invesment, since they have a way of looking right for many more seasons than any dress will last. Women who plan cleverly or have Christmas money to spend are taking advantage of the reductions being offered in all the best stores, where it is not considered desirable to carry over stock to another season. Model coats of fur fit for an Empress can be had at two-thirds of their former markings. Genuine seal coats that a few weeks since were nearly a thousand dollars can be bought for six hundred, moire astrachan for $450, and so on down the line to small furs and auto-coats, caps, gloves and robes. C. C. Shayne is showing irresistible bargains in furs just now with their well-known quality guarantee.

DRESS MODELS.

French dresses that have done duty as models at the up-to-date shops can now be bought for the price of a copy, and while they always need to be sewed over, because the stitching is so poor, they are well worth the trouble at the price asked for them. Hats, lingerie, in fact almost everything, has tumbled from the former altitude and endless opportunities are offered for the clever buyer who will invest in staple styles liable to last, while her injudicious neighbor will carry off some flaring novelty that she and her friends will tire of seeing in a month or less. It's a wise woman who knows how to shop.

LECTURE ON THE PHILIPPINES

A most interesting stereopticon lecture on "The Philippines" was delivered in the Wollaston Baptist church Monday evening by Rev. A. A. Forshee, a missionary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary society.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Walther Men's class and was attended not only by members but many friends of the church and community.

The lecture brought forth the wonderful advancement in the ten years of American occupation along both religious and civic lines.

The views were very interesting and pictured the natives of all classes at work and play. The excellent buildings and missions that have been erected were a source of surprise to those who saw them.

Wonderful strides have been made in the education of the people. Today there are over 500,000 children in the schools with 700 American and 8,300 native teachers.

The morals of the country are gradually being shaped. At present the great majority are most untruthful and do not think it wrong to lie or steal if they are not caught at it.

Immense strides have been made in sanitation and the possibility of another cholera epidemic as that a few years ago has been done away.

In conclusion the speaker said although the government has been criticised in its administration of the country's affairs it is in reality dealing splendidly with a difficult situation.

—It is beginning to develop that the women and minors in whose alleged behalf agitators forced the passage of a 54-hour law through a weak-kneed Legislature and past a demagogic Governor, did not desire and do not want anything of the kind. It would fairly seem as though legislation of that nature ought to be preceded by the petition of the parties immediately affected.—Waltham Free Press.

LIVELY FIGHT IN NEW YORK

Storm Centre In Contest For Delegates to Convention

TAFT AFTER BARNES' SCALP

Chief Figure In Organization That Stands In Way of Getting Delegation Instructed For President—Question at Washington Whether War on Barnes' Leadership Will Be Successful—Taft's Tip to Managers

Washington, Jan. 23.—"Get the scalp of Barnes if necessary."

This is the word that President Taft has passed along to his managers and especially to the men who are managing his campaign in New York. He has done this after full consultation with them about the situation in the state with respect to a Taft delegation.

All along it has been realized here that New York was, perhaps, the chief storm centre of the Republican preconvention campaign. If New York sends an uninstructed anti-Taft delegation to the convention it will be a hard blow to the Taft forces. This has been urged on the president by his aids and, more than this, he has been told that State Chairman William Barnes, Jr., is the chief figure in the organization that stands in the way of getting a delegation instructed for him.

Under the circumstances, the decision has been reached in the Taft camp to "go after Barnes." This means that if there is no other way around it a determined fight will be waged to overcome Barnes' leadership in the state.

While all the details of what a fight on Barnes will comprehend are not given out, it is assumed that if they find they cannot gain their point in any other way the Taft forces will try to overthrow Barnes, horse, foot and dragoons, not merely in the sense of defeating his program to have an uninstructed delegation chosen, but to elect another man in his place as state chairman.

This obviously means a battle in New York of the first proportions. From what is known here of the strength of the movement for an uninstructed delegation in New York, it is certain that it will be no easy task to overthrow the Barnes plans. Indeed, there is much question here whether they can be overthrown.

It is pointed out that the mere fact the president has given the word to make war direct on Barnes if need be, points to the fact that the Taft leaders realize that nothing but a knock-down-and-drag-out contest is likely to win for them.

HISSES FOR ROOSEVELT

An Unusual Demonstration at the Mention of His Name

Boston, Jan. 23.—Hisses greeted the name of Theodore Roosevelt last night at the banquet of the Amherst Alumni association in the Hotel Somerset.

Lawrence Abbott, '81, president of the magazine of which the ex-president of the United States is contributing editor, had spoken Theodore Roosevelt's name in beginning an eulogy which some of those present interpreted as an informal opening of his candidacy for re-election.

A dramatic pause followed the voicing of the name which a few years ago could be used to conjure with wherever the Stars and Stripes wave.

Then clear and distinct from a corner of the banquet hall there came a sibilant hiss. There came other hisses from different quarters of the spacious room, and a look of pained surprise fluttered over the pleasant features of Roosevelt's colleague.

Then some of the banqueters recovered their wits and a few scattered handclaps developed into rather faint-hearted applause.

HITCHCOCK NOT DISLOYAL

Taft Expresses Utmost Faith In His Postmaster General

Washington, Jan. 23.—President Taft denied to White House callers that members of his cabinet were urging him to dismiss Postmaster General Hitchcock from his official family. The president said that he did not place the slightest credence in stories that Hitchcock was disloyal to him.

The president is reported to have said that if his postmaster general were proven disloyal he would be the "most badly fooled man in the country." He was willing that his attitude toward Hitchcock be made public.

QUINCY TO HAVE CITY PLANNING COMMISSION

all things into consideration and makes the best of them. The commisison will take your plans co-ordinate and make them fit. You can consult with these experts in any improvements desired."

President Hearn asked if it would not be possible to take up the matter of disposal of garbage. Mr. Filene answered yes, that all such questions in which co-operation was desired could be considered.

Mr. Kincaide. "Is it better for individual places to begin to plan or to wait until the commission is adopted?"

Mr. Filene. "Delays are expensive. I should say that if you are in a position to begin local planning it would be better for you to start as soon as you can."

Mr. Kincaide. "Mr. Nolan of the commission said in reply to a question, which he had asked, that Quincy had a splendid opportunity for a plan for development in City Square. It might be good judgment to have the city council make a move to get a city plan."

Mr. Filene said that many cities and towns had already begun to plan for future development.

City Solicitor McAnarney called attention to one clause in the bill which he said that the City Solicitors were opposed to. That was the commission, who should apportion the part each city or town should pay. This had been found to work bad in the case of the commission to apportion park assessments for there was a new commission every five years and every commission had a different basis for assessment. Aside from that it was expensive.

Mr. Filene replied that in this case the assessment must be according to the benefit received.

Mr. Kincaide wanted the party to put itself on record in favor of the city taking some steps toward future planning. The question was not put to vote however although Mayor Stone said that he would send a communication to the City Council in regard to the subject, and the party seemed to be in favor of such a move.

John O. Hall favored a change in the bill which should provide that no member of the Commission should serve more than five years and would not be eligible for reappointment.

In closing Mr. Filene said that he wanted to say that the plan was absolutely not an intention toward annexation. That it had nothing to do with the greater Boston idea.

Councilman Bailey thought that the city should work in conjunction with other places. If the development of such streets as Washington street was undertaken Quincy might not have to pay the 65 per cent.

The meeting then adjourned.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HAM IS SEASONABLE.

IF you eat ham winter is the time to enjoy it. A whole ham in the house is a convenience, for should the butcher fail to appear on time there is always something in the pantry to fall back on.

A good ham has the fat a pure white and the lean a delicate pink.

Preparing For the Kettle.

If the ham is to be boiled scrub it well and trim away the hard dark parts.

If the ham is not very fresh it may safely be soaked for twenty-four hours before boiling or baking.

On the Fire.

Boiled Ham.—After the ham has been washed and trimmed put it into the boiler with cold water. Add a bit of mace and bay leaf, with four or five whole cloves. The ham should be brought to a boil gradually. Two hours is not too long for a good sized ham to simmer. Then let it really boil only a few minutes. Skim the liquor and let it simmer for about fifteen minutes to every pound of ham.

When done let the ham cool in the water in which it was boiled. When taken out and dried brush with beaten egg and sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Set it in the oven for a few minutes. Serve cold, garnished with sprigs of parsley.

Favorite Breakfast Dishes.

Ham and Scrambled Eggs.—Take half a teacupful of lean cold boiled ham, three eggs, one dessertspoonful of butter and pepper and salt to taste. Put the butter in a saucepan and let it melt. Add the eggs and finely chopped ham. Season with pepper and salt. Stir over the fire till it stiffens. Serve on rounds of buttered toast.

Fried Ham and Eggs.—Slice and trim the ham. Heat a frying pan and place the ham in it without any extra fat. Let it cook over a quick fire until the ham is a nice brown. When done place on a heated dish. Take eggs and drop them, one by one, into the hot fat left in the pan. Stand over a moderate fire until the yolks are set. Cut the ham into uniform pieces, trim the eggs to the same size, lift them carefully from the pan and lay one on each slice of ham. Season with salt and pepper and serve.

When frying ham it is a good idea to gash the fat.

CANADA A HEAVY LOSER

Rejection of Reciprocity Said to Have Cost About $25,000,000

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—According to figures compiled in Winnipeg, western Canada has lost $7,500,000 on the Winnipeg grain market alone by the rejection of the proposed reciprocity compact.

Several times this amount has been lost in the three western provinces when all natural products are taken into consideration, bringing the total up to at least $25,000,000.

INDULGED IN JOY RIDE ON LOCOMOTIVE

Jardine Given Six Years For His Thirty Minutes' Fun

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 23.—Six years in the Massachusetts reformatory at Concord is the price paid by Ralph I. Jardine for a half-hour's use of a New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad locomotive, which he borrowed without permission on the night of Jan. 3.

The term in the reformatory was imposed on Jardine by Judge Hall in the superior court here after Jardine had pleaded guilty to stealing the locomotive.

Jardine, who is 17 years old, was intoxicated on the night of his escapade. He boarded a locomotive on a sidetrack in the New Haven road's yard at South Worcester and operated the engine to Webster at a speed varying from thirty to eighty miles an hour.

Reaching Webster, Jardine reversed the locomotive and on the way back to Worcester he ran the engine into a passenger train at Webster Junction, causing slight injuries to twenty persons.

"Pensions—Worse and More of Them" is the subject of an article in the February "World's Work" by Charles Francis Adams.

Meetings of the special committee of the City Council on the separation of Houghs Neck and on the Metropolitan plan were held in the Mayor's office at City Hall Monday evening.

The Quincy Choral society, 100 voices will be assisted at its concert tonight at Music Hall by Bertha Kinzel, soprano; Marguerite Harding, contralto; Arthur Hackett, tenor; Willard Flint, bass and the Boston Festival orchestra. Sir Arthur Sullivan's. "The Golden Legend" will be presented under the leadership of Osbourne McConathy. This is the Society's fourth season.

ENGLISHMEN'S GAMES.

Quaint Hindu View of the Beating and Kicking of Balls.

Some amusing descriptions of East Indian life are given in Mrs. Penny's book, "The Rajah." Here is a Hindu servant's opinion of the English devotion to ball games, given to four ranis—princesses—whom he was trying to enlighten:

"The English," he said, "all play ball. Some beat balls with iron shod sticks, standing in the fields and striking with sufficient force to break a man's skull; some beat the ball with a long bit of wood in front of three sticks that represent their gods, some with corded spoons over a net wall, some with long handled hammers as they sit on horses; some kick the ball with their feet. The balls are of all sizes from a small orange to a man's head."

"By whose orders do they kick and beat balls?" he was asked.

"By order of their pujaris," the syce replied, "and he must know, because he serves the writing sahib."

"Why should such an order be given?" asked the second rani.

"They are a fierce and warlike people, those English, who must be always fighting and beating some one. It is by this means only that they are prevented from killing each other."

"But the Missie Sahib—would she, too, beat and fight?"

"She is strong. Who knows? At Bombay and Calcutta the English ladies beat balls over the wall of net. They do it that they may bear children fierce and strong like their fathers. When the babies are but a few months old they give them balls to beat with their little hands and to creep after as soon as they can move by themselves."

STRIKE IN ALL TEXTILE MILLS

Ettor Is Planning to Extend the Trouble at Lawrence

HAYWOOD TO LEAD STRIKERS

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 23.—Joseph J. Ettor, chief organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, who is conducting the big textile strike in this city, announced that he would start today on a state-wide tour to organize a general strike of the textile industries of Massachusetts for higher pay.

William D. Haywood, who was acquitted with Moyer and Pettibone of a charge of assassinating Governor Frank Steunenburg of Idaho with a dynamite bomb, is expected in Lawrence the first of next week to take charge in the absence of Ettor.

James P. Thompson, president of the International Workers of the World, is also coming to Lawrence to act in conjunction with Ettor.

The assembling of so many men prominent in the labor agitations of the country, which have been followed by strife and destruction, has caused intense excitement throughout this city.

The regiment of troops already here will remain on duty indefinitely, according to the report.

Alarm Is Widespread

The news of spreading strike, the announcement of the proposed arrival of the biggest labor agitators of this country and the determined stand which the great army of strikers has taken against submission to the demands of the mill owners has caused a widespread alarm.

In the snowstorm of last night 1500 strikers, led by an Italian woman carrying a big American flag and with the Syrian drum corps crashing out the weird airs of their nation, paraded the streets. It was the first night parade so far, and as the yelling crowd swept through main thoroughfares they aroused wild excitement. They had no permit to parade and jeered at the soldiers. Red-fire torches flared out from the procession, lighting the excited faces and rude garb of the marchers.

Ettor declared last night that it would take the entire militia of the state to cover the area which he expects to include in the strike plan mapped out. "We will have the whole force out," he is quoted.

Strikers Defy Militia

Rumblings of the internal disturbances were heard when bodies of strikers openly defied the militia surrounding the big mill district in the afternoon. While four arrests were made, it did not have the slightest effect upon the pugnacity of the strikers. Last night big groups of men and boys cheered through the streets. They carried flags and jeered and booed the soldiers as they passed. A crisis is expected from the industrial upheaval.

Lawrence is the centre of this seething turmoil, which promises to become state-wide. Agitators from local centres are concentrating here and it is expected that grave trouble may arise at any moment.

State police officials are boring into the facts surrounding the dynamite discovered in this city a few days ago. Ettor denied flatly yesterday that he had said the state force had been responsible for "planting" dynamite. While he again repeated that he believed the explosive had been placed where it was found for ulterior motives, he said he did not hold the state police responsible, as he had been quoted.

Will Be No Backdown

"The strikers are going to stand firm. They are fighting as much for a great principle as they are for higher wages, and the Lord knows they need more money to exist upon," said Ettor.

"I may be arrested as a means of trying to stop the strike for the mill owners, but others will be here to conduct the fight and men more able than I," he declared to newspaper men.

Although all the mills opened yesterday morning under a strong guard there were fewer employes at work than were at their positions Saturday.

At a mass meeting on the common in the afternoon several thousand strikers voted not to accept the offer of the mill owners that each would meet the delegations of the workers in his own employ as individual workers. They stood by their organizations. They voted to allow their delegates to meet the mill owners at any time the mill owners wished to confer on a settlement, but declared that it must be as a body, which would not treat of the conditions in an individual mill, but of the mills collectively.

So great was the excitement at this meeting in the open air that several women fainted.

Clash With Militia

Shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon some 5000 strikers formed in parade and marched down Essex street, through Hampshire into the forbidden mill district. Here the nearest approach to a collision with the military since the first days of the strike occurred.

Company D, in command of Captain Cobey of Lynn, was at mess when the vanguard of the strikers arrived. This company is quartered at the Pacific mills. At the word of command they rapidly assembled, the mill gates were thrown open and the company, in formation, swept through at a double quick.

Several of the strikers were battered by the gun butts of the soldiers. James Vlahodimo, who was leading the parade and who carried an American flag, was placed under arrest, charged with intimidation. It was later charged that he had threatened workers who wished to return to their tasks.

A Critical Moment

He was arrested by soldiers and police and an intense moment followed their action. Once more the advancing strikers hovered between an assault, which would have spread death, and a retreat. Leaders sprang to the front ranks and requested the body to turn back. Grumbling and shaking their fists at the line of soldiers, they slowly dispersed.

Three other arrests were made during the day for intoxication. The barrooms were opened during the day, but these were the only disorders which followed. Saloon keepers have been requested not to sell liquor to men in uniform.

Justin Varney, chairman of the committee of citizens which has been trying to get a peaceful settlement of the strike, was informed of the vote of the strikers to stand by their position. He said he would take the ultimatum to the mill owners and see if they would not meet the strikers' delegates.

KILLED TWO PERSONS

Negro Who Ran Amuck Convicted of First Degree Murder

New York, Jan. 23.—John Cain, a negro who has been on trial four days for killing two persons, was convicted of murder in the first degree after the jury had deliberated an hour. He was remanded for sentence. The penalty is death in the electric chair.

Cain ran amuck with a knife on the evening of May 11 last and killed Saxon Surell and John Hall, two young men who blocked his passage on an elevated train. He also wounded eight others before he was wounded and captured by a policeman.

ANTI-BREWERY DOMINATION

Issue Upon Which Michigan's Governor Will Seek Re-election

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 23.—In a statement issued here, in reply to criticisms of his administration by Robert H. Shields, chairman of the state tax commission, Governor Osborn expresses a willingness to accept a renomination for governor on an anti-brewery domination platform.

At the time of his election the governor stated that he would not seek a second term.

SPENT SEVEN YEARS ON COT IN HOSPITAL

Woman Who Kept Surgeons Busy Is at Last Released

Philadelphia, Jan. 23.—Margaret Doyle, 20 years old, left the Medico-Chirurgical hospital after having been on a cot for seven years and having undergone thirty-two operations.

She first entered the hospital to have a bone in her leg straightened. Six operations were necessary to make a perfect leg, and she was attacked with appendicitis. That operation was followed by twenty-five others to correct aftermaths of the first appendicitis operation.

"It began to seem that every time the surgeons had a spare minute," said Miss Doyle, "they put me on an operating table."

Miss Doyle now is practically well, the only fear of the physicians being that a craving for some narcotic may come to her. She has suffered so much pain that a great deal of morphia has been administered.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Foss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

CHAPTER V.

FRECKLES FACES TROUBLE.

COMING from a long day on the trail, Freckles saw Duncan's children awaiting him much closer the swale than they usually ventured, and from their wild gestures he knew that something had happened. He broke into a run, but the cry that reached him was, "The books have come!"

They found books on birds, trees, flowers, moths and butterflies. There was also one containing Freckles' bullfrog, true to life. And besides these were a butterfly net, a naturalist's tin specimen box, a bottle of gasoline, a box of cotton, a paper of long steel specimen pins and a letter telling what all these things were and how to use them.

At the discovery of each new treasure Freckles shouted. "Will you be looking at this now!"

Mrs. Duncan cried, "Weel, I be drawed on!"

When Freckles started for the trail next morning the shining new specimen box flashed on his back. The black "chicken," a mere speck in the blue, caught the gleam of it and wondered what it was. The folded net hung by the boy's hatchet, and the bird book was in the box. He walked the line and tested each section scrupulously, watching every foot of the trail, for he was determined not to slight his work. But if ever a boy "made haste slowly" in a hurry it was Freckles that morning. When at last he reached the space he had cleared out and fitted up around his case his heart swelled with the pride of possessing even so much that he could call his own.

He had made a large room with the door of the case set even with one side of it. On three sides fine big bushes of wild rose climbed to the lower branches of the trees. Part of his walls were mallow, part alder, thorn, willow and dogwood. Below there filled in a solid mass of pale pink sheep laurel and yellow St. John's wort, while the amber threads of the dodder interlaced everywhere. At one side the swamp came close and cattails grew in profusion. In front of them he had planted a row of water hyacinths without disturbing in the least the state of their azure bloom, and where the ground rose higher for his floor a row of foxfire that would soon be open.

To the left he had discovered a queer natural arrangement of the trees that grew to giant size and were set in a gradually narrowing space so that a long, open vista stretched away until lost in the dim recesses of the swamp. A little trimming back of underbush rolling out of dead logs, leveling of floor and carpeting of moss, made it easy to understand why Freckles had named this the "cathedral," yet he had never been taught that "the groves were God's first temples."

On either side of the trees that constituted the first arch of this dim vista of the swamp he planted ferns that grew waist high this early in the season, and so skillfully had the work been done that not a frond drooped because of the change. Opposite he cleared a space and made a flowerbed. Every day saw the addition of new specimens.

On the line side he left the bushes thick for concealment and entered by a narrow path he and Duncan had cleared in setting up the case. He called this the front door, though he used every precaution to hide it. He built rustic seats between several of the trees, leveled the floor and thickly carpeted it with rank, heavy woolly dog moss. About the case he planted wild clematis, bittersweet and wild grapevines and trained them over it until it was almost covered.

This morning Freckles walked straight to his case, unlocked it and set his apparatus and dinner inside. He took out the birdbook, turned to the section headed "V." Past "veery" and "vireo" he went, on down the line until his finger, trembling with eagerness, stopped at "vulture."

"'Great black California vulture,'" he read.

"Humph! This side the Rockies will do for us."

"'Common turkey buzzard.'"

"Well, we ain't hunting common turkeys. McLean said chickens, and what he says goes."

"'Black vulture of the south.'"

"Here we are arrived at once."

Freckles' finger followed the line, and he read scraps aloud.

"'Common in the south. Sometimes called Jim Crow. Nearest equivalent to C-a-t-h-a-r-t-e-s A-t-r-a-t-a.'"

"'— the Pharaoh's chickens of European species. Sometimes stray north as far as Virginia and Kentucky'"—

"And sometimes farther," interpolated Freckles, "cos I got them right here in Indiana so like these pictures I can just see me big chicken bobbing up to get his ears boxed. Hey?"

"'Light blue eggs'"—

"Golly, I got to be seeing them!"

"' — big as a common turkey's, but shaped like a hen's, heavily splotched with chocolate'"—

"Caramels, I suppose. And"—

"' — in hollow logs or stumps.'"

"Oh, bagginy! Wasn't I barking up the wrong tree though? Ought to been looking near the ground all this time. Now it's all to do over, and I suspect the sooner I start the sooner I'll be likely to find them."

Freckles ate and drank his last drop of water. He sat resting a little and watching the sky to see if his big chicken was hanging up there. But he came to the earth abruptly, for there were steps coming down the trail that were neither McLean's nor Duncan's, and there never had been others. Freckles' heart leaped hotly. He ran a quick hand over his belt to feel if his revolver and hatchet were there, caught up his cudgel and laid it across his knees, then sat quietly waiting. Was it Black Jack, or some one even worse? Forced to do something to brace his nerves, he puckered his stiffening lips and began whistling a tune he had led in his clear tenor every year of his life at the home Christmas exercises.

His quick Irish wit roused to the ridiculousness of it and he burst into a laugh that steadied him amazingly.

Through the bushes he caught a glimpse of the oncoming figure. His heart flooded with joy, for it was a man from the gang. Wessner had been his bunk mate the night he came down the corduroy. This was no timber thief. Freckles sprang up and called cheerily, a warm welcome on his face.

"Well, it's good telling if you're glad to see me," said Wessner. "We been bearing down at the camp you were so mighty touchy you didn't allow a man within a rod of the line."

"No more do I," answered Freckles, "if he's a stranger, but you're from McLean, ain't you?"

"Oh, curse McLean!" said Wessner.

Freckles gripped the cudgel.

"And are you railly saying so?" he inquired with elaborate politeness.

"Yes, I am," said Wessner. "So would every other man of the gang if they wasn't too big cowards to say anything unless maybe that other slobbering old Scotchman Duncan. Grinding the lives out of us! Working us like dogs and paying us starvation wages, while he rolls up his millions and lives like a prince!"

Green lights began to play through the gray of Freckles' eyes.

"Wessner," he said impressively, "you'd make a fine pattern for the father of liars! Every man on that gang is strong and hilthy, paid all he earns and treated with the courtesy of a gentleman. As for the boss living like a prince, he shares fare with you every day of your lives."

Wessner was not a born diplomat, but he saw he was on the wrong tack, and he tried another.

"Freckles, old fellow," he said, "if you let me give you a pointer I can put you on to making a cool five hundred without stepping out of your tracks."

Freckles drew back.

"You needn't be afraid of speaking up," he said. "There isn't a soul in the Limberlost save the birds and the beasts unless some of your sort's come along and's crowding the privileges of the legal tinints."

"None of my friends along," said Wessner. "Nobody knew I came but Black J—I mean a friend of mine. If you want to hear sense and act with reason he can see you later, but it ain't necessary. We can make all the plans needed. The trick's so dead small and easy."

"Must be if you have the engineering of it," said Freckles. But he heard with a sigh of relief that they were alone.

Wessner was impervious. "You just bet it is! Why, only think, Freckles, slavin' away at a measly little $30 a month, and here is a chance to clear $500 in a day! You surely won't be the fool to miss it!"

"And how was you proposing for me to stale it?" inquired Freckles. "Or am I just to find it laying in me path about the line?"

"That's it, Freckles," blustered the Dutchman, "you're just to find it. You needn't know a thing. You name a morning when you will walk up the west side of the swamp and then turn round and walk back down the same side again and the money is yours. Couldn't anything be easier than that, could it?"

"Depinds entirely on the man," said Freckles. The lilt of a lark hanging above the swale beside them was not sweeter than the sweetness of his voice. "To some it would seem to come aisy as breathing, and to some wringin' the last drop of their hearts' blood couldn't force thim! I'm not the man that goes into a scheme like that with the blindfold over me eyes, for, you see, it manes to break trust with the boss, and I've served him faithful as I knew. You'll have to be making the thing very clear to me understanding."

"It's so dead easy," repeated Wessner, "it makes me tired of the simpleness of it. You see, there's a few trees in the swamp that's real gold mines. There's three especial. Two are back in, but one's square on the line. Why, your pottering old Scotch fool of a boss nailed the wire to it with his own hands! He never noticed where the bark had been peeled nor saw what it was. If you will stay on this side of the trail just one day we can have it cut, loaded and ready to drive out at night. Next morning you can find it, report and be the busiest man in the search for us. We know where to fix it all safe and easy. Then McLean has a bet up with a couple of the gang that there can't be a raw stump found in the Limberlost. There's plenty of witnesses to swear to it, and I know three that will. There's a cool thousand, and this tree is worth all of that raw. Say, it's a gold mine, I tell you, and just $500 of it is yours. There's no danger on earth to you, for you've got McLean that bamboozled you could sell out the whole swamp and he'd never mistrust you. What do you say?"

Freckles' soul was satisfied. "Is that all?" he asked.

"No, it ain't," said Wessner. "If you want to brace up and be a man and go into the thing for keeps you can make five times that in a week. My friend knows a dozen others we could get out in a few days, and all you'd have to do would be to keep out of sight. Then you could take your money and skip some night and begin life like a gentleman somewhere else. What do you think about it?"

Freckles purred like a kitten.

"'Twould be a rare joke on the boss," he said, "to be staalin' from him the very thing he's trusted me to guard and be getting me wages all winter throwed in free. And you're making the pay awful high. Me to be getting five hundred for such a simple little thing as that. You're trating me most royal indade! It's away beyond all I'd be expecting. Sivinteen cints would be a big price for that job. It must be looked into thorough. Just you wait here until I do a minute's turn in the swamp, and then I'll be eschorting you out to the clearing and giving you the answer."

OUR NAVY RANKS SECOND

Two Less Cruisers, but Larger Total Tonnage Than Germany

Washington, Jan. 22.—The Naval Year Book, issued under the auspices of the senate committee on foreign relations, gives the United States second place among the naval powers.

This government has thirty-seven battleships, one more than Germany. In armored cruisers, Germany has fourteen and the United States twelve. The combined tonnage of battleships and cruisers shows the United States has 787,638 tons and Germany 768,241.

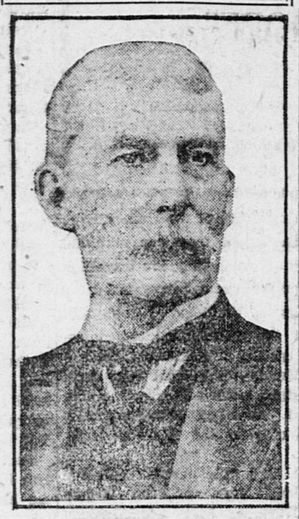
HENRY M. FLAGLER
Railroad Over the Sea Due to His Enterprise



GREAT ENGINEERING FEAT

Railroad Forty-Six Miles Over Ocean to Key West In Operation

Key West, Fla., Jan. 23.—A passenger train steaming over the sea from Knights Key to Key West, with the waves dashing and breaking but a few feet from the trucks, signalled the opening of the over-water extension of the Florida East Coast railroad, one of the most unique achievements in railroading in the world.

The train, running on a structure of masonry, combined for its passengers a railroad trip and sea voyage, for the terminus is forty-six miles from Florida's mainland.

The run was but a trial trip and marked the formal opening of the line and was the signal for the beginning of a three days' celebration in which foreign warships and the fifth division of the United States Atlantic fleet are participating.

To Henry M. Flagler, who, in his private car, made the initial trip over the line, is given the credit for the completion of the great engineering feat.

BRIEFS

A meeting of the members of St. John's Holy Name Society will be held in the rooms this evening at 8 o'clock .

Mayor Stone has called a meeting of all the city officials appointed for 1912, to be held at City Hall, Friday evening.

The newspaper scribes have received souvenir postals from ex-Mayor Shea who is enjoying himself in the south.

The central station apparatus was called out on a still alarm this morning for a chimney fire at the corner of Main and Summer streets.

The committee in charge of the coming re-union of St. John's Parish will held a meeting this evening at 7.30 o'clock in Parochial school hall.

Charles H. Penniman is prepared by appointment, to demonstrate the four and six cylinder Pope-Hartford 1912 model cars, for which he is the agent.

The interior of the Mayor's office at City Hall has been treated to a coat of varnish, said to be of the Frank Shay variety. That's what makes it shine so much.

The funeral of Patrick McDonough was held this morning from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock mass being celebrated by Rev. William Duffy. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

Arnold Kent of Johnson avenue received a bad cut on the head while skating on Butler's pond Monday night by striking his head against a projecting limb of a tree.

Miss Anna Louise Ford of Main street entertained several of her friends at her home Monday evening, the occasion being the fourteenth anniversary of her birth.

Mayor Stone says that he has come to the conclusion that the office of Mayor of a city like Quincy is a busy one. There are so many little details to be looked after of which the general public know nothing.

Special services will be held in St. Paul's Swedish M. E. Church commencing this evening and concluding Thursday evening. The speaker at the first two meetings will be Rev. F. E. Broman, of Brockton, superintendent of the Swedish Religious societies of the Greater Boston district, while the pastor will preach at the last service.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Anderson wish to thank their many friends for their kindness and sympathy shown to them in their recent bereavement was taken resulting in the choice of Rev. Adelbert Hudson, D. D., the vote being made unanimous that a call be extended to him March 1, 1912, at a salary of $3,000 per year.

EXTENDS CALL TO DR. HUDSON

Rev. Dr. Hudson was born in New York state and fitted for the ministery at Harvard, entering in 1893, taking a course in theology and philosophy.

He engaged in missionary work in Salt Lake City for two years coming east to accept the pastorate of the First Congregational (Unitarian) church in Buffalo, N. Y., where he remained until 1901 when he accepted a call to the Channing church in Newton. Since leaving Newton early in 1910 he has been doing missionary work and has been the Billings lecturer for the American Unitarian Association.

Dr. Hudson is living at present at Hotel Bellevue, Beacon street, Boston, near the Unitarian building, where he is closely in touch with matters pertaining to the work.

MONDAY'S FIRE.

The alarm from Box 27 at 3.59 Monday afternoon was for a lively blaze in a storehouse off Washington street of Albert Keating. Some furniture had been put into the building during the afternoon and it is thought that the fire was caused by some careless workman. The fire made quite a blaze and was extinguished with a loss, estimated by Chief Williams to be $300.

CHARLES PEARSEN.

Charles Pearsen for many years foreman of the riggers department for the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., died Monday afternoon at his home 123 Glendale road after an illness of several weeks' duration. He was a member of rural lodge, St. Stephen's chapter and Quincy Commandry, K. T. and a member of the Foresters of America. He leaves a widow, who is also ill, and one child.

Sweet and Hard.

The Royal band was playing for the king, Louis XIV., the "Miserere of Lully." The king was on his knees and so was the whole court. His majesty kept the awkward attitude until the end of the hymn. After rising, the king turned to the Count de Grammont and asked how he found the music. "Very sweet to the ear, sire, but very hard on the knees."

How to Pack Trunks.

Spread an ordinary bed sheet in the bottom of a trunk, allowing it to hang over the sides while the trunk is being filled. The gowns, waists and coats should then be laid in smoothly, with a layer of tissue paper between each two garments and a stuffing of crumpled tissue paper for the sleeves. This done, the sides of the sheet should be brought over the whole and securely pinned. Clothes thus packed will show few wrinkles at the end of the journey.

TO DEPRESS OR NOT TO DEPRESS

Is Question Citizens Want Answered About Grade Crossings

WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

To depress or not to depress, that is the question. Whether it is better that the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad running through Quincy shall be depressed or whether the tracks shall be boosted up into the air like a Chinese wall. Which is it to be? That is a question which the people of Quincy would like to know about.

Way back in the early part of December, Chairman John L. Bates of the Special Commission told Mayor Shea that the Commission would make its report before he went out of office. Mayor Shea is out of office and Mayor Stone is well on his way for the year 1912 and yet the report has not been received.

From things that have leaked out it is the general belief that the plans will call for the closing of Saville street, with an overhead foot bridge. That Upland road, or rather Irving place, will be extended to Granite street.

At Water street it is thought that Water st. will have a bend in it when the commission's plans are seen. That the street will turn to the left into Presidents avenue and cross the tracks by overhead bridge near the Crane grain elevator. My won't there be a holler among the business men at South Quincy if such is the case!

Councilman Richards thinks that the commission is waiting trying to find a loop hole somewhere that will allow them to build a Chinese wall through the city and for that reason was opposed to an appropriation for the completion of the boulevard from Quincy shore to Hancock street. Engineers however, say that the completion of this piece of boulevard will have no effect on the grade crossing question.

That the report can not be long delayed seems probable for the railroad has practically completed it four track system between Boston and Atlantic and when the summer schedule of the railroad goes into effect the four tracks between these points will be put into operation. The outer tracks will be used for accommodation trains while the inner rails will be used by express trains There will be no crossing the track at the stations for at all of the stations subways leading from the ea to the west side have been built.

But to come back to the text. Will the tracks be depressed or raised? Is it not time for the citizens to rise and demand that this special commission, who have been considering the question for the past two years, get a move on and let the people know what to expect?

ASSOCIATES .

A meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates has been called for Wednesday evening. It has been rumored that the meeting was called to take action on the separation question; While this is not stated in the call for the meeting it is probable that this all absorbing question will come up for more or less discussion.

The First Henchmen.

Skeat derives the word henchman from hengstman (Anglo-Saxon), horseman, groom. It is probable that henchmen were in the first instance young nobles who at state ceremonies attended on the king as mounted pages. History speaks of these henchmen in this capacity, for we read that Henry VI. had three and Edward IV. six of them. We find, too, that they were mentioned in the royal ceremonies as belonging "to the riding household" and took part in tournaments. The last time "henchman" is mentioned in connection with the court is in the reign of Henry VIII., and gradually it came to mean an ordinary page. The word is used by Ben Jonson and Shakespeare in this sense.

—There are about 800 cotton mills in the South, in which 20,000 children from five years of age upward are tolling out their lives under the most depessing and debasing conditions. Boys and girls of 6 years to 11 and 12 work 13 hours in some of these mills. Others work in relays, from 6 o'clock A. M. to 6 o'clock P. M., and, worse still, from 6 P. M. to 6 A. M., with one-half hour for lunch. Their lunch, consisting of corn bread and bacon is eaten on the floor, where afterward they fall asleep, to be awakened by water dashed in their faces or by the rough kicks of the foreman. As to wages, the pay ranges from 9 cents to 32 cents a day.—Boston Common.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

If the members of the Quincy High school basketball team can maintain the pace at which they are travelling at the present time, there is every possibility of the team being pronounced the champion interscholastic aggregation of Eastern Massachusetts. To date the local boys have five straight victories to their credit, a record that has thus far been equaled only by the Revere High quintet.

Milton High, the much heralded Oliver Ames High, and the largely tooted Winthrop High combinations have all succumbed to defeat at the hands of the local team, while Rockland High has twice tasted the spoils of defeat administered by the Granite City lads. The victories over latter contingency are worthy of especial mention, because of the fact that Quincy High was the first team to secure a victory over Rockland High on the latter's home place of playing.

Then too, the victory referred to was all the more remarkable, for when the first half of the game ended, the Rockland boys were in possession of the long end of a 13 to 2 score. But the team work of Captain Chapman's team was especially noticeable at crucial moments, and the game resulted in a 23 to 14 triumph for the local boys.

The players on the local team can ably cope with the best to be found in schoolboy circles, and this fact has been demonstrated beyond a doubt in the games that have already been played. In Finlay, the local school has one of the best school boy forwards to be found. With an eye ever vigilant on the plays in progress, and possessed of a fine ability and accuracy in locating the baskets, he seizes every opportunity, both on offensive and defensive work, and it is mainly through these traits that he has, up to the present time, succeeded in caging 27 baskets from the floor. His nearest competitor is Trask, the elongated centre, who plays the game displaying skill, endurance and vim at all times. He has 16 baskets to his credit.

The captain of the team, "Pete" Chapman, has a total of 10 baskets marked beside his name, yet this does not signify that his work has been to such a degree inferior to the work of the two aforementioned players. The fact that a player is the captain naturally places upon his shoulders a grave responsibility, and when we consider that the defensive work of the Quincy leader has been a special feature of every contest, we will then realize that his all round playing has fully measured up to the standard True, he has been outclassed in shooting baskets, but it has been noticeable in every game, that his pass work has been a paramount factor in enabling his team mates to obtain the goals.

As for the backs, nothing but words of praise should be forthcoming, for they were the players upon whom the closest attention has been centered. When Johnson broke into basketball, an indifferent tremor as to whether he would make good seemed, for a long time, to be rampant, but now that such an opinion has been punctured,a nd at last completely dispelled we must requite credit where credit is due, and in justice to Holmes and Johnson we must say that they have performed splendid work and have displayed the form which we hope to see characterize them in all future games.

Holmes and Johnson have worked in the manner which the coach laid out for them, yet the former has managed to acquire two goals from the floor, while the latter has gone one better; all of the baskets of the backs have been of the sensational order, and were obtained when the team work of the local players demanded it.

To date, Quincy High has scored 139 points to its opponents 83. Of the five games, McDonald has participated in two, and the fact that he has a total of 6 baskets is conclusive proof that he can be called upon at any time to accredit himself with honor as a member of the senior team. It might also be pertinent, right here to state that the opponents of Holmes have secured but three baskets against him. O'Connor, the star player of Milton High and Yerner, the mainstay of Winthrop High, have been the only players to thwart the efforts of the local back.

In connection with the schedule as announced some time ago, the following games have been arranged, viz:—

Feb. 2,—Haverhill High at Quincy.
Feb. 22,—(afternoon) Framingham High at Quincy.
March 8,—Salem Normal at Quincy.
March 12,—Tech '14 at Quincy.
March 15,—Provincetown High at Quincy.

In adition, games are pending with Salem High, Worcester High, Rock Ridge Hall, Springfield High, Bridgewater Normal and Allen School.

In this way Quincy High will be pitted against the foremost contenders for the title of supremacy, and if the same exhibitions are forthcoming in the future as have been in the past, there is no basketball enthusiast in local circles who will not admit that the prospects for championship basketball team at Quincy High are brighter than ever before.

Much credit for the success of the team thus far must be given Coach Arthur Staff, through whose assidious and enthusiastic endeavors, the local boys have attained an efficiency unequaled by any high school basketball team.

Fouls have figured to a great extent in the games already played and the honors in getting goals on free tries goes to Captain Chapman who has 10 to his credit.

TONIGHT'S GAME.

Tonight the members of the Quincy A. A. basketball team encounter the St. Mary's quintet at the North End. The local boys are playing an article of basketball of the top notch order and if they can exhibit the same form tonight as they did last Saturday, another victory should be added to their long list of triumphs. The game of all games will be played in St. Mary's hall next Thursday, when the St. Joseph's A. A. come as the attraction.

The local boys are now leading the Greater Boston Basket ball league, despite the assertion to the contrary of Manager John Magee of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. Magee was so much elated recently over the fact that his combination took the measure of St. Joseph's team, that in the height of his exultation, he assumed that his team was tied with Quincy for first place, forgetting at the same time that by the failure of his quintet to appear as scheduled with the Father Mathew A. A. on one occasion and Quincy A. A. on another, he thereby lost two games by forfeit and incidentally the right to establish his team as being tied for the first place in the league.

Magee claims that the protests of the different managers were not acted upon at the first meeting, and that as a consequence he still has as much right to lay claim to first place as other managers have in saying that his team is not in first place. Personally Magee is a fine fellow and an enthusiastic athlete, but his strong point in various movements has been to have recourse to subterfuges and take advantage of technicalities. However, I think he is up against a hard proposition in the case referred to and he will have to exert himself to his utmost to get ahead of ex-councilman Flynn, who has experienced too many circumstances of similar nature to allow Magee to score the point he has in view.

MOTOR ICEBOAT GOES 140 MILES AN HOUR

Driven by Aeroplane Engine and Air Propellors

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 23.—A motor icebcat, built along the general lines of an iceboat, but fitted with an aeroplane engine and propeller, has attained a speed of nearly 140 miles an hour in tests on Irondequoit bay during the past few days.

The boat is the invention of Lyman J. Seely, a manufacturer of aeroplane engines. Irondequoit bay is about eight miles long and the distance was covered in about four minutes, allowing for a slowing down of the engine.

The engine and propeller are attached to the front of the boat, which has two runners in front and one behind, the steering being done by a wheel attached to the rear runner.

TURN OF THE YEAR.

When Summer blessed the Earth,
A thousand joys had birth
Long days and short, sweet nights,
Blossoms and fruit delights:
And walks amid the maze
Of vine-grown woodland ways:—
And then we prayed: "Dear Summer stay,
Nor leave us grieving by the way."

Winter now rules the Earth,
And Nature's sounds of mirth
Are hushed and stark and dead
Her treasures 'round are spread:
Short days and wind-blown nights,
Chill fields and barren heights;—
But, kindly housed and warmly clad,
Winter has charms to make us glad.

INSTALLATIONS

The members of the Quincy lodge were the last to be installed, but their work was applauded in the same manner as was noticeable in the case of the former two lodges. The installing officer was William Corbett, past district master, of Brookline, assisted by a staff of officers.

The following were installed:
Worthy Master—W. B. Jones.
Deputy Master—Murdock Gillis.
Recording Secretary — Herbert Sprowl.
Financial Secretary—A. T. Sinnerberg.
Treasurer—Gustaf Lundburg.
Chaplain—Richard Rundle.
Director of Ceremonies—Alexander Beaton.
First Conductor—John Harvey.
Second Conductor—Charles Dahl.
Inside Tyler—George Lyons.
Outside Tyler—Charles Archibald.
Committee on Law—Andrew Stewart (chairman), James Freeburn, John McClay, Thomas Hartling, Richard Graham.
Finance Committee—Thomas Hewson, Angus McLeod, John Irwin.
Trustees—Richard Rundle, Andrew Stewart, James Freeburn.

A special feature of the joint installation was the induction into office for the sixteenth consecutive year of W. F. McCalder, treasurer of Bay View lodge. Malcolm McLeod of the same lodge was installed as recording secretary for the twelfth year.

During the exercises that followed the installation, remarks were made by many of the installing officers and many of the officers who had been installed. The principal addresses of the evening were made by Rev. A. M Thompson, supreme grand chaplain and pastor of the United Presbyterian church, William Dawson, Grand Register of Royal Black Knights of Camp Israel, and ex-councilman Murdock A. Campbell.

—Perhaps it should not be charged to the commission form of government, but the fact remains that the total increase in the debt of Lynn, Mass., was nearly half a million dollars in 1911, its first year under that system of municipal government. Cities proposing to change to the commission system would do well to investigate the causes in Lynn at any rate before they make the leap. —Barre, Vt. Times.

GRAND PRESENTATION OF THE GOLDEN LEGEND

Quincy Choral Society Gives Sir Arthur Sullivan's Cantata Before Large House

Presentation Unqualified Success Much Credit Due Conductor

Fine! was the unanimous verdict after the Quincy Choral society concert at Music hall, Tuesday evening. The society was greeted by one of the largest audiences in its history, for this the opening concert of its fourth season.

Sir Arthur Sullivan's "The Golden Legend," was given a fine interpretation with Mr. Osbourne McConathy as conductor, the chorus of 100 voices being assisted by soloists and the Boston Festival orchestra. The soloists were Bertha Kinzel, soprano; Marguerite Harding, contralto; Arthur Hackett, tenor; Willard Flint, bass; and their work was a pleasure, so true was their understanding and interpretation of their lines and the author's conception.

Mr. Flint as Lucifer was good as he always is. He makes one feel that he is the character as portrayed in his realistic conception. His voice is sure and of a quality that gives pleasure. He is not new to Quincy and his work is so thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed he always receives a cordial welcome.

Mr. Hackett as Prince Henry was pleasing, having an unusually rich and pleasing tenor voice which was especially suited to his part in the Golden Legend. A voice of pure quality combined with an artistic understanding of the part, made him at once popular, and encores were frequent and merited.

Miss Harding as Ursula sang with artistic taste. She has a deep contralto voice well rounded, and in the Golden Legend the rich tonal effects and intelligent interpretation was effective. She sang with an ease and poise that brought foith hearty applause throughout the evening.

Elsie's beautiful solos were given an exquisite interpretation by Miss Kenzel. Her voice is lyric; sweet in quality and sympathetic and she was at once a favorite. Charm of manner and artistic conception made the part a pleasure to her listeners, who showed approval by freuent encores.

The chorus work left nothing to be desired. It was well shaded, adequate in every way, the unison being perfect, showing the training of previous seasons, and the careful conductorship of Mr. McConathry.

The orchestra score used at this performance was especially arranged for the Boston Festival Orchestra, by the late Arthur S. Wonson, and beside being a splendid piece of work, is the only score in this part of the country which is adapted to accompany choral societies of less than two hundred voices. Its value was plainly shown in the beautiful effects brought

MERCHANTS TO HOLD BANQUET

Several Important Matters Discussed at Tuesday's Meeting

TREASURER'S REPORT

A well-attended meeting of the merchants branch of the Board of Trade was held Tuesday afternoon at the rooms of the board in the Adams building, President W. G Shaw presiding. The meeting was largely confined to the informal discussion of matters relating to the business conditions.

In opening President Shaw read the report of the treasurer for the year which showed the total receipts for the year 1911 to have been $1,154.72 and the expenditures $985.55 leaving a balance on hand of $169.17.

The committee appointed at the last meeting in relation to the branch holding a banquet made its report. The question of where the banquet should be held was discussed informally, the sentiment of the members present being that if possible the banquet should be held in Quincy. That the association believed in home trade and that if proper arrangements could be made it should be held in Quincy, thereby setting a good example and living up to its precepts.

The committee were empowered to go ahead and arrange for the banquet, which it was voted to hold the second Tuesday in February which will be Feb. 13. After some further discussion it was decided that the banquet should be for association members only and that no speaker should be engaged but that it be one in which the members could discuss matters which concerned the welfare of the association. Later it was thought a banquet would be held at which the clerks would be included and at this affair there should be a speaker to address the meeting.

A resolution in regard to closing nights was proposed and informally discussed but no action taken, the question being left for further discussion at the banquet.

There was an informal discussion upon other matters of interest to the merchants but no definite action was taken on any of the matters.

It was a good meeting however and the large attendance of merchants showed that there was need of such an association and that much good could be accomplished by meetings at which matters of interest to the local merchants could be taken up and discussed.

POVERTY PARTY AT HOUGHS NECK

The members of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum held a largely attended poverty party in the club rooms Tuesday evening. Costumes of a most varied nature were noticeable and a most enjoyable time was in order for all present. The prizes, which consisted of two dollar and a half gold pieces were awarded to Alfred P. Clancy, the well-known contractor of the popular beach resort and Miss Neomie Comeau.

Mr. Clancy was garbed as a "tramp" and proved himself a fit subject for the impersonation. Miss Comeau was easily pronounced the winner by her striking appearance in the guise o a milk maid. The committee in charge included Thomas F. Phillips, Daniel J. Maloney, Stephen Kiley and Charles L. Shea. Music was furnished by Sweeney's orchestra and dancing concluded the affair at midnight.

The plight of the Republican party today is due to too much government by millionares. Even when the millionare is a good fellow, he rarely escapes the millionare point of view.

NINTH ANNUAL REUNION SACRED HEART PARISH

Occasion Brings Together Large Gathering that Taxes Capacity ot Alpha Hall

Several Priests of Other Parishes Present. Committees

REV. JOHN P. CUFF,
Pastor Sacred Heart Church.

All roads led to Alpha Hall, Tuesday evening, where the parishioners of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, observed their ninth annual reunion. The occasion proved the mecca os especial attraction for besides bringing out the immediate members of the parish itself, it enabled many of the six hundred, who were in attendance to renew acquaintances of former days, and to recall reminiscences of a most happy nature.

Many parishioners of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, and St. John's Church, were also present, the latter church being largely represented, mainly through the fact that Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church had been a curate there for a number of years and had endeared himself to a wide circle of friends. A large number also came from outside districts, and the popular dancing hall was thronged as never before.

The special guests of the evening included a number of priests, all of whom went to unite with Fr. Cuffe in making the affair meet with complete success. They were Rev. Aloysius Malone, of Newton, Rev. Matthew F. McDonnell and Rev. Andrew J. Fitzgerald of St. Francis' Church, Braintree, Rev. John J. Coan, Rev. Patrick J. Scannell and Rev. John J. Casey, of the Church of St. John the Baptist, Rev. James M. Flannery of St. Ann's Church Neponset, and the priests connected with the Atlantic church, Rev. John P. Cuffe, the pastor, and Rev. James F. McNiff, his assistant.

The affair started at eight o'clock, and for fully an hour a concert of a most exquisite nature was in order. This was followed by dancing which was enjoyed till one o'clock in the morning.

The concert programme consisted of eight numbers, and each one elicited loud applause. It was as follows:

Selection,	Orchestra
Piano Solo,	May Stevens
Song	Catharine Duggan
Violin Duet,	Margaret White
	Florence White
Duet,	Dorothy Grant
	Nora Duggan
Cornet Solo,	Selected
Scotch Dance,	Grace MacDonald
Selection,	Orchestra

At eleven o'clock an intermission took place, during which refreshments were served in Union hall. The music for the occasion was furnished by Cuff's five piece orchestra and the dance order comprised of eighteen regular numbers and three extras.

Frank J. Lavery was floor marshal. The floor director was John A. McGowan, who was assisted by the following aids:—

R. A. Cole, Henry Granahan, Dr. M. J. Sweeney, R. J. Barry, Richard Walsh, John Shay, Joseph McCabe, Patrick McNeice, Bernard Cullen, J. J. McPhillips, James Costello, Jr., Charles Dugan, Joseph Duggan, Timothy Keohane.

Daniel J. Myhan constituted the transportation committee while the supper committee included, Wendell J. Sprunk and John Cunningham.

The hall committee was as follows:—

Patrick Dolan, Myles Costello, Sr., Cornelius Keohane, John Hayes, Timothy Driscoll.

The matrons of the function were Mrs. J. W. Bevis, Mrs. Martin Burns, Mrs. Jeremiah Dineen, Mrs. Daniel Golden, Mrs. John Rhines, Mrs. Ellen Granahan, Mrs. John J. Herne, Mrs. John Halloran, Mrs. William Gay, Mrs. Joseph Clark, Mrs. Bernard Cullen, Mrs. Frank J. Lavery, Mrs. William Coughlin, Mrs. Henry Lavelle and Mrs. Frank J. Ryan.

The affair was attended by the largest number ever noticeable at a reunion of the Sacred Heart parish and greatly eclipsed any of the annual reunions held in previous years.

QUINCY REFORM CLUB.

The Quincy Reform club held it's annual meeting at Faxon hall Monday evening. Fourteen new members were taken in and the following officers were elected:

President—A. F. McLeod.
Vice President—E. W. Baker.
Secretary—Harry G. Ford.
Treasurer—Frank M. Chubbuck.
Trustees—H. M. Faxon, D. King, G. W. Gragg, Chas. Strattard, B. F. Hodgekinson, Jr.
Janitor—Benj. L. Leavitt.
Sergt. at Arms—Lester A. Porter.

—Many memories of distinguished guests are associated with the old Revere House of Boston, but when it caught fire it burned just as freely for all that. There is no sentiment in the laws of nature. Built in the closing years of the first half of the nineteenth century, the structure was more than sixty years old and except as supplied by later improvements it could not have boasted of fireproof construction. — Taunton Herald.

WINTER MEETING OF BOARD OF MISSIONS

Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch Hold All Day Session at Bethany Church

Interesting Address by Mrs. Geo. Rowland of Japanese Mission

The thirty-fourth winter meeting of Norfolk and Pilgrim Branch, Woman's Board of Missions, was held in Bethany church, Tuesday.

The morning session, opened at 10.15 with devotional service led by Mrs. John E. Bradley. Mrs. C. W. Miller welcomed the guests and delegates in behalf of Bethany church and members of the Woman's Mission. Mrs. W. M. Tirrell responding very acceptably. Mrs Tirrell's report of the last meeting was favorable and encouraging.

Mrs. Mark McCully gave a talk upon the "Condition and Needs of the Treasury." As money is continually paid out for salaries of missionaries and other necessary expenses, the great need is more money. Many noble men and women are giving constantly of their means for this good cause and we have a right to praise God for the wonderful results accomplished.

Miss Mary Thayer, Mrs. Charles T Crane, Mrs. D. N. Crawford, Mrs. Mark McCully gave gleanings from the annual meeting of Woman's Board. The women are doing a great work, and the outlook is most encouraging and gratifying.

"What should be the attitude of the church to the Missionary Cause?" was discussed by Mrs. C. W. Miller, Miss Mary F. Loud, Mrs. H. S. Huntington, Mrs. Rufus Keith, Miss Ford, Mrs. Studley and others. All agreed that it was the work of the church, and thought the ministers should give more time and consideration to the subject. Instead of one Sunday set apart for Missionary Sunday, as has been customary, devote several to its interest.

A devotional service and prayer hour led by Mrs. A. O. Crawford was very uplifting.

During recess a bountiful repast was served by the ladies of Bethany church. Ninety sat down and many favorable compliments were expressed.

At 1.30 a meeting of the executive committee was followed by a devotional service, led by Rev. Edward Norton. Miss Minnie Hardwick sang a solo, "There is a land mine eye hath seen," by Crowningshield, in her usual sweet expressive voice, Mrs. John S. Merrill presiding at the organ. Miss Susan W. Smith and Mrs. George H. Murray gave a report on Junior Work and Bureau of Exchange, which was exceedingly interesting, results showing that the work in foreign missions abundantly pays for all the money the people in America have contributed.

Mrs. George Rowland, of the Japan Mission, gave the Missionary address of the afternoon. Mrs. Rowland, spoke in a social and informal manner, in a witty and humorous vein and kept the audience smiling constantly.

She said in part: "To one who has been abroad for many years, the first thing he hears that strikes him curiously is the slang so commonly used, for instance, for a fine time we say 'a corking time,' and 'get on to the game', and I want you to 'get on to the game.' I wish I could sit right on the floor with you as I do in Japan and get close to you and your hearts. That is the way I talk to my Japanese friends. I do not feel at ease in the pulpit. I am not accustomed to it. And when one gets used to sitting on the floor it is much more comfortable than a chair.

"In Japan we do just as they do, follow their customs and enter into their pursuits and ways of living, unless they do something very bad and then we look very grave. In Japan we have thirty-seven denominations, Unitarians, Universalists, Methodists, Catholics, Baptists, etc., and we get along very harmoniously. My husband celebrated communion at one of the churches and there were six denominations and two Catholics participated. One of the Catholic priests was an intimate friend of our family, used to come and play with the children and was much interested in our oldest son. Japan is flooded with Mormons.

"A friend who lives in the next house to us meets with great success in her work, we get along beautifully together, for she likes young men and I like the women, so when a young man comes to my house I send him to her, and she sends the women to me. One day a young man called, and I said, 'you go to the next house,' my friend received him very graciously and invited him to lunch. She left

THE ICE CROP ASSURED.

The big ice crops finds no place in our reports of American harvests, but it is not the least of the crops raised on Uncle Sam's variegated farm. The Consumer who mourns over his wood pile or coal bin depleted by the cold wave, can reflect that it has assured a lavish ice crop, thus giving the iceman no excuse for high prices next summer.

Large portions of the country now get their ice from artificial plants, although some of the Southern cities still buy Kennebec river ice and freight it by water. But a failure of the natural ice crop must create such a demand for artificial ice as to raise the price of both products.

The natural ice crop is apt to undergo an annual failure during the month of January, much like the annual freeze of the peach crop by the late frosts. The worrying, though, is commonly confined to the newspaper offices. The seasoned iceman knows that while January is actually the coldest month, the highest point of ice formation is not reached until well into February.

The United States is the great ice consuming country of the world. Ice for table use scarcely was known in Europe until American travellers began to demand it. Our nervous temperament seems to deprive the appetite of all zest in summer unless it is stimulated by chilled food.

The ice crop needs neither to be hoed nor fertilized, but the ice cutter needs to be watched. The farther south one gets on freezing rivers the greater the tendency to form a kind of snow broth on top. The storms are largely of a sleety rain, which attaches to the icy surface, and weighs nearly as much as real ice, but it disappears in a few moments in a July air. This nearly worthless mixture should be planed off. Furthermore many icemen have the habit, when their ponds do not freeze fast enough, of cutting holes, and letting the water flow over the surface where it quickly freezes. Snow, dust, and dirt, that have fallen on the surface, are, by this means, inbedded in the ice cake.

NEW DANCE HALL STEPS.

Quite a flurry is being created in metropolitan society circles, by the disposition of the younger set to introduce popular dance hall setps, two of which are called the "Grizzly bear" and the "Turkey trot."

The professional dancing masters are against these riotous innovations. They are always in love with the more refined and graceful aspects of their art, and have commonly frowned down even the two-step, as lacking in the more stately beauty and tending to a mere romp.

At the same time young blood tingling with rhythm will always demand frolicsome steps. In the country dances, the oldsters used to cut up pigeon wings until they were eighty, and the veneer of society clothes does not destroy the desire of the young colt to lift its heels from the floor.

But judging by the pictures of the way these and other steps are being danced, their purpose is not merely physical kinkiness and vitality. It seems to be even more a general desire on the part of the young men to display their affection for the female sex by promiscuous and close embraces, and vice versa, as respects the girls. This is quite another proposition.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAPHS.

Frank Hitchcock gave the country quite a surprise when as postmaster-general he suggested government ownership of telegraphs.

It will be generally admitted that telegraph charges are too high. At a 25 cents a word minimum, the telegraph does not enter largely into the life of the common people. The ordinary housewife on seeing the yellow envelope at the door, often desires the smelling salts, the unexpected message suggesting death or disaster.

Some twenty years ago a telegraph company was formed to do business from Chicago to Milwaukee. They delivered messages at a cent a word, and paid ninety per cent of their capital back to the stockholders in two years. Then they reduced to half a cent a word, paid seven per cent on capital, and accumulated a surplus of forty per cent in a year.

Of course it must be admitted that a line between two such metropolitan centers, kept hustling with messages all the time, can do business at a better profit than a line covering the entire country, much of it sparsely populated and giving little business. The Western Union claimed some time ago that it costs them twenty-seven cents expense on the average message of thirty-one cents.

It will also be admitted that government ownership in England has worked well. In 1870 the four private companies sent twenty word messages for $1 from London to Dublin. According to the latest statement we have found, the English telegraphs send the average message of twelve words for fifteen cents. And at that they give newspapers a phenomenal rate consisting of twenty-five cents a one hundred words and four cents for each additional hundred. And even then they made $850,000 profit.

To this our telegraph companies reply with some truth, that distances are so much less in England that the charge for construction and maintenance of the lines is less, also that labor costs less over there.

Of course the one great fact to be considered in this country, is the extent to which politics would affect the service. Would our officials give posts to men because they were good telegraphers, or because they had carried caucuses for the Congressman, or supported a certain party ticket?

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

Mechanics building, beautifully decorated and with a suggestion of marine life on every hand only awaited the signal of eight bells to open the ninth annual National Motor Boat and Engine Show. Manager Chester I. Campbell has surpassed all his previous efforts in arranging the details for what will unquestionably prove the greatest Motor Boat and Engine Show ever held. In past years there has been. a dearth of boats, and engines have predominated, but this year there is a splendid display of boats of all sizes ranging from the smallest of the power craft to big roomy and comfortable sea going cabin cruisers. The engine exhibits include the latest improvements in design and construction while many novel accessories will be shown. The show will be found most instructive and all those interested in boat motoring will find a visit to Mechanics Building during show week most profitable. The general public and especially those of mechanical turn of mind will find something of decided interest on every hand.

Among the special features is the power boat Niagara, which went through the rapids and whirlpool and made a landing under her own power below the falls at Lewiston. The tiny yawl Sea Bird, which made the phenomonal trip 4,000 miles from Providence, R. I. to Rome, Italy, will be shown fully rigged and equipped. Capt. Thomas Fleming Day will tell the thrilling story of the long voyage with many interesting side lights and incidents. He will give two lectures, Wednesday afternoon and evening, in which he will relate his experiences and that of the crew on this memorable trip.

There are musical programmes afternoon and evening and many novel features which will help to make a visit to the show most enjoyable.

MYSTERY SALE AND SUPPER

Many Novel Features Seen at the Park and Downs Church

PLEASING PROGRAM

The mystery sale, supper and entertainment of the D. O. club in the vestry of the Park and Downs Congregational church, Tuesday night was an occasion that called out a large attendance. The supper was a novel one for when the guests assembled they found at their places an attractive package which upon being opened proved to be the meal prepared for them. At each place was an artificial rose which soon adorned the person. The color scheme was in pink and white.

A pleasing program of vocal solos, readings and tableaux was given which was enjoyed and much applauded by those present.

Mrs. Florence Terry of Boston was most pleasing in her soprano solos, "April morn," "Madcap Marjorie," "Dear Little Lambkin" and "Dutch Garden." She was accompanied by Miss Henrietta C. Gram of Wollaston.

Miss Lois Beil, a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory contributed several readings, among them, "Polly of the Circus" and "The Kindergarten Story."

The final number of the program consisted in a series of tableaux in which Miss Ruth Page, Miss Gertrude Sass and Miss Clara Mansfield participated.

The poses were graceful and the effect of colored lights added charm to the groupings. The tableaux included:

Strolling, Miss Sass
Comin' thro' the Rye, Miss Page
Woman's crown of glory, Miss Mansfield and Miss Sass
Meditation, Miss Page
Coquette Miss Sass
"Simply to Thy cross I cling," Miss Mansfield
Asleep, Miss Sass and Miss Page
Flower Girl, Miss Mansfield
Peacemaker, Trio
Prayer, Miss Page
Farewell, Trio
Benediction, Trio

In charge of the supper was a committee consisting of Miss Angie Rose, Miss Ethel Turner, Miss Geraldine Scott, Miss Clara Mansfield, Miss Ruth Page, Miss Gertrude Sass, Miss Hazel Jones.

Miss Freda Klingenhagen and Miss Natalie Scott were in charge of the candy booth and Mrs. T. C. Gram and Mrs. Olive Milbury in charge of the ice cream.

The "guess cake" was supervised by Miss Lily Collier. Mildred Morris was awarded a large and beautiful doll for selling the largest number of tickets, Miss E. R. Muzans who had the affair in charge is to be congratulated upon its success.

"THE REAL DIARY OF A REAL BOY"

Judge Shute it's Author at Wollaston Congegational Club

RED LETTER NIGHT

As stated in the invitation Tuesday evening was indeed a red letter night at the Wollaston Congregational club with Judge Henry A. Shute, author of "The Real Diary of a Real Boy" as the guest of honor.

Although the speaker did not arrive until a late hour those present were amply repaid for their wait and enjoyed an impromptu program in the interim.

The dinner at six-thirty was largely attended the evening's program calling forth the largest number this season. Vice President E. S. Tenney presided in the absence of President Locke.

During the course of the dinner a telephone message from President Locke was received stating that the speaker was somewhere between Exeter, New Hampshire and Boston and would arrive at the club later in the evening.

During the wait an excellent program was given including readings by Erastus Osgood, vocal solos by William A. Mann and club choruses with C. U. Tirrell at the piano.

Councilman Murray in a very witty and entertaining manner referred to the recent, election campaign and the city council appointments. He paid tribute to the calibre of the men Ward Five sent to the council this year.

Councilman Bailey spoke briefly of civic affairs and congratulated Murray on his success thus far in the council.

In response to a call from the club A. Lincoln Baker was in the midst of an entertaining anecdote when the worthy president arrived accompanied by the missing speaker

An ovation lasting several minutes greeted Judge Shute. He explained that the delay was due to a mix up of dates he not realizing this was the night until arriving at his home in Exeter,shortly before six.

A telephone message from President Locke in Boston soon put him aright and he caught the next train to Boston arriving in time to just miss the 8.05 for Wollaston.

Electrics were taken and the president arrived with his guest at the club an hour later.

Judge Shute kept his hearers entertained until late in the evening with anecdotes harking back to boyhood's days and striking a responsive chord in the breasts of those present.

"Whack," "Beany Watson," "Fatty Melcher," "Pozzy Chadwick," "Pulpy," "Tom Tit" and the other well known characters all came in for a share of attention in an ever refreshing manner.

The speaker read excerpts from several of his books including "Pulpy," "A Few Neighbors" and "Real Boys."

The first reminiscence told of a heated debate between the "boys" upon that ambitious and staple question "Resolved: The pen is mighter than the sword."

The speaker stated that the majority of his works were an actual transcription of what happened when he was a boy, the remander being elaborated more or less.

His description of moving day struck a sympathetic note and his remarks were interrupted with continued laughter.

The fight between "Fatty" and "Fishy" Bates, a "stewed cat" ended the evening. It seems that the academy students in Exeter were supposed to hold first place with the girls there, leaving the town boys in the background.

Fatty's resentment of this lead to the historic conflict. The rounds were most realistically described, the last ending in Fatty's downfall.

Loud applause greeted the Judge at his close and after the talk several former friends and associates met him once again.

TODAY'S COURT.

William Sarmarti was fined $25 for breaking glass and $50 for assault at Weymouth. Andrew Krowmoski and Michael Masjulauis were fined $50 each for assault at Weymouth.

Filomena DiBerardini was fined $75 for assault on Angelo Dionti, at Braintree.

Saverio Cesasoli and Phenix Cherubini were fined $50 each for violation of the liquor law at Quincy .

Q.—If God is a God of love, as the Bible tells us, how can we understand His command to the children of Israel to utterly destroy their enemies, men, women, and children? (B. R.)

Answer.—The Land of Canaan belonged to the Israelites as it had been given to Abraham and promised to his seed as an everlasting possession. The Philistines,Amorites and others who inhabited the land at the time when Moses under Divine direction led the Israelites out of Egypt, were a semi-barbarous race whose sins and iniquities had come to the full. It was because they had become so depraved that the Lord saw that it would be best to destroy them. Let us suppose that a people, occupying the land of Canaan today, were to become so degraded and corrupt that they were a menace to civilization, robbing and massacering innocent people, and in all ways being obnoxious both to themselves and to other nations. Would it be thought an unwise, unjust or unloving arrangement for the Lord to cause their removal and entire destruction in order to make way for the establishment of the Israelites in their own land? Many of the prophecies of the Scriptures clearly indicate that we may expect within the next few years just such a development of affairs, and that the Israelites will be gathered back into their own country from the uttermost parts of the earth. (See Jeremiah xxxii, 36-44.) Reverting to the question: we see women and children, young and old, dying off in multitudes every day with but very little evidence of the Lord's love in any direction. However, the Lord has arranged in His plan of salvation a time and a way when all the race shall be delivered from the death conditions.—Isaiah xxxv, 8-10; Revelation xxi, 3-5.

NOMINATED FOR ANNAPOLIS

Woodbury E. Mackay of Milton has been nominated by Congressman Curley as midshipman at the Naval Academy from the 10th Congressional District. He was born in Roxbury, is 16 years old, and is in the graduating class of Milton Academy, where he has been a pupil for nine years. He has passed nearly all his examinations for admission to Harvard.

His scholastic record at the Milton Academy has been consistently high. Last year he won the first Latin prize, considered the highest award at the school. He takes a lively interest in athletics.

His father formerly in command of the Naval Brigade of Massachusetts, graduated at Annapolis in 1885, and served in the Navy during the Spanish War. His grandfather was an officer of the Navy and served in the Civil War, and his ancestors served in the Army and Navy during the Revolutionary War and took part in the Louisburg expedition in 1745.

Young Mackay won his nomination as the result of a competitive examination held last December in Boston by the United States Civil Service Commission to fill the vacancy.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

There was a large attendance Tuesday afternoon of club members and guests at the Dickens afternoon of the Quincy Women's club. Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, president, called the business session promptly at half past two and the recording secretary gave her report as usual which was followed by announcements and general business

New Year's greetings from the state federation president, Mrs. Mulligan, to Massachusetts club women were read from the January Federation Bulletin Its message of loyalty, progress, unity and devotion to the cause of humanity and general uplift was an inspiration.

Members were urged to attend the next State Federation meeting on Feb 8, in Park Street church, Boston. Delegates to represent the club are Mrs. Chandler W. Smith, Mrs. Wilson Marsh and Mrs. Victor E. Miller.

Tickets may be obtained of corresponding secretary.

The Arts and Crafts committee announced that the class in dressmaking would begin Jan. 31 and there was one vacancy. Also there would be classes in millinery started in February, one or two classes. Other classes forming were basketry, jewelry, leather, stencil, etc.

Mrs. Murray for the Visiting Nurse committee reported 238 calls made by the Nurse and her assistant last month. An appeal was made for old linen. On Feb. 27th Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston would address the club and the Nurse would also speak of her work.

The Legislature committee announced that there was a demand for a class in parliamentary law. Any wishing to join were asked to send in their names to Mrs. W. W. Whitcher. Mrs. Robert E. Park spoke of hearings to be held at the State house and urged the attendance of members

Miss Harriet E. Turner for the Young Women's club said it had a membership of 80 and its officers thought it could be much increased if it had a gymnasium for recreation. The club was asked to endorse the petition to be presented to the School committee on Tuesday evening, asking for the use of the High school gym one or two nights a week for the use of the club. It was so voted.

A communication was read from the Hyde Park Current Events club asking endorsement and help in its efforts to get lower steps on electric cars, and to attend the hearing at 20 Beacon street Feb. 9 at 10 A. M. when the matter would come up. It was voted to send delegates to the hearing and endorse the movement. The delegates are Mrs. Frederick H Bishop Mrs. Martha C. Aitkin and Mrs. Chandler W. Smith.

Mrs. Robert E. Park made a report of the meeting last week at the New England Women's club

Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney made an earnest appeal for the endowment fund. None of the officers in the state or national Federation receive compensation for their work or traveling expenses. The endowment is for a fund to be used for legitimate expenses so that the best qualified woman can be selected for positions rather than one who has the money to pay her own expenses. Mrs. Gurney did not believe in assessing the club but believed every member wished to contribute voluntarily, if only five cents. Hoped some would go as high as $5.

It was voted that the club by-laws be suspended on Feb. 13 and unlimited guest privilege be given for the annual dramatic, but no tickets put on public sale.

Mrs. W. F. Cummings is to give a report of the Conservation conference at the next meeting.

Mrs. Albert E. Avery and Mrs. Charles R. Safford were appointed delegates to the Juvenile Court conference at Temple Israel, Boston, Feb. 10th. Questions regarding the same to be sent to Mrs. W. G. Shaw.

Many guests were present from out of town, among them Mrs. W. E. Dow of The Philergians, Braintree Mrs. Robert Cushman, Rockland club, Mrs. Goldsmith, Heptorean club, Somerville, Miss Mason, member of the Federated club from Saco, Maine, Mrs. Matherson and Mrs. De Galyer, North Weymouth and Mrs. Manahan of Hillsboro, Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, chairman of the program committee was in charge of the afternoon's program which opened as usual with music. Instead of the Mendelssohn trio as anticipated,only one member was able to be present, Miss Alice Gertrude Coe, who is a general favorite and was warmly greeted. She sang a group of old English ballads in keeping with Dickens' afternoon as follows:

"Drink to me only with thine eyes" words Ben Jonson (1573-1637)—Old English Air, date uncertain

"The Bailiff's Daughter of Islington", old English ballad, tune from tradition.

"Pretty Polly Oliver" old English air

During an intermission she sang "Ivy Green" words by Dickens. Miss Coe sang delightfully with her usual full rounded notes, and sympathetic interpretation

Mrs. Marsh said in introducing the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Lillian Jackson of Lynn, that to most of us birthdays were milestones up to fifty and after that they were gall stones, but this the 100th anniversary of the birth of Charles Dickens was a very pleasant remembrance all over the country.

Mrs. Jackson said her talk would be on the life of Dickens, more especially his early life. She gave an interesting account of him as a boy, his early struggles up to manhood, his family history and what led up to the various familiar characters which stand out so vividly in his books.

Mrs. Jackson's paper showed deep research and appreciation of Dickens. She read letters which could not be found in books or at libraries and also read descriptive bits from Pickwick papers, giving a deep insight into the thoughts of the man, who was one of the greatest educators of the age. Dickens' characters are real and make their appeal to the readers even unto this generation.

An informal reception followed the reading, many enjoying a few minutes' chat with Mrs. Jackson.

Rehearsals for the Dramatic afternoon on Feb. 13, are being held, almost daily. The Program committee, who have the affair in charge, have divided the labor incident to the production of the play. Mrs. Edward B. Marsh, the chairman, being general manager, Mrs. Bickford, stage manager and Mrs. Gurney the coach. The play chosen is "The Honeymoon" by John Tobin. It was written in 177[illegible] and is rightly considered one of the most brilliant of the old English comedies.

The part of Juliana has always been a favorite and has had many representatives in this country. Among them, as some of our older theatre-goers will remember, was Miss Fannie Morant, who gained great applause, both here and in England for her spirited enactment of this character. Mrs. Gurney was a pupil of Miss Morant's and studied the play with her and is, therefore, conversant with the best stage traditions. An excellent cast has been secured from the club membership and waiting list.

QUINCY ALLIANCE

There was a large attendance at the meeting of Quincy Alliance in the parlor of First Church, Monday afternoon. Mrs. George G. Saville, president, was in the chair and extended a cordial greeting in her hospitable manner. Mrs. Isabelle Davis, secretary, read the report of the last meeting, the principal feature of which was the address given by Rev. William I. Lawrance, an the best methods of educating the child religiously.

Mrs. Saville made a few brief remarks in regard to the interesting meeting she attended at Newton and the very eloquent tribute paid to the memory of Kate Gannett Wells.

Mrs. William B. Nichols gave an account of her very delightful day with the Hingham Alliance and the inspiring address of Hon. John D. Long. Mrs. Nichols who is an ardent worker and an earnest advocate of the Cheerful Letter cause asked that a sum of money be devoted to the work. It was voted that $10.00 be given to Mrs. Nichols to further its interests. Mrs. Nichols has been chairman of the Cheerful Letter association nineteen years and is also secretary of the society for the distribution of books and literature.

Miss Ruth Keating entertained with a violin solo, which was played with much expression, giving much pleasure.

Miss Gladys Hunt accompanied at the piano.

Mrs. Saville introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Frank Young of Dorchester, representative of the National Unitarian Temperance society.

Mrs. Young said: "Before I begin my talk on temperance I wish to relate an incident in regard to the Cheerful Letter cause. I was in the distant West and met a woman at a service who asked me if I was from Boston. I told her yes. She asked me if I knew Mrs. Hall, wife of the Rev. Mr. Hall, pastor of the Meeting House Hill church in Dorchester. I told her I knew her well. 'She is one of my dearest friends,' said the woman. 'I asked her when she saw Mrs. Hall last?' 'Why,' replied the woman, 'I never saw her in my life, we became acquainted through the Cheerful Letter. I was in deep and bitter trouble and so discouraged I prayed to die, but through the comforting and inspiring letters of this good woman I was uplifted and cheered. I went to work and educated my children who are today a blessing to the community.' So, friends, go on with your good work, this is only one incident of many."

Mrs. Young said in part: "Intemperance is one of the greatest instruments which tends to destroy humanity. We pay for the excesses of our ancestors in many forms, as the Bible says 'the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children even to the third and fourth generation. It has been said of woman, she can't fight, so she ought not to vote, but the greatest gift of woman to the world is life, and if the environments of home and surroundings are unpleasant , if the father is addicted to stimulants, and the mother receives abuse from his hands while under the influence of liquor, these conditions tend to weaken the intellect and dwarf the body of the child. Should these conditions be allowed to exist? Many noble men and women are doing efficient and strenuous work, they are the greatest assets in the world.

"We grant licenses for liquor to be sold and then we arrest the man who buys it. Is not this inconsistent? The father is sentenced to imprisonment, the home is broken up, the children are put upon the state, the mother goes out to work. The father is released after a time, he finds his home gone, his wife and children scattered. Poverty is the result of intemperance. We hear the call going through our strets, 'old bottles and rags,' where there are bottles there are rags. 'Ye who are strong should bear the infirmities of the weak.' We all believe in religion, then let us preach this great reform. Social workers are not always temperance cranks. These workers belong to the church militant, wake up the conscience. Religion is a life lived in consecration to good works. This great menace to the home and community is not confined to the poor, the homes of the wealthy are also infested. Many a fond mother hides her anguish with a smile, and many a father walks the floor waiting the return of a wayward son.

In my work among the women of the South Bay club, which is compared of all nationalities, many pathetic incidents are told me; one woman said she was taken from school when a mere child and put to work in a mill and this child was subject to the abuse of a drunken father. Intemperance is at the root of almost all child labor. We should all use our personal influence to repress this growing evil. Jesus is our great Leader. Let us do as he would do, and as he commanded 'Go ye into all parts of the earth and preach his gospel."

At the close of the address, Mrs. Saville suggested a rising vote of thanks to be given Mrs. Young.

A social and informal hour followed in which refreshments were served, consisting of cocoa and dainty crackers. The pourers were Mrs. W. B. Nichols and Miss Mary Nightingale and the hostesses, Mrs. John L. Gow and Miss Mary Nightingale. The special guest was Mrs. King, daughter of Mrs. Fifield of Milton.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

On Saturday evening members of the Young Women's Club are to entertain their gentleman friends at the clubhouse. A play under the direction of Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy entitled "A Bundle of Matches" will be presented, and there will be music, dancing and refreshments.

The Dramatic class met on Saturday, every member being present. Plans for a play were discussed.

MRS. DECKER NOT TO RUN.

Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker, whose friends announced that she was about to open headquarters and start a vigorous campaign for a seat in the United States senate, will not make the race, apparently, unless friends of both sexes in Colorado force her to do it. She says: "The time is not ripe for the election of a woman to the United States senate. I know the day will come when she will sit in the councils of the nation, but it will not be in my generation. It is premature. I believe heartily that women are capable of serving their country in this capacity, but I feel that such a thing is not possible at this time. Everything that women have accomplished in this state has been through blood and tears. We go ahead, but it is slow work."

URGE FEDERATION.

Forty-seven clubs in Greater Boston were represented at a meeting last week at the New England Women's club, Boston. Mrs. George W. Perkins, of Roxbury, chairman, presided, and the reports were read on a joint reception to Mrs. Philip N. Moore last summer by Mrs. Annie M. Pfeiffer, of Hyde Park, secretary. A small balance remained in the treasury, and it was voted to take from this amount whatever may be necessary to inform all the clubs represented of the proposed plan to unite the organizations in Greater Boston into a city federation.

The matter was discussed at length, and by vote of this meeting the matter will be brought before the clubs, of which there are now fifty-two in Greater Boston. Mrs. May Alden Ward, of the New England Women's club, Mrs. George Franklin Salisbury, of the Brighthelmstone club, Mrs. Blair, of the Roxburghe club, Mrs. Adelaide M. Godding, president of the New Hampshire's Daughters club, Miss Marion Howard Brazier, of the Professional Women's club, and Mrs. William Wadleigh, of Brookline, were among those who spoke in favor of the proposed plan.

The speakers said that the work of the city federation will in no way conflict with the State federation. The idea is to unite the organizations of Greater Boston for the purpose of working together in cases of emergency and for civic affairs in which all have a common interest .

The representatives of clubs present were asked to bring the matter before the different clubs, and Mrs Perkins, chairman, was authorized to appoint a committee of five to act with her in arranging a meeting in the near future to formulate plans for the proposed federation

TWO SIMPLE QUESTIONS.

There are two simple questions which legislators who are this year entreated to vote for suffrage measures may well ask themselves.

One is: Would the grant of the ballot be a good thing for women? The other is: Would it be a good thing for the community?

As to the first question, it may be answered that the majority of American women are intelligent enough to know what is good for them. If they believed that they would be better off with the ballot, they would not fail to ask for it. But they have not asked for it. The suffragists themselves admit that they represent only a minority of their sex. They are in fact only a small minority. They are noisy, but they are only a handful, compared with the great mass of American women.

As to the public at large, what possible good can come from forcing the ballot upon women, when they do not want it and have had no training for its use?

If women, average women, were to vote only just as wisely, just as steadily, just as patriotically as men, there would be no gain to the public at large. The electorate would simply have been doubled, with a corresponding doubling of election expenses, without the slightest change in the result.

But, with women reluctant, untrained, and already heavily weighted with responsibilities from which they cannot be relieved, what chance is there that they would vote as wisely and as steadily as men? Still more, what chancs is there that they would vote more steadily and more wisely than men, and so bring about a better state of things than now exists?

These are questions which the suffragists do not answer. But legislators should weigh them seriously before giving their votes to suffrage measures.—The Remonstrance.

COURT DISCHARGES IRISH PERFORMERS

Had Been Charged With Producing an Immoral Play

Philadelphia, Jan. 24.—The eleven Irish actors and actresses who were arrested on a charge of producing a sacrilegious and immoral play, were discharged from custody by the county court. The players were arrested on a warrant sworn out by a citizen after they had appeared in the comedy, "The Playboy of the Western World."

A police magistrate had held them for trial, but counsel immediately applied for a writ of habeas corpus asking the court to dismiss the charge against the players.

The court, in dismissing the players, gave no reasons for its action. In the argument on the writ, the defense claimed that the law under which the players were arrested did not apply to their case.

Culberson Charges Republican Committee With Corruption

Washington, Jan. 24.—Demanding an investigation into campaign expenditures in 1904 and 1908, Senator Culberson in the senate made sweeping charges of corruption against the Republican committees for these and other years.

Indirectly he charged that foreign ambassadorships were bestowed as a reward for campaign contributions, and inferentially he charged that former President Roosevelt had condoned the use of money in politics.

When the Clock struck One on Wash Day.

Hickory, dickory, dock,
The mouse ran up the clock.
The clock struck one;
And the wash was done,
Fels-Naptha made it fun.
Hickory, dickory, dock.

Doctors and college professors have been trying for years to find out how much energy a man uses when working.

If they would try it out on the woman who hangs over the washboard every Monday—they'd get the information quicker, though the women who do this are becoming fewer every day.

Fels-Naptha worked the change.

The woman who uses Fels-Naptha gets done sooner and has whiter clothes. And she hasn't rubbed her health, strength and good nature away on the washboard.

If you haven't tried the Fels-Naptha way, it's time to begin.

You can't start too soon to take care of your health.

A Fels-Naptha wash-day keeps the house comfortable—not full of steam and soap suds' smell.

Use cool or lukewarm water with Fels-Naptha.

Makes clothes last longer because you don't boil them tender and then rub them to pieces on a hard metal washboard.

Follow the easy directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

HEART AND DART A DANCE FEATURE

The I. D. I. Girls, an organization composed of prominent young ladies of this city, held forth in a Leap Year party in Colonial hall Tuesday evening. The affair began at eight o'clock and concluded at midnight.

Refreshments were served and the affair was pronounced a most enjoyable and successful one by the number who were in attendance.

A special feature of the dance was the heart and dart dance. Each lady was presented with a piece of red card-board, shaped in the form of a heart, on which was inscribed a number. The gentlemen were given darts in a similar manner, each of which likewise had a number on it. The numbers on hearts and darts were then made to correspond and when the orchestra played, the couples thus matched danced to the tune of "You'll do the same thing over."

The music for the occasion was furnished by Provost's orchestra and the dance order comprised twenty numbers. The committee in charge included the Misses Mary Joss, Catherine Clarkin, Mabel Hauston and Maude Johnston.

BRIEFS

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Fur Scarfs in Fashion of Mid-Victorian Style.

Can Be Worn With Frocks In Early Spring Season.

It is time to talk about the accessories of dress. The big things have been discussed, have been launched, and the mind of the public is made up about them. Nothing was really new this year; no surprises were launched during the season; skirts did not get wider sleeves remained at any length the wearer desired, and the only garments that showed variations on the original style were the jackets.

Coats have been taken seriously. The tailors have been aware, probably, that one-piece frocks were struggling for supremacy and that something had to be done to keep the jacket in front of the public. So it was made longer. It was belted all around, or merely in the back. It had ornamented sleeves. Its cape collars were most important. Its buttons were immense and were used in such a manner that they called attention to themselves.

Braid, applied pieces of cloth, generous use of furs, and strong contrasting cloths in the collar and cuffs were some of the other measures used to keep the tailors busy in making varied and fashionable coats. Not only were the jackets of suits very much trimmed and altered from last year, but the little coatees were invented to wear with a three-piece suit, and top coats in all colors were made fashionable.

Of the latter garment we have surely had enough in the last few weeks. The world has grown quite weary of that ubiquitous garment which calls itself a polo coat, and is repeated by the hundreds in every town. Surely, you know it well? It is as straight as a lead pencil, has a huge colored collar of ratine, wit cuffs to match, is tight at the hem, and fastens slightly double-breasted with large buttons from neck to knee.

A year ago, when this model was first introduced, it looked quite snappy. Maybe we misjudged it then and overpraised it, for it has not a particle of smartness about it now. Its popularity in cheap materials and in garish colors has caused fastidious women to hasten back to the man's coat with its raglan sleeve, its clear from the shoulder, and its martingale across the back.

This is the typical polo coat and was introduced in London for men. It has now been taken up by women who dress in a snappy way, and is a most agreeable contrast to the long, shapeless garment we meet at every turn of the street.

Among the accessories of dress which count are the wide scarfs of fur, or chiffon, of taffeta, and of satin. They are not universal; in fact, one can hardly call them popular, but they are very worth while and give quite an air to a gown.

Some of them are plain and straight depending for ornament on fringe or silk motifs at the ends, others are made after the manner of the shoulder scarfs of half a dozen years ago with their width in the middle of the back and the ends sloped off to a point.

These are of Hudson seal, of real seal, of caracul, of ermine, and of mink. While these are graceful and protective, they are not as fashionable as ornamental scarfs that are bulit up with several materials and are full of fringes, and puffings and cordings. One made of taffeta, for instance, is quite Victorian, it fits the shoulders and top part of the arms on an even line; and has two long ends in front starting from a flat bow.

Three wide puffs are used to mak it with strips of black fur between and at the edges. The bow is laid in wide plaits, also edged with fur, and the ends are gathered into silk tassels. This is worn with a poke bonnet which has a white ermine crown, a black taffeta brim, and a lining of plaited rose pink chiffon At the back there is a bow of black fur that is placed straight across the nape of the neck.

It is a quaint little effect—this poke bonnet with the old-fashioned mantle—and it takes a girl with a Victorian face to wear it. We have many such, the type has not entirely died out, and we are told that it has grown more frequent because the athletic type is passing out. Those who do not know say the students of types confound the suffragette phase with the athletic phase, calling both the new woman.

Now the student explains that the suffragette face is the thoughtful one and the athletic face does not show the influence of books or study. It is breezy, self-reliant, used to the open and shows the effects of wind and water. The two are entirely separate, and it is the thoughtful face that is arising in the new generation.

But this is a bypath into which the little poke bonnet and the mantelet beckoned. Mind you, clothes are always alluring because they represent phases of mind and manners. The Victorian clothes were symbols of the inartistic demureness of the women and the Directoire clothes were symbols of the flagrant license among women.

Other scarfs—to go back to the subject—are of mole-colored satin, lined with a vivid burnt orange and trimmed with marabou or moleskin. They are very wide, are gathered up into a huge motif made of silk cording in the middle of the back and are crossed over the bust, passed around the waist and fastened in the back where the two ends hang to the knees.

Another scarf is of black satin lined with white and edges finished with a five-inch fringe of chenille. This is slightly gathered up in the back under one satin cord, and is fastened at the waist with a crimson rose, the right end goes under the left one and finishes at the waist line, but the left end droops to the knees.

You see there is nothing simple about these scarfs. They are quite ornate and are intended for house wear, although they will serve admirably for warmth in the Spring days when coats are too heavy for the street and one-piece frocks are too thin. Just now they are a rival to the little coatee of chiffon or embroidered net or satin which is worn over a blouse and skirt and under a coat that matches the skirt.

Sometimes the new coatees are worn with one-piece frocks as well as with a blouse and skirt and are left on when the top coat is removed. The latter is often a fur coat instead of a coat to match the suit, although it may be either. It has nothing in common with the Oriental chiffon coat which was worn in the afternoons in public two years ago, and was again introduced, minus the belt, for tea gowns this Autumn.

The new coatee is rather short, is belted, has immense revers and three-quarter sleeves. It is not always made of chiffon; it is often of satin, the soft supple kind that falls into the figure. It hangs to the knees at the back and is sloped up sharply in front; it is belted at the waist, sometimes with satin, again with ornamental leather or colored metal.

Some of the best ones are edged with swansdown, have wide revers of soft white lace, also trimmed with the swansdown, and sleeves that flare at the hem and are finished with frills of white lace, such a coat is put on over a thin frock usually matching in color and sometimes forming a harmonious contrast.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

Carnegie Gets Check For $22.70 For His Testimony at Washington

Washington, Jan. 24.—Andrew Carnegie has been paid for the testimony he gave the steel trust investigating committee.

When on the stand, Carnegie said he would not take the money, but later a duly attested voucher with the Ironmaster's signature attached was received from New York. Payment was refused because a notarial seal was omitted.

The voucher in proper form was received yesterday afternoon, and a check for $22.70 was remitted to Carnegie by return mail.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS FOR PAPER BAG COOKING.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

I do not claim for the paper-bag system of cookery that it can cook everything. It is evident that tea must still be made in the teapot. Generally speaking, we may waive our claim to having mastered the difficulty with respect to soups, although I have made beef tea with excellent results. The following is a list of articles that may in the meantime be avoided:

Soup (except beef tea), omelette, scrambled eggs, jam (except in small quantities), Scotch kale, beans, cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, artichokes, macaroni or kindred Italian pastes.

The success of the system depends entirely upon how it is carried out. Good cooking requires time, care, attention to detail, taste and a temperature suited to the particular dish being cooked. While the paper-bag system is labor and time saving, as well as affording more nutritive and appetizing effects than the present, it does not abrogate any of the rules that apply to efficient work at the kitchen-table.

The Bag.

Specially prepared bags should be used. Without them the method cannot be practiced with assurance of success. The bag should be made of materials that guarantee its purity. It should be odorless, and its purity a guarantee that nothing injurious can possibly be imparted from it to the food cooked in the bag.

Before using the bags—

(1) Select one that "fits" the food intended to be cooked:

(2) Grease slightly the inside of the bag, except in the case of vegetables or when water is added. For beginners it is advisable. Butter, lard or dripping may be used.

(3) When the food has been prepared for the bag, place the same on the table and lift the uppermost edge of the bag while you insert the contents.

(4) Fold the mouth of the bag two or three times and fasten with a clip. Strong wire paper-clips, obtainable of any stationer, answer the purpose. It is desirable to fold the corners of the bag so as to secure as near as possible a hermetical closing.

The Oven.

Practically any oven will do. Paper-bag cookery is as well suited to a gas stove as it is to a coal oven, an electricity cooker or oil stove, always provided the necessary heat is secured. The size of the oven makes no difference to the cooking, only to the size of the article.

Before placing the bag with its contents into a gas oven, the gas should be lighted at least eight minutes beforehand. The average oven heat should not be less than 200 degrees Fahrenheit, and when the bag is put into the oven this ought to be reduced in eight minutes after to 170 degrees. To find out the correct degree a thermometer, of course, is the most accurate method; but experience will soon teach the cook what is required, and the color assumed by a piece of paper placed in the oven will at once tell whether it is too hot or too cold.

In the case of coal-heated stoves with solid shelves a wire broiler should be used. This should be placed on the shelf with the bag containing the food. It is necessary to emphasize the fact that, except in the case of pies, no dish should be used.

How to Know when the Food is Cooked.

If the time-table is adhered to, the bag may be taken out of the oven in confidence that the food is well cooked. But if from any cause the heat declines, it is very easy to find out whether the food is properly cooked. Except in the case of vegetables, a little hole can be made in the bag by which the food can be seen and judged as to whether it is cooked or not. This will not militate against the cooking of the food in the slightest. In many articles, however, a slight touch of the bag will indicate to an ordinary cook whether the bag is ready to be served. A prick with a needle is another method that may be adopted. But a peculiarly favorable feature of paper-bag cookery is that if the food is left five or ten minutes in the bag in the oven longer than the specified time on my table, the food will not be spoiled. There is little chance of over-cooking.

Dangers to Be Avoided.

Cooking generally has its dangers, like other occupations. It is the beauty of this system that the dangers are reduced to a minimum. One does not require every now and then to open the oven door "to see how the roast is getting on." The oven is doing its work, because the whole force of the heat is playing upon the bag and ensuring every part of the food being properly penetrated. Nevertheless, care should be exercised when opening the oven.

Care, again, should be exercised in taking the bag out of the oven. A plate should be placed gently under the bag about a couple of inches, and the bag drawn completely on to the plate with the fingers. The bag should be ripped open from the top and the fragments thrown at once away.

BOARD OF MISSIONS

the room to give instructions to the maid, and when she returned he had opened his bag and taken out some Mormon literature. She says, very sternly, 'are you a Mormon?' 'I am', he replied. 'Then leave here at once, you can have no lunch here.' We thought her very courageous as Mormons are very vindictive and have to be treated cautiously. So we wish you would keep all of the Mormons in America.

"And another friend, I must tell you about, Miss Elizabeth Ward, a hard-shelled Baptist, who is doing wonderful work and has achieved results that are indeed marvelous.

"The Japanese are very superstitious. One day I was in company with a number of Japanese women, when they all ran from the house in abject terror. I inquired the reason, they had seen a black ant and some unforeseen calamity was about to happen. They also look upon long tailed cats as a forerunner of trouble. They are also superstitious in regard to numbers, 4, 44, and 444 they shun, so if you want a telephone with either of these numbers you can get it 'dog cheap.' My son says I do not get my slang in the right places but I think I did that time.

"We are about to build a new church in Japan to be built with Japanese money at a cost of $86,000. and you would be surprised to hear how they save. One woman, a widow told me, that she lost a great many hair pins and she asked her friends to cut her hair; they refused so she took the shears and cut it off herself, the money she saved in buying hair pins she would give towards the church. Another way, was to deny herself a hot water bath, giving up hair pins and her hot water bath every day and taking a cold water bath once a week. She would save a half cent a day. She is an educated woman and a devout Christian.

"Now you ladies here may not want to cut off your hair or do without your daily bath but perhaps you can save other ways to help our good cause. A Japanese if he is educated likes to write in English and the mistakes they make are extremely ludicrous, I received a letter from a young man recently, he wrote he had been through eighteen cemeteries and would return embalmed and rigid.

"Another one, was preaching a sermon, he thought he was preaching about salvation, he preached for an hour about carrots. I had two handkerchiefs but I wished I had had ten, I was so convulsed with laughter, but the Japanese sat there and never cracked a smile.

"The Japanese are very polite. I walked one mile and a half and bowed one hundred times, and when you consider this bow is not a mere nod, you have to place your hand upon your knee and bend the whole body. But we have white lies and black lies in Japan as well as in America, for instance if I call upon a Japanese woman and she does not wish to see me she calls out, 'I am away.'

"The Japanese language is very beautiful, this is the way I talk with my friends in Japan, have your tongue hung on the middle like the French.

"I suppose many of you belong to one club and perhaps more, but in Japan I belong to 138 societies, and the Christian Aid society is the joy of my life.

"Our work is going on with rapid strides, but there are yet 288 unconverted Japanese to one Christian. What we need is money, more young men and young women, but you must come before 40 or you will be too stiff to learn to sit on the floor. I had a letter from my husband who is in Hartford, Ct., and he thinks he has succeeded in forming a band of six young men to return with us to Japan.

"We love our work in Japan, we love the people. Love them, be one of them that is the way to win them to Christianity."

Miss Mary F. Loud read some missionary letters which were full of hope and courage.

Mrs. L. E. Wetherell made a few remarks, after which all joined in singing the hymn "Blest be the tie that binds."

The missionary benediction was then repeated in unison, "God be merciful to us and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us; that Thy way be known upon earth; Thy saving health among all nations."

Delegates were present from, Brockton, Rockland, Sharon, Weymouth, Weymouth Heights, No. Weymouth, So. Weymouth, Whitman Hanover, Hanson, Abington, Wollaston, Braintree, Cohasset, Easton, Milton, Holbrook, Hingham, Randolph Stoughton. The Branch is invited to Abington for its next meeting.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SOME WINTER SOUPS.

SOUP is not only an economical but a nutritious dish if it is made with a good rich stock. Whenever possible it should be part of the cold weather dinner, as it not only supplies energy but warmth to the body.

Here are some recipes for simple soups without stocks:

Corn and Bean Soups.

Corn Soup.—Take two cups of canned corn, two cups of milk, a cup of boiling water, a teaspoonful each of salt and butter and a quarter of a teaspoonful of white pepper. Mash the corn and force through a sieve. Add it to the boiling water and put in the butter and seasoning. Boil for a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes. Then add the milk, which should also be boiling, and a little paprika.

Rich Bean Soup.—Soak a pint of soup beans in cold water overnight. Wash, drain and put into a kettle with two quarts of boiling water. Boil until the beans are soft enough to mash, which will be in a couple of hours. Brown a tablespoonful of chopped onion with two tablespoonfuls of chopped ham or bacon and a tablespoonful of drippings. Add these to the soup, with a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and a bit of thyme. Boil for ten minutes and add a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley. Thicken with a little cornstarch moistened with water.

An Emergency Soup.

Rice Soup.—Take two cups of milk, a teaspoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of best rice, a teaspoonful of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of curry powder and a teaspoonful of chopped celery. Wash the rice through several waters, put on with two cups of boiling water and boil twenty minutes. Put the milk on in top of double boiler and add the rice and water to the milk as soon as it boils. Rub the butter and flour together and add to the rice and milk. Add the salt, pepper, curry powder and parsley and boil three minutes.

Eyestrain in Children---

ZOROID LENSES

When children wear glasses it is a sign that prudent parents are protecting the eyes, that they may have proper vision later in life and during old age.

Headache, indigestion and attendant discomforts are often directly traceable to eyestrain that may be readily remedied.

Advanced optometry offers this remedy without the use of drugs, thereby avoiding all possibility of permanent injury to your children's eyes.

THREW AN OLD MAN INTO SCALDING BATH

Farm Colony Attendant Gets a Twelve Year Sentence

New York, Jan. 24.—Henry Carlton, an orderly of the New York Farm colony, at New Springville, S. I., pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the first degree in the supreme court in Richmond borough and was sentenced to twelve years in Sing Sing prison.

The crime to which Carlton confessed was the throwing of Harry Williams, an aged paralytic, into a bath so hot the man's death resulted from the burns.

Henry Singer, another orderly under indictment, pleaded not guilty and will be tried later.

The arrest of the pair has revealed a shocking condition of affairs in the farm colony. The coroner's jury returned a verdict censuring the city for the conditions existing at the institution.

DEATH OF RAILWAY MEN

It Will Be Made Subject of Most Rigid Investigation

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Investigation of the wreck of the Illinois Central's two crack trains, near Kinmundy, Ills., in which James T. Harahan, former president of the Illinois Central; F. O. Melcher, second vice president of the Rock Island; E. B. Pierce, general solicitor for the same system, and Elbridge E. Wright were killed, and others maimed and wounded, will be the most thorough ever undertaken by a railroad.

The city is filled with rumors that the accident was not only avoidable, but that it was directly attributable to the labor troubles in which the Illinois Central and the Harriman systems have been involved for several months.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Freckles lifted the overhanging bushes and hurried back to the case. He unslung the specimen box and laid it inside with his hatchet and revolver. He slipped the key in his pocket and went back to Wessner.

"Now for the answer," he said. "Stand up!"

There was iron in his voice, and he was commanding like an outraged general. "Anything you want to be taking off?" he questioned.

Wessner looked the astonishment he felt. "Why, no, Freckles," he said.

"Have the goodness to be calling me Mr. McLean," snapped Freckles. "I'm after resarvin' me pet name for the use of me friends. You may stand with your back to the light or be taking any advantage you want."

"Why, what do you mean?" spluttered Wessner.

"I'm manin'," said Freckles tersely, "to lick a quarter section of h— out of you, and may the Holy Vargin stay me before I leave you here carrion, for your carcass would turn the stummicks of me chickens!"

Down at the camp that morning Wessner's conduct had been so palpable an excuse to force a discharge that Duncan moved near McLean and whispered, "Think of the boy, sir!"

McLean was so troubled that an hour later he mounted Nellie and followed Wessner to his home in Wildcat Hollow, only to find that he had left there a little before, heading for the Limberlost. McLean rode at top speed. When Mrs. Duncan told him that a man answering Wessner's description had gone down the west side of the swamp near noon he left the mare in her charge and followed on foot. When he heard voices he entered the swamp and silently crept near just in time to hear Wessner whine: "But I can't fight you, Freckles. I hain't done nothing to you. I'm away bigger than you, and you've only one hand."

CHAPTER VI.

WESSNER GETS A THRASHING.

THE boss crouched among the bushes like a tiger ready to spring, but as Freckles' voice reached him he held himself with the effort of his life to see what mettle was in the boy.

"Don't you be wasting of me good time in the numbering of me hands," howled Freckles. "The stringth of me cause will make up for the weakness of me minthers, and the size of a cowardly thief don't count. You'll think all the wickeds of the Limberlost is turned loose on you whin I come agin'st you, and, as for me cause, I slept with you, Wessner, the night I come down the corduroy like a dirty, friendless tramp, and the boss was for taking me up, washing, clothing and feeding me and giving me a home full of love and tinderness, and a master to look to, and good, well earned money in the bank. He's trusting me his heartful, and here comes you, you spotted toad of the big road, and insults me, as is an honest Irish gintlemin, by hinting that you concaive I'd be willing to shut me eyes and hold fast while you rob him of the thing I was set and paid to guard and then act the sneak and liar to him and ruin and etarnally blacken the soul of me. You rascal," raved Freckles, "be fighting before I forget the laws of a gintlemin's game and split your dirty head with me stick!"

Wessner backed away, mumbling. "But I don't want to hurt you, Freckles."

"Oh, don't you!" raged the boy. "Well, you ain't resembling me none, for I'm itchin' like death to git me fingers in the face of you."

He danced up and, as Wessner lunged out in self defense, ducked under his arm like a bantam and punched him in the pit of the stomach, so that he doubled up with a groan. Before Wessner could straighten himself Freckles was on him, fighting like the wildest fury. The Dutchman dealt thundering blows that sometimes landed and sent Freckles reeling and sometimes missed, while he went plunging into the swale with the impetus of them. Freckles could not strike with half Wessner's force, but he could land three blows to Wessner's one. It was here that Freckles' days of alert watching on the line, the perpetual swinging of the heavy cudgel and the endurance of all weather stood him in good stead, for he was as tough as a pine knot and as agile as a panther. He danced, ducked and dodged. For the first five minutes he endured fearful punishment. Then Wessner's breath commenced to whistle between his teeth, when Freckles had only just begun fighting. He sprang back with shrill laughter.

"Begolly, and will your honor be whistling the hornpipe for me to be dancing of?" he cried.

Spang went his fist into Wessner's face, and he was past him into the swale.

"And would you be pleased to tune up a little livelier?" he gasped and clipped his ear as he sprang back. Wessner lunged at him in blind fury. Freckles, seeing an opening, forgot the laws of a gentleman's game and drove the toe of his heavy wading boot into Wessner's middle until he doubled up and fell heavily. In a flash Freckles was on him. For a time McLean could not see what was happening. "Go! Go to him now!" he commanded himself, but so intense was his desire to see the boy win alone that he could not stir.

At last Freckles sprang up and backed away. "Time!" he yelled like a fury. "Be getting up, Mr. Wessner, and don't be afraid of hurting me. I'll let you throw in an extra hand and lick you to me complate satisfaction, all the same. Did you hear me call the limit? Will you get up and be facing me?"

As Wessner struggled to his feet he resembled a battlefield, for his clothing was in ribbons and his face and hands streaming blood.

"I—I guess I got enough," he mumbled.

"Oh, do you?" roared Freckles. "Well, this ain't your say. You come on to me ground lying about me boss and intimatin' I'd stale from his very pockets. Now, will you be standing up and taking your medicine like a man or geeting it poured down the throat of you like a baby? I ain't got enough. This is only just the beginning with me. Be looking out there!"

He sprang against Wessner and sent him rolling. He attacked the unresisting figure and fought him until he lay limp and still and Freckles had no strength left to lift an arm. Then he rose and stepped back, gasping for breath. With his first good lungful of air he shouted, "Time!" But the figure of Wessner lay motionless.

FIGURE THIS OUT

If a house rents for $264 yearly and it costs at the outside $185 for Interest on Mortgage, Taxes, Water, Repairs and Insurance, it doesn't take much of a mathematician to discover that the balance is more than 12 per cent of $575.

This amount $575 buys the equity in a 2-family house, one minute from the Wollaston station.

As it stands, it is a Good Investment, but it will pay more money if the buyer makes improvements.

Don't become skeptical because the nature of this ad is unusual in the Ledger. You will become accustomed sooner or later to unusual things with me. I don't believe in "Ruts." I am in the business of selling Real Estate, and when I have a bargain to offer, the public is going to have a chance to buy. If I advertise a good investment, it is because I believe it to be so.

This house is in a good neighborhood, fast building up. The price is right, and is waiting for some one wide awake enough to grasp an opportunity.

QUINCY A. A. IS EASY WINNER

Takes St. Mary's Team Into Camp by Score of 41 to 14

OTHER GAMES

The members of the Quincy A. A. basketball team made their hold on first place in the Greater Boston Basketball league still firmer last evening when they took the measure of the St. Mary's aggregation in Stillman hall, North End, by the decisive score of 41 to 14. From the start to the finish of the game, the local players experienced little difficulty in showing their superiority over their opponents in all departments.

While the score of the game might have a tendency to cause one to deem it rather one sided, the 300 fans who were in attendance were loud in their praises of the work of Manager Flynn's contingency, for they all acknowledged having been treated to the best article of basketball ever exhibited on the North End court. The team work was of the highest order and each player on the local quintet was credited with at least two baskets.

"Dan" Duggan showed rare form by securing seven baskets from the floor of the sensational order. Hebert, who played one of the back positions, also accredited himself with honors, for besides doing some effective block and passing, he shot three baskets from the floor. Gibbons was the only player on the home team who seemed to be able to show up to advantage.

The summary:—

QUINCY A. A.		ST. MARY'S
O'Rourke, rf		lb Weiss
Kelley, lf		rb Gibbons
D. Duggan, c		c Maloneey
		c Cowan
Hebert, rb		lf Grant
Boyle, lb		rf Sullivan

Score, Quincy 41, St. Mary's 14. Goals from floor, D. Duggan 7, O'Rourke 4, Kelley 3, Hebert 3, Boyle 2, Grant, Gibbons 3, Sullivan, Cowan, Weiss. Goals from fouls, O'Rourke 3. Referee, Coady. Scorer, Flynn. Timer, Bell. Time 20m halves. Attendance 300.

SECOND TEAMS.

During the halves the second teams of both organizations came together, with the result that the local boys were pronounced the winners by the close score of 15 to 12. The contest proved a most gruelling one and at times resolved into a struggle for blood. "Butus" Chapman played well for the local boys, while McLaughlin was the star for the losers. The summary:—

QUINCY A. A.		ST. MARY'S 2d
Dackers, rf		lb Tibbetts
H. Chayman, lf		rb Bench
Jenkins, c		c McLaughlin
M. Chapman, rb		lf Slager
Harmon, lb		rf Keating

Score, Quincy A. A. 2d 15, St. Mary's 2d 12. Goals from floor, Harmon 2 Jenkins, H. Chapman 2, McLaughlin 3, Slager. Goals from fouls, H. Chapman 5, McLaughlin 4. Referee. Coady Scorer, Flynn. Timer, Bell. Time 20m halves.

QUINCY GIRLS LOSE.

For the second time this season, the Quincy Gym Girls' basketball team has been forced to suffer defeat by one point and by a most peculiar coincidence the score on both occasions has been 13 to 12. The first victory referred to was secured recently by the Cunningham Gym Girls and only last evening the feat was accomplished in St. Mary's hall by the Stetson High School girls of Randolph.

The game was close and exciting from beginning to end and the 350 who were present were treated to one of the best basketball games ever played by members of the fairer sex in local circles. As it was there was some question as to the real outcome of the game and only the decision of the coach of Stetson High enabled the Randolph girls to emerge in triumph. The score stood 12 to 11 in favor of the Quincy Girls, when Miss Grace Harris succeeded in putting the ball through the loop hole in the last minute of play.

At the time the goal was made, Miss Irene Williams of the home team was lying on the floor in a semi-conscious condition as a result of having come in collision with Miss Emily Vaughan of the Stetson High team. The accident had distracted the attention of the local team and the members of it declared that the goal should not count, but as stated above the coach of the visiting team who was officiating as umpire, stated otherwise.

For the winners the work of the Misses Harris and Smith featured while Miss Frances Curtin and Miss Irene Williams played well for the local girls. The summary:

STETSON H. S.		QUINCY GIRLS
Miss Hess rf		lb Miss Clark
Miss Vaughan lf		rb Miss Williams
		c Miss Beale
Miss G. Harris c		c Miss Mullen
Miss L. Harris rb		lf Miss Smith
Miss Kane lb		rf Miss Curtin

Score, Stetson H. S. 13, Quincy Girls 12. Goals from floor, Misses Hess, Harris 4, Misses Smith, Curtin 3. Goals from fouls Miss G. Harris 3, Miss Smith 2. Referee, F. Johnson. Umpire, Miss Lyons. Scorer, Miss Helen Mitchell. Timer, Chapin Time two 15m. periods. Attendance 350.

DATE OF REUNION TO BE CHANGED

A meeting of the committee in charge of the coming reunion of St. John's Parish, was held in Parochial School hall Tuesday evening. It was decided to hold the reunion in Parochial School Hall, Wednesday evening, February 14th, instead of on February 19th as heretoforea nnounced, in order that no confliction might occur with the reunion of St. Mary's parish, which has been scheduled for that evening.

Plans of a diverse nature were discussed and the gathering was addressed by Rev. John J. Coan and Rev. Patrick J. Scannell. Active work has already beguna nd no stone will be left unturned to make the occasion a most gala one.

Packers Bought Out Rival Concerns Only to Close Them Up

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Evidence that the National Packing company was one of the agencies used by the alleged packers' combination to destroy competition was given in the trial of the ten defendants charged with criminal violation of the Sherman law.

By the books of the company the government showed that the corporation acquired by purchase thirteen competitors after its organization in March, 1903, and that the price paid for these concerns was $8,000,000. A majority of them were immediately closed.

GRAND PRESENTATION

out in the fortissimo passages, the perfect support of every harmonic part being clearly emphasized. Conductor McConathy at all times had the players in perfect control and no part of this wonderfully descriptive music was slighted. It was a delight to note how plainly every part of the text was illustrated in the differing motives.

The chorus was composed of:

Miss Alice Dunn, R. J. Howard, Miss Lizzie Newcomb, Miss Jean Paterson, Miss Ella F. Josephs, Miss Nellie E. Bolles, Everett M. Clark, Roy Sidelinger, H. S. Anderson, Miss A. J. Flieg, Miss G. McCall, Miss Gertrude Allen, Wendell Luce, Dr. George H. Ryder, Mrs. George H. Ryder, Miss E. W. Osborne, Mrs. Maurice P. Spillane, T. B. Pollard, Arthur Newton, Mrs. W. F. Rice, Lawrence Allen, Miss Edith Olson, Mrs. T. L. Williams, John A. McGowan, Miss Catherine E. Cahill, Miss H. M. West, Miss L. K. Osgood, Norman Lowe, H. C. Hallowell, Jr., Mrs. A. H. Marsh, Miss Clara B. Shaw, T. L. Wharton, M. L. Mitchell, Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Sherman, Rupert McFarland, Miss J. V. Fowler, Harry Sherburne, Miss Sadie Thomas, Mrs. John F. The officers of the society are: President, Thomas B. Pollard; vice-president, D. George H. Ryder; secretary, Mrs. Irene A. Tirrell; treasurer, Harry S. Bates; directors, Mrs. E. C. Page, Mrs. Jennie H. Hunt, F. W. Crane, Wendell H. Luce, L. L. Weston.

In addition to the complete text of the cantata, the program contained a memorial page to the Society's late conductor, Arthur Story Wonson, which beautifully expressed their esteem for him, both as a musician and as a friend. There was also a page containing "A word to our patrons," which was as follows.

In the last three years, the executive board of the Quincy Choral society has sought to establish it as one of the city's permanent organizations, believing that the power of chorus singing to uplift the singer mentally, morally and physically, places it on a level with the highest philanthropies.

As every singing society must draw its members from all walks of life—for the Giver of Good Gifts is no respector of persons—it is wise for any organization devoted to this art to have behind it sufficient financial and social influence to assure its longevity: for once started, in these days of "canned music" and the general tendency to avoid doing anything that can be done for us, no work of this kind should be allowed to stop for want of financial support; it is too valuable to the community.

After considering these things carefully, the society was started with a list of fifty guarantors; yet, with a record of three seasons' valuable study, first class concerts, expensive soloists, orchestra and all the attractive details of artistic circulars, programs and so forth, it has so far proved self-suporting, the guarantors never having been called upon to fulfill their yearly obligations. This speaks well for our city and is much more than was hoped for in the beginning.

The Quincy Choral Society has a chance to become one of the finest singing societies in the country. With its home in the centre of a district rapidly increasing in population, and starting at a time when music in this country is being newly placed at its true value as one of the highest of arts and one of the most powerful influences for the uplifting of humanity, it needs only to be thought of in this light and its existence becomes a matter of civic pride; its ability to present the great works of the masters of music becomes a recognized factor in municipal growth in "art for art's sake," and success is assured.

Although it is felt that the life of this society does not depend on the size of its audiences, yet it is a pleasure to know that the public has evidenced its appreciation from the first by its hearty support.

OWNERSHIP OF CAT IS SETTLED

The famous cat case from Cohasset which has occupied nearly two days of the attention of the court was disposed of this morning when the defendant Mabel Barnes was declared by the court to be not guilty.

Mary Curtis claimed to own the cat and she accused Mabel of stealing it. The day the case was called there was some dispute about the age of puss and this morning when the case was called Dr. Abele, the veterinary was a witness. He said that the cat was over a year old and less than three years. Several other witnesses were examined after which the able counsel, who represented both parties made lengthy pleas which were listened to with rapt attention by the court who answered that the government had not sustained its case and that the defendant Mrs. Barnes was not guilty.

Thus ends a case that has caused no end of table talk among Cohassets four hundred.

FIVE-MILE TWO MAN RELAY RACE

The Coliseum was the scene of a most exciting 5-mile, two man relay race last evening, when Frank Bruce and Dominic Vendetti of the Italian American A. The feature of the evening was the running of Fasci, who finished the last mile in sterling form, after his partner had been forced to abandon the race. The race then resolved into a gruelling struggle between Bruce and Fasci, with the former managing to emerge in victory by two laps.

PAID RENT WITH LIGHTED LAMP

Angelo Dionto of Braintree met with rather a rough reception, Monday when he went to collect rent due him from one of his tenants, Filomena Di-Berardini of Pearl street. Insted of meeting him at the door with the money due she met him with a lighted lamp and after some words Filomena threw the lamp at Angelo. The lamp struck him on the head and besides having about all of his hair burnt off his face was burned somewhat. In court this morning Filomena was fined $75 for assault.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH CALLS PASTOR

Unanimous Call Extended to Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of First Church, Lowell

Action Taken at Annual Meeting Last Evening. Other Business

The Bethany Congregational church at its annual meeting Thursday evening voted unanimously to extend a call to Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the First Congregational church, Lowell, to become its pastor, and while it is not definitely known that he will accept the call, it is thought that he will, although the salary at the Bethany church is not as large as he is now receiving at Lowell.

It was just a year ago Thursday evening, at the annual meeting of the church that a letter was read from Rev. Edwin N. Hardy tendering his resignation. Rev. Mr. Hardy left shortly after and since then the church has been without a settled pastor, the pulpit being supplied by clergymen, who in a way were considered as possible candidates for the pastorate.

The matter of selecting a pastor was left to a committee and they have given the question careful consideration, and the recommendation that a call be extended to Rev. Mr. Willmott was the unanimous report of the committee made Thursday evening through its chairman Ernest W. Branch.

Mr. Branch said that the committee had carefully gone into the selection of a candidate and felt that in Mr. Willmott the problem had been solved. He was a very strong and able man among the people of his church and outside. He was also particularly strong among the young men of the church and was universally respected. When he went to the First church of Lowell six years ago the church had run down and although a large parish, the Sunday attendance was but 75. Now the church had regained its standing and was the leading church in Lowell

Rev. Mr. Willmott, he said, was born in England and is a graduate of the Bangor Theological seminary about 1897. He had one or two small parishes of a year or two each and then accepted a call at Townsend where he remained for five and a half years when he accepted the call to Lowell where he had been for the past six years and that he had been in the ministry for fifteen years.

The committee therefore recommended that a call be extended to Rev. M. Willmott at a salary of $2,200 a year with six weeks' vacation, the church also to pay his moving expenses to Quincy.

After he had made his report for the committee Mr. Branch made a formal motion to extend a call to Rev. Mr. Willmott. There was no opposition and when the motion was put to vote, the vote was unanimous. The attendance at the meeting was practically two hundred.

The question of a pastor settled, the moderator, Frank W. Crane called for reports. That of the clerk showed the membership of the church to be 470 a loss of 14 over the annual meeting of 1911. The treasurer's report showed a small deficiency for the year.

Reports of an encouraging nature were made by the several societies and organizations connected with the church work, all of which were of an encouraging nature and showed them to be in a flourishing condition. The report of the Bible school superintendent showed the membership of the school to be 353 with an average attendance for the year of 262. The smallest session was 51 which occurred in August and the largest 425 on Easter Sunday.

The next business was the election of officers of the church and while the ballots were being tabulated the budget was taken up.

The Finance committee's report showed the expenditure for the year 1911 to have been $4,632.86 and they recommended that the sum of $5,250 be raised for expenses of the current year. There was no attempt made to cut the budget and it went through unanimously as recommended by the committee.

OFFICERS FOR 1912.

The result of the election of officers was then announced as follows. It might also be added that in the choice of officers the meeting was fully as unanimous as in the consideration of other matters as there was no opposition to the officers nominated. The officers elected were as follows:—

Moderator—Frank W. Crane.

Deacons, for three years——Dr. C. T. Sherman, A. Fitch Bromley.

Deaconesses, for one year—Miss Amelia Bumpus, Mrs. Ernest W. Branch, Mrs. Charles Hayden, Mrs. Jane Murdock, Mrs. John Ross, Mrs. W. F. Sidelinger.

Clerk—John F. Hunt.

Treasurer—Charles W. Miller.

Auditor—Curtis W. Pierce.

Prudential Committee, for three years—H. Everett Crane.

Finance Committee, for three years—Victor E. Miller, Joseph P. Prout.

Music Committee—Mrs. Kate M. Keast, Mrs. Lucie Newcomb Emery.

Previous to the annual meeting the annual parish supper was served in the dining room.

OPPOSE THE COMMISSION

Representatives of Cities and Towns in District Take Action

VOTE UNANIMOUS

Councilman C. A. Ross of the Special Committee of the City Council on the question of the so-called Metropolitan Plan bill was present Wednesday evening at the meeting in the Old South Building, Boston, at which officers of several cities and towns in the district were present, and it was voted unanimously to oppose any plan for the formation of any new Metropolitan Commission. Others present at the meeting were F. D. Miller of Newton, J. W. Wattles of Canton, F. D. Merrill of Reading, Mr. Galiano of Hull, John D. Hardy and George A. Smith of Wellesley, Abner Morse and Thomas D. Mullen of Canton, George M. Sweetser and Thomas D. Coleman of Wellesley, Mr. Chickering of Dover, W. J. Dunbar and A. F. Barnes of Weymouth, Elias G. Hodgkin of Swampscott, Clarence A. Bunker of Wellesley, Nathan S. Fisher and Judge Bennett of Weston, W. O. Souther, Jr., of Cohasset.

Alfred L. Cutting of Weston was chairman and W. O. Souther, Jr., of Cohasset secretary of the meeting.

Judge Samuel C. Bennett of Weston said there are too many commissions in the Commonwealth, there being 60 of them, for which the towns and cities have to pay an exceedingly high tax, and that the appointment of a commission governing the cities and towns of the proposed district would only be one more burden.

W. O. Souther, Jr., a Selectman in Cohasset, said that the plan was a clever ruse on the part of Boston politicians and the Boston Chamber of Commerce, whereby Boston would be the chief gainer. He said that under the new plan, with the Mayor of Boston appointing two commissioners, it would be easy enough for Boston to control the commision.

Selectman John H. Chickering of Dover said that under the Metropolitan Commission Dover has not reaped any benefit. In 1908, with the beginning of the temporary commission, Dover's State tax rate for the Metropolitan district was $570, and it was then said by the commission that it would probably remain at the figure but in three years it increased to almost $6000.

Alfred A. Galiano of Hull said that during the last three years more than $6,000,000 worth of property has been taken from the people of Hull and that he would oppose any plans for the formation of a new district.

Councilman Ross said that he intended to fight the plan when it came up for consideration by the Quincy city council. He said that the bill had no provision as to where or in what proportion the $500,000 allowed annually should be spent and for this reason he believed that Boston would get 100 per cent of the improvements and that the other towns and cities would pay for it.

Samuel C. Bennett of Weston said that town had appointed a committee to oppose the bill. Personally he declared that he was opposed to the plan as a whole; that if it was a good thing to have planning for metropolitan Boston, 38 cities and towns then it would be a good thing for the entire state.

All the work of the planning commission called for by the bill, he said, could be done by other boards which exist at the present time, in conjunction with local boards and departments. He said these local authorities understood the conditions far better in their own localities than any commission ever would. He declared that in his opinion that such a commision as planned would not long act simply as an advisory committee after appointment. That they would soon be going to the legislature, declaring that such and such a town was stubborn and asking for power to go ahead and do some particular work which they deemed necessary, and charge up 65 per cent of the cost of such work to the town or city where the work was done.

ANNUAL OF CHRIST CHURCH

Officers Elected and Matter of Pew Rentals Discussed

REPORT

The annual parish meeting of Christ Church was held Wednesday evening in the parish house and was attended by a large number of the parishioners. Previous to the meeting the members of the vestry convened to perfect routine business, and incidentally to act favorably on the names of twenty-two candidates, who were later admitted to membership in the general society.

The resignations of Wesland W. Osburn, Edwin W. Newcomb and Albert L. Barbour, were accepted with regret. The latter resigned to accept the position of warden of the church.

All other business was dispensed with and the general meeting was in order with the pastor, Rev. Richard E. Armstrong as moderator and Roy Prout as clerk. The report of the clerk was read, showing the various movements as regards the parish during the past year, together with the accomplishments attained. The report of the treasurer, Walter E. Burke was read, giving the different expenditures and appropriations of the year, all of which were accepted.

The election of officers for the ensuing year took place and resulted as follows:

Warden—Albert L. Barbour.

Clerk—Roy Prout.

Treasurer—Walter F. Burke.

Vestrymen for two years—James H. Stedman, William H. Deacon, William H. Haslett, Archibald MacLeod, Charles E. Haskins.

Arch-Deaconry—William H. Deacon, Horace H. Bemis, Will S. Torrey.

After the election of officers the budget for 1912 was read, giving a detailed account of the financial prospects of the year, and setting forth as well the various amounts that would be needed in conducting the different affairs of the parish. This matter was given the most careful consideration.

The meeting was then thrown open for new business, which proved to be the occasion for much discussion. The main question resolved into a consideration of pew rent. It seems that the matter had been acted upon by the Vestry, and the decision was reached favoring the abolition of pew rent in the church. The matter was reconsidered, and on second action, it was voted to refer the matter to the general meeting in order that all parishioners might be afforded the opportunity of voting.

William L. Thomas read a somewhat extended report on the matter, setting forth at the same time much data, from which he deduced the argument that during the past five years, in accordance as the pew rents had dropped, the number of pledges had increased.

He concluded by stating that he deemed the pledge system the most advantageous and beneficial to the church. The matter called for much discussion on the question, in which Arthur L. Thomas, James H. Stedman, Walter E. Burke and William Walker participated.

Merton A. Turner at length proceeded to bring the debate to a close by offering a motion to the effect that the entire matter be referred back to the vestry committee. More discussion again was in evidence, and it took the prevailing amendment of James H. Stedman, who sought to have the matter referred to the next special meeting, to bring all discussion on the question to a close.

The matter of securing a larger membership was taken up and plans were immediately formulated for a "rapid fire membership campaign." The campaign is to be launched forth next Wednesday and every member is to put his shoulder to the wheel in order to bring about the desired results. Many members spoke on the movement at the meeting, and active steps were adopted to make up for the withdrawals and resignations of the past year. William L. Thomas and William Deacon spoke heartily in favor of the project and imparted much information relative to the means to be used.

Owing to the length of time consumed with these divers matters, the reading of the reports was deferred until the special meeting. The rector however managed to read his report, which showed the work he had undertaken and accomplished during the past year, the condition of the church and Sunday school, and the state of affairs in general. He urged the sincere co-operation of all parishioners, and predicted great success for the plans under contemplation this coming year.

At the adjournment of the meeting, a repast, consisting of sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, cake and frappe was served under the direction of the Women's Guild.

LITTLE CHILD MADE HAPPY

The spirit of helpfulness was demonstrated in a marked degree Wednesday when Police officer Geo. Phillips, who exercises authority in Quincy Square discovered a little 6-year old girl who seemed to be in a poverty stricken condition. The child was looking at a window of a store on Hancock street, evidently enjoying the window display with childlike enjoyment.

Officer Phillips who happened to be in the vicinity noticed the child, whose shoes were worn to a "frazzle" and whose toes were practically bare, her condition being most pathetic considering the coldness of the weather.

The affable policeman lost no time in aiding the little one. He sought information from the child and learned that her home conditions were most unfortunate. He then took her into the department Store and fitted her out in proper style. New stockings, shoes and other paraphranalia were secured, and the officer was prepared to pay for the outfit, when he was informed by the management that the child would be given the goods at the expense of the Company.

It is needless to say that the little girl was highly elated and it was doubtless one of the happiest days in her life. Officer Phillips then sought to help conditions at the home, where thanks were showered upon him for his charitable work.

WANTED BY THE QUINCY POLICE

Men Arrested in Boston for Three Breaks in Quincy

LOOT RECOVERED

The Quincy police are much interested in the arrest in Boston Wednesday afternoon of three Norwegians, charged with breaking and entering four houses in Lynn, as it is believed that they are the parties wanted for three breaks, or rather sneak thief larceny, in Quincy. The three men gave their names as Carl Carlson aged 32 years, Oscar Johnson aged 26 years and Charles Johnson aged 27 years. When their rooms in Boston were searched a half dozen dress suit cases were found filled with loot.

The places for which they are wanted in Quincy is for larceny of a gold watch from John Anderson at 112 School street, a silver watch from Andrew Fahey of Broadway, Quincy Point and of two coats and $40 in money from the house of Domenic McCormick of Spear street.

The police recovered the two watches in Boston pawnshops but the two coats and money have not been recovered.

The modus operandi of the two men was to apply for board and after looking at a room they would pay a week's board in advance, and thus secure a pass key to the house and use it to pay a visit to other rooms and steal whatever they could get their hands on.

In the case of the visit to the Spear street house the man claimed that he was employed as a draughtsman at the Fore River. He paid a week's board and secured a key promising to bring his trunk in a few days. The trunk did not come however but once in the house the fellow lost no time in helping himself to what he could find in trunks of other boarders.

It is said that within the past four months no less than 100 complaints of larcenies have been received, which the police attribute to the three men. Almost every day the chief of police of some nearby place telephoned to Boston Headquarters the fact of another lodging house robbery, and in each case the description of the robbers was the same. The reports were that either one or two light-haired young men of less than 30 years had hired a room and paid in advance and then broke into other rooms.

In one instance the thieves told a story that they had been directed to the house by the Norwegian consul, with whom they claimed to be very friendly. Again, they said they were deeply interested in investigating Sunday school work and had been directed to the place by some clergyman.

SHOWS GREATER POSSIBILITY

Result of Men and Religion Forward Movement Meeting

SUMMARY

"The Men and Religion Forward Movement has shown the greater possibility of service to men of the churches; it has outlined more effective organization; it has pointed out definite duties; it has inspired men with greater readiness to act; it has filled ministers with new hope; best of all, it betokens a new zeal and activity in all lines of religious work." These words give the conclusions of Rev. Herbert A. Manchester, D. D., one of the vice-chairmen of the Greater Boston Committee of One Hundred, representing the Presbyterian denomination, with regard to the Eight-Day Campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which has just closed in Boston. If to this graphic expression be added the words. "It was worth all we put into it," by Rev. H. Grant Person, a member of the Committee of One Hundred, representing the Congregational church, Boston's estimate of the Campaign, in a measure, may be understood.

A resume of the eight days secured from E. W. Peirce, executive secretary, indicates the scope of the Boston Campaign. Mr. Peirce, describing the series of meetings, said:

"Greater Boston was the largest city in which the national speakers have had a campaign up to this time. They had not before encountered a combination of about thirty towns united in a week's campaign for better manhood. It was a severer test, therefore, of the plan and method of the movement than had been given before. Realizing in some degree these conditions that national committee put into Boston two of their best teams. The conditions mentioned made it, accordingly, more difficult to prepare adequately all the churches for such a week, but to this end all that the Boston Comimttee felt it could do was done.

"The executive committee was gratified with the attendance throughout the week. On the 14th nearly two thousand men heard Fred B. Smith and Charles Stezle in the opening Sunday mass meetings. The 950 men who sat down at the banquet on the 15th, and were given the entire message of the Movement, spread the news very evidently among their fellow churchmen, thus supplementing

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH CALLS PASTOR

Unanimous Call Extended to Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of First Church, Lowell

Action Taken at Annual Meeting Last Evening. Other Business

OPPOSE THE COMMISSION

Representatives of Cities and Towns in District Take Action

VOTE UNANIMOUS

Councilman C. A. Ross of the Special Committee of the City Council on the question of the so-called Metropolitan Plan bill was present Wednesday evening at the meeting in the Old South Building, Boston, at which officers of several cities and towns in the district were present, and it was voted unanimously to oppose any plan for the formation of any new Metropolitan Commission. Others present at the meeting were F. D. Miller of Newton, J. W. Wattles of Canton, F. D. Merrill of Reading, Mr. Galiano of Hull, John D. Hardy and George A. Smith of Wellesley, Abner Morse and Thomas D. Mullen of Canton, George M. Sweetser and Thomas D. Coleman of Wellesley, Mr. Chickering of Dover, W. J. Dunbar and A. F. Barnes of Weymouth, Elias G. Hodgkin of Swampscott, Clarence A. Bunker of Wellesley, Nathan S. Fisher and Judge Bennett of Weston, W. O. Souther, Jr., of Cohasset.

Alfred L. Cutting of Weston was chairman and W. O. Souther, Jr., of Cohasset secretary of the meeting.

Judge Samuel C. Bennett of Weston said there are too many commissions in the Commonwealth, there being 60 of them, for which the towns and cities have to pay an exceedingly high tax, and that the appointment of a commission governing the cities and towns of the proposed district would only be one more burden.

W. O. Souther, Jr., a Selectman in Cohasset, said that the plan was a clever ruse on the part of Boston politicians and the Boston Chamber of Commerce, whereby Boston would be the chief gainer. He said that under the new plan, with the Mayor of Boston appointing two commissioners, it would be easy enough for Boston to control the commision.

Selectman John H. Chickering of Dover said that under the Metropolitan Commission Dover has not reaped any benefit. In 1908, with the beginning of the temporary commission, Dover's State tax rate for the Metropolitan district was $570, and it was then said by the commission that it would probably remain at the figure but in three years it increased to almost $6000.

Alfred A. Galiano of Hull said that during the last three years more than $6,000,000 worth of property has been taken from the people of Hull and that he would oppose any plans for the formation of a new district.

Councilman Ross said that he intended to fight the plan when it came up for consideration by the Quincy city council. He said that the bill had no provision as to where or in what proportion the $500,000 allowed annually should be spent and for this reason he believed that Boston would get 100 per cent of the improvements and that the other towns and cities would pay for it.

Samuel C. Bennett of Weston said that town had appointed a committee to oppose the bill. Personally he declared that he was opposed to the plan as a whole; that if it was a good thing to have planning for metropolitan Boston, 38 cities and towns then it would be a good thing for the entire state.

All the work of the planning commission called for by the bill, he said, could be done by other boards which exist at the present time, in conjunction with local boards and departments. He said these local authorities understood the conditions far better in their own localities than any commission ever would. He declared that in his opinion that such a commision as planned would not long act simply as an advisory committee after appointment. That they would soon be going to the legislature, declaring that such and such a town was stubborn and asking for power to go ahead and do some particular work which they deemed necessary, and charge up 65 per cent of the cost of such work to the town or city where the work was done.

ANNUAL OF CHRIST CHURCH

Officers Elected and Matter of Pew Rentals Discussed

REPORT

The annual parish meeting of Christ Church was held Wednesday evening in the parish house and was attended by a large number of the parishioners. Previous to the meeting the members of the vestry convened to perfect routine business, and incidentally to act favorably on the names of twenty-two candidates, who were later admitted to membership in the general society.

The resignations of Wesland W. Osburn, Edwin W. Newcomb and Albert L. Barbour, were accepted with regret. The latter resigned to accept the position of warden of the church.

All other business was dispensed with and the general meeting was in order with the pastor, Rev. Richard E. Armstrong as moderator and Roy Prout as clerk. The report of the clerk was read, showing the various movements as regards the parish during the past year, together with the accomplishments attained. The report of the treasurer, Walter E. Burke was read, giving the different expenditures and appropriations of the year, all of which were accepted.

The election of officers for the ensuing year took place and resulted as follows:

Warden—Albert L. Barbour.

Clerk—Roy Prout.

Treasurer—Walter F. Burke.

Vestrymen for two years—James H. Stedman, William H. Deacon, William H. Haslett, Archibald MacLeod, Charles E. Haskins.

Arch-Deaconry—William H. Deacon, Horace H. Bemis, Will S. Torrey.

After the election of officers the budget for 1912 was read, giving a detailed account of the financial prospects of the year, and setting forth as well the various amounts that would be needed in conducting the different affairs of the parish. This matter was given the most careful consideration.

The meeting was then thrown open for new business, which proved to be the occasion for much discussion. The main question resolved into a consideration of pew rent. It seems that the matter had been acted upon by the Vestry, and the decision was reached favoring the abolition of pew rent in the church. The matter was reconsidered, and on second action, it was voted to refer the matter to the general meeting in order that all parishioners might be afforded the opportunity of voting.

William L. Thomas read a somewhat extended report on the matter, setting forth at the same time much data, from which he deduced the argument that during the past five years, in accordance as the pew rents had dropped, the number of pledges had increased.

He concluded by stating that he deemed the pledge system the most advantageous and beneficial to the church. The matter called for much discussion on the question, in which Arthur L. Thomas, James H. Stedman, Walter E. Burke and William Walker participated.

Merton A. Turner at length proceeded to bring the debate to a close by offering a motion to the effect that the entire matter be referred back to the vestry committee. More discussion again was in evidence, and it took the prevailing amendment of James H. Stedman, who sought to have the matter referred to the next special meeting, to bring all discussion on the question to a close.

The matter of securing a larger membership was taken up and plans were immediately formulated for a "rapid fire membership campaign." The campaign is to be launched forth next Wednesday and every member is to put his shoulder to the wheel in order to bring about the desired results. Many members spoke on the movement at the meeting, and active steps were adopted to make up for the withdrawals and resignations of the past year. William L. Thomas and William Deacon spoke heartily in favor of the project and imparted much information relative to the means to be used.

Owing to the length of time consumed with these divers matters, the reading of the reports was deferred until the special meeting. The rector however managed to read his report, which showed the work he had undertaken and accomplished during the past year, the condition of the church and Sunday school, and the state of affairs in general. He urged the sincere co-operation of all parishioners, and predicted great success for the plans under contemplation this coming year.

At the adjournment of the meeting, a repast, consisting of sandwiches, coffee, ice cream, cake and frappe was served under the direction of the Women's Guild.

PHELPS TO BE ELECTROCUTED

By a Vote of Seven to One--Petition Denied

LAST HOPE GONE

The Governor's Council at a special session this morning ruled against Silas N. Phelps of Munroe Bridge, condemned to the electric chair for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Haskins, and he must die. The council were in session all the morning and it was not until 1.30 this afternoon that a decision was reached. It was given out at the state house that the vote stood seven to one against Phelps.

LITTLE CHILD MADE HAPPY

The spirit of helpfulness was demonstrated in a marked degree Wednesday when Police officer Geo. Phillips, who exercises authority in Quincy Square discovered a little 6-year old girl who seemed to be in a poverty stricken condition. The child was looking at a window of a store on Hancock street, evidently enjoying the window display with childlike enjoyment.

Officer Phillips who happened to be in the vicinity noticed the child, whose shoes were worn to a "frazzle" and whose toes were practically bare, her condition being most pathetic considering the coldness of the weather.

The affable policeman lost no time in aiding the little one. He sought information from the child and learned that her home conditions were most unfortunate. He then took her into the department Store and fitted her out in proper style. New stockings, shoes and other paraphranalia were secured, and the officer was prepared to pay for the outfit, when he was informed by the management that the child would be given the goods at the expense of the Company.

It is needless to say that the little girl was highly elated and it was doubtless one of the happiest days in her life. Officer Phillips then sought to help conditions at the home, where thanks were showered upon him for his charitable work.

WANTED BY THE QUINCY POLICE

Men Arrested in Boston for Three Breaks in Quincy

LOOT RECOVERED

The Quincy police are much interested in the arrest in Boston Wednesday afternoon of three Norwegians, charged with breaking and entering four houses in Lynn, as it is believed that they are the parties wanted for three breaks, or rather sneak thief larceny, in Quincy. The three men gave their names as Carl Carlson aged 32 years, Oscar Johnson aged 26 years and Charles Johnson aged 27 years. When their rooms in Boston were searched a half dozen dress suit cases were found filled with loot.

The places for which they are wanted in Quincy is for larceny of a gold watch from John Anderson at 112 School street, a silver watch from Andrew Fahey of Broadway, Quincy Point and of two coats and $40 in money from the house of Domenic McCormick of Spear street.

The police recovered the two watches in Boston pawnshops but the two coats and money have not been recovered.

The modus operandi of the two men was to apply for board and after looking at a room they would pay a week's board in advance, and thus secure a pass key to the house and use it to pay a visit to other rooms and steal whatever they could get their hands on.

In the case of the visit to the Spear street house the man claimed that he was employed as a draughtsman at the Fore River. He paid a week's board and secured a key promising to bring his trunk in a few days. The trunk did not come however but once in the house the fellow lost no time in helping himself to what he could find in trunks of other boarders.

It is said that within the past four months no less than 100 complaints of larcenies have been received, which the police attribute to the three men. Almost every day the chief of police of some nearby place telephoned to Boston Headquarters the fact of another lodging house robbery, and in each case the description of the robbers was the same. The reports were that either one or two light-haired young men of less than 30 years had hired a room and paid in advance and then broke into other rooms.

In one instance the thieves told a story that they had been directed to the house by the Norwegian consul, with whom they claimed to be very friendly. Again, they said they were deeply interested in investigating Sunday school work and had been directed to the place by some clergyman.

SHOWS GREATER POSSIBILITY

Result of Men and Religion Forward Movement Meeting

SUMMARY

"The Men and Religion Forward Movement has shown the greater possibility of service to men of the churches; it has outlined more effective organization; it has pointed out definite duties; it has inspired men with greater readiness to act; it has filled ministers with new hope; best of all, it betokens a new zeal and activity in all lines of religious work." These words give the conclusions of Rev. Herbert A. Manchester, D. D., one of the vice-chairmen of the Greater Boston Committee of One Hundred, representing the Presbyterian denomination, with regard to the Eight-Day Campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, which has just closed in Boston. If to this graphic expression be added the words. "It was worth all we put into it," by Rev. H. Grant Person, a member of the Committee of One Hundred, representing the Congregational church, Boston's estimate of the Campaign, in a measure, may be understood.

A resume of the eight days secured from E. W. Peirce, executive secretary, indicates the scope of the Boston Campaign. Mr. Peirce, describing the series of meetings, said:

"Greater Boston was the largest city in which the national speakers have had a campaign up to this time. They had not before encountered a combination of about thirty towns united in a week's campaign for better manhood. It was a severer test, therefore, of the plan and method of the movement than had been given before. Realizing in some degree these conditions that national committee put into Boston two of their best teams. The conditions mentioned made it, accordingly, more difficult to prepare adequately all the churches for such a week, but to this end all that the Boston Comimttee felt it could do was done.

"The executive committee was gratified with the attendance throughout the week. On the 14th nearly two thousand men heard Fred B. Smith and Charles Stezle in the opening Sunday mass meetings. The 950 men who sat down at the banquet on the 15th, and were given the entire message of the Movement, spread the news very evidently among their fellow churchmen, thus supplementing

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Special from New York: Ten per cent of the married couples failed to apply for a divorce last week.

Mr. Taft's economy message favors labor saving devices. He seems to forget that this would reduce the number of offices.

Uncle Sam says Cuba must maintain a stable government. But under a stable government only a small portion of the population can hold office.

After hearing from Secretary Knox that she must be good, we trust Cuby will spend less time in the cafes and more in the cane fields.

If the senators wanted the peace treaty debates thoroughly reported, they should have closed up their doorgs and stumped the reporters to get it.

It would seem as if the debate on the peace treaties and the tariff should stop for a few days, so as to give President Taft a chance to shake hands with the high school tourists.

Every one is trying to smoke out Mr. Roosevelt, but any one who ever pursued Brer Groundhog knows that much smoke goes into the eyes of the pursuers and very little into the hole.

Watterson says Gov. Wilson is a school-master, and he seems to think, that as examination day is soon coming, Col. Harvey should have been allowed to practice speaking his piece.

The cold waves have been severe and have extended unusually far south, but why should anyone complain when you can always get warm by going to bed?

The employers' liability decision shows that Teddy Roosevelt is quite a lawyer. Next time our fighting editor is complained of for assault and battery, we advise him to give Mr. Roosevelt a job.

The Irish players having been bombarded with eggs and summoned into court at Philadelphia, their receipts at the box office ought to be good for another month from this good advertising.

Socialist Congressman Berger is pushing the woman suffrage amendment although the women generally would prefer to have the Socialists stop agitating and devote their time to supporting their families.

The sufferings of citizens who try to borrow a million of the Money Power were sympathetically treated before the Congress committee, but the plight of the man who wants a loan of ten dollars to pay his fuel bill was overlooked.

THE GULLIBLE PUBLIC.

Safe breaking and second story burglary are getting to be an obsolete method of crime. They bear the same relation to Twentieth century swindling that old fashioned handwork does to modern labor saving machinery.

The report just presented by R. S. Sharp, chief post office inspector, says that the gullible American public gave up $77,000,000 last year to Get Rich Quick men.

The ease with which these gentlemen work the Great American Sucker is simply astounding. A Canaan of financial milk and honey lies before the man who possesses nerve, imagination, and a five dollar bill.

One favorite method of making a million on five dollars is to organize a company to promote a summer resort or suburban colony near some large city. You get an option on some abandoned farm. No cash need be paid, the liberal allotment in the stock of the dream company is enough. You get some impecunious draftsman to draw plans of a hotel and cottages. A few shares of stock requites him.

The first expenditure of cash other than a few postage stamps, comes when you walk up to a newspaper office and insert an advertisement in "Business Opportunities." This may cost you the sum of one dollar. You advertise for some gentleman with $10,000 to join you in a conservative enterprise paying five hundred per cent. From the many replies you will get enough cash to take a suite of rooms in the best hotel in the city, establish a fat bank deposit, acquire financial testimonials, and incorporate your company. Fifty per cent of the sale of shares goes to advertising, and fifty per cent you can salt away in some bank in Buenos Ayres or Melbourne.

The post office even more than the newspapers is the means by which this modern safe breaking is performed. Mailing lists, technically known as "sucker lists" consisting of names of people who have money but no financial judgment, have been valued at $100,000 by these people. Some of them send out two hundred and fifty letters each to as many as ten thousand persons.

The moral of all this—for the farmer, the mechanic, the widow with the life insurance policy, is—Don't buy any kind of stock or bonds unless your home banker says it is all right.

BUYING SUBSTANTIAL GOODS.

One of the principal differences between retail business in such a town as ours, and the business of the great metropolitan department store, is the substantial character of the stock which the home merchant keeps.

The merchant who depends on the patronage of his townspeople must keep his customers satisfied or lose his trade. He rarely puts an article in his stock unless it will stand the strain of wear.

The great metropolitan store, on the contrary, uses an enormous amount of second grade goods. They have to offer an appearance of unusual bargains in order to get people to buy by mail order, or under the inconveniences of a great department store. The margin is not greater than their tremendous expense for rentals, catalogues, and high salaries. Consequently they give orders for a selected class of second grade goods, which can be finished to please the eye, but have serious defects!

The tendency to consider price at the expense of quality has built up the great mail order houses, but the vogue that it has given to shoddy goods is one of the causes of high cost of living. Better buy at home, where the merchant will tell you just what an article is.

TROUBLE IN CUBA.

There are ructions again in the self government kindergarten which Uncle Samuel has been maintaining in Cuba. The old gentleman has had to come in with the ruler, and suggest that the privilege of naming their own teacher may be removed from these political infants, unless they mind their books.

One great trouble is that the number of ex-generals of the army of independence far exceeds the number of offices available for distribution.

This however, tends to create sentiment against annexation to the United States, which is favored by few except the foreign residents and American property interests. The Cuban leaders realize perfectly that if attached to the United States, the high salaried offices would nearly all go the Americans. This of course would be a shocking blow to the principles of liberty.

The essential trouble is temperamental. When an American is removed from office or is beaten at election, he either quits politics and goes to work for his living, or he proceeds to build his fences higher and tighter. He prepares himself better for the high art of statesmanship by more devoted attendance at picnics and clambakes.

The Cuban, on the contrary, under such conditions sits up later at the wine-shop, he drinks deeper, he accumulates guns in cellars, and in low tones on shady corners he and other dark faced patriots arrange the details of revolutions which may or may not see the light of day.

Of course it would be too much to expect that the reform by hurricane which the alert mind of Leonard Wood applied to Cuban life could begin to remove all the real evils from which Cuba still suffers. The trouble is not wholly that Cuba has been forbidden to engage in the South American sport of revolution, nor that she has been told that she must acquire the un—Latin habit of paying debts. Her European market for her industries was principally destroyed by the war with Spain. The twenty per cent reduction in the American tariff made for her benefit did not wholly restore prosperity. We have put a man's clothes of self government on a small boy, and it will take a number of years for him to grow up to them.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Exhibit of pictures.

A most interesting collection of pictures is on exhibition at the library until January 29. They are reproductions of famous modern German, Austrian, Italian, and Spanish paintings, and are original etchings by William Unger. In speaking of his work, Philip Gilbert Hamerton in his "Etching and etchers," says:

"It is difficult, in an age which has produced half-a-dozen artist engravers of the very highest rank, to say which of them is king; but if any critic were to give the supreme station to Unger he might maintain his decision by the argument that this artist has etched more plates of uniformly good quality than any one else, whilst a few of his finest works, taken separately will bear comparison with the finest of those other distinguished interpretations of pictures we have already studied."

COFFEE PARTY.

The ninth annual reunion and coffee party of the St. Francis church, South Braintree, was held in Long's hall, Braintree, Wednesday evening, with an attendance of fully 600 people. The surrounding towns and cities were well represented and besides the resident priests, Rev. M. F. McDonnell and Rev. A. J. Fitzgerald were noticed Rev. John J. Coan and Rev. John J. Casey of Quincy, also Rev. John P. Cuffe and Rev. James McNiff of Atlantic.

At eight o'clock a delightful entertainment was presented beginning with a finely rendered piano solo by Mrs. C. A. Sullivan. There were some very cleverly executed Scotish dances by wee Miss MacDonald and some sprightly character songs by Miss Madeline McGlincy of Brockton. Miss Mary Leahy of Randolph sang "The Nightingale" superbly.

The hit of the evening was made by the talented and versatile reader Miss Agnes Hyde. Her rendering of "Tam O'Shanter" by Robert Burns was excellent and her impersonation entitled "Exhibition day in School" nearly put the audience into hysterics. She is an artiste and her readings always please. Fred Goodnow contributed to the pleasure of the evening by his cornet solos.

After some selections by Dennehy's orchestra, the floor was cleared and dancing was enjoyed until midnight. The floor was in charge of Moses H. McGaughey assisted by Dr. C. A. Sullivan, James H. Cuff, Joseph Shay, Lucien Gaudreau, Thomas Gallahue, Ray King, Edward V. Heffernan, Arthur Levangie, Daniel Ahern, George B. McClellan, Leo Dennehy, Joseph H. Mohan, Henry Barnes.

The following ladies constituted the refreshment committee: Mrs. John Dennehy, Mrs. Elizabeth Barnes, Mrs. Patrick King, Miss Mary Finnegan, Miss Mary Regan, Miss Josie Colbert, Miss Kate O'Connell, Mrs. C. A. Sullivan, Miss Rosabel Kelly, Miss Annie Sullivan, Miss Belle Frazier, Mrs. Philip Krohn, Mrs. Patrick Gilbride, Mrs. David Buchanan, Mrs. Louis Brow, Mrs. Jerry Gallivan, Mrs. Silver, Mrs. Daniel Ahern, Mrs. John Kirby, Mrs. Thomas McLoughlin, Mrs. Josephine O'Brien and Mrs. Frank Sweeney. Ice cream and cake were on sale during the evening.

The entertainment was arranged by Rev. M. F. McDonnell, Rev. A. J. Fitzgerald and Mrs. C. A. Sullivan. The committee of arrangements was as follows: Edward Shay, Daniel Reardon, John Cuff, William Burrell, John W. Mulcahy, Dr. C. A. Sullivan, J. F. Connors, John B. Crowe, James H. Lane, George D. Finnegan, John Condon, Fred Frazier, Thomas Killian, B. A. McCormick, William Levangie, Joseph Levangie, John H. Sullivan, Philip H. Sullivan, Philip F. Sullivan, Daniel Ahern, Michael Sullivan, Edward J. Sullivan, William Madden, John M. Connell, Robert Finnegan, James Levangie.

Had a Practical Mind.

An English Sabbath school teacher was laboring away on the subject of eternal punishment. One small girl sat so entranced by her lurid descriptions of fire and brimstone that the teacher was much encouraged until transfixed by the explanatory question of: "Please, teacher, what becomes of all the smoke?"

HADLEY GOES TO ROOSEVELT

Wants to Be His Running Mate on National Ticket

OPENLY DESERTS PRESIDENT

Defection of Governor of Missouri Considered Evidence That He Picks Ex-President as Winner—Had Been Talked of as Candidate For Vice Presidency With Taft—Sharp Campaign For Delegates Has Begun

Washington, Jan. 25.—Governor Hadley of Missouri is making a direct bid for a ticket of Roosevelt and Hadley, in the opinion of thoroughly well-informed men who read the announcement if the Missouri governor's appeal for Roosevelt votes in his state. The governor has had some controversies with the Taft men in Missouri over various appointments, which have sharpened his desire to align himself with Roosevelt. He is a natural insurgent, and a year or so ago the Kansas City Star instituted the Hadley boom for president. This failed to make much progress and eventually was dropped.

About two months ago Hadley visited Washington and his friends put in some good work for him as a candidate for the vice presidency with Taft. The proposition was well received by the Taft men and the governor went back with the understanding that Missouri would support him loyally for the vice presidency and do what she could for Hadley in other states without causing too much friction. This was the understanding alike of the governor and the Taft men of his state.

About two weeks ago reports came from Missouri that Hadley was talking Roosevelt, and some ten days ago the friends of the president became assured in their own minds that before long the governor would desert the president for the ex-president. They were not surprised, therefore, to learn that Hadley had given out a statement at Jefferson City favoring the nomination of Roosevelt and indicating that in the governor's opinion "a large majority of the Republicans of Missouri" prefer Roosevelt to Taft.

Governor Hadley's defection is regarded as serious to the Taft cause for several reasons, chief of which is that it shows clearly that the shrewd Hadley has picked Roosevelt as a winner. The Taft men do not deny that the governor will have a strong following in his own state. They expect a hard fight in Missouri, with probable loss of part of the Missouri delegation. They do not concede, however, that the governor can take the state away from them.

The contest for delegates to the national convention is beginning all along the line. It will grow in intensity during the next two months. The Taft people here profess to be greatly pleased with the outlook. They say that their advices from every section of the country lead them to believe that the president will be very generally indorsed.

In some well informed quarters there is still the expectation that Roosevelt will make a statement within the next two or three weeks. Many of his admirers here at the Capitol say that he cannot afford to work under cover for delegates.

PERKINS A PROGRESSIVE

But He Denies Doing Certain Things In Behalf of Roosevelt

New York, Jan. 25.—The widespread discussion of the activities of George W. Perkins in promoting a popular demand for the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for president has induced Perkins to define his position.

While avowing himself a believer "in progressive Republican principles," he denies he has been doing the things as a manager of the Roosevelt propaganda which it has been common talk in Washington he was doing.

He denies the prosecution of the steel trust has made any difference in his attitude toward President Taft, or that he has sent for leaders of the state delegations and offered them all the money they might need in swinging their delegations to Roosevelt.

Perkins apparently does not deny his keen interest in the Roosevelt movement, or that he is doing what he thinks he properly can do in his own way to advance it.

Q.—"Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."—Exodus xxii, 18. From this expression would we not understand that the writers of the Scriptures believed in the existence of witches? What is a witch? (F. C.)

Answer.—Throughout the world today there are thousands and millions of people who firmly believe in what is known as "Spiritism." Among those who thus believe are some of the brightest minds of the day—doctors, lawyers, judges, professors, etc., a class of people who would not be deceived by mere sleight-of-hand performances, or by hallucinations. These know that it is possible to communicate with beings of the spiritual realm, through the aid of spirit mediums, clairaudiants, clairvoyants, and the like—the modern wizards and witches. Few recognize that every one of these spirit beings who thus communicate with members of the race of mankind are of the demons, or fallen angels—evil spirits—whose sole aim and purpose is to deceive the members of the race by impersonating the dead, and representing that they are the spirits of the departed ones. The Sacred Writers certainly recognized the existence of the demons, and of the witches (spirit medium) of their day.

NOVELTIES IN LIPPINCOTT'S

The argumentative-minded will find ample grounds for heated discussion in the February Lippincott's complete novel—"With Modern Weapons," by Clinton Dangerfield. "Is a gentleman ever justified in breaking his pledged word?" "Does the plea that 'all's fair in love and war' afford Endicott any excuse for making use of his 'modern weapons'?" These and other questions are bound to come up in the minds of readers, and it is hard to forecast whether the majority will vote pro or con. We won't give the plot of this very original story—except to say that, through the machinations of a rival, the hero finds himself in a peculiar and unenviable situation. It's a swift moving and dramatic tale, entirely different from the typical conventional novel.

There are two remarkable special articles. "Our Foreign Service," by W P. Vaux, gives a resume of our diplomatic service since its inception, and offers many sensible suggestions towards its betterment. "Charles Dickens and Women" is a posthumous paper by the late H. Snowden Ward, who was a vice-president of the Dickens Fellowship, special commissioner from the Fellowship to the United States and Canada, and author of "The Real Dickens Land," a book widely known among admirers of the great novelist.

AMERICANS IN DANGER

Summoned to Take Refuge In Our Legation at Pekin

Tientsin, Jan., 25.—A battle between imperial tropps stationed in Pekin and the bodyguard of Premier Yuan Shi Kai is imminent. Fearing for their safety, United States Minister Calhoun last evening summoned all the American residents of the capital to the legation, advising them to remain there for the time being.

The friction between the Manchu troops of the imperial army and Yuan Shi Kai's force of Chinese troops is constantly increasing, and a serious conflict may be precipitated at any moment.

STILL HOLDS PRISONERS

Italy Says She Acted Within Her Rights In Manouba Incident

Rome, Jan. 25.—The detention of twenty-nine Turks, said to be members of the Red Crescent society, by the Italian authorities, who captured them on the French steamer Manouba, was fully discussed by Premier Giolitti, Foreign Minister Giuliano and the French ambassador to Italy, Camille Barrere.

The conferences are said to have been cordial, but the Turks are still under arrest at Cagliari, island of Sardinia.

Italy maintains her right to capture and search ships of neutral nations suspected of carrying contraband of war. This has been the course followed not only with French steamers but with British, German and Austrian vessels. Italy does not admit any limitation of that right. It is her intention to protect her army before the enemy.

A GREAT SACRIFICE TO SHIELD A WOMAN

Man Who Asserts Innocence Took Thirty-Year Sentence

New York, Jan. 25.—The plea of Fenike E. Brandt, one time valet of Mortimer L. Schiff, serving a thirty-year term at Dannemora prison for burglary and murderous assault on Schiff, for a pardon is being considered by Governor Dix and District Attorney Whitman.

Brandt bases his plea for clemency on the remarkable ground that he committed no crime, but took a plea of guilty and has served five years of his sentence in silence to protect the name of a woman member of Schiff's household.

Judge Rosalsky sentenced Brandt to thirty years' imprisonment, a very heavy sentence for a man so young and who made a plea of guilty to a first offense. Without complaint Brandt accepted the sentence and went to prison.

He now claims his lawyer promised that he would only get a year's sentence and that he was willing to accept such a sentence in order to shield the name of a woman in Schiff's household.

RIGHTS OF FUNERALS

Secondary to Those of Living Persons, According to Judge

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 25.—The living should have more consideration than the dead, according to Judge Utley of the district court.

When the case of Leo Bibeau, 16 years old, who was arrested for driving a team through the funeral procession of the late William H. Dexter on Main street came before the court, he was at once discharged.

According to the judge, funerals have no rights on main thoroughfares.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

The two committees which are investigating the problem of vocational training from the standpoint of the interests of the girls and boys of this city have almost completed their work. The committee of men will hold its last meeting tonight in all probability and the committee of women will consider their report next Monday. Both reports are quite likely to be ready for the next regular meeting of the School Committee. Many meetings have been held by each committee, representing a great deal of time devoted to this problem by a company of busy and responsible men and women. It is hoped that as the adoption of the recommendation will entail a small expense that it may prove advisable and practicable to take up the matter at the opening of the next school year in September.

The new half year of school will open on Monday next and first grades will be formed for entering pupils in all the schools of the city. While the midyear class will be considerably smaller than the September class it will probably be considerably larger than that of last year. It is interesting to note that the system of semi-annual promotions and semi-annual admission to schools is making rapid headway. Already a number of other cities of Massachusetts have taken the matter up and in the last report of the Chicago schools Supt. Ella F. Young speaks of the fact that it has now been adopted in nearly every district in that city and has brought with it a marked increase in efficiency and decrease in amount of time lost by retardation. In Quincy, the system is gradually working up through the grades and will finally result in 16 half year grades below the high school instead of 8 as under the old system. As these grades do not change teachers oftener than once a year there is no more loss from that source than under the old system.

ADAMS SCHOOL.

That the foreign population of Quincy is interested in its educational advantages is shown by the following facts: At the Adams Evening school 358 pupils were enrolled; of this number 19 different nationalities were represented of which only 8 were of American birth.

CRANCH SCHOOL.

The Parents' and Teachers' Association have been presented with twelve dozen sherbet cups and twelve dozen chocolate cups by one of the parents.

Mrs. Louis R. Doane of New London, until recently a teacher in the school was a visitor at the building on Tuesday.

ATHERTON HOUGH.

The new half year will find the Atherton Hough school primary grades filled to overflowing. There are already fifty pupils in the primary rooms and the new class is expected to bring this number up to about sixty-five, thus entailing the employment of an additional teacher.

PARENTS' MEETING.

It is interesting to observe that the parents in the Quincy school district are making a move to organize an association in that school and it is expected that a preliminary meeting will be held within a short time.

MASS. FIELDS SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the Mass. Fields Parents'-Teachers' Association will be held Thursday evening, Feb. 1, at 7:30 o'clock. Mr. Charles H. Johnson of Quincy will give a stereopticon lecture on Historic Quincy. A double quartet will furnish the music. The pupils of grade VIII, will be the guests of the association. An invitation is to be extended also to the members of the Wollaston Association. A very enjoyable evening is anticipated.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL.

A meeting of the Executive committee of the Wollaston Parents' Association will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Pinkham, Friday evening, Jan. 26, to arrange for the next meeting, Feb. 12. It is hoped that the next meeting may be held in the new school Hall.

Work is progressing rapidly at the new school building. During the past week, the desks and chairs have been put in place, also the teachers' desks and tables, and the seats in the assembly hall.

The electric clock system has been connected and in running order. The clock on the front of the building is much appreciated by people passing by.

The chief question now, asked by everybody is, "When are they going into the new building?"

WILLARD SCHOOL.

At the candy sale held at the Willard school, Monday, about thirty dollars was made.

Mr. Henry L. Upton of the Willard school is planning to invite the parents of that district to attend a meeting in the school building to be held in the school building the latter part of next month.

MORE HOLIDAYS ARE WANTED

Hearings were held at the State House Wednesday on the bills to have three more legal holidays in Massachusetts. The dates of the proposed holidays are New Year's day, March 17 and June 17. The only one on which there was any opposition was that of March 17.

CALL ACCEPTED.

Word has been received by the Calvary Baptist church that Rev. John L. Crane, of Wakefield, to whom a call was extended some weeks ago has accepted the call, and will assume the pastorate Feb. 1.

GERMAN MUSIC.

Wherein It Is Said to Surpass That of All Other Nations.

Hans von Buelow's remark that "Italy was the cradle of music and remained the cradle" was, of course, not intended to be taken literally, but simply as a witty exaggeration of an obvious truth. Italy gave the world the first operas, oratorios, cantatas, overtures, sonatas and most of the ecclesiastical forms, and in course of time it furnished master works in all these styles of musical architecture; yet it remained for the composers of Germany to write the most elaborate and fully developed specimens in each case.

Italy can show no choral works equal to Bach's "St. Matthew Passion" or Handel's "Messiah;" no overture equal to those of half a dozen German masters; no songs equal to those of Schubert, Schumann or Franz; no operas like Wagner's; no symphonies like Beethoven's; no pianoforte pieces like Schubert's, Beethoven's or Schumann's.

On these points there can be no dispute whetever, and that is why Germany is now universally conceded to be the chief musical nation, even by those whose personal taste impels them to favor particular examples of Italian, French or Russian music. The greatest masters of Italy, France and Russia have been unanimous in looking up to the German masters as their masters—as the men to whose influence they largely owed their own education and development. — From Etude.

HE WAS CONSERVATIVE.

The Old Man Bitterly Opposed New Fangled Methods.

In Pennsylvania not many years ago dwelt the descendants of an ancient German settler. The farm had descended for generations from father to son, and the original customs had been faithfully adhered to. But a youth was born to the family who had inspired some of the modern racial ideas and was likely to come into conflict with his father's stolid conservatism.

One day Johannes was told to saddle the horse and take the grist to the mill. It had been the practice from time immemorial to place the grist in one end of the bag and a large stone in the other end to balance it, and so throw it across the horse's back. But Johannes on the present occasion managed to get the grist divided between the two ends of the bag, so that there was no need of the stone.

"Oh, daddy, come and see! There ain't no use for the stone."

The old gentleman calmly surveyed the device, and with a severely reproachful aspect remarked to his exulting son:

"Johannes, your fader, your grandfader and your great-grandfader all went to de mill wid de stone in one end of de bag und de grist in de odder. Und you, a mere poy, sets yourself up to know more as dey do. Yust put dat stone in de bag and never lets me hear no more of such foolishness as dat."—Life.

Ant Strength.

An English scientist weighed a small ant and a dead grasshopper which it was dragging to its nest. The weight of the grasshopper was found to be sixty times greater than that of the ant. The force exerted by the ant in dragging the grasshopper along the road was therefore proportionately equal to that of a man weighing 150 pounds pulling a load of four and one-half tons or a horse of 1,200 pounds a load of thirty-six tons.

RELIGION FORWARD

the publicity work and causing large audiences to gather during the remainder of the week.

"The convention Tuesday and Wednesday, at which nearly 600 men were registered, brought, in addition to several hundred from Boston, nearly 200 from auxiliary cities.

"The noon meetings were attended throughout the five days by about 500 men per day.

"We are informed that only one city has surpased Boston in the attendance per day at the Institutes. Boston averaged 491 per day..

"The evening and Sunday afternoon platform meetings, of which there were 59, while not large ones were made up of representative men, eager for information, plans and methods, as shown by their willingness to stay for instruction or discussion frequently from 30 to 60 minutes after the announced closing time.

"The older boys' banquet, on Friday evening, with 550 present, far surpassed anything of its kind held previously in Boston. The Older Boys' Conference, the extension meetings for boys in stores, schools and other places, and the ten boys' meetings Sunday afternoon, the 21st, were especially successful features of a total of thirty boys' Work meetings attended by 5,300.

"Sixteen Community Extension meetings in shops, factories and on shipboard; meetings among college men, and special meetings for mothers on boy training, were among the most effective gatherings of the week.

"Large numbers of boys and men took a forward step on the last Sunday afternoon, many of them deciding for the first time to live a Christian life. Others pledged themselves for real Christian service in larger measure.

"In all, 179 meetings were held during the week. The aggregate attendance was 27,500. This record surpasses all other aggregates reported thus far in the National Campaign by more than 5,000."

Mr. Peirce's summary indicates in outline the varied activities of the eight-day campaign. The closing meeting of the campaign, Jan. 21st, was an occasion never to be forgotten by those who participated.

Within 48 hours of the actual close of the Campaign reports began to arrive at the office of the executive secretary, indicating that the Campaign had begun to bear notable fruit. In fact, in some cases, reports of practical plans adopted were received before the final meeting. The suggestions for conservation made by the National leaders and left in printed form including plans in minute detail, were at once made available for every churchman within a radius of 10 miles of Boston. Possibly the earliest report to come in regarding definite conservation work was that from a church in a rapidly changing residential district of Boston. It announced that a man had offered funds to establish a secretaryship for Boys' Work in the parish.

Another report, which came from a suburb 10 miles from Boston, said that a local committee had been formed of the committees of five from the churches of that locality to bring about a cessation of the sale of cigarettes to minors and the closing of a public dance hall, both of which evils were felt to be, perhaps the greatest existing in the community. The concensus of opinion from ministers, laymen, newspaper writers, and individuals, seems to be that it was successful beyond anticipation, and, if carefully followed up, especially in every local church, and if extended as soon as posible to a large number of auxiliary cities, will acocmplish more for men and for God than any other effort thus far made in Greater Boston."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The report of the Superintendent of Schools for the month of December shows the total number enrolled to have been 5,605, and the average daily atendance 5,245.2.

GRAFTERS SENTENCED

Millionaire Political Boss and Others Enter an Appeal

Mays Landing, N. J., Jan. 25.—Louis Kuehnle, millionaire Republican boss of Atlantic City, who was convicted of unlawfully participating in the awarding of a contract to a company in which he was interested while he was a member of the Atlantic City water commission, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment at hard labor and to pay a fine of $1000.

Thomas McDevitt and George Amole, convicted of violating election laws in Atlantic City, were sentenced to six months and three months in jail respectively, and to pay the costs of prosecution.

John Answorth, Harry May and Frank Enderlin, who were convicted of accepting money for granting road contracts, were given one year each in the penitentiary.

An attorney who represented all of the defendants filed an appeal with the court of errors at Trenton and asked that the men be admitted to bail, which was granted.

FOSS URGES MERGER

Favors Consolidation of State Departments in Massachusetts

Boston, Jan. 25.—Governor Foss, in a special message sent to the legislature in the form of an installment of the state budget, urges the need of economy and efficiency in the public service of the commonwealth, and recommends, in line with those policies, the consolidation of the state forestry and fisheries and game departments, and the consolidation of the metropolitan parks, water works and water and sewerage departments. The latter recommendation, he says, is also in line with the Greater Boston movement.

The governor recommends appropriations amounting to $2,046,312.90 for the maintenance of various state departments. Not a single cut is made in the amounts asked for by any department.

PLANS AUTO TRIP IN JUNGLES OF AFRICA

Missionary Tjader Will Combine Evangelism With Sport

New York, Jan. 25.—Richard Tjader, noted as a missionary and a big game hunter, sailed on the steamer George Washington for Cherbourg, where he will begin a sixteen months' evangelical tour of the world in an automobile.

His missionary trip will take him to Africa, and during the intervals in his evangelical work he will seize every opportunity to lift the burden of life from any lion, tiger or dik-dik that happens to venture across his path.

Tjader will be accompanied by his wife. Tjader believes when he attempts to instill religion into the cynical natives of unenlightened settlements the sight of the automobile will swing these natives around to the decision that there are many things they could very easily learn without suffering injury.

INTEGRITY OF THE PRESS

Blease's Attack Upon It Is Expunged by State Legislature

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 25.—The South Carolina house of representatives, after a session that lasted a large part of the night, adopted a report recommending that most of Governor Blease's veto message on the so-called libel bill be expunged from the journal of the house.

The vote to expunge the portions of the message reflecting on the integrity of the press of the state was 86 to 26. The governor made frequent use of the words "dirty," "lie," "scurrilous" and "cowardly," and denounced the newspapers generally.

ROAD BLAMES TRAINMEN

Wreck In Which Four Officials Were Killed Due to Negligence

Chicago, Jan. 25.—Negligence on the part of three trainmen contributed to the Illinois Central wreck at Kinmundy, Ills., Sunday night, in which J. T. Harahan, former president of that line, and three other railroad officials were killed, an investigating committee declared here.

Yellow Jack Kills Naval Officer

Washington, Jan. 25.—A dispatch from Guayaquil, Ecuador, to the navy department says that Commander L. C. Bertolette, commanding the Yorktown, and Clarence W. Wood, a seaman on the same vessel, died of yellow fever.

Revere May Join Hub

Boston, Jan. 25.—The house of representatives concurred with the senate for the admission of the bill providing for the annexation of Revere to the city of Boston. The bill was referred to the committee on metropolitan affairs.

WANTED BY POLICE

The first trace the police of Boston got of them was about three days ago, when Carlson went into a place in the South End and was seen to sell a watch for $1.50, giving his name as Hans Anderson. Inspector Shields for weeks had been recovering stolen property that had been sold in the South End, but at no time could the identity of the men be gained.

Shields, Hart and Conway followed the man who had sold the watch to a house in Grenville place. The police learned that two other young men were generally in his company. Then the officers set up a watch which lasted until it met with success by the arrest of the three men.

The men were seen to leave a Worcester car in Park square, and just before their arrest at the Grenville place room half a dozen dress suit cases were found. A quantity of property found in the room was put into the bags and taken with the men to Police Headquarters. The three were booked on the charge of breaking and larceny from dwelling houses and later were turned over to Lynn officers, who took them to that city.

Johnson wore a fashionably made three-button suit and an overcoat bearing the name of a Newark, N. J., tailor. He had $35 in his pockets, a long leather bill fold, false keys, a gold watch and chain with seal charm attached, the watch alone being worth at least $125.

Johnson had a round silver box filled with snuff, skeleton keys, a gold scarf pin and a scarf holder made of gold and engraved with the initial "G."

Carlson had $3, a gold scarf pin, a lady's silver penknife and a meerschaum pipe from which the ornament had been broken.

The men talked in broken English, but refused to say anything about their work in Boston or vicinity. Johnson wanted Inspector Douglas to give him a receipt for the money taken from him and when this or the money was refused he asked that he might be given a small amount of change.

The police of Cambridge have at least six charges against these men, and there are charges of breaking and entering against them in Waltham, Brookline, Newton, Somerville, Worcester, Quincy and Spencer. Much property stolen in these places has already been recovered in Boston. The police have recovered altogether about $2000 worth of property.

FOSS GETS NEW EVIDENCE

Phelps' Sentence May Be Commuted to Life Imprisonment

Boston, Jan. 25.—New evidence received late last night has given Governor Foss renewed hope that his executive council will vote to commute the sentence of Silas N. Phelps from death to imprisonment for life. That evidence is to be placed before the council at its session today. A decided shift in sentiment is expected.

The case of Phelps seemed hopeless when the hearing opened yesterday afternoon. But the floodgates of powerful testimony were opened. New facts threw their light upon the case of the unfortunate man.

The governor began at once to probe more deeply for the inside story of the dramatic scene in the jury room where all but two of the jurors were against murder in the first degree, then all but one were against murder in the first degree, but the remaining juror was able to stay until the other eleven went over to the first degree verdict.

MAY REACH ALL NEW ENGLAND

Settlement of Lawrence Strike Appears Far Away

MILL OWNERS BREAK PROMISE

Peace Conference Breaks Up When Their Representatives Say They Have No Authority to Confer Directly With Strikers' Committee—City Filled With Clamor of Excitement Over Mammoth Parades and Arrival of Haywood—Strike Takes on Ominous Aspect Under Joint Leadership of Haywood and Ettor—Marchers Jeer at Soldiers

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 25.—The conference which it was firmly believed would bring the representatives of the 20,000 strikers and the mill owners to some sort of understanding, and lead to an early settlement of the strike, and which was held at the office of Mayor Scanlon last night, in reality only widened the breach between the contending factions, when the mill agents failed to appear. As a result, talk is rife among the strike leaders of a general strike order that will tie up practically the whole vast textile industry of New England.

Assured by Colonel Sweetser and the mayor that the mill owners' representatives would meet the strikers' committee, this committee, numbering forty-eight, headed by Joseph J. Ettor and William D. Haywood, were on hand at 7 o'clock to receive them.

Instead, Chairman Howland of the state board of arbitration announced to the committee that, while some of the mill agents were in an adjoining room, he would like to know if a sub-committee could not be selected to talk over the grievances with the arbitration board and the agents.

Ettor's Stand

Organizer Ettor, as chairman of the strike committee, said they had come there to talk to the mill owners or their accredited representatives. He said: "The strikers are trying to play the game with the cards face up, while the mill owners are apparently keeping some deuces up their sleeves.

"We did not come here to discuss arbitration or hear any lecture on it, and if the mill owners are not here or are too shy to come forward and break the ice and confer with us, I shall declare the meeting adjourned. We will deal with them directly, and with no one else."

Mayor Scanlon then said that he wished to make it clear to the strikers' committee, speaking both for himself and Colonel Sweetser, that when he asked the committee to come to the conference he had done so with the assurance of Charles G. Wood of the arbitration board that the mill representatives would be present. He declared he wished it thoroughly understood that he had acted in good faith, and had believed that the mill owners intended to meet the strike committee.

No Authority to Confer

Chairman Howland went into an adjoining room, and after a brief talk with a few of the mill agents assembled there, returned and said that the representatives of the mill owners had told him that they did not have the authority to confer directly with the strikers' committee. Ettor then announced the meeting adjourned.

Chairman Howland said he would confer further with the mill owners, and try and see when their representatives could meet the strikers. He asked Ettor when it would be convenient for the strikers to meet the mill operators. Ettor replied that any time the mill owners felt like conferring with the strikers, a few hours' notice would be sufficient, but it must be a bona-fide agreement. In a huff, the strikers' committee retired to their headquarters for an executive session.

While Sweetser did not care to make an official statement, it is known that he is exceedingly angry at the position he is involuntarily placed in.

Strikers Jeer at Soldiers

Mammoth parades, at which the soldiers were booed and jeered by the marchers, two mass meetings and two executive sessions of the strikers' committee, together with the arrival of William D. Haywood, filled this city with clamor of excitement throughout the afternoon.

Five bands crashed out the airs of industrial songs and 10,000 people, representing nearly every European nationality, banded together as a solid textile organization, paraded the streets in the mammoth afternoon procession. This parade culminated the mass meeting held on the common, which had greeted Haywood wildly.

For nearly an hour they had stood regardless of the cutting wind which swept the snow-covered area and listened to the speakers. Ettor acted as their chairman.

The enthusiasm instilled by the stirring addresses of the prominent labor agitators was partially expended in the big parade. The procession, completely filling the thoroughfares, was a continuous outburst of cheering and songs, which even the blustering snowstorm failed to affect.

Close Contact With Sentries

The lower end of Everett mills was passed in the route laid out for the marchers, and it was here that they came into close contact with the soldiers. They had to pass the line of sentries stationed there, blocking the remainder of Union street to their forces. They saluted the guard with their strident yells.

Colonel Sweetser had drawn as many of the militia men into the background as possible, and on the streets leading down to Canal street, and the mills, the soldiers were allowed above the ropes which form the dead line to the mill district.

Just as soon as the parade passed, the guard line was moved forward again to the junction of these streets with Essex street.

Colonel Sweetser and his staff were at the head of Amesbury street, upon which the armory is located, and as the strikers passed they again broke into demonstrations of anger. Shaking their fists and yelling, the great concourse filed by.

Arrival of Haywood

The real excitement of the day came with the arrival of Haywood. At the railroad station the bands were waiting and thousands of people crusned forward to get a look at the labor leader. They fell into the procession, which acted as a gigantic bodyguard. This parade passed through Common street to the strike headquarters.

From the windows of the clubrooms, Ettor dismissed the marchers, and told them to meet again at the mass gathering on the common at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. As quickly as they had gathered, they dispersed.

It was a picturesque throng. Syrians and women of other foreign countries sprinkled the crowd with their bright-hued hats and wraps. Red was the prominent color, and Socialist buttons were largely in evidence.

A tremendous ovation was given Haywood, and Ettor shared in the enthusiasm. Their words, spoken at the mass meeting, stirred anew the tumult that has been slumbering for the last few days. Under their joint leadership, the strike takes on an ominous tone.

Strikers Urged to Unite

Ettor at the mass meeting urged the strikers to unite. He acted as chairman, and introduced Haywood, who followed the leader, who had exorted the strikers in Polish, Lithuanian and Italian.

In closing his speech Haywood said: "Do not let the bosses divide you. Remember this eternal question will never be solved until you solve it yourselves. Let the mass of working people stand by their class, as the other class stands by its class. Then we can always win what is right."

Thousands of waving arms and caps and the roar of thousands of cheering voices broke the silence in which the Lawrence strikers had listened to the words of Haywood. The rumble of the cheer was audible blocks away, and at the armory, the police station and city hall it was questioned what will follow in this city if last night's conference winds up with the ultimatum of industrial warfare.

Twenty thousand strikers also are waiting for this word. Haywood will be in Lawrence four days. In an interview he said that he expected the strike would spread even outside of Massachusetts in New England.

Says He Murdered Wife

Boston, Jan. 25.—Officer Alesi arrested an Italian in the West End last night who said that he had murdered his wife in Italy. The stranger, who seemed to have been acting queerly, was locked up in the city prison for safe keeping. He gave the name of Dominico Di Matto, aged 36.

Gone, Perhaps.

JUNGLE SCENE AT DINNER

Winds Up With Parrots Getting "Loaded" With Champagne

San Francisco, Jan. 24.—The "animal" dinner given by Mrs. Andrew Welch at the Fairmont hotel represented a scene in a jungle.

Figures of lions and tigers, giraffes and elephants peered from miniature thickets, but it was the introduction of living creatures into the picture that furnished the element of eccentricity.

Ducks, parrots, frogs, lizards and canary birds kept strange company with the lay figures of beasts from the jungle.

Frogs hopped from the grass-covered table into the laps of the guests and were received with shrieks.

The climax of the fun was reached when a wag suggested that the "sportiness" of the parrots be tested by giving them bread soaked in champagne.

One became more noisy and vociferous and changed his mild conversational tone to wildly declamatory command: "Have a good time, have a good time, but be sure and come home by three," and one that had been roundly swearing all evening subsided and fell asleep.

CARRIES OUT HER THREAT

Woman Treats Constable to Thrashing After Breaking Jail

Nyack, N. Y., Jan. 24.—To gratify her desire to chastise Constable Edward Formati of Spring Valley for arresting her and having her committed to the Rockland county jail for ninety days Rose Turner made her escape. The woman weighs 200 pounds. At the time of her arrest she thrashed the constable in the office of Police Justice Fisher, before whom she was arraigned.

She threatened the constable with another licking, and it was for this purpose that she left the jail and returned to Spring Valley. She found Formati and gave him another beating, then telephoned to the courthouse and told Sheriff Gross she would return on the afternoon train.

True to her word the woman arrived in the city at 4 o'clock and surrendered herself.

FULLY EQUIPPED WITH MEN AND CASH

Roosevelt Forces "Sounding" Sentiment In Congress

Washington, Jan. 24.—An organized effort to force Roosevelt sentiment in the house of representatives out in the open has been disclosed. It appears that all members who are known to be at all favorable to the renomination of the ex-president have received long telegrams from Alexander Revell of Chicago, a rich furniture dealer, chairman of the Roosevelt league, urging them to declare their preferences immediately.

Representative Madden of Illinois is one of those who are particularly active in this movement. This census of Roosevelt opinion is an indication that the forces working for Mr. Taft's predecessor are active and fully equipped with men and money to attain their ends.

1277 POUNDS IN A YEAR

Eastern Holstein Cow Becomes Champion Butter Producer

Newton, N. J., Jan. 24.—The world's record for butter production in a single year, held so long by Colanitia, a Wisconsin Holstein cow, has been broken by Clothilde, 2d, an eastern cow of the same breed.

The new champion has just completed her year's test, and, according to the official figures, produced in 365 days 1277 pounds of butter from 25,000 pounds of milk.

It takes an exceptionally good cow to make 106 pounds of butter in a month, even in full flow, but here is a cow that has averaged that amount for twelve months in succession.

FINE OF $55,000

Imposed Upon Standard Oil For Violating Interstate Law

Buffalo, Jan. 24.—The Standard Oil company of New York was fined $55,000 by Judge Hazel in the United States district court in this city for 143 violations of the interstate commerce law in accepting rate concessions in 1904 and 1905 from the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads on shipments of oil from Olean, N. Y., to Burlington, Vt.

Both railroads had previously been fined. The maximum possible fine in the Standard Oil case would have been $2,850,000, according to United States District Attorney O'Brien, who secured the conviction.

Court Upolds Indictments

Detroit, Jan. 24.—United States District Judge Angell denied the motion made in behalf of the Colwell Lead company of New York to quash the indictments in the government's criminal case against the "bathtub" trust. This reinstates the case, which is scheduled to come up for trial here on Jan 30.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MY EXPERIMENTS WITH PAPER BAG COOKERY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

When Soyer's paper bag method of cooking was first brought to my attention by friends, who, rightly or wrongly, seem to have a high opinion of my abilities as a cook, I admit that I was skeptical of its practicability. Indeed, I was more than that—I was rather firm in my belief that it could not prove out. But I was induced to put the system to a trial—and, lo and behold!—the very first trial made me an enthusiastic follower of M. Soyer. Since then I have been doing all my cooking by the Soyer method, and each succeeding day more than ever convinces me that any woman, simply by following Soyer's general directions, and using that good common sense and care which are essential to all good cooking, can master the Soyer paper bag method of cooking in a very short time, and will find it a great boon both to herself and to all the members of her household.

Following M. Soyer's general directions for paper bag cookery, I speedily learned that there are sundry commandments to be observed while pursuing his method of cooking.

The first and greatest of these is to get the right bag, which is made specially for cooking, is parafined, odorless even when crumbly-crisp, sanitary and to be had in sizes big enough to hold a Thanksgiving turkey, or tiny enough for a single chop.

Next, nearly as important, is to grease the bag inside liberally, using butter, lard, oil, drippings or a very fat rind of bacon.

Further, proportion your bag-size to what it is destined to hold. The closer the fit of bag and contents, the better, and the more even and compact the lay of the food, the less trouble in handling.

Use a footed wire broiler, or very open grid-shelf, in the oven. All paper bag cooking is done in the oven. If a gas oven, it must be lighted eight to ten minutes before putting in the food and kept at blazing heat until the bag corners scorch lightly; then slacken the heat a third or even half throughout the rest of the time of cooking.

Be sure to lay the bags in the oven with the seam uppermost, especially if water has been put inside. Seams will steam open now and then—if the opening is downward there will be a leakage and much bother.

Finally, it is important to remember that all manipulation, seasoning and flavoring of food must be attended to before it is put in bags. There can be no stirring or tossing in the course of paper bag cooking. Nor must a bag be opened at any time during cooking; such action is absolutely unnecessary if directions are faithfully followed.

A PAPER BAG DINNER.

By M. Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Roast Beef, Round, Ribs, or Sirloin.—Grease well with drippings, but do not season. Put in bag, lay on a wire broiler, and cook in a moderate oven. For a three-pound joint allow forty-five minutes; for seven-pound, one hour and twenty minutes.

Lima Beans.—Take a quart of Lima beans, add two ounces of butter, four ounces of diced ham, a little sugar and salt, a good teaspoonful of flour, and a few sweet herbs to taste. Put in a paper bag with half a pint of water, seal up, and cook for an hour in a moderate oven.

Baked Potatoes.—Thoroughly wash twelve good-sized potatoes. Make a few small slits in them, but do not peel. Place in a paper bag, with one tablespoonful of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size.

Tomatoes.—Place six tomatoes in boiling water for twenty-five seconds. Peel, butter your paper bag, put in tomatoes with salt, pepper, a suspicion of sugar, and a small piece of butter. Put the bag on the broiler after sealing, and cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven.

Apples a la Duchesse.—Wash and dry ten large apples. Core them, put stick-cinnamon—only a bit—in the place of each core, and pour over them a tablespoonful of rum. Put in a buttered bag, and bake on the broiler thirty minutes. When quite done, dish up, remove the cinnamon, and fill the centers with jam—strawberry, raspberry, or apricot. Cover with stiffly whipped cream, sprinkle with chopped nuts, and serve, or set on ice till wanted. Use sweet apples and let them cool before adding the jam and cream.

Light the gas range eight minutes before beginning to cook, or open the draughts so the coal range will be hot. Put the roast on first, upon the lowest shelf. Put the apples upon the upper shelf, so as to leave room for the tomatoes beside them. As soon as the tomatoes are done, remove, set the bag in a plate, and stand where it will keep hot. Put the Lima beans in the vacant place—and when the apples are done, remove them and put on the potatoes Thus, you will be able to have the cooking come out even, also to chill and season your apples before sitting down to table.

WHEN MAKING PIES.

THE popularity of pie in America is very great, and deservedly, for the American housekeeper knows how to turn out good pies. Persons who have partaken of the heavy pastry of Europe can appreciate this.

A Cheap Pie.

Apple Pie.—Good old appple pie, the favorite of so many households, may be made according to this recipe, which is recommended by a country housewife:

Wash, pare and slice six apples; brush pie pan with a tablespoonful of butter and put the sliced apples in.

Sift a cup of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder and salt into a bowl; add a tablespoonful of lard and rub very lightly; add two tablespoonfuls of milk, just enough to hold together. Roll out thick enough to cover the apples.

Brush the top with a little cold milk and bake in a moderate oven thirty minutes, or until the apples are tender.

Take from oven with knife, loosen sides and turn out on a deep plate, crust side down. That brings the apples up. Sprinkle with sugar, dust with a little cinnamon or nutmeg. Serve with cream or milk.

When Fruit Is Scarce.

Pumpkin Custard Pie.—For persons who find the ordinary pumpkin pie too heavy the pumpkin custard is a delicious substitute. It may be made as follows:

Pare, cut into pieces and cook pumpkin to make one pint. Put pieces of pumpkin into a kettle, add one-half cupful of water, cover the kettle and allow the pumpkin to steam until tender. Remove the lid and let the water evaporate. Drain in a colander and press the dry pumpkin through.

Beat three eggs without separating. Add the milk, then the pumpkin, a half teacupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of cinnamon and a teaspoonful of ginger. Make the puff paste as in an ordinary custard pie. Place in a deep pie pan which has been well greased and add the custard. Bake and serve hot.

Cocoanut Pie.—If the trouble of grating the cocoanut is shirked by the housewife shredded and prepared cocoanut may be purchased of any grocer.

Put two even tablespoonfuls of grated cocoanut into a pint of milk. Add three even tablespoonfuls of sugar, the yolks of two well beaten eggs and two even tablespoonfuls of cornstarch stirred to a paste with a little cold milk.

Add butter the size of a walnut and cook until thickened and smooth. Line a pie plate with crust, prick in several places and bake in a hot oven. Fill the crust with the cocoanut and spread with meringue made from the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth with two tablespoonfuls of sugar.

Sprinkle with cocoanut, set in an oven and brown slightly.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Foss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Freckles watched him with regardful eye and saw at last that he was completely exhausted. He bent over him and, catching him by the back of the neck, jerked him to his knees. Wessner lifted the face of a whipped cur and, fearing further punishment, burst into great shivering sobs, while the tears washed tiny rivulets through the blood and muck. Freckles stepped back, glaring at Wessner, but suddenly the scowl of anger and the ugly disfiguring red faded from the boy's face. He dabbed at a cut on his temple, from which issued a tiny crimson stream, and jauntily shook back his hair. His face took on the innocent look of a cherub, and his voice rivaled that of a brooding dove, but into his eyes crept a look of diabolical mischief.

He glanced vaguely about him until he saw his club, seized and twirled it like a drum major, stuck it upright in the muck and marched on tiptoe over to Wessner mechanically, as a puppet worked by a string. Bending over, Freckles reached an arm about Wessner's waist and helped him to his feet.

"Careful, now," he cautioned; "be careful, Freddy. There's danger of you hurting me."

Fishing a handkerchief from a back pocket, Freckles tenderly wiped Wessner's eyes and nose.

"Come, Freddy, me child," he admonished Wessner; "it's time little boys were getting home. I've me work to do and can't be entertaining you any more today. Come back tomorrow if you ain't through yet and we'll repate the performance."

Again an awful wrenching seized McLean. Freckles stepped back as Wessner, tottering and reeling like a thoroughly drunken man, came toward the path, looking indeed as if wildcats had taken their fill of him.

The cudgel spun high in air, and, catching it with an experness acquired by long practice on the line, the boy twirled it a second and, stepping out into the trail, followed Wessner. Because Freckles was Irish it was impossible to do it silently, and presently his clear tenor rang out, though there were bad catches where he was hard pressed for breath:

"It was the Dutch! It was the Dutch.
Do you think it was the Irish hollered help? Not much!
It was the Dutch. It was the Dutch"—

Wessner turned and mumbled: "What you following me for? What are you going to do with me?"

Freckles called the Limberlost to witness. "How's that for the ingratitude of a beast? And me troubling meself to show him off me territory with the honors of war!"

Then he changed his tone completely and added: "Belike it's this, Freddy. You see, the boss might come riding down this trail any minute, and the little mare's so wheedlesome that if she'd come on to you in your prisint state all of a sudden she'd stop that short she'd send Mr. McLean out over the ears of her. No disparagement intinded to the sinse of the mare," he added hastily.

Wessner belched a fearful oath, and Freckles laughed merrily.

"That's a sample of the thanks a generous act's always for getting," he continued. "Here's me neglectin' me work to eschort you out proper, and you saying such awful words. Freddy," he demanded sternly, "do you want me to soap out your mouth? You don't seem to be realizing it, but if you was to buck into Mr. McLean in your prisint state without me there to explain matters the chance is he'd cut the liver out of you, and I shouldn't think you'd be wanting such a fine gintleman as him to see that it's white."

Wessner grew ghastly under his grime and broke into a staggering run.

Freckles twirled the baton and stood like a soldier at "attention" until Wessner left the clearing, but it was the last scene of that performance. When the boy turned there was a deathly illness in his face, and his legs wavered like reeds beneath his weight. He staggered back to the case, and opening it, he took out a piece of cloth. He dipped it into the water and, sitting on a bench, he wiped the blood and grime from his face, while his breath sucked between his clinched teeth. He was shivering with pain and excitement in spite of himself. He unbuttoned the band of his right sleeve, and, turning it back, exposed the blue lined, calloused whiteness of his maimed arm, now vividly streaked with contusions, while in a series of circular dots the blood oozed slowly. Here Wessner had succeeded in setting his teeth. When Freckles saw what it was he forgave himself the kick in the pit of Wessner's stomach.

"Freckles, Freckles," said McLean's voice.

Freckles snatched down his sleeve and rose to his feet.

"Excuse me, sir," he said. "You'll surely be belavin' I thought meself alone."

McLean pushed him carefully to the seat and, bending over him, opened a pocket case that he carried as regularly as his revolver and watch, for cuts and bruises were of daily occurrence among the gang.

Taking the hurt arm, he turned back the sleeve and bathed and bound up the wounds. He examined Freckles' head and body and convinced himself that there was no permanent injury.

Then he sat down beside Freckles. All the indescribable beauty of the place was strong about him, but he saw only the bruised face of the suffering boy, who had hedged for the information he wanted like a diplomat, argued like a judge, fought like a sheik and triumphed like a devil.

As the pain lessened and breath caught up with Freckles' pounding heart he watched the boss from the tail of his eye. How had McLean got there, and how long had he been there? Freckles did not dare ask. At last he arose and, going to the case, took out his revolver and the wire mending apparatus and locked the door. Then he turned to McLean.

"Have you any orders, sir?" he asked.

"Yes," said McLean. "I have, and you are to follow them to the letter. Turn over that apparatus to me and go straight home. Soak yourself in the hottest bath your skin will bear and go to bed at once. Now, hurry."

"Mr. McLean," said Freckles, "it's sorry I am to be telling you, but the afternoon's walking of the line ain't done. You see, I was just for getting to me feet to start, and I was on good time when up came a gintleman, and we got into a little heated argument. It's either settled or it's just begun, but between us I'm that late I haven't started for the afternoon yet. I must be going at once, for there's a tree I must find before the day's over."

"You plucky little idiot," growled McLean, "you can't walk the line! I doubt if you can get to Duncan's. Don't you know when you are done up? You go to bed. I'll finish your work."

"Niver!" protested Freckles. "I was just a little done up for the prisint a minute ago. I'm all right now. Riding boots are away too low. The day's hot and the walk a good seven miles, sir. Niver!"

As he reached for the outfit he pitched forward and his eyes closed. McLean stretched him on the moss and applied restoratives. When Freckles returned to consciousness McLean ran to the cabin to tell Mrs. Duncan to get a hot bath ready and to bring Nellie. That worthy woman promptly filled the wash boiler and set a roaring fire under it. She pushed the horse trough off its base and rolled it up to the kitchen.

By the time McLean came again, leading Nellie and holding Freckles on her back, Mrs. Duncan was ready for business. She and the boss laid Freckles in a trough and poured on hot water until he squirmed. They soaked, rubbed and scoured him. Then they let the hot water off and closed his pores with cold. Lastly they stretched him on the floor and chafed, rubbed and kneaded him until he cried out for mercy. As they rolled him into bed his eyes dropped shut, but a little later they flared open.

"Mr. McLean," he cried, "the tree! Oh, do be looking after the tree!"

McLean bent over him. "Which tree, Freckles?"

"I don't know exact, sir, but it's on the east line, and the wire is fastened to it. He bragged that you nailed it yourself, sir. You'll know it by the bark having been laid open to the grain somewhere low down, and it was $500 he offered me—to be—selling you out—sir!"

Freckles' head rolled over and his eyes dropped shut. McLean's mind traveled back to the night almost a year before when he had engaged Freckles, a stranger.

McLean bent, covering the hurt arm with one hand and laying the other with a caress on the boy's forehead. Freckles stirred at his touch and twittered as softly as the swallows under the eaves.

"If you're coming this way—tomorrow—be pleased to step over—and we'll repate the—chorus softly."

"Bless the gritty devil," growled McLean.

Then he went out and told Mrs. Duncan to keep close watch on Freckles and send Duncan to him at the swamp the minute he came home. Following the trail down to the line and back to the scene of the fight, the boss entered Freckles' study softly, as if his spirit sleeping there might be roused, and gazed about with astonished eyes.

How had the boy conceived it? What a picture he had wrought in living colors! He had the heart of a painter; he had the soul of a poet. The boss stepped carefully over the velvet carpet and touched the walls of crisp verdure with gentle fingers. He stood long beside the flower bed and gazed at the banked wall of bright flowers as if he could never leave off.

BANKS APPEAL TO LINDBERGH

Urge That Investigation of Money Trust Be Dropped

EXPRESS FEAR OF A PANIC

Growth of Opposition Strengthens Minnesota Congressman's Determination to Proceed With Inquest Which He Says Is Constructive Rather Than Destructive—Deaf to Arguments of Agents of Bankers

Washington, Jan. 25.—Will the money trust be investigated by the house committee on rules? This is the question which is being asked in Washington. And the question is particularly interesting because there is a touch of mystery about it—a suspicion of "powerful influences" at work to call off action on the resolution introduced by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota and now under careful consideration.

It has just been learned that, acting upon the advice of the big banks, hundreds of little banks in every section of the United States are writing in to the congressmen representing their districts urging them to exert pressure to stop the investigation. Lindbergh himself has received many requests to withdraw his resolution, and agents of banking interests in New York city have called upon him in Washington, pointing out that should the inquest go on a panic would be a certain result. Mr. Lindburgh, however, does not see it that way, and the growth of the opposition only serves to make his determination stronger.

In the face of all this the Minnesota man lays stress on the fact that the purpose of the investigation is not destructive, but constructive. He has mapped out a plan whereby, first, the present financial system of the country can be analyzed, and, second, congress can rewrite the Aldrich plan in such a fashion that neither the present concentration of reserves shall continue nor the control of the Reserve association be given into a few hands, a necessary result, says Lindbergh, of the system of government planned for the association by the monetary commission.

A conservative poll of the committee on rules shows that out of its membership of eleven six are in favor of the Lindbergh resolution, one doubtful representative may favor it, one is known absolutely to be against it. Representative Henry, the chairman, is for the resolution. Of the Massachusetts delegation two are known to be wholly or partially in favor of the resolution—Representatives Wilder and Thayer.

THANKS TO HOME CITY

Morse Expresses Appreciation of Support From His Friends

Bath, Me., Jan. 25.—The first message of thanks sent by Charles W. Morse, the New York banker, since the commutation of his sentence by President Taft, was received by the Bath Times from Atlanta. It was as follows:

"Please extend to every citizen in my native city this my first message of thanks. Their cheerful words and noble exertions in my behalf during the last two years have been of the greatest comfort to me, and their many messages of congratulations and good wishes received in the last few days are a stimulant to me in my present struggle for life."

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER

Plea of Richeson's Cell-Mate Is Accepted by Court

Boston, Jan. 25.—Clarence V. T. Richeson's cell-mate, Harry H. Butts, left him yesterday afternoon to plead in the superior court to the charge of murder of Robert Williamson on June 21, 1911.

Butts, when he returned, told Richeson that he had pleaded guilty to manslaughter, and through the efforts of his counsel this plea had been accepted.

Richeson told Butts that he hoped that his sentence would be deferred for a long time, as he would miss his companionship.

DEMANDS OF MINERS

Want Increase of Wages In Bituminous and Anthracite Fields

Indianapolis, Jan. 25.—Demands for increase in wages of 10 cents a ton for bituminous coal and 20 percent for anthracite coal were indorsed by the convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The joint conference of the anthracite miners and operators will be held in New York city Feb. 27. Present contracts in both the hard and soft coal fields expire March 31.

Veto Awaits Steel Tariff Cut

Washington, Jan. 25.—President Taft will veto the Democratic steel revision bill as approved by the Democratic caucus if it is forced through congress before a report from the tariff board on steel is made.

ASBURY F. LEVER

War on Butter Trust Declared by This Southern Congressman

Copyright by American Press Association.

NEW NAME IS "MARGARINE"

Lever Presents Bill Lowering Duty on Butter Substitutes

Washington, Jan. 24.—An oleomargarine bill, which would rename all butter substitutes as "margarine," would reduce the tax to 1 cent a pound and probably lower the price of butter substitutes, was introduced by Representative Lever of South Carolina, chairman of the house sub-committee on agriculture, which has been investigating the subject.

Though its fundamental purpose was not to reduce the cost of living, but to prevent the sale of "moonshine oleomargarine" it is pointed out that the tax of 10 cents a pound has been pretext for a high price for the foodstuff and that with butter prices soaring in the markets everywhere, the measure would benefit the immense number of people who knowingly use the substitutes.

RACE OF MILITARY MEN

Needed by America and England to Meet "Yellow Peril"

London, Jan. 24.—A gloomy prophesy as to the probability of conflicts in the Pacific ocean was made by the lecturer on military strategy, T. W. M. Maguire, at a meeting of the Royal Colonial institute.

Maguire described the Pacific ocean as the "strategic centre of mankind," and warned both the United States and Great Britain that "nothing could give them security but a race of military men," as with nations like Germany and Japan it was a word and a blow.

The yellow races, he said, were going to demand equality of treatment. Japan was at present Great Britain's ally, but that would only last as long as the British alliance was worth having.

Great Britain's territories in the Pacific ocean were, he considered, by no means safe, and "the Japanese might attack and defeat the Americans any day."

Fired First Shot on Sumter

New York, Jan. 24.—Captain Julius A. Sitgreaves, a Confederate veteran, 74 years old, who was credited by some with having fired the first gun on Fort Sumter, died suddenly while sitting at his editorial desk in the office of an art publication. Apoplexy was given as the cause of death.

GREAT GAME IS EXPECTED

Quincy A. A. May Lead League After Tonight's Game

ST. MARY'S HALL

A game which will prove a great factor in establishing the leadership in the Greater Boston Basketball league will take place this evening in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, where the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. teams invade the camp of the Quincy A. A. fives to contest in struggles that bid fair to surpass anything in the basketball line ever witnessed within the walls of the popular rendezvous. The game between the first teams undoubtedly bear the closest watching, because of the fact that a victory this evening will establish the local association more firmly in first place.

At present the Quincy A. A . five is tied for the honors of supremacy with the strong St. Joseph's aggregation, which only last evening took the measure of the formidable Cunningham Gym team. The game gives every promise of resolving into a most gruelling contest and it certainly will be a struggle for blood when once the whistle is blown.

If the local boys can manage to thwart the playing of Costello of the visitors, they should emerge in triumph without much difficulty, but if the South End players display the same form as has characterized his work thus far this season, it will be difficult to state just what the outcome will be.

The local players , however, are being looked up to as the most dangerous team in the league and now that they are in a position to bring home laurels to the sporting bloods of Quincy, it is incumbent upevery one who has a spark of sporting enthusiasm in his veins, to make an especial effort to be numbered among those in attendance in St. Mary's hall this evening. The price is nominal and even after the games, a chance for still further enjoyment is afforded when the floor will be cleared for dancing.

GUESTS OF BROCKTON COURT

The members of the court of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, recently formed at Atlantic, were the guests Wednesday evening of the Brockton court at Brockton. Special cars conveyed the local members both to and from their destination. Start was made to Brockton shortly after six o'clock and return was made at midnight.

At Brockton a whist and dancing party took place, followed by the serving of refreshments. A most enjoyable evening was observed and the guests all acknowledged having been treated to a most gala time. The local party was in charge of Chief Ranger Theodore Keohane.

WHIST PARTY WEST QUINCY

Seventy-five couples participated in play at the whist party and dance held Wednesday evening in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, under the direction of the members of the Ave Maria Council, Knights of Columbus. The affair resolved into a whist party of a most enjoyable nature and it was not until eleven o'clock that play was terminated and the terpsichorean art allowed to make its advent.

The contests were very close and two ties existed. The first prize, a twenty-five ride trip ticket, was won, on the part of the ladies by Mrs. John Barry, Miss May Howley and Miss Grace Lamb, each having the same number of points, drew lots for second and third places. The latter was the winner of second place, while the former closed up the rear. For the gentlemen, the first prize went to a lady, who, in view of the fact that the Leap Year season made it permissible, took the part of a gentleman throughout. She had the highest number of points, and although the judges made some hesitancy in awarding it, the prize the same as was given to Mrs. Barry, went to Miss Beatrice Morissette. James Garey and John Monahan were tied for net honors and drew for prizes. The former secured second place, while the later was the third winner.

Dancing was then in order until an early hour to the tune of Joyce's Orchestra and the affair was pronounced a huge success. The committee in charge included John Joyce, Robert Teasdale, John Monahan, George McDonald and Leo A. Garrity.

NORFOLK DOWNS SEWING CLUB

The Norfolk Downs Sewing club held a gentlemen's night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. McIntire, 3 Calumet street, Tuesday night. All present spent a very enjoyable evening.

Piano selections were rendered by Mrs. Thomas Rich, Mrs. H. Kallback and Mrs. Irving Blossom and vocal solos by Mrs. Blossom, Miss Anna McDonough and Mrs. H. Kallback. Funny stories were told by those well known artists, Kallback and Rich. Remarks were made by Mr. Blossom, and he extended an invitation to the club to enjoy a boating party, June 16, 1912, the boat owners present offering their boats, for the day.

A collation was served and the party broke up singing in chorus, led by Mrs. Blossom. "Gee, but it's Great to meet a Friend from your Home Town". Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. McIntire, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Blossom, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rich, Mr. and Mrs. J. Cruikshank, Mr. and Mrs. L. Bush, Mr. and Mrs. C. Hobbs, Mr. and Mrs. Kallback, Mr. and Mrs. T. Raiche, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bacon, Miss Anna McDonough and Messrs. Joplin and Keyes.

WHIST TOURNAMENT.

There was ten tables in play Wednesday evening at the weekly whist tournament of the Granite City club. The usual twenty-five hands were played after which ice cream and cake were served. The winners of the weekly prizes were Dr. H. A. Jones who secured 81.8 per cent and James H. Lalley who secured 71.8 per cent.

EXTENDS CALL.

The Swedish Lutheran church has voted to extend a call to Rev. Leander Hokonson of Ridgeway, Pa., to become its pastor. A call was extended to this same clergyman some weeks ago, but at that time was declined. It is understood that this time he will probably accept the call.

TOTAL NOW 600.

A regular meeting of the local lodge of Moose was held in Greenleaf hall, Wednesday evening attended by a large number of members. Eighteen members were admitted to membership, thereby bringing the total enrollment up into the 600 desired in order to tsart work on the clubhouse. The regular routine buiness was gone through and matters of a varied nature discussed at length. District deputy organizer Leon C. Claflin presided.

No Doubt About It.

And every good husband, no doubt, is sure that he is married to one of the world's greatest women.

TOWN RIVER YACHT CLUB

A largely attended meeting of the Town River yacht club was held Wednesday evening at the club house, Commodore Stone presiding. A committee was appointed to bring in a list of officers to be voted for at the annual meeting in March. This was practically the only definite action taken although there was an informal discussion on matters of interest to the club.

ASKED TO USE QUINCY GRANITE

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge, senior senator from Massachusetts, is in receipt of a communication forwarded to him recently by the Granite Manufacturers' Association of this city requesting that he exercise his influence in having nothing but Quincy granite used in the construction of the Boston custom house.

It is generally understood that the matter will be given the most careful attention, yet it has been stated that if Milford granite should chance to be selected, nothing could be done by the Massachusetts senators, since Milford is a part of this state. The local manufacturers seem highly optimistic, however, concerning the chances from a local standpoint.

HOUGHS NECK ASSOCIATES

Contrary to expectation, there was no debate at the meeting of the Houghs Neck Associates held in Associates' hall, Wednesday evening. There were about thirty in attendance and the meeting was taken up mainly with the appointment of the various committees for the ensuing year. Henry W. French presided. It was voted to hold the annual Ladies' supper on the evening of Washington's birthday. A committee was appointed to act in this regard and plans were adopted whereby the occasion should prove to be the best in the history of the Houghs Neck organization.

TURKEY SUPPER.

The turkey supper given uner the auspices of the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church in the parish rooms Wednesday night, was fully equal and seemed to set an even higher standard than those served in the past.

Fully 200 people pronounced it a most excellent supper. It was well served and a success in every way. The proceeds will add a goodly sum to the parish house fund. It was under Mrs. Daniel C. Miller's efficient supervision, ably assisted by her committee.

The waitressess were Mrs. Herbert A. Albee, Mrs. George E. Allen, Mrs. Frederick L. Bent, Mrs. Eleazor D. Drew, Mrs. Ellis McTear, Mrs. George C. Parker, Mrs. George A. Vibert, Mrs. Frederick S. Waite, Miss Helen Croucher, Miss Alice Heningar, Miss Croucher, Mrs. Edwin J. Coleman, Miss Elizabeth Cook, Mrs. H. Kneeland Ellis, Mrs. Howard D. Fowler, Mrs. Charles J. Hennigar, Mrs. George J. Pock, Mrs. Edward F. Parlee, Mrs. William D. Purdom and Mrs. Sydney Smith, Miss Fannie Wood.

Mrs. George D. Rundlett and Mrs. Arthur Stanley sold and collected tickets at the door.

The menu was:— roast turkey with dressing and giblet sauce, cranberry sauce, mashed white potatoes, squash, molded tomatoes salad with mayonnaise, squash pie, plum pudding, foamy sauce, rolls, coffee and tea.

GRANITE TRUST COMPANY.

The preliminary work of transferring the Granite Bank of this city into a trust company is well under way and the name of Granite Bank which has for 76 years been familiar to the citizens of Quincy, will this year be changed to the Granite Trust Co.

Subject of Prime Importance.

Weather is the one topic of conversation that never grows out of date. We are almost as nearly at the mercy of the sunshine, the rain and the snow storm as we were a century ago. Therefore we always scan the sky when we get up in the morning. It is almost instinctive, even with the city dweller. No farmer fails to take a long look at the sky when he first rises, for on the weather will depend his activities during the day.

SOLID GOLD RINGS

Some Are Stamped Out With a Die, Some Cut From Tubes.

BUT MOST OF THEM ARE CAST

As a Rule, They Are Formed In Molds of Cuttlefish Bone, Into Which the Pattern Sinks as Though Pressed Into Wax—Making the Molds.

Cuttlefish bone is familiar to most people, as it is seen thrust between the bars of a bird cage for birds to peck at. Birds clean their beaks on it, and they like to eat it. But cuttlefish bone has other and more interesting uses. It is used in the manufacture of tooth powder and of polishing powder and in the making of a prepared food for birds, but perhaps the most interesting of its uses is in the making of molds in which to cast gold rings.

Some gold rings are cast in tiny flasks containing molds of fine sand; others are stamped out with a die. Wedding rings are made from a drawn tube of gold in which the rounded outer shape of the ring is produced on a mandrel, the several sections thus formed being then sawed off even when finished and polished to form a perfect ring. But of the vast number of solid gold rings produced by manufacturing jewelers, including rings to be mounted with stones, 75 per cent are cast in cuttlefish bone molds.

Such a mold can be used but once, and so the manufacturing jeweler uses a lot of cuttlefish bone. The molds may be made in two, three, four or five parts, according to the elaborateness of the ring to be molded. The bone serves both as flask and as molding material.

Suppose the molder is to make for a ring comparatively simple in shape a three part mold. He sits at a bench on which he has brass patterns of the rings to be molded. The manufacturing jeweler has hundreds, many hundreds, of these pattern rings, to which he is continually adding designs.

Handy by the molder has a box of cuttlefish bone. Only bone of the finest quality and finest texture is used, and such bone serves for this purpose admirably. Under pressure of an object upon it this bone breaks down perfectly and with no surrounding fractures or fissures. It takes an impression practically as perfect as a plastic material would do, while at the same time it stands up perfectly around the impression made.

The molder takes a cuttlefish bone in its familiar oval shape and with a little sharp toothed saw saws off the tapering sides and the ends, leaving a keystone shaped or an oblong block. Then straight across he saws off one end of this block about a quarter of its length from the end, and then the larger piece he saws through from side to side midway of its thickness. Now he has the original block of bone divided into three parts.

He rubs the face of each of these parts perfectly smooth on a metal plate set before him conveniently in the bench, and then the material is ready for use as a mold. The molder turns one of the two bigger blocks over on the bench with the smoothed surface up and picks up the model ring, and with a deft, sure touch he presses this model down for half its thickness all around into the delicately fragile but evenly textured bone—this in the case of a three piece mold at one end of the block, leaving the head or cap of the ring projecting beyond the end edge. Next he picks up the other half of this block, turns its smooth face down and presses that down upon the ring as it lies with half its thickness projecting above the surface of the lower block, and now he has a mold of the ring complete except for the projecting head.

At this stage he picks up that end piece of the bone that he had sawed off and presses that with its smooth face down upon the ring's head, so taking an impression of that, and then he has the mold complete, but with the model ring inside of it.

Now he scores lightly this model outside, across its side edges, and he scores lines from the top block to the sides, so that when he has taken the mold apart he can put it together again precisely as it should be, and then he opens it and takes out the pattern, and if anywhere the molded form should require a touch of smoothing he does that, and then, beginning small and opening out wider, he cuts out in the inner sides of the two halves of the big block from the bend of the ring mold out to the end of the block an opening, the gate, through which the molten gold will be poured when the ring is molded. Then he puts the pieces of the mold together again and binds them with soft wire, and there's your cuttlefish bone mold perfect and complete.

Sometimes they bind half a dozen or a dozen of such molds together and cut little channels inside from the gate to each one of the separate molds within, and then when they pour the gold they mold half a dozen or a dozen rings at once.—New York Sun.

Craft Wins.

"How did you ever manage to get on the good side of that crusty old uncle of yours?" asked Fan.

"Fed him the things he liked when he came to visit us," replied Nan. "The good side of any man is his inside."—Chicago Tribune.

Gratitude is a subtle form of revenge. The receiver of a benefit recovers his superiority in the effort to be grateful.—John Davidson.

BROWNING'S "SORDELLO."

Mystery of That "Colossal Derelict on the Ocean of Poetry."

The impenetrable nature of Robert Browning's "Sordello," published in 1840, "a colossal derelict on the ocean of poetry," as William Sharp terms it, has been the theme of many anecdotes. Tennyson declared, writes Lilian Whiting in "The Brownings—Their Life and Art," that there were only two lines in it—the opening and the closing ones—which he understood, and "they are both lies," he feelingly added.

Douglas Jerrold tackled it when he was just recovering from an illness and despairingly set down his inability to comprehend it to the probability that his mind was impaired by disease, and, thrusting the book into the hands of his wife, he entreated her to read it at once. He watched her breathlessly, and when she exclaimed, "I don't know what this means; it is gibberish," Jerrold exclaimed, "Thank God, I am not an idiot."

A French critic, Odysse Barot, quotes a passage where the poet says, "God gave man two faculties," and adds, "I wish while he was about it God had supplied another—namely, the power of understanding Mr. Browning." Mrs. Carlyle declared that she read "Sordello" attentively twice, but was unable to discover whether the title referred to "a man, a city or a tree."

Hitch In the System.

A Boston tramp has begging reduced to a system. He has his regular customers. He knocked at the door of a house. The owner came out. As soon as he saw the tramp he said:

"Now, look here; last week I gave you a nickel to stay away for ten days, and here you are back again."

The tramp put his hand to his forehead and was lost in thought for several minutes. Then he said:

"You are right, colonel. Your assessment does not come due for a week yet. When I get back to my counting room I'll pay off my head bookkeeper and discharge him. He has neglected to give you the proper credit on the ledger."—New York American.

Important Thing to Know.

It is easy to understand why the nation is willing that millions be spent on a weather bureau. If we can only foretell through weather experts, goose bone prophets, corn husk prognosticators or in any other way just what the weather will be from day to day, living will be made a great deal easier for us all. We can get the hay in out of that thunderstorm or hold up that shipment of perishable stuff that a solid freeze and zero weather will utterly ruin.

BAD FIRE IN HEART OF THE GRANITE DISTRICT

Polishing Mill and Sheds of Reed & Vendret Destroyed by Fire This Morning

Loss is Estimated at $5,000 Man has Wrist Fractured

Timothy J. Collins, the well-known newspaper correspondent had the misfortune to fall on the ice this morning resulting in a fracture of the right wrist. Tim was on his way to City Square when an alarm was sounded from Box 138 at 11.19, and immediately started for the scene. While running around the corner of a street he slipped on the ice and in falling fractured his wrist. He was attended by Dr. Jones atfer which he resumed work as though nothing had happened.

The fire was a most disastrous one one and practically destroyed the granite plant of Reed & Vendrit on Vernon street. Just how the fire started is somewhat of a mystery. It seems that the engineer left the engine room for a minute and when he returned was surprised to find a brisk fire in progress. An alarm was quickly sounded but the fire, fed by oily material in the engine house soon communicated to the polishing mill and sheds adjoining and before they were under control the plant was nearly destroyed. There was much valuable machinery in the polishing mill which is practicaally ruined.

In the cutting sheds were a number of monuments in the process of manufacture and the heat and water soon destroyed these.

It was one of the hardest fires the firemen have had to contend with this winter. While there was but little wind the weather was extremely cold causing considerable suffering among the firemen, the water froze as fast as it struck the men and it was but a few minutes before they were one mass of ice.

Several lines of hose were laid from nearby hydrants, yet it was sometime before the firemen got the upper hands of the fire and it was under control. It was an hour before the recall sounded.

The property is assessed for $6,000 and Messrs Reed & Vendrit estimate their loss as being not far from $5,000. The loss incidental by the interruption in business will also be considerable.

ROBERT BURNS ANNIVERSARY

Clan McGregor and Loyal Ladies Observe His Anniversary

GOOD TIME

Ye banks, and braes, and streams around
The castle o' Montgomery,
Green be your woods and fair your flowers,
Your waters never drumlie!
There simmer first unfauld her robes,
And there the langest tarry;
For there I took the last farewell
O' my sweet Highland Mary.
Burns.

The birthday of Scotland's favorite poet Robert Burns was celebrated in characteristic Scottish style by the members and friends of Clan MacGregor No. 5 and Loyal Ladies of Clan MacGregor No. 1 in Music Hall Thursday evening, about five hundred being present.

Chief Alfred O. Diack of Clan MacGregor gave a short address of welcome in his usual happy vein.

The singers were, Mrs. Robert Grant, Will Brown and James White. Highland dances were given by Misses Edna Boyd and May Hally. The concert was all that could be desired, each artist being roundly applauded, particularly Mr. Brown.

Supper was next in order and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the good things provided. The details of the menu had been arranged and attended to by the Loyal Ladies' committee and rare discrimination was made in the selection of the viands, with turkey as the "piece de resistance."

After supper, the floor was cleared for dancing and about two hundred couples participated in the grand march which was led by Mayor and Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, followed by Chief Alfred O. Diack and Mrs. Margaret Stronach, president of Loyal Ladies No. 1, Floor director James F. Reid and Floor Directress Mrs. Josie Daw and their corps of aids. A great many of the clansmen wore their plaids which added considerable color and picturesqueness to the march.

Dancing was enjoyed until three o'clock, music furnished by Provost's orchestra.

MANY FRIENDS PAY TRIBUTE

Funeral Services of Charles Pearsen Largely Attended

CHURCH SERVICE

The funeral of Charles Pearsen, for many years foreman of the riggers department at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., was held Thursday afternoon from the Swedish Lutheran church, and the little granite church on the hill was taxed to its utmost to accommodate those who desired to attend, that they might pay their last respects to him who in life they had known so well.

There was a wealth of beautiful floral tributes, which were arranged on one side of the altar. These included a massive anchor from the employees of his department at the Fore River as well as set pieces from Rural lodge, St. Stephen's Chapter and Quincy Commandery, the three Masonic bodies with which he was affiliated. Also pieces from John Ericson Court Foresters of America, the Daughters of Viking, as well as flowers from many of his friends and family.

The front of the pulpit was draped in mourning while across the front of the platform there were draped greenery and flowers.

The body was escorted from his late residence on Glendale road by the Foresters of America to the church, the bearers being Councilmen Edward J. Sandberg and Chas. A. Ericson, Oscar Sandberg and Andrew Johnson, representing the Foresters of America and Rollin H. Hughes and Theodore Hermanson represented the Knights Templars.

The cortege was met at the church by Rural lodge, St. Stephen's chapter and Quincy commandery.

Others present at the service were many of the men employed in the deceased's department at the Fore River as well as General Manager Smith, Assistant Manager Hill and Treasurer Sedgwick of the Fore River Co., and representatives of the Cranch School Parents' and Teachers' Association of which he was a director.

The services were of a particular impressive nature and were conducted in the Swedish language by Rev. C. A. Johanson of Boston and Rev. George W. Palmgren of the Swedish Congregational church in the English language. Music during the services was by the regular church choir with two solos by Mrs. Bertha Carlson Porter.

Mrs. Porter sang "My God and Father while I stay" and "There is a land mine eyes hath seen."

Rev. Mr. Palmgren in his address said that death was something all must meet. It was the usual custom to prepare for any great event or journey and he urged the necessity of being prepared to meet the great event death, when it came. He then spoke of his acquaintance with the deceased. He said that he was a neighbor, but it was not until his last illness that he had come to know him. His home life was a beautiful one. There can be no richer pleasure to a sorrowing heart than the sweet memory of his home life. He also referred to his thoughtfulness for his fellow workmen and of the high esteem in which he was held by them. These virtues are not saving graces but are worth holding up as an example and should remind us that we should be prepared for the great event.

After the religious service the burial service of the Masonic bodies was conducted by Worshipful Master Reed, Senior Warden, Crane and Chaplain Hayden of Rural lodge.

An opportunity was then given those who desired a last look at the remains after which they were escorted to the Mt. Wollaston cemetery by the Masons, Foresters of America and Daughters of Viking who held their service at the grave. The committal prayer was said by Rev. Johanson.

KICKING OVER CAR SERVICE

Wollaston People Dissatisfied with Present Car Service

A REMEDY

Wollaston is kicking, and as it usually kicks hard when it kicks, the present is no exception to the rule. The kick now is over the running of the Wollaston street cars. Since the running time was changed, Wollaston people say they do not know when they may get a car. That is a car for Quincy. By using what is known as set back care, the street railway company has made it possible for cars for Dudley street, via Wollaston to leave City Square on time. It is the outward cars however that cause the trouble. It is beyond the power of the local street railway officials to arrange it so that cars from Dudley street shall arrive at Neponset on advertised time, as delays on the Boston end of the line are frequent. The result is that cars for Quincy arriving at Wollaston are more than frequently late. They are sent off toward Quincy as soon as they arrive however without any wait at Neponset but as they are late nine out of ten trips, much inconvenience is experienced.

This is particularly noticeable on the Wollaston line. On the Hancock line with a double rail it is possible for the cars to make up time but on the Wollaston line, with its frequent waits on turnouts, cars are getting to be uncertain things.

The railway people realize this but can not help it with the present schedule of running the Wollaston cars through to Dudley street. The only way that Wollaston will get the car service it wants and which it should have is by running all of the through cars via Hancock street.

Wollaston could be taken care of by a car which operated between Quincy and Neponset. The Wollaston people would be better served under this arrangement than at the present time and they would know with some certainty what time to expect a car along. The only objection that has been made is that it will be necessary to change cars at Neponset if one desires to go through to Dudley street.

At a recent hearing before the special committee of the City Council on street car service of a well-known resident of Wollaston made this same proposition stating that after a careful study of the situation he had come to the conclusion that the only remedy for the present poor service on the Wollaston line was by running cars on the Wollaston line to Neponset only.

It is understood that the street railway are very willing to make this desired change but desire that the initiative shall come from Wollaston. A petition to this effect from Wollaston would result in the desired change and a decided and immediate improvment of the service.

SHAY—BODDINGTON.

Ernest M. Shay of Wollaston was united in marriage Wednesday evening at Beachmont to Miss Alice Boddington. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William B. Ayers, pastor of the Park and Downs Congregational church. The maid of honor was Miss West of Dorchester and George Baker of Wollaston officiated as best man.

After a wedding trip the couple will make their home with the parents of the groom Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Shay of Beach street.

Miss Boddington is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Boddington of Beachmont. The groom is well-known locally as the proprietor of a Wollaston store.

At a recent meeting of the Ward Five Republican committee at the home of Arthur W. Rohn, Winthrop avenue, organization was effected for 1912. As this is presidential year plans are under way for an aggressive campaign. Arthur W. Rohn was unanimously elected chairman and George A. Vibert secretary and treasurer.

PARK & DOWNS UNION CLUB

Annual Meeting is Followed by an Entertainment

OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Park and Downs Union club was held Thursday evening. The following were elected: President—Fred R. McMulkin; first vice—Charles L. Gilliatt; second vice—William Colby; secretary—Ralph Green; treasurer— Alonzo Bissett; executive committee—Rev. William B. Ayers, Frank Burgess, Charles A. Chase, William Whittacre, William Kershaw; membership committee—William McDonald, E. W. Towne, William Whittacre and E. Merrill.

The speaker of the evening was H. E. Rhodes of Boston, a past assistant engineer of the United States Navy, who delivered a most interesting lecture on South America.

Mr. Rhodes has been connected many years with New York journalism being at one time editor of one of the large dailies in that metropolis.

The speaker travelled extensively while in the Navy and his relation of polar experiences was last year greatly enjoyed by the club.

Four visits have been made to South America by the speaker and his talk showed an intimate knowledge not only of business relations but also of the trade relations affecting the countries he had visited.

Mr. Rhodes dwelt at length upon the great opportunities awaiting the South American countries of the west coast when the Panama canal is opened. His account of the conditions upon which ships of the different countries would pass through it was edifying and enlightening.

The historical phases of the country were touched upon and the description of the conquest of Peru was very interesting. Mr. Rhodes was accorded a hearty vote of thanks at the conclusion of his talk.

CHURCH TO HAVE EAR-PHONES

System Being Installed in Wollaston Congregational Church

READY SUNDAY

For the first time in this section of Greater Boston, ear-phones for the benefit of those of impaired hearing are being installed in a local church the Wollaston Congregational being the one to adopt this modern and practical invention. A transmitter and six receivers comprise the initial equipment, which, if found satisfactory, will be added to as occasion requires.

The apparatus is exceedingly simple, consisting of a neat, box-like transmitter at the pulpit, and inconspicuous watch-case receivers, on convenient handles, in various pews. Receivers and transmitters are connected by invisible wiring and the electric current is supplied by dry cells.

It is claimed that through the medium of this device even those whose hearing is most seriously impaired will be able to hear distinctly not only the words spoken from the platform but the music as well. The degree of intensity with which the scunds are conveyed to the ear may be regulated by means of an adjusting device in connection with each receiver.

Ear-phones have been in use in Tremont Temple, Boston for about two years with satisfactory results, and it is expected that several whose impaired hearing has heretofore prevented their enjoying church services will be at the Wollaston Congregational Sunday to give these instruments their first local test.

GETS CONTRACT FOR FIRE BOAT

The Fore River Shipbuilding Co., has contracted to build a fire boat for the city of Seattle, Wash. The contract while not a particulary large one has an added interest from the fact that it will be shipped in sections and put together after they arrive at Seattle.

DO NOT LIKE 8-HOUR PLAN

Fore River Draughtsmen Want 44 and not 48 Hour Week

HOLD MEETING

The draughting force at the Fore River yard held an indignation meeting this week in reference to the eight hour law which went into effect in the draughting department this week. To put it mildly the draughtsmen do not like the idea of working eight hours, every working day of the week, especially on Saturdays, as they have been accustomed to have Saturday afternoon off. What the draughtsmen want is a 44 hour week instead of a 48 hour week. This would allow them to quit work on Saturdays at noon. In other words they would work eight hours for five days of the week and four hours on Saturday.

It would seem that the workmen are solely to blame for the eight-hour law and they should not now complain. At the time the law was first contemplated, a mass meeting of the workmen of the yard was held which was addressed by President Bowles who told them just what would happen if it became a law. The men however put no faith in what he said but swallowed everything that the labor leaders said so that no effort was made to prevent the law from being passed. On the contrary it was urged. Now they have the result. It is out of the general order of things to expect any firm to pay men the same price for eight hours as they would for nine or ten hours and the result will be that in the long run the men will be the losers.

Just what the outcome of the conference of the draughtsmen will be is not known but it is probably some arrangement will be made whereby the men will be paid by the hour and then if they desire Saturday afternoons off it will be at their own expense.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Dr. Sun Yet Sen is president of the United States of China if he can stay put.

There are no prohibition laws in Russia, judging by the way they are rushing the Khan.

The Chinese throne will probably be moved from Pekin, but we would not haul it out of town until the roads get settled next spring.

George Gould has forgotten the details about that $3,000,000 deal in Little Kanawha. George Gould should have started in Jan. 1 to keep a cash account, to look after these little items.

They are talking of the statue of Balboa, who first crossed Panama in 1512, but as Balboa's relatives have not yet demonstrated that they control any votes, we doubt if Congress puts up any money.

The shrewd politician never writes letters. The interview is a means of disseminating his views that leaves a back door open, for one can always appeal to the well-known fact that all reporters are liars.

With the great interest shown in the Religion Forward movement by the Quincy churches and the coming to the city of several new pastors, religious life should receive new impetus. Four ministers have been called this month. Dr. Adelbert L. Hudson, of Boston to First church; Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of Lowell to Bethany; Rev. John L. Crane of Wakefield to the Calvary Baptist at South Quincy; and Rev. Leander Hokonson of Ridgeway, Pa., to the Swedish Lutheran. The Wollaston Congregational is about to call a pastor and other changes in the city all point to much new life and religious thought.

ONE'S BREAD AND BUTTER.

The great majority of our people owe their livelihood, and whatever success in life they may have attained, to our own home town. If we work for some one else, we depend on the enterprise and efficiency of our employer for our own advancement. If we are selling goods to our fellow townsmen, we depend on their good will for our success. If we are producing some commodity that is sold elsewhere, we are still dependent on the energy and fidelity of those of our townspeople who work for us.

Thus our welfare and that of our families is bound up in the closest ties of intimacy with our fellow citizens and the place we call home.

Under those circumstances, how loyal we ought to be to our own town! There should be a sentiment of affection to this place as our home, much like that which we bear to those allied to us individually by ties of kinship.

Some people, however, seem to flatter their vanity by decrying the institutions and enterprises of their home town. They seem to think they establish their own superiority by picking flaws in their home surroundings.

To say nothing more, this is in the worst possible taste. Sneering at the town that gives you your bread and butter, that offers its gifts of comradeship, civic protection, and education, is a little like sneering at your mother in order to show your neighbors how much superior you are to her.

Those of us who are affected only by more selfish considerations should consider what a suicidal business policy it is to decry our own home town. Money sent away helps pay taxes and enlarge industry somewhere else. Slighting remarks cast at our enterprises discourage our people from making improvements, and hinder growth by detracting from the general reputation of the place. Even if we think so, let us never admit that our bread and butter is not fully equal to metropolitan cake and pie.

POTATO FAMINE.

The general failure of the American potato crop last year is hitting the Consumer when he is down. Last year's dry weather has made a price of $1.50 per bushel probable, if indeed any potatoes at all are to be obtained.

Under normal conditions, when a bushel of potatoes weighing 60 pounds sells for about 75 cents, the price of a cent and a quarter per pound is about the cheapest of any of our popular foods. The nutrition therein contained is thus far less costly than the meats selling for 15 to 30 cents a pound.

When potatoes are liberally mixed with a meat diet, the food values in each supply the defects of the other.

Furthermore, from the epicurean view point, appetite is better satisfied to have a large element of neutral quality. All of our senses find their highest pleasure when there are pleasing contrasts between neutral effects and those more pronounced. The eye enjoys the landscape or picture in which there is a large element of neutral tones to balance the high lights of color.

Just so, a diet in which meat is over prominent is too cloying. Against the neutral relish of the potato, the appetizing tang of the meat receives its highest emphasis.

As meat seems destined to remain at a high price, it is a matter of large importance to the American people that potatoes be produced abundantly and cheaply. The statisticians figure that about fourteen per cent of the diet of the average American family is made up of potatoes.

Germany has carried potato culture to a high point of success, and many of our farmers have much to learn from their methods. One of their ideas is to plough very deeply, and some of the soils are worked over with the spade, one or two spade lengths deep.

Furthermore, they work over the soils thoroughly in fall, so that the processes of freezing and thawing shall be free to exert their utmost influence on the soil. Fields worked over thus in fall are said to yield a third more potatoes than those treated precisely the same way in the spring.

In England the improvement of potato seed and increase of the crop has excited so much attention during recent years, that as much as $500 has been paid for a single potato, of some new variety supposed to have special value for seed.

THE LAWRENCE MILLS.

The mill owners of Lawrence have had public sentiment behind them in the strike now on. It happens that the past year has been a bad one for the mills. Many of them have passed their dividends and most of those who have paid them have not earned these dividends but have paid them out of surplus.

The mills take the best help they can get. No mill owner or group of owners can fix the price of labor arbitrarily. That is determined by the supply and by the rates prevailing in the rest of the world. Massachusetts now works her operatives less time pays them more and provides better conditions than any other State. "Advance all the time" should be our motto but too fast an advance may so handicap our industries that the old Bay State will lose its manufacturing prestige. We have just examined the payroll statement of a Lawrence mill and we find that, in 1910, 14 1-2 per cent. of the operatives were under 18 years of age, and that in 1911 only 11 1-3 per cent were under 18. The pay roll of all wage earners (no one on a salary being included), shows that, in 1910, 32 per cent. of the workers received less than $7 a week and that in 1911 only 20 per cent received less than $7. The average wage paid to the operatives instead of being $6 a week as claimed by the strikers was, in 1911, $8.58 for a full week's work.

The mills may some day be able to pay better wages. The day is not at hand and we venture to say that the Lawrence mill workers today receive more for their hours of labor than they could get anywhere out of Massachusetts. The intelligent ones move ahead steadily to better pay. The ignorant and ambitionless ones stay in the rut. The sons and grandsons of the men who, twenty-five years ago, worked in the ditches at a dollar a day are now filling high places in the business and professional world. How soon will our legislators learn that they cannot legislate high pay into a man's household? Opportunity still stands at the door of the humblest and poorest American. His ambition should be to give his children a better chance than he had. Without approving the conditions under which many of our imported citizens live, we venture to say that they never had so much pay or so many advantages for their children as they have today, even in Lawrence.—W. F. Garcelon in the Newton Times.

TESTIMONIAL TO CHARLES R. SHERMAN.

One of the most successful and enthusiastic meetings in the history of John Adams Council No. 1210, Royal Arcanum, was held Monday evening in Odd Fellow hall, Wollaston, the officers for the year were installed by S. D. G. R., J. S. Chandler and suite. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive and able manner inasmuch as the staff was composed of members of the Grand Council of the state.

Immediately following the installation came a most pleasing ceremony, a striking example of the spirit of the fraternity of the order, when the retiring collector of the council, Bro. Charles R. Sherman was escorted to the altar by Grand secretary W. L. Kelt and presented with a substantial token of regard and esteem of the members of the Council by Grand Treasurer Williams, a close friend of Bro. Sherman of many years' standing, in a most eloquent and touching tribute.

Bro. Sherman, organized the present Council, December 1889, became its first Past Regent at its institution and its collector in 1895, serving in that capacity ever since, resigning voluntarily at the close of last year after having completed 17 years of faithful service in one office.

Bro. Sherman responded feelingly to the presentation and a fitting climax to the graceful scene came when the members and their guests closed about him and sang 'Auld Lang Syne." After this the Council adjourned to the banquet hall where a light collation and cigars were enjoyed, and the members listened to stirring addresses by Grand Secretary Kelt, S. D. G. R. Chandler, Grand Treasurer Williams, members of the council and brothers of visiting councils, introduced in a graceful and witty manner by Ex-Mayor John O. Hall.

Seldom has John Adams Council had so many high officials of the order present at one time as at this meeting and the high spirit of fraternalism of the Royal Arcanum was most beautifully exemplified at this meeting.

Monday evening was a memorable one and Jan. 22, 1912 will be marked with a red letter in the records of John Adams Council.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX.

Not much is heard now-a-days, of the federal income tax amendment; nevertheless the cause, like John Brown's soul, is moving on. It is practically certain that the amendment will be ratified by Arizona and New Mexico. The affirmative of thirty-five States is necessary for ratification, and thirty-five have so affirmed. Seven States have refused to ratify: Connecticut, Louisianna, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and West Virginia. Ten have not taken decisive action: Delaware, Florida, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona. With the last two States pratically assured, only three more will be needed. It will be strange indeed, if they are not forthcoming from the eight States that remain still undecided.—Taunton Herald.

TWO GREAT TERMINALS.

It should be recorded to the credit of the Harbor and Land Commissioners that they were not unmindful of the importance and necessity for building up this port, but that they made numerous recommendations which should long since have been adopted by State or city.

It is significant that before concluding its labors this commission pointed out how 11 large piers could be built on the Commonwealth land and flats at South Boston on the harbor frontage and many smaller piers on the reserved channel, to connect with the railroad tracks, and also how on the 100 acres of flats owned by the Commonwealth opposite East Boston there can be 21 large piers constructed and made available by dredging approach channels and docks.

This commission shows how a great railway and steamship terminal could be provided at South Boston. Of course, another one could be built at East Boston. Which of these locations should be constructed first lies with the Directors of the Port to decide. There is money enough appropriated by the State now to start the work, but it would be good business policy first to present definite plans to the Legislature and the public, so that there would be reasonable publicity concerning the same.—Boston Globe.

TENDER-HEARTED DEPUTIES

New York Senator Wants Women In the Sheriff's Office

Albany, Jan. 26.—Senator Timothy D. Sullivan introduced a bill making women eligible as deputy sheriffs.

"The women of New York are behind this bill," he said. "Without casting reflections on any member of the force now holding places under Julius Harburger—and they are all men—I think more tender-hearted deputies should be appointed.

"What woman is not tender-hearted? What woman wouldn't do her best to give a sister the best of it if she knew she was to lose her home and be driven into the streets with a lot of children?"

METROPOLITAN PLANNING.

One of the Boston morning papers of Jan. 13, made the statement that, at the metropolitan planning dinner given the preceding evening by the Boston City club to the city and town officials and newspaper men of the Metropolitan District for a discussion of the proposed establishment of a Metropolitan Planning Board, the only speaker to come out flatly in favor of the proposition was Mayor Barry of Cambridge.

As to whether or not the speakers at the City Club dinner favored or opposed the legislation for a Metropolitan Planning Board, a few quotations from the speeches may be convincing.

Mayor Charles E. Hatfield, of Newton said, according to the stenographic notes:—I want to say to you that after discussing this plan for some weeks and after going over it carefully I have come to the conclusion that we need some such plan in the Metropolitan District. I believe personally that such a plan is bound to come and some such plan as these commissioners have produced is the sort of thing that we want to start out with. I can see that the commissioners are going to be able to do a great deal of good for this District, and so it is that I have come to the conclusion that personally I shall give them all the support that is possible for this plan.

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston, closed his speech as follows: Mr. Chairman, I want to say that Boston enters heartily into this scheme, with no selfish motives, but for the good of the common people, and I can speak for the City Council, I think, and for myself, in saying that Boston welcomes your heartiest cooperation in this movement.

Mayor J. Edward Barry, of Cambridge, said: I assure you it gives me great pleasure to come here this evening to testify that Cambridge is the first city to enrol itself in behalf of the plan as outlined by the gentlemen of this Plan Commission. We have gone through this question very carefully, the matter has been submitted to the city government and we heartily endorse the plan.

Mayor C. E. French, of Melrose, said: The proposition sems to me to be spontaneous and beautiful. I believe that the people of Melrose will be ready to assist in development along the line of this plan.

Chairman George E. Walker, of the Wakefield Selectmen, said; One of the greatest reasons for dissatisfaction in metropolitan methods is the fact that there has been no general plan. Such things as could be worked through year by year in the legislature have gone through, and we have paid expenses irrespective of whether we received any benefit or not. You can see that the present bill is a long step in advance of the present method.

Selectman John J. Parker, of Saugus: I would like to say that if a plan is carried out by the Commission, it will benefit the towns and cities fully as much as the expenditure which they will be asked to make. We expect that they (i. e., transportation facilities) will be improved by the plan of that Commission, and in doing so it will bring into use many thousands of acres in the town of Saugus that are the very best for homes, and if for no other reason Saugus will be heartily in favor of this proposition.

The only man who was at all outspoken in opposition to the legislation was Commissioner of Finance Frank A. Turnbull, of Lynn, and even he said, I would be the prince of fools if I stood here and said that I did not have the wit to see the benefit to be derived from what has been pointed out to us here tonight.

The other speakers who were not city or town officials, advocated the proposed planning legislation.

Q.—Has Spiritism ever benefited the members of the race of mankind in any way? If, so, how? (Victim.)

Answer.—The value of Spiritism to the world is summed up in the words of a well-known author as follows:—"According to the theory of Spiritualists there are a hundred times as many disembodied spirits about us as there are men in the flesh. Among them are all the poets, authors, orators, musicians and inventors of past ages. They know all they ever knew when they were in the flesh, and have been learning a great deal more since; and with their added powers and extended experience they should be able to do what mortals have never done before. They have had free access to the public mind and public press, with no end of mediums ready to receive their communications, and thousands of anxious inquirers who have questioned them, and earnestly desired to obtain information from them. They have talked and rapped, they have tipped and rattled, they have fiddled and scribbled they have materialized and dematerialized, they have entranced and exhibited; they have told us many things which we knew before; many things which we do not know yet; and many other things which it was no matter whether we knew or not; but when we come to real instruction, reliable information, or profitable and valuable knowledge, Spiritualism is as barren as Sahara, as empty as a hollow gourd."

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Miss Elsie Ferguson under the direction of Henry B. Harris, comes to the Hollis Street Theatre, Monday evening for a two weeks' engagement in her dainty new comedy "The First Lady in The Land," direct from a successful run at the Gaiety Theatre, New York, from the pen of Charles F. Nirdlinger. The announcement should be a welcome one, for Miss Ferguson has won a distinct niche in stardom for her delightful femininity, and she is said to have a play in which she is able to display her rare charm to the greatest advantage.

"The First Lady of The Land" deals with the love affairs of Dolly Todd, the famous Philadelphia Quakeress who influenced so much of American history through the regard and admiration in which she was held by the statesmen for her time. History tells where she finally placed her hand in marriage, but it has remained for Mr. Nirdlinger to tell of the tugs she had at her heart strings before she could decide between the staid James Madison and the dashing dare-devil Aaron Burr. With Burr planning a new empire in Mexico, where he could seat his lady-love on a throne, and all the European nations intriguing with disgruntled politicians to break up the young republic of the United States, Mr. Nirdlinger had plenty of material for stirring incidents and mysterious events. Duelling was rampant, and war merely an incident to obtain ends with the men the author brought into his story, but there is a vein of comedy throughout the piece that keeps the action well balanced and entertaining until the last climax. Mr. Harris has surrounded Miss Ferguson with a superb company and has given the play a mounting in keeping with its importance.

CASTLE SQUARE.

The week at the Castle Square beginning Monday will be of no little importance to theatre-goers outside of as well as in Boston. On that day Mr. Craig will offer for the first time on any stage his second annual Harvard-Radcliffe Prize Play. Its title is "The Product of the Mill," and its author and the winner of the prize given by Mr. Craig is Miss Elizabeth Apthorp McFadden. Selected after careful reading and comparison of many plays submitted in competition for the prize, and prepared through careful rehearsal several weeks, it promises to arouse a wide-spread interest.

The play will be a strong one emotionally, and it possesses every advantage of a mingled emotion and humor. Its plot concerns the search of a mother for her boy kidnapped in childhood, and there will be a series of elaborate stage settings, including the interior of a Southern mill in full operation. Sixteen speaking characters, besides minor personages make up the dramatis personae, and in the cast will be John Craig, Mary Young, Henrietta McDannel, Grace Lothrop, George Hassell and Donald Meek. The mother will be played by Miss Young, and it will be a part that will give her skill as an emotional actress full scope, and Miss McDannel as the boy will undoubtedly duplicate her great success with Peter in "The End of the Bridge."

The opening night will be a gala occasion, for the theatre will be thronged with Radcliffe students and their friends anxious to give the play a hearty send-off on an auspicious career and a long run.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

An audience that taxed the capacity of the new and beautiful Plymouth Theatre, Boston, greeted Miss Viola Allen and a great cast, at the opening performance of "The Herfords," Wednesday night. The play is the latest work of Miss Rachel Crothers, without question the most eminent American woman playwright, who is also responsible for "The Three of Us" and "A Man's World." In "The Herfords" Miss Crothers presents a strictly modern theme, truly natural and emphatically appealing. The play deals with the story of Tom Herford, a sculptor, and his wife Ann, also a sculptress. The couple who are devotedly attached to each other have one child a daughter. The mother who gradually has become deeply absorbed in her work carelessly neglects her home and in order that she might devote more time in the perfection of her art has sent the girl to a boarding school. A competition for a prize on a model of a big public building finds both husband and wife contestants. The latter in her anxiety to out-distance her husband, and finally succeeds as the big scene of the play finds her the successful winner of the coveted prize, has not only lacked a mother's affection for her child, but also the love, affection and sympathy of her husband. It is around this particular point that Miss Crothers has constructed a most powerful play, and satisfactorily answered by her in the final scene. "The Herfords" deals with the problem question of man and wife, and is one of those plays that no woman should miss seeing.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

When "The Boss," the virile American play by Edward Sheldon is presented at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, for two weeks' engagement, beginning Jan. 29th, playgoers in and around Boston, will see a remarkable stage production.

Sheldon showed his mastery in drawing character in "Salvation Nell" which Mrs. Fiske played so successfully, and in "The Nigger," one of the greatest dramatic triumphs at the New Theatre, New York. "The Boss" is described as not one whit less powerful a play than its predecessors. The author has taken a typical boss a man who has grown rich as a contractor and a power among men in his community, and has drawn a character that for startling fidelity to life rarely has been surpassed.

This man, Michael Regan, is portrayed by Holbrook Blinn, one of the cleverest players of characters on the American stage. Mr. Blinn's performance of Regan places him at the head of American plays who essay roles of this description. Regan not only fights his rival, James D. Griswold, in a business way, but has the audacity to propose to his daughter, and she accepts him in the hope of mitigating Regan's business antagonism against her father's firm.

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER."

Every one who follows the current history of the theatres has heard of Winchell Smith's comedy, "The Fortune Hunter," and its enormous success in New York and Chicago, where it has been acclaimed as the best play of recent years.

"The Fortune Hunter" is scheduled for presentation here for two weeks under the direction of Messrs. Cohan and Harris, who have sent this famous play on the road complete in every detail.

As implied by the title, the plot revolves around the matrimonial ambitions of a youth who would win at one stroke gain connubial bliss and sinful wealth. Henry Kellogg, a Wall Street moth, conceives a brilliant campaign for marrying money, but ere he has time to put his plan in execution, he is promoted to a partnership in his firm and acquires money without what he conceives a drawback of matrimony. Hence he passes his scheme along to his impecunious friend, Nat Duncan. His instructions are brief. "Go into a town of about two thousand inhabitants, look well, dress well, abjure liquor and tobacco, go to church and take your pick of the village heiresses."

Nat Duncan begins such a campaign, and the story relates his success, which turns to ashes when he falls in love with a noble-hearted poor girl; he is redeemed by and love and at the end everything comes out delightfully well.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

"The Pink Lady" which is universally conceded to be the most brilliantly successful musical comedy ever presented in Boston will begin its eighth week of her triumphal career at the Colonial theatre with every indication of the remarkable success that this bubbling, joyous entertainment has attained being emphasized. Seldom, if ever has an entertainment of this class met with more enthusiasm than this same "Pink Lady" which has but only obliterated all records of receipts at the Colonial theatre, it is different, in many phases from any of the American modern musical comedies and many of the foreign productions. It depends entirely for its great success upon a well told story, from which all the uproarious fun which has made it famous is naturally evolved in the legitimate telling of the story. There is not one of its charming, sparkling musical numbers but what is musicianly composed and pertinent to the play. The cast is one of the best ever gathered together for the presentment of a musical play, the staging and the costuming of the production always sumptuous and in good taste.

B. F. KEITH'S.

Princess Rajah, the world famous Oriental dancer, whose "Cleopatra Dance" has been in turn the sensation of four continents, will come to B. F. Keith's Theatre next Monday for one week only. Since her first appearance in Boston three years ago, Rajah has appeared in the principal music halls of the most famous capitals in Europe, and everywhere her performances have proved the sensation of the hour. For her return to America Rajah has arranged one of the most remarkable series of dances ever staged in this country including a new and spectacular production of the "Cleopatra Dance" and the "Arabian Chair Dance," a new divertissment. Two elaborate scenes are employed, one representing a terrace in Cleopatra's palace on the Nile, and the other a beautiful Turkish garden. More than a dozen musicians, guards, slaves and dancing girls appear in these scenes, supplying the atmosphere of the lavourous East. This young and beautiful Egyptian girl will be only one of the features of a remarkable bill. Bert Leslie, the king of slang, returns with a new vehicle, entitled "Hogan, the Painter," which serves to introduce Leslie in a new character that is even funnier than those that have preceded it. Edith Helena late prima donna of the Aborn Opera Company, will also appear, and other features will be Fay, Two Coleys and Fay; and Blackface Eddie Ross.

BICYCLIST HAS BAD ACCIDENT

Allan T. Williams of 61 Montclair avenue, met with a serious accident Thursday afternoon while riding a bicycle on Granite street. As he was riding along his wheel slipped on the ice and he was thrown violently to the ground striking in such a manner as to fracture his hip. He was removed to his home in the police ambulance. The fracture is quite a serious one. The X-ray machine was used Thursday evening to determine the extent of the fracture.

MEMBERS HOME LIFE PICTURED

Novel Entertainment at Wollaston Methodist Church

LADIES' NIGHT

One of the most novel exhibitions ever held in Wollaston took place at the Wollaston Methodist church, Thursday evening when Councilman A. N. Murray delivered a stereopticon lecture upon "Scenes in the home life of Methodist club members." The views were taken from actual photographs of the members and by the skillful interpolation of other agencies the most fantastic and laughable effects were produced.

The lecture closed a most entertaining program given in honor of the annual ladies night of the Methodist Men's club. An exceedingly large number of members and the fair sex attended making seats at a premium.

The evening opened with an address of welcome by Eric H. Ewertz, the president and was followed by a short business meeting. A. B. Cassidy read a most formidable paper on "church improvements" fairly bristling with facts and figures.

Wesley Rhodes read a most dramatic poem on "Woman's sphere," the most striking portions of which were interpreted upon the piano by Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick.

A bright and humorous number of the Wollaston Herald, the club organ, was read by George Taylor. It contained knocks and witticisms about the club members and even the Quincy Ledger was not forgotten.

During the evening a quartet composed of Storer Wiggin, Frank Dunham, Clarence Cassidy and Raymond Cassidy rendered several selections of merit, among them "Nellie was a lady" and "Viva le Cookery Maid."

In the lecture of Mr. Murray the "Boss" of the Methodist club was first announced. By some mistake Mrs. Ewertz's picture appeared instead of that of her worthy husband. Pictures of President Ewertz, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick and the youngest member of the family followed.

Next came George Taylor, "the only "bad man" of the Methodist club, in characteristic poses. Next came Pastor Wiggin, followed by a scene entitled "Preparing for the Sunday sermon." This showed the minister accompanied by various toilet accessories and explained why he preached such "clean" sermons.

Pictures of Mr. Epes, F. G. Bennett, Wesley Rhodes, W. C. Saunders and H. B. L. Dimmick appeared each being folowed by a caricature of the person preceding.

"Taking off Cassidy" was a most humorous picture and caused much laughter. Storer Wiggin was given in two sections, the picture being too long to be put on all at once.

The Sutermeisters followed as did "Doctor" Crothers, Simpson Kay, T. C. Perley and the "Goldust Twins" Murray and Taylor.

Walter Sutermeister was shown in culinary apparel accompanied by the phrase "the secret out."

S. N. Belcher who manufactured the views was next shown engaged in the process and the lecture closed with views of Councilman Murray and his auto.

Refreshments and a social hour closed a most enjoyable evening. Much credit is due Mr. Belcher for his skill in preparing the views and providing so novel an entertainment.

LEADERS READY FOR CAMPAIGN

Crane, Penrose and Smoot Hustling For Taft

AN ORGAN ZATION IS STARTED

Now Known That Roosevelt Will Accept Nomination If Offered to Him —Political Situation May Change When Taft Press Bureau Is In Full Working Order—Lodge May Not Take Part In Bay State Campaign

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senators Crane of Massachusetts, Penrose of Pennsylvania and Smoot of Utah are forming the nucleus of an organization to work for the renomination of President Taft. A statement to this effect, accompanied by an expression of his personal views as to the wisdom of renominating the president, was made public by Penrose. Headquarters are likely to be opened in Washington and it would not be surprising if Charles D. Hillis, secretary to the president, were placed in charge.

It is now a matter of common knowledge that Theodore Roosevelt will accept the Republican nomination if it is offered him. Assurances to this effect have been circulated so freely by his friends that even President Taft, who hitherto has refused to believe that he would be opposed by his predecessor, is convinced.

Penrose, in identifying himself with the Taft fortunes, will disappoint the hopes of the Roosevelt men, who had counted on putting such pressure on him from his own state that he would do no more than go through the motions there, leaving the field open for either candidate as far as he was concerned.

Penrose has now turned militant, evidently with the backing of the great business interests of Pennsylvania, and his own prestige is involved in the outcome. President Taft's friends have felt for a long time that his cause could be greatly strengthened if his merits were properly advertised and the exact facts in relation to his campaign set forth.

So far all the shouting has been on the other side, notwithstanding that an immense amount of clever political work has been going on under the surface, as the recent Fourth congressional distict in Oklahoma, where the Taft men won three to one, attested. It is now the purpose to give the Taft campaign suitable publicity. The president's friends assert positively that they can put a different face on the political situation as soon as their press bureau gets in full working order.

Senator Crane has been busy politically for several weeks, saying nothing, as usual, but putting wires in all directions. In Massachusetts alone has the Massachusetts senator made no move in the interest of Taft.

Senator Lodge is expected to take little, if any, part in the Massachusetts campaign. As one of the intimates of Roosevelt, he could not put his whole enthusiasm into a campaign for Taft with Roosevelt practically in the field, nor could he declare for Roosevelt, even if he were inclined to do so, without creating an awkward situation with his colleague, which is the last thing either senator wants.

It would seem, therefore, that the delegate campaign in Massachusetts will be largely a local affair, with Samuel L. Powers, the Taft manager in 1908, and other prominent citizens carrying the Taft banner.

Governor Osborn also accepted an appointment on the committee being organized by Alexander H. Revell of Chicago to ascertain the Roosevelt sentiment throughout the country.

TOUGH LITTLE GUINEA PIG

In Fire Ruins Sixteen Days Without Food or Water

New York, Jan. 26.—A little guinea pig that had lived sixteen days without food or water was taken from its wire cage in the ruins of the Equitable building yesterday afternoon.

The animal was found by employes attached to the medical department, in the laboratory. It frisked about its cage joyously and greeted its rescuers with squeals of delight.

Ionian Islands Are Shaken

Zante, Greece, Jan. 26.—A violent earthquake caused a great amount of damage in the Ionian islands. Shocks were felt here as well as on the islands of Leukas and Cephalonia, where much property was destroyed. No fatalities have yet been reported.

FOURTH LYCEUM COURSE LECTURE

There was a good attendance at Alpha hall Thursday evening at the fourth lecture in the Socialist Lyceum course. The lecture was by John W. Slayton, and his subject was "The Trust Busters" Born of humble life Mr. Slayton was brought up in the back woods among the hills of Virginia. As a boy he worked on a farm and later for 24 years was a carpenter. During these later years hewas an active worker for the better conditions of his trade. He became a socialist in 1897 since which time he has travelled extensively as a lecturer and is the author of well-known books on socialism and allied subjects.

His lecture Thursday evening was followed closely by his hearers and that they were thoroughly in accord with the sentiments expressed, during his interesting talk, was made manifest by frequent applause. Taken from any point of view his lecture was excellent. There was a little humor, to make it interesting but plenty of hard cold facts.

The last lecture in the course will be given Feb. 1 by Lena Morrow Lewis on "Socialists at Work."

Boston Judge Rules on Defects Discovered After Marriage

Boston, Jan. 26.—"Beaus and belles," remarked Judge White at the Suffolk divorce court, "must run their chances of false teeth, imported hair and cork legs."

The judge's remarks were occasioned by Harry Zukow's action for annulment of his marriage to Bessie Zukow, nee Shenker, on the ground that she concealed the knowledge of a skin affection from her prospective husband until after the ceremony. Zukow and his wife were married on Aug. 6, 1911.

"Mrs. Zukow's concealment of her skin ailment from her husband previous to marriage seems of no more moment than concealment of the defects I just mentioned under similar circumstamme," continued White.

The judge added that defects were common to humanity, and that discovery of them necessarily had to be chanced in contemplating connubial bliss.

COMBINATION IS "BUSTED"

Mayor Stone is having a hard time deciding what water meter to buy for the city. Bids for meters were opened the first of the week and there were several bidders with the result that a much better price was given than a year ago, when the meter concerns were in a combine. That combination has been "busted" however and the cities will profit thereby. The meter which the city used last year has been offered for sixty cents less than a year ago, and it is believed by the Mayor that he can even get a better price than that now quoted, owing to the fact that several concerns are after the contract to furnish the meters.

BRIEFS

The Gospel Team begins its week end meetings tonight. They will be here Saturday and Sunday at the Wollaston M. E. church.

The new theatre train at 7.03 P. M., is being well patronized nightly, showing the need of such a train. Now for an afternoon train around one o'clock and an outward train about 5 P. M. and conditions will be improved.

Sunday will be observed as Y. P. C. U. day at the morning service of the Universalist Church. The pastor's discourse will be appropriate to the occasion. Members of the Young People's Christian Union and their friends old and young, are invited to attend.

THE MANOUBA AFFAIR

Both Countries Seek to Settle It Without Loss of Dignity

Rome, Jan. 26.—France and Italy, it is understood, are agreed as to principle in the settlement of the Manuoba affair, involving the arrest of members of the Red Crescent society while passengers on board the French steamer Manouba on their way to Tunis.

The negotiations, which still continue between Marquis di San Giuliano, the Italian foreign minister, and M. Barrere, the French ambassador to Italy, are directed towards seeking a formula, which, while fully satisfying France, will at the same time safeguard the dignity of Italy, so as to leave no trace of the incident for either country.

ULTIMATUM TO MILL OWNERS

But Little Time Left For Them to Settle the Big Strike

SOMETHING TO SOON HAPPEN

Ettor Says It Will Not Be Pleasing to Employers—General Unrest Increased by Pangs of Hunger and Governor's Secretary Placing Blame For Conditions at Lawrence at Door of Wood—Governor, In Special Message to Legislature, Demands Searching Investigation of All Facts Relating to Great Strike

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 26.—Organizer Ettor addressed two meetings of the strikers last night, at which he said: "Unless a settlement is made by the mill men Friday, they will force us to make a movement which they don't want us to make."

Asked if this meant a state-wide strike, he said: "That is all I have to say. This won't last more than a couple of days before something will happen, and something the mill men will not like."

Addressing a meeting of Lithuanians and Poles, Ettor said: "I would like to tell you for your own good and for that of the mills, that if the strike was settled now, it would be only a small strike. They may have a bigger strike to settle later."

William D. Haywood also addressed a few meetings last night in which he urged the strikers to stand together.

A new alarm was sounded through the city when word came from the various headquarters of the twenty-odd thousand strikers that many were beginning to feel the pangs of hunger.

The failure in the efforts to settle the strike Wednesday night, with the announcement from Boston that Dudley M. Holman, Governor Foss' secretary, has laid the blame of the strike conditions here at the door of William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen company, which operates the largest mills in the city, has added materially to the general unrest.

Signs of Trouble

With the vast, uneasy army of strikers on the verge of starvation, touble of sinister character is feared. The troops have been ordered to remain at their posts indefinitely. The provisional regiment guarding the city considered the situation and has keyed up the discipline to its topmost notch.

Officials of the state police have warned the strike leaders to desist from suggesting anything in their speeches which would lead to violence and have delivered the ultimatum that, if trouble ensues, they will hold those in command responsible. Thus far, the leaders have counselled the strikers to refrain from disorder.

An Ominous Quietness

Yesterday the soup kitchens fed many. At the many conferences of strikers, men said that they were in want and their families were asking for bread. In the tetnement there is the ominous quietness which presages a storm whose fury is, as yet, an unknown quantity.

Should riots occur, the soldiers and police here now would be inadequate to cover the entire city. Haywood declared at a mass meeting that he would, if necessary, serve a jail term if by so doing he could win the strike.

In the work of relief, the shoe workers of Haverhill have offered to mend the shoes of the strikers free of cost, and organized labor as a whole seems to be standing by the mill operatives in their hour of distress.

The Boston conference held at Young's hotel last evening is looked upon here as one of the momentous meetings of the hour and it is hoped that the long looked for opportunity for settlement will be brought about. The local mill agents were not present at the Boston conference.

Governor's Message on Strike

Governor Foss, late Thursday afternoon, sent a special message to the legislature recommending an investigation of the Lawrence Strike. He calls attention to the serious conditions in the city tof Lawrence, and says that not the slightest approach to anarchy can be tolerated in this commonwealth, and shall not, if he has to employ every means at his command to maintain law and order.

The duty of the state does not end here, however, he says, and he would perform but the smaller part of its duty if he failed at this juncture to recommend a searching investigation of all the facts relating to the strike, including the conditions of the striking operatives.. He names the immediate cause of the strike to be the reduction of wages by the operation of the fifty-four-hour law.

Points In the Message

Following are the principal points in the governor's message:

"It appears that the striking employes believe they have other grievances than the recent reduction in wages.

"It is alleged that for years the employers have pursued the policy of bringing into their mills the cheapest grade of labor obtainable in this or in foreign countries.

"If these things are true, their truth should be established. If not true, their effective denial is equally important.

"Another important consideration is that the industry is one that has been specially favored by the tariff laws. The investigation should determine how far the advantages have been shared by the laborers who are supposed to be the ultimate beneficiaries.

"Such an investigating committee should have full power to summons persons with books and papers."

The receipt of the mesage created a big stir from the fact tnat it backs up the sentiments expressed by Foss' private secretary, Dudley M. Holman, to Miss Mary B. O'Reilly in respect to wages and conditions in Lawrence.

Mr. Holman scored President Wood of the American Woolen company, as being responsible for low wages paid the Lawrence operatives, and charged him with having been responsible for the importation of low paid laborers.

REMAINS WITH RICHESON

Fear That Removal of Butts Might Result In Harm

Boston, Jan. 26.—Clarence V. T. Richeson will have the companionship of his negro attendant, Harry Butts, who pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the superior court, until ten days before the date when he is sentenced to die in the electric chair at the state prison. This agreement was made yesterday by District Attorney Pelletier with Sheriff Quinn.

Richeson was greatly disturbed when he found that Butts was to be taken to court to be sentenced, and it was feared that the sending of Butts to Charlestown sooner than Richeson would work dangerous results to Richeson for the next few months. This information was given to Richeson yesterday by the sheriff.

Mrs. Longworth created this Cinderella effect in connection with a gown with tulle shoulder wings, another Longworth fashion. The train was divided in two parts, and as she stepped it parted long enough to give one a glimpse of the sparkling heels. When Mrs. Longworth dances the effect is even more startling.

SUES LIQUOR DEALERS

Mrs. Jardine Asks $5000 For Loss of Her Son's Services

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Anna Jardine of this city brought suit in the superior court against George Goyette & Co., liquor dealers, for $5000. She is the mother of Ralph I. Jardine, who on Jan. 3 ran away with a locomotive from Worcester to Webster while under the influence of liquor. He was tried and sentenced to from four to five years in the reformatory at Concord.

Mrs. Jardine claims that Goyette supplied her son, who is a minor, with liquor on that date and is suing him for the loss of her son's services while he is in the reformatory.

Portland Collector of Customs Loses His Job Through Politics

Washington, Jan. 26.—A contest over one of the most important federal offices in Maine was settled when the senate confirmed the nomination of Willis T. Emmons, as collector of customs at Portland.

Charles M. Moses, who was collector for twelve years, was charged with pernicious political activity. Senators Gardner and Johnson had the senate defer confirmation until Moses presented his case to President Taft.

The president refused to withdraw Emmons' nomination, which was obtained by Representatives Hinds and Guernsey, Republicans.

PHELPS PAYS DEATH PENALTY

Goes Calmly to His Fate in Charlestown State Prison

LEAVES NO WORD TO FAMILY

Commutation of Sentence of Slayer of Deputy Sheriff Haskins Refused by Governor's Council by Vote of Seven to One—Issues Statement Telling Why Clemency Was Refused to Monroe Bridge Murderer

Boston, Jan. 26.—Silas N. Phelps, the Monroe Bridge outlaw, was electrocuted at the Charlestown state prison at 12:15:55 this morning for the killing of Deputy Sheriff Emmett F. Haskins at Monroe Bridge on June 12, 1910.

The current was turned on at 12:15:55 and the man was pronounced dead by the physician at 12:22:45.

At 12:14:37 Phelps left his cell in the Charlestown prison, accompanied by two guards, one on either side. He was perfectly calm and made no objection to entering the death chamber.

Ahead of the party was Rev. Herbert W. Stebbins, chaplain of the prison. Phelps made no statement and left no word to his family.

Councillor Winfield S. Schuster of Worcester was the only member of the council who yesterday voted in favor of commutation of Phelps' sentence to death. Those who voted against commutattion are Lieutenant Governor Luce, Councillors Goetting, Fletcher, Cushing, MacGregor, Frothingham and Keith.

It was a few minutes past 10 when the council went into executive session. The decision of death was not reached until nearly 2 o'clock. Word was immediately sent to Warden Bridges of the state prison, who began to make preparations for the execution of the condemned man. Phelps was notified at once that he must prepare to die.

Govenor Foss presided over the meeting of the council. He announced that he had received a telegram from Dr. Brown of North Adams, which said that Phelps had been a degenerate from birth, and a confirmed alcoholic. He urged commutation on the ground of clemency.

Dr. Brown was called up on the telephone, and interrogated by Lieutenant Governor Luce, who drew from the doctor the statement that the doctor could not pass upon the details of the crime of which Phelps was convicted.

After the vote had been taken, the council made public the following statement:

"The members of the council who voted against commuting the sentence of Silas N. Phelps have with great reluctance performed what seemed to them an imperative duty. It has been made the more difficult and painful through the receipt of a large number of lettetrs, written by well-meaning persons, for the most part betaying ignorance of the real facts.

"To illustrate, it has been freely alleged that an armed mob without warning burst in the door of Phelps at dead of night. This is not true. A sheriff's posse of not more than six or seven men, all told, about sunrise, with abundant warning, sought to apprehend a man well informed of their identity and errand, who fully expected arrest, having already called a selectman by telephone and said to him: 'I have just stabbed a man. If they come to arrest me they will never take me alive.' These words appear in the evidence.

"Again, it was stated to the council that on the first ballot the jury stood ten to two for a verdict of murder in the second degree. Trustworthy information, however, is to the precise contrary—that the first ballot was ten to two for a verdict of murder in the first degree, the second eleven to one, and that the one man so voted solely because opposed to capital punishment."

The salient features of the case are discussed in detail in the statement.

Wife and Brother Not Surprised

Monroe Bridge, Mass., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Silas N. Phelps, wife of the slayer of Deputy Sheriff Haskins, was not surprised when informed that the executive council had voted against commutation. She hesitatetd a moment when told of the adverse action, but displayed no emotion.

"It is just as I expected," said Mrs. Phelps. "I did what I could. It would have done no good to have gone to Boston."

Elmer Phelps, brother of the condemned man, was unloading wood at a mill when told the news. "I expected it," was all the comment he made, and continued his work.

The residents of Monroe Bridge as a whole indorse the action of the governor's council, as they considered Silas Phelps a dangerous man.

Death of Trainer Delaney

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 26.—Billy Delaney, the widely known manager of prize fighters, died here yesterday afternoon. He was 58 years old.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

MEANS ECONOMY IN FOOD.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Economy, which is now the cry in all things, from postage to politics, has no more valiant helper than M. Soyer's system of paper bag cooking.

Roasts which have a knack of shrinking horribly in the pan come out of paper bags almost the size which they came from the butcher, and possessed of their full food value. They will have been cooked in vapors of their own essence—the best part of them will not have run out, to dry on the pan bottom, and smell most appetizingly, but be in large measure lost to the palate. There will be gravy in the bag, to be sure—gravy fit for a king.

In case of fish, the results are even better. Pan-cooking wastes a fifth, a fourth, sometimes even a third of a fish.

Vegetables also taste better, and are better, for bag cooking. Bag cooking preserves in them their essential salts, which boiling takes away.

Because all manner of seasoning is thus conserved and driven into the food care must be taken to use seasoning lightly.

Here is a way of using up cold dinner meat that hearty children will relish, and even the man of the house not disdain. Cut the meat in slices, neither too thick nor too thin, and as broad as possible, butter them, sprinkle them well with salted flour, and a very little pepper. Lay in a well-greased bag, side by side, then place upon each a tomato, peeled, hollowed out, dusted inside with sugar, salt and pepper, then stuffed. Boiled rice is a good stuffing, so is cooked macaroni or spaghetti cut small. Bread crumbs fried brown are likewise tasty. Season the stuffing well and mix through it all the snippets and trimmings of the meat. Use either butter, bacon, or cold boiled pork, well minced, to enrich the stuffing. Scatter between the tomatoes the scoopings from their insides. Place in bag, seal it, and cook in a hot oven about twelve minutes.

Quick Potatoes.—Take a large white potatoe for each person to be fed. Peel, slice thin, drop in cold water for five minutes, then drain, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and pack compactly in a well-greased bag, adding a tablespoonful of stock or milk and water, for each two potatoes. Seal, and cook twenty minutes. Boiled potatoes can be used, and take only half as long.

Baked Apples.—Wash well, but do not peel, cut out specks and bruises, core, fill the bottom of the core-space with a lump of butter, over which pile sugar, and add a bit of cinnamon. A clove stuck in the side may take the place of the cinnamon. Seal inside a well greased bag, and bake eighteen to twenty minutes in a fairly hot oven. Serve with sugar and cream or a hard sauce.

A PAPER BAG COOKED BRIDGE LUNCHEON.

By Nicholas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Broiled Chicken.
Mushrooms. Asparagus.
Olives. Radishes. Celery.
Pudding a la Mayence.
Black Coffee. Crackers. Cheese.

Broiled Chicken.—Split the chicken down the middle of the back, spread flat, and put a skewer in each side to prevent it from curling. Beat up a very fresh egg, with a pinch of salt, black pepper to taste, an ounce of melted butter, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce or something similar, and a teaspoonful of made mustard. Mix well. With a brush glaze the chicken with the mixture. Place in a greased bag with bread crumbs around and over it. Be careful that the skewers do not tear the bag. Seal up tight and cook thirty-five to forty minutes in a very hot oven.

Mushrooms.—Peal and wash the mushrooms, brush them lightly over with melted butter, dust with salt and pepper, and put into a buttered bag with a lump of butter, a little water, and a spoonful of lemon juice or port or sherry wine. Seal tight and cook in a hot oven twelve to twenty minutes.

Asparagus.—Trim and scrape as for boiling, wash very clean. Tie in bundles and put into a buttered bag, with a little salt and half a gill of water. Seal and cook thirty-five to forty minutes in a hot oven.

Pudding a la Mayence.—Rub half a pint of breadcrumbs through a fine wire sieve, add to them a tumblerful of wine and water, half an half, the rind of a small lemon, washed, dried and grated, three heaped tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar, and an ounce of butter. Mix well, pour into a buttered souffle dish, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, and the strained juice of the lemon. Beat the whites of the eggs to a very stiff froth, add powdered sugar to taste, and a pinch of salt. Color with a few drops of green spinach coloring, or pale pink with a little carmine or cochineal, pile on top, place in bag, put in a very moderate oven, and bake till the meringue is firmly set.

THE KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHEN SERVING PORK CHOPS.

MANY persons who do not care for pork in any other form will eat pork chops. The chops should be rather lean. Fresh pork should be pale red with white fat.

Pork chops may be marinaded for four hours in olive oil with a sliced onion, parsley, a bay leaf and salt. They may also be fried in this marinade if preferred. They may be served with tomato sauce.

Pork chops should be cut not quite so thick as mutton and the skin left on. They take one-third longer to cook. Well rubbed with pepper and salt and an onion previous to broiling is an improvement.

They can be served with any sauce, as apple, tomato, horseradish, mustard, sage or onion.

Frying Chops.

Buy the chops from the loin or rib, then trim the chine bone. Have your pan very hot. Put in a very little drippings to grease the pan. Put the chops into the hot pan and turn at once. Keep turning until they are nice and brown; dust with salt and pepper.

It takes from ten to twelve minutes on hot fire. After they are fried put on hot platter.

In the pan with the drippings put one tablespoonful flour; mix, then add one cupful cold water, stirring until smooth. Season to taste and add one tablespoonful caramel, so the gravy will be brown.

The small pieces of bone which were trimmed off the chops should be put in the side of the frying pan with the chops, as they help to make the gravy good.

Chops and Tomatoes.—Trim the chops and dust with powdered sage and onion juice. Put a nut of butter into the frying pan, then the chops and cook them slowly until well done.

Set the chops on a hot dish in the oven to keep warm.

To the gravy in the pan add a little hot water, a tablespoonful of butter that has been dipped into flour, pepper, salt and sugar to taste and a half cupful of tomato juice.

Stew five minutes, pour over the chops and serve hot.

Pork Cutlets.—Make a stuffing of sage and onions, slit the cutlets with a sharp knife and place the stuffing between. Brush with egg and sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Fry in boiling lard.

Bunyan Memorial Window Unveiled In Westminster Abbey

London, Jan. 26.—A memorial window for John Bunyan was unveiled in Westminster Abbey, 224 years after his death. The window illustrates scenes from his most noted work, "Pilgrim's Progress."

The inception of the memorial was due to American Baptists, who, during the world's Baptist congess held in London in 1905, animadverted strongly on the fact that nothing of the kind existed in Westminster Abbey.

The British people were stirred to action and the money was eventually raised in America and Great Britain.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

CHAPTER VII.

AN ANGEL MATERIALIZES.

WHERE had Freckles ever found and how had he transplanted such ferns? As McLean turned from them he stopped suddenly. He had reached the door of the cathedral. That which Freckles had attempted would have been patent to any one. What had been in the heart of the shy, silent boy when he had found that long, dim stretch of forest, decorated its entrance, cleared and smoothed its aisle and carpeted its altar? What veriest work of God was in these mighty living pillars and the arched dome of green! How like stained cathedral windows were the long openings between the trees, filled with rifts of blue, rays of gold and the shifting emerald of leaves! Where could be found mosaics to match this aisle paved with living color and glowing lights? Was Freckles a devout Christian and did he worship here? Or was he an untaught heathen and down this vista of entrancing loveliness did Pan come piping and dryads, nymphs and fairies dance for him?

Who can fathom the heart of a boy? McLean had been thinking of Freckles as a creature of unswerving honesty, courage and [illegible] was evidence of a heart [illegible] for beauty, art, companionship, worship. It was writ large all over the bare walls and furnishing of that little Limberlost clearing.

When Duncan came McLean told him the story of the night, and they laughed until they cried. Then they started around the line in search of the tree.

Said Duncan, "Now the boy is in for sore trouble!"

"I hope not," answered McLean. "You never in all your life saw a cur whipped so completely. He won't come back for the repetition of the chorus. We can surely find the tree. If we can't Freckles can. I will bring enough of the gang to take it out at once. That will insure peace for a time at least, and I am hoping that in a month more the whole gang can be moved here. It will soon be fall, and then, if he will go, I intend to send Freckles to my mother to be educated. With his quickness of mind and body and a few years' good help he can do anything. Why, Duncan, I'd give a hundred dollar bill if you could have been here and seen for yourself."

Locating the tree was an easy task because it was so well identified. When the rumble of the lumber wagons passing the cabin on the way to the swamp wakened Freckles next morning he sprang up and was soon following them. The tree was a giant maple and so precious that they almost dug it out by the roots.

McLean had told Freckles to ride on a section of the maple with him, but now the boy begged to go into the swamp with Duncan.

"I don't see why you want to go," said McLean. "I have no business to let you out today at all."

"It's me chickens, sir," answered Freckles.

Freckles hurried into the swamp. He was some little distance behind, but he could still see the men. Before he overtook them they had turned from the west road and had entered the swamp toward the east. The underbrush was almost impenetrable. As they plunged into it a great black bird swept over their heads.

Freckles danced wildly. "It's me chickens! Oh, it's me chickens!" he shouted. "Oh, Duncan, come quick! You've found the nest of me precious chickens!"

Duncan hurried down to the mouth of a monstrous log, but Freckles was before him. He crashed through poison vines and underbrush regardless of any danger and climbed on the stump. When Duncan got there he was shouting like a wild thing.

"It's hatched!" he yelled. "Oh, me big chicken has hatched out me little chicken, and there's another egg. I can see it plain, and, oh, the funny little white baby! Duncan, can you see me little white chicken?"

Duncan could easily see it, and so could every one else. Freckles tenderly carried the hissing, blinking little thing out to the light in a leaf lined hat. The men found it sufficiently wonderful to satisfy even Freckles, who had forgotten he was ever sore or stiff, and coddled over it with every blarneying term of endearment he knew.

Duncan gathered up his tools. "Deal's off, boys!" he said cheerfully. "The log mauna be touched until Freckles' chaukies have finished with it. We might as weel gang. Better put it back, Freckles. It's just out and it may chill. Ye will probably hae twa the morn."

Freckles deposited the baby beside the egg. When he came back he said,

"DEAL'S OFF, BOYS!" HE SAID CHEERFULLY.

"I made a big mistake not to be bringing the egg out with the baby, but I was fearing to touch it. It's shaped like a hen's egg, and it's big as a turkey's, and the beautifulest blue—just splattered with big brown splotches, like me book said, precise. But you never saw such a sight as it made on the yellow of the rotten wood beside that funny leathery faced little white baby."

"Tell you what, Freckles," said one of the teamsters. "Have you ever heard of this bird woman that goes all over the country with a camera and makes pictures? She made some on my brother Jim's place last summer, and Jim's so wild about them he quits plowing and goes after her about every nest he finds. He helps her all he can to get them, and then she gives him a picture. Jim's so proud of what he has he keeps them in the Bible. He shows them to everybody that comes and brags about how he helped to take them. If you're smart you'll send for her and she'll come and make a picture just like life. If you help her she will give you one. It would be uncommon pretty to keep after our birds are gone. I dunno what they are. I never see their like before. They must be something rare. Any you fellows ever see a bird like that hereabouts?"

No one ever had.

"Well," said the teamster, "failing to get this log lets me off till noon, and I'm going to town. If I was making a living taking bird pictures seems to me I'd be mighty glad for a chance to take one like that."

"Then you be sure to tell her to come," said Freckles.

The next morning Freckles hurried about the trail, and on his way down the east side he slipped in to see the chickens. The mother bird was on the nest. He was afraid the other egg might just be hatching, so he did not venture to disturb her. He made the round and reached his study early. He had his lunch along and did not need to start on the second trip until the middle of the afternoon. He would have long hours to work on his flower bed, improve his study and learn about his chickens.

The heat became more insistent. Noon came, and Freckles ate his dinner and settled for an hour or two on a bench with a book.

Perhaps there was a breath of sound, Freckles could never afterward remember, but for some reason he lifted his head just as the bushes parted and the face of an angel looked through. Saints, nymphs and fairies had floated down his cathedral aisle for him many times, with forms and voices of exquisite beauty.

Parting the wild roses by the entrance was beauty of which Freckles had never dreamed. Was it real or would it vanish as the other dreams had done? He took a step nearer, gazing intently. This was real flesh and blood. And it was in every way kin of the Limberlost, for no bird of its branches swung with easier grace than this dainty young thing rocked on the bit of morass on which she stood. A sapling beside her was not straighter nor rounder than her slender form. Her soft, waving hair clung about her face with the heat, and curled over her shoulders. It was all of one piece with the gold of the sun which filtered through the branches. Her eyes were just the deepest blue of the iris, her lips the reddest of the foxfire, and her cheeks exactly of the same satin as the wild rose petals caressing them. She was smiling on Freckles in perfect confidence, and she cried, "Oh, I'm so delighted that I've found you!"

"An'—an' was you looking for me?" quavered the boy, incredulous.

"I hoped I might find you," said the angel. "You see, I didn't do as I was told, and I'm lost. The Bird Woman said I should stay in the carriage until she came back. She's been gone hours. It's a perfect Turkish bath in there, and I'm all lumpy with mosquito bites. Just when I thought that I couldn't bear it another minute, along comes the biggest Papilio Ajax you ever saw. I knew how pleased she'd be, so I ran after it. It flew so slow and so low that I thought a dozen times I had it. Then all at once it went out of sight over the trees, and I couldn't find my way back to save me. I think I've walked over an hour. I have been mired to my knees. A thorn raked my arm until it is bleeding, and I'm so tired and warm."

MARGIN SHEETS ARE PRODUCED AT TRIAL

Counsel For Chicago Packers Treated to a Surprise

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Counsel for the government surprised the defense in the packers' trial when they produced thirty-five original weekly summary margin sheets for shipments made by the National Packing company into the eastern territory between January and August, 1910.

Steiner G. Langher, margin clerk for the Hammond Packing company, a subsidiary of the National Packing company, who was on the stand all day, identified the sheets as having been compiled under his direction.

The sheets showed the total pounds of meat shipped each week from the different plants to the National Packing company, with the "working" and the "close margins," terms used by the packers for the average test cost and selling price of the product.

The government contends that these sheets were sent to the offices of the company in Chicago every Monday and were used at the directors' meetings of the National Packing company each Tuesday afternoon, when the alleged agreements in regard to shipments and margins were made for the current week.

BOTTLE-FED INFANTS

Percentage of Mortality Among Them Is Rated Very High

Boston, Jan. 26.—Dr. William H. Davis, statistician of the Boston board of health, was the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts boards of health yesterday afternoon.

He took for his subject "The Prevention of Infant Mortality by Breast Feeding." He said it was stated that 80 or 85 percent of infant mortality was among the bottle-fed infants.

"The actual deaths of infants last year was 2245, which gives a rate of 127 per thousand births. Breast feeding of all babies would have saved nearly 1000 lives last year, and the death rate per 1000 births would have been seventy-one instead of 127."

JUSTICE FINES HIMSELF

Neighbor Had Complained That His Chickens Were a Nuisance

Pittsburg, Jan. 26.—M. P. McMahon of Ingram, recently appointed justice of the peace of the little panhandle borough, had the distinction of making himself the first victim of the law under his administration and fining himself $1.50 for maintaining a nuisance.

His own chickens destroyed a number of pies baked by a neighbor expressly for a Presbyterian church supper. The neighbor complained and McMahon fined himself.

HUNT FOR "VAHDAH" OF THE SUN CULT

Wanted In Chicago on Contempt of Court Charge

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Detectives have begun a nation-wide search for Mrs. Elizabeth Lindsay, "Vahdah" of the sun cult and mother of "Billy" Lindsay, the Philadelphia boy heir, to arrest her on an attachment writ issued by Judge Pinckney of the juvenile court. The judge declared her in contempt for not producing the boy. If she is apprehended outside the state extradition papers will be ordered by Governor Deneen to bring her to Chicago.

Attorney Robertson accused Attorney McEwen for the Lindsay family of having given the case undue publicity and furnishing the newspapers with "romances." McEwen moved that the court declare Mrs. Lindsay in contempt and find that the mother and Ottoman Zar-Adusht Hanish, head of the cult, were unfit guardians for little "Billy." Mrs. Lindsay is believed to be near Philadelphia.

25 YEARS IN PRIESTHOOD

A number of relatives and friends in local circles will be in attendance at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ordination to the priesthood of Rev. William C. White, CSSR, which takes place next Sunday in Saratoga, New York. Fr. White was born in this city and is well and familiarly known in the West Quincy district, where the members of his family reside. He is one of the most widely known members of the Redemptorist Congregation of Missionary Fathers and is a speaker of much note.

He is a brother of James White, the popular police officer, who patrols the district of the Metropolitan Police department in the West Quincy Boulevard vicinity. Fr. White received his early education in the schools of this city and joined the Redemptorist Congregation at the completion of his High school course.

BRIEFS

The Machinists' Union held a meeting in Electa Hall, Thursday evening.

A regular meeting of the Quincy Heptasophs took place in Protection Hall Thursday evening.

The members of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers will hold a dancing party this evening in Electa Hall.

Mrs. David Fulton of Oxenbridge road who was so seriously ill is now able to sit up and convalescing favorably.

The college club banquet at the Y. M. C. A. announced for this evening has been postponed. The date will be announced later.

An illustrated lecture on "Rome" will be given in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, this evening by Rev. Andrew J. O'Brien D. D., professor of Dogmatic Theology at Brighton Seminary.

G. B. Bates will have something to say in Saturday's Ledger regarding the grade crossing and the building of the connecting link of the Boulevard from the Wollaston shore to Adams street.

The regular weekly whist party of the Houghs Neck Catholic Lyceum took place in the club rooms Thursday evening. Souvenirs were won by Arthur Fay, Mrs. Clara Catarius, Charles Freedy and Mrs. Thomas F. Philip.

A meeting of the City Officials of 1912 with Mayor Stone will be held at City Hall tonight. The main idea of the meeting is that the officials may become acquainted with each other before they take office. There will be no lunch or cigars but just a plain social gathering.

A number of Quincy college boys are at home for the mid-winter vacation. Among them are Huntington and Thomas Hardwick of Harvard, Charles Hull, Roy Sidelinger and Gordon Jameson of Tech. Roy Sidelinger will attend the reception tonight of President McLaurin to the freshmen.

OFFICERS INSTALLLED.

The degree staff of the local lodge, Order of Moose installed the officers of Brockton Lodge, 562, at Brockton, Thursday evening and worked the degree on 18 candidates. Deputy Supreme Dictator Leon C. Claflin was in charge of the installation work and was assisted by A. W. Pierce, supreme vice-dictator, A. W. Williams, supreme prelate, John Heffernan, supreme inner guard and E. C. Killin, supreme seargent at arms.

The work of the local staff was well executed and the Brockton members were loud in their praises of the same. About fifteen members of the local lodge were in attendance.

Getting Even.

Eels are the luxury of the East end, and the fish shop stuck up proudly the notice "We sell eels to the king." From the opposite side of the road the rival salesman watched his customers diverted to the shop that claimed to supply the royal table with eels. And then, after a week's reflection, he put up the rival notice: "God save the king!"—London Chronicle.

QUINCY A. A. LEADS LEAGUE

Thursday Night's Victory Makes Them Leaders of the League

FAST GAME

Words fail to express the enthusiasm and gratification that were demonstrated in St. Mary's Hall, West Quincy, last evening, when both basketball teams of the Quincy A. A. triumphed over their Cathedral A. A. opponents from the South End and incidentally placed the local association in the leadership of the Greater Boston Basketball league. The contests between the contending teams had been awaited with keen intensity and this was responsible for the fact that fully 450 rooters, the largest number noticeable at a basketball struggle in local circles since the league started, were in attendance.

The opponents of the local boys have recently come to the fore, through their sterling work, and their victory a short time ago over the strong St. Joseph's aggregation had caused them to be heralded throughout the circuit as a foremost contender for the honors of supremacy in the league. The local players, however, were prepared to make themselves equal to the occasion and were resolved to redeem themselves for the defeat sustained some time ago at the hands of the cathedral combination.

As was expected, the game resolved into a struggle for blood and from start to finish, the game was replete with playing of a rare and spectacular order.

The team work of the local team was greatly superior to that exhibited by the visitors, and while at times the score was rather close, the Quincy A. A. players never seemed in danger of going down to defeat. Manager Flynn's five were especially desirous of annexing a victory on this occasion for by so doing. Quincy A. A. took possession of first place, beyond the least possible doubt, and every effort will henceforth be made to bring home the laurels to the Granite City.

As has been the case in practically all the games this season, the work of the Duggan boys was the feature. The formidable centre of the local team had a total of eight baskets from the floor to his credit, while the famous "Dan" caged nine from the floor, all of which were made in the last half of the game. But in justice to the other members of the team, it must be stated that they accredited themselves with honors, and O'Rourke proved himself an able master of the situation when occasion demanded.

Kelley and Boyle played exceptionally well, and their passing of the ball at all times was a potent factor in enabling the local team to emerge in triumph. Hebert was also given a chance to show his efficiency and gave every evidence of being a first class player.

For the visitors, Costello, as predicted by the Ledger, was the lone star, securing four baskets from the floor and putting the ball through the loop hole on tries from fouls on seven occasions. He thus made fifteen of the twenty-one points scored by his team. His playing was all the more remarkable when we take into consideration that he was the one player of the opposing team who was closely watched at all times, and was covered at every moment by the local team.

His running mate, Ring, also played well, as did also O'Leary and Nee.

The game elicited the greatest enthusiasm imaginable and the hall fairly rocked with shouts of joy and gladness when Quincy A. A. was pronounced the victor.

As for the game between the second teams, but little need be said, for the local boys kept the game in hand from start to finish and were victorious by the decisive score of 41 to 9. "Butes" Chapman, Dackers and Jenkins secured all the points for the local boys, and gave an exhibition of basketball which measured up to the standard of the first team variety. Jenkins got eight baskets, while the other two aforementioned had six a piece. Lyons and Frazier were the only visitors who managed to show up to advantage, while Foley secured three goals from foul. The local boys were superior to their opponents in all departments. The summaries:

TENNIS CLUB LEAP YEAR

A pretty leap year party was held in Colonial hall Friday evening by the ladies of the Presidents Hill Tennis club. The affair although not largely attended was very enjoyable. The ladies in charge were Mrs. Charles Sampson, Mrs. George W. Abele, Miss Gertrude Allen and Miss Olive Allen.

SATURDAY BOYS' MEETING

"The Lights and Shadows of a Great City" will be given in Y. M. C. A. hall, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, in place of Ben Hur. Owing to a recent decision made by the Supreme Court, all stories which have been copyrighted cannot be reproduced except with the special permission of the holder of the copyright. Thus Ben Hur has been withdrawn from the collections of all dealers.

The story which is to be given is one of intense interest and great vividness. The lives of two boys in the East side of New York City are depicted by means of the story and 61 colored slides.

The numerous forms of amusement to which boys resort and their dangers are brought out very forcibly as well as life on Blackwell's Island, in the Newsboys' Homes and other institutions for the bad as well as for the good boy are finely illustrated in this story.

CORNELIUS DRISCOLL.

The funeral of Cornelius Driscoll, of 5 Temple street, who died after a brief illness at the Carney Hospital last Wednesday, took place from the undertaking rooms of Edward D. Barrett this morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at the Church of St. John the Baptist at nine o'clock by Rev. Fr. John J. Casey.

The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant, furnished by the regular choir under the direction of John Mahon organist. Solos were rendered by Mrs. Mary Burns King and Miss Josephine McCarthy, the former singing the "De-Profundis" at the offertory and the latter the "Pie Jesu" after the libera. A large delegation of the order of Eagles, of which the deceased was a member, attended the funeral. A standing wreath of flowers from the Eagles was among the floral tributes. The remains were interred in St. Mary's Semetery, Randolph.

Thinking While Asleep.

It is rather startling to hear that man thinks as intelligently asleep as awake, but no less an authority than Sir Arthur Mitchell admits that thinking is essential to life, says the Chicago Tribune. Thinking when we sleep may be different from when we are awake, but the process goes on just the same. Man cannot think unless he is alive, and he cannot be alive without thinking. Dreams are not as confused as we think. They become confused from the standpoint of memory, but are not from the point of the dream organ. Memory half blurred in trying to recall them makes dreaming seem confused. Dreams born under normal conditions are normal. It is only those that are created under abnormal conditions that are strange, for, as Cicero said: "It cannot be doubted the number of true dreams would be greater if we were to fall asleep in a better condition. Filling ourselves with wine and flesh obscures our dreams."

The Home.

The blessing of a house is goodness. The honor of a house is hospitality. The ornament of a house is cleanliness. The happiness of a house is contentment.

MENDING A FAUCET

An Easy Job That Mr. Gimp Tackled With Confidence.

IT GAVE HIM A BIG SURPRISE.

When He Got Through, or as Near Through as He Was Permitted to Get, He Was Rather Subdued—The Plumber's Comment Was Quite Brief.

Mr. Gimp came home from the city the other day and burst into his house with an air that meant business. He smiled when the maid told him his wife was out, laid a parcel on the stairs, took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves, took his parcel and went up to the bathroom, where he opened the package. It contained a monkey wrench, a screw driver, half a dozen assorted rubber washers and a pipe wrench.

"Thank goodness, my wife's not home!" said Mr. Gimp. "If there is anything upsets a man it is the foolish questions a woman asks when he is trying to do a job. Plumber! She'd get a plumber to mend a leaky faucet, would she? I'll show her that a man of intelligence can do a job in five minutes that a plumber would take all day to do and charge $5. Now!"

Mr. Gimp turned the faucet. Not a drop of water came out. He turned the other. It was dry. They were the bathtub faucets, and the far one had been leaking for a week, while Mr. Gimp promised day by day to attend to it.

"Well," said Mr. Gimp as he saw that no water came out of the faucets, "that's more sense than I thought that woman possessed. Turned off the water, did she? Didn't let it run all day when there was no need of it, hey? Now!"

Mr. Gimp took the monkey wrench in one hand and the pipe wrench in the other and climbed into the bathtub. Then he sat on the edge while he studied the faucet.

"Lemme see!" he said. "You take off that handle, and you unscrew that top thingus. That's what you do." So he did that. Twice the monkey wrench slipped and he skinned three knuckles, but he got the handle off, and he unscrewed the cap and pulled out the rod that held the washer. Then he peered down into the remaining portion of the faucet and looked at the washer.

The washer seemed in good condition. He peered into the faucet and ran his finger around in it, accumulating iron rust on it. If the washer was not broken what could be the matter with the thing? There must be something the matter deeper down. He set his pipe wrench around the pipe and grasped the faucet with the monkey wrench. The faucet held like grim death. The more it resisted the more he pushed and pulled and grunted and said strong words.

When the faucet gave at last it gave suddenly, and Mr. Gimp fell over the side of the bathtub and landed with a bump that shook the house. He was up again in a minute and in the bathtub. The faucet was badly marred where the wrench had dug into its soft brass, and the nose of it was twisted awry, but the faucet was off. He took the faucet to the window and studied it. Except for the damage he had done it, there seemed nothing the matter with it.

"Some fool plumber," said Mr. Gimp angrily, "has put the wrong sort of washer into this faucet. That's what's the matter, and that's all."

He picked out a different sort of washer and put it on the plunger. It was not a good fit, but it was a change anyway.

"Now," said Mr. Gimp, and he climbed back into the bathtub. He humped himself down on his knees and looked into the water pipe on which he had to screw the faucet. "Now," he said.

As if that had been the signal, a strong, vigorous stream of water shot out of the pipe and struck Mr. Gimp in the eye. He gasped for breath and tumbled backward. But the stream pursued him. He got up and grappled with the stream.

Unless you have tried to grapple with a stream like that you cannot even faintly imagine the difficulty of giving it a good, self satisfying grapple. A stream like that will not fight fair. If you put your hand over the pipe the stream will squirt out in forty-two directions. Some of them hit the ceiling. Most of them hit Mr. Gimp. He wrestled silently until the bathroom was well soaked and he was well soaked, and then he decided it was better just to let the stream spurt. It spurted into the bathtub anyway. So he got out of the tub and dripped on the floor and pawed water out of his hair and wiped water out of his eyes.

And just then the plumber came upstairs again. He had been down cellar to turn on the water after he had fixed the faucet, and it was quite natural that he should come up again to see if the faucet was well fixed. So he came up, and he looked into the bathroom, and he saw the faucet lying in the bathtub among wrenches and water, and he saw the water spurting heartily.

And all he said was, "Well, I'll be durned!" Just like that—"Well, I'll be durned!" That was all he said.—Ellis Parker Butler in Judge.

Didn't Want Too Much.

QUINCY'S LUCK COMING BACK

The ill luck that has been pursuing the members of the Quincy Council K. of C. bowling team was dispelled last evening when the local five scored a decisive victory over the Dorchester Council combination at the Columbus club alleys last evening, by making it three straight.

The members of local team rolled consistently throughout and were thus enabled to emerge in triumph. The high single string mark, 109, was made by McGuir of the losers. Walsh of the same team had the highest sum total for the three strings, attaining the 276 mark.

Frohman Knew.

It was reported to Charles Frohman that one of his most prosperous male stars was in a fair way of getting married. "I don't believe it," answered the manager, who is himself a confirmed single man; "he will escape; he was always a good fighter."

Bursting With Self-Importance.

"What is the matter with Jones? He used to be a modest sort of fellow, but ately he seems almost bursting with self-importance." "Haven't you heard? Mrs. Jones is suing another woman for alienating his affections, and put the damages at fifty thousand dollars."—Judge.

Moving Stairways.

The advantages of moving stairways include the following: (a) There is no waiting. (b) The service is continuous throughout traffic hours. (c) Passengers are carried practically to the point of their destination, and the necessity for long connecting passageways is thus avoided. (d) Moving stairways can deliver the same number of people for a short or long rise, whereas with lifts the capacity is dependent on the number of lifts and the depths of the shafts. (e) In case of breakdown passengers can walk up a moving stairway as up an ordinary staircase.

MANY VISITORS

A semi public installation of the officers of Manet encampment I. O. O. F. was held Friday evening at Odd Fellows hall, and was the occasion of a large gathering of patriacns as well as many representatives of subordinate lodges from Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Cohasset and South Boston, in all an attendance of upwards of 200.

The installation ceremony was performed by D. D. G. Patriarch Bert J. Whitmore, who was accompanyed by the following suite:—

D. D. G. H. P.—C. W. Wallace.
D. D. G. S. W.—John R. McClennan
D. D. G. S.—William E. Parker.
D. D. G. T.—Edgar L. Chase.
D. D. G. J. W.—F. Mackintosh.
D. D. G. Sentinel - Frank D. J. Hurley.
Assistant D. D. G. Sentinel—George C. Apel.

The work of installation was exceptionally finely rendered by the Grand Officers, music during the ceremony being furnished by the John Hancock lodge orchestra.

The officers installed were as follows:

C.P.—Walter H. Walker.
H. P.—Ethan A. Rich.
S. W.—A. S. Kennedy.
Scribe—George C. Ela.
Treasurer—Frank L. Carlton.
J. W.—James E. Richardson.
Guide—William Esau.
First Watch—James Simpson.
Second Watch—Robert Wood.
Third Watch—William Addison.
Fourth Watch—Thomas J. Smith.
First G. of T.—Percy E. Bates.
Second G. of T.—Matthew Swanson.
I. S.—George Davis.
O. S.—Edward L. Goodridge.

After the installation there were brief remarks by the Grand Officers who congratulated Manet Encampment on its growth and good standing. There were also remarks from several members of the subordinate lodges present and humorous selections by Walter C. Guild of Boston.

After the business session an adjournment was made to the banquet hall, where Frank L. Badger served one of his famous oyster chowders, following which there was a social hour.

It was one of the most enjoyable evenings the encampment has held for a long time.

LECTURE ON "ETERNAL CITY"

Over three hundred people assembled in St. Mary's hall, West Quincy, last evening and listened to a most interesting and instructive lecture on Rome, illustrated by numerous stereopticon views, given by Rev. Fr. Andrew J. O'Brien, D. D., Professor of Dogmatic Theology at Brighton Seminary. The lecture was highly appreciated and had been awaited with keen anxiety for some time, owing to the fact that Dr. O'Brien was born and reared in the West section of the city and was most familiarly known by all who were in attendance.

It was the initial attempt of Dr. O'Brien in the lecturing field, but he accredited himself in the same manner that characterized his work while a student at Boston College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1906. While matriculating at the Boston Institution, Dr. O'Brien took part in dramatics and in oratorical contests of all sorts. He was a winner of the Fulton Debating medal, considered the most enviable prize within the power of the Boston College faculty to bestow. Be sides he was proficient in scholarship and led his class in all departments.

He studied for the priesthood in the American College in Rome, and while in the Eternal City made the most careful observations, surveying all the historical points of interests, never forgetting to focus his camera on any object that appealed to him. His lecture last evening included remarks on the Vatican, the Coliseum, the Catacombs, together with numbers of other conspicuous places which occupy foremost positions in the pages of history.

Dr. O'Brien gave a detailed account of the American College and the methods and customs of the students who congregated there from all over the world. He also spoke of the people of Italy in general and brought out many things which proved a source of especial pleasure to his auditors. The stereopticon views were clear and easily discernible and were a patnt factor in enabling the speaker to bring out the various points desired from time to time.

The affair was most successful and much of the credit for it is due the committee in charge, which was composed of the Misses Catherine Shea, Elizabeth Farrell, Sadie Monahan, Ethel Burns, Rena Mannix, Helen Farrell, and Elecia Elcock, and Mrs. Robert J. Teasdale.

BEST DOG IN SHOW.

SHOWER OF TIN TO NEWLYWEDS

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Oxner Surprised by Friends

THOSE PRESENT

Thursday evening a surprise party was given Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Oxner at the home of Mr. Oxner's parents' Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Oxner of 192 Fayette street. The party arrived at 8 o'clock and showered the bride and groom of last month with tinware of all descriptions, each article was wrapped and contained a verse which when read caused much merriment while side remarks by the recent groom added greatly to the gaiety.

A pleasing musical program was rendered, a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Cahill; piano solos by Mrs. Charles M. Roach, Miss May Gold and Miss Ruth Cahill and violin solo by E. Thornton Walter, accompanied by Miss Ruth Cahill. Refreshments of ice cream, sherbet, cake and fancy crackers were served.

At a late hour the guests departed, everyone voting it the best time ever.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Chester F. Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Roach, Mr. and Mrs. William E. S. Oxner, Miss Marion Baker, Miss Ethel Clifford, Miss Winnifred V. Church, Miss Christine Douglas, Miss Gladys Howe, Miss Olive Hatfield Miss Ethel Hatfield, Miss Olive Keyser, Miss Madaline Nesbit, Miss Clara Porter, Miss Lois Waring, Earl O. Church, John Dana Cahill, Aldwin Hatfield, John Miller, Everett Pryer and Lester Porter.

SURPRISE PARTY.

A large number of friends invaded the home of Elmer Paradise, on Side street, West Quincy, last evening and tendered him a surprise party of a most enjoyable nature. Hardly had the gathering come together when Miss Margaret Reinhalter, in behalf of those who were in attendance, stepped forth and in a few well chosen words, sincerely re-echoed by all, presented Mr. Paradise with a handsome signet ring.

The latter was deeply touched by the presentation of the gift, yet managed to respond very feelingly in accepting it. The affair was arranged under the direction of John Sheahan and Michael Saville. Games of all sorts were indulged in and a most enjoyable time was spent until a late hour.

LABOR HEARINGS.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

The newly elected officers of Merry Mount Lodge, 617, Knights of Honor, were inducted into office last evening in Grand Army Hall. The installation work was performed by Deputy William Brennan of Massachusetts Lodge. The following officers were installed:

Dictator—Thomas Huston.
Vice Dictator—Samuel Tutton.
Reporter—James Moodie
Financial Secretary— Joseph W. Stancomb.
Treasurer—Walter H. Dunbar.
Chaplain—James Birnie.
Guide—Arthur L. Sylvester.

Refreshments were served after the installation exercises and the remainder of the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner

CONFERENCE OF NEW OFFICIALS

City Officials of 1912 Meet Mayor Stone

FAMILY PARTY

Practically all of the city officials who will assume office the first Monday in February were present at City Hall, Friday evening to meet Mayor Stone. The meeting was entirely informal and more for the purpose of getting acquainted with each other than anything else.

The meeting was addressed by Mayor Stone, who spoke of some of the problems that would come up during the current year. He also outlined his ideas as to the conducting of the city's business. Brief remarks were also made by many of those present and it was evident that the new officials are to work in harmony.

While the most of the officials were acquainted with each other, there were some strangers, and the meeting afforded an excellent opportunity, as stated above, to get better acquainted. It is the intention of Mayor Stone to hold other meetings of a similar nature during the coming year.

CONFERENCES ON RELIGION.

Four special conferences on essential matters of religion and the church have been arranged at the Twentieth Century Club Hall, 3 Joy street, Boston for successive Saturday afternoons beginning at four o'clock. The programme is as follows:—

January 27. "The Church and Social Ethics. Can the church hold the social reformer?" To be led by Dr. Samuel M. Crothers of Cambridge.

February 3. "Prayer." To be led by President George E. Horr, of the Newton Baptist Theological School.

February 10. "The Bearing of Wealth or Poverty upon Religion." To be led by Mr. Robert A. Woods, head of the South End House Settlement, Boston.

February 17. "Education and Religion." To be led by Prof. George A. Coe of Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

The leader will use not more than forty minutes. A half-hour will then be available for questions and five-minute addresses.

The purpose of these meetings is to bring together men and women of different churches who are genuinely concerned in the progress of true religion and to secure the most useful constructive discussion possible of vital questions affecting the future of the church. The public is invited.

PIANO CLASSICS.

The program as arranged by Enrico Barraja for his first fortnightly informal reading of piano classics on Feb. 1 at his studio in The Greenleaf building is as follows:

Waltz—Op. 24—No. 2
Waltz—Op. 69—No. 2
Waltz—Op. 70—No. 3

Mazurka—Op. 7—No. 3
Mazurka—Op. 24—No. 1

HEARING NEXT WEEK.

It is expected that the hearing before the legislative committee on cities on the bill to separate Houghs Neck from Quincy will be held next week. The city is well prepared with facts and figures to show that Houghs Neck has actually received more than it has paid in taxes during the past few years The hearing promises to be an interesting one

ANNUAL DANCE OF ENGINEERS

Fully two hundred assembled in Electa hall last evening on the ocasion of the third annual dance of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and Machinists. The affair proved the mecca of attraction for a number of members of different unions and many were present from Dorchester, South Boston, Hyde Park, Braintree and Weymouth.

The affair began at eight o'clock and concluded with dancing at midnight. The music was furnished by the McLaughlin & Holmes orchestra, and a charming repertoire of selections was in order till nine o'colck. Refreshments were served during the evening and an entertainment of a most pleasing variety was likewise presented.

Those who participated in the entertainment included Harry Patterson, Duncan McKinnick, William Sheriff, and Albert Holmes. The special guest of the evening was John Nolan, president of the Eastern Division of the Society, who gave a masterly discourse on the history of the order in Quincy, and incidentally related many interesting features of his career in labor work, which has already extended over a period of forty years

Refreshmentswere served during the intermission, which took place shortly after ten o'clock. The aaair was pronounced a huge success and was the most successful the members have yet observed. The committee in charge included William Harvey, James McAnarney, George McGongal, and Allen McGeachie.

300 DRAUGHTSMEN OUT AT FORE RIVER SHIPYARD

Men Quit Work This Noon as a Protest Against New 48 Hour Week Rule

Request for 48 Hours' Pay and 44 Hours' Work Turned Down

The 300 draughtsmen employed at the Fore River Shipyard in the Engineering, Electrical and Hull departments quit work this noon as a protest against the new rule which said that they must work 48 hours a week.

This new rule as made to conform to the government requirements as to work on government battleships. While the rule will eventually be extended to all departments at the yard it only went into effect this week as far as the draughtsmen are concerned as they are the only ones working on the battleship contract.

The draughtsmen lost no time after therule was posted in holding an indignation meeting at which a proposition was drawn up and presented to President Bowles. This proposition asked fir 44 hours work and 48 hours, pay. The proposition was immediately turned down.

The draughtsmen claim that they have been working under a 46 hour schedule and have been giving the company 48 hours, the extra two hours being gratuitously, in order that they might have Saturday afternoons off throughout the entire year.

Another meeting of the draughtsmen was held after their proposition was turned down and another proposition considered upon which no decision has yet been given. The men claimed that if they remained at work this afternoon it would be taken as a sign that they intended to comply with the new rule so as a matter of protest they went out.

The determination to go out this noon was reached this morning. Soon after reporting for work a paper was started among the draughtmen to see if they would remain at work this afternoon or go out.

The paper in favor of quitting work this noon was signed to a man and at 12.30 this noon they laid aside their instruments and departed, although they do not wish their going out to be considered in any light other than as a protest. One of the draughtsmen when seen this noon said that it was not the four hours' pay that they cared so much for but they wanted Saturday afternoon off during the entire year and if they had to lose the pay for the four hours all well and good.

It is understood that the men are willing to compromise with the company, as to the working hours, and it is thought that the affair will be settled to the satisfaction of all parties next week.

Unless something unforseen happens they will report for work as usual Monday morning. The men who went out this noon did not include the chief draughtsmen in the three departments.

This is but the first of the troubles that are expected to arise from the putting into operation the eight hour schedule as required on government contracts and it will not be surprising if more trouble arises when the rule goes into effect in other departments.

From the high-headed way in which some people walk down the street, you would never imagine that their undershirt was still the property of the clothing man, and that the newspaper in their pocket represented one of the printer's bad debts.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

We expect that some joking genius is at the backing of the bill to make March 17 a legal holiday in Massachusetts under the title of Evacuation Day, for is it not also the birthday of the much lamented patron saint of our Irish fellow citizens, and has not the occasion been used for several years under the pleasing and patriotic guise of Evacuation Day to commemorate the birthday of the good St. Patrick? No, No, we have holidays enough for the present, but if we must have more let's be entirely impartial. Let's work in some Revolutionary event to bring in the birthday of Prince Bismarck or some reminiscence of Colonial days to commemorate the birthday of the First Napoleon, or some glorious victory in Mexico as a reminiscence of the ever honored Queen Victoria. So long as there are enough representatives of any nation on earth among us we'll try to arrange a local holiday so that they can celebrate it with patriotic even if disguised fervor.—Waltham Free Press.

Q.—Would not the teachings of a future probation tend to make the people careless and sinful in this life, knowing that they were to have a second chance in the life to come? (Dubious.)

Answer.—Not nearly as much as to teach that a hardened wretch by a death-bed confession would immediately be ushered into Heaven! Besides, a future probation would not signify a "second chance," save for a limited few, the Church of Christ, now being selected out of the world (Acts xv, 14) to be the Bride, and the Lamb's Wife. Most of the criminals inhabiting the jails and prisons of our land are, or were, members of some religious system that taught the sinner-hardening doctrine of eternal torment. Did the false teaching deter them from committing crime? Those who believe that the Creator is a God of love, and mercy, and justice, and that He has arranged seasons of blessings for the world in the coming age, when mankind is to have its only chance of salvation, are invariably ennobled, and elevated to a higher plane of morality, with greater reverence for their Creator, a God, whom to know, is to love. The truth sanctifies, while the error debases.

MILTON AND THE DISTRICT.

There are two matters before the Legislature that vitally affect Milton in its relation to the other muncipalities of the Metropolitan district. One of these is a bill for out and out annexation to Boston of the cities and towns within a ten-mile radius of the city, the question to be settled not by local option, but by a five-eighths vote of the voters voting in all the places; the other is the Metropolitan Planning Board proposed by the Metropolitan Plan Commission, which proposes a permanent board to attempt to bring about uniform development of the whole Metropolitan district. Compulsory annexation or any other annexation is not wanted in Milton, but the town cannot maintain a passive attitude on the question. A few years ago a compulsory annexation bill would have received little consideration: today, it must be regarded seriously, and Milton must do its part with other suburban cities and towns if they want to retain the right of local self-government. The bill should be killed before it ever reaches the floor of the Legislature.

The Metropolitan Planning Board on the other hand, appears to be a sensible arrangement for the non-political unification of the Metropolitan area. This board would consider all sorts of things afefcting the district, such as transportation by rail and by road, public and semi-public service of different sorts, and would have power to make up a definite program for improvements to be made in the future, bringing about a uniform scheme of development to be followed by all the committees in their individual enterprises, and by the State and Metropolitan district in the larger developments. It would interfere with local plans only in case they seemed in conflict with the plans for the whole district.

This scheme, we believe, is worthy of careful consideration in Milton. The town cannot well build a Chinese wall around its borders and completely isolate itself from its neighbors; in fact, it does not want to appear entirely self-sufficient; it does however, insist upon the right to continue to govern itself, as it has successfully done in the past.—Milton Record.

LETTER TO THE MAYOR.

Quincy, Mass., Jan. 27, 1912.

Hon. Eugene R. Stone,
Mayor of Quincy.

Dear Sir:—The Good Book says "By their fruit ye shall know them" and "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

Your inaugural to the citizens of Quincy I have carefully perused and superficially I would infer that along some lines you propose to do great things for the city. We will wait and see. You inadvertently or intentionally omitted to say a single word declaring your position or attitude on the greatest and most vital question that can ever come before the citizens of Quincy. On this question, the citizens and the many organizations of our city have gone on record and declared themselves with no uncertain sound for a plan known as the City Plan of Depression. This question is now pending before a Special Commission and that question is the elimination of the grade crossings at Water street and Saville street.

As a member elected on the grade crossing committee, I respectfully submit and ask you and your city solicitor to publicly answer the following questions relating to the grade crossing problem and the Furnace Brook Parkway problem, a House Bill asking for two hundred and forty thousand dollars (240,000.) These unfortunately are inseparable and irrevocably connected one with the other. Any action at this critical and dangerous time appropriating $240,000 into the hands of the Metropolitan Park Commission opens up an avenue of escape for the Special Commission with a reasonable excuse for bringing in a report favoring the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad plan of a Chinese wall through our city. Under no possible circumstances should the appropriation of $240,000 be made at this time or any other time before the grade crossing problem has been finally settled, no matter how cunning or clever the pretext may be to do so. The appropriation of $240,000 for the Furnace Brook Parkway at this hazardous time sounds the death knell to the City Plan of Depression.

Now, Mr. Mayor and Mr. City Solicitor, will you please turn on the light?

Question 1. Why did ex-Mayor Shea and his city solicitor keep the citizens of Quincy in utter darkness and ignorance of their proceedings officially before the Special Commission for the past four years or since the closing of the public hearing by the Special Commission on the grade crossing question in Quincy?

Question 2. What is the significance and meaning of this mute silence by our city officials for four long years on the most stupendous, far-reaching question that ever came before the citizens of Quincy for consideration and solution?

Question 3. Why has it been impossible to obtain any information from any official in any department at City Hall during these four years relating to official proceedings on the grade crossing question? Why this secrecy? Why this mystery?

Question 4. Why did ex-Mayor Shea at the banquet of the Board of Trade suggest that a new highway be built beginning at Hancock street between Music hall and Henry L. Kincaide's furniture store, following along Town brook under the N. Y., N. H., & H. R. R. tracks near School street through the meadows to Water street?

Allow me to say right here that I, at the next meeting of the Board of Trade, took exceptions to the Mayor's suggestions and criticised it as follows: Such a scheme was as crooked as a ram's horn and as crazy as it was crooked and useless as it would be worthless. This crooked way bears the finger marks of a colossal land scheme of private and business interests for profit at a great expense of many, many thousands of dollars to the tax-payers of Quincy. The shadow is on the wall of another nigger under the wood-pile scheming in the interest of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. plan to build that Chinese wall through our city closing up Water street, School street and Saville street so that this new highway can be built to catch the ever-increasing tide of travel and traffic from South Quincy and West Quincy into Hancock street between Music hall and Mr. Kincaide's store. This scheme would be an everlasting damage and disgrace to our city and an eternal shame to those who permit it. I will admit that the ways of Quincy are crooked—laid out when the cows came home. But don't let us add to our crooked ways, by making the crooked "Crookeder." Let us mend our crooked ways and make the new ones straight.

This new highway, suggested by Mayor Shea, is not a public necessity, no more adapted to the wants of the public today than the stage-coach for rapid transit. Therefore, I move to make an amendment to the Mayor's crooked highway suggestion with a straight one as follows: Continue Franklin street from School street to Granite street at the rear of Hotel Greenleaf running parallel with and betweenH ancocks treet and the N. H., N. H. & H. R. R.. This public necessity makes a direct and shorter highway from South and West Quincy to City hall, City square, Depot, Post Office, Library and secondary schools and opens up new business territory without great expense to the tax-payers and does not interfere with the City Plans of depression of the grade crossings at Water street and Saville street. Think it over, Mr. Tax-payer.

Question 5. Who are the advocates and promoters of this House Bill to be presented by Representative Leslie asking for an appropriation of $240,000 at this critical time before the grade crossing question is settled?

Question 6. Why are you and your city solicitor making such herculean efforts, leaving no stone unturned to promote the passing of this bill appropriating $240,000 under the ruse that the Furnace Brook Parkway will only be built as far as Hancock street?

Question 7. Why are you asking for $240,000 to build only half the distance of the missing link (from the Quincy shore reservation to Hancock street) which is fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000) more than ex-Mayor Shea's bill asking for two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($225,000) to complete the entire distance from the Quincy Shore reservation to Adams street.

Question 8. Why did you at this critical time have presented to the Council what appears on the surface to be an innocent order asking its approval of a self-nominated committee of yourself and the city solicitor to appear at hearing before the Legislative Committee on Metropolitan affairs urging the importance of this appropriation of $240,000 for the Furnace Brook Parkway before the grade crossing question is settled?

Question 9. Were you not a very interested party at the special meeting of the Board of Trade called to consider another matter and did you not exercise a very active part in urging the passing of a resolution without proper and fair notice to all the members of the Board of Trade nominating a committee to urge the passing of the bill appropriating $240,000 for the Furnace Brook Parkway before the grade crossing problem was settled?

Question 10. Are any of those men appointed on the Board of Trade Committee interested in a financial or business way in the locality of the proposed new highway from Hancock street following Town Brook to Water street or where the Furnace Brook Parkway is laid out?

Question 11. If this appropriation of $240,000 should pass the Legislature, it immediately becomes the property of the Metropolitan Park Commissioners to be used for the Furnace Brook Parkway in Quincy. They, being a permanent commission created by the State, have absolute control and will do just as they please asking no questions. With you as mayor to obtain its just rights, what earthly right would the City of Quincy have pleading before the Metropolitan Park Commission that the Furnace Brook Parkway be built over the railroad tracks thus accomplishing the City Plans of Depression? The city of Quincy is up against the all-powerful interests of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., who will demand that their plan of a Chinese wall through our city must prevail with the clamoring of private interests and land schemers. Both these will urge that the railroad plan must be adopted so that the new highway would become a reality. What would become of the many business men and their business interests on these business streets when they are closed to public travel by this plan of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.? What is to become of the property damaged by the railroad plan of a Chinese wall through our city and the closing of our streets that have been open to public travel and business purposes for over one hundred years? Who is to recompense the owners of this damaged property?

Question 12. Has the Special Commission on Grade Crossings in Quincy arrived at any conclusion as to the solution of the elimination of the grade crossings at Water street and Saville street, if so, what is it? If not, why not?

G. B. BATES,
Member of Grade Crossing Com.

STRONG POINTS ABOUT THIS BANK

This is a bank financed by Quincy business men FOR Quincy business men. It is a depository for State funds. It has convenient, commodious offices and an up-to-date modern vault. Its hours are suited to Quincy's needs—its officers and attendants are anxious to serve you cheerfully and courteously. Let us explain to you personally the privileges of our depositors.

NATIONAL GRANITE BANK

Furnish Your Home On Our "Club Plan"

Our "Club Plan" is not to make more profit on goods through exorbitant prices, but to make the buying easier for you and to broaden our field of operations in the outfitting of homes. It is not an "installment plan" in the broad sense of the words, but one that invites to its membership those who have a steady income, yet one not large enough to permit a person to accumulate and "get ahead." One tenth to a fifth of the entire bill is the initiation fee at time of purchase, the balance we divide into weekly or monthly payments.

"Anybody's" credit is not good—only worthy persons are entitled to membership. The plan is particularly advantageous to young folks just starting housekeep ing, as it enables them to enjoy the comforts of a home without paying the so-called "installment prices." The same courtesy is extended to club members that is extended to customers who run big accounts.

MORGAN'S ART LOANS

Treasures Valued at $100,000,000 to Be Concentrated at Home

New York, Jan. 27.—The ultimate concentration of the scattered art treasures which J. P. Morgan has been collecting for many years at an estimated outlay of $100,000,000 is said to be the plan behind arrangements which the American financier is now making for the transfer of an invaluable collection of ivories and gems from the South Kensington museum in London to New York.

In confirming the report of this transfer and denying that it was undertaken because of any dissatisfaction over the treatment of his art loans to the British museums, J. P. Morgan, Jr., hinted that his father proposes to prepare also for the transfer of his objects of art now in Paris and other art centres on the continent to America.

KING NICHOLAS

Montenegro Ruler Who Who May Lose Throne

ENGINEERED BY EMIGRANTS

Montenegrin Plot Backed With Money From United States

DOWNFALL OF THE DYNASTY

London, Jan. 27.—A dispatch from Cettinje, Montenegro, reports that the police there have discovered a widespread movement to overthrow the Montenegrin dynasty and establish a republic.

It is alleged that the movement is being engineered chiefly by Montenegran emigrants in the United States, whose heardquarters are in Belgrade.

Montenegro has been a kingdom for less than two years, although its form of government has been monarchial for centuries. In August, 1910, Prince Nicholas became King Nicholas. Now comes the news that the people are agitating for a republic.

The Montenegrins have always been a hardy and independent race and constantly chafed under the despotic form of government which was in force so late as 1905. In that year King, then Prince Nicholas, recognizing the necessity of a modification in the existing patriarchy, announced his intention of establishing a constitution, whereby his people might obtain some measure of self-rule.

The first elected legislature, or squpahtina, met in November, 1906, and as might have been expected, gave evidence of an extremely indocile spirit. But Nicholas stood fast to his experiment and allowed the selection of a cabinet which was acceptable to the legislature, a real parliamentary ministry, in fact.

Nicholas, however, soon found that his new premier was running away from him, and brought about the resignation of the official. Another member of the Radical party was put up for the chief office, who for a time succeeded in holding in check his unruly charges; the secret work of the Conservatives was thrown against him, and in 1907 he also was forced to resign.

The electoral campaign which succeeded was bitterly fought, and near the close of the campaign the Radicals, declaring that the name and influence of the ruler were being used against them, declined to participate, and as a result, the Conservatives controlled the legislature.

With no share in the government, therefore, daring the past four years, the Radicals, or the extremists among them, were left with nothing to do but to plot, and the present movement is probably the outcome.

NEW "SAVIOUR" BALKS

Lodz, Russian Poland, Jan. 27.—The timely arrival of the police just prevented a band of fanatical women from crucifying a man who they had adopted as their "Saviour."

A new sect was recently formed by women of the Moravian community. They selected a man named Kowalski, whom they worshipped as their saviour. They urged him to allow himself to be crucified so as to enable them to prove the truth of their tenets by his resurrection.

Kowalski's faith, however, wavered and he strenuously opposed the carrying out of the suggestion to crucify him. Ultimately thirty determined women took his house by storm and were proceeding with his immolation when the police appeared and put a stop to the sacrifice.

Earthquake Destroys Villages

Athens, Jan. 28.—The earthquake which occurred in the Ionian islands was more disastrous than at first reported. In Cephalonia several villages were destroyed and eight persons were killed.

Failure of Philippine Rice Crop

Manila, Jan. 27.—Half the rice crop in the Philippines has been a failure. Recommendations intended to avert a serious crisis are to be presented to the assembly.

BRIEFS

William Q. Baxter of Adams street, East Milton has been elected officer of the day of Huntington F. Wolcott post G. A. R.

Oranges by the peck is a new way of buying that fruit, but that is the way Johnson Bros. sell the golden spheres.

Miss Corlew is in New York attending the meeting of teachers of dancing and her classes at Wollaston for today were postponed.

The entertainment of the Ruth and Lydia and Junior Bible classes of the First Presbyterian church, postponed on account of measles is to be held next Wednesday evening.

Reapers' circle of Christ church postponed its meeting this week on account of St. Margaret's Guild entertainment and will meet Feb. 2 with Mrs. Archibald MacLeod of 2 Graham terrace.

Several Quincy and Wollaston ladies were in attendance Monday morning at the Arlington Street church, Boston, at the meeting of the Council of Unitarian Women. This council has been formed to assist in carrying on social service work in Greater Boston.

Howard W. Gill the aviator, one of the stars at the Squantum meet last September had two ribs fractured Friday at the Los Angeles meet. He was flying when his motor stopped and he dropped to the ground. Besides having his ribs fractured he suffered other injuries.

Sunday will be observed as Y. P. C. U. day at the morning service of the Universalist Church. The pastor's discourse will be appropriate to the occasion. Members of the Young People's Christian Union and their friends old and young, are invited to attend.

James Coleran, who has been at the Quincy hospital, for the past ten weeks the result of injuries received from being drawn over a shafting, returned to his home in Weymouth on Thursday. He is much improved but it will be sometime before he has the use of his arm which was broken in five places.

The regular meeting of Parents' and Teachers' Association of the Massachusetts Field school will be held Thursday evening at 7.30 in the school corridor. Charles Johnson will give his illustrated lecture on "Historic Quincy.—past and present," and there will be vocal music by a quartet of male voices.

GLASSCOCK'S PREDICTION

Roosevelt Will Be Nominated For President and Be Elected

New York, Jan. 27.—William E. Glasscock, governor of West Virginia, who is here to attend the annual banquet tonight of the West Virginia society, called at the Outlook office to pay his respects to Theodore Roosevelt and to keep a luncheon engagement with the former president. When the governor left he said that he was still of the opinion that Roosevelt should and would be nominated for the presidency.

"I think he will never be a candidate for the office," Glasscock said, "but it is my opinion that he will have to be nominated without being a candidate."

The governor said he had no doubt about Roosevelt's election if he were nominated. He added that West Virginia was solid for Roosevelt.

AMERICAN VESSELS LOST DURING YEAR

They Number 325, Resulting In the Death of 194 Persons

Washington, Jan. 27.—The sea claimed the lives of 194 persons with 325 American vessels during the fiscal year of 1911, according to the summary of losses published in the list of merchant vessels of the United States just issued by Commissioner Chamberlain of the bureau of navigation, department of commerce and labor.

The loss of sailing vessels, principally by foundering, resulted in the death of 107 persons, while with the steam vessels 87 lives were lost.

The principal disaster during the year was the foundering of the steamer Arkadia, which sailed from New Orleans for Porto Rico with 37 people on board and never was heard from.

BRIEFS

The Chinese social held in the vestry of Memorial church Tuesday evening was a grand success. The vestry was decorated with Chinese pictures and lanterns. Small Chinese articles were on sale, the returns being sent to a missionary society. A short stereopticon lecture was given, the slides being some that Mr. Chenney had taken while on his visit to China. Miss Mabel Chenney told an interesting story about each slide. Different Chinese games were played, and refreshments consisting of tea and Chinese cookies were served.

Who are the "fat" men? The Fat Men's club meets tonight at Electa hall.

The Walther men's class meets Sunday at 12.15 in the Wollaston Baptist church. A large chorus of men and an inspiring discussion of live up-to-date topics. All men not in other similar classes invited.

Almost every yard and vacant lot has a skating rink in Atlantic, since the last thaw and freeze.

At the annual meting of the Sunday School Board held at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday, the following officers were elected: Superintendent, Alexander Stewart; assistant superintendent, James Joss; secretary, Camille Fuller; treasurer, Joseph M. Francis; librarian, J. Lawrence Martin. A vote of thanks and appreciation of their services were extended to the retiring officers by the board.

St. Chrysostom's branch of the Girls' Friendly society is arranging for an entertainment to be given at Alpha hall, Friday evening, Feb. 9.

A meeting of the trustees of the Hall place M. E. church is called for Friday evening at the close of the prayer meeting. Also a meeting of the church members for the purpose of electing a delegate and alternate to the Laymen's conference at Springfield.

Rev. Hilary Bygrave of Cambridge is to preach at First church, Sunday morning at the 10.30 service

To help along "the mile of pennies" cause, at St. Chrysostom's church, Miss Maud Briggs' Sunday school class is holding a candy and food sale this afternoon in the parish rooms and Mrs. G. J. Poch's class will have a sale, Monday afternoon.

Charles H. Johnson is to give his illustrated lecture "Historic Quincy" in the First Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, Jan. 30.

A special meeting of the Junior Laymen of First church is to be held in the social rooms of the chapel on Monday evening.

Rev. L. C. Manchester, D. D., preaches at the Sunday morning service at St. Chrysostom's church. The date for confirmation this year is Thursday evening, March 21.

The Men of Memorial church are to give a turkey supper on Wednesday evening. These suppers are popular and always well attended.

The new theatre train at 7.03 P. M., is being well patronized nightly, showing the need of such a train. Now for an afternoon train around one o'clock and an outward train about 5 P. M. and conditions will be improved.

Everyone is invited to the meetings on Sunday at the Wollaston M. E. church. The Gospel Team will have charge of all the services. This will be the end of the three weeks' special services.

The work of installing the new pipe organ in Memorial church is almost completed, and it is expected that the organ can be used on Sunday. This is the completion of the new church which was dedicated one year ago last Sunday. The ladies' society has worked so well during the year, and the choir and friends have contributed so freely that it seems a possibility to dedicate the organ free of debt in the near future.

☞Creamed toast tonight of PRATT'S BREAD will bring him home early tomorrow.

ELECTRIC EXPRESS

While the service being provided by the Electric Express is being found a great advantage in general shipment because of its promptness, frequency, care in handling and other features to those who handle perishable goods, meats, provisions, vegetable and similar articles it is an especial blessing that is being more and more realized as shippers become better acquainted with it. Goods handled by the Electric Express are not held up but are handled very speedily which with perishable goods is likely to mean all the difference between profit and loss.

In some sections on the Bay State St. Ry. Co. lines the great bulk of market and provision dealers supplies are shipped in this way, meaning a saving not only in the cost of the service itself but in what otherwise would be a loss from deterioration and damage in handling. This is becoming more and more true in this section as time goes on.

Between Boston and this section four services each way are now being provided daily and with each service there is a pick-up and delivery at each end if desired.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Not for Early Morning Milkmen in Hub's Anti Noise Crusade—Boston Art Club Gives New England Great Opportunity to See New Yorkers' Pictures—An Assembling of an Impromptu Oyster Stew at a Railroad Station—Opera Moves on to German Production and Pronunciation.

Boston, Jan. 26, 1912—The vicissitudes of Boston's climate frequently afford more or less merriment, as indicated in the experience of a commuter on a single trip from the South Station to his home—an affair which might be called "the pageant of the lost supper." On a recent evening when the frozen slush and icy sidewalks rendered footing extremely uncertain, an unfortunate gentleman, homeward bound with two quarts of oysters in a pasteboard box under his arm, slipped on the wet promenade of the railroad station and his package of oysters strewed themselves liberally for some distance. The nature of their substance did not improve the conditions for walking in that vicinity. While the commuter was walking from the train to his home, a little girl in front of him turned to enter her home and she too slipped. A quart of milk trickled rapidly into the gutter from a mass of crushed glass. A man who witnessed this accident was hugely amused by it, and chuckled so mirthfully that he lost his balance on a bit of ice and, with a sickening crash, a package slid from beneath his arm and distributed the contents of some expensive wine bottle within a few feet of the lost milk.

The erstwhile lonesome Charles River Basin is well patronized at one season at least, judging by the numbers of skaters who glide over its broad expanse these days. Bright colored sweaters and skating caps dot the quiet thoroughfares in the vicinity of the Basin with gay spots, and the more perfect ice surface of the Arena has a strong competitor in the open air of the Back Bay playground.

Bostonized opera, which has hitherto confined itself to Italian and French productions, is blossoming out in German, Maeterlinck's "Haensel and Gretel" being the first to be thus honored. The staging of "Pelleas et Melisande," thought by opera goers to be the finest thing yet accomplished, is being quite outdone in the German production, if the preparations count for anything. An interesting factor in the presentation is that the two title roles will be assumed by young American singers who have lately attained fame, Bernice Fisher and Jeska Swartz.

The noisy milkman is again in hot water. This time the exclusive Back Bay is handing him in the shape of abuse of his matutinal habits and customs. Something has got to be done in the matter, according to long suffering and nervous high-brows who demand that they have peace and quiet during the wee, sma' hours of the night. The situation makes for the funny man his opportunity. Suggestions have, of course, been offered for rubber tiring vehicles and their drivers, padding bottles, and hanging lemons to the gate post to spoil the delivery men's whistle. Other suggestions of delivering the milk in the afternoon have been made, and meetings have been held to discuss the pros and cons. Since the Back Boy generally gets what its money wants there will doubtless be found a way to ensure rest and quiet to the householders of the favored section of the city.

It's one great chance of the year to see some of the works of New York and Philadelphia painters New England has, between now and February 10. The enterprising management of the Boston Art Club is vindicating its name this season in the excellent quality of the exhibitions offered in its galleries. Even those Bostonians who whispered in the privacy of their homes that the Art Club exhibitions were not absolutely of the highest quality of selection are now voicing their approval of the new methods of the executive committee. The current exhibition of Modern American Pictures leaves a distinctly pleasant taste in the mouth, and a feeling of gratitude to the members of the Club who have made it possible to enjoy these outside artists, none of whom belong to the Club itself, and only three of whom are Bostonians. Best of all, the exhibition is absolutely free to the public—upon ticket procurable from any member of the club or, in ordinary circumstances, at the desk. Especially striking among the many good canvases might be mentioned Eugene E. Speicher's Portrait of Miss Helen Appleton, recently awarded the Thomas R. Proctor prize; Gardner Symons' "Where Brook and River Meet," its wintry tones making a distinctly personal appeal at this season; Sargent's "Glacier Stream," another cold but convincingly fearless work; the warmer toned "San Juan Pottery" by E. Irving Couss, N. A., winner of the Isider Memorial Medal; Thomas Dewing's silver medalled "Lady in Yellow" loaned by Mrs. John L. Gardner and John W. Alexander's "Blue Bowl." Among the local painters Frank W. Benson's many hued "October," a decorative painting; Joseph DeCamp's "The Fur Jacket" and Edmund C. Tarbell's "Portrait of Mrs. C." give visitors a comfortable feeling of at-homeness and of pride. The exhibition continues through February 10. An exhibition by women painters at the Copley Galleries is also drawing considerable attendance and there are constantly new things going on at the Museum. The art season is at its height, and Boston's free art route is well trodden.

Anty Drudge Explains How to Wash Blankets and Flannels.

Mrs. Justwed—"Boo, hoo! Now I've gone and ruined this pair of blankets. And I was telling Jack this morning how I was going to save money by washing them myself."

Anty Drudge—"Well, dearie, that pair is shrunk and there's no use crying over spilt milk, but you have learned a good lesson. In the future, you wash blankets, flannels and other woolens in lukewarm water with Fels-Naptha Soap suds. You'll hardly need to do any rubbing even. The dirt will fly and the things won't shrink. They won't get rough either."

And why do more than a million women use Fels-Naptha Soap regularly?

Because it is such an easy cleaner—

Because it saves work—

Because it makes the clothes so white and sweet and pure—

Because the clothes wear so much longer.

They use Fels-Naptha for washing their finest frocks, their laciest lingeries. It won't harm them.

And they use it in their housework, too. Fels-Naptha is just as superior in cleaning and scrubbing as in washing clothes. Whitens the floors as well as cleans them, brightens up the dingy paints; brings out the color in oil-cloths and linoleums; removes spots from varnished surfaces without dulling.

Remember Fels-Naptha does its work better with cool or lukewarm water than with hot water. Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

To Mary Ann Howe of Attleboro in the County of Bristol, and said Commonwealth; the Johnson Lumber Company, Margaret J. Haynes Richard J. Holden, James H. McDermott and Maria F. Johnson of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Nettie J. Cayford of Oakland, in the State of Maine, to register and confirm her title in the following described land

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Quincy, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the corner of Pond Street and Vine Avenue where Pond Street intersects with Mill Street and bounded by a line running thence easterly along Vine Avenue two hundred and sixty-five and 5-10 feet to land of James McDermott; formerly the land of Patrick Doherty; thence turning and bounding by a line running about northeasterly by land of said McDermott to land of Maria F. Johnson one hundred and sixty-five and 5-10 feet; thence turning and bounding by a line running westerly along the land of said Maria F. Johnson and the Johnson Lumber Company two hundred and sixty-one and 5-10 feet to Pond Street; thence turning and bounding by a line running about southwesterly along Pond Street one hundred and sixty-eight feet to the point of beginning.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

You are hereby cited to appear at the Land Court to be held at Boston in the County of Suffolk, on the fifth day of February A. D. 1912, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. And unless you appear at said Court at the time and place aforesaid your default will be recorded, and the said petition will be taken as confessed, and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

Witness, Charles Thornton Davis Esquire, Judge of said Court, this eleventh day of January in the year nineteen hundred and twelve.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

FRECKLES

By

Gene Stratton-Porter

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

She parted the bushes still further. Freckles saw that her little blue cotton frock clung to her, limp with perspiration. It was torn across the breast. One sleeve hung open from shoulder to elbow. A thorn had raked her arm until it was covered with blood, and the gnats and mosquitoes were clustering about it. Her feet were in lace hose and low shoes.

Freckles gasped. In the Limberlost in low shoes! He caught an armful of moss from his carpet and buried it in the ooze in front of her for a footing.

"Get out here where I can see where you are stepping. Quick, for the life of you!" he ordered.

She smiled on him indulgently.

"Why?" she inquired.

"Did anybody let you come here and not be telling you of the snakes?" urged Freckles.

"We met Mr. McLean on the corduroy, and he did say something about snakes, I believe. The Bird Woman put on leather leggins, and a nice, parboiled time she must be having! Worst dose I ever had, and I'd nothing to do but swelter."

"Will you be coming out of there?" groaned Freckles.

She laughed as if it were a fine joke.

"Maybe if I'd be telling you I killed a rattler curled up on that same place you're standing as long as me body and the thickness of me arm you'd be moving where I can see your footing," he urged insistently.

"What a perfectly delightful little brogue you speak," she said. "My father is Irish, and half ought to be enough to entitle me to do that much. 'Maybe—if I'd—be telling you,'" she imitated, rounding and accenting each word carefully.

"If you was understanding the danger," he continued desperately.

"Oh, I don't think there is much!"

She tilted on the morass.

"If you killed one snake here it's probably all there is near, and anyway, the Bird Woman says a rattlesnake is a gentleman and always gives warning before he strikes. I don't hear any rattling. Do you?"

"Would you be knowing it if you did?" asked Freckles almost impatiently.

How the laugh of the young thing rippled!

"Would I be knowing it?" she mocked. "Well, you should see the swamps of Michigan where they dump rattlers out of the marl dredges three and four at a time."

Freckles stood astounded. She did know. She was not in the least afraid. She was depending on a rattlesnake to live up to his share of the contract and rattle in time for her to move. The one characteristic an Irishman admires in a woman above all others is courage. Freckles worshiped anew. He changed his tactics.

"I'd be pleased to be receiving you at me front door," he said, "but as you have arrived at the back, will you come in and be seated?"

He waved toward a bench.

The angel came instantly.

"Oh, how lovely and cool!" she cried.

As she moved across his room Freckles had hard work to keep from falling on his knees, for they were very weak, and he was hard driven by an impulse to worship.

"Did you arrange this?" she asked.

"Yis," said Freckles simply.

"Some one must come with a big canvas and copy each side of it," she said. "I never saw anything so beautiful. How I wish I might stay here with you! I will, some day, if you will let me; but now, if you can spare the time, will you help me look for the carriage? If the Bird Woman comes back and finds me gone she will be almost distracted."

"Did you come in on the west road?" asked Freckles.

"I think so," she said. "The man who told the Bird Woman said that was the only place where the wires were down. We drove away in, and it was dreadful—over stumps and logs, and in to the hubs. I suppose you know, though. I should have stayed in the carriage, but I was so tired. I never dreamed of getting lost. I suspect I will get scolded finely. I go with the Bird Woman half the time during the summer vacations. My father says I learn a lot more than I do at school, and get it straight. I never came within a smell of getting lost before. I thought, at first, it was going to be horrid, but since I've found you, maybe it will be good fun after all."

CHAPTER VIII.

THE BIRD WOMAN.

FRECKLES was amazed to hear himself excusing. "It was so hot in there. You couldn't be expected to bear it for hours and not be moving. I can take you back around the trail almost to where you were. Then you can get up in the carriage, and I will go find the Bird Woman."

"You'll get killed if you do! When she stays this long, it means that she has a focus on something. You see, when she gets a focus, and lies in the weeds and water for hours, and the sun bakes her, and things crawl over her, and then some one comes along and scares her bird away just as she has it coaxed up—why, she kills them. If I melt, you won't go after her. She's probably blistered and half eaten up, but she will never quit until she is satisfied."

"Then it will be safer to be taking care of you," suggested Freckles.

"Now you're talking sense!" said the angel.

"May I try to help your arm?" he asked.

"Have you any idea how it hurts?" she parried.

"A little," said Freckles.

"Well, Mr. McLean said we'd probably find his son here"—

"His son!" cried Freckles.

"That's what he said. And that you would do anything you could for us, and that we could trust you with our lives. But I would have trusted you anyway, if I hadn't known a thing about you. Say, your father is rampaging proud of you, isn't he?"

"I don't know," answered the dazed Freckles.

"He's so proud of you he is all swelled up like the toad in Aesop's fables. If you have ever had an arm hurt like this and can do anything, why, for pity sake do it!"

She turned back her sleeve, holding out to Freckles an arm of palest cameo.

Freckles unlocked his case and bandaged the ugly, ragged wound. He worked with trembling fingers and a face tense with earnestness.

"Is it feeling any better?" he asked.

"Oh, it's well now!" cried the angel. "It doesn't hurt at all any more."

STRIKERS LOOK TO PLYMOUTH

May Extend Trouble to American Company's Mills

MAY MEAN GREAT STRUGGLE

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 27.—The first move in what may be a general New England strike in the textile industry emanated from this city when the strikers' committee of forty-eight discussed sending delegates to Plymouth to meet the operatives of the American Woolen company's mills located in that town.

On top of this, the legal committee was instructed to ascertain what the Massachusetts laws contain relative to allowing people to sleep and be quartered in factories. It is believed that a campaign is to be opened with the view of ousting, if possible, the soldiers quartered at the mills and the workers who are living in the mill rooms and who are remaining at their tasks.

Organizer, Ettor and William D. Haywood of the Industrial Workers of the World say they have invitations to speak at New Bedford, Fall River, Maynard, Lymansville, Plymouth, Providence and Manchester and Dover, N. H.

Should the program now mapped out be carried through, the greatest industrial struggle ever known in the eastern part of America will be started.

Just what action the committee took relative to sending delegates to Plymouth to meet the mill workers there was not divulged. It is generally understood that this action will mean the foundation of a strike in conjunction with the one now in progress here.

Dynamite "Planted"

Captain Proctor of the state police has under surveillance the man who it is charged placed the dynamite discovered by Boston police officials where it was found. Who this person is is not now known, but an arrest may be made at any time. It is said that when the arrest is made and the true facts come before the court a scandal will be unfolded.

The dynamite was found by state officers and local police, led by Inspector Rooney of the Boston police, who had received the information as to where the explosive might be found.

Captain Proctor exonerates the strikers of any complicity in connection with the discovery of the dynamite. He says it is a "plant" and believes it was done to work against the interests of the mill operatives.

The cases of the six men and two women who were arrested where the dynamite was discovered were postponed yesterday in the police court until Feb. 5. Then, it is said, the evidence will be made public and also the name of the person making the "plant" for the officers to discover.

A Legislative Probe

The most important conference of the day locally was the meeting of the strike leaders and the sub-committee of the legislative committee on rules, who wished to learn something first hand of the conditions here before they take up the question of a legislative investigation of the textile industry.

This meeting was held at city hall in the afternoon. Speaker Cushing of the house, Representatives Bothfield and Meaney, Mayor Scanlon, members of the city government and several strike leaders, including Ettor and Haywood, were present.

The strike leaders said they would like such an investigation. Later in the afternoon the sub-committee assembled at the office of the Bay State bank and met the citizens' committee. This committee objected to the investigation on the ground that it might have some influence on the status of the strike.

WILL MEET SUNDAY.

A meeting of the general committee, composed of members of the parish, has been called for toworrow afternoon at three o'clock in St. John's Hall, Phipps street, to consider further plans for the coming re-union of the Church of St. John the Baptist, which is to take place in the school hall on the evening of February 14th. Great interest has been arroused over this coming occasion and as the parish has not had a re-union for ten years, all efforts are being used to make the affair a most gala one. Great preparations have already been made and frim present indications the event bids fair to eclipse anything of its nature ever undertaken by the parihsioners.

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

The next regular meeting of the club will be Gentlemen's night, Tuesday, February 6, at 8 o'clock. The program will include a one-act farce, and music by the University Trio. Members are limited to one guest each; membership tickets must be presented at the door as usual.

By the courtesy of the Brockton Woman's club, ten tickets to the Dickens' afternoon have been reserved for the Philergians. They may be had from Mrs. George W. Stevens at 50 cents each. Monday, Feb. 5, at 2.30 P. M., Y. M. C. A. hall, Brockton.

The art class met at the Boston Art Museum Wednesday of this week to continue the study of the Italian Renaissance. The next meeting at the Art Museum will be Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 10 o'clock.

The civics and conservation department submits the following suggestions which are of general interest: Keep the Streams Clean and Pure.

Picnickers:—Leave no refuse in or near the springs, books, rivers, ponds or lakes which have contributed to your day's pleasure. The baskets which brought all are large enough to carry away the fragments.

Fishermen:—Do not put fish cleanings back into the water.

Housewives:—Empty no dish-water where it can find its way into a stream.

Farmers:—Do not let your vault or barn-yard drainage soak away to the nearby streams.

Campers:—Bury or burn all rubbish. Select carefully and judiciously the spot on which to build a fire. Watch constantly the fire while burning. Extinguish every spark before leaving the site of the fire. Do not contaminate the streams by washing soiled clothes in them. Carry the water for this purpose in pail or tub to a place at some little distance from the shore.

Reader. If you are in a position to give us news don't take it for granted that a Ledger man is on the spot, just call us up, 425.

BOWLING RESULTS

The members of the Clan McGregor bowling team were only able to take one out of three against the Clan Lindsay team at the Brunswick alleys in connection with the Scottish Clan league games last evening, but that one was secured in grand style and enabled the local players to attain the greater sum total, 1293 to 1286. Drumwold of the local Clan was high man in both departments, having a mark of 113 for a single string and 288 for a grand total. The summary.

ESTABLISHES A NEW RECORD

Quincy High Defeats Worcester at Basketball 115 to 0

GREAT GAME

The members of the Quincy High School basketball team established themselves as the peerless leaders in the interscholastic world, when they triumphed over the Worcester High quintet, in the local gymnasium yesterday afternoon, by the overwhelming score of 115 to 0. The score was by far the largest ever rolled up in local circles and it is doubtful if the record has ever been excelled since the game of basketball was originated.

The visitors displayed no ability that would tend to make them appear as basket ball players, and to see the local boys shoot at random throughout the game, had a tendency to make one feel as though he were witnessing a burlesque show rather than a contest in basketball.

It was the sixth straight victory for the local boys, and it now seems that they are the foremost contenders for the championship title of Eastern Massachusetts. The local players lost no time in getting down to action and started by shooting baskets from every corner.

The team work of Quincy High was of the first order throughout and every man on it accredited himself with honors, as can readily be deduced from the fact that Baird was the only player who failed to get a basket and even he was not in the game long enough to get his hands on the ball. By this game, all records of the season were deeply punctured and it is not probable that the feat will be paralleled for some time.

Large scores have frequently been noticeable, but the fact that the visitors were whitewashed made the accomplishment all the more remarkable. From beginning to end it was a question as to the number of points Quincy High was to obtain. Only once during the entire game did it seem as though the Worcester boys would score. This occurred in the second half when Shea, who seemed to be the only player on the visiting contingency that showed up to any advantage, tried for a goal from foul. The ball struck the basket and rolled around the rim three times, thereby causing great anxiety to exist among the spectators lest a score should be made. But the ball finally fell to the floor, and the crowd fairly went wild with shouts indicative of the keenest enthusiasm imaginable.

Coach Arthur Staff was considering sending in the second team against the Worcester players in the second half, but seeing that the regular players had a chance to attain a record for the season, refrained from so doing and substituted but two players.

Words fail to express the manner in which the baskets were made, for throughout the entire game, the ball was seen to pass from the Quincy backs, to one of the forwards position players, thence through the basket, thereby causing the Granite City lads to secure an average of three points during every minute of play.

During the first half of the game the contest resolved into a struggle for the greater number of baskets, between Finlay and Trask. The latter emerged to the fore at the start of the game, and when the half ended, George Finlay had 14 baskets to his credit and the elongated Trask had 11, which of itself was one more than was made recently by Verner of Winthrop High, who up to this game held the record for schoolboy players.

Chapman got three baskets while "Herb" Johnson had caged one, thus making the score at this period of the game stand 58 to 0.

The local boys exhibited still greater form in the second half and rolled up a larger number of points than they did in the first half. In this last part of the game, however, Finlay was more conspicuous than ever, and secured 18 baskets, many of which were of the most spectacular order, being made from most difficult angles. Finlay's work in all games has been a revelation, and to date he has an average of 10 baskets for each game to his credit. Only five times did the visitors shoot for baskets, and at no time was there the slightest semblance of a score to be seen. Trask had 16 baskets in all, and even this is a record to be justly commended. Captain Chapman played his usual brilliant game, and though he did not roll up many points, he played consistently throughout and was a potent factor in enabling Finlay to make the record of the season. Chapman obtained the only goal made from free tries. Three fouls were called during the entire game, and these were for dribbling the ball. The work of the entire Quincy team was of the first class order and every man on it should come in for his due share of praise.

While it would be difficult to praise any department of the visitors' playing, in fairness to Shea, the left back it must be said that he is not responsible for the number of points made by Finlay, for he was in the game all the time, and followed the ball with an alert eye. Besides, he alone practically was forced to "cover" all the Quincy players. The game has been heralded far and wide as a record breaker and bids fair to stand some time before being hurled in the shades of darkness.

LONGSHOREMEN STICKING

Not One of 2500 Who Struck at Boston Has Returned

Boston, Jan. 27.—The fourth week of the strike of the 2500 longshoremen of Boston was begun yesterday and was made notable when Noddle Island Longshoremen's assembly No. 5789 made its first weekly payment of strike benefits that amounted to $4250.

This assembly, one of the four longshoremen's organizations whose members struck for a better wage, has planned to pay each of its 850 members on strike $5 a week for a period of eight more weeks. The other bodies are expected to begin making payment of strike benefits next week.

The officers of the men point to the fact that not one longshoreman of the 2500 that struck has returned to work, and that all are determined to remain out till the strike is won.

HURBAND REFUSED TO QUIT DRINKING

Woman Kept to Bed Sixteen Years on That Account

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Jay Corser of Macedon died in a hospital here, after an operation for appendicitis. Sixteen years ago his wife took to her bed and vowed she would never leave it until her husband stopped drinking. Mrs. Corser kept her oath. For sixteen years her world has been circumscribed by the walls of her bedroom.

After her husband's death Mrs. Corser arose. But she could not walk. The muscles of her legs are atrophied, wasted; long disuse has almost paralyzed them. But massage, electricity, gradually increasing exercise will doubtless restore to her the use of her nether limbs.

Mrs. Corser is now 50 years old and in good health, although her face is bleached by the "prison pallor." Her only occupation and amusement is to sew.

Mrs. Corser's four daughters seemed to sympathize with their mother and have been the housekeepers of the domicile.

VANDEROUF ADMITS GUILT

Accounts of Officer of Mercantile Firm Were $142,759 Short

New York, Jan. 27.—Percy G. Vanderoef, treasurer of the firm of Van Kouren & Thornton company, dealers in dry goods, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny before Judge Rosalsky and was remanded until Feb. 7 for sentence.

Vanderoef was indicted after his firm discovered, according to the testimony of expert accountants, that he was short $142,759 in his accounts. He used the money to live in style.

ANTI-LIQUOR LEGISLATION

Kentucky Senate and House Pass the County Unit Bill

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 27.—The "county unit" bill, regarded as the most drastic anti-liquor legislation ever enacted in Kentucky, passed the state senate by a vote of 24 to 14.

The measure, approved by the house, now goes to Governor McCreary, who is expected to sign it. Both Democrats and Republicans in their platforms last fall declared for such a law.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

We will omit the usual preliminaries such "I told you so" and the vaunting egotistical phrases which over elated enthusiasts oftentimes belch forth in the line of predictions and not always in verbal manner and simply tender our heartiest congratulations to the Quincy A. A. basketball team for its remarkable victory Thursday evening. Of course there is no ardent fan in local circles who was not desirous to see the local players placed as high upon the pinnacle of the Greater Boston Basketball league as it was possible to aspire to, and now that Manager Flynn's team has been firmly established in first place, our spirit of enthusiasm has become intensified to a far greater degree than ever before and from now until the season is drawn to a close, the members of this combination, which seems to be without a peer in its respective class at the present time, will bear the closest watching.

To be sure, the greater part of the success attained thus far has been due directly to the playing of those who compose the team, but even this could not have been brought about had not the tireless and ceaseless activity exhibited by the manager, ex-councilman William H. Flynn, been in evidence on all occasions. His energy and interest were exerted at all times, and while the moral support of the entire organization, as well as of the fans of the city at large, was of the high order still it was Manager Flynn who adhered steadfastly to the welfare of the team under the most trying circumstances and now that a favorable position has been acquired, it is only meet that he should come in for his share of praise, albeit that the same may seem embarrasing to him.

The Cathedral Y. M. C. A. was considered a most dangerous opponent and was conceded to be one of the foremost contenders for the championship of the league, but the exhibition of basketball given Thursday evening to the 450 who were in attendance was acknowledged by all to have been of the top notch calibre. We hope that the same confidence will be possessed by the local players in the games that remain to be played and we trust that Manager Flynn's anticipations to the effect that the laurels of the league will be brought to Quincy will be fully realized and that he may be able to rest safely in the satisfaction that his efforts were well spent. The fans, at least, are appreciating them, and there is no doubt but what basketball has at last assumed its former conspicuous position in the pabulum of local athletics.

A noticeable feature of the game, and one which enabled the contest to be played with the best of equanimity, was the absence of the undue shouting and hissing which have chacterized some of the games played in St. Mary's hall this season. This was due mainly to the well versed official work of referee Coady and it certainly was a move that should be greatly appreciated by every local sporting blood. Nothing is more baneful in athletics than to see the home team rooters take advantage of the situation by hissing and shouting in order to discourage the visiting team, in an endeavor to aid the home team in securing a victory. It certainly reflected great credit on the local association to see the orderly conduct that existed among the audience and it is sincerely hoped that the same courtesy will henceforth be given every visiting contingency.

The prospects for a local baseball league are looking brighter every day and if the plans now under contemplation are perfected the coming baseball season should be the most successful we have ever experienced.

QUINCY GYM GIRLS LOSE

The Quincy Gym Girls suffered an overwhelming defeat in basketball last evening, administered by the Oliver Ames High School girls in the gymnasium of the North Easton school, the score being 49 to 3. The local girls failed to secure a basket and even Frances Curtin, who has been a conspicuous point gainer for the Quincy team, seemed unable to show up to any advantage.

All of the winners' points were made by two players, Miss Helen Flanigan and Miss Louise Drake, the latter by her brilliant work caging 14 baskets from the floor, while the former secured 10, many of which were of the spectacular order. The only player for the local team who exhibited any form in basketball work was Miss Mildred Smith, whose general floor and pass work was a feature of the game.

The summary:

O. AMES H. S.		QUINCY GYM
Miss Flanigan rf	lb	Miss Williams
Miss Drake lf	rb	Miss Clark
Miss Sullivan c	c	Miss Beale
Miss Pomeroy rb	lf	Miss Curtin
Miss Maliff lb	rf	Miss Smith

BASKET BALL TONIGHT.

Four good games are scheduled tonight in the Y. M. C. A. League, the first of which will begin at 7.45.

Dartmouth which has been beaten once, will line up against Yale. Tech and Michigan will furnish the thrills in the 2d game.

In the 3d game, Columbia and Carlisle will meet. Carlisle defeated the Army two weeks ago, and the players are feeling pretty confident of putting a win over Columbia. Columbia however, with the "old timer" Dave Morris, at the head of the team, will put up a good fight.

Penn or Navy will be the fourth attraction. Penn is smarting under the sting of the overwhelming defeat given them last week by Cornell and will endeavor to swamp Navy tonight.

BATHED IN IODINE

Hazing of Freshmen Results in Near Riot and Many Suspensions

Pittsburgh, Jan. 27.—Union high school in Knoxville, a suburb, is depopulated as the result of a wholesale student suspension, following a "party" at which a score of freshmen were bathed in pure iodine by upper classmen.

All the students reported for class yesterday and there was nearly a riot outside the school, with many bruised heads and black eyes resulting. Following that affair there was a general student "firing" by the faculty and only a few students are left.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL HEAR SQUANTUM WANTS

Banqueted by Squantum Improvement Association at Quincy House, Boston

Street Lights, Water Extensions, Fire and Police Among Wants

Fifteen more street lights, extension of the water system protection against fire, more police protection for nine months of the year, the completion of the rebuilding of Squantum street and the acceptance of three of its main streets. These are the few requests which the Squantum Improvement association would like the city fathers to give them. These were outlines for the benefit of the Mayor and City Council at the banquet tendered them Saturday evening at the Quincy house Boston by the Improvement association.

It is of course beyond question for the city to supply all of these needs in any one year but that the Mayor and Council are willing to do something for this growing section of the city was expressed during the remarks of some of the after dinner speakers.

The dinner was served at 7 o'clock but for a half hour previous to this the guests of the evening had an opportunity to meet the members of the association in the reception room.

William N. Kenyon occupied the seat of honor at the head of the table while at his right and left were Mayor Stone, President Hobbs of the City Council and the chairmen of the several standing committees of the council with the exception of Councilman Sandberg who from preference occupied a seat with the agony quartette at one of the other tables, and Commissioner Tupper. An orchestra furnished music during the dinner which was enlivened by several telegrams from different persons which were read at intervals by the president. Small song sheets were also placed at every plate and many of those present joined in singing the choruses of the popular airs. The menu was an excellent one and was as follows:

Bluepoints on Deep Shell
Tomato Soup aux Croutons
Celery
Boiled Fresh Salmon aux Petit Pois
Potatoes Swiss Sliced Tomatoes
Queen Olives
Roast Turkey, Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes
String Beans Hubbard Squash
Roman Punch
Chicken Cutlets au Macedoine
Apple Fritters, Glace au Rhin
Frozen Pudding Harlequin Ice Cream
Assorted Cake
American and Roquefort Cheese
Toasted Crackers
Black Coffee

The dinner over President Kenyon rapped for order and in opening the after dinner exercises said that he intended to speak for the association in outlining its wants. In opening he said that he wished to thank the guests for their presence and asked the clerk of the Council to call the roll of the members. Clerk Magee complied with the request and the roll call showed seventeen members president as follows: President Hobbs, Councilmen Barker, Bailey, Beeman, Boyd, Carruthers, Craig, Cunningham, Forde, Gauthier, Gilliatt, Murray, Richards, C. A. Ross, J. R. S. Ross, Sandberg and Sodergren.

President Kenyon then thanked the city for the lights given them by Mayor Shea, and said that there were a few things needed at Squantum. First that the work on East Squantum street should be completed. This we think can be done for $4,000. There was also a crying need that the water mains should be extended. We have one section which is occupied by winters residents who are obliged to get what water they use from the old Miles Standish spring. He believed that the extension of the water mains would bring additional revenue to the city.

The light question was a serious one. We need some more lights on highways where it is impossible to find one's way after dark. Lights on these streets would be of great benefit for eight months of the year.

The association also cherished the hope that it might have something in the way of fire protection. We would like a combination with man and horse and if not these, that Atlantic be equipped with an auto chemical with a plentiful supply of fire alarm boxes at Squantum.

As for police there was great need of better protection. We now have one officers on Saturday afternoons and Sundays in summer, but we should have an officer to take care of things between 1 and 10 P. M. As it is now it takes three fourths of an hour to get the officer after a call is sent in. We know that these improvements are expensive. We also know that we have had some things during the past your years, but for 15 years back of that we had nothing.

It remains for the Mayor and City Council to say if we shall have inexpensive houses erected or substantial and costly houses that will bring in a good investment and bring the city a good revenue. We do not expect all of these things but want what we can. The association had a bill before the legislature for the exterminating of mosquitoes and he had been promised if it became a law that part of the $1,000 would be expended at Squantum.

One thing more was a new street railway trackage system to do away with the shift back at Atlantic. He had conferred with the street railway officials in regard to this matter and had been requested to submit plans and the association had three plans which it intended to present to the railroad.

There was one other matter of interest to the whole city as well as to Squantum. That was that one of the plans of Boston for garbage disposal was to dump it in Town river Quincy. Another was to put up a rendering plant at Spectacle island. We are opposed to all the odors from this island including the glue works. The moral effect of our association has been to uplift and get the best class of people to come to Squantum and we have accomplished much. The future of Squantum was very bright and he believed that soon there would be a boulevard along the whole shore front and to Thompson island.

President Hobbs was the first speaker and spoke briefly. He said that he was the only member of the council that did not have a vote otherwise he would be glad to exercise it for Squantum. You at Squantum ahve been my constituents and I have always been pleased to do what I could. He believed that the council would treat them kindly but they must keep Councilman Sandberg in good spirits for he was the chairman of the street committee. Squantum had lost one good man when it lost Councilman Moir who had always worked hard for Squantum. In Quincy the Mayor is "IT" with a capital I and capital T.

Councilman Craig was called upon to tell how he met the aviators' wives and he readily responded. He had been surprised to find it so beautiful, meaning Squantum. He then told how he had held up the granting of the street railway a charge of location as the poles were in the middle of the street. He hoped they would pick out the things most wanted and he would try and help them along.

Councilman Richards, chairman of the finance committee paid his respects to the public service corporations such as the Gas Co., and Electric Light Co. There was no question about the needs of Squantum. He believed that there should be a uniform system in the city for taking car of the wants. He could not see the wisdom of having the streets in the condition they were today, but anyone who looked at the financial condition of the city must realize it was not a pleasant one to handle. There were certain citizens who had the faculty of getting off easily in their taxes. Anyone owning a small home is taxed to the limit and we know from investigation that there are others who get of easily. He then referred to the price paid for gas and electric lights in Quincy as compared to other places. The temporary loan question in Quincy has now come to be a permanent debt so that $100,000 of the tax is required for interest. He could see no reason why the wants of Squantum should not receive favorable consideration. He was making no promises but simply suggestions.

Mayor Stone was then introduced and was received with three cheers. The Mayor said that he was pleased to be present. He desired to give a little insight into the workings of the City Government and the conditions as they exist today. We have the largest area of any city in the metropolitan district. Nearly 100 miles of accepted streets and 15 miles of sidewalks. We would make five good sized towns, yet our valuation is only $34,000,000. As we can only raise $12 per thousand on the valuation for current expenses it is a great deal of work to get enough for expenses. Quincy is a growing municipality and we have to expend money to keep up with the times. These improvements have left us with a debt of $2,000,000 and it takes nearly $100,000 a year to pay interest. We must therefore carefully consider all expenditures. He wanted the association to feel that he was with them in all they do for our district. The time will come when the boulevard will be extended along the shore but before that we want better streets, lights and water service.

As I stated in my inaugural 'While we should be careful in the expendi-

HEARING TO BE HELD THURSDAY

Committee to Devote Whole Session to Hearing on Seagirt

WILL BE INTERESTING

It is understood that the hearing before the legislative committee on Towns, on the petition and bill to separate Houghs Neck from Quincy and make it a town of itself to be known as Seagirt will be held Thursday morning at the State house. As the hearing is likely to be unusually largely attended the committee will assign no other hearing for that day but devote the whole of the session to this one question.

A large attendance both of those in favor of the petition as well as remonstrants will be present and some interesting facts are sure to come out. Mayor Stone, City Solicitor McAnarny and the special committee of the council will be present in opposition as well as quite a few of the Houghs Neck who are opposed to the plan being set off by themselves.

It is expected that the remonstrants will present some facts and figures as to what has been expended in this section of the city during the past four years that will be an eye opener to the ordinary citizen. While the claim is that but little has been expended in the section during this period it is said that figures will show, that taking everything, more money has been expended than has been received from the section in taxes.

MARKET GARDENERS MEET

Last Saturday the Market Gardeners' Association met in Braintree with G. H. Arnold & Sons, market gardeners and held its regular monthly meeting. Two special cars attached to the 10.40 A. M. train from Boston conveyed the members, who resided on all sides of Boston, and they were then taken to the sixty acre farm in the marketing teams.

The gentlemen, about 150 in number made an interesting sight as they inspected the farm and watched an exhibit of an improved three-horse hitch manure spreader. Then a tour of the four large greenhouses was made.

At one o'clock dinner was served by the association's colored caterers and there was an abundance of escolloped oysters, potato salad, rolls, doughnuts, ices, cake and coffee. This buffet lunch was served in the long shed and the market men had individual seats on new bushel boxes. After the cigars were passed and a short social gahering there was a group picture taken by the Globe photographer in front of the large white barn.

From two o'clock until nearly four there was an enthusiastic business meeting with President M. E. Moore in the chair. Mr. F. F. Walker, chairman of the State Cattle Board was the first speaker. He explained the good work being done in controlling glanders and rabies in animals and urged the support of a bill before the house for protection against the diseases.

Vice president H. W. Rawson, chairman of the legislative committee explained a few bills which were soon to come up in the house.

Prof. F. W. Taylor, of the New Hampshire state college was the speaker of the day, his subject being "Soil Fertility."

Four new members were voted into the association and several applications for membership were received to be acted upon at the next meeting.

This meeting was held in the large wash room which is used for preparing vegetables for the Boston market and again the bushel boxes were used as seats.

The three sons Henry F., George A. and John E. Arnold are active members of the Market & Gardeners' Association and they did everything conceivable to properly entertain their guests.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB ENTERTAIN

Right royally did the Quincy Young Women's club entertain at their annual gentlemen's night on Saturday evening at the clubhouse on Presidents hill. There was a goodly attendance and in every way it was a most enjoyable affair.

The play "A Bunch of Matches" was given by the dramatic committee under the direction of Miss Mabel Lovejoy with the following in the cast: Richard Witherell, Misses Mabel Pratt, Edith Lovejoy, Hazel Dewhurst, Ruth Kemp, Margaret Lennon and Mabel Lovejoy. The parts were well taken with several bits of fine acting, showing good training and adaptibility on the part of the young actors.

Following the play there was a reception and music, the club president Miss Marie Bass being assisted in receiving by Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard, president of the Quincy Women's club, members of the club assisting as ushers.

Refreshments and dancing until midnight rounded out the evening's pleasures, the men all pronouncing it a fine time.

COAST ARTILLERY INDOOR GAMES

Quincy was well represented at the Massachusetts Coast Artillery games, held in the Armory on Irvington street, Boston, last Saturday evening. Joseph F. Phelan, better known as "Fay" Phelan, who captured the honors in the century yard dash at the last Fourth of July games held at Merrymount park, participated in the 75 yard dash. He won his heat, running from a handicap of four feet and finished second in the semi-final in the fast time of 8 seconds. He ran a strong race, despite the fact that he was not successful in emerging in victory. Phelan competed under the colors of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A.

Frank Bruce of the Italian American A. C. contested in the three mile race, with a handicap of 150 yards and finished second to the star Silva of the B. A. A., who was running from scratch. Silva won by two laps, yet the local boy ran in fine form throughout. The time was 15 minutes 54 3-5 seconds.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. team, composed of Estey, Pletch, Chell and Trask, was defeated by the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. team, composed of Phelan, Williams, Coughlan and Prout, who is also a well known local athlete, in a relay race, the time being very fast.

E. T. Marceau, brother of the well-known Frank, ran in the half mile with a handicap of 2 yards and finished in second place. He represented the Institute of Technology.

ESTABROOKS—DEWOLF.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at Wollaston Saturday afternoon when Miss Ruth H. DeWolf, daughter of Mrs. Mary DeWolf of New Bedford became the bride of Mr. Blakeslee Estabrooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Estabrooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. ceremony was performed by Rev. William B. Ayers of the Park and Downs church and took place in the presence of a few immediate friends. Mrs. Ray A. Stearns and Mr. Henry C. Humphrey attended the bridal couple who left immediately after the ceremony for Boston.

The wedding was somewhat of a surprise to the friends of the bridal party as they had been acquainted but a short period. Mr. Estabrooks made quite a name for himself when a student at the Thayer academy as an athlete. He is at present employed in a Boston banking house.

SUNDAY ALARM.

The alarm from box 432 at 10.59 on Sunday morning was for a fire among some old papers near the coal sheds of William Cashman on Furnace avenue. The fire was extinguished before it could communicate with the sheds.

ARREST SEVEN IN LIQUOR RAID

Premises of Joseph LaPresti Raided Sunday By Police

LIQUOR SEIZED

Enough liquor to stock a small sized bar room was seized by the police Sunday afternoon, when a squad of officers under Inspector Goodhue raided the premises of Joseph LaPresti at 246 Copeland street. In the raiding party, besides Officer Goodhue, were Officers Broberg, Curtin, Malone and Cahill. Besides finding a large quantity of liquor the officers found six men present whom they arrested on the charge of gaming.

The wagon was sent back to the police station with the men and returning to the place, the liquor seized was loaded on and also taken to the station. By the time the wagon had returned for its second load a large crowd had collected on the sidewalk to watch the raid.

The six men arrested in addition to the proprietor were David DiBona, Gorfano Tempesta, and Giordo Capo-Bianchi who were charged with gaming and Nazerino Taniotti, Pasquale Durando and Frank LaPresti for being present where gaming implements were found. The alleged proprietor Joseph LaPresti was locked up for maintaining a liquor nuisance.

The liquor seized included 100 bottles of beer, 300 empty beer bottles and a quart of whiskey. The parties were bailed later in the evening to appear in court Monday morning.

POLICE BALL.

The many friends of the members of the Quincy Police Relief Association are looking forward to Friday evening when the Association will hold its annual concert and ball at Music hall. The affair is in charge of an efficient committee who are sparing no pains to make it the most successful of any yet held.

AFFINITY DANCE ONE OF FEATURES

No depressive damages were reported and in fact nothing out of the ordinary was noticeable in Electa Hall, Saturday evening, despite the fact that a dancing party was being conducted there under the auspices of the Quincy Fat Men's Club. It was the first annual event for the men of excessive avoirdupois in local circles and it certainly proved the mecca of attraction for a large number of these select members of the human race, many of whom were in attendance from Boston, Braintree, Weymouth and Brockton.

A special feature of the evening was the "Fat Men's Affinity" dance The ladies were all given cards on which were inscribed numbers, made to correspond with the numbers given to the men. Each lady then went about the hall until she found her partner, with whom she danced when the music started. This feature proved a decided hit and was heartily applauded.

The music for the occasion was furnished by the Colonial orchestra which kept those present dancing to the light fantastic until shortly before midnight. The affair was in charge of a committee composed of Theodore Galickson, Torel Johnson, Dodd Thompson, Amanda Peterson, Hilda Jones and Grace Murphy.

—An antiquated and out-grown law requires that employees of the office of secretary of state must engross all bills by hand. The method is slow, costly and played out. It is proposed so to amend the law that the work in question may be done with typewriting machines. This is the sensible, up-to-date, business-like method. The amendment cannot be adopted any too soon.—Salem News.

As Dr. Wiley is sustained by the Congressional committee, it would seem imprudent to put out any more mince meat consisting of cotton wool soaked in brandy.

It is doubtful if Cuba will ever get a stable government until its climate is reformed. There will always be revolutions in a country where you can always sleep out in the woods, nights.

Beverly is taking a hand in civic improvement and hopes eventually to get all the wires of the city underground. The City Engineer has notified the Electric Light Co., and the Telephone Co., to put their wires underground on certain streets, the work to be done this year and the Bay State Street Railway Co., is also to bury its feed wires on certain specified streets. It's a good work, for there is nothing more disfiguring than poles unless we except billboards.

BEING A DUKE.

The duke of Connaught governor-general of Canada, with the Duchess and their daughter, set out a few days ago for a little sight seeing holiday in New York. They let it be known that they wanted a quiet trip and desired to avoid a round of public functions.

Now dukes and duchesses are more democratic persons than the people who are groveling to kiss the hem of their garments. Their social standing being guaranteed, they do not have to consider, when they meet a stranger, to which side of the social profit and loss account the new acquaintance will belong.

Probably the Duke would have enjoyed slipping unnoticed into the galleries of the theatres, where he could enjoy the play. Up there he could straighten his necktie without having this highly important action featured in the newspapers next day.

The Duchess and Princess probably came down mostly to do shopping. Perhaps they wanted to share the luscious joys of getting a shirtwaist for $3.98 that was worth $6.50.

Having no doubt read the Declaration of Independence, they thought that Americans considered all persons as free and equal. They may have dreamed that in our halcyon democracy dukes and duchesses could enjoy the privileges of doing what they pleased, supposed to appertain to all persons who have attained the age of twenty-one years.

If the premier of Canada comes down here for a little blow out, the fact that he is managing the destinies of one of the most important peoples on the globe, our back door neighbors and cousins, would not block traffic, nor interrupt the stock exchange.

But when the Duke and Duchess come, a figure head as far as the work of governing goes, yet possessing the one glittering bauble of a title, our democratic newspapers feature his slightest motion, they obstruct his path with camera men. Our democratic citizens assemble in crowds, so that he verily has to fight in order to exercise the common privilege of walking along the sidewalk.

And so the Duks and Duchess and Princess have been put through a round of social entertainments which they may or may not have enjoyed. The Duke has had to go to Washington, which was just what he did not want to do.

No doubt they were entertained with all possible courtesy and refinement. But this sort of thing is no novelty to them. Probably they would have liked better a simple little incognito trip, on which they would have met no one but the hotel clerk. From which it will be seen that dukes and duchesses have to lug around with them a train load of forms and dignities. These are much worse than having to carry your own suit case, and walk to the railroad station.

CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONERS.

Among the recommendations of President Taft, in his recent message urging more efficiency and economy, was that for retiring superannuated employees in the civil service.

Washington habitues say it is interesting to see how a new cabinet officer will butt his head against the stone wall of super-annuation in the government service. He approaches with stern and Spartan resolve the task of weeding out the aged and physically incapable men that clog the work.

It is quite another thing to take up the individual cases, and feel the strength of pulls, both of merit and demerit, that wind their iron cobwebs about the great departments.

One recent cabinet officer thus marked for slaughter an employee who had passed the 80 mark, and was manifestly incapable to hold his own with young men. But when the old man brought out a letter from Abraham Lincoln, showing that the post had been given him for exceptionally meritorious service, no one had the heart to proceed with the decapitation.

The estimate was made some years ago, that the government loses $1,200,000 a year by super-annuated clerks. This was obtained by figuring the number of able bodied men that it would take to do the work. But the actual loss must be far greater. Just as an alert young fellow spreads the contagion of hustle through a room full of workers, so a few decrepit old clerks give an air of mustiness, and disseminate the habit of puttering.

And yet the government owes these old fellows a great debt. They are not men who could bridge rivers and make speeches, but as a rule they have given their best to Uncle Sam, almost any one who had a horse who had served him faithfully would let Dobbn feed in his pasture until the end came. And yet a good many people would throw these pathetic and broken winded public servants out with out a word.

Our government is about the only civilized country which has failed to provide a plan by which the faithful aged employee shall be retired with some provision for the twilight of his career. Eventually such a plan could be nearly self supporting, and though it would cost Uncle Sam something for some years, the expense would not nearly equal the loss caused by inefficiency.

AUTO DRIVERS RESPONSIBLE.

The New York Court of Appeals has handed down a decision calculated to make drivers of automobiles and other vehicles more careful when approaching street crossings. The decision is revolutionary in that it puts responsibility for accidents upon drivers, holding that for the victim of an accident to recover damages, it is not necessary for him to prove that he looked either to the right or left before attempting to cross the street. Of course, a pedestrian should so look before attempting to cross a street. But it is not legally necessary for him so to do, in order to recover damages if he should be run down. This, at least, is New York law, according to the decision of its highest court.—Taunton Herald.

WHERE IS THAT QUARTER?

Coal has gone up again, just in the middle of the winter, when the extra price will pinch the poor. It is a pity! But coal does usually go up about this time of the year. Who gets the extra quarter cannot be told. It is certain that the retailer does not get it. The retailers are usually fellow-citizens of the consumers, and they have what is sometimes referred to as bowels of compassion. The big operators do not have these organs. They are locoed by their bank accounts.—Hyde Park Gazette.

DEAD AS A DOORNAIL.

If the project that looks to compulsory union with Boston of cities and towns within a radius of ten miles of the State house stood the ghost of a show, it might justify some of the vehement protests that here and there within the interested zone, are being manifested. Attempts to create a greater Boston by assiduous wooing of sundry outlying communities have repeatedly failed, until now the population boomers in Boston are disguested with efforts in this quarter. When these outside communities have made plain their reluctence to surrender their own autonomy, for the sake of becoming a part of a metropolis in which mere bulk is seemingly accounted the chief attraction, the nonsensicalness of legislative action favorable to compulsory union is only too apparent.—Salem News.

PEOPLE'S FORUM.

"Votes for Women" was the subject of a most interesting address by Mrs. Maud Wood Park of Boston at Sunday's session of the Braintree People's Forum in All Souls' church. Mrs. Park has such a pleasing personality, is so well versed on the subject of suffrage for women and presents her ideas in such logical and convincing fashion that it is truly a pleasure to hear her. She said the reason for the tremendous overturn of public opinion in favor of woman's suffrage was because nothing succeeds like success.

Another reason was that government by the people will never be an established fact until women are allowed to vote because the Oriental and old fashioned idea of women has been abandonded and today in most respects women is declared to be the equal of man.

Mrs. Park declared that the franchise would be a great benefit to women tax payers and property owners and asked all of her women hearer who did not want the ballot for themselves to at least be neutral and not to hinder progress. She described as selfish and short sighted the woman who does not wish to vote and yet will stand in the way of others and by word and act will try to retard the coming of universal suffrage. She said that votes for women would bring the members of the family into closer touch and make them interested in the great questions of the day, thus eliminating quarrels and arguments over the trivial things of life.

Mrs. Park emphasized the fact that the girl pupils in our high schools now outnumber the boys two to one and that the majority of the college graduates would soon be women. Should these women be allowed to votet he percentage of the so called dangerous foreign born vote would be materially reduced and the country would be greatly benefited by the increase in the number of intelligent thinking voters. Several of our states now permit women to vote, also some foreign countries notably New Zealand and Australia which are in many ways delightful democracies. Mrs. Park thinks that the ballot for women is absolutely necessary for well balanced government but frankly states that it cannot be brought about except with the help and cooperation of the men.

While admitting that women's suffrage is not the universal panacea for all political and economic evils, yet Mrs. Park thinks it would make a great change for the bettter and backs up her belief by good, sound, commonsense arguments.

There were many questions asked by interested auditors at the close of the address and Mrs. Park answerd them very clearly and fully and in a manner that showed her thoroughly conversant with her subject. At the close of the meeting many went forward to greet her and gain further information.

Next Sunday afternoon Meyer Bloomfield, director of the vocational bureau, Boston, will speak on "The New Neighboriness." Mr. Bloomfield is a noted settlement worker and was formerly head of the Civic Service House on Salem stree, Boston.

MIDDLEMEN CUT OUT

Vegetables For New York's Poor Sold at Rock Bottom Prices

New York, Jan. 29.—War on high prices for vegetables for the poor of New York, inaugurated by Rev. Dr. M. C. Peters after the fashion of Mayor Shank of Indianapolis, was begun with the opening by a committee of clergymen and others of the nrst of what is proposed to be a series of sales, placed where products of the soil will be transferred from producer to consumer without a middleman's intervention.

Customers who flocked to the big room in which quantities of carrots, potatoes, cabbages, beets, turnips and other vegetables were stacked, quickly emptied it of its contents.

THOUGHT SECURE IN LOVE OF HIS PEOPLE

King Nicholas of Montenegro Not Likely to Lose Throna

Cettinje, Montenegro, Jan. 29.—Conservatives here are of the opinion that the movement to establish a republic in Montenegro will come to nothing. The movement, aided somewhat by socialistic agitation, has been growing, it is true, but those who have watched the situation closely from the start say it can avail little as long as King Nicholas lives.

One of the first acts of the king after his assumption of his new title was to grant his people a constitutional government. This is but one of many acts which have endeared him to his people and bound them to him with a steadfast loyalty which, it is believed, no amount of republican agitation can overcome.

MORSE IN ATL NTA HOTEL

Will Probably Go to Florida Resort When Able to Travel

Atlanta, Jan. 29.—Charles W. Morse, whose prison sentence was recently commuted, has been taken from the army hospital at Fort McPherson to a local hotel where he will stay until he is able to be moved, probably to some Florida resort.

Morse was accompanied by Mrs. Morse and his sister, Miss Jennie Morse. He was conveyed from the military reservation in an ambulance.

For the first time in more than two years Morse escaped the eye of government officials. Most of that time he spent in the penitentiary. About two months ago he was taken to the military hospital.

ELIOT GREATLY IMPROVED

President Emeritus of Harvard Is Able to Walk About

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 29.—Dr. Samuel A. Eliot was informed by a cable message that his father, President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, walked unaided for half a mile in the gounds of the hospital at Kandy, Ceylon, where he is convalescing from an operation of appendicitis. This is taken as conclusive proof that he is well on the road to complete recovery.

Dr. Eliot does not know as yet whether his father will continue his intended tour of the world or will return directly home as soon as he is able to travel.

Church Destroyed by Fire

Athol, Mass., Jan. 29.—The Second Unitarian church was destroyed by fire last night with a loss of $30,000. Unity hall, a parish building adjoining, also was destroyed with all its contents.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL HEAR SQUANTUM WANTS

ture of money we should not retard the growth of the city." One of the most escential things for the growth is good car service. He thought the train service good but that there should be more frequent cars to Squantum. He saw that most of the members of the association were summer residents and he hoped they would soon become all the year residents. If they would get together and pull for one improvement he believed they would get it. He did not believe in temporary work but in permanent work.

Many have the mistaken idea that a certain amount of the taxes received from a section should be expended there. If this was so, then Ward One would get about all. He believed a revaluation of the city would do a great deal toward solving the financial question. In closing he said "come up to City Hall and get acquainted. Join the Board of Trade and the first thing you know you will be getting things."

Councilman Sandberg spoke briefly on the duties of the street committee. He also spoke of the training he had on the committee under the chairmanship of Councilman Moir. He also spoke of the time when he was on duty at Squantum as an officer and then Callahan was looked upon us "The bigger boss." The street commitee will visit Squantum some dark night and find out where those dark places are.

Commissioner of Public Works to be Tupper hoped that the residents of Squantum would co-operate with him when he took office. If you see a light out or a hole in the street let me know. He believed that Quincy had been asleep in some things, but we are awakening. Push all you can and you will get something.

Councilman J. R. S. Ross made the maiden speech of his career as a councilman. He said that Houghs Neck was a part of Quincy and he hoped it always would be. The people of Houghs Neck got many things they wanted and now some of them are getting cold feet. He thought Improvement associations were a good thing. We have one at Houghs Neck and through it we got many things. We went to the Council in a body and asked for certain things and got them. Do not ask too much and you will get your share.

Councilman Boyd was introduced as one of the three Democratic members of the council. He said that the president did him no harm in calling him a Democrat. He was a Democrat and always would be one. Never say die until you are dead. That is the motto of West Quincy. Anything that is reasonable that Squantum wants they could rely upon him to support. If it is unreasonable I will be against you.

Ex-Councilman Moir said that all he could do now for Squahtum was to give it his moral support and this he would gladly do. Just say the word and I am with you.

Mayor Stone then asked the President if he would state just what one improvement was most wanted.

As this a gentieman arose and spoke for the acceptance of three streets, Dorchester street, Huckings avenue and Bellevue road. Another spoke of the need of a few more water mains, and a few more lights. and to have the main streets fixed.

Mayor Stone then said that he wanted them to get together and come to City Hall as a unit, and with a solid front.

President Kenyon then asked all who were in favor of asking for the things that he had enumerated in his opening remarks to rise, and every man got up.

The only other speaker was Herman Berghurst, a name which it was said was the German for "A hot one." He said that he had a lot of money for the city. He was taxed double but he did not care for that. It is a good game to "soak em." I thought one night that we had a lot of lights but woke up to find it only a dream. He should be at City Hall frequently. He favored having more lights, the extension of the water mains and accepted streets.

Following the speaking there were songs by some of the members of the association and the dinner came to an end with three cheers for the Mayor and Councilmen.

Q.—Would you please explain what is meant by John's Gospel, sixth chapter and forty-fourth verse; and does this harmonize with Revelation xxii, 17—"Whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely?" (H. B. M.)

Answer.—Jesus words—"No man can come to Me except the Father which sent Me draw him," have long perplexed Bible scholars and Christian people in general. The thought usually is that the Lord is desirous that all mankind should be saved in this present Christian Era. And if this be so, they why does the Father "draw" so few to Christ? Why does He not draw all men unto Him? The difficulty is that many have failed to note the Scripture teachings concerning the Divine purpose. All Bible scholars recognize that the doctrine of "election" is taught in the Scriptures. And nearly all are aware that "free grace" is likewise set forth. In attempting to apply both these Bible teachings to the present Era confusion has resulted. God is now drawing to Christ such as He desires shall be members of His Church, the Bride of Christ. In other words, God is "calling" or inviting a few—"the elect"—to be joint-heirs with His Son in the glories of the Kingdom. When this election is completed, then God's free grace will be extended to all the world of mankind.

MANY POSTS CONDEMNED

Concentration of United States Army Is Planned by Stimson

Washington, Jan. 29.—Acting upon an exhaustive report by the general staff, Secretary of War Stimson has decided that no less than sixteen and probably eighteen army posts should at once be abandoned, "in order to put an end to the extravagance and inefficiency resulting from improper distribution of the mobile army."

The posts condemned include Fort Apache, Ariz.; Fort Jay, N. Y.; Madison Barracks, N. Y.; Fort Niagara, N. Y.; Fort Ontario, N. Y., and Fort Wayne, Mich.

There is another formidable list of posts from which for practically similar reasons the garrisons will ultimately be withdrawn to such concentration centres as congress may authorize. These posts include Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.; Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., and D. A. Russell, Wyo. The last named post is shown to have cost to date $4,925,486.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

Topics and Announcements For Coming Week

SUNDAY SCHOOLS

FIRST CHURCH.

Rev. Hilary Bygrave of Cambridge occupied the pulpit of First church Sunday morning, preaching a forceful sermon. Sunday school was held as usual.

There will be a special meeting of the Junior Laymen in the social rooms of the chapel this evening at 7.30.

At the Parish meeting, Jan. 22, it was voted to call Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson to our pulpit. If he accepts the call, he will come with great earnestness of purpose which added to his wide experience should make for the spiritual and practical welfare of the church. Let us all in the true spirit of loyalty and usefulness, work shoulder to shoulder with him, helping him to keep the church, which stands for our principles and beliefs, the power for good in the community which it always has been in the past and should be in the future.

That the women of our denomination in and about Boston are much interested in present day philanthropies was evidenced by the large number present at the meeting of the Council of Unitarian Women which met Jan. 22, at Arlington Street church, Boston. This council has been formed recently to assist in carrying on Social service work in Greater Boston.

On Sunday, Feb. 4, Rev. Chester A. Drummond of Somerville, will preach.

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

At the morning service the pastor, Rev. Joseph Walther preached a strong sermon on "Our Duty toward those in the Outside."

Five new scholars joined the Sunday school.

Miss Annie Fliéger spoke to the Juniors at 3.30. In the absence of Miss Campbell, Miss Harriman took charge of the meeting.

The missionary committee took charge of the Y. P. S. C. E. meeting, subject: "The Foreign Misisonary, whose life has most inspired me."

At the evening service the pastor preached the fifteenth in a series of sermons to men on "Men Who did Things," subject, "The Man Who Discerned." A good number were present at all the services.

Tuesday evening at 7 the Albee class will observe gentlemen's night in the chapel, Rev. Dr. O. P. Gifford will give an address. Supper at 7. Each member is entitled to bring one guest only.

Wednesday evening at 7.45 a cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Porter, 109 Taylor street, Selden H. Nickerson, leader.

Thursday evening at 6.45 the annual meeting and supper of the Rand Young Men's class will be held in the chapel. All the members of the class are urged to be present.

Friday evening at 7.45 the monthly covenant meeting of the church will be held in the chapel, subject: "His Trust." This subject will continue meditations on the Life and Character of Jesus.

ST. CHRYSOSTOM'S.

Rev. L. C. Manchester, D. D. preached at the morning service and the usual Sunday school session followed.

The members of the Girls' Friendly Society will present an entertainment in Alpha hall, Quincy, Friday, Feb. 9. The proceeds are for the Parish House fund. The programme is interesting, bright and varied.

The "Mile of Pennies" scheme has given material assistance to the Parish House Fund. Last week 213 feet or $34.08 were netted. The rivalry between teams is increasing. Ingenious methods to secure feet are being devised by the various teams. At present the team of which Miss Leah Hennigar is Captain is in the lead, and Miss Maud Briggs' team is second. Their positions are by no means secure however.

Considering the shortness of the notice the returns from the pledges for the Parish House to date are encouraging. Already there is available in cash and from pledges about one third of the amount necessary to begin the work of building. The near future promises good results. We need that Parish house. The Building committee is working faithfully and effectively to provide it. The Parish organizations are taking hold in earnest. Indications are that the Parish at large will sustain the effort.

The date appointed for Confirmation is Thursday evening, March 21. Those who are at all considering the subject of Confirmation are requested to notify the Rector to that effect without delay. A meeting of all interested in Confirmation will be held in the Church on Sunday at the close of the morning service. This meeting has for its purpose to settle upon the most convenient time for the series of Confirmation talks which will be given preparatory to Confirmation. Being present at these talks only signifies interest in a great subject and desire to know more about it; it does not commit anyone to take the actual step.

CHRIST CHURCH.

The usual services were held Sunday with good attendance.

At the annual meeting on Jan. 24th 22 were admitted to membership. After the usual routine of business the question of abolishing the pew rents and making the church free was taken up. A long discussion ensued. It was finally voted that the question be referred to the Vestry to report to a meeting of the parish before final action should be taken. The discussion occupied so much time that the reports from the various organizations were omitted.

The Rector reported as pastoral work, calls 777; baptisms 52, confirmations 22; marriages 19; burials 19. The parish list shows that there are 367 families and 75 individuals not heads of families. Total number 1223.

The Vestry has sustained heavy loss in the retirement of C. Theodore Hardwick and the resignations of W. W. Osborne and Mr. Newcomb. All three have served the parish well, giving freely of their time and council for a long unbroken period. The appreciation of the meeting was expressed by a rising vote. The Clerk was instructed to write Mr. Osborne extending sympathy in his illness and regret for his resignation.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

Morning service at 10.30 Topic:—"The terms and conditions of Discipleship in Christ's Kingdom."

Fair attndance at Sabbath school.

The young people had a good meeting in the evening.

The evening service was well attended. Pastor's Topic:—"How the "Men and Religion Forward Movement" may help the church."

The choir did their part well. Mr. Marr sang a solo which was well rendered.

Communion service in this church next Sabbath evening.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The sermon of Rev. Carl G. Horst was a call to noble thinking and living. Giving as his subject. "Spiritual Ideals" and taking as his text the words found in I Kings 2:2 "Be thou strong and show thyself a man," he made a strong and earnest plea for holding in reverence the body and its welfare.

"The body is a Sanctuary, the temple of God" said the preacher, "and upon its health and soundness depend the functions of mind and soul. It is a complex monument to the skilful hand of God,—the temple of a soul made in his image, and clothing and making manifest the Divine spark.

Within this wholesome body dwells the mind, the heart, the soul;—the man, seeing goodness and truth as ladders reaching up into heaven and making possible the realization of great ideals. Character building is the important work we have to do here, the making of manhood rather than money, the accumulation of knowledge rather of tangible possessions. And this character building must be done by us, since in no case may it be done for us.

Character must be found as the sculptor finds the beautiful form within the rough block, by patient chiselling, slow and painstaking labor and a consecrated belief in beauty and goodness.

At the meeting of the Unitarian Ministers' Union in Channig hall, Boston, this afternoon Judge Harvey H. Baker of the Juvenile Court Boston gave an instructive address on "Juvenile Delinquents and how to deal with them."

The minister is arranging a series of special mid-week Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life. Among the special preachers are the Rev. Julian C. Jaynes, of West Newton, Rev. Thomas Van Ness of the historic Second church of Boston, the Rev. Sheed Anderson of Roxbury.

Rev. Carl G. Horst gave an address before the Y. P. R. U. of the Hyde Park Unitarian church yesterday afternoon.

The reports of the parish committee and the allied societies at the annual business meeting of the church showed the church in splendid condition, with all bills paid and a balance in the church treasury. Our church, the only liberal christian church in Wollaston, has had a good, steady growth and is looking forward to the best year yet, which marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the church and twenty-five years of "Pure Christianity" for the moral and spiritual uplift of the community.

In his annual report to the parish our minister recommended the appointment of a Social Service committee to have charge of and arrange for public meetings for the free and open discussion of the ethics of the social order and the problems of society. Among the topics to be considered are Child Welfare, Civil Service Reform, Conservation of National Resources, Health and Sanitation, Housing Reform, Immigration, Industrial Disputes and Arbitration, Industrial and Vocational Education, International Arbitration, Labor Legislation, Marriage and Divorce, Prison Reform, Public Recreation, Sex Education and Hygiene, Reform of Court Procedure, Rural Conditions, Standards of Living and Labor, Taxation, Temperance etc.

Mr. and Mrs. William Burrell are on their annual vacation south and regret that they could not be present at the annual parish meeting.

The Ladies' Aid Alliance will have a birthday luncheon for its members in the vestry, Wednesday at 12.30 o'clock at 25 cents per plate. Mrs. Prescott Keyes of Concord, Mass. and Mrs. Atherton of Roxbury are the guests of the Alliance and at the meeting after the luncheon will answer any question in regard to our national denominational work and our missionary work both at home and abroad. No member of the Alliance should miss this meeting

The Junior Lend-a-Hand club will meet at the home of Dorothy Atwood, 557 Hancock street, Tuesday, at 3.45 p. m.

Will those having copies of Ballard's 91st Psalm, which belong to the church, kindly return them at once to Mrs. Frank A. Page, 103 Grand View avenue.

At the Young People's Religious Union next Sunday evening, Miss Evelyn Cummings will lead the devotional service and Mrs. H. J. Gurney will speak on Patriotosm.

The musical program at the next vespers, Sunday, Feb. 11, will be largely instrumental, Miss Marion Moorhouse, cellist, and other well known artist will take part.

A meeting of the teachers of the Sunday school has been called for Thursday evening at 8 p. m. at the home of Frank A. Page. A full attendance is desirable.

BETHANY CHURCH.

At Bethany church, Rev. Asher Anderson, D. D., occupied the pulpit, taking for his text, 53d chapter Isaiah 8th verse, "For he said, surely they are my people, children that will not lie; so he was their Saviour." Also the 2d chapter, 1st Corinthians 8th verse, "Which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory."

Dr. Anderson said in part, "You will find the explanation of the first verse in the second. In the life and teachings of Jesus Christ we find the embodiment of all that stands for free thought, purity and truth. In the time of Christ the people were not allowed to think for themselves. The most fiendish forms of torture were invented to crush freedom of thought, and to keep them from believing in the doctrines of Christ.

"If our Saviour should appear on earth today, what would our attitude be towards him? But Jesus Christ is here! He lives in truth, honesty and everything we hold most sacred. When we tell a lie, we crucify him, when we are dishonest in our business, we crucify him. Jesus Christ stands for truth, God, love, and every quality which makes the best in men.

"Jesus Christ was not popular when on earth because people did not understand him. Just as some people cannot understand classical music, and do not interpret it intelligently. And the same in other worlds of service-artists, composers, sculptors, their beautiful creations are not understood and appreciated. May our eyes be opened to the peace and beauty, the strength and character reflected in the divine nature of Jesus Christ. Then shall we be true disciples of Him, who was crucified for us."

The choir rendered appropriate music. Dr. Anderson officiated at the evening service in the chapel with a large audience.

MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Those attending Memorial church, Atlantic, were greatly surprised Sunday morning as they entered the church, to see the beautiful new organ in place, and Miss Hazel Davison on the seat ready to play it when the bell stopped ringing.

The organ case is made of antique quartered oak, and the pipes are finished in dull gold bronze. There are nine complete speaking stops, besides the combination stops.

Miss Davison played "Intermezzo," by Bruce Steane, as the preulde, and an offertory by Lysberg, and for the postlude, the "Triumphal March," by Wachs. The vested choir sang "At Heaven's Gate," the alto solo being sung by Mrs. A. H. Hall, also "I Will Rise," by Perkins, the tenor solo being sung by John Ward.

Rev. T. W. Davison spoke on "Spiritual Ideals." His text was taken from 1 Cor. 2:16. "We have the mind of Christ." Mr. Davison said in part Our conduct may become mere formality and degenerate into mere observances. That formality could take the place of the spiritual ideal and true service was one danger, and the other danger was other worldiness and etheral mysticism instead of leavening force. He said the great reformers touched the deep springs of action, but did not lay down rules of conduct. Mr. Davison said that the veneering of furniture was a modern acquisition and he feared that we had come to a place where we had veneered Christianity and lacked that solid ruggedness that made the early Christians a power for good.

Our material ideals of a year ago and two years ago had been actualized in our new building and the pipe organ; but our church does not stand for building or pipe organ, or even music, but these were only instrumental in making us effective in spiritual service. The church of today if true to the mind of Christ must serve as did its Lord. He said that the church of the sixth century met savage tribes of Vandals, Goths, and Franks, and moulded them into disciples of Christ. We may not have to meet savage tribes, but we have shiftless, carelessness, human selfishness to overcome and it must be with the high spiritual ideal of our minds being in harmony to the mind of Christ.

In conclusion Mr. Davison said he would rather have the Salvation Army method of putting the proposition to men to become Christians at once than to get into the mere habit of listening to a homiletic discourse and then going home as indifferent and care less as ever.

Most of us pay from seventy-five cents to two dollars for seats in the theatre and then look for the smallest coin for the church contributions, and such things show lack of a spiritual ideal.

MRS. DUNCAN MACLACHLAN.

It will be with deep regret that her many friends in Quincy will learn of the death of Mrs. MacLachlan, wife of Mr. Duncan MacLachlan, Senior, who only recently left Quincy to make their home in Kentucy. Mr. MacLachlan only last June left the Fore River Co., where he was employed as watchman, and with his beloved wife had bright prospects ahead of them.

The aged couple purchased a home in the town of Cleaton, Kentucky, and for a time things prospered far beyond expectations. Sickness visited the home, and Mrs. MacLachlan was confined to bed, and it was then that their youngest daughter, Mrs. William Stevens came to reside close to her parents to nurse her mother back to health, but sickness again came, this time to Reta, youngest child of Mrs. Stevens, and she moved to her parents' home. For sixteen weeks both Mrs. MacLachlan and her grandchild were confined to their beds, sometimes showing signs of improvement. After a time Mrs. MacLachlan was able to go out of doors but la grippe laid its hands heavily upon her.

Meanwhile her little grandchild was fighting bravely to get well. All that medical aid could do, was done to save the loved ones, but they gradually weakened. Saturday morning, Jan. 20 at 3.30 the first sad event occurred, which grieved Cleaton from end to end, little Reta, aged 4 years, 11 months, passed away only to be separated from her beloved grandmother five short hours, for at 8.30 Mrs. MacLachlan passed away from this life after a long illness borne with Christian patience. With her to the last were her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, and her only son Duncan MacLachlan, Jr., who had been summoned from Quincy.

The funeral took place Jan. 23, service being held in the Methodist church. There was an exceptionally large gathering of mourners. The service was conducted by Mr. Walker, who in strong, solemn voice called upon all to be ready to meet their master as was the case with the loved ones whom they mourned today. The choir of the church sang the favorite hymns of the deceased among them being: "Jeusu, Lover of my Soul," "Gone, Gone," "We shall meet Mother up Yonder."

The service at the grave was also by Mr. Walker and during this service and amidst a scene of great sorrow the caskets of grandmother and granddaughter were lowered into one grave, being laid side by side.

Beside her husband, and only son, Mrs. MacLachlan leaves three daughters Mrs. William Stevens, Mrs. Harry Robertson of Weymouth, and Mrs. Andrew Bell of Braintree.

Previous to moving to Kentucky, Mr. and Mrs. MacLachlan resided for five years on East Howard street, and during that time made many friends, all of whom extend sympathy to Mr. MacLachlan and family in their sad double bereavement.

SCHLEY MEMORIAL

McDonnell & Sons of Barre, Vt., has been awarded the contract for the memorial to the late Rear Admiral W. S. Schley. The monument will be a massive sarcophagus of classical design and the order was placed with the firm by Mrs. W. S. Schley, who resides in New York city. The work will be executed in Barre granite and when completed will be erected in Arlington National Cemetery at Washington.

Dogs That Eat Crabs.

There are crab hunting and crab eating dogs in Brazil. The dogs are half fox, but they do not seem to care very much for poultry. They have been known to turn up their noses at nice fat pullets and go fishing for crabs instead. The dogs hunt in packs along the banks of the rivers in the Amazon valley, and the crawfish and land crabs of that region are their especial prey. The crabs often put up a vigorous fight, but the dogs have a way of turning them over and biting them in a vital spot just as the thoroughbred terrier polishes off a rat.—New York World.

Too Much For Him.

"Allow me," said the girl as she handed him a plate of crackers; "crackers to the cracked, you know."—Ladies' Home Journal.

BRIEFS

Mrs. H. H. Blake is confined to her home on Upland road, a victim of the grippe.

The Two Associates of this city hold a dance in Electa hall tomorrow evening.

Carl C. Lane of Goffe street who has been ill for two weeks is able to sit up awhile each day.

J. A. Keating of Spear street left Saturday for Florida hoping the change will benefit his health.

Mrs. Annie M. Chick, after several weeks' visit with her daughter in Brooklyn, N. Y. returned to her home on Maple street, Friday.

TO DELIVER SUBMARINES.

It is expected the new submarine torpedo boats E-1 and E-2 will be delivered at the Charlestown navy yard by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, the first of next week.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW.

The Ninth National Motor Boat and Engine Show opened Saturday evening at Mechanics building, Boston and easily surpasses all its predecessors; both as to number, and character of the exhibits. Every foot of floor space was occupied, and the large and varied line of boats proved a revelation to all interested in marine motors. The display of boats, include all types from the tiny power canoe and skiff, small cabin boat, and handsome speed launch up to the seagoing power cruiser with its splendid accommodations between decks for trips along shore. The display of engines was almost bewildering, for there were hundreds of makes and styles all of which showed the rapid and wonderful improvement made on the internal combustion as applied to marine work in recent years. Among the novelties shown and which created much interest was the stanch little power boat "Niagara," which successfully negotiated the Rapids and Whirlpool and made a landing under her own power at Lewiston below the great American Falls.

Yachtsmen and enthusiastic amateur tars were greatly interested in the 18 foot water line auxiliary yawl Sea Bird which made the 4,000 mile voyage from Providence, R. I. to Rome Italy. An interested crowd inspected the little yawl, which is shown fully rigged and equipped on the main floor of Mechanics Building.

Captain Thomas Fleming Day, the daring navigator, will give lectures Wednesday afternoon and evening, in which he will graphically tell the story of the "Sea Bird's trip. It will be found a rattling good yarn of the sea, its calms and storms, the appalling vastness of old ocean and the glorious way the little craft was taken through it all. The story takes you to sea and makes you feel the briskness with its thrilling incidents. It will be told in that delightful, interesting, and picturesque way such an only sailor, like Mr . Day can reel off. All New England wants to visit this interesting and instructive Exhibition.

You need the Ledger every day.

OPEN THREATS OF DISASTER

Ettor Declares That "Something Is Going to Happen"

A RIOTOUS SPIRIT PREVAILS

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 29.—Inflammatory speeches by Independent Workers of the World leaders and representatives of labor unions have so aroused the 20,000 striking textile workers in Lawrence that a repetition of the riots two weeks ago is feared today.

"Don't let them get men in the mills at any cost," is the slogan which went from mouth to mouth about the streets, and before the whistles blew thsi morning a parade was formed with the intention of blocking all thoroughfares leading to the mill district.

To cope with the threatened demonstration four new companies have arrived to relieve the fatigued guards, who have been on duty here for more than fourteen days, and the militiamen were augmented by the entire Lawrence police department.

Numerous meeting of the strikers were held throughout Sunday. Agitator Ettor, accompanied by his self appointed body guard of admirers, hurried from hall to hall, urging the operatives to stay together and prevent the mills from opening.

Ettor's addresses were of the usual fiery nature, with open threats of disaster to the mill owners and their property, similar to those of Saturday, when he urged his followers to break up weaving machinery if forced back to work by starvation.

Ettor's Threat

"Something is going to happen tomorrow," he declared at the Socialist meeting in the city hall. "In forty-eight hours this town is not going to be very happy. Don't be afraid of dynamite. We are not going to use explosives. And we hope that no one will be hurt, but if anyone is killed, it will be only because the other side needs more blood to grease its mechanism."

The strikers greeted this statement with cheers. The riotous spirit, which was prevalent at the beginning of the conflict but diminished later, again is in evidence and the strikers are in a threatening mood. They feel that upon the developments of today depend the outcome of the struggle.

All the I. W. W. orators advocated the adoption of the I. W. W. tactics which prevail in the western states. James DeBell, former president Cigar James DeBell urged them if necessary to go to jail for the sake of the cause.

Ettor intimated that if strike breakers are imported, many of them will be I. W. W. members, who, after gaining access to the plants, will demolish the machinery.

Monday always has been a critical day since the strike began. It was two weeks ago today that the militia was ordered to charge the rioters on Canal street. A week ago many of the operatives returned to work and the owners believed the strike partly broken.

Great Mass Meeting

Fully 1500 persons packed in city hall yesterday afternoon, hooted at the mention of Mayor Scanlon's name, hissed the state militia, and, after listening to denunciations of the tactics of the mill men, went forth determined to prevent the so-called scabs from going to work.

Organizer Ettor, Strike Committeeman Thomas J. Halliday and James A. DeBell of Boston, former president of Cigar Makers' union 97, urged the workers to concentrate their efforts and keep the mills from opening.

"Tomorrow we either win or lose this strike," declared Ettor, "and you know the loser always has to buy the drinks. These mills must be closed."

Lena M. Lewis, a prominent Socialist of Chicago, also spoke, and implored the workers to keep up the fight until the mill men beg for mercy.

DeBell pronounced Mayor Scanlon "the human sponge of the mill owners of this city, subject to their squeeze," and referred to the mills as private penitentiaries. "If Mayor Scanlon does not do just as the mill owners say," he continued, "he will lose his job as dog catcher of the city of Lawrence. Why, the mill men virtually paid his campaign expenses."

The Portuguese strikers met at 313 Common street while the meeting was in progress in the city hall and were addressed in their native tongue. Ettor spoke to the Italians in the vestry of St. Anthony's Syrian church earlier in the day and addressed the Lithuanians last evening in the Lithuanian church.

Haywood on the Job

"I will be back in Lawrence within five days prepared to stay until we win this strike, if I have to stay until I die—and we will win."

William D. Haywood made this positive assertion just before boarding a train at the South station for Toledo.

He declared he had cancelled every engagement after Wednesday of this week, and is arranging his affairs so that he may hurry back and assist in putting through measures which, he asserted would assure victory for the 20,000 mill operatives now on strike.

"I am going west," said Haywood, "to keep three lecture engagements which may not be broken. Monday night I speak in Toledo, the next night at Fremont and Wednesday in Chicago. From that day on I have cancelled all future engagements so that I will be free to devote every energy to winning the strike at Lawrence."

SLAYER GIVES HIMSELF UP

Shoots His Wife, From Whom He Had Long Been Separated

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 9.—Arthur Pheuneff shot and instantly killed his wife, Mrs. Delia Pheuneff, at the home of his wife's mother, 103 Harrison street, after failing to effect a reconciliation with his wife, from whom he had been separated about three years. He walked into a police station and gave himself up.

Pheuneff fired two shots, the second causing death. Before shooting his wife, Pheuneff fired two shots throug the door panel of a bedroom in which the mother and sister of Mrs. Pheuneff had fled in terror from his threats.

Pheuneff had been employed in various logging camps in Maine. He is 36 years old. His wife was 25.

NEW ENGLANDERS AMONG IMMORTALS

Thirteen Named by Institute of Arts and Letters

Philadelphia, Jan. 29.—The forty immortals of America, and more particularly of the United States, chosen from among the greatest living American writers, have been announced by the National Institute of Arts and Letters. Among them are the following New England men:

DETECTIVES BAFFLED

Cannot Prove Alleged Offer of Human Sacrifice by Negro "Sect"

New Orleans, Jan. 29.—Baffled by lack of convincing evidence, the state of Louisiana may have to drop the effort to prove the recent deaths of twenty-six men, women and children in the "rice belt" were human sacrifices under the terrible rites of the so-called "Sacrifice Sect," composed of negroes.

Efforts of the best detectives in the state have so far failed to produce any evidence that would fasten the crimes directly upon the "sect" or upon Rev. King Harrison, pastor of a negro congregation, whose members, it is asserted, all belong to the "sect." Harrison is being held on suspicion.

HARVEY KILLS HIMSELF

Sculptor Feared He Would Not Attain Fame Which He Sought

New York, Jan. 29.—Charles Y. Harvey, a sculptor, formerly of Great Barrington, Mass., convinced, it is believed, that a group in plaster he had been working on for months would not bring him the fame and fortune he had hoped for, killed himself in Bronx park by cutting his throat with a razor.

His corpse was found in a thicket in a wild section of the park. Two razors lay near by. Harvey had a studio on upper Broadway, which he had occupied since he came to New York a year ago from Paris.

GABY IS STILL SINGLE

Says Cablegram Announcing Her Marriage Was a Fake

London, Jan. 29.—Gaby Deslys, Parisian dancer and charmer of kings, denies that she was married in this city to Harry Pilcer, who was a member of the Winter Garden company in New York with her.

"One can't get married in London on the day after arrival," she said, "and I only arrived here Wednesday. Anyhow, Mr. Pilcer is already married. I brought Pilcer with me to London to assist in an engagement at the Alhambra. That cablegram to New York announcing my marriage was a fake."

Sheriff In Trouble In Boston

Boston, Jan. 29.—Deputy Sheriff John Shorey of Conway, N. H., was sentenced to four months in the house of correction in the municipal court, after he had been found guilty of carrying a loaded revolver and committing assault and battery. An additional charge of drunkenness was placed on file. Shorey appealed and was held for the superior court.

MAY LEAD TO PARTY FIGHT

Democrats Split on Proposed Investigation of Money Trust

HENRY ASSUMES LEADERSHIP

Washington, Jan. 29.—Inquiry into the "money trust" has become one of the most important problems before the Democrats of the house of representatives, and with a difference of opinion existing among them as to the wisdom of such an investigation as is proposed in the resolution introduced by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, Representative Henry of Texas, chairman of the rules committee, took the positive stand that the inquiry was imperative.

In a statement urging his colleagues to vote with him to "turn on the light," Henry assumed leadership of what may turn into a serious party fight before the question is settled.

It is known that Representative Underwood, the majority leader, and others are opposed to saddling any more investigating committees upon congress at this time, but whether pressure in this instance will be strong enough to convince them that it is the duty of the party to delve into the secets of Wall street finance remains to be seen. It is probable that the matter will not be settled until the house Democrats have fought out the issue in caucus.

Speaker Clark, Underwood and other leaders decline to discuss the statement issued by Henry, in which he positively asserted that the party could not decline to prosecute the proposed investigation.

"There must be no sensational and muckraking inquiry, but a wise, deliberate, systematic and effective probing into the conditions constituting the trust," said Henry. He intimated that he was prepared for opposition from some of the Democratic leaders.

"There should be no pussy-footing or gum-shoeing by the trustees of the people now holding seats in this congress," said Henry. "Let those agents of the people stand up and vote openly and boldly in behalf of their constituencies."

Representative Littleton, though not a member of the rules committee, which is considering the resolution, expressed opposition to the inquiry after a conference with some of his party colleagues.

"I am oppised to the inquiry such as is proposed by Mr. Henry," said Littleton. "If this plan were followed a panic might ensue. Why would it not be better to admit that there is a money trust if such exists and then set about to frame legislation to remedy the evil?

"What good is to be accomplished by an investigation based on the mere claim of some man that there is such a trust? An inquiry such as is proposed certainly will create unrest among the people."

O'GARA IS STRICKEN

Prominent Bay State Democrat Drops Dead In Town Meeting

Spencer, Mass., Jan. 29.—John O'Gara, for years an active Democratic party worker in this state, dropped dead while in the midst of a speech at a special town meeting here. Heart trouble was the cause.

O'Gara for a quarter of a century had been prominent in Democratic party affairs in Masaschusetts. He was a delegate to several Democratic notional conventions.

O'Gara was 62 years old and had lived in Spencer all his life. He was a road builder and contractor. He leaves a widow and five children.

BANK CLERK A HUMAN TANK

Stole Money to Gratify His Appetite For Beer Stunts

San Francisco, Jan. 29.—Geoge A. Terry, formerly a clerk in the National Banking corporation, who pleaded guilty to having embezzled $13,000, testified in the superior court that he drank 100 quarts of beer within six hours. Terry made this explanation of the expenditure of a portion of the money which he stole from the bank.

Terry made a complete confession of his thefts.

Burleigh Out For Senator

Augusta, Me., Jan. 29.—Former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh last night announced his candidacy to succeed Senator Obadiah Gardner, now filling out the unexpired term of the late Senator Frye.

Leaves Estate of Over $2,000,000

Portland, Me., Jan. 29.—The inventory of the estate of W. W. Brown, aged 90, the lumber owner and operator, was filed in the probate court. It amounts to $2,053,877.96.

Kaiser Passes Another Milestone

Berlin, Jan. 29.—Emperor William spent the greater part of his 53rd birthday with his family. Scores of congratulatory messages were received from the heads of foreign governments, among them a cablegram from President Taft.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

COOKING THE LORDLY TURKEY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

The lord of the winter party or wedding anniversary feast is, of course, the turkey—and know ye, good housewives, one and all, that he can be cooked to a delicious turn by M. Soyer's method of paper bag cookery! In fact, the entire dinner can be prepared and cooked to perfection in paper bags, and after it has been eaten to the last turkey bone and last slice of pumpkin pie, the good housewife will not be confronted by a great pile of pots and pans to be cleaned—a task that has taken the edge off the happiness of many a housewife who has served one of her old-time famous meals for her guests, or her children back home to help the old folks celebrate their anniversary.

Grape fruit, with rum, is, to my mind, the ideal appetizer, but if oysters are insisted upon, put three small raw ones in the middle of the prepared fruit and season with salt, pepper, Worcester sauce and tobasco. Keep the oysters very cold, and add them to the fruit very shortly before serving, thus the two flavors remain distinct to accent rather than to muddle each other.

Salted Nuts.—I made two bags—almonds and pecans—and hereafter shall never buy them ready prepared. The almonds were blanched and dried, the pecans, bought ready hulled, picked over, scalded by pouring boiling water through them in a colander, and instantly dried. Then both were put in thickly-buttered bags, set in a very hot oven for half a minute, then the heat was reduced three-quarters, and the nuts left to brown for ten minutes. They came out crisp and beautiful, needing only a sprinkling of salt.

The Toasted Crackers I prepared were tiny oyster crackers, as fresh as possible. They were put in buttered bag, lightly sprinkled after they were in, with melted butter skimmed clean of froth, then given a tablespoonful of grated Parmesan, which was shaken well through them before sealing the bag. Sealed, it went into a very hot oven, which after two minutes had the heat turned as low as possible. Eight minutes of it made them not quite brown enough—a peep-hole in the bag top assured me of that—so I left them in three minutes longer. A few of them stuck together, but in the main, they looked as good as they tasted.

The Turkey.—Choose him as young, as tender, as fresh as you can. But if by ill chance you must take an old bird, therefore a tough one, then, indeed, you will find in paper bag cookery, surcease from the sorrow of toughness. A tough bird will require a lot of grease in the bag with it, also long and slow cooking. But the end will crown the means—he will come forth tender and delicious, also well browned, but not too brown, and simply bursting with juice. Extra care must be taken in trussing him—tie down legs and wings beyond any possibility of springing. Tough fowls have a way of stretching out their joints under the influence of heat, that, without this precaution, may make the legs and wings dangerous to the integrity of the bag.

Get the bird in hand early—the night before if possible. If he comes drawn, so much the better; if in a state of nature, pick, draw and singe at once, taking pains to get off all pinfeathers, and cutting out the oil-bag upon the "parson's nose"—otherwise known as the root of the tail feathers. Wash the bird thoroughly in very cold water. If there is the least sour smell, scald out by pouring through boiling soda water, followed by a cold rinse water. Drain well, wipe dry, inside and out, salt very lightly, and hang up in a cold place until morning—outside, unless the temperature is below freezing, or there is danger of thieves, four of two-footed. A city housewife will do well to cover the turkey while thus hanging out with either a loosely fitting grocer's paper bag or a square crash or cheese cloth. This keeps away soot and dust, which, once settled on the skin, defy washing off. Get the stuffing ready before taking in the bird. Dash cold water over and through it before putting in the stuffing, wipe inside and out with a soft, damp cloth, then resalt but very lightly outside and in.

Since the turkey is apt to require the whole oven and long, slow cooking, better put him on early, and take him up before beginning the other things.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

OMELETS PLAIN AND FANCY.

TO make a good omelet you must have good eggs; also the eggs must be well beaten. Use about a dozen light strokes with a fork.

The secret of the omelet's lightness is that the moisture in the eggs turns to steam in cooking, and that puffs up the omelet.

Fancy omelets are made by spreading over the plain egg omelet before folding over a teaspoonful of parsley or a few spoonfuls of chopped meat, oysters or clams, grated cheese, vegetables or fruit.

Some Nice Omelets.

Oyster Omelet.—Blanch one dozen small oysters by bringing them to the boiling point in their own liquor, seasoned with a dust of cayenne pepper, a saltspoonful of salt and nutmeg. Mix an omelet, place in a pan over the fire and when it begins to cook at the edges place the oysters, without any liquor, in its center, fold it together and serve it hot at once.

Baked Omelet.—Take six eggs, one cupful of bolling milk, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, wet with cold milk; one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, thyme and sweet marjoram, mixed; pepper and salt. Beat the yolks light and pour upon them the hot milk. Stir in the cornstarch, season, whip in the frothed whites and, lastly, the herbs. Have ready a pudding dish, well buttered. Set in the oven until hot, butter again and pour in the omelet. Bake about twelve minutes, or until "set" in the middle, but not longer or it will be leathery.

Vegetable Omelets.

Cheese Omelet.—Take four eggs, one-half cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of flour, a little parsley, pepper and salt, one-half teacupful of grated cheese and one tablespoonful of butter. Beat the eggs very light and then add the other ingredients. Beat all well together and pour into a pan in which a large tablespoonful of butter is heated. Let it cook till a light brown, then fold it over and dish for the table. Shake the pan while the omelet is cooking.

Potato Omelet.—To a large cupful of mashed potatoes allow three eggs, an even teaspoonful of salt, half a teacupful of milk and a very little sifted flour, not more than a heaping teaspoonful; complete the ingredients, with the exception of the flavoring. Parsley chopped very fine may be used or lemon juice with a very little black pepper and nutmeg. Heat and grease a large saucepan and pour the mixture into it. Brown it lightly and serve hot.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney trouble are but fore-runners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Quincy residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Quincy citizen who says that the cure Doan's Kidney Pills effected years ago has proven permanent?

W. Charlesworth, 33 Cranch St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly an effective kidney medicine. They fixed me up in good shape some years ago, and since then I have had no kidney trouble."

WILSON INVADES NEW ENGLAND

Governor Talks to Three Audiences at the Hub

HIS PREIDENTIAL STOCK RISES

Boston, Jan. 29.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey spent a day in Boston as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President of the United States. He came to see and be seen, to get acquainted with the men who control the destinies of the Massachusetts Democracy, to give them an opportunity to study him at close range, and to make clear some of the reasons why he believes they should look with favor upon his political aspirations.

That program was carried out. There was no open boom for the governor. He avoided for the most part a discussion of partisan politics. But the understanding was general that he was here for inspection. And everywhere he seemed to make a favorable impression. Men who talked with him and heard him speak declared that as a result of the day's work, his stock as a presidential candidate would go up several points in Massachusetts.

The governor made three addresses, all of them dealing in a general way with the great problems of national government. His first address was at the Boston City club, where he was entertained at luncheon and talked to a gathering of more than 300 club members. Later he spoke to a large gathering of Harvard students in Sanders theatre, and in the evening addressed an audience of over 500 of the guests of the Boston Real Estate exchange at the Hotel Somerset.

In his address at the Boston City club, where he was introduced by Richard Olney, secretary of state under President Cleveland, Wilson read a lesson to the business men on their attitude toward the politicians, and made a plea for co-operation so that business may be freed from its present control.

"You say," he said, "that you don't want free business disturbed. First of all, prove that business is free. Business has been controlled by a few men. America was conceived in a spirit of emancipation from control. This country can't thrive upon a distrusted business system. It can only thrive on public confidence."

He upheld the progressive movement, declaring that its purpose was to find remedies for existing abuses and not to touch the fundamental of representative government.

"If you have representative government in Massachusetts," he said, "you may sleep quietly. If you haven't, you have got to find means of getting it. In many states the government is not representative. It was not representative in New Jersey eighteen months ago."

Following are some bright bits picked from Wilson's addresses:

I would not trust the fortunes of America to any class, be it high or low, but only to that compound judgment which is the average judgment of the average man of experience.

I am afraid of the momentum of passion, but I am absolutely serene in contemplation of the momentum of thought.

The thing that distubs me most about business in this country is that business men, as it were, stand off and dare their public men to do something, as if they were spectators and not participants.

Liberty cannot be attained or produced by preaching abstract doctrines. No one man can be free when the state says "you may" while a group of individuals says "you must." Men can't be submerged and then given a chance to think about it.

Men fighting for progressive measures are fighting to recover rather than attack the fundamentals on which our government started.

Protection—it would be a shame for me to step on the corpse Professor Taussig has made of it.

There is little doubt that Wilson's utterances were received with varied feelings, ranging from that of direct opposition to enthusiastic indorsement. What he had to say could not have appealed to a Republican body, certainly not to "standpatters," whom he assailed in scholarly, though not unmeasured, terms.

To those who believe as does the New Jersey governor, his address was a gem, while his political opponents could not feel themselves disappointed, for every thought was clearly expressed, convincingly and with force.

WEAVERS RETURN TO WORK

Strike In Fall River Mill Is of but Short Duration

Fall River, Mass., Jan. 29.—The strike of forty weavers at the Wampanoag mill, which started Thursday afternoon, was ended when they voted to return to work this morning.

This settlement was the result of a conference between the strikers and the mill officials, the latter agreeing to better conditions regarding filling for the looms and also to discharge one of the loomfixers who, it is alleged, had been annoying the help.

FRECKLES

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

The velvety touch of her warm arm was tingling in Freckles' finger tips. Dainty laces and fine white stuffs peeped through her torn dress. There were beautiful rings on her fingers. Every article about her was of the finest material and in excellent taste. There was the trembling Limberlost guard in his coarse clothing, with his cotton rags and his old pail of swamp water. Freckles was sufficiently accustomed to contrasts to notice them and sufficiently fine to be hurt by them always.

He lifted his eyes to hers with a shadowy pain in them and found them of serene, unconscious purity.

"We must go and find the carriage," said the angel, rising.

Freckles led the way, sharply watching every step. He went as near the log as he felt that he dared and with a little searching found the carriage.

"This is a shame!" said Freckles. "You'll never be coming here again."

"Oh, yes, I shall!" said the angel. "The Bird Woman says that these birds stay over a month in the nest and she would like to make a picture every few days for seven or eight weeks perhaps."

Freckles barely escaped crying out for joy.

"Then don't you ever be torturing yourself and your horse to be coming in here again," he said. "I'll show you a way to drive almost to the nest on the east trail, and then you can come around to my room and stay while the Bird Woman works. It's nearly always cool there, and there's comfortable seats and water."

"Oh! Did you have drinking water here?" she cried. "I was never so thirsty or so hungry in my life, but I thought I wouldn't mention it."

"And I had not the wit to be seeing!" wailed Freckles. "I can be getting you a good drink in no time."

He turned to the trail.

"Please wait a minute," called the angel. "What's your name? I want to think about you while you are gone."

Freckles smiled quizzically.

"Freckles?" she guessed, with a peal of laughter. "And mine is"—

"I'm knowing yours," interrupted Freckles.

"I don't believe you do. What is it?" asked the girl.

"You won't be getting angry?"

"Not until I've had the water at least."

It was Freckles' turn to laugh. He whipped off his big, floppy straw hat, stood uncovered before her and said in the sweetest of all the sweet tones of his voice, "There's nothing you could be but the Swamp Angel."

The girl laughed happily.

Once out of her sight Freckles ran every step of the way to the cabin. Mrs. Duncan gave him a small bucket of water, cool from the well. He carried it in the crook of his right arm and a basket filled with bread and butter, cold meat, apple pie and pickles in his left hand.

"Pickles are kind o' cooling," said Mrs. Duncan.

The angel was on her knees reaching for the bucket as he came up.

"Be drinking slow," he cautioned her.

"Mercy!" she exclaimed. "I think I had best be naming you 'the angel'—my guardian angel."

"Yis," said Freckles. "I look the character every day, but today most emphatic!"

"Angels don't go by looks," laughed the girl. "Your father told us you had been scrapping. But he told us why. I'd gladly wear all your cuts and bruises if I could do anything that would make my father look as peacocky as yours did. He strutted about proper. I never saw any one look prouder."

"Did he say he was proud of me?" marveled Freckles.

"He didn't need to," answered the angel. "He was radiating pride from every pore."

The angel spread the lunch on the carriage seat. The daintiest parts she could select she carefully put back into the basket. The rest she ate. As he watched her with famished eyes Freckles told her of his birds, flowers and books.

Suddenly the angel cried, "There comes the Bird Woman!"

She was staggering under a load of cameras and paraphernalia. Freckles took all he could carry and helped her into the carriage.

Soon they were out of the swamp. Then he showed them how to reach the chicken tree from the outside, indicated a cooler place for the horse and told them how the next time they came the angel could find his room while she waited.

"Were you forgetting Little Chicken's picture?" Freckles asked the Bird Woman.

"Why do you call the baby vulture 'Little Chicken?'" she asked.

"'Twas Duncan began it," said Freckles. "You see, through the fierce cold of winter the birds of the swamp were almost starving. It is mighty lonely here, and they were all the company I was having. I got to carrying scraps and grain down to them. Duncan was that generous he was giving me of his wheat and corn from his chickens' feed, and he called the birds me swamp chickens. Then when these big black fellows came, Mr. McLean said they were our nearest kind to some in the old world that they called 'Pharoah's Chickens,' and he called mine 'Freckles' Chickens.'"

"Good enough!" cried the Bird Woman. "You must shoot something for them occasionally, and I'll bring more food when I come. If you will help me keep them until I get my series, I'll give you a copy of each study I make, mounted in a book."

"I'll be doing me very best," promised the boy, and from the deeps he meant it.

"I wonder if that other egg is going to hatch?" mused the Bird Woman. "I am afraid not. It should have been out today. Isn't it a beauty? I never saw either an egg or the young before. They are rare this far north."

"So Mr. McLean said," answered Freckles.

The Bird Woman gave him her hand at parting, and Freckles joyfully realized that here was going to be another person for him to love. Freckles couldn't remember, after they had driven away, that they had even noticed his missing hand, and for the first time in his life he had forgotten it.

When the Bird Woman and the angel were well on the home road the angel told of the little corner of paradise into which she had strayed and of her new name.

"Did you know Mr. McLean had a son?" asked the angel. "Isn't the little accent he has and the way he twists a sentence too dear? And isn't it too old fashioned and funny to hear him call his father mister?"

"It sounds too good to be true," said the Bird Woman, answering the last question first. "I am so tired with these present day young men that patronizingly call their fathers 'dad,' 'governor,' 'old man' and 'old chap' that the boy's attitude of respect and deference struck me as being as fine as silk. There must be something rare about that young man."

But she did not find it necessary to tell the angel that for several years she had known the man who so proudly proclaimed himself Freckles' father to be a bachelor and a Scotchman. The Bird Woman had a fine way of attending strictly to her own business.

Freckles turned back to the trail, but stopped at every wild brier and looked at the pink satin of the petals. She was not of his world, and better than any other he knew it; but she might be his angel, and he was dreaming of naught but blind, silent worship. He finished the happiest day of his life, and that night he went back to the swamp as if drawn by a magnet. That Wessner would try for his revenge he knew. That he would be abetted by Black Jack was almost certain, but fear had fled the happy heart of Freckles. He had kept his trust. He had won the respect of the boss. Nobody could ever wipe from his heart the flood of holy adoration that had welled up with the coming of his angel.

At the edge of the clearing he came out into the bright moonlight, and there sat McLean on his mare. Freckles hurried up to him.

"Is there trouble?" he asked anxiously.

"That's what I wanted to ask you," said the boss. "I stopped at the cabin to see you a minute before I turned in, and they said you had come down here. You must not do it, Freckles."

Freckles stood combing his fingers through Nellie's mane, and the dainty creature was twisting her head around to his caresses. He pushed back his hat and looked up into McLean's face. "It's come to the 'sleep with one eye open,' sir. I'm not looking for anything to be happening for a week or two, but it's bound to come, and soon. If I'm to keep me trust as I've promised you and meself, I've to live here mostly until the gang comes. You must be knowing that, sir."

"I'm afraid it's true, Freckles," said McLean. "And I've decided to double the guard until we get here. It will only be a few weeks now, and I'm so anxious for you that you must not be left alone further. If anything should happen to you, Freckles, it would spoil one of the very dearest plans of my life."

Freckles heard with dismay the proposition to place a second guard.

"Oh! no, no, Mr. McLean," he cried. "Not for the world! I wouldn't be having a stranger around, scaring me birds and tramping up me study and disturbing all me ways for any money! I am all the guard you need! I will be faithful! I will turn over the lease with no tree missing—on me life, I will! Oh, don't be sending another man to set them saying I turned coward and asked for help. It will just kill the honor of me heart if you do it. The only thing I want is another gun."

McLean handed a shining big revolver down to Freckles, who slipped it beside the one already in his belt.

"Freckles," he said at last, "we never know the timber of a man's soul until something cuts into him deeply and brings the grain out strong. You've the making of a mighty fine piece of furniture, my boy, and you shall have your own way these few weeks yet. Then if you will go I am going to take you to the city and educate you, and you are to be my son, my lad—my own son!"

Freckles twisted his fingers in Nellie's mane to steady himself.

"But why should you be doing that, sir?" he faltered.

McLean slid his arm down about the boy's shoulders and gathered him close to him.

"Because I love you, Freckles," he said simply.

McLean tightened his clasp a second longer, then he rode away down the trail.

Freckles lifted his hat and faced the sky. The harvest moon looked down, sheeting the swamp in silver glory. The Limberlost sang her night song. The swale softly rustled in the wind. Winged things of night brushed his face, and still Freckles gazed upward, trying to fathom these things which had come to him. To one above the sky he must make acknowledgment for these miracles. His lips moved and he began softly:

"Thank you for each separate good thing that has come to me," he said, "and, above all, for the falling of the feather, for if it didn't really fall from an angel its falling brought an angel, and if it's in the great heart of you to exercise yourself any further about me, oh, do please to be taking good care of her!"

EX-PRESIDENT AND BROTHERS LYNCHED

Five Rebel Generals Disposed of by Mob In Ecuador

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 29.—An infuriated mob broke into the Quito penitentiary Sunday in spite of a double guard and lynched Generals Elroy Alfaro, Flavio Alfaro, Medario Alfaro, Ulpiano Paez and Manuel Serrano, all prominent revolutionists.

With the putting to death of Eloy Alfaro, ex-president of Ecuador; his brother, Flavio Alfaro, ex-minister of war and commander-in-chief of the revolutionary forces; Medardo Alfaro, who is believed to have been a brother of the two other Alfaros, and Paez and Manuel Serrano, the leading lights in Ecuador's last revolution have been snuffed out.

This revolution, although it had long been brewing, actually began a few days after the sudden death, on Dec. 22 last, of President Estrada.

FIRE LOSS OF $250,000

Opinion That Pittsfield's Big Blaze Was Due to a Firebug

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 29.—It is the opinion of State Officer Bligh and Fire Chief Shepard that the fire which destroyed $250,000 worth of property early Sunday morning and caused the biggest conflagration Berkshire county ever has known, was of incendiary origin.

Bligh was the second person to enter the Outlet clothing store of Moses Rosenthal, in which the fire started at 11:45 Saturday night.

Besides the three destroyed buildings, the Academy of Music, the Annex and the big storehouse in the rear, other buildings in the immediate vicinity were damaged.

BASKET BALL LEAGUE RESULTS

Yale defeated Dartmouth after a bitter fight of 30 minutes fast basket ball. The absence of Trask, the star center of Dartmouth, greatly crippled his team and altho "Pin" Johnson put up a great game for his team, the other members were not equal to their opponents. Nicoll, Dineen and Croucher excelled for Yale and Ahltein put up a fine game for the losers.

Score, Yale 23. Dartmouth 15.

The Michigan-Tech game result was a big surprise to all the fans. Tech was conceded the victory by a big score, for Michigan was minue its captain and one of its guards. Sam and "Yaller" Prout, however, more than made up for these two absent men, and after a few minutes' play in the second half, it was all over but the shouting for Michigan began to draw away and the score ended 19 to 9. All of the Michigan players figured in the scoring, while for Tech, Flieger and "Wet" Brown played the best game.

The Carlisle-Columbia game was the "star" attraction of the evening: Columbia coming out on the long end oft he game with a 22 to 14 score. The first half was fast and hard, the score ending 11-8 in favor of Columbia. The Carlisle players seem to tire rapidly in the last period and Morris and Booth of Columbia scored at will.

Navy forfeited to Penn in the last game of the evening and a mixed team was put up against Penn, which resulted in an 18-14 victory for the Quakers.

Remark Expressive.

A bicyclist was riding down hill when his hat blew off. A passing countryman picked it up and took it to him as he circled around, saving him the trouble of getting off. "I really must get a hat-guard to keep it on," remarked the cyclist, as he rode off without a word of thanks. The yokel's reply was short, but expressive. "Get a nail," he said.

PROPOSALS IN ORDER TONIGHT

All girls in attendance will have a chance to propose at the Leap Year party to be held this evening in Electa hall. The affair will start at eight o'clock and for a half hour proposals will be in order. To add to the occasion, a person, dressed in the garb of a minister wil be present, to tie the "knots" in the event if any being necssary. Many other novel features will be introduced and it is expected that the party will eclipse any of the Leap Year variety that have yet been held in local circles.

Wilson's orchestra wil lfurnish the music and dancing will be in order at the conclusion of the proposals, until midnight. Refreshments will be served and an entertainment will take place during the intermision. The affair has been arranged under the auspices of a committee of young ladies all of whom are well known in local circles and there is no doubt that it wi meet with great success.

BRIEFS

A week from today the new city officials assume their office. The change from one set of officers to another is made so easily however, that a stranger would not know anything unusual had taken place.

An interesting letter from Rev. Dr. Hardy, formerly of Bethany church, has been received and will be published in tomorrow's Ledger. His former parishioners and many Quincy friends will be interested and should not fail to get Tuesday's Ledger.

Several oft he new city officials, who take office next Monday were at City Hall this morning getting an insight into the manner of conducting the city business. Among them were Commissioner of Public Works Tupper, City Treasurer Tilden and Tax Collector Child. Several of the other officers have also been about during others have also been about during the past week sizing up things.

TODAY'S COURT.

It was a busy session that the district court held this morning with Braintree, Cohasset, Milton and Weymouth contributing cases in addition to those from Quincy.

James J. Egan, Daniel McFadden and John Lynch were fined $15 each and Thomas O'Donnell sentenced to two months in jail for drunkenness at Braintree.

Nazerino Paniotta, Pasquale Durando, and Frank LaPresti were fined $5 each for being present where gaming implements were found at Quincy.

Gerfane Tempesto, Daniel DiBona, Joseph LaPresti and Gerarda Capo-Bianchi were fined $25 each for gaming on the Lord's day at Quincy.

Joseph LaPresti was arraigned for violation of the liquor law at Quincy. Case continued until Feb. 3.

Antonio Ghiozi was arraigned for carrying revolver at Weymouth. Case continued until next Friday.

Frank J. Gallagher was fined $10 for operating an automobile without a license at Milton.

Hugh McCuske was fined $5 and James E. Tracy $3 for drunkenness at Quincy.

William H. Green was sentenced to two years in the house of corection for larceny at Cohasset.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

It certainly would be the height of effrontery on my part, if in commending the work accomplished in basketball by a local team, I failed to make recognition of the wonderful feat accomplished by the members of the Quincy High combination, who only Friday took the measure of the Worcester High so badly as to roll up 115 points and not allow a single one to be obtained by their opponents. This certainly is a record which is above all records, for this season at least, and it is doubtful if it has ever been excelled in the history of basketball.

Nor was the score the only feature, for George Finlay, whose work has been conspicuous throughout the season for efficiency, made an individual record of 32 baskets from the floor, which is likely to stand for some time. Even Trask secured 16 baskets from the floor, which is six better than the number recently made by Verner of Winthrop High, who was out as the record holder for the season.

It certainly added greatly to the work of Coach Staff and to the impulse that athletics have received at the local High school this year and we ardently hope that the local boys will be successful in bringing home the laurels of Eastern Massachusetts to this Granite City. The boys are now in a fine position to acquire this title of supremacy and every local fan will root hard from now until the close of the season, in the hope that Quincy High will emerge with a record of the unparalleled variety.

In Reading High, the members of the Quincy High record breaking basketball team encounter one of their toughest propositions of the season. The game should resolve into a warm one, but if the local players can display the same sort of work that they have been all along this season, we will have no cause to entertain fear lest another victory will not be forthcoming. From the performances thus far, it is safe to say that Quincy High is without a peer and now that it is in a fine position to acquire the championship honors of Eastern Massachusetts, it is highly important that the Reading boys should be made to taste the spoils of a decisive defeat. A large crowd will surely be present to witness the contest.

Quincy A. A., which is now firmly established in first place in the Greater Boston basketball league, will travel to Charlestown tomorrow to play the strong Fr. Mathew team, but it is highly improbable that Captain Duggan will allow the latter to puncture the hope of his team, the members of which are aspiring for first honors in the league. With Quincy High on the one hand striving for interscholastic honors, and Quincy A. A. on the other contending for the amateur honors of Greater Boston, the season should prove to be the most successful ever entertained by local fans.

A STORY OF THE SEA.

Ghostly Message That Saved Those on Board a Sinking Ship.

Robert Dale Owen is authority for the following story:

The mate of a bark which was sailing sou'westward across the banks of Newfoundland was in the cabin working out the vessel's course when he noticed a man sitting at the other end of the table busy writing on a slate. Thinking he was the captain, he paid no further attention, but presently, looking up from his calculation, he saw the man suddenly disappear.

Startled, he went across, picked up the slate and found written on it, "Steer to the nor'west."

He called the captain. The writing was certainly not that of any of the crew, and eventually it was decided to obey the strange order. The vessel was put in a nor'westerly course and a man stationed at the masthead to keep a sharp lookout.

In a few hours they sighted ice and among it, in an almost sinking condition, a big ship. They reached her just in time to save her people. Among them was a passenger whom the mate recognized as the stranger who had written the direction on the slate.

According to the other passengers, this man had been in a deep sleep or trance at the hour at which the incident had taken place.—Exchange.

Gas.

Mrs. Bacon—"The man was here today, dear, looking for the gas leak." Mr. Bacon—"And did he find it?" "Yes, but they haven't found the man yet."—Statesman.

EAR-PHONES A GREAT SUCCESS

As the result of the installation of ear-phones in the Wollaston Congregational church, as announced in the Ledger, Mrs. Charles H. Backus of 312 Arlington street was enabled to enjoy the sermon Sunday, of Rev. Edward Norton, pastor emeritus of the Bethany church, as well as to enjoy the music. Mrs. Backus has been an attendant at the Wollaston Congregational church for over twenty years but for the past fifteen years has been unable to hear either sermons or music owing to impaired hearing. Sunday she sat in the rear of the church and heard distinctly through the medium of the ear-phones.

The ear-phones were installed last week and were tried for the first time Sunday morning and now that they have been found to work so successfully, others will be installed. The equipment consists of a small box like transmitter, on the pulpit, which is connected with invisible wires to the ear-phone receivers in the pews. The receivers resemble small watches and dry batteries furnish the electricity to operate them. At present the equipment consists of six receivers but as many more as needed will be installed.

It is the first time such a device has been tried in Quincy and its success will probably result in the system being installed in other churches, where same of the attendants find difficulty in hearing the sermons.

SUNDAY IN OUR CHURCHES

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Rev. Fannie E.Austin,pastor of the Universalist church, occupied the pulpit and gave a very eloquent sermon. Y. P. C. U. day was observed. Miss Austin spoke of the growth of the Union and how it had increased in members and value and of the great interest manifested in it by both young and old. About very Universalist church has a Y. P. C. U. connected with it and it is producing opportunities for more consecrated spiritual service and many evidences are being revealed where its members are becoming trurer disciples of the Master.

Sunday evening the union attended the Y. P. C. U. meeting of the Universalist church in North Weymouth.

WOLLASTON M. E.

Sunday was a great day for the ending of the three weeks of special services. At the morning service Rev. Mr. Calahan preached the sermon.

At the Sunday school the "Forward Step" cards were used. Six signed these and gave themselves to Christ for the first time. Nearly 30 took the forward step along different lines. The Sunday school had an especially large number present. The contest between the Royal Daughters and the Wiggin class closed with the Wiggin class ahead.

Mr. Bromley, secretary of the Quincy Y. M. C. A., gave a very interesting talk to the Murray class. Mr. Rotchrock lead the Juinor League. Mr. Mitchell conducted the Epworth League. Chairs had to be brought in this week for the services. Sunday evening service was the last of the services. All three of the men spoke. At the close of the service after those who wished to leave had gone over 70 remained and joined in singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds" after which there was a general hand haking.

Next Sunday evening the pastor will begin a series of sermons to men.

A Doctor of Dancing.

In France during the reign of Louis XIV. dancing took a very prominent position among court festivities, and many members of the royal family took part in the complex ballets of the time. Louis himself, no mean performer, took lessons for twenty years from Beauchamps, who was called the father of all dancing masters and upon whom the king conferred the title doctor as a special mark of favor. Beauchamps had the honor of appearing as partner with the king in the minuet, a dance which was introduced in 1650 in France, and no court ball was opened in Europe for a century and a half without it. About the year 1661 a royal academy of dancing was formed under the auspices of Beauchamps. Lulli, Moliere and others, the object of which was to elevate the art and check all abuses. Of this academy Beauchamps was chief, with the title of director.

Attraction.

"What do you suppose attracted that dove eyed girl to such a man?"

"I don't know unless it was because he was pigeon toed."—Exchange.

All men are equal the day they are born and the day they are buried.

VICTORY FOR THAYER GIRLS

The Thayer Academy Girls obtained another decisive victory in basketball last Saturday at South Braintree, when they defeated the Melrose Girls' team by a score of 42 to 14. Miss Edith Kimball was the star of the contest, getting 13 baskets from the floor. In the game last year, with the same team, she made a record for girl players, securing 25 baskets from the floor.

Many of the baskets which she caged were made from most difficult angles. Caroline Kimball and Ruth Foss also played well for the winners, as did Florence Perry and Dorothy Summers, especially in passing the ball, while Anna Cornwell, Agnes Swan and Florence Gerry excelled for the losers.

The summary:

Thayer Academy		Melrose High
Caroline Kimball	rf	lb F. Gerry
Ruth Foss	lf	rb Lillian Ross
		rb Edith Kingston
Edith Kimball	c	c Anna Cornwell
Florence Perry	rb	lf Agnes Swain
Dorothy Summers	lb	rf Hester Wall

Score. Thayer Academy Girls 42. Melrose H. S. Girls 14. Goals from floor, Edith Kimball 13. Caroline Kimball 4, Ruth Foss 3, Edith Kingston 3, Anna Cornwell 2, Miss Gerry Miss Swain. Goals from fouls, Edith Kimball 2. Referee Alden. Umpire Scollard. Scorer Fuller. Timer Bates. Time 20m and 15m periods. Attendance 300.

SNAKES ARE USEFUL.

They Are a Check Upon the Lesser Reptiles of the Tropics.

What is the use of snakes? In their "going on their belly," the circumstance that so offended Bacon, lies one of their greatest uses, because that, together with their internal formation and external covering, enables them to penetrate where no larger carnivorous animal could venture, into dark and noisome morasses, bog jungles, swamps amid the tangled vegetation of the tropics, where swarms of the lesser reptiles, on which so many of them feed, would otherwise outbalance the harmony of nature.

Wondrously and exquisitely constructed for their habitat, they are able to exist where the higher animals could not, and, while they help to clear those inaccessible places of the lesser vermin, they themselves supply food for a number of the smaller mammalia, which, with many carnivorous birds, devour vast numbers of young snakes.

The hedgehog, weasel, ichneumon, rat, peccary, badger, goat, hog and an immense number of birds keep snakes within due limits, while the latter perform their part among the grain devouring and herbivorous lesser creatures.—Harper's Weekly.

GETS TWO YEARS FOR LARCENY

Chief of Police Bates of Cohasset and State Officer Scott returned from Philadelphia Saturday having in their custody William H. Green who was wanted for the larceny of personal effects to the value of $300 from Lydia N. Howe of Cohasset. It appeared that Green was employed as a care taker of the house during the winter minths and during the early part of January suddenly left town, and with him went a large amount of the household effects. Chief Bates was notified, and succeeded in tracing Green to Philadelphia where he had a wife. He was arrested by the police of that city and Chief Bates and Officer Pratt armed with the necessary papers, went on and brought Green back. He pleaded guilty in court this morning and said the reason he took the goods was because his wife was sick and he needed money. He was sentenced to 2 years in the house of correction.

DAY OF TUMULT ENDS IN RIOT AND BLOODSHED

Woman Killed and Policeman Stabbed in Lawrence Riot. Scores Hurt

State Sends 14 Companies of Infantry and Cavalry

A dispatch from Lawrence this noon says thatJoseph J. Ettor, the strike leader, who by his fiery speeches incited the riot of Monday has left the city. He is said to have taken the 8.14 train for Boston this morning. By some it is asserted that he left to avoid arrest while others claim that he has gone to confer with Gov. Foss Col. E. Leroy Sweetzer in charge of the state troops at Lawrence issued the following statement this morning.

"I will allow no mass meetings. I will allow no parades. I have passed orders to the troops that they will toy no longer with these men. We will do everything, of course, to prevent bloodshed, but we must stop rioting and violence, even if we have to use bullets. These men have drawn first blood, and I hope there will be no more spilled, but there will be order."

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 30.—With one woman shot dead, a policeman stabbed in the back, a full score of men seriously wounded, and an armed mob of frenzied strikers in hand to hand conflict with soldiery in the city's streets, Lawrence realized the full import of Strike Leader Ettor's words: "In forty-eight hours this town is not going to be very happy."

The riot that culminated the day of disorder and tumult started early last evening when, caught in a crowd of more than 1000 maddened strikers, the police attempted to fight their way out. Sullenly, slowly, the crowd fell back.

Then, suddenly, the crisp, short bark of a revolver broke in upon the cries and shouting. The flare of that signal unsheathed hundreds of guns. Knives flashed from hidden sheaths, bullets screamed through the falling darkness and in an instant riot took the place of law and armed warfare the place of peace.

Standing on the sidewalk, shouting encouragement to the rioters, was an unknown Lithuanian woman. Suddenly she threw up her arms, reeled and fell dying into the street. A bullet from a striker's revolver had pierced her fatally.

Policeman Stabbed

Patrolman Benoit, suddenly separated from his comrades and surrounded by hundreds of howling strikers, valiantly fought to regain his place with the other officers. A moment later he, too, pitched forward to the ground, where he lay until rescued by brother officers. He had been stabbed through the back by a striker.

After this day of riot and bloodshed Lawrence is in terror. The officials have been notified that the conflicts which have taken place are only the commencement of an industrial revolution.

All through last night the streets resounded with the march of soldiers. Twelve companies, including the Fifth regiment, and the troops of cavalry, with hundreds of police, arrived at the railroad station, and crunched through the snow to the armory and the posts they are to occupy.

Until after midnight great crowds waited in the falling snow, watching the passing of the militiamen. Intense excitement is felt throughout this section.

The uncertainty of what is to come hangs like a dread spectre over the city.

Not Under Martial Law

While Lawrence will not be under martial law, the troops will aid the police authorities in breaking up meetings of strikers. Colonel Sweet-

HOUSE ENTERED AT WOLLASTON

Burglars Make Haul at House of C. G. Swenning

FAMILY AWAY

When the family of Charles G. Swenning of 198 Taylor street, Wollaston returned home at 10 o'clock Monday night they were surprised to find that during their absence the house had been entered by burglars and ransacked from top to bottom. According to the story of the family the break must have been made sometime between the hours of 4 in the afternoon and 10 at night for it was during these hours that the family were absent.

The party or parties gained entrance through the bulkhead door thence into the cellar and upstairs where they had things to themselves. Whatever tracks they had made were covered up by the fall of snow.

According to the report made to the police the burglars secured three ladies' rings, five dollars in silver from a dime bank and a ladies' silver watch, all valued at several hundred dollars.

The break was reported to the police this morning and Inspector Goodhue was sent down to investigate. There is apparently no clew to the burglars.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR POLICE BALL

Sixth Annual Friday to Eclipse All Previous Efforts

COMMITTEES

The special guests at the sixth annual ball of the police relief association Friday evening will be Mayor Stone and members of the City Council, Judges Albert E. Avery and E. Granville Pratt, District Attorney Barker and Assistant District Attorney Katzman, Representatives Piper and Leslie and the police chiefs of adjoining cities and towns.

The committee of arrangements includes Alfred W. Goodhue, chairman, Jeremiah Hinchon, secretary, Ernest Bishop, treasurer, Chief Burrell, Henry F. Riley, Daniel H. Doran, George F. Phillips, John J. Duane, Claus A. Broberg, and Edward A. Johnson.

Chief Burrell is the chairman of the reception committee and with him are Lieut. Daniel R. McKay, Sergt. Mark E. Hanson, Claus A. Broberg and George F. Phillips.

Alfred W. Goodhue, president of the association, will be the floor marshal and Vice President John T. Larkin, floor director. His assistants will be Patrick A. Milford, Jeremiah Hinchon, Daniel H. Doran, and Henry F. Reiley. The aids will be Officers Duane, Bishop, Duffy, Crooker, Ford, Donovan, Olson, McManara, Farrell, Dinneen, Cahill, Johnson, Holloran, Wheelan, Curtin, Murray, Corbett, Thorne, Dhooge, Malone and Avery.

The present officers of the association are Alfred W. Goodhue, President; John T. Larkin, vice president; P. A. Milford, secretary;; Jeremiah Hinchon, treasurer; Chief Burrell, D. H. Doran, Claus A. Broberg, finance committee, Sergt. M E. Hanson, Edward Johnson, and Ernest H. Bishop, trustees

The committee will spare no pains to make the affair an unqualified success and with good weather Music hall should be taxed to accommodate those who will attend. The floral decoration will also be on a much larger scale than usual. There will be a concert from 8 to 9 o'clock and dancing from the latter hour until 2 A. M. Arrangements have been made for special cars to leave the hall for all points after the ball.

MRS. EUNICE C. DOBLE.

Mrs. Eunice C. Doble, wife of Herbert F. Doble, one of West Quincy's well-known business men, passed away at her home on Furnace Brook Parkway this morning, aged 61 years. Mrs. Doble has been in poor health since last spring. The winter months were trying ones for her and she did not seem to rally and during the past few weeks she has seemed to fail rapidly. Besides a husband she leaves a son and four daughters.

PROPOSALS AT DANCING PARTY

Unique Feature at Leap Year Party Was Proposal Dance

MOCK CEREMONY

A proposal number was the special feature of the Leap Year party, held Monday evening in Electa hall, under the auspices of a number of young ladies, all of whom are well known in local circles. All the ladies and gentlemen were masked and the lights in the hall were lowered.

Each lady then selected a gentleman and a line was formed around the hall. A young man, in the guise of a clergyman, stood in the centre of the hall and gave orders to the young ladies apropos of the Leap Year season. Each lady was told to kneel, take hold of the hand of the gentleman beside her, and asked to repeat certain words after the minister. The ladies all proposed to the gentlemen and the lights were then ordered on. All then unmasked and danced around the hall to the tune of "You'll do the same thing over."

The feature was a most unique one, yet proved a decided hit, and added greatly to the success of the affair.

Wilson's orchestra furnished music for the occasion and dancing was in order from eight o'clock until midnight. A short intermission took place shortly after ten o'clock, during which time refreshments were served. An entertainment also was provided at this time, and the Comitas quartet were forced to respond to many encores. Duncan McKinnock sang a few solos and was loudly applauded.

The affair, which was most successful in every way, was in charge of a committee composed of the Misses Vera Burke, Margaret O'Brien, Sadie Mellen, Sadie Wilson, Edith Barry, Bessie Buroke and Emiline O'Brien.

The hall itself had been very prettily decorated for the affair with variegated colors, and the different colored electric lights that were strewn about the hall added great charm to the affair. Twenty numbers constituted the program, which was made in the form of a heart.

Among those present were: Marguerite O'Brien, Edith Barron, Mary E. Barron, Emiline O'Brien, Kuto Pinel, Sadie Ridge, Mary A. Callahan, Mary McKay, Marcella Kelley, Lillian Donovan, Helen Callahan, Mary E. Scanlon, Margaret Scanlon, Lena Labadie, Mary Stevens, Catherine Yule, Margaret Vanell, Mildred Byron, Sadie Abrams, Anna Gilcoine, Flora Collins, Mary Scannell, Margaret Scannell, George Costello, Frank G. Smith, Frank J. O'Brien, Daniel McLaughlin, Prof. R. Arbuckle, James Tracy, William Dorley, Joseph Lamb, William Reardon, Henry Hamel, Samuel Goode, Thomas Mullen, Archibald Hamlet, Hugh Opie, Thomas O'Brien, C. E. Kennedy, Charles Pinel, John Costello, Matthew Hennessey, Robert Rourke, James Cunniff, Carl Litchfield, John King, D. J. Doyle.

MANY REMEMBRANCES FROM QUINCY FRIENDS

Interesting Letter from Dr. Edwin N. Hardy Former Pastor of Bethany Church

New Friendships Cannot Take the Place of the Old and Tested

Editors Daily Ledger:

Again circumstances suggest a requisition on the space of your interesting paper. The public press is certainly a great convenience and one which I greatly appreciate. During the holidays we received over one hundred and forty personal communications from Quincy. Twenty-five letters, cards and packages reached us on the morning mail of Christmas day. At once we registered a very stalwart resolution that we would acknowledge each with a personal note. But we found this like some other resolutions somewhat difficult to meet. The spirit was willing but the life here in the middle West is fairly busy and the requisite time has not been forthcoming. And while we make use of extra "days of grace" in keeping our resolution we wish to publicly express our deep sense of appreciation for these renewed evidences of goodwill and affection. There is little likelihood of a pastor forgetting his old parishioners. They are busy and have numerous other interests. For the minister the Church both by choice and necessity is the major interest of his life. While a clergyman could not ask for a heartier reception than that accorded us here in La Grange, new friendships however strong and attractive can never quite take the place of the old and tested. Consequently we value the more highly these friendships in Quincy which have not been disturbed by these months of change and separation.

With keen interest we read every item in the Patriot, glad to learn of everything which promises better things for the Granite City; sorry for every indication or loss or change which interferes with its best interests. Looking back over the years of our stay in the city we are finding those recollections which center in civic improvement or in the endeavor to arouse civic spirit among the most delightful. I believe as before that the city has a great future and I almost envy those who will have a hand in the molding of the new life

But we assume that Quincy friends will wish to know something concerning our impressions of the Middle West after living here eight months, Chicago is a most fascinating city, and has a very distinct character of its own. The same heroic spirit which prevailed forty years ago when the city was destroyed by fire expresses itself everywhere in the life of the city today. Ten years ago it ranked rather low among American cities respecting music and art. Today with the lavish expenditure of money and the concentration of time Chicago is rapidly developing into an art centre which can hardly be surpassed in the country. In music the city is determined to be first and unless all signs fail there is good reason to believe that it will be. Educationally the city is drawing to itself great institutions and the student class represents a small army of the choicest young people. It is claimed that Chicago is growing at the rate of seventy-five to one hundred thousand a year, consequently the city is in such a process of building and change that it cannot offer the same attractions which a city of slower growth presents. One thing constantly impresses the new comer and that is the tremendous moral and spiritual activity. Everyone recognizes the awful need of the better life.. But nowhere else can one find more or better reason for optimism than right here in Chicago. The claim is constantly made that this is the very heart of the nation and that here better than anywhere else can be discovered the nation's real life both good and bad. Anyway it is the most intensely interesting city to be found.—Whatever may be said of it—it can never be said to be stale or slow.

Politics are in a tremendous ferment here. The Lorimer situation is most critical and disquieting. He is a product of the political system which is in vogue, not only in Illinois, but in about every state in the Union. The situation is a bit more aggravated here, but possibly not actually any worse than in many other sections. Anyway many people have lost confidence in the political parties as now constituted. I have in my church not a few men who are in close touch with the political situation and I do not find one in ten at the present hour who believes that President Taft can be re-elected. La Follette is not taken nearly as seriously as some of the papers might seem to indicate. At present there is tremendous enthusiasm for Roosevelt and yet many of the strongest men whom I meet declare that his following is a popular one and is not receiving the endorsement of the great non-partisan leaders. Many quietly say that they would not vote for him if nominated. The Democrats are even more at sea. With the Republican Convention in Chicago in June there will be something doing now all the time in the city. I have mentioned this concerning political matters, not that I am able to judge the situation but circumstances have been such that I have been in close touch with men who do know and I have simply passed on the impressions of these men. I am inclined to the opinion that Roosevelt cannot be headed off if he is willing to run and we all out this way think he is willing. We are looking for an increased strength for Taft as the time passes. He is far from popular yet has the confidence if not enthusiastic support of many who see in him the safest candidate for the party.

My church work is going on surprisingly well. The annual meetings are passed and the church made

CORPS OBSERVE McKINLEY DAY

McKinley day was observed Monday afternoon in G. A. R. hall. Mrs. Kate A. Blaisdell, Patriotic Instructor of Corps 103 had charge of program. A large picture of William McKinley was placed on a table, with a vase containing 69 pinks, the martyred President's favorite flower.

The exercises opened with Lord's prayer and the singing of "Nearer my God to thee," followed by remarks by Comrade Francis P. Loud, of Post 88; a sketch of McKinley's life by Mrs. Mary E. Powers, President of Corps 103; singing by Mrs. Exelis Nason; reading by Mrs. Sarah Williams; remarks by Comrade Webbe.

A pleasing feature was the flag salute and piece by Marion Darrow, of Dorchester, a little miss not four years old.

The exercises closed with the singing of America and flag salute. Delegates were present from the Ladies' Aid and Sons of Veterans.

THE NOON FIRE.

The alarm from Box 147 at 1.07 this afternoon was for a slight fire in one of the sheds at the Granite Railway Co., plant at West Quincy. The fire was caused by one of the pulleys overheating and was quickly extinguished without loss. The alarm was unnecessary and was rung in by some of the workmen who became excited at seeing a little smoke.

GRAND BANQUET QUINCY COUNCIL

Everything is in readiness for the monster banquet to be held this evening in Music hall, under the auspices of the members of Quincy Council Knights of Columbus. The affair gives every evidence of meeting with the greatest success and it is claimed that it will be the best of its kind ever held by the local Knights.

The banquet is scheduled to start at seven o'clock and from that time until it is drawn to a close there will not be one dull or idle moment. Joyce's orchestra will furnish music for the occasion, while the list of talent includes Mrs. Helen Donovan Kerins, a soprano singer of high repute, Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, whose readings have always proved a source of especial pleasure, Erastur Osgood, whose fame as an entertainer is too well known to require any further announcement, and Joseph Ecker of Dorchester, one of the leading soloists in Boston.

In addition, the principal address of the evening will be among the treats in store. This will consist of a discourse on "Citizenship," by Hon. David I. Walsh, who made such a run for Lieutenant Governor at the recent election. The committee in charge is to introduce a number of novel features all of which have been withheld in secrecy. It is expected that fully 500 will be in attendance.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Rider Haggard has been knighted. Here's a tip to Ruddy Kipling to stop writing, too.

Mr. Roosevelt has been jumping fifty feet on skis at Sagamore Hill but he made no effort to get across the chasm between him and Mr. Taft.

Considering some recent events, the presidential candidates have a great deal to learn from the silent and retiring habit of the groundhog.

The Scriptures say the wind is tempered to the shorn lamb, but on Wall street the tempering takes place before the lamb is shorn.

J. P. Morgan paid $29,000 for a Bible, but almost any Sunday school would give him one for nothing if he will attend every Sunday for a year.

Wall street note: President Taft having sliced a golf ball out into the bushes on the 14 hole, a buoyant feeling pervaded the market, and the shorts were forced to cover.

Mr. Taft told the New Haven Chamber of Commerce that the people can distinguish between good cloth and fustian, but the trouble with good cloth is that you don't get a new suit so often.

George Bernard Shaw says all decent people are arrested in America. George would not be so bitter if he realized how many worthy persons are thus given a winter's board who could not get it any other way.

CARNEGIE'S WITNESS FEE.

The difficulties encountered by Andrew Carnegie in collecting the $28.70 due him as a witness before the steel trust investigators, have no doubt permitted the paragraphers of the United States to sell squibs worth much more than $28.70. The public has read these comments with a smile, feeling that Andy's anxiety about such a trifle is very amusing.

Some have probably stopped to figure what the time spent by Mr. Carnegie in collecting that bill might have been worth to him, on the basis of his daily earnings. Quite likely, if applied to the problems of his business, it might have gathered in $28,700 or more.

The incident is suggestive, however, of the extent to which a business man of great ability is always worried by a financial "loose end," no matter how small. A great many men fail because they never acquire the "follow-up" habit, the feeling that any line of investigation should be pursued to the limit.

Good detail work is the cement that holds a business together. Every dollar should be accounted for. Every investigation should be pushed to the end. Every account should be collected to the uttermost farthing or else charged off as a loss. If this feeling does not pervade a force of employees, there will be unnoticed driblets of losses, or a failure of patient enterprise, that will jeopardize a business success.

The small individual account may be of no importance. But once the idea pervades a body of men that it is of no importance, the corrosive contagion of inefficiency has found a lodging in the vitals of that business. Completeness and accuracy of detail work thus becomes an ideal which the employer must preach almost as a religion.

Andrew Carnegie was not of course worrying about $28.70. The fact that a financial loose end existed in his great stronghold of industry would bother him more than a loss of 10,000 times the sum involved.

STEEL CARS.

The death of J. T. Harahan and three other big men of the railroad world on the Illinois Central railroad occurred while the four were in a private car of wood construction. One may guess that a steel car would have saved some or all of them.

The American railroad man is supposed to be engaged in one of the arts of peace. But actually he and his passengers seem to need armor proof protection quite as much as our jackies that live the ordinarily peaceful life of the battle ship. Until our railroads get over the habit of trying to pass each other on the same track, our cars need to be thoroughly fortified and placed on a war basis.

Railroad accidents can be enormously reduced by the use of steel cars. Even the more massive construction of a well-built vestibule car does much to promote safety. At the railroad wreck at Colton, Cal., a few years ago, the baggage and smoking car was reduced to kindling wood, but the vestibule car behind escaped without breaking any windows. The train was running fifty miles an hour, and the force of the impact was such as to lift the seats from the vestibule car and pile them all up at the front of the coach. But the frame remained intact.

A prolific source of injury is the insecure method of attaching seats to the car floor. Screws are commonly used instead of bolts, and cast iron instead of steel.

If the seats remain in place in a wreck, and if there is no telescoping, the passengers rarely suffer more than bruises or at the worst broken limbs.

The objection has sometimes been raised to steel cars, that they do not lend themselves to decoration and look ugly. Railroad managers should learn, however, that the public is surfeited with ornate painting and draperies and wood work. A dead man gets little satisfaction out of the plush lining of the casket. And a live man is little pleased by elegance that soon becomes frowsy under the decay of dust and soft coal. Steel has a neat and cleanly quality that is very refresing amid the grime of travel.

OUR POLYGLOT MILL TOWNS.

The great strike that has called twelve militia companies to the textile city of Lawrence, Mass., shows what happens when our immigrant importations run up against the American standard of living.

Two generations ago in the textile centers, the sons and daughters of the old stock went into the mills. To be employed there indicated respectability, and was a passport into the simple society of the time. The native "help" were proud of the prim little blue bank books, which they were able to swell each quarter day.

Now not merely the native Americans, but the Irish, the French, the Germans have largely graduated from the spindles where their red shirted fathers first set them to work.

Today the list of delegations of Lawrence striikers includes this babel of tongues: Germans, Italians, Portuguese, Poles, Russians, Lithuanians, Syrians, Letts, Armenians, Greeks and Hebrews.

When the newcomer from oppressed East Europe comes over, he buys loaves of bread a yard long, gnaws away on them at every meal, puts a mark on his own individual loaf to identify it, and piles it up in the corner. He saves money, and is a contented employee for a period of years.

By and by he marries. His wife during this period, has very likely been a housemaid, in some comfortable American family. At least she is a habitue of the department store and she reads the fashion news. The idea of sleeping eight to a room no longer satisfies her. They graduate from the domains of the boarding house boss to the upper floor in a three family tenement.

Of course our corporations may be able to cut dividends here and there, to pay wages that will meet the advancing demands. But inevitably the cost of American living is going to rise faster than the wages that the American textile mill-town can afford.

Fortunately there is one great avenue of employment where newcomers can find work. Our tillable lands are not one quarter occupied. The Slavic immigrant who lives in a cabin but has paid down a little cash on a farm, is better off than his brother who has acquired a carpet and electric lights in his three-family flat.

ALL IT CAN HANDLE.

The postoffice department ought not to have anything to do with the telegraph lines or the telephone service until it learns how to handle the mails about as well as private interests offer to handle them. It is an open question if the P. O. should be allowed to instal parcels post. It ought to devote the next five years to promoting efficiency and economy of operation within itself.—Hyde Park Gazette.

a fine showing; financially, raising in money nearly fourteen thousand dollars, about five thousand of which has been devoted to missionary benevolence. For the coming year the church will face a budget of nearly seventeen thousand dollars. I have never met people who give in such princely amounts as the people of Chicago. I met a few of my men the other evening to solicit subscriptions for the World in Chicago, similar to the missionary exhibit in Boston last spring. They at once subscribed one-sixth of all that the Congregationalists of Chicago are asked to raise and yet there are over one hundred Congregational churches enrolled. It is refreshing to see men calmly write out a check for a large sum without hesitation when they are convinced the proposition is a good one. Our Sunday school raised over $750; the ladies in their two organizations over $2250 in money besides giving away hundreds of dollars in charities which were not included. They gave 500 newly made garments away. The people are extremely generous—they make their money easily and rapidly and care far less about hoarding it than in many sections of the country.

We are very happy here and like the country and the people more and more as we become better acquainted. We are always glad to receive a message from any of the old Quincy friends and hope the new year may bring great prosperity to the City of the Presidents.

WOLLASTON CAR SERVICE.

Editors of Ledger:

In answer to the article entitled "Kick Over Car Service" in Friday's Ledger, we should like to ask how very much time can be made up between Neponset and Quincy on a fifteen minutes' run? Also why is it that Wollaston cars from Quincy are run into the Neponset car barn instead of being run through to Dudley street? It would seem as though there must be some delay on the Quincy end of the run. Furthermore although the Boston Elevated send out a car to substitute for a late Quincy car the Quincy car never waits one minute for the car to return necessitating a wait of a half hour for passengers.

As to the delay on the Wollaston line being caused by the waits on the turnouts; if a car was late coming out from Neponset it should not have to wait on turnouts if the car from Quincy was on time, it would be at the turnouts before the late car so that the outward car would not be kept waiting.

The railway people claim that on the present schedule they can do no better for Wollaston. Why not try a different schedule? Certainly Wollaston has poor enough car service to Boston without having to change cars at Neponset. It would be more to the purpose if the railway people would put on an extra car that would run between the two cars now run and which might stop at Neponset, at any rate this might be done during the early morning hours and late afternoon. STUDENTS ARE SUSPECTED

May Have Set Fire Which Destroys a Quebec College

Farnham, Que., Jan. 30.—As a result of a fire which destroyed Holy Cross college, near here, five students were arrested on a charge of incendiarism. It is charged that there was some trouble in the college because some of the boys wanted to go home for a holiday. They were denied permission by the director and it is stated that they revenged themselves by firing the school.

The college is the property of the Brothers of the Congregation of the Holy Cross, who own a number of similar academies in different parts of Quebec. The damage is about $100,000.

Charged With Robbing Owls

Boston, Jan. 30.—Michael J. Coyle pleaded not guilty to charges of embezzling $2200 from the Massachusetts Nest of Owls and was held in $5000 bail in the Suffolk superior criminal court. Coyle was arrested at Michigan City, Ind., and was brought to Boston.

TAFT OPENS CAMPAIGN

Urges His Party, In Keynote Speech, to Stand by Its Guns

Cleveland, Jan. 30.—The big event of the president's first day in his tour of his own state was the McKinley day banquet given by the Tippecanoe club here last night.

Addressing 650 north Ohio Republicans, the president made a stirring appeal to the Republican party to stand by its guns and rest in the confidence that it has carried out the pledges it made to the people of the United States. He said that he faced the future with equanimity and in the belief that the judgment of the country would prove him right in his opinion.

To his hearers it appeared that a "keynote speech" upon which the coming campaign might be fought was being delivered.

From the attention he devoted to the tariff and the efforts made since 1908 to revise it he indicated his willingness to go into the campaign on this issue alone.

DALY TO BE SUMMONED

Charges of Hub's Deposed Fire Commissioner Will Be Sifted

Boston, Jan. 30.—Former Fire Commissioner Daly's removal by Mayor Fitzgerald, together with the charges which Daly made in his statement issued after his removal, will be taken up by the finance commission.

It is understood that Daly will be summoned before the finance commission and queried relative to his charges against the mayor and others.

The deposed commissioner stated that fire department contracts were held up because they did not go to the "proper" authorities, and that either through the mayor or direct the political machine in control at present tried to interfere with the conduct of the fire department.

Appointments, transfers, promotions, increases in salary and the like were all demanded of him, he said. His refusal to comply with these demands, Daly stated, was the real reason of his dismissal.

"DON'T BITE POLICE," SAYS SUFFRAGIST

Hands Out Some Other Good Advice to Her Sisters

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Mrs. Catherine W. McCulloch, Evanston's woman justice of the peace and a leader in the suffrage movement, has given out a decalogue for Chicago suffragists.

"Don't bite policemen" is one of her admonitions. She admonishes her sisters not to make suffrage speeches at street corners without first having obtained a permit, and that they should not throw stones at Governor Deneen for failing to get a suffrage bill through the legislature when he "has a hard enough time trying to put through any of his own."

She concludes by saying: "Thou shalt not refuse to pay thy taxes if thou art willing to face the music and see the property sold. Our revolutionary fathers did not tip any of their own property into Boston harbor."

RICHESON IS DROPPED

He Is No Longer a Minister of Boston Baptist Conference

Boston, Jan. 30.—Amid a profound silence at the Baptist ministers' meeting in Chipman hall the name of C. V. T. Richeson was dropped from the list of membership. The silence was broken by a prayer by Rev. O. W. Foye, who said:

"O Lord, have mercy upon those who have walked before us in sheep's clothing, and turn the hearts of the disobedient to the wisdom of the just."

Richeson became a minister of this conference as soon as he left the Newton Theological school, when he had charge of the Baptist church at Hyannis. This is the first minister of the Baptist church to be dropped from the list of membership in fifty years for a cause affecting his character.

LAMARCO'S CASE UP AGAIN

Slayer Has Occupied Death House Since November, 1909

Albany, Jan. 30.—Another illustration of the law's delay came to light when the case of Joseph Lamarco, convicted of murder, was argued before the court of appeals.

Lamarco, who was sentenced to death for killing a fellow-countryman at Black Rock, has been in the death house at Auburn prison since Nov. 25, 1909. He was originally sentenced to die Jan. 12, 1910.

Young Giantess Missing

Washington, Jan. 30.—Nellie H. Williams, 6 feet 6 inches tall, and weighing 200 pounds, a brunette of 20 years, is missing from her home in this city. A general alarm has been sent out by the police.

Death of Author Bisson

Q.—Can you show from the Scriptures that there is any such thing as a general resurrection of the dead? (S. J. R.)

Answer.—The Bible is the only book in all the earth that does teach a general resurrection of the dead. In the first place, it sets forth that the dead are dead and not alive; and that because they are dead a resurrection is necessary to make them alive. If alive already, there could be no resurrection. The scriptures teach that the entire race was condemned to death because of Adam's transgression. (I Corinthians xv, 21, 22; Romans v, 12, 18, 19.) In the following Scriptures, it is declared in unmistakable terms that Jesus Christ, as the Saviour of the wirld, died for "all," "every man." (I Timothy ii, 5, 6; Hebrews ii, 2, 9; I John ii, 2.) This last citation shows, beyond all controversy, that Christ is the "propitiation"—satisfaction—not only for "our sins," the Church's sins, but also for the sins of the whole world. Because of the "ransom for all," the hour is coming in the which all who are in their graves shall come forth at the voice of the Son of man (John v, 28, 29), the righteous to an immediate raising up to life, and the evil to a gradual raising up (ressurrection) by judgment. The Apostle elsewhere affirms a general resurrection. Sse Acts xxiv, 15.

House Slashes Appropriation For Forest Fire Defense

Washington, Jan. 30.—The army appropriation bill, carrying $88,534,000, and the agricultural appropriation bill, with a total of $15,836,976, were reported to the house. The pension appropriation bill also was reported. It carries about $150,000,000.

$3,500,000 from the appropriation of $3,500,000 from the appropriations of last year. The agricultural bill is $1,063,000 below last year's appropriation.

The chief cut is in the forest fire emergency fund. The department asked for $1,000,000, but the committee allowed only $20,000.

LABOUCHERE'S MILLIONS

Go Into Hands of Italian Who Married Commoner's Only Daughter

Paris, Jan. 30.—Marcus Carlo Di Rudini of Rome, Naples and Paris, where he is among the best known of boulevardiers, comes into $10,000,000 today by the death of his father-in-law, Henry Labouchere.

"Labby" was one of England's greatest Radicals and, next to Gladstone, her most conspicuous commoner. He was furious that his only daughter should wed an Italian nobleman, but he bowed his head before the course of true love and left his daughter his vast wealth, which goes to her husband according to Italian usage and law.

The Real Puzzle.

The puzzle is not whether Bacon or Shakespeare wrote the plays, but that one person could get them all accepted.

TRIED TO ENTER A DRUG STORE

Roxbury Boys Attempt to Enter Drug Store at Houghs Neck

ARE ARRESTED

Shortly after 10 o'clock Monday night Eugene Tessier, who runs a drug store at Houghs Neck, and who occupies a tenement over the store, heard some one at the door of his store and upon going down to investigate saw some men in the vestibule. Turning on the electric lights he saw three men make a hasty departure.

He telephoned word of the break to police headquarters and Officer Holloran, who was on duty at the desk, sent Officer Canavan to investigate. Canavan saw three young men running toward Quincy and held them up. On being questioned they could not give a satisfactory account of themselves and he placed them under arrest and telephoned for the wagon.

The three men gave their names as Frank W. Wise aged 18 years of 98 Cabot street, Roxbury, Charles Fleming aged 18 years of 6 Burke street, Roxbury and William F. Elliot aged 19 years of 18 Cabot street, Roxbury. They were locked up charged with attempting to break and enter the drug store of Eugene Tessier at 1195 Sea street, Houghs Neck.

An investigation of the store after the arrest of the three young men showed that the outer door had been burst open and the glass of the inner door smashed. It was the smashing of the glass in the inner door that aroused Mr. Tessier.

The three youths were arraigned before Judge Avery this morning for attempting to break and enter the drug store of Eugene Tessier and after a hearing were held in $1,000 each for the grand jury.

The drug store of Tessier is located on the corner of Sea street and Bay View avenue, the main thoroughfares at Houghs Neck, and it was a bold idea that must have prompted the young men to break in at that hour, when there was almost sure to be some one on the street. Further than that it is little of worth to them that could be found in a drug store.

WILL GREET THE CARDINAL

Among the hundreds of invited guests who will go down the harbor Wednesday morning in the steamer Monitor to meet Cardinal O'Connell upon his return from the Holy City, will be Cornelius M. Duggan, of the Board of Health, who will extend to His Eminence the greetings of thirty-four thousand members of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. Mr. Duggan is the present High Chief Ranger of the order and esteems it a great honor to have been invited to extend the greetings of his order to the newly created Prince of the church.

Africa's Name.

The name Africa was given by the Roman conquerors after the third Punic war, B. C. 146, to the province which they formed to cover the territory of Carthage. It was most probably adopted from the word "Afrygah," the Carthaginian term for a colony. This original Africa was limited in extent. Its borders reached, according to Pliny, from the river Tusca on the west, which divided it from Numidia, to the bottom of the Syrtis Minor on the southeast, though Ptolemy carries it as far east as the bottom of the Great Syrtis, making it include Numidia and Tripolitania. In later days the whole African continent took its name from this part, which in its narrower limits corresponded with the modern regency of Tunis and was called by the Greeks Lybia. Africus, the stormy southwest wind, was so called in Italy because it blew from Africa.

SURPRISE AND PRESENTATION

A number of her friends took possession of the home of Miss Annie Zirlstein, 544 Washington street, at 7.30 o'clock Monday evening and tendered her a surprise party of the real kind. Miss Zirlstein was almost overawed by the unexpected advent of a circle of friends and was deeply affected when Miss Alice Aronsen, in behalf of those present stepped forth, and in a few well chosen words presented her with a handsome sterling silver pendant.

The remainder of the evening was then given over to merry making and the party indulged in games of a wide variety. Refreshments were served and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner. Those who contributed to the entertainment included the Misses Lichman, Aronsen, Julia Smith, and Annie Zirlstein. The committee in charge was composed of Myer Sockett, William Wolf and Miss Alice Aronsen.

Among those present were: Julia Smith, Israel Wolf, Alice Aronsen, Rebecca Coughlan, Rebecca Chane, Sarah Chane, Etta Lichman, Fannie Lichman, Abraham Silver, William Wolf, Edward Berman, Max Cutler, Myer Sockett and Sidney Lichman.

VERDICT FOR THE PLAINTIFF

A case of long standing, one too that has been watched with especial interest by granite men in local circles, was brought to a close Monday when the Civil Jury at Dedham returned a verdict of $257.50 for the Giordani Granite Company of this city, which had brought suit against the Price-Welden Company of Upper Darby, Pennsylvania, for the failure of the latter to abide by the contract of a promissory note.

It seems that the Pennsylvania concern had ordered a tomb to be built by the local company. The former company is classed as middlemen and desired the tomb for a customer. The work was executed, but on receiving the tomb, the Pennsylvania company refused to pay for it on the grounds that there was a crack, together with some spots in the granite. A compromise was made and the local company was willing to deduct from the original price asked for the work. But the Pennsylvania concern persisted in claiming that the granite was defective in certain parts.

Suit was entered and the plaintiff produced in court a piece of Quincy Medium, which contained what is known as a blind stock seam. This was what the defendant claimed was a crack. Several witnesses were heard and each attested to the existence of the blind seam in nearly all granite work.

The case was all the more interesting and of importance to local granite men because of the frequency with which blind seams are regarded as cracks.

Attorney John D. Mackay of this city was the counsel for the Giordani Company, while the lawyer for the defendant was C. T. Cottrell.

Inference There Somewhere.

"I don't think my husband loves me any more." "Why not?" "The other day I said to him: 'John, if I should die would you get married again?' and he said he wouldn't." "Isn't that all right?" "Yes, but I wisn you could have heard the positive way he said it."

—Too many "Spokanes" scattered throughoutt he country bid fair to lead to interstate complications. The Spokane, Washington chamber of commerce has learned that North Carolina, Ohio and Missouri each boasts a town named Spokane Wherefore, R. J. Maclean, secretary of the local chamber of commerce declared with emphasis that he would communicate with Senator Poindexter in an effort to have a few of the towns with names similar to this select new ones. In a conversation with a visitor recently Mr. Maclean was informed that the city by the falls had no corner on the name Spokane. The secretary immediately dictated a letter to the postoffice department, which elicited the information that Missouri, North Carolina and Ohio have towns that have taken unto themselves the classic Indian appellation. "There should be but one Spokane," declares Secretary Maclean. "There is but one San Francisco in this country. Complications have arisen from the duplication of Portland, Vancouver and other cities."

☞PRATT'S BREAD is more expensive, but it is worth more.

Statesmen and Politicians.

A statesman is merely a politician with whom we agree. Neither is necessarily a leader of progress. Both are flies on the wheel, and we honor them in direct proportion to their riding ability.—Life.

—The men of Chicago have shown favor for woman's suffrage by a cordial reception of a clever Scotch satire on hypocrisy at the Princess theatre, "Bunty Pulls the Strings." "Bunty," daughter of stern Tammas Riggar, kirk elder in the Scotch village, manages everybody, saves her hypocritical father from the clutches of an old maid, marries herself to the man of her choice and her father to the woman of his, takes charge of kirk affairs when things go wrong, and calmy says: "There are few things I couldna do if the men wad let me—and I tried."

FLAGS OF ADMIRALS.

Rank Told by the Stars and Seniority by the Colors.

In old sea stories one occasionally comes upon the term admiral of the blue, red or white. In bygone days the color of an admiral's flag proclaimed his rank. Now it denotes his seniority. Hence it comes about that an admiral must carry three personal flags in his locker.

There are three grades of admiral—admiral, vice admiral and rear admiral. At one time commodore made a kind of half admiral, but that grade has now been abolished.

The rank of an admiral is made plain to all seafaring persons by the number of stars on the flag hoisted at his foremast head. Thus four stars show an admiral, three a vice admiral and two a rear admiral. This is simple enough, but the harassing question arose, What if two admirals, two vice admirals or two rear admirals should happen to sail into port, each with a squadron? What, indeed, if three admirals, and so forth, should appear on the same scene? How could any one distinguish between them? Some innocent governor or mayor returning a visit of courtesy might call upon the junior first, and that would be a bad blunder.

To obviate such a mischance it is now the custom for admirals to mark their seniority by the color of their flags. Thus if three rear admirals happen into a port the senior flies a blue flag with two stars, the second a red flag with two stars and the junior a white flag with the same constellation. If the senior should leave port first the second promptly hoists his blue flag and the junior the red. Then if the second admiral steamed away the junior would hoist the blue flag for all the personal satisfaction there was in it.

But here a serious question comes up. Suppose in the meantime a fourth rear admiral appeared on the scene. Then, as a naval authority explains, the situation for the respective flag lieutenants would become complicated. There would be two rear admirals of the white, one senior to the other, yet, so far as naval etiquette goes, indistinguishable in a flag sense even to an able seaman.

Of course this is not very likely to happen except where the fleets of several nations gather. Then there would be a tremendous scramble to hunt up dates of promotion, because the flag lieutenant who carried his admiral on to call upon a junior would thereafter be an unhappy flag lieutenant.—Youth's Companion.

Blake's Invisible Model.

William Blake, the artist and poet, moved continually in a company of angels and patriarchs. J. F. Nisbet in his "Insanity of Genius" recalls the story of a friend of Cunningham who once called on Blake and found him sitting, pencil in hand, and drawing a portrait with all the seeming anxiety of a man who is conscious of having a fastidious sitter. He looked and drew, and drew and looked, yet no living soul was visible. "Disturb me not," said Blake in a whisper. "I have some one sitting to me." "Sitting to you!" exclaimed the astonished visitor. "Where is he? I see no one." "But I see him," answered Blake haughtily. "There he is. His name is Lot. You may read of him in the Scriptures. He is sitting for his portrait."

Mark Twain and the Ministry.

Orion Clemens thought of the ministry, an ambition which his brother Sam shared with him for a time. Every mischievous boy has it, sooner or later—though not all for the same reasons.

"It was the most earnest ambition I ever had," Mark Twain once remarked thoughtfully. "Not that I ever really wanted to be a preacher, but because it never occurred to me that a preacher could be damned. It looked like a safe job."—Albert Bigelow Paine in Harper's Magazine.

Old Wall Street.

Wall street in the days when Washington was the first president of the United States, when Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr were rivals at the bar, was perhaps the most popular and populous thoroughfare in New York. It was so named because it followed the line of the city's first defensive stockade or "wall," and throughout its length were enacted many scenes that are part of the nation's larger history. —Christian Herald.

Didn't Get Even the Brick.

"Did that man hand you a gold brick?"

"I should say not," answered the amateur financier. "He sold me an interest in the gold brick on credit and took a mortgage on that, together with everything else I owned. Then he called the loan and foreclosed the mortgage and took possession of the gold brick, along with the rest."—Washington Star.

The Power of Beauty.

"Brown's wife is a beautiful woman, isn't she?"

"She surely is."

"If I had a wife as beautiful as that she could buy me all the neckties she wanted to, and I'd wear 'em, by gum!" —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Which?

Bacon—Did you ever notice how long a woman is in coming to a point? Egbert—Well, do you mean when she is telling a story or sharpening a lead pencil?—Yonkers Statesman.

Let parents bequeath to their children not riches, but the spirit of reverence.—Plato's Laws.

An act of yours is not simply the thing you do, but it is also the way you do it.—Wendell Phillips.

DEER AND BULLETS.

Serious and Ugly Wounds From Which the Animals Recover.

"If all deer that are wounded in the course of the hunting season and succeed in getting out of the way of the hunter should wander away and die the woods would contain many more dead deer than are taken away," said an old hunter. "But all of them do not wander off and die a loss to the hunter.

"Deer have great recuperative powers. It is no sign that a deer is doomed to go off and die because it is badly wounded. I have killed many a deer that gave evidence of having been so severely wounded that its having survived to take the range again seemed almost miraculous.

"I once shot and killed a buck that had a rifle bullet encysted near the skin of the left shoulder, but there was no wound on the outside of the skin to show that it had entered the deer there. Investigation showed a wound, long healed, near the top of the right shoulder, unmistakably made by that rifle bullet, which must have passed clear through the deer to the left shoulder, where its speed was spent and it lodged just under the skin.

"Besides that severe wound that deer had been pretty well filled some time or other by buckshot, for I took out nine from one side of him, where they had broken several of his ribs. These two ugly wounds had been inflicted at different times, and in spite of them he was in splendid condition and I had to give him two shots from a Winchester before I stopped him."—New York Sun.

BRIEFS

A little scrubbing and varnish has made a decided improvement in the interior of some of the offices at City Hall.

The local members of the Central Labor Union will hold a grand smoke talk in Hibernian Hall on the evening of February 8th.

A meeting of the parishioners of St. Mary's church was held Sunday at which committees were appointed to arrange for the annual parish reunion which is to be held Feb. 19.

Allen Williams of Montclair avenue, Montclair who suffered a compound fracture of the hip by falling from his bicycle in West Quincy will be confined to the Quincy City Hospital for five or six weeks.

It is said that there will be nearly a quorum of the City Council present at the communication of Rural lodge of Masons Thursday evening at which meeting one of the Councilmen will receive his degrees.

Mrs. George Snow of Henry street entertained a party of friends at whist Saturday evening. Souvenirs were won by Mrs. E. Swan, Mrs. John Burke, G. Snow and A. Polsom. A dainty lunch was served.

The local ice men have practically completed housing their ice and it is the best ice that has been harvested for several years. This was due to the fact that the ice made quick and is therefore free from the usual leaves, sticks, etc.

At the men's turkey supper at Memorial church Wednesday evening, Miss Maud Read will give a reading entitled, "Our New Organ," by Will Carleton. It is expected that a professional organist will give a brief program on the new organ.

The mid-winter chowder party of the Washington M. French Hose association will be held at Grand Army hall Saturday evening, Feb. 24. Owing to the illness last winter of Fred F. French, the president, the usual mid-winter and summer reunions were omitted.

Rev. William J. Duffy of St. Mary's Church attended the funeral services of the late Rev. John J. Harkins, which took place last Saturday at Lowell. Fr. Duffy was an intimate friend of the deceased with whom he had pursued his ecclesiastic studies at Brighton Seminary.

Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus of Goffe street gave an art talk in Newark, N. J., before a large and aristocratic audience in the picture gallery of the Kinney mansion last week. Mrs. Bumpus had the pleasure of meeting at luncheon the same day, Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, author of Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm.

Brandeis Tells of Condition of Steel Trust Employes

BECOME OLD MEN AT FORTY

Modern Stockholder, as Contrasted With Slave Owner, Has No Personal Interest In Worker—Claim That Conditions Are Destructive of American Citizenship—Large Corporations Regardless of Human Life

Washington, Jan. 30.—Louis D. Brandeis told the Stanley steel committee some startling facts relating to the steel corporation and its treatment of the men who created its products.

"Their condition has been a condition of prince and pauperizing; of the making of degenerates and capitalists," said Brandeis, after giving a summary of the hours and wages paid to the workers. At this point in the proceedings Chairman Stanley in a voice of delicate irony asked this question:

"I have heard," he begun, "that the steel worker is through at about 40 years of age. Is this so? My people in Kentucky were slaveholders, but a slave was at his prime at 40. Can you enlighten me?"

"I am informed," said Brandeis, "that a large number of the men become old at 40, and I am surprised that they do not become old before."

The Boston lawyer then described what he believed to be the underlying cause of this "morally wrong" situation. It was due, he stated, to the fact that the modern stockholder, as contrasted with the slave owner, has no personal interest in the worker, and that there is no other interest than for dividends or for increased dividends. The great corporations, he explained, are managed by resident managers who represent absentee landlords. "This system," said Brandeis, "is like the Irish rack rent system."

Reading from the report of Commissioner Neill of the bureau of labor, Brandeis presented to the committee a careful analysis of the workingmen's lot when employed by these large corporations. The introduction of the Taylor system, it was pointed out, has made things worse. "These men," said Brandeis, "are American citizens and I am calling your attention to the conditions which I claim are destructive of American citizenship."

Mr. Brandeis and D. A. Reed, counsel for the United States Steel corporation, clashed over a line of inquiry into the corporation's labor policy. Reed contended the committee had no authority to investigate the labor question. Chairman Stanley overruled him.

Mr. Brandeis criticized the length of hours of workmen. "The percentage of men who undergo hardships is unusually large," said Brandeis. "Judge Gary's comment on criticisms of the corporation's labor policy shows me the utter inability of large corporations to regard human life."

Brandeis declared "that the steel industry in England has eliminated entirely all these objectionable features.'

"You don't mean England has been able to do anything for labor that we can't do in this country?" demanded Stanley. "You must be mistaken."

"Unfortunately in this case I am not mistaken," returned Brandeis, saying that the working week of an English steel worker was 55.2 hours, and that 42 percent of the workers in this country averaged 72 hours.

"PROOFS" ARE WITHHELD

Watterson Declares That Wilson Lied About the Ryan Episode

Washington, Jan. 30.—Henry Watterson, in a statement issued last night and intended to bring the "distasteful episode" to an end, so far as he is concerned, declared that the issue between him and Governor Wilson is solely which one "lied." Watterson said he "had engaged conclusively to show" that Wilson lied, and charged that the governor "dared not face the facts."

Watterson declined to make public any proofs in his possession. He denied that Thomas F. Ryan was ever approached for campaign contributions for Wilson, but said that the matter was talked over with Wilson and the latter "expressed the fear" that if the knowledge of a contribution from Ryan got abroad it might do more harm than good.

Neck Broken by Cotton Bale

Salmon Falls, N. H., Jan. 30.—Joseph Theorét, 50, a yard hand employed by the Salmon Falls Manufacturing company, was killed by a bale of cotton falling upon him from a second story and breaking his neck.

Nine Hundred Fishermen Adrift

Helsingfors, Finland., Jan. 30.—Nine hundred fishermen are drifting on a gigantic ice floe between Narva and the Pitkapaasi islands. The danger to the men is not imminent unless a storm breaks from the north.

DAY OF TUMULT

ser has issued an order warning all persons not to mingle with the striking bands. This order is interpreted that the soliders today will shoot on the slightest provocation. He has declared that there will be no parades and no mass meetings. Discipline, rigid as that in war, is being enforced.

Fifteen arrests were made yesterday. Wherever rioting occurred the police darted in and out of the crowd and under cover of the confusion pulled forth as many of the ringleaders as possible.

Disturbances Begin Early

The disturbances of the day began in the early morning, when several thousand strikers attempted to prevent all workers from returning to the mills. Gathering at their picket lines long before daybreak, they waited the coming of the operatives who still persist in attending to their daily tasks. Before 6 o'clock thousands of strikers were abroad, roaming the streets.

Falling back from the picket lines as soon as the advance guard of workers put in an appearance, the whole body fell upon them and wrested away their dinner pails and, in many instances, beat and choked them.

The electric cars were the chief point of attack and the fighting around these became indiscriminate. Even those who were not mill workers were forced to yield their valuables and take their share of the man-handling offered by the excited strikers.

Street traffic was blocked. The strikers disconnected the trolleys from the cars and while they were in darkness snowballs were hurled through the windows, demolishing the glass, which flew in all directions, cutting and injuring the passengers who were panic stricken within.

Strikers' Moves Kept Secret

There was an ominous silence in the great tenement district last night after the turbulence of the day. Secret meetings were held, and at these meetings the program of today was planned.

In the crash of yesterday's happenings, the leaders are believed to be cloaking some move which has, as yet, been kept secret from the public. The police believe something is afoot, and plain clothes men and detectives are everywhere. Double guards of sentries are marching monotonously about the mill section, and every passerby is halted.

The great searchlights, moved by unseen hands, flashed their rays along the river front last night as if awaiting the coming of a hostile force. There are three of these lights, and through the blur of the snowstorm they flashed a lighted path wherever an approach could be made to the mill section.

Sweetser's Statement

In a statement last night Colonel Sweetser said: "There will be no more fooling. I shall allow no more parading, no more assembling on the street corners or on the common, and those who are near any such gathering will be considered rioters and treated as such.

"Lawrence will not be put under martial law. We have no martial law in this state. I am here to assist the mayor and civil authorities, and I do what they want me to. How I do it is my affair.

"Any lookers-on or people on the streets not attending to their business will do so at their own risk.

"No passes will be issued. Anyone is privileged to go anywhere in the city until trouble breaks out.

"I have no plans for tomorrow. Whatever action I take depends on the force I have at my command."

Colonel Sweetser's statement resulted from a meeting of the city council, when Mayor Scanlon was authorized to call upon the police of various cities and towns of the state for assistance, and the governor for more troops.

Governor Offers His Services

Governor Foss offered his services last night to adjust the difference between the mill workers and mill owners of Lawrence. It is said that the governor has received assurances from the mill owners that they will accept this proposition. The governor's letter is addressed to the mill operatives and mill owners, and is as follows:

"The situation at Lawrence has become so serious that every possible effort should be made by all parties concerned to adjust matters; and I therefore request all workers to go back and resume their places in the mills for a period of thirty days, pending the efforts which I shall make to get all the differences adjusted, and, in view of the fact that no notice was given to the mill operatives of a proposed reduction in wages when the change in hours went into effect on Jan. 1, I request all mill owners to give fifty-six hours' pay for fifty-four hours' work during that period without discrimination.

"I believe the differences are such as to be easily adjusted if carefully discussed during the next thirty days, and I promise you my best efforts to bring all questions in dispute to a settlement satisfactory to all parties."

DUKE OF FIFE

DUKE OF FIFE DEAD

Was Husband of Oldest Daughter of the Late King Edward

Assuan, Upper Egypt, Jan. 29.—The Duke of Fife died here last evening of pleurisy and congestion.

The Duke of Fife was a son-in-law of the late King Edward, whose daughter, the princess royal, he married in 1889. He succeeded his father as sixth Earl of Fife in 1879, and was created duke on his marriage.

He was born on Nov. 10, 1849, and was educated at Eton. He afterwards took a great interest in business and was a partner in a London banking firm as well as vice president of the British South Africa company. He was a colonel of volunteers and deputy lieutenant of the Scottish counties of Aberdeen and Banff. He was a Liberal member of parliament from 1874

PAYS DEATH PENALTY IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Wolter Leaves a Message Declaring His Innocence

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Albert W. Wolter was electrocuted here for the murder and burning of Ruth Wheeler in New York, nearly two years ago.

Only a few hours before his execution Wolter signed a statement professing his innocence. This he left with Warden Kennedy, to be given to the public after his execution.

Only one contact was necessary to kill Wolter. This was of 1800 volts, and was applied alternately for one minute and a quarter.

FUND REACHES $1585

Trustees Plan Better Home For Family of Murderer Phelps

Boston, Jan. 30.—The fund for the relief of Mrs. Silas N. Phelps has reached a total of $1,585.70. Checks, money orders and gifts from all over the state have swelled the amount.

Mrs. Phelps and her children have few comforts in their home on Monroe mountain. Even the shanty on the mountain side is not owned by Mrs. Prelps. She and her six children are merely squatters there, having occupied it for the last three years, and so far as Mrs. Phelps knows her husband never paid a cent for the use of it.

If the contributions for the relief of the family become large enough to permit, it is the plan of the three trustees of the fund to move the family into the town, where they can have a better home and surroundings, where the children can attend school and where, when they are able, they can obtain light employment to aid in the household expenses.

SIX GOVERNORS IN BOOM

United In Their Choice of Roosevelt For the President's Chair

New York, Jan. 30.—Interesting revelations of the manner in which the pro-Roosevelt propaganda is being spread through the coalition of six Republican governors in various states were made by Governor Stubbs of Kansas in an interview here.

It developed in the course of the interview that Governors Bass of New Hampshire, Hadley of Missouri, Glasscock of West Virginia, Osborn of Michigan, Aldrich of Nebraska and Stubbs of Kansas had formed themselves into an unofficial but active committee to keep each other and the sponsors of the Roosevelt boom advised as to the growth of the popular sentiment in favor of the nomination of Roosevelt by the Chicago convention.

Twenty-Four Sailors Lost

Berwick, Eng., Jan. 30.—The steamship Genoa is believed to have gone down in the North sea with the loss of her crew of twenty-four. Wreckage from the ship was washed ashore here.

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

TO GO WITH THE TURKEY.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

I will now explain how the remaining dishes of the anniversary day menu (cranberry sauce excepted) may be prepared by the paper bag method. The recipes given have all been found by actual experiment to be highly satisfactory in every respect.

Sweet Potatoes in Syrup.—Choose smooth, even potatoes of medium size, boil twenty minutes, drop in cold water, peel, dip in melted butter, roll in sugar, put into a buttered bag, with sugar, butter and lemon juice enough to make a fairly rich syrup. Seal bag, and cook for twelve minutes in a fairly hot oven. Pour the syrup from the bag around them into a hot dish.

Spanish Onions.—Parboil for fifteen minutes Spanish or Bermuda onions, chill them in cold water, then cut a V out of the heart. Fill the space with butter, after dusting it well with salt and pepper, put the onions in a bag with a lump of butter and a very little water, seal and cook twenty minutes in a hot oven, or thirty minutes in a very moderate one.

Baked Pears.—Ripe, well-flavored pears are best for baking, but the ordinary cooking pear will answer if baked with sugar, lemon juice and spices. Peel the pears, cut off the stems and take out the core, but only a little way beyond the blossom end. Stick a clove, a shred of mace or bit of cinnamon in the core-space, fill in around it with sugar and roll the fruit in dry sugar before putting it in a buttered bag. Put in half a gill of water also to the half dozen, seal bag, and cook at slow heat fifty minutes to an hour.

Creamed Salsify.—Boil tender, drop into cold water, peel and cut in two-inch length strips, steep in a dressing of butter and cream, lightly seasoned with pepper and salt. Put in well-greased bag, seal and leave in the oven a few minutes only.

Smothered Chicken.—Have a good-sized broiler cut into joints, taking care not to leave sharp bones to the joints. Salt and pepper them lightly, dredge with flour and lay in a well-greased bag upon thin slices of bacon. Cover with more bacon slices, taking care to keep the chicken spread rather flat. Add a teaspoonful of water, or a couple of peeled and sliced tomatoes. Shreds of green pepper add somewhat of flavor to the tomatoes. Seal in bag and cook for forty minutes, slacking heat almost half after the first five minutes. Make a peep-hole in the upper side of the bag near the middle, and if the bacon and chicken are not as brown as you like, cook five to ten minutes longer. Serve on a hot dish with gravy from the bag.

Good pies demand good crust—shorter than any temper, easier broken than promises. Make it by M. Soyer's recipe, then surely it will be up to grade. Here is the recipe: Take one pound of flour, three-quarters of a pound of butter. Mix the flour with water and sat lightly until the consistency of butter. Leave this dough for half an hour, then flatten with your hand and lay your butter on the top of the paste. Then fold four-corner way, and give it two rolls, as usual. Leave your paste in a cool place for forty-five minutes, and then roll twice more. Leave it for forty-five minutes and then roll twice again.

Bake all your pies in bags; it may seem extravagant, but the gas-saving more than pays for the bags. Use thin pie tins. Roll out and fill as usual. Set pans inside bags and set the bags on trivets. Cook two pies at once, but shift them midway the cooking, from upper to lower shelf, and vice versa. Thus they will brown top and bottom. Grease the bags but lightly underneath; even though they crisp there it does no harm. The essential thing is to keep the upper surface covered and maintain steady heat. Have the oven hot at first, but slack heat after a little—as soon as the bag corners show rather brown. Average pies, with average heat, require twenty-five to thirty minutes. Make peep-holes on top in the bags when you think they are done; if not brown enough, raise the heat a wee bit and cook five minutes longer.

To make the cider-cup, cut thinly the yellow peel from six oranges and six lemons, squeeze out the juice and put in with the peel and three cups of sugar. Make a gallon of sweet cider very hot, but do not let it boil, pour it upon the peels and juice, and let stand in a cold place for twenty-four hours, stirring it several times. The peel can be strained out, but it looks rather pretty in glasses.

For tea lemonade, take the juice of a dozen well-washed lemons and three sweet oranges, cut the squeezed fruit in rings, and add it to the juice. Put in five cups of sugar and strain over the whole a gallon and a quarter of weak tea, boiling hot, then add a cupful of rum. This also is better for standing—it keeps several days in a cool place. The rum can be omitted if there are scruples regarding it. In that case the strained juice of a pineapple that has been shredded and allowed to stand twenty-four hours in sugar can take its place. Dilute this one-fourth with mineral water in the glasses.

COOKING INDIAN CORN.

THE Indians found in Indian corn a satisfying and nutritious diet, and if we followed their example in using it it might be to our advantage.

Good Mush.

Cornmeal prepared in the form of hush is not an unsavory article of food, when plenty of rich fresh milk can be obtained to serve with it.

If the meal has been soaked the mush should be allowed to boil for about three hours, if not for about six hours.

Any quantity of the mush can be cooked at once by remembering that the proper proportion is six cupfuls of water to one cupful of the meal and one teaspoonful of salt to one cupful of the cereal.

This mush may be used as the basis of many excellent cornmeal dishes, such as fried mush, fritters, etc.

Milk Mush.—For this take two cupfuls of best quality cornmeal; stir into it two teaspoonfuls of salt and combine it with two teacupfuls of milk. Have a quart of water boiling on the fire and add the cornmeal and milk mixture to it, adding it gradually and continuing to stir until it is done.

Breakfast Hot Bread.

Eggless Corn Bread.—Take a cupful of cornmeal, half cupful of flour, tablespoonful each of melted butter, sugar and baking powder. Combine these and stir in a cupful of rich creamy milk. Pour into a pan and bake in a quick oven till it is nicely browned.

Corn Bread With One Egg.—To make this corn bread take one cupful cornmeal, one cupful of milk, one cupful of flour; then add one egg, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Stir well, pour into a pan and bake in a quick oven until browned.

For Frying.

Cornmeal Fritters.—Take slices of cold boiled mush, dip them in yolk of an egg and cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat.

Pork Mush.—Take two pounds of loin pork, boil until the bones can be removed, run this through the chopping machine, put it back in the water in which it has been cooked. Add one quart of water, season it and when the water is boiling stir in cornmeal and cook twenty minutes, stirring all the time. Pour in a dish and let it get cold to be fried for breakfast.

FRECKLES

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Boss McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean proposes to adopt Freckles.

CHAPTER IX.

A FIGHT WITH BULLETS.

WHEN Freckles crossed Sleepy Snake creek and the goldfinch, waiting as ever, challenged, "See me?" he saw the dainty, swaying grace of the angel instead. What is a man to do with an angel who dismembers herself and scatters over a whole swamp, thrusting a vivid reminder upon him at every turn?

"You needn't be thinking," he said to the goldfinch, "that because I'm coming down this line alone day after day it's always to be so. Some of these days you'll be swinging on this wire, and you'll see me coming, and you'll swing, skip and flirt yourself around and chip up right spunky. 'See me?' I'll be saying 'See you? See her!' You'll look, and there she'll stand. The sunshine won't look gold any more, nor the roses pink, nor the sky blue, because she'll be the pinkest, bluest, goldest thing of all. You'll be yelling yourself hoarse with the jealousy of her. The saw bird will stretch his neck out of joint, and she'll turn the heads of all the flowers. Wherever she goes I can go back afterward and see the things she's seen, walk the path she's walked, hear the grasses whispering over all the things she's said, and if there's a place too swampy for her bits of feet, maybe—maybe she'd be putting the beautiful arms of her about me neck and letting me carry her over."

Freckles shivered as with a chill. He sent the cudgel whirling skyward, dexterously caught it and set it spinning.

"Maybe she'll be wanting the cup me blue and brown chickens raised their babies in. If there's any feathers falling that day, why, it's from the wings of me chickens—it's sure to be, for the only angel outside the gates will be walking this timberline, and every step of the way I'll be holding me breath and praying that she don't unfold wings and sail off before the hungry eyes of me."

When the week was up Freckles had his room crisp and glowing with fresh living things that rivaled every tint of the rainbow. He carried bark and filled up all the muckiest places of the trail.

It was middle July. The heat of the last few days had dried up the water about and through the Limberlost, so that it was possible to cross it on foot in almost any direction if one had any idea of direction and did not become completely lost in its rank tangle of vegetation and bushes.

The heat was doing one other thing that was bound to make Freckles, as a good Irishman, shiver. As the swale dried its inhabitants were seeking the cooler depths of the swamp. They liked neither the heat nor leaving the field mice, moles and young rabbits of their chosen location. He saw them crossing the trail every day as the heat grew intense. The rattlers were sadly forgetting their manners, for they struck on no provocation whatever and didn't even remember to rattle afterward. Daily Freckles was compelled to drive big black snakes and blue racers from the nests of his chickens. Often the terrified squalls of the parent birds would reach him far down the line, and he would run to the rescue of the babies.

He saw the angel when the carriage turned from the corduroy into the clearing. They stopped at the west entrance to the swamp, waiting for him to precede them down the trail, as he had told them it was safest for the horse that he should do so. They followed the east line to a point opposite the big chickens' tree, and Freckles carried in the cameras and showed the Bird Woman a path he had cleared to the log.

They arranged that Freckles should drive the carriage into the east entrance in the shade and then take the horse around toward the north to a better place he knew. Then he was to entertain the angel at his study or on the line until the Bird Woman finished her work and came to them.

Freckles trod on air, for his dream had come true so soon. He was going down the timberline and the angel was following him. He asked to be excused for going first, because he wanted to be sure the trail was safe for her. She laughed at his fears, telling him that it was the polite thing for him to do anyway.

"Oh," said Freckles, "so you was after knowing that? Well, I didn't s'pose you did, and I was afraid you'd think me wanting in respect to be preceding you!"

The astonished angel looked at him, caught the irrepressible gleam of Irish fun in his eyes, and they laughed together.

Freckles did not realize how he was talking that morning. He showed her many of the beautiful nests and eggs of the line. She could identify a number of them, but of some she was ignorant, so they made notes of the number and color of the eggs, material and construction of nest, color, size and shape of the birds and went on to look them up in the book.

At his room, when Freckles had lifted the overhanging bushes and stepped back for her to enter, his heart was all out of time and place. The angel drew a deep breath and stood staring, first at one side, then at another, then far off down the cathedral aisle. "It's just fairyland!" she cried ecstatically. Then she turned and stared at Freckles exactly as she had at his handiwork.

"What are you planning to be?" she asked slowly.

"Whatever Mr. McLean wants me to," he replied.

"THEN GO FLYING," SAID THE BIRD WOMAN.

"What do you do it for?" she asked.

"Watch me lines."

"I don't mean work!"

"Oh! In me spare time I keep me room and study in me books."

"Do you work on the room or the books most?"

"On the room just what it takes to keep it up and the rest of the time on me books."

The angel eyed him sharply. "Well, maybe you are going to be a great scholar," she said, "but you don't look it. Your face isn't right for that, but it's got something big in it—something just great. I must find out what it is and then you must go to work on it. Your father is expecting you to do something. You can tell by the way he talks. You ought to begin right away. You've wasted too much time already."

Poor Freckles hung his head. He had never wasted an hour in his life. There had never been one that was his to waste.

The angel, studying him intently, read his thought in his face. "Oh, I don't mean that!" she cried, with the frank dismay of sixteen. "Of course you're not lazy! Nobody would ever think that from your looks. It's this I mean: There is something fine, strong and full of power in your face. There is something you are to do in this world, and no matter how hard you work at all these other things nor how successfully you do them if it is all wasted until you find the one thing that you can do best. If you could go anywhere you please and do anything you want, what would you do?"

"I'd go to Chicago and sing in the First Episcopal choir," answered Freckles promptly.

The angel dropped back on a seat; the hat she had taken off and held in her fingers rolled to her feet. "There," she exclaimed vehemently, "you can see what I'm going to be. Nothing, absolutely nothing! You can sing? Of course you can sing! It is written all over you."

"Anybody with half wit could have seen he could sing without having to be told," she thought. "It's in the slenderness of his fingers and his quick, nervous touch. It is in the brightness of his hair, the fire of his eyes, the breadth of his chest, the muscles of his throat and neck and, above all, it's in every tone of his voice."

"Will you do something for me?" she asked.

"I'll do anything in the world you want me to," said Freckles largely, "and if I can't do what you want I'll go to work at once and I'll try till I can."

"Good," said the angel. "Go over there and stand before that bank and sing something—anything you think of first."

It was a children's song that he had led for the little folks at the home many times.

To fairy land we go,
With a song of joy, heigh-o!
In dreams we'll stand upon that shore
And all the realm behold.
We'll see the sights so grand
That belong to fairy land.
Its mysteries we will explore,
Its beauties will unfold.
Oh, tra, la, la, oh, ha, ha, ha! We're happy now as we can be.
Our welcome song we will prolong and greet you with our melody.
O fairy land, sweet fairy land, we love to sing—

Nothing could have given the intense sweetness and rollicking quality of Freckles' voice better scope. He forgot everything but pride in his work with the sound of his voice. He was on the chorus, and the angel was shivering in ecstasy when clip, clip, came the sharply beating feet of a swiftly ridden horse down the trail from the north. They both sprang toward the entrance.

"Freckles, Freckles!" called the voice of the Bird Woman.

They were at the trail on the instant.

"Both those revolvers loaded?" she asked.

"Yes," said Freckles.

"Is there a way you can cut across the swamp and get to the chicken tree in a few minutes and with little noise?"

"Yes."

"Then go flying," said the Bird Woman. "Give the angel a lift up behind me, and we will ride the horse back to where you left him and wait for you. I finished Little Chicken in no time and put him back. His mother came so close, I felt sure she would enter the log. The light was fine, so I set and focused the camera and covered it with branches, attached the long hose and went away off over 100 feet and hid in some bushes to wait. A short, thick man and a tall, dark one passed me so closely, I could almost have reached out and touched them. They carried a big saw on their shoulders. They said they could work until about noon, and then they must lay off until you passed and then try to load and get out at night. They went on—not entirely out of sight—and began cutting a tree. Mr. McLean told me the other day what was likely to happen there, and if they get that tree down he loses his wager on you. Keep to the east and north and hustle. We'll meet you at the carriage. I am always armed. We will separate and creep up on them from different sides and give them a fusilade that will send them flying. You hurry, now."

She gathered up the reins and started briskly down the trail. The angel, hatless and with sparkling eyes, was clinging about her waist.

Freckles worked his way with great care, dodging limbs and bushes with noiseless tread and cutting as close to where he thought the men were as he felt that he dared if he were to remain unseen. As he ran he tried to think. It was Wessner, burning for his revenge, aided by the bully of the locality, that he was going to meet.

LOYAL TROOPS ARE ROUTED

They Meet With Crushing Defeat at Kucheng

Directs Battle From Special Railroad Car, With Engine Attached to Each End—Armistice of Several Weeks Has Expired—New Senate Inaugurated at Nanking, Its Members Appearing In Foreign Dress

London, Jan. 30.—The Chinese revolutionists have crushingly defeated the imperial force commanded by General Chang Hsun at Kucheng, in the province of Anhwei, according to a news agency dispatch received here from Tientsin. Kucheng is a station on the Tientsin-Pu Kow railroad, about 125 miles north of Nanking.

Chang Hsun, commander of the imperial troops, has had his central base at Suchowfu, in the northern part of Kiangtu province. Under his direct command were 8000 of all sorts of good fighters, inured to the winter. The revolutionists' centre was at Linhwaikwan, in Anhwei province, about 100 miles from Nanking. The revolutionists numbered 15,000 men eager for fighting, but not acclimated.

General Chang was reported previous to the battle to have occupied a special car, from which point of vantage he directed his troops, but a significant fact was that an engine was attached at both ends of the car. His retreat, however, is cut off 100 miles to the north by the cities along the railway line, which turned a few days ago to the revolutionary cause.

The armistice, which has obtained for several weeks, expired last night, but no definite steps have been taken for its renewal. Neither Tang Shao Yi, the representative of Yuan Shi Kai, nor Wu Ting Fang, the republican minister of justice, expect serious fighting.

It is confidently believed at Nanking that abdication will come when Yuan Shi Kai is satisfied that the Chinese troops in Pekin are sufficient in number to control the Manchus. President Sun has sent a telegram to Yuan, informing him that if abdication is imminent he will hold back the Republican troops two or three days.

The new senate was inaugurated at Nanking yesterday. It is made up of forty-two senators, who appeared in foreign dress. In his speech, President Sun urged unity. He said it was proposed by the new regime to build up and not to destroy.

At the close of the address there was an impressive scene. The members rose in a body and gave three cheers for the republic. The hall was handsomely decorated and a military band played popular airs familiar to the foreigners.

Burglars Enter Morgan Home and Get $5000 In Booty

New York, Jan. 30.—The home of J. P. Morgan, Jr., at 219 Madison avenue, adjoining the home of his father, the banker, was entered by burglars, who stole jewelry and bric-a-brac valued at $5000 and departed without attracting the attention of a policeman on fixed post within twenty yards of the house, or a private watchman employed especially to guard it.

The best talent of the detective bureau is engaged in trying to find the intruders and locate the stolen property.

From the absence of evidence to indicate that entrance to the house had been forced by way of windows or doors the police believe that the burglars secreted themselves inside during the day, gaining entrance through some pretext, or sneaking in while servants were not looking.

Ancient Guidebooks.

Guidebooks for the use of pilgrims to Rome, known to exist in a rudimentary form since the time of Charlemagne, took a definite and characteristic shape in the twelfth century with the "Descriptio Plenaria Totius Urbis" and with the "Graphia Aurea" of the thirteenth. The institution of the jubilees in the year 1800, calling to Rome hundreds of thousands of wayfarers, opened a new market for descriptive literature on the Holy City, and new editions "De Mirabilibus" were produced at least four times each century.—London Athaneum.

Interwoven Hosiery Easily Leads Them All

There have been over two hundred brands of warranted stockings offered to the public during the past three years. You don't hear about any of them very much now. Hosiery must be good, or the customer does not buy the second time.

The ice men are happy as their houses are filled with handsome ice.

The street railway had its snow ploughs at work all night and all lines were open for operation this morning.

Maj. F. E. Jones of the 5th regiment left Monday evening with his regiment for Lawrence, where it had been ordered for duty.

The regular Friday night prayer meeting of the Hall Place M. E. church is to be held Thursday evening this week instead of Friday.

It is a matter of record that the month of January has been one of the severest winter months that New England has experienced for many years.

On Wednesday evening the Ladies' Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church is to hold a "get-together" supper in the vestry for which a pleasant entertainment is planned.

Work continues to be quiet in the granite yards and there are many cutters without work. Aside from being the dull season the weather has been such for the greater part of the month that men could not work.

L. H. Sturtevant of Adams street has returned from New York where he joined his wife over the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Holden in South Orange, New Jersey. Mrs. Sturtevant returns later.

Bob Johnson's yard on Maple street looks beautiful just now, the Christmas trees which enclose the yard being covered with snow, the green and white making a pretty picture.

All of the draughtsmen at the Fore River who quit work at noon Saturday out of protest to the new eight hour rule returned to work Monday. It is probable that some agreement will be reached this week whereby the draughtsmen will be able to have their Saturday afternoons off, which is all that they desire.

DEMONSTRATION BY LECTURES

The first of a series of five demonstration lectures under the auspices of and for the benefit of Wollaston Kindergarten, Mrs. Carroll E. Bates, chairman, was given Monday afternoon in Brasee hall, Wollaston and was well attended notwithstanding the inclement weather.

Wilmot Seiders of Crothers & Seiders, provisioners, gave a most instructive and highly educational lecture on Marketing. For several years before coming to Wollaston Mr. Seiders was with C. S. Day & Co., New Faneuil Market and while there he was instructor for Simmons college students on their marketing day for meats. Mr. Seiders had one-half of a beef before him and he showed just how it is cut for the New England market, then in turn he cut a Porter House roast and steak, sirloin roast and steak, tip roast, two rib cut, last three ribs back of rump and rump steak, middle cut rump, face of rump, aitch bone, vein, bottom and top of round, brisket, rattle rand, fore and hind shin, chuck rib, neck, shoulder and flank, and he explained all so thoroughly, and answered all questions, as to nutritive qualities and corresponding values as to prices as well as the carving of the different cuts, all of which was highly appreciated by the ladies.

He also cut up a half of veal and lamb, explaining in turn the forequarter leg, loin and different chops, and prepared a saddle roast and crown roast of lamb ready for the oven, as well as a French chop and larded beef filet for boiling.

A pleasing feature after the lecture was the serving of turtle brand coffee by Miss Young a demonstrator for the wholesale firm of Charles L. Purington & Co.

The next lecture on Feb. 5, at 2 o'clock will be by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill on bread, rolls, fancy yeast mixtures.

ANNUAL MEETING QUINCY Y. C.

The annual meeting of the Quincy yacht club will be held Thursday evening in Colonial hall at which time reports of the various officers will be submitted and officers for the coming season elected. There is but little scheduled to come before the meeting other than reports and election of officers, as the only matter stated in the call is to see if the club will authorize flag officers to wear the insignia of their rank with "Ex" over it.

While this is the only business stated in the call the meeting may transact any other business of interest to the club that may come up.

There is no contest for officers of the club and the same board as last year will probably be elected.

BOWLING AT THE Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. bowling team took three out of four points in the match with the Tubular Rivet team, rolled on the Association alleys, Monday evening. C. Stevens of the losing team was high man with a total of 308 and best single string 115. Burns was the only Y. M. C. BOGUS ANCESTORS.

A Paying Business In England That Thrives Upon Snobbery.

The most tragic form of snobbery in a country place is that which concerns itself with the tracing of a pedigree. In my travels I came upon a man who confessed that he had made thousands of pounds out of the conceit and snobbishness of people living in country places, and especially people who happened to possess names of a high sounding character. His method of work was simple, and only the ultra snob could be taken in by it.

He would glance through a local directory and select a few names of the Fitz-Blank style. A short visit to the town would help him to determine the character of the person—a snob is easily distinguished, and he would return to his place and write that he had come into the possession of a portrait which he had every reason to believe was that of an ancestor of Mr. Fitz-Blank.

There would be a few quaint hieroglyphics on the back of the canvas showing that the original was a native of the town in which Mr. Fitz-Blank was residing. In nine cases out of ten that picture sold at a price which meant a profit of 100 per cent to the dealer after he had paid the little Italian artist, who turned out the pictures by the dozen. In many a country house today there is a fine old full length portrait of an ancestor which was painted in a murky studio somewhere down Whitechapel way.—Margaret Ballantyne in London Saturday Journal.

COULDN'T PLEASE HER.

The Woman Whose Husband Never Had the Right Change.

A prominent broker remarked the other day that he thought his wife was the hardest woman to please in the wide world. She was always asking him for money when he was home. "John," she would say, "give me 47 cents. The grocery boy is here with a bill." "I can't give you 47 cents," he would reply, "but here's half a dollar." "Oh, you're the funniest man; you never have the right change." A dozen times a day she would ask for a few odd pennies.

Finally the broker went into the subtreasury and obtained $100 worth of bright new pennies. There were 10,000 pennies, and he packed them in a suit case and lugged them home. Then he went to a blacksmith shop and had an iron tripod made, and upon this he hung the suit case filled with pennies.

The next day the butcher came with his bill. It amounted to $5.67. "John," said the wife, "give me $5.67." "You will find it on the tripod," he explained. The wife returned in a moment in a great rage. "Why, John," she cried, "I'm not going to count out 567 pennies for this man! I'd be ashamed. It's a wonder you can never have the right change."—New York Herald.

FIGHTING THE RATEL.

This South African Badger Has a Grip Like a Bulldog.

There is a curious long nosed little creature of South Africa called the ratel, which is said to exhibit a most peculiar method of fighting its human adversaries. The son of a Britisher in South Africa who was using for the first time a shotgun had what hardly could be called an amusing experience with a ratel.

The boy saw the ratel creeping round an ant hill. He cantered off at a not very rapid pace, and the boy fired at easy range. The animal turned heels over head, much in the same manner that a tame squirrel will disport itself in a wheel cage. The ratel paused once, as if in pain, but never took his eyes off the boy. The lad did not think of running, but clubbed his gun and stood, prepared to meet a spring.

It happened that the English boy had never been told how the ratel fights. Almost every boy in the veldt knows, but this lad did not. To wait thus, expecting a leap breast high, is to give the ratel exactly the chance he wants. Hesitating not a second, the ratel glided swiftly in and seized the lad's feet. The boy hacked him with the butt end of his gun, kicked at him, shouted his loudest, but the ratel gnawed away with the pertinacity of a bulldog. At every blow the creature's teeth closed like a vise. The boy seized his long tail, wrenched and twisted it, but the ratel would not quit his hold.

The struggle lasted for a shorter time than it takes to tell it. The muscles of the lad's instep were cut through, and he tumbled backward—not at full length, but against an ant hill. This circumstance probably saved his life.

The ratel let go, as it does when its victim drops, to spring upon the lad's throat and rip his stomach with its hind claws. But the plucky boy lifted himself upon his elbows and lay across the summit of the mound. That might only have prolonged the struggle, but his father ran up at the moment. The boy was many months in bed and many more on crutches.—New York Press.

"HANG THE PRISONERS!"

An Exclamation That Was Put Into Effect as an Order.

The young laird of Lochnow was a character in the Scotch camp life of the early eighteenth century. He was cool in action and full of fun in daily life. One day he was detailed to command a burial party, and as he strolled over the battlefield his orderly came to him in great perplexity.

"Sir," said he, "there is a heap of fellows lying out yonder who say they're only wounded, and they won't let us bury them like the rest. What shall we do?"

"Bury them at once," replied young Agnew without moving a muscle of his countenance, "for if you take their word for it they won't be dead for a hundred years to come."

The man saluted and started off in all simplicity to carry out the order, and Agnew had to dispatch a counter order in haste to prevent his joke from becoming a tragedy.

This recalls an "o'er true" tale of border life. Some Galloway moss troopers were brought before Sir William Howard, who was an enthusiastic mathematician. He was deep in his studies when the prisoners were marched into the castle courtyard, and a lieutenant came running up to get orders as to their disposal. Enraged at being interrupted, he cried, "Hang the prisoners!" and went on with his work.

He finished his problem and went down with a cheerful mind only to learn that his exclamation had been taken for an order, and the prisoners were all hanged.

The Time to Do the Counting.

In the old days of impetuous warfare caution was not regarded as so much a virtue on the part of a military commander as at present. In a battle between French and Austrians, in which Marshal Bugeaud commanded the French forces, an officer of the staff said to the marshal: "The enemy are advancing. Shall I send a party to reconnoiter and see how numerous they are?" "No," said Bugeaud; "we'll count 'em after we've beaten 'em."

The Invalid

A Russian Nobleman Injured While Hunting Is Entertained by a Charming Woman

By GEORGE BECKWITH

A party of gentlemen were hunting in the province of Tula, in Russia. One of them, Count Radzimoff, a man about thirty-two and of a very aristocratic mien, was thrown from his horse and injured. On an eminence near by appeared a castle of modern build, and the count's servant was sent there to inquire if his master would be welcome until he might recover from his injuries. The servant rode to the castle, asked for the owner and was ushered into the presence of a young and beautiful woman.

"My master," he said, "Count Radzimoff, while hunting in the forest below has fallen from his horse and sent me to learn if he may beg a lodgment here until it can be determined if he is able to proceed to the capital."

At the name Radzimoff the lady started. When the man had made his request she called for the master of her stables and ordered him to get out the most comfortable conveyance for an invalid, go with the lackey and bring the count to the castle. Before the departure of the carriage she said to its driver:

"Answer no questions concerning me." Then, calling her household together, she said to them, 'During the stay in the castle of the gentleman who is coming you are to remember that I am Mme. Murienieff and am to be addressed solely as 'Madame.'"

On the count's arrival madame met him at the steps and herself assisted him into the castle. Her reception of him was full of sympathy, even tenderness. She placed him on a lounge in the great hall or living room, where, his head resting on pillows and covered by an afghan, she bid him remain quiet until the arrival of a physician for whom she had sent. She met the doctor without on the porch and said to him:

"Doctor, I have received as my guest a gentleman who has been injured by a fall from his horse. Whatever his condition, you are to tell him that he will not be able to leave the castle for at least a week."

The doctor carried out his instructions, and when he left his patient madame went into the room where the count was lying and bent over him sympathetically.

"That rascally doctor says I must thrust myself upon you for a whole week," said Radzimoff.

"You shall be my welcome guest for that time and longer."

"But the hunt—I shall miss that."

"I am sorry for you, but I shall endeavor to make your enforced stay here as endurable as possible."

"I shall be needed at the capital. I hold a position at the palace, and his majesty has given me leave for but a few days."

"His majesty, if he values you, will not risk your life by calling for you to come before your physician gives permission. I will write an explanation for you."

"Nonsense! I can write perfectly well. Indeed, I don't believe a word that stupid doctor says. I can certainly go to St. Petersburg, even if it is not best for me to continue the hunt."

She brought writing materials, but his reclining position was not conducive to scribbling, and his hand trembled. So she did the work for him.

"And now," she said, "as your hostess it is my bounden duty to relieve, so far as possible, the tedium of your captivity. There are chess, checkers, cards and books. Which shall it be?"

The count, touched by her kindness, apologized for not having shown his appreciation of it before and said that he would prefer the books. So she went to her library and selected several volumes, which she brought to him and read to him the titles, that he might designate one he would prefer. He selected a novel, and, drawing a chair close beside the lounge, she began to read from it.

Madame devoted herself continuously to the count. His bedroom was directly off the living room and on the same floor. Every morning her servant dressed him and assisted him into the living room, where he at first took to the lounge, but soon insisted on an easy chair. Madame read to him, played games with him and cooked dainties for him with her own hands, studying continually how she might administer to his comfort. There is no more certain way for a woman to win her way to a man's heart than by caring for him in his illness. In the present case there was but one drawback to the lady's method—the count was perfectly well.

The doctor called every day, felt the patient's pulse, examined a black and blue spot on his leg, took his temperature, looking wise and thoughtful all the time, and at each departure madame slipped 10 rubles into his hand. At the end of the week, before entering the so called sickroom, he said to her:

"The count will probably ask me, now that the first week has passed, if he can be moved. What shall I tell him?"

"He will not ask you, but if he does tell him he must remain another week."

"Just so," remarked the doctor and went in to see the patient. Whether the latter had forgotten that the week of his captivity had expired or whether he feared the doctor would tell him he could go, he did not mention the matter. He continued to enjoy the attentions of madame, and since he received an order from St. Petersburg not to risk anything by being moved he remained passive and content.

Then one morning, instead of madame bringing him his breakfast, a servant brought it.

"Where is your mistress?" asked the count in a dissatisfied tone.

"Madame is indisposed this morning."

Madame was listening at the door.

"Umph!"

The servant set the breakfast down on a table beside the count and left him to eat alone. When the dishes were carried out madame was in the pantry to inspect them. She smiled at noticing that the breakfast was untouched.

At 11 o'clock she count sent a servant to madame to ask after her and to express his disappointment that she would not be able to read to him. At 2 in the afternoon he sent another message, begging that she would make an effort to visit him if only for a few minutes; he was desperately lonely. Before dinner, which they had been accustomed to eat together, he sent word that if he could not have her company no dinner need be provided for him. At 10 in the evening he declared that if she did not come to bid him good night he would violate all rules of propriety and go to her. To this she sent word that she was better and would breakfast with him in the morning.

So the count, forced to go to bed without seeing her, fretted all night, and when in the morning he waited in his easy chair for her to bring his breakfast and saw her enter with the tray, as usual, he was beside himself with joy. Rising and setting the tray on the table, he took both her hands in his and carried them to his lips.

"My benefactress!" he exclaimed.

"Is it only gratitude that moves you?" she asked, lowering her eyes.

"Yes—no. It is both. I mean that I, having become accustomed to your ministrations, cannot get on without them."

That was a happy breakfast. Madame said she felt much better than yesterday, but needed the air. She would ride out, but regretted that the count was not able to ride with her.

"But I am able!" cried the count, and, getting up from his chair, he pirouetted around the room.

Madame looked sad. The count asked what was the matter.

"Since you are well," she said, "we must part."

"But," rejoined the count, putting his hand on his side, "the motion has brought on a terrible pain."

"I think," said madame, smiling, "that you are well enough to ride out, but any violent motion is still dangerous."

"Exactly," exclaimed the count, sinking into his chair, with an apology for a groan.

A pair of horses and a sleigh were ordered—for by this time the snow lay deep on the ground—and the two got in among a pile of fur robes and went for a drive.

That evening when madame and the count were sitting before a great open fireplace the count looked very sad.

"What troubles you?" asked madame.

"Something that must separate me from you," was the reply.

"And that something is?"

"You know of a custom with us here in Russia by which a woman who is not noble may marry a noble and thus acquire his title of nobility. Sometimes a wealthy woman will pay a handsome sum to an impecunious nobleman to marry her, the two parting, not to meet again, as soon as the ceremony has been performed. My hereditary estates came to me very much incumbered. Indeed, it was necessary that I should either raise 100,000 rubles to pay off the debt or lose them. At this time my eye caught an advertisement of a young girl who had just come into a large fortune for a husband with a title, she to pay for the honor conferred upon her, the two to part immediately after the marriage. I opened negotiations with this woman, and the result was an agreement by which she was to pay 100,000 rubles and be my wife in name. So distasteful was the sale to me that I stipulated the ceremony should take place by proxy. I never saw my wife."

The count heaved a sigh at finishing his confession.

"What was the name of the girl you married?" asked madame.

"I have forgotten."

"Was it Murianieff?"

The count started. "It was. What do you know of her?"

"She is very near to me."

"Near to you!"

"Yes; we are twins."

Madame arose and touched a bell. A servant came, whom she met at the door and to whom she gave some instructions in a low tone. The servant departed, and the count hastened to say:

"Tell me about your twin sister. Is she as lovable as you?"

"We have the same disposition."

"I would see her—but, no; she would not be you."

At this moment the servant returned bearing a letter on a salver. Madame took it, glanced at the superscription and handed it to the count.

"Countess Radzimoff!" he exclaimed.

"I am the Countess Radzimoff," said madame quietly. "I paid you in hard cash for your name and title."

"And I return it with my love," he said. "As my wife the money is yours as well as mine."

BANQUET AND REUNION QUINCY COUNCIL K. OF C.

Party of 300 Enjoy Feast of Reason and Flow of Wit at Music Hall

Address on Ideals of American Citizenship by David I. Walsh

Music Hall has been the scene of so many successful social functions that it would indeed be difficult to point to any one as the peer of them all, yet it is safe to say that never, in the history of the popular social rendezvous, has there been held within its walls a banquet and reunion which eclipsed in any way the one which took place Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the members of Quincy Council Number 96 Knights of Columbus. The affair was exclusively arranged for members of the Knights of Columbus and their lady friends and fully three hundred of them assembled for the occasion, many of the Knights being in attendance as representatives of Councils both in and about Boston.

The affair began at seven o'clock and for a half hour the time was spent in the form of a reception, during which many took occasion to renew acquaintances, more firmly cement the associations made in the past. Promptly at half past seven all present assembled in the hall to partake of the very appetizing banquet which had been prepared by C. C. Whittemore, the well known Boston caterer Prayer was offered by the chaplain of the Quincy Council Rev. John J. Coan, pastor of the Church of St. John the Baptist.

The hall itself had been very prettily decorated for the event. On the platform an abundance of flowers of different kinds were in evidence, all encircling the emblem of the Quincy Council, which stood forth in a most conspicuous position. Streamers of variegated colors, entwined with the stars and stripes were strewn about the hall, and the tables themselves likewise presented a most enticing appearance.

The menu was a most elaborate one and consisted of the following courses:

Grape Fruit with Sherry
Bouillon en Tasse Bread Sticks
Radishes Celery
Escalloped Oysters
Stuffed Roasted Half Chicken
Giblet Gravy
Currant Jelly
Mashed Potatoes String Beans
Roman Punch
Banana Fritters Wine Sauce
Salad
Lobster Chicken
Fancy Creams
Neapolitan Frozen Pudding
Sultana Roll Claret Sauce
Fancy Fruit and Flower Ices
Fancy Assorted Cake
Cafe Noir Rolls
Young American Cheese
Camembert Cheese
Toasted Crackers

The gathering proved the mecca for a number of prominent people, including members of the clergy, business and professional men, and those at the head table, as special guests of the evening, were Rev. John J. Coan, pastor of the church of St. John the Baptist and his curates Rev. Patrick J. Scannell and Rev. John J. Casey, Rev. John P. Cuffe, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Atlantic, and assistant Rev. James F. McNiff, Rev. Matthew F. S. McDonnell, pastor of St. Francis Church, South Braintree, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus, Hon. David I. Walsh, Councilman John J. Mahoney, and City Clerk Charles J. McGilvray, the last two mentioned being officers of Ave Maria Council. West Quincy and City Solicitor John W. McAnarney.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the post prandial exercises were in order and were opened up by Grand Knight, Edward D. Barrett, officiating in the capacity of toastmaster. Grand Knight Earrett took occasion to thank the many who were in attendance for their efforts in making the affair to meet with such an unqualified success and after a few well chosen remarks, proceeded to introduce the talent who had been procured for the evening. The first number brought forth Joseph Ecker, of Boston, one of the foremost baritone singers in this section of the country. Mr. Ecker lived up to all that had been predicted about him and was forced to respond a second time, owing to the loud applause that greeted his initial selection.

A reading entitled "The White Silhouette" was next given in a most entertaining manner by Mrs. A. Isabelle Davis, widely known as a reader of much note and prominence. Mrs. Davis gave a remarkably fine exhibition and depicted many jacose and pathetic scenes in the course of her renditions. She too, was accorded loud applause and was compelled to render a second number.

The eyes of all were centered on the Grand Knight with the closest attention when he arose at the conclusion of the aforementioned number, preparatory to introducing the principal speaker of the evening. Mr. Barrett paid a high tribute to the speaker and said he esteemed it an especial privelege to introduce at the

ALBEE CLASS ARE THE HOSTS

Fine Supper, Good Speaking, Excellent Musical Program

THE COMMITTEE

The gentlemen's night of the Albee class was most auspiciously held at the Wollason Baptist church Tuesday evening with good speakers, a fine supper and an excelled musical program.

It was a large gathering amply filling the chapel, that sat down to supper shortly before seven.

The evening's speaking was opened with A. F. Kendall, president of the class, as master of ceremonies.

J. Arthur Sparrow responded to the toast "Our future home,," Oscar A. Blaisdell to that of "Our boss" and Elford L. Durgan to "The Supervisors."

In response to the sentiment "The man in the case," Mrs. Joseph Walther read an original poem by a member of the class in appreciation of the work of Mr. Albee.

Rev. O. P. Gifford, D. D., of Brookline was the principal speaker of the evening, and made a most pregnant address upon present day christianity, and the value of knowledge and wisdom in the work.

His remarks were full of humor and good thoughts, and he received an ovation at their close. Under the direction of Mr. Albee "Onward Christian Soldiers" was sung to speed the speaker on his way.

The last speaker of the evening was Amos D. Albee teacher of the class. He said there were two kinds of men, the first of whom was to be pitied, and the second to be congratulated.

One was the old young man and the other the young old man. He belonged to the latter class.. Two things contributed to this: First the happiness he found in making people sing, and second in the pleasure he had in meeting from Sunday to Sunday with "his girls."

During the evening "Because," a solo, was finely sung by Edward E. Bullock. A quartet composed of himself and his three sons, William E. Arthur W. and Edward C. was also enjoyed. Their selections included "Summer lullaby," "I long for thee," and "In absence."

The evening was in charge of the executive committee, consisting of Mrs. A. F. Kendall, Mrs. Wellington Record, Mrs. Charles McFarland, Mrs. William Dimmick, Mrs. Joseph Barber and Mrs. M. A. Finney, and was a thorough success in every way.

A carps of waitresses taken from two of the young ladies' classes in the Sunday school consisted of Miss Ednah Rhoades, Miss Edith Armstrong, Miss Alta Grant, Miss Madeline Nesbitt, Miss Ruth Bartlett, Miss Millicent Chapman, Miss May Critchley, Miss Marion Rand, Miss Margaret Goodspeed, Miss Helen Seiders, Miss Ethel Hatfield, Miss Mildred Sayward, Miss May Gold.

HOLDS SILVER OFFERING SOCIAL

A pleasing program consisting of music and readings was rendered at the silver offering social held by the Ladies' Aid society of the Wollaston Methodist church, Tuesday evening.

An instrumental duet consisting of piano and violin by Miss Beulah Collett and Arthur Dewsnap opened the program and was followed by a soprano solo "If I had the world to give you" by Miss Irma Douglas accompanby Miss Marion Nevers.

An instrumental selection the "Second Mazurka" was pleasingly rendered by Miss Nevers. A reading by Arthur Dewsnap was well received.

"The scent of the lilies" was sweetly sung by Mrs. A. R. Scholes while Frank Dunham and Raymond Cassidy contributed a duet entitled "A temperance song."

Miss Collett and Mr. Dewsnap again favored those present while "May morning" was the next offering of Mrs. Scholes.

A reading by Raymond Cassidy and a solo by Alan Painter were followed by selections from a quartet which closed the entertainment.

The quartet was composed of Storer Wiggin, Raymond Cassidy, Clarence Cassidy and Frank Dunham. They sang "How can I leave thee?" and "Who did?" Light refreshments followed. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. C. M. Givens, Mrs. E. A. Dewsnap and Mrs. E. A. Williams, assisted by Miss Mildred Dunham and Miss Alfreda Dewsnap.

SEAGIRT HEARING.

The hearing before the legislature committee on Towns, as the setting off Houghs Neck as a town, will not be held this week. it was thought that the hearing would be held Thursday but the committee has not yet assigned a date yet there is every reason to believe that it will be held at an early day.

JOSEPH N. PAGE

Joseph N. Page one of Quincy's well known residents died suddenly Tuesday evening at the home of his sister in Dorchester, aged 78 years, Mr. Page who was a veteran of the civil war, had a shoe repairing and variety store on Hancock street for many years, later moving to the Packard building on Cottage avenue, where he has for several years carried on a pool room.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Charles H. Johnson gave his lecture "Historic Quincy" Tuesday evening under the auspices of the brotherhood of the First Presbyterian church. There was a large attendance of members and friends and the lecture as usual, was illustrated with the stereopticon. The lecture was greatly enjoyed and Mr. Johnson was given a vote of thanks.

CHORAL SOCIETY PLANS FESTIVAL

To Devote Whole Day to Music With Two Concerts

PLANS FORMULATED

At the regular Tuesday evening meeting of the Choral Society it was voted to give a Music Festival early in the spring, probably the last of April. This means a whole day devoted to music, with two concerts, one in the afternoon, largely orchestral, and in the evening a grand presentation of Gounod's opera of "Faust" in concert form.

The plans already formulated are built on lines which have been carried out successfully in other cities and if they find favor here, the Festival may become a regular part of the society's yearly work. The afternoon program of orchestral music will be arranged with care and will probably include a symphony, thus making it the first "symphony concert" ever presented in Quincy. It is also likely that the singing at this concert will be by a selected chorus of one hundred High school scholars, under their regular director Miss Emma A. Perkins, supervisor of music in the public schools. This custom has been particularly successful in other cities and the plan is heartily endorsed by our superintendent of schools and others in authority here.

Rehearsals of the Faust music were started Tuesday evening and will without doubt inspire the choral members with new enthusiasm in their work. It is greatly desired that more of our singers take advantage of this opportunity to study a really great opera and the society has voted to allow singers to join for the half season remaining at half the yearly fee. Rehearsals for the present will occur every two weeks the next one being announced for Feb. 13th. The Faust music is spirited, full of action, and always arouses interest wherever it is given. Conductor McConathy has carried the singers rapidly through the score, giving them fundamental ideas to work on before the next meeting. He has conducted the opera many times and those who heard the Golden Legend concert may anticipate hearing the Faust choruses sung with a snap and finish seldom heard in regular stage productions.

It has been felt by people in general that the Quincy Choral Society stood for "big things" and surely this is proof positive that it does.

BRIEFS

COMMITTEE REPORT ON VOCATIONAL TRAINING

Committee of Men and Women Make Report to School Committee

Chairman Miller Appoints Sub-Committees. Other Business

An important meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening. All members with the exception of Dr. Hunting were present, also the citizens committee who have been considering the subject of vocational training for boys.

This committee made an exhaustive report and a report was also made for the committee of ladies on vocational training for girls.

The superintendent was directed to have these reports printed and they will be taken up for discussion at a later meeting.

Following is a synopisis of the report of the men's committee outlining its suggestions.

An increase in the amount of manual training given to all boys, by equipping three or four more class rooms or basement rooms with necessary tools.

Establishment of one or two ungraded classes to take boys from twelve to fourteen who were not doing good work under present conditions. Programme of these classes to be hand work one-half the day; book work, the other half. Book work to be simplified and associated with the hand work.

Evening classes for workers in the 1—Machinist; 2—Granite; 3—Woodworking; 4—Sheet metal working industries. Course to cover drawing, blue print reading, use of tools, in short, any technical work for which there seemed a call.

An industrial school for boys: the first year full time, the three succeeding years half-time in school, half-time in the shops. Boys admitted to the first year to be fourteen years old, and either graduates of the elementary schools or boys recommended by the grammar masters as able to do the work. Boys admitted to the half-time years must have shown intelligence and earnestness in the first year. This course to be strictly practical in all four years.

Management of the evening courses and industrial school to be in charge of the school committee with the assistance of an advisory committee of manufacturers and workmen to ensure the utmost practicability. 5—Expense. Half the expense of schools named in (3) and (4) will be paid by the state. Expense per capita of boy in the industrial school will be less than in the high school. An appropriation of from $2,000 to $2,500 for industrial school purposes for 1912 will easily take care of both the day and evening work named under (3) and (4).

A petition was received from the parents of school children at Rock Island asking that pupils be transported to and from the Atherton Hough school on account of the tide overflowing the street. The petition was referred to the sub committee of that school.

A communication was received from the State approving the Industrial school. A petition was received from the Young Women's club asking for the use of the gymnasium at the High school, certain evenings of the week. The petition was refused.

A petition was received from the residents of Wollaston asking for a hearing on the boundary line between the Wollaston and Montclair school districts. Referred to the sub committee of the Wollaston and Quincy schools.

It was voted that the Commissioner of Public Works be requested to make the proper electrical connections at the Washington school, that the building may be lighted.

The superintendent reported that the attendance at the sessions of the evening schools, the terms of which recently closed, had been ten per cent larger than in the previous year.

The superintendent also reported that the fuel bills had been approved and that in accordance with the terms of the contract, because of excess of moisture in the coal delivered, the committee had deducted $125 from the total bill.

The financial report for the month of January was reported as follows:

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

Salaries	$13,004.54
Janitors	879.17
Books, Supplies and Sundries	681.03
Fuel	3,115.67
Transportation	38.00
Rent	30.00
Evening Schools	278.60
Total	$18,027.01

Sub-Committees

The chairman announced the following sub-committees for the year 19 which were approved.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The $1000 cow has come to stay, it is said, and the college graduate who can't earn but $2 a day must feel a sense of failure when he looks at her.

The butter supply is 4,000 pounds short, and the boarding house keeper thinks many good things can be said in favor of tallow.

The Republicans have had control of the government departments for 15 years, and if there is inefficiency there, would they remedy it, even if given another 15 years?

Our democratic New Yorkers have been running after the Canadjan Duke of Connaught and his party, and the rest of the year they spend in adulation of our Dukes of Dollars.

The Yale expedition to Peru has secured the bones of prehistoric man, but the hungry Yale boys would be more interested in soup bones from the 1912 steer.

Mr. Taft says much about economy and efficiency. Is he doing his part by having the White house ashes properly sifted, and can he get the hired girl to utilize the meat scraps in the hash?

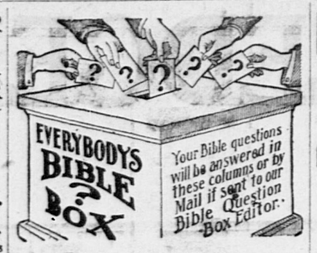
Senator Cummins is out for president now. Considering how hard the newspapers work to prove that all presidents are idle and disorderly characters, anyone who is willing to take the job is entitled to much credit.

People are pleased to hear that the Helen Taft rose will be a floral novelty this spring, and what a good example would be set if Helen Taft rose before breakfast to cultivate a patch of them in the White House back yard.

Great excitement was caused in the newspaper offices by the report that Col. Roosevelt had made a statement on the cultivation of lima beans, and a corps of reporters and photographers was at once dispatched to Oyster Bay.

THE WORKING OF THE LAW.

Social readjustment is no child's play. It involves far-reashing difficulties. Massachusetts enacted last year a fifty-four-hour law forbidding the employment of women and minors in factories for more than fifty-four hours per week. This was a reduction of two hours from the previous law. This is a wise enactment, provided other things are equal. Ultimately we hope to see their working hours even further reduced. But note the immediate result. The number of women and minors employed in textile mills is so large that their hours determine those of men as well. Hence the working week for all is reduced to that time. At previous reductions the manufacturers have maintained the old wage scale, paying the same rate for fifty-six hours as previously for fifty-eight, and for fifty-eight as previously for sixty. But this time they have refused declaring, aparently with reason, that they could not afford it under present conditions. Hence great discontent among factory employees, with strikes and even riot, where there are employed many foreigners of little or no education, with no desire for shorter working hours, but with a very keen desire for every penny they can earn. Ultimately, the old wage scale for the new hours will doubtless be achieved, but in the mean time suffering and want in the very class whom it was intended to benefit. If the consumer would pay one cent more a yard for his cloth, it would probably much more than offset the increased cost, but to make the price that much higher is beyond the power of any individual manufacturer. It is not only the way of the transgressor which is hard. The would-be benefactor also has his troubles.—Christian Register.



Q.—If a man has lived a sinful life, committed murder, and robbed the widows and orphans, etc., and then at the last moment, with his dying breath, confesses his sins, and accepts Christ as his Saviour, will he not immediately go to Heaven and be with the Lord in glory? (W. A.)

Answer.—When we think of the vast numbers of vicious depraved characters, hardened criminals, convicts, etc., who at the solicitation of clergymen and religious devotees have "made their peace with God" at the last moment before being ushered into eternity by electrocution or by dying a natural death, we wonder that intelligent people would for an instant entertain the idea that these had all entered into Heaven! Is it possible that the saintly followers of Jesus, who walked the narrow way of self-sacrifice, suffering and death, and who developed characters of love and kindness and goodness—that these saintly few, for the saints are very few, when they reach Heaven, will find it crowded with the lowest scum of the earth! Much confusion of thought in this connection has resulted from the misapplication of the Saviour's words addressed to the dying thief upon the cross. By placing the comma where it properly belongs, after the word "today," the meaning of the Lord's words is clear. The thief did not go to Heaven, or to Paradise that day; but went into the tomb there to remain until the Kingdom of Christ is set up at the Lord's second coming, when Paradise will be restored. Not only this thief, but the other thief as well, may then receive eternal life on the terms of obedience to the Divine Laws of justice and love. Failing in this, they will die the Second death.

K. OF C. BANQUET

moment a gentleman who has attained national prominence— Hon. David I. Walsh of Clinton.

The mention of the names of Mr. Walsh was the cause for thunderous applause and in giving the same, all present arose and kept the hand clapping resounding within the hall for fully three minutes, under the careful guidance of City Solicitor John W. McAnarney. Mr. Walsh seemed deeply touched by the demonstration and then launched forth into a most eloquent and instructive discourse on "The Ideals of American Citizenship." Mr. Walsh commanded the attention of his auditors for almost an hour and his speech teemed with advice and logic so strong as to seem incapable of dissection He spoke in a forceful manner throughout and laid especial emphasis on many problems that were of vital importance to every citizen of the state. At the conclusion of his remarks, he was given the same deafening applause as had had greeted his exordium.

A soprano solo, entitled "Spring" was then rendered by Mrs. Helen Donovan Kerins, in the same manner that has always characterized her vocal work and her first rendition caused her to elicit such loud applause that she had to accede to another number.

The gathering then spent a few moments with Mr. Erastus Osgood, who entertained all present in most delightful manner, causing them to keep in a continual strain of laughter throughout his number. His work was highly appreciated and he too had to comply to the loud applause by rendering additional selections.

The music for the entire affair was furnished by Joyce's orchestra, and a most charming repertiore of selections, played while the banquet was in progress, added greatly to the lustre of the occasion. A member of the orchestra also furnished accompaniment for the talent.

The banquet and reunion were pronounced the best ever held by the Quincy Council, and much of the success attained was due to the untiring efforts of the committee in charge compesed of Michael T. Sullivan, John Hoaney, Thomas Griffin, Edward D. Barrett, John W. McAnarney, John Caine, Andrew Driscoll and Peter M. Sullivan.

Dig Up $50,000,000 in Fire Ruins

ETTOR TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Alleged Accessory Before the Fact to a Murder

IS NOT ADMITTED TO BAIL

Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 31.—Joseph J. Ettor, leader of the textile strike in this city, was arrested at 11:50 last night, charged with being an accessory before the fact to the murder of Anna Lopizzo, who was shot during the rioting of Monday. There is no bail on this charge. The warrant was issued by Judge Chandler yesterday afternoon.

Ettor was arrested by state police officers under command of Captain Proctor. Ettor was talking in the lobby of a hotel with a representative of the shoe workers of Haverhill and two members of the strike committee when Proctor came in and tapped him on the shoulder.

"I want to see you upstairs a minute, Joe," said the captain. Ettor went upstairs with the officers. The strike leaders followed him. Once in the room other state officers came in. Ettor made no resistance. He was handcuffed to Proctor and taken to the police van, which was waiting outside.

Members of the strike committee immediately were warned of what had occurred. Intense excitement reigned, and in spite of the lateness of the hour angry crowds began to gather about the various headquarters. These were dispersed quickly by the militia, which, warned of what was going to happen, had concentrated their entire forces at strategic points in the city.

"If they want me, they know where they can find me. I will get bailed out," were the words spoken by Ettor at the mass meeting he addressed last evening. Little did those who listened consider the grim prophecy which was contained in them.

It is believed the arrest of Ettor either will break the strike or plunge this city into riot and bloodshed. The charges are based on the speeches Ettor and his lieutenant, Arturo Novanniti, have made at the various meetings.

Intense bitterness exists between the strikers and militia, following the fatal bayoneting yesterday of John Ramy, aged 18, a Syrian, in the foreign quarter at White street, which is a mile from the mill district. A squad of soldiers charged on a small gathering of Syrians, who either did not understand the command to move on or did not take the command seriously. In this charge Ramy was bayoneted. He died at 4 o'clock.

Added to this is the constant irritation created by the troops in their ceaseless efforts to break up the crowds which persisted in gathering at street corners all over the city. The strikers are in an ugly mood.

Men and women jeer at the soldiers who are now pacing practically the entire business and mill sections. Twenty-one companies of militia are splitting up this sentry duty. Squads of six privates and an officer march constantly back and forth down the centre of the streets with fixed bayonets, ready to act as support to the sentry line if necessary. In their quarters are two troops of cavalry awaiting the word of command to gallop to any part of the city when trouble arises.

All but martial law has been declared, but all the force of arms has yet failed to quell the spirit of the strikers, and those who are in close touch with the situation declare that behind the unusual tranquility there lurks the stealthy hand of the anarchistic band from whose inner circle is said to come the mandates which control the movements of the more turbulent strikers.

Anarchists Lead Disorders

These are the real leaders in the disorders, and to seek them out police detectives are straining every effort. Somewhere within the city they are holding their meetings, but so far they have escaped the vigilance of the police.

The situation at present is considered more grave than at any time during the strike and with the increasing signs of hunger among the strikers' families and the enforced idleness of so many workers dire results are expected.

Down at the soup kitchen a great crowd is gathering each day, as the pinch of hunger is felt in an ever widening circle. Men, women and children await the opening of the two meals a day at which the hungrgry strikers get sustenance.

Strikers Stand Firm

The strikers are remaining firm. They say that they do not consider it wise to return to work. They do not favor taking notice of the appeal of Governor Foss.

"The law is not for you. It is for the mill owners. They have the soldiers to protect them and their property, while you will be stabbed if you stop a minute on the streets," is what the leaders told the strikers at their largest meeting yesterday.

The police called upon the newspaper men to make statements as to what Ettor had said at some of his meetings, but the information was refused.

The only shots of the day were fired by militiamen guarding the banks of the Merrimack near the Uswoco mills at 4 o'clock in the morning, when several bullets were discharged in the general direction of a group of men which started to cross the ice above the dam.

It was a semi-humorous near tragedy, for it was discovered later that the suspected attacking party was a gang of laborers for the Lawrence Ice company that desired to begin the annual ice harvest on the river.

Disturbers In Court

"Mike" Sarbig, the Polander who was arrested beause of suspected complicity in the murder by shooting of Anna Lopizzo, was freed from that charge and fined $100 for disturbance and rioting, when arraigned in the police court.

Sarbig was arrested Monday night when Cerspany D reinforced the police who were battling with the crowd at the Everett mills.

The murdered woman was 34 years old. She was a striking textile worker, but was merely acting as an onlooker when a bullet intended for Patrolman Benoit, who was later stabbed, cut short her life.

Louis Ticoni was charged with intimidation and fined $20. He was arrested opposite the police station when two officers saw him snatch a dinner pail from a 7-year-old girl.

James Ash, who dashed into the soldiers of Company F, Eighth regiment, at the Arlington mills and brandished a flag in their faces, was fined $25 for disturbance and $5 for drunkenness.

John Brown, a Polander, who used two heavy tonic bottles in indiscriminately beating the heads of several men, was fined $5.

Foss Receives No Response

Boston, Jan. 31.—Governor Foss has not heard from the mill owners or the striking operatives on his proposed solution of the difficulties.

"I am ready to give my best efforts to the solution of the difficulties in Lawrence, if the mill owners and the operatives will agree to my suggestion that work be resumed for a period of thirty days, and that the wage schedule under the fifty-four-hour bill be the same as under the fifty-six-hour schedule," said the governor last night.

"I am very anxious to have this situation settled. I have not heard officially either from the mill owners or the strikers."

WOMAN ADMITS MURDER

Says She Committed Crime of Which Brother Is Accused

New York, Jan. 31.—With an eleventh hour confession that it was she who stabbed Charles Muldoon, Mrs. Theresa Martin, aged 22 years, brought to a dramatic climax the trial of her brother, James P. McDermott, who was accused of Muldoon's murder.

The victim of the stabbing, who was Mrs. Martin's former sweetheart, was stabbed to death in an East Side saloon on March 17, 1911.

McDermott fled to the west and after being captured in Denver it was alleged that he confessed to the murder. The state was pressing the case against him when the sister unexpectedly appeared and confessed.

The woman collapsed as she left the stand, and her brother went, but said nothing. The lawyers in the case went ahead with perfunctory cumming up arguments.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL BALL.

In a perfect fairyland of flowers, made brilliant by the use of electric lights and arranged by experts from Boston, the Cochato club, Braintree, held its annual ball, Tuesday evening. From the two large chandeliers, large gray baskets were suspended, filled with beautiful large roses and white crepe paper curtains adorned the windows and the stage was most tastefully decorated with holly-hocks and palms. It was a success in every sense of the word. On the stage Mullaly's orchestra played in such a manner as to bring forth volumes of praise for the musicians. Too much cannot be said of the music this orchestra delivered, for assurdely it was of a high order.

The ushers were Horace R. Drinkwater, Harold M. Gage, George H. Hamblett, Moreton Swallow, Herbert E. Curtis, Edward E. Jameson, George S. Anderson, Frank K. Patch, Dr. E. R. Johnson, Walter J. Harrison, Henry R. Holden, George S. Young and Harry L. Patten. As is his usual wont Mr. G. E. Williams, who presents each year the ladies with a souvenir, gave a unique little gold heart, the interior of which consisted of celluloid leaves upon which the order of dances was placed.

On each side of the gaily bedecked stage were the matrons. Those who had the honor and privilege of serving as such were Mrs. Lester C. Bates, beautifully gowned in black lace over white silk, Mrs. Jesse C. Danforth, most tastefully dressed in lovely white lace over blue, Mrs. Gilbert V. Pennock wore a blue beaded chiffon over blue silk, Mrs. Herbert A. Rhoades, black crepe, Mrs. Elisha B. Bird, white silk with black lace and fringe, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, white satin dress with chiffon and beautiful bead trimming.

Each of the matrons were presented with a bouquet of beautiful red, pink, or white roses. The floor was in charge of Frank P. Rhoades. About one hundred couples were present.

A little after ten the banquet was served, T. D. Cook of Boston being the caterer. Delicious grape fruit was served, followed by creamed oysters, after which came lamb chops and vegetables, an appetizing and well prepared tomato salad followed the meat course, after which came the ices, the like of which only can be served by an excellent and experienced caterer.

Dancing was once more enjoyed and continued until one o'clock. Then the merry dancers journeyed home in carriages and automobiles. Crowded special cars carried a large number to Quincy, Neponset and South Braintree. This ball was pronounced one of the most brilliant affairs of the Cochato club.

BURGLARY BUSINESS IS NOT PROFITABLE

Judge Says No Sunday School Boys Are Engaged In It

New York, Jan. 31.—In sentencing George H. Lott, 19, to a term in Elmira for burglary, County Judge Fawcett of Brooklyn said:

"Of all the undesirable professions, that of burglary is the worst. No matter how good a burglar you may be, you will be caught and sent to prison sooner or later. I have seen your friends who wished to speak to me about you, and I find that all attempts to have you go to Sunday school have failed.

"In the five years I have been sitting on this bench I have had 2700 boys before me for sentence and not one of them was an attendant of a Sunday school. Had you gone there I am sure you would not be before me today."

WOMEN'S CLUBS

WHAT THEY ARE DOING AND SEASONS' PLANS

The Girls' Friendly Society meets Friday evening at eight o'clock in the parish rooms at St. Chrysostom's church.

* * *

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. meets Feb. 9, in Association building for its February meeting.

* * *

Feb. 6th is gentlemen's night with The Philergians of Braintree. For entertainment there will be a drama, music by the University trio and refreshments.

* * *

Following its custom of alternating its social and serious meetings, the next meeting of the Young Women's Club on Feb. 10 will be of a serious nature, Miss Sara Parsons, superintendent of nurses at the Massachusetts General Hospital, being the speaker. Feb. 24 the meeting will be given over to charades.

* * *

Fragment society members and the ladies of First church are interested in the church fair to be held March 6th. Sewing bees and meetings are being held frequently as only a month now remains for preparation.

* * *

Members of the Quincy Day Nursery association are arranging for two dances for the benefit of the Nursery, one for children on Saturday afternoon Feb. 10 under the management of Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, and the other an evening party on Friday Feb. 16, under the management of Mrs. E. E. Jameson. Both to be given at Alpha hall.

* * *

A special meeting of Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters will be held Monday evening with Mrs. George Thompson of Arlington street, Wollaston.

* * *

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution will be entertained for its February meetings on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Oakes A. Bridgham, South Braintree. Quincy members will leave City square on the 1.40 P. M. trolley.

* * *

Madam Beale Morey, organist at Bethany church, gave a lecture-recital last week at the monthly meeting of the Greenfield club to an audience which entered with enthusiasm into the fine exposition given by the speaker of her subject, "The Transition Period in Music." The lecture was interspersed with interesting personal reminiscences of the composers of the modern school, and illustrated by vocal and instrumental selections of a high order.

* * *

Owing to the illness of Miss Edith Randall the Junior Friday club did not meet on Monday as scheduled on the program but will meet next Monday when Miss Etta M. Prescott of Spear street will be the hostess and Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield the committee. Dolly Madison will be the afternoon's subject. The club should be interested in the play now at the Hollis Street theatre, Boston, having Dolly Madison as its heroine.

* * *

The February meeting of the Abigail Phillips Quincy Chapter, D. A. R. on the 12th, will be with Mrs. Homer of 136 Warren avenue, and very appropriately Abraham Lincoln will be the subject, the paper being read by Mrs. Mary True Taylor.

* * *

Mrs. Emery L. Crane of Whitney road is to entertain the members of the Katharyn Crane Memorial club for the Feb. 7th meeting of the club.

* * *

Mrs. F. S. Perkins will speak on Mohammedanism and Mrs. A. W. Thompson on Turkey at the meeting on Feb. 6th of the Wollaston Auxiliary of the Woman's Board of Missions.

* * *

Dickens' centennial is to be observed by the Monday club of Weymouth on Feb. 5, when Mrs. Lillian Fuller Jackson of Lynn will read and Miss Adelaide McCarthy will be the soloist.

* * *

"Woman no longer regards marriage as the be-all and end-all of life" said Mrs. Miriam Sells Wagner at the State Federation of Woman's Clubs in New York. "Women no longer take Miss Nancy Price's view of marriage.

" 'Miss Nancy,' said a young girl, 'what kind of a husband would you advise me to choose?'

" 'Well, my dear,' said old Miss Nancy, peering up over the tops of her spectacles, 'If you can't get a bachelor or a widower, I advise you by all means to take a divorced man.' "

On Saturday, Feb. 10, the New England Wheaton Seminary club will meet as usual at Hotel Vendome, Boston at 1.30 for business. At the literary entertainment Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury will read a paper on "The People of Craddock and Fox" and there will be songs by Mrs. Raymond H. Odell. Tea and social hour follow until five o'clock.

* * *

Mrs. Caroline M. Engler a prominent club woman has started an important movement in Lynn to raise $50,000 in pledges toward building a home for Lynn working girls. Mrs. Engler is often spoken of as "the woman of the hour" and she certainly lives up to the name in progressiveness. $75,000 is needed and Mrs. Engler agrees to raise $50,000 of it The need of a girls' home in Lynn has long been talked of among club women and social workers. The necessity of it was shown by the establishment some years ago of the Young Women's Reading and Rest rooms on Market street, a social club for working girls where a limited number may take their luncheons, entertain friends, have sewing and industrial classes and a gymnasium. Miss Myra Foss, matron of the rooms, in her annual reports frequently has called attention to the fact that a large majority of the thousands of working girls employed in Lynn shoe factories are housed in lodging houses, many of which are not the best places for them. Miss Foss takes charge of placing girls in suitable lodging houses, but the field of her work is extremely limited.

* * *

Miss Elsie Ferguson who is playing in the comedy "The First Lady in the Land" at the Hollis Street Theatre, Boston, is to be a guest at the "at home" of the State Society of the Daughters of the Revolution at their rooms in the Colonial building, Boston on Friday afternoon.

* * *

Reapers Circle of Christ Church meets Friday evening with Mrs. Archibald MacLeod, of 2 Graham Terrace, Quincy Point. This is a postponed meeting but it is hoped there will be an even larger meeting on this account.

* * *

GENTLEMEN'S NIGHT.

The third annual gentlemen's night of the Young Women's club was held Saturday evening and was a brilliant success in every way. The business was dispensed with, and Miss Mabel E. Lovejoy, chairman of the Social committee assumed charge of the evening's pleasures for which a very delightful program had been arranged

A play entitled "A Bundle of Matches," was presented. The plot was simple, involving a worldly and domineering mother who wished her son to improve his position in society by marrying one of the five heiresses who were guests at the same hotel in Newport. Harold was in love with Anne, a young girl of good family but in reduced circumstances compelled to be companion to a wealthy lady who is also a guest at the hotel. Harold did his best to carry out his mother's wishes and his funny, abrupt ndeavors to "pop the question" to each one brought forth much laughter and applause. Two of the young ladies aware of his love for Anne determined to set matters right and enlist the co-operation of the other girls so they all refused his advances. They then bring things to a crisis so suddenly that his mother is completely nonplussed, but she finally succumbs after learning that Anne belongs to a good family. The action all took place on the hotel piazza.

Richard Wetherall did more than justice to the part of Harold, and Miss Margaret Lennon proved herself a very domineering woman. Miss Dewhurst as Ruth was as meek as a a Quaker, while Miss Edith Lovejoy acted with the ease and grace of one who sees only the beautiful in everything. Miss Kemp as Katherine, charmed all those who understood with her quotations from Ruskin. Miss Pratt as Isabel with Miss Smith as Wilhemina deserve much credit for the many humorous situations they so cleverly planned. The part of Anne was well interpreted by Miss Lovejoy.

During the acts there were piano solos by Miss Ruth Murray; violin solos by Miss Lucy Curtis of Danvers, and vocal solos by Mrs. William C. Crane.

After the play, came the reception, Miss Marie Bass, president of the club, and Mrs. Eben W. Shepperd were in the receiving line.

Following the reception, dancing was enjoyed, music being furnished by Miss Minnie Packard and Miss Hannah Litchfield. Frappe and cake were served in the tea room under the direction of Miss Mila Bates.

The cast for the play was as follows:—

Mrs. Massenger—Margaret Lennon.
Harold Massenger—Richard Wethgrall.
Ruth Turnpenny—Hazel Dewhurst.
Katherine Otis—Ruth Kemp.
Wilhemina Breitner—Robert Smith.
Isabel Chester—Mabel Pratt.
Editha Beverly—Edith Lovejoy.
Anne Wyllis—Mabel Lovejoy.

The Dramatic class meets Saturday evening at seven o'clock.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the executive board of the Quincy Women's club will be held Thursday morning at ten o'clock at the clubhouse.

Mrs. Mary Alden Ward's current events lecture under the auspices of the Education committee will be given Friday afternoon at three o'clock at the clubhouse.

Mrs. Hazen E. Ricker of 24 Whitney road is to open her house for the next meeting of the Modern Literature class of the Quincy Women's club on Feb. 7th. Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney's subject will be John Galsworthy, which should prove interesting.

All those who have not subscribed to the Endowment or General Federation Fund and wish to do so may send their subscription to Mrs. Walter S. Pinkham or Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney, who hope club members will contribute something to the Fund, if only ten cents as every little counts.

The next club meeting will be on February 13, and will be dramatic afternoon and held at Quincy Music hall. An old English comedy "The Honeymoon" will be given with a fine cast. Guest privileges are unlimited and a full hall is assured.

Mrs. W. W. Whitcher of the Legislature committee is arranging for a class in parliamentary law with Mrs. Electa M. Sherman of Boston as the teacher. A preliminary meeting to outline the work and talk over the plan for regular meetings for the rest of the season will be held at the clubhouse, Feb. 20, at 10.30 A. M. Everyone at all interested is cordially invited to attend this meeting whether they care to join the class or not.

STATE FEDERATION.

By invitation of the Women's club of Park-street church, Boston, the midwinter meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs will be held there on Thursday, February 8, at 10 a. m. At the morning session the legislative department will present legislative measures for the endorsement of the federation. The address will be by Professor Benjamin R. Andrews, of Columbia university, on "The Trend of Modern Education." In the afternoon Miss Margaret E. Henry, of Maryville college, will speak on "Educational Work Among the Southern Mountaineers," and Hon. Philander B. Claxton, commissioner of education for the United States, on "The Home and the School."

AROUSING MOTHERS.

The National Congress of Mothers has inaugurated an American child welfare campaign with the purpose of arousing the whole country to a sense of duty and responsibility to childhood. It works on the theory that to surround the childhood of the whole world with loving, wise care in the impressionable years of life will develop a higher type of citizenship in health, morals, and efficiency. The congress asks in this campaign the co-operation of every governor, mayor, father, and mother, every church, school, and press, and every organization, whatever its purpose, Mrs. David O. Mears, the first vice-president of the National Congress of Mothers, has been appointed chairman of the movement. Mrs. Mears, formerly of New York, has come to Massachusetts to live. Her summer home is at Essex. During the winter she is at the Coolidge, Brookline.

The congress plans to raise $1,000,000 for the welfare of future generations. The Massachusetts branch plans to send $50,000 as its share. The convention of the Massachusetts branch will be held at Lynn February 15, 16, and 17. The school committee has given the use of the new Classical high school hall for the convention. The Parent-Teachers' association of the Chatham-street school, which met last week, made plans for entertaining the state congress during the convention.

The board of managers of the Massachusetts branch has been holding meetings Saturdays. It did not seem consistent however, for members to leave their homes upon the only day in the week which belongs to mothers and children, so it was voted to hold business meetings on some other day. The Massachusetts commission for the blind will send lecturer and slides to any parent-teacher organization free. It is desirous of educating the public regarding the cause of blindness.

CAR STEP REFORM.

The Hyde Park Gazette says: "The Car-step Reform committee of the Current Events club has won an important step in its campaign, as it has got the State Board of Railroad commissioners to give a public hearing on the matter The hearing will be held on Friday, February 9, at the office of the commissioners, 20 Beacon street, Boston, at 10.30 a. m. The committee expects some of the members of the Hyde Park Business Men's asso iation will be present and assist in presenting the case to the commissioner, and also members of women's clubs from other towns and cities.

The committee has received many letters from all parts of the country, commending it for the work it has undertaken and expressing willingness to assist in whatever way it may be found desirable, and the members are very much encouraged.

The Quincy Women's club which has endorsed the movement will be represented at the hearing by Mrs. Frederick H. Bishop, Mrs. Chandler W. Smith and Mrs. Martha C. Aitkin.

—Some men will walk around a block says the Hyde Park Gazette to avoid meeting the local editor and the necessity of thanking him for the $3 free notice he gave them last week. And then again some men will walk the length of Main street to gain the privilege of telling the local editor what they think of him for not printing the personal item they did not send to him. And the local editor grins delightedly in both cases.

BRIEFS

The Quincy Charitable society holds its regular monthly meeting for February on Thursday afternoon.

The annual reunion and luncheon of the Isles of Shoals summer meetings association will be held Saturday, Feb. 10 at the South Congregational church, Boston.

Pickwick club is to have a Dickens' costume party at its next meeting on Wednesday evening, Feb. 7 with Miss Katherine Stegmaier as the hostess and Miss Elizabeth Hubbard and Miss Marjorie Fay as the committee in charge.

CHICAGO AGAINST THE HOBBLE

The oblivion at hand for the hobble skirt, say the Chicago merchants, will boom the sale of dress goods, double and treble the sales of recent months when scant skirts slashed them and brought about a dullness felt by the most enterprising manufacturers For the tube skirt is to give way to a loose and flowing garment of Grecian cut. "This news," said the head of a big dry goods house, "should be well received by textile manufacturers and dealers throughout the country generally. At the present time it requires only about 40 per cent material to make the average gown as compared with the gown of a few years ago. This means that retailers must sell two and a half times the number of people to do the same volume of business. The present severe lines also have made a marked reduction in the sales of dress trimmings, linings, interlinings, insertions and such like, many of which are so dear to the female heart and lend individuality not possible with tailor-made or straight-lined gowns." There is conspiracy to drive out the "hobble," now seen as an angel incognito trying to reduce the costs of living atan unexepected point, as witness the frank words of another merchant: "Large buyers and manufacturers generally are doing everything they possibly can to further the new tendency so that dress goods and accessories will again come into their own, thus making it possible for women to more strongly emphasize their personal individualities in dress."

SHOOTS WIFE, FIRES HOUSE

Crazed Man Holds Off Posse Until He Is Out of Bullets

Collinsville, Conn., Jan. 31.—In an insane frenzy, John Kenefic shot his wife in the arm and side with a rifle, set fire to the house of his father-in-law, Arthur Johnson, where his wife was living, and held a posse of five men at bay with his rifle until his ammunition gave out. He was then overpowered and locked up.

Kenefic and his wife were married over a year ago, but owing to his queer actions she had lived with him but a few months. He had been working in Hartford and came to town to see his wife and 2-months-old baby. He was not permitted to enter the house, however. Later he returned armed with a rifle, gained access to the house, and created terror until he was arrested.

FOR JOB PAYING $7500

Congressional Campaign Costs About $10,000, Says Lorimer

Washington, Jan. 31.—With a vivid description of his part in distributing offices in his section of Chicago, Senator Lorimer concluded his testimony before the senate Lorimer investigating committee.

Senator Kern had insisted that Lorimer tell of the "spoils system" of political organization in Illinois.

Lorimer estimated that a candidate for congress could conduct a fairly lively campaign with brass bands, advertising and mailing for $10,000. The salary of congressmen is now $7500 and was formerly $5000.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

Hip Yokes Are Used On New Gowns.

New Blouses of Extremely Thin Material.

Evidently there is no intention on the part of dressmakers to widen skirts. They have made some changes that intimate drapery which means the buying of a little more material and the giving of an appearance of fullness to the skirt, but it is seeming, and not real, this fullness.

No one can speak with authority in January as to Spring styles, but if we continue the habit of the past in wearing the fashions in Spring that were invented in Paris in Winter then there will be little change, indeed, in the new clothes.

From time to time during this month I have seen new gowns made of thin materials and designed for the early Southern exodus, and advanced by the wholesale trade to those who must have quantities of ready-made garments on hand in February, and they are all from the same models that we have had with us during the Winter.

There are slight changes, but nothing important. Mme. Paquin has sent over a gown which she has designed for wear at the Riviera, and it is a convincing proof that so far she hasn't thought of anything strictly novel. The material used is a changeable green taffeta—and there is no doubt that we will be flooded with this fabric at the beginning of the warm weather—and the skirt has a hip yoke. Now this is new.

The hip yoke is a return. Every few months the dressmakers have tried it, and possibly it will become popular this year. It is distinctly Oriental, which indicates that we are not going to get far away from the Byzantine glamor; we will still hear the East a-calling.

The slim, narrow skirt is so well liked, despite the jibes and jests hurled at it, that there is every intention on the part of the public of keeping it in style through Spring and Summer at least; the trimming which will be added to it will not really increase its rotundity, but merely accentuate its slimness.

Every one knows about the fight that is going on by the mill people abroad to have the dressmakers increase the width of the skirts in the interests of the thousands of men, women, and children who have been out of employment for a year; and whether or not it will win, time only can tell. Starvation is an ugly word, and it is daily used by the French and English papers in connection with the condition of the clothworkers, who have no jobs and no chance of getting any while the fashion for narrow clothes prevails; much is said against the dressmakers for not compelling full skirts and long coats, and a good deal of the blame is laid at their door.

And yet upon this subject no one seems to take the opposite side. Here is a day of such high living that millions are worried over the mere fact of getting a comfortable existence on this planet, and the price of clothes is no small matter. Now, there are thousands upon thousands of women who buy the materials for their clothes at the shops, and make them at home, or with the aid of a seamstress. What about these women being immensely benefited by the continuance of narrow skirts and slim coats? Instead of buying fourteen yards of single width material to make a gown they need only buy seven or eight yards; and instead of eight yeards of double width material they need only buy four yards.

And because linings have gone out of fashion they can eliminate this part of the expense entirely, and because petticoats are not popular they can cut out not only the money for white skirts, but the laundering of them. The simple little tight, short underslip of inexpensive silk or pongee, that now does duty under every gown, is a mere trifle in cost compared to the dozen petticoats that a woman used to own.

So, as against the non-employment of a few thousand people, there is the cutting down in the price of home-made clothes for many thousands of women in Europe and America. The dressmakers, and they are legion also profit by the lack of cloth used in a gown, because they have not lowered their prices, making the contention that the public must pay for their art in drapery, their skill in cutting, their talent for designing and their genius for fitting.

As a commercial proposition, let the good work of narrow skirts and slim coats and a few yards of material to a gown go on.

Many of the new blouses are so excessively thin that they can rightly have the adjective "pneumonia" applied to them. This idea has been evolved to lighten the effect above the waist and it has been quite successful. One of the new models which has been extensively copied is of white or flesh color or the palest lavender with a bib of chiffon, plain or embroidered, to match the color of the skirt.

This bib runs from the waist to the neck, back and front is cut out half low and usually finished with a heavy line of loose feather stitching in silk floss. When it is too sombre even then, touches of scarlet or willow green are put underneath the bib in the form of velvet buttons which are made without molds, or cut-out pieces of satin or velvet in the shape of flowers. These are applied to the pale colored chiffon beneath and are distinctly visible through the dark chiffon above.

The kimono blouse has not been in high favor for the last month, although the foundation may be cut by this pattern and the drapery used to obliterate the line. Everything these days has a cape-like effect over the top of the arms, and it hides the sleeve without an armhole. The latter is no longer cut in mandarin shape, with its perplexing dip down toward the waist which makes it difficult to raise the arms; it fits closely in to the arm itself and one has no trouble in undertaking any kind of exercise.

It is quite the fashion in adopting this scheme of a kimono foundation and a fichu drapery to use the light colored chiffon for the former. Even white is not objectionable, and as it is unlined with anything thicker than another layer of chiffon it is not available for those who must wear thick clothes.

If one wants to follow this new fashion in transforming a plain kimono blouse of other days it is easy to do it by getting enough chiffon or thick tulle in an opposing color, or even in the same, and draping it in two wide revers over the shoulders, which end at the waist, back and front.

Down the middle of the front and back may be run a tiny double ruching of white or cream lace held down with small covered velvet buttons. If one likes the bib effect, then it can be made in any harmonious color and embroidered or left quite plain with a row of colored buttons at the top.

Whatever the choice of blouse, it is certainly true that there are few compromises between what is strictly tailor-made and what is transparent and dressy. By tailor-made one means those American blouses which are fastened down the front, are made of soft satin or chiffon cloth to match the skirt or laid in flat tucks of varying sizes from neck to waist and have long small sleeves which fit snugly at the hand and are finished with an inch-wide plaiting of white or cream net.

There is always a frill down the front which has a hemstitched edge, and the fastening is invisible. The stock may be of lace to match the wrist ruffles, but some of the ultra smart ones have the satin or chiffon cloth repeated at the neck and made into a high folded stock, which is finished with a flat white ruching or a plaited ruching.

This is the kind of blouse that well-dressed women pick up for the morning and for all informal hours, and then go in for the filmy, transparent affair that gives the appearance of being white or flesh-colored, with an overtrimming of another transparent fabric to match the skirt.

As for the white wash blouse, it is always worn and in good taste if it is plainly made and does not attempt too much ornamentation in the way of needlework. There are smart ones of thin lace net over flesh-colored silk or chiffon, but these, while worn in the morning, are not quite as informal as the ones of sheer muslin.

The latter is in its best form when following the simplicity of the chiffon cloth ones; that is, when it is laid in flat, irregular tucks, fastened down the front with a side frill that is moderate in size and is not pulled out to the shoulders in a grotesque manner that has prevailed since Summer.

The only objection to a white wash blouse is that it does not look smart when the coat is removed at any gathering, especially with the high-waisted skirts that are now in fashion. They demand a blouse that carries out their own color, otherwise the line of figure is awkwardly divided.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

MAY REACH AS FAR AS WILSON

Changes In Agricultural Department Are Expected

Washington, Jan. 31.—Dr. Frederick L. Dunlap, associate chemist of the bureau of chemistry and member of the board of food and drug inspection, is about to resign, if rumors coming from excellent sources are correct.

It is understood that this step will be the first of a series of resignations and changes in the department of agriculture, all growing out of the recommendations of the Moss investigation committee, made public last week. It was recalled that this report, although calm and judicial in tone, nevertheless struck at the very root of the difficulties daily encountered by Dr. Wiley in the enforcement of the food and drugs act. The Moss committee, referring to the fact that Wiley considered Dunlap to be his superior officer, said:

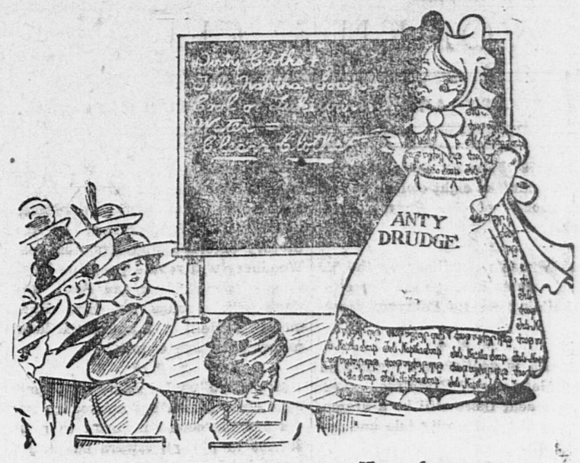
"The vesting of two officials within the same bureau with so nearly independent and co-ordinate powers cannot be conducive to harmonious relationship or unity of purpose and action. Congress created the office of chief of bureau and vested it with the authority over the bureau which that rank usually implies. Any office which is created within the bureau by executive order should be essentially inferior to that of the chief.

"The creation of an associate with no administrative duties except to consider all correspondence, to overlook such investigations as the associate may see fit, and to undertake such travel in the United States as the associate officer may desire, with the privilege of reporting directly to the secretary rather than through the chief, his superior officer, presents, in the opinion of your committee, a remarkable exercise of executive discretion.

"It is the opinion of your committee that discipline will not be restored, the highest efficiency secured, and economy in administration best promoted until this anomalous condition is rectified by clearly defining the duties of associate chemist."

Since the publication of this report, it is learned, high officials in the department of agriculture have been pondering it well and thoroughly. The first tangible result of the committee's work will be the resignation or transfer to another branch of the service of Dunlap.

The administration does not desire any more "Wiley controversy" if it can be avoided, and every effort will be made to do things as quietly as possible. Nevertheless the essential end will be attained, and the public will not be surprised if the resignations and transfers do not stop until they reach Secretary Wilson himself.



Anty Drudge as a Teacher.

Anty Drudge—"There is a sum that is as true as 2+2=4."
Mrs. Savework—"But you have forgotten to subtract several things, professor."
Anty Drudge—"I know, my dear. When you use Fels-Naptha soap you can subtract hot fires, hard rubbing, yellow-white clothes, steam-soaked homes on Mondays, sickness resulting from hot water washing and many other disagreeable things."

Your clothes—your health—your strength—so much depends upon the soap you use, that you can't be too careful in choosing.

If you do the wash in the old-fashioned way—with soaps that require boiling water and much hard rubbing, you can't blame the clothes for wearing out so quickly.

And it's natural that the exertion should tax your strength and that the steaming soapy suds should "stuff up" your head and ruin your skin.

But Fels-Naptha requires no boiling water, no hard rubbing.

And it contains nothing harmful to the finest fabrics.

It is the one soap that will make your clothes look best and wear longest, and that will get you through a whole day's wash before noon.

Fels-Naptha is a wonder-worker at housecleaning—makes the floors white and brightens up the paints.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper. Use any time of year.

FRECKLES

By Gene Stratton-Porter

SYNOPSIS.

Freckles, a homeless boy, is hired by Lois McLean to guard the expensive timber in the Limberlost from timber thieves.

Freckles does his work faithfully, makes friends with the birds and yearns to know more about nature. He lives with Mr. and Mrs. Duncan.

He resolves to get books and educate himself. He becomes interested in a huge pair of vultures and calls his bird friends his "chickens."

Some of the trees he is guarding are worth $1,000 each. Freckles' books arrive. He receives a call from Wessner.

Wessner attempts to bribe Freckles to betray his trust, and Freckles whips him. McLean overhears them and witnesses the fight.

Freckles' honesty saves a precious tree. He finds the nest of the vultures and is visited by a beautiful young girl.

She calls Freckles McLean's son. Freckles calls her "the angel" and helps the Bird Woman in taking photographs. McLean promises to adopt Freckles.

He must follow the Bird Woman's plan and meet them at the carriage, but if they really did mean to try to help him he must not allow it. Let the angel try to handle a revolver in his defense? Never! Not for all the trees in the Limberlost! She might shoot herself. She might forget to watch sharply and run across a snake that was not particularly well behaved that morning. Freckles permitted himself a grim smile as he went speeding on.

When he reached the carriage the Bird Woman and the angel had the horse hitched to it, the outfit packed and were calmly waiting.

"Give babe one of your revolvers, quick!" said the Bird Woman. "We will all creep up until we are in fair range. The underbrush is so thick and they are so hard at work that they will never notice us, if we don't make a noise. You will fire first, then I will pop in from my direction, and then you, baby, and shoot quite high, or else very low. We mustn't really hit them."

Freckles protested.

The Bird Woman chose the middle distance, and for a last time cautioned the angel to lie down and shoot high, as she moved away.

Freckles' revolver spat fire. Lead spanged on steel. The saw handle flew from Wessner's hand and he reeled with the jar of the shock. Black Jack straightened, uttering a fearful oath. His hat was taken off by a shot from the northeast. The angel had not waited for the Bird Woman, and her shot could scarcely have been called high. At almost the same instant the third shot whistled in from the east. Black Jack sprang into the air with a yell of complete panic, for it ripped a heel from his boot.

Freckles emptied his second chamber and the dirt spattered over Wessner. Shots poured in thick and fast. Without even reaching for a weapon, both men broke for the east road in great, leaping bounds, while leaden slugs sung and hissed about them in deadly earnest.

Freckles was trimming his corners as closely as he dared, but if the angel did not really intend to hit, she was shaving the limit in a scandalous manner.

CHAPTER X.

FRECKLES WINS HONOR.

WHEN the men reached the trail Freckles yelled at the top of his voice: "Head them off on the south, boys! Fire from the south!"

As he had hoped, Jack and Wessner instantly plunged into the swale. A storm of lead spattered after them. They crossed the swale, running low, with not even one backward glance, and entered the wood beyond the corduroy.

Then the little party gathered at the tree.

"I'd better fix this saw so they can't be using it if they come back," said Freckles, taking out his hatchet and making the saw teeth fly.

"Now we have to get out of here without being seen," said the Bird Woman to the angel. "It won't do for me to make enemies of these men, for I am liable to meet them about my work any day."

"You can do it by driving straight north on this road," said Freckles. "I will go ahead and cut the wires for you. The swale is almost dry. You will only be sinking a few inches at most. In a few rods you will strike a cornfield. I will take down the fence and let you into that. Follow the furrows and drive straight across it until you come to the other side. Be follow ing the fence south until you come to a road through the woods east of it. Then take that road and follow east until you reach the pike. You will come out on your way back to town and two miles north of anywhere they are likely to be. Don't for your lives ever let it out that you did this," he earnestly cautioned, "for it's black enemies you would be making."

Freckles snapped the wires, and they drove through. The angel leaned from the carriage and held out his revolver. Freckles looked into her face and lost his breath. Her eyes were black and her face a deeper rose than usual. He felt that his own was white as death.

"Did I shoot high enough" she asked sweetly. "I really forgot about lying down."

Freckles winced. Did the child know how near she had gone? Surely she could not. Or was it possible that she had the nerve and skill to fire like that purposely?

"I will send the first reliable man I meet for McLean," said the Bird Woman, gathering up the lines. "If I don't meet one when we reach town we will send a messenger. If it wasn't for having the gang see me I would go myself."

Round eyed, Freckles watched the Bird Woman and the angel drive away. After they were out of sight and he was safely hidden among the branches of a small tree, he remembered that he had neither thanked them nor said goodby. Would the Bird Woman and the angel come again? No other women that he had ever known would. But were they like any other women he had ever known? He thought of the Bird Woman's unruffled face and the angel's revolver practice, and presently he was not so sure that they would not come back.

What were the people out in the big world like? His knowledge was so very limited. There had been people at the home who exchanged a stilted, perfunctory sort of kindness for their salaries. The visitors that called on receiving days he had divided into three classes—the kind that came with a tear in the eye and hypocrisy in every feature of their faces; the kind that came in silks and jewels and handed out to those poor, little mother-hungry souls worn toys that their children no longer cared for, in exactly the same spirit in which they pitched biscuits to the monkeys at the "zoo," and for the same reason—to see how they would take them and be amused by what they would do; and the third class, that he considered real people, who made him feel they cared that he was there and would have been glad to see him elsewhere.

Now, here was another class that had met him as a son and brother. With them he could for the only time in his life forget the lost hand that every day tortured him with a new pang. What sort of people were they and where did they belong among the classes he knew? He had to give it up because he had never known others like them, but how he loved them!

Out in the world where he was soon going were the majority like them or were they of the hypocrite and bun throwing classes? Freckles did not know, but he reached the ultimate conclusion that people like the Bird Woman, the angel, McLean and the Duncans were very rare, hence their exceeding preciousness.

He had forgotten the excitement of the morning and the passing of time when distant voices aroused him, and he softly lifted his head. Nearer and nearer they came, and as the heavy wagons rumbled down the east trail he could hear them plainly. The gang were shouting themselves hoarse for the Limberlost guard. Freckles didn't feel that he deserved it. He would have given much to be able to go out to the men and explain how it was, but only to McLean could he tell his story.

At the sight of Freckles the men threw up their hats and cheered. McLean shook hands with him warmly, but big Duncan gathered him into his arms and hugged him like a bear and choked over a few words of praise. The gang drove in and finished felling the tree.

AFFECTS MANY ORDERS

Royal Arcanum Asks For Millions in State Treasurer's Hands

Boston, Jan. 31.—The Royal Arcanum, through its supreme council, has brought a friendly suit for nearly $6,000,000 against State Treasurer Stevens. The order, through its supreme council, seeks its funds now in the custody of the treasurer.

The action was brought in the supreme judicial court, and the result will be of interest, not only to the Arcanum, but to every fraternal order doing business in Massachusetts.

The suit is based on the new fraternal law, which the council contends authorizes it to become custodian of its own funds. Stevens is in doubt whether it does or not, hence the suit.

TO SUBDUE THE YAQUIS

Task to Be Undertaken by Viljoen, the Former Boer Leader

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 31.—Advices from Guayamas, Mex., say that General Viljoen, the former Boer leader, has been authorized by President Madero to begin a campaign to subdue the lawless element of the Yaqui Indian tribes.

Several peaceful Yaqui chiefs have offered their services to the government and a battalion of Pima Indians also will be formed for the campaign. A majority of the Yaquis have refused to accede to the government's peace terms.

FOR COMPANY'S OWN BENEFIT

Steel Pension System Is Thus Regarded by Brandeis

IS DENOUNCED AS PEONAGE

Employes Bribed to Avoid Trade Unions—Bonus Goes Not to Workers In Mills, but to Managers—Reed Replies to Charges, Giving Boston Man Credit For Plans For Relief of Corporation's Workmen

Washington, Jan. 31.—The pension fund of the United States Steel corporation was an object of sharp attack from Louis D. Brandeis, who appeared again before the Stanley steel committee.

"Is this fund something to rejoice at or regret?" asked Brandeis. "At first thought provision for old age and death seems an admirable thing. But this pension fund of the steel corporation is not one to which these men may look forward with hope, but another of these chains which rivet them to their employers.

"This plan does not provide that a man entering the employ of the corporation acquires a right to a pension. If his conduct is such as may commend himself to the judgment and discretion of officers of the company he obtains a pension. But this means that as a man grows older, he sees himself bound not to do anything which seem to the officers above him contrary to the 'best interests' of the company.

"When, therefore, you find this company committed also to a policy of demolishing trades unions, you find that your men are bribed to abjure trade unionism, to abjure an inalienable right to collective bargaining. This scheme offers to the laboring man something apparently for his benefit, but which cripples his freedom. I call it pension peonage."

Brandeis then explained to the committee the pension system in operation on the Boston and Maine railroad. Coming to the bonus system, Brandeis pointed out that the bonus is given not to the men who work in the mills so much as to the managers who are deemed deserving.

"In one plant," said Brandeis, "out of 1000 employes, only seventy-two received a bonus, and the majority of these were foremen, managers, and so forth. You therefore give to the foremen a special incentive to drive the men."

That 65 percent of the employes of the steel corporation of the Pittsburgh district earn less than the actual cost of subsistence of the average American family in Pittsburgh was a calculation made by Brandeis.

Brandeis declared that in ten years the steel corporation had taken from the American people $650,000,000 in excess of a liberal profit on its investment. "This enormous profit," he said, "has been used to grind down its employes to the misery of their present condition."

When Brandeis had finished Attorney Reed for the steel corporation announced that a relief of its workmen was about to be undertaken. "A committee of stockholders is working on a plan to correct conditions which have been criticised," he said.

"May I ask whether that was prompted by the company or a stockholder?" interrupted Brandeis.

"It was proposed by Charles M. Cabot of Boston," answered Reed. The committee then adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman.

WOULD ENLIST, AS FOR WAR

Abbott Says Roosevelt Would Accept Presidential Nomination

Trenton, Jan. 31.—That Theodore Roosevelt would no more decline to take the nomination for president than he would decline to enlist if needed, in time of war, is the opinion of Lawrence F. Abbott, one of the the editors of The Outlook, contained in a letter received here by Edward C. Stokes, former governor of New Jersey.

The letter received by Stokes followed a visit he made to The Outlook office, when he had an interview with Roosevelt and suggested that he write a letter or have one written defining his position relative to the presidency.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Young Man Accused of Stealing Affections of Stepmother

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Eva M. Bryant, 39 years old, and her 23-year-old stepson, Warrant H. Bryant, Jr., were arrested here on complaint of the husband and father, W. H. Bryant, Sr., manager of a sanatorium in Portland, Me.

The elder Bryant charges the son with taking his place in the stepmother's affections.

Arlington, Mass., Jan. 31.—Sixty-nine children of the Cutter school in Arlington were vaccinated as a result of the smallpox cases found in the town. One of the victims of smallpox was a pupil at the Cutter school. The school has been closed.

BERT H. FRANKLIN.

Charged With Attempting to Bribe a McNamara Juror.

INDICTMENT OF DARROW

Report That Action Resulted From Confession of Franklin

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 31.—Whether the indictments returned against Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago attorney, charging bribery of a juror and veniremen, by the county grand jury, was based on an alleged confession to that body by Bert H. Franklin, former McNamara defense detective, charged with jury bribing, probably will not be definitely known until the case comes to trial.

Neither the assistant district attorneys, who have had charge of the investigation before the grand jury, nor Franklin himself, would make any denial of the rumor that Franklin told all he knew of the alleged jury bribery to the grand jury.

Darrow's own attitude indicates that he had reason to believe an indictment would be returned against him, as several days ago he employed Attorney Rogers to represent him.

MONEY TRUST WILL BE INVESTIGATED

Forces Which Tried to Prevent It Are Overcome

Washington, Jan. 31.—The money trust will be investigated. The forces that for weeks have been working among the Democrats of the house of representatives to prevent an investigation have been overcome. Even those Democratic members who have openly opposed an investigation say that the caucus undoubtedly will vote for an inquiry.

There is still a good deal of friction among the more influential Democratic representatives over the scope of the proposed investigation. Those Democrats who at first vigorously opposed any investigation at all are now taking the ground that the committee entrusted with the inquiry shall be instructed to proceed in a cautious and conservative way. Apparently the temper of the house will not permit it to accept this view.

BRIEFS

Th alarm from Box 17 at 3.15 Tuesday afternoon was for a slight fire in the cottage of William C. Hammond on Bay View avenue, Houghs Neck. The fire was caused by an overheated stove. The loss was slight.

More snow, and the indications are that there will be a lot of it. The temperature moderated considerable during the night and morning. It was just right for a snow storm of the old fashioned kind.

According to the report of the City Clerk that department turned into the city treasury during the year 1911, for license fees, etc., the sum of $2,695.45. During the year 469 deaths were recorded and 366 marriaes. The birth census is now being taken.

HARDNESS OF A DIAMOND.

Pressed Between Steel Rails the Gem Would Sink Into the Metal.

It is difficult for one not intimately acquainted with the brilliant and sparkling gems to realize just how hard a diamond may be.

A carpenter runs his plane over a piece of wood and out come the pretty curly shavings. Now, if a plane is made with a diamond blade instead of a steel blade and the blade is set just right the plane when run over glass will turn out fine, thinnest shavings something like those made by a plane on wood.

This gives some idea of the wonderful hardness of a diamond, yet there is something harder than a diamond. It is another diamond or even the same diamond, for a diamond may be extra hard in one part and not so hard as it ought to be in another part.

The Kohinoor diamond was in places so hard the cutters feared they might have to give up work on it. Other parts of the stone were soft, if you could say any diamond is soft.

If a diamond is placed between the ends of two heaviest steel railroad rails and then by hydraulic pressure the rails are forced closer together and then still closer until they touch, the diamond will sink right into the steel almost like a key forced into beeswax.—New York Press.

SPORTING "DOPE"

By B. A.

Don't Knock, Just Boost.—B. A.

With yesterday's victory, which by the way was the seventh straight win this season, Quincy High became the undisputed title holder of the championship of Eastern Massachusetts.

It was a gruelling struggle, but Coach Staff knew exactly what was wanting and the local lads lost no time in carrying out his mandates in the second half.

It was a hard game for Finlay, because his record of 32 baskets had been heralded so far and wide that his Reading opponents covered him at all stages and in justice to Gibbons, the plucky left back of the opposing quintet, it must be said that the Quincy star failed to shoot with his usual accuracy.

It was the first real hard game that Quincy High has experienced this season.

But what do you think of Rourke securing eleven out of the twelve tries for goals from fouls? Some feat, eh?

With a victory over the Fr. Mathew team last evening, it now looks as if the Quincy A. A. basketball team is firmly launched in first place in the Greater Boston Basketball league.

The next boxing tournament for the Quincy A. A. is scheduled for the evening of February 20th.

I see that Walter Lonergan, formmerly Capt. of the Quincy "Champs" of the Old Colony league, has been "farmed" out to Jersey City, but it is highly improbable that he will go there inasmuch as he can do better nearer home.

"Billy" Manning was an interested spectator at the game yesterday and was loud in his praise of the work of the local players. The former Quincy high star recently underwent a serious operation and his many friends will be pleased to hear that he is convalescing rapidly.

Our track athletes Phelan, Prout, Bruce and Marceau have been doing splendid work of late and have done much in enabling the "Granite City" to receive ample representation in that respective branch of athletics.

Not His Fault.

"Before we were married," the poet's wife complained, "you often said that you would never be able to do your best work until you could sit and hold my hand while you courted the muse."

"Yes, I know I said it."

"And now you can't do anything if I even happen to be in the same room with you."

"Well, am I to blame because holding your hand is like clinging to a bunch of celery? Get the old tingle back into your hand and I'll agree to make the lyre hum."—Chicago Record-Herald.

QUINCY HIGH HAS CLOSE CALL

Brilliant Plays Turn Seeming Defeat into Victory

QUINCY A. A. GAME

Almost within the face of seeming defeat, at a time when the ardor of the rooters in attendance had become dampened to a degree beyond expression, when the acute and sensitive nerves of the followers of Quincy High had become touched with fear lest a seventh straight victory of the season might not be forthcoming, the members of the High school basketball team exhibited their stamina to complete satisfaction and changed a lead of 9 to 2 obtained by the members of the Reading High quintet into a 14 to 9 defeat, in the game played Tuesday afternoon in the gymnasium of the local school, between both aforementioned contingencies.

It was without doubt the most strenuous game seen in the local gymnasium this season, and as was predicted, the Reading High team proved to be the toughest proposition the Granite City boys have yet encountered. The game was hard fought from start to finish and some of the most spectacular plays of the season were contributed. It was only in the last few minutes of play that the local boys displayed their real basketball ability, but even then it was productive of the desired effects, the result of which enabled them to wrest a victory, the memory of which will be treasured up for many a day to come in the minds of those who chanced to be present.

The work of Finlay, in the previous contest was evidently known to the visitors, for the local star was covered at every point of the game, and in every attempt to show he found one of the opposing players covering him in a most gruelling manner. At the start of the game, the outlook for a victory for Captain Chapman's team did look rather dubious. Rather dubious? Ah, it were much better to say exceptionally dubious, for to be frank in the matter, the Reading players outclassed the local boys in the early stages of the struggle. At the close of the first half, the score stood 7 to 2, with Reading in possession of the long end. To make matters worse, the second half had just started when the visitors made another basket and seemed to be on the high road to victory.

The score was now 9 to 2 in favor of Reading, and though defeat was threatening the local players, they lost no time in showing themselves equal to the occasion, by emerging to the fore in the last five minutes of play. The backs and forwards were seen to exert themselves to their utmost and it was noticed at the same time that the Reading team was losing the form that had characterized its playing in the first half, with the result that it gradually weakened and was prevented from caging any more baskets.

Of course the direct credit for the victory must be given to Captain Chapman, Finlay and Trask, the players who obtained the baskets desired at the most crucial moments, yet the pass work of both Holmes and Johnson was highly commendable and was greatly instrumental in enabling the local boys to emerge in triumph.

The visitors acquired the lead in the first half on baskets from the floor by Geary, Gibbons and Hartshorn and a successful goal from foul made by the latter. Chapman secured the first two points for Quincy high on free tries and up to this moment the local players seemed unable to locate the baskets in any way. The first half was spent mostly in pass work and Reading seemed to be master of the situation at all times.

In the second period, spectacular playing was greatly in evidence. Gibbons opened with a goal from the floor putting the visitors ahead with a substantial lead, but the enthusiasm of those present was aroused to its greatest intensity when Finlay tossed the ball into the net, in a manner most sensational, thus making the fourth point for the Granite City players.

During the next five minutes there was no scoring. Many chances to shoot were given the forwards, but on no occasion was a basket made. A long pass was forwarded from Johnson to Trask, who placed the ball through the loop hole from a most difficult angle. A short time after Captain Chapman received the ball almost on the outside boundary line and lost no time in making a basket; thereby contributing the most sensational play of the game. At this juncture Reading High was leading the local boys by a score of 9 to 8.

Three minutes remained before the whistle was to announce the close of the game. Chapman placed his team in the lead by making another basket from a difficult angle and Star Finlay and Trask put the local boys in the lead beyond the least possible doubt when he brought the score up to 14 points for Quincy High, despite the fact that they were being closely guarded by their opposing players. The entire Quincy team must be highly praised for the work displayed at opportune moments and every player on it should come in for his full share of commendation. For the visitors the playing of Gibbons, Hartshorn and Geary was highly conspicuous.

Haverhill High, the champion basketball quintet of Northern Massachusetts will be the attraction in the local gymnasium next Friday afternoon and as the game gives every evidence of being the best of the season, a record breaking crowd should be in attendance.

QUINCY A. A. GAME.

Members of the Quincy A. A. basketball team made their hold on first position in the Greater Boston Basketball league firmer than ever Tuesday evening when they defeated the Fr. Matthew A. A. at Cambridge, the score being 26 to 20. The game was hotly contestedf rom start to finish, and many spectacular players marked the struggle.

The struggle was most exciting throughout, and it was only in the last few minutes of play that the local team was enabled to return home in triumph. The sensational feature of the game was the securing of O'Rourke, the plucky right forward, of eleven goal from fouls. This was a remarkable performance, when it is considered that he only missed one of the free tries allotted him.

Boyle and the Duggan brothers also played well for the winners, while the work of Doyle and Shannon featured for the home team.

The second team of the Quincy A. A. experienced little difficulty in winning from its opponents by the decisive score of 44 to 21.

COLLEGE LIFE TODAY.

Student Ideals Much Higher Than They Were Fifty Years Ago.

Not only upon the shields of our American universities do we find "veritas." In spirit at least it is also clearly written across the face of the entire college life of our times. Gentlemanliness, openmindedness, originality, honor, patriotism, truth—these are increasingly found in both the serious pursuits and the play life of our American undergraduates. The department in which these ideals are sought is not so important as the certainty that the student is forming such ideals of thoroughness and perfection.

Furthermore, the standards of morals and conduct among the American undergraduates are perceptibly higher than they were fifty years ago. There is a very real tendency in the line of doing away with such celebrations as have been connected with drinking and immoralities. To be sure, one will always find students who are often worse for their bacchic associations, and one must always keep in mind that the college is on earth and not in heaven. But a comparison of student customs today with those of fifty years ago gives cause for encouragement.—Century Magazine.

High Quality Tea.

A verdict in favor of high quality tea as a harmless drink is given by the London Lancet. It is pointed out that when caffeine and tannin are in a state of combination the harmful astringent qualities of the tannin disappear and the bitter taste of free caffeine is not perceptible. Teas of high quality yield, as a rule, a simple infusion of caffeine tannate, not of caffeine or of tannin, and such teas must be regarded as the most desirable from a physiological point of view. Excessive infusion, it is stated, will spoil a good tea, but even a short infusion of a bad tea may be as objectionable as an excessive infusion of good tea. On physiological grounds, therefore, the consumer of high quality teas runs less risk of digestive disturbances provided the tea is made properly.

An Impressionist Picture.

They were doing a tour of the picture gallery and the country cousin was anxious to improve his knowledge. Frequently he asked questions concerning artistic phrases and phases, and always the city cynic explained clearly and lucidly.

"What do they mean exactly," queried the country one, "when they say it is an 'impressionist' picture?"

Then the city cynic smiled.

"Well," said he, "an impressionist picture is one that leaves an impression in your mind that it is the picture of a cow and that same impression sticks there until you happen to look at the catalogue and find that really it's a picture of a famous statesman. See?"—London Answers.

PAPER BAG COOKING

PAPER BAGGING THE SCRAPS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Beware the fast after a day of out-of-the-ordinary feasting. Abrupt transitions are bad alike for body and mind.

Is it traditional in your family to have a lordly roast turkey on family feast days, if they were in the turkey season? Then the remains of the bird, either in patties or croquets will help you keep from fasting after the first dinner of the new year. But there is another shape for the remains—one which I have not so far seen in print. Pick up the meat, free it of skin, bone and gristle, cut in bits, not too fine, and pack a layer of it neatly at the bottom of a buttered paper bag mould. Dot with bits of stuffing if any remains, also gravy from the dish—made gravy is too heavy. Cover the meat layer with a layer of cranberry sauce and put meat on that, also seasoning. Repeat till all th meat and sauce are used. If the bulk is scant, put in a middle layer of toasted bread crumbs. Cover the top layer of cranberries with crumbs rather thickly. Slip the mould inside another bag and cook about eight minutes. Serve either hot or cold. Excellent for luncheon or tea.

Most likely the baron of beef was but half eaten. Cut the best of it into neat slices half an inch thick, two inches wide and four inches long. Dip them in melted butter, roll in a little salted flour, sprinkle lightly with vinegar or lemon juice and let them stand an hour in a warm place, keeping them well covered. Make a good crust, shortening it with suet or drippings if possible, and putting in a little more salt than for pastry. Roll it a quarter-inch thick and line with it a mould, either tin or paper bag, of sufficient size. The mould must be well-greased, and if made from a bag, clipped extra-tight at the corners. Lay upon the bottom slices of meat, letting them lap a little, shingle-wise. Cover this layer with thin sliced onions, sliced and peeled white potatoes and the sliced yolk of a very hard-boiled egg. Season very lightly with salt and pepper, then put on another layer of meat. Bread crumbs or slips of crust may alternate with the vegetables or take their place. Whatever is used do not overfill the mould. Put a layer of crust in strips on top, or else a thick coating of crumbs. Pour over melted butter, enough to season well, and an equal quantity of tomato catsup or tomatoes stewed to a pulp. If you like a lattice crust or a solid one, put in the butter and tomatoes before adding it. Pour in a tablespoonful of boiling water also, put on the top, set the mould in a very well-greased bag and cook thirty-five to fifty minutes, according to size. The result should be a beefsteak pie as tasteful as ever came out of the oven.

The snippets and trimmings of the roast, minced fine or ground, mixed well through mashed potato and cooked in a greased bag, either in one big cake or many smaller ones, provide excellent supper fare. Ten minutes of baking is enough.

Meat and rice pudding can be cooked either directly in the bag or put in a mould and then in a bag. To make it, throw a cup of well-washed rice into a kettleful of salted water that is boiling hard. Stir once—no more—and boil eighteen to twenty minutes. Drain away all water, then stir into the hot rice a large spoonful of butter, a cup of rich milk, beaten up well with two eggs, salt and pepper to taste, and two cupfuls of finely minced cold meat very lightly dusted with corn starch. Pour on a little tomato catsup or add a half-cup of dry tomato pulp. Dot lightly with butter or sprinkle with grated cheese. Cook for twelve minutes in a hot oven and serve from the mould.

If the rice and meat pudding is for children, leave out the pepper and catsup. By making the mixture stiffer, leaving out part of the milk and adding a little flour, you can shape it into balls, dip them in egg and bread crumbs and bake inside a thickly-greased bag to a light brown. Instead of rice, whole wheat bread crumbs can be mixed with the meat, then the mixture bound together with egg beaten in milk, seasoned lightly with salt and sweet herbs, also a little melted butter, and cooked in a bag ten minutes. All that requires cooking is the egg and milk, as the meat and crumbs are already well done.

Shredded wheat biscuit, crumbled fine, make the basis of a very good nursery pudding. Take two cups of crumbs, two cups finely chopped apple, half a cup of butter creamed with one cup of sugar, half a cup of raisins well-floured, half a cup of flour sifted with one teaspoonful baking powder, and one cup sweet milk added to two well-beaten eggs. Put in a pinch of salt, beat all well together, pour into a mould which is very well-greased, set the mould inside a bag and bake very slowly for an hour and a half.

Here is a sort of rice pudding without eggs, entirely possible to the paper bag. Wash very well a scant half-cup of rice, mix it with a cup of seeded raisins cut in half, a cup of sugar, a teaspoonful of butter and a large cup of milk. Put all in a very well-buttered bag, seal and cook slowly for an hour and a half.

DANGER OF PEOPLE BEING WIPED OUT

Half of Alaska Declared In Grasp of the White Plague

Washington, Jan. 31.—Tuberculosis has its grip on nearly 50 percent of the population of Alaska, according to the results of an investigation conducted for the bureau of education by Dr. Foster, passed assistant surgeon of the public health and marine hospital.

In his report Foster declares that unless the ravages of the disease are checked by timely medical relief the white people as well as the natives of the territory will ultimately be obliterated.

Eye diseases also are prevalent in a number of places, and Foster's recommendations include the establishment of a home for the destitute blind.

Armed with these facts the bureau of education has renewed its efforts to secure the passage of a bill pending in congress appropriating $70,000 for the establishment of a sanitarium and aditional hospitals and nurses.

O'CONNELL REACHES HOME

Boston Is Gayly Decorated In Honor of the Cardinal

Boston, Jan. 31.—Cardinal O'Connell reached Boston harbor early this morning. The steamship Canopic of the White Star line, bearing home the cardinal and the four clergymen who compose his party, dropped anchor off quarantine just before daylight.

Red, white and blue, then add cardinal red, all in great profusion, and one has some conception of the color scheme of the decorations of the buildings of Boston's business establishments, placed there in honor of the return to his country and city of O'Connell.

In the vicinity of Washington and West streets, the very centre of Boston's shopping district, are to be seen the greatest display of decorations.

MARTIAL LAW FOR LISBON

Eight Thousand Soldiers Protecting the City From Rioters

Lisbon, Jan. 31.—Martial law has been ordered and there are 8000 troops under arms in Lisbon, where the strikers declare they have 20,000 bombs with which they will be able to annihilate the soldiers. Several bombs have already been thrown with terrible effect.

The troops are under orders to make raids on all suspected places, with the result that wholesale arrests have been made and innumerable fire-arms seized. The prisoners are being placed aboard warships in the harbor.

DEVOTES DAY TO POLITICS

Taft's Friends In Ohio Tell Him He Will Carry the State

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—President Taft's second day in Ohio developed less speechmaking and more politics than did his sixteen-hour stop in Cleveland. Many Republican leaders visited him with a word or two to add to the president's growing information about political conditions.

The president spoke at a luncheon at the chamber of commerce on peace, and dedicated the new federal building with a speech against the judicial recall during the day, and last night as the guest of the Columbus Glee club repeated portions of his speech to the Tippecance club of Cleveland.

Shortly after his arrival the president held a reception in a local hotel, and more than 3000 persons marched by and shook the presidential hand.

Several leaders told the president that the Taft forces would control the Ohio state central committee by a comfortable majority.

Tennyson and His Pipe.

Tennyson was an unwavering devotee of the clay pipe. "I take my pipe," he wrote to a friend in 1842, "and the muse descends in the fume, not like your modern ladies, who shriek at a pipe as if they saw a 'splackmuck'"—"splackmuck" being the word which the dwellers in Brobdingnag applied to a man. When invited on a visit to Mr. Gladstone in 1876 Tennyson wrote, "As you are good enough to say that you will manage anything rather than lose my visit, will you manage that I can have my pipe in my own room whenever I like?"—London Chronicle.
